on one or more of the following questions:

1. What are the specific types of technology transition and commercialization tools and services that should be provided by M–TACs? Emphasis is on the alignment of these tools and services with the most pressing needs of small and mid-sized U.S. manufacturers.

   a. How would M–TAC services complement the services currently offered by MEP Centers?

   2. What role should future M–TACs play with respect to supply chain needs? How should OEMs participate? How can industry associations, professional societies, and other appropriate national organizations participate?

3. Is there a particular long-term scalable and financially sustainable business model that should be implemented by future M–TACs that will enable small and mid-sized U.S. manufacturers to effectively access and benefit from the technology transition and commercialization assistance and other resources they need?

   a. Because of the programmatic connection to the NIST MEP Program, M–TACs may require cost share. Are there cost share models for future M–TACs that promote scale up to reach nationally dispersed clusters of small and mid-sized manufacturers? If so, what are those models, and why might they be successful?

   b. The generation of intellectual property is possible, and even likely as a result of M–TAC operations. What types of intellectual property arrangements and management constructs would promote active engagement of industry in these pilots, especially among small and mid-sized U.S. manufacturers that would be supportive of the business model? As appropriate, please include a set of potential options, and please explain your responses.

5. Are there any other critical issues that NIST MEP should consider in its strategic planning for future M–TAC investments that are not covered by the first four questions? If so, please address those issues here and explain your response.
