I. Introduction

On November 7, 2011, the Postal Service filed a notice, pursuant to 39 U.S.C. 3641(c)(1), announcing its intent to initiate a market test beginning on or about December 7, 2011, of an experimental market dominant product, First-Class Tracer.¹ The market research test will consist of providing customers a means to track the transportation and processing of single-piece First-Class Mail. Id. at 1.

II. Background

The Postal Service states that consumers have continuously looked for ways to track single-piece First-Class Mail through the postal system. Id. at 1-2. It proposes the instant market test of the First-Class Tracer as a convenient and highly visible means of providing commercial mailers and individual consumers a tool through which to gain information on the transportation and processing of their First-Class Mail letters. Id. The Postal Service sees the market test as a way to leverage product design, development, and distribution of resources with minimal competitive impact. Id. at 2.

The Postal Service explains that the proposed market test will consist of retail distribution sales of the First-Class Tracer to consumers in specific test locations. Id. at 1. Sales will be revenue generating, and the Postal Service will test different prices in different test locations. Id. Expenses incurred will be considered research and development costs incurred in connection with new product development. Id.

Statutory authority. The Postal Service indicates that its proposal satisfies the criteria of section 3641, which imposes certain conditions on experimental products. 39 U.S.C. 3641. For example, the Postal Service asserts that the First-Class Tracer is significantly different from all products offered by the Postal Service within the meaning of section 3641(b)(1). Id. at 4. In addition, it contends that the product will only be available at retail, apply solely to a market dominant product, and will not create an unfair or inappropriate competitive advantage for the Postal Service or any mailer. Id. at 5; see also section 3641(b)(2). The Postal Service states that the First-Class Tracer
