Abstract: Under the Dodd-Frank Act, the Bureau is responsible for "developing and implementing initiatives intended to educate and empower consumers to make better informed decisions." The Dodd-Frank Act also directs the Bureau to research, analyze, and report on consumer awareness and understanding of, and behaviors with respect to, financial services and products and the associated costs and benefits. In keeping with the Bureau's commitment to encouraging evidence-based practices to improve consumer financial outcomes, the Bureau exercises its authorities under the Act to measure the impacts of specific Bureau initiatives aimed at improving consumers' financial literacy and decision-making skills.

In service of these mandates, the Bureau intends to commission periodic user testing of information the Bureau provides to consumers to help them achieve their financial goals and to better understand various financial products and services available to them. The Bureau will also use this information collection to test methods for communicating that information to better understand the impact of particular information delivery methods' on the attitudes, understanding, and behaviors of American adult consumers around issues of financial decision-making.

These user testing collections will be conducted either in-person, using spoken prompts and responses, paper-based written and visual prompts and responses; or through online multimedia prompts and responses. The Bureau will employ a qualitative, iterative, testing methodology to assess:

- The quality and impact of written and visual information,
- Methods and media for communicating information, and
- User experience scenarios for using information to assist in financial decision making.

This information will inform the Bureau's consumer engagement and education efforts, allowing it to improve its delivery of services to consumers and empower them to improve upon their financial-decision-making skills and outcomes.
