A detailed assessment of the human remains was made by the Neville Public Museum of Brown County professional staff in consultation with representatives of the Yankton Sioux Tribe of South Dakota.

History and Description of the Remains

Prior to 1970, human remains representing, at minimum, one individual were acquired by James Dobry Sr. from an unknown area of South Dakota, as part of a 36" long necklace identified by him as being "authentic Sioux with claws, beads, and teeth." In 1970, the human remains were donated to the Neville Public Museum of Brown County. No known individuals were identified. The 94 associated funerary objects which are all part of the necklace include 43 raptor claws and mammal canines, 20 glass and clay beads, 29 shells, and two non-human phalanges. Trade beads indicate this is an historic period necklace.

Consultation

A detailed assessment of the human remains was made by the Neville Public Museum of Brown County professional staff in consultation with representatives of the Ho-Chunk Nation of Wisconsin.

History and Description of the Remains

In 1930, human remains representing, at minimum, one individual were removed from Portage Point in Door County, WI. A partial skeleton of 35-50 year-old male was discovered and excavated by P. M. Platten and P. Krippner. The human remains were brought to Neville Public Museum of Brown County after excavation. No known individuals were identified. The approximately 33 associated funerary objects are pot sherds.

Potsherds accompanying burial and lack of trade goods suggest a late pre-contact date for the burial. Based on Ho-Chunk's Early Historic Period homeland, the human remains and associated funerary objects are culturally affiliated with the Ho-Chunk people.
