B. What should I consider as I prepare my comments for EPA?

1. Submitting Confidential Business Information (CBI). Do not submit this information to EPA through regulations.gov or email. Clearly mark the part or all of the information that you claim to be CBI. For CBI information in a disk or CD-ROM that you mail to EPA, mark the outside of the disk or CD-ROM as CBI and then identify electronically within the disk or CD-ROM the specific information that is claimed as CBI. In addition to one complete version of the comment that includes information claimed as CBI, a copy of the comment that does not contain the information claimed as CBI must be submitted for inclusion in the public docket. Information so marked will not be disclosed except in accordance with procedures set forth in 40 CFR part 2.

2. Tips for preparing your comments. When submitting comments, remember to:

- i. Identify the document by docket ID number and other identifying information (subject heading, Federal Register date and page number).
- ii. Follow directions. The Agency may ask you to respond to specific questions or organize comments by referencing a Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) part or section number.
- iii. Explain why you agree or disagree; suggest alternatives and substitute language for your requested changes.
- iv. Describe any assumptions and provide any technical information and/or data that you used.
- v. If you estimate potential costs or burdens, explain how you arrived at your estimate in sufficient detail to allow for it to be reproduced.

vi. Provide specific examples to illustrate your concerns and suggest alternatives.

vii. Explain your views as clearly as possible, avoiding the use of profanity or personal threats.

viii. Make sure to submit your comments by the comment period deadline identified.

C. Are there requirements for meeting presentations?

To ensure that all interested parties will have an opportunity to comment in the allotted time, oral presentations or statements will be limited to 10 minutes. EPA, therefore, recommends that stakeholders who present oral comments also submit written comments following the instructions provided under ADDRESSES.

D. What is the Agency's authority for taking this action?

This document is being developed under the authority of section 601 of the Toxic Substances Control Act (TSCA), 15 U.S.C. 2697.

II. Background

On June 10, 2013, EPA published a NPRM in the Federal Register entitled "Formaldehyde Emissions Standards for Composite Wood Products" (Ref. 1). After two extensions, the comment period for the NPRM closed on October 9, 2013 (Ref. 2). After the closing of the comment period, the California Air Resources Board (CARB) provided additional documents that EPA wishes to consider in developing the final regulation (Refs. 3 and 4). EPA is especially interested in CARB's potential modifications to its Airborne Toxics Control Measure to Reduce Formaldehyde Emissions from Composite Wood Products to address laminated products (Ref. 3).

EPA received public comments on the treatment of laminated products, including several comments that suggested laminated products should be exempted from the definition of hardwood plywood or, if not, they should not be held to the same testing requirements as hardwood plywood. CARB suggested that laminated products be held to an emission standard, but that there should be no required emissions testing (Ref. 3). Some commenters suggested EPA should consider self-certification for smaller companies (Ref. 5). One of these commenters suggested excluding small companies that produce less than 100,000 square feet per year from the testing and certification requirements (Ref. 5). Another commenter, noting that the proposed definition of laminated product is limited to products made with particleboard, medium-density fiberboard, or veneer cores, suggested a reduced testing frequency coupled with third-party certifier oversight for all laminated product producers and for all similar products, regardless of core type (Ref. 6). Other commenters suggested that it is appropriate to reduce the testing frequency by limiting the required testing to annual testing (Ref. 7) and require laminated product producers to test only their highest emitting product (Ref. 8).

EPA has also received input on the appropriate emission standard, if any, for laminated products. One commenter suggested that, because hardwood plywood is indistinguishable from laminated products, the hardwood plywood emission standard is appropriate (Ref. 6). CARB suggested that laminated product producers could be expected to meet an emission standard identical to the thin medium-density fiberboard standard (Ref. 3). Another commenter suggested the particleboard emission standard is the most appropriate standard for laminated products (Ref. 9). Another commenter, while not suggesting a specific emission standard, noted that, in many cases, laminated products are intermediate products that are not offered for sale, and stated that EPA's proposal "gives no credit or recognition to the significant reduction in emissions when a product is laminated and finished" (Ref. 10).

The Agency is seeking additional public input related to laminated products. The purpose of this meeting and the reopening of the comment period is to facilitate additional public input regarding potential modifications to EPA's proposed treatment of laminated products under the proposed regulation, including options based on the ideas raised in the comments discussed in this unit. With respect to the treatment of laminated products, EPA is considering one, or a combination of, the following: CARB's latest proposal (Ref. 1); a reduced testing program for laminated products, a self-certification program for laminated products, an exemption of laminated products from the definition of "hardwood plywood"; or an exemption from testing and certification requirements for all laminated products or just those made by a low-volume producer. EPA requests comment and information on what an appropriate production volume threshold for testing and certification might be. EPA is also considering whether third-party certification should be required for laminated products if emission testing for these products is required; what emission standard, if any, would be appropriate for laminated products; and whether laminated products should be grouped for testing purposes. EPA is also requesting comment on associated definitional changes, including those in CARB's latest proposal, and other potential changes to the definition of "laminated product" (Ref. 3), such as expanding the eligible platforms to cover the cores identified in the definition of "hardwood plywood" (Ref. 4).

EPA is reopening the comment period for the June 10, 2013 Federal Register document to allow interested parties to submit additional relevant information before or after the public meeting. The reopened comment period will stay open through the public meeting on April 28, 2014, and continue to remain open until May 8, 2014 to accommodate written follow-up comments that participants or the general public wish to submit after the public meeting. Comments will be accepted regardless of whether the submitter participates in the public meeting.
