SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The OSHA has developed the Powered Platforms for Building Maintenance Standard to ensure workers who operate powered platforms receive uniform and comprehensive instruction and information in the operation, safe use, and inspection of this equipment. The Standard includes several information collection requirements: Emergency action plans; affixing load rating plates to suspended units; and building owners establishing and maintaining written certification of inspections and testing conducted on the supporting structures of buildings, powered platform systems, and suspension wire ropes.

Emergency action plans allow employers and workers to anticipate, and effectively respond to, emergencies that may arise during powered platform operations. Affixing load rating plates to suspended units, instructions to emergency electric operating devices, and tags to wire rope fasteners prevent workplace accidents by providing information to employers and workers regarding the conditions under which they can safely operate these system components. Requiring building owners to establish and maintain written certification of inspections and testing conducted on the supporting structures of buildings, powered platform systems, and suspension wire ropes provides employers and workers with assurance that they can operate safely from the buildings using equipment that is in safe operating condition.
