

data enhance the understanding of peoples' overall well-being.

The Eating and Health module supplement includes questions about peoples' eating and drinking behaviors, food assistance participation, grocery and meal shopping, food preparation, and food sufficiency. It also includes questions on general health and physical exercise. Information collected in the supplement will be published as a public use data set to facilitate research on numerous topics, such as: The association between eating patterns, physical activity, and BMI; time-use patterns of food assistance program participants and low-income nonparticipants; and how time-use varies by health status. Sponsored by the Economic Research Service (ERS) of the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), the supplement is asked of respondents immediately upon their completion of the American Time Use Survey (ATUS).

The Eating and Health supplement supports the mission of the Bureau of Labor Statistics by providing relevant information on economic and social issues, specifically the association between time-use patterns and eating and physical activity behavior and health. The data from the Eating and Health Module Supplement also closely support the mission of its sponsor, ERS, to improve the nation's nutrition and health. The supplement surveys individuals aged 15 and up from a nationally representative sample of approximately 2,190 sample households each month.

II. Current Action

Office of Management and Budget clearance for a new OMB control number is being sought for the Eating and Health Supplement to the American Time Use Survey. This supplement was previously collected as part of the ATUS (OMB control number 1220-0175). The BLS is requesting a new OMB control number in order to have greater flexibility in managing this episodic information collection without needing to revisit the more permanent aspects of the ATUS.

There have been few efforts to collect data on time-use and how it relates to BMI, food assistance participation, grocery shopping, and meal preparation. The ATUS first ran Eating and Health Modules in 2006-08. The 2006-08 Eating and Health Modules produced useful data that have been used in a variety of research products that inform policy and programs on eating and other behaviors.

Fielding the Eating and Health Module Supplement in calendar years

2014 and 2015 will allow researchers to monitor changes in Americans' time use patterns along with changes in Americans' eating activities, BMI values, and food assistance participation. Additionally, the proposed supplement includes several important questions that were not asked in 2006-08, including questions about soft drink consumption, grocery and meal shopping, meal preparation, food affordability, and physical exercise. Running the proposed 2014-15 Eating and Health Module Supplement will add significant information beyond what was collected in 2006-08 and provide an additional dimension to analyses of the time-use data.

III. Desired Focus of Comments

The Bureau of Labor Statistics is particularly interested in comments that:
