Section 155.405(a) of the Exchange Final Rule (77 FR 18310) provides more detail about the application that must be used by the Exchange to determine eligibility and to collect information necessary for enrollment. The regulations in § 435.907 and § 457.330 establish the requirements for State Medicaid and CHIP agencies related to the use of the single streamlined application. CMS is designing the single streamlined application to be a dynamic electronic application that will tailor the amount of data required from an applicant based on the applicant's circumstances and responses to particular questions. The paper version of the application will not be able to be tailored in the same way but is being designed to collect only the data required to determine eligibility. Individuals will be able to submit an application electronically, through the mail, over the phone through a call center, or in person, per § 155.405(c)(2) of the Exchange Final Rule, as well as through other commonly available electronic means as noted in § 435.907(a) and § 457.330 of the Medicaid Final Rule. The application may be submitted to an Exchange, Medicaid or CHIP agency. The electronic application process will vary depending on each applicant's circumstances, their experience with health insurance applications and online capabilities. The goal is to solicit sufficient information so that in most cases no further inquiry will be needed. Form Number: CMS-10440 (OMB control number: 0938-1191); Frequency: Annually; Affected Public: Individuals and Households; Number of Respondents: 7,200,000; Total Annual Responses: 7,200,000; Total Annual Hours: 2,410,767. SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Background

FDA is announcing the availability of a draft guidance for industry entitled "General Principles for Evaluating the Abuse Deterrence of Generic Solid Oral Opioid Drug Products." Prescription opioid analgesics are an important component of modern pain management. However, abuse and misuse of these drug products have created a serious and growing public health problem. One important step toward the goal of creating safer opioid analgesics has been the development of opioid drug products that are formulated to deter abuse. FDA considers the development of these products a high public health priority. It is important that generic versions of opioids that reference listed drugs whose labeling describes abuse-deterrent properties are available to help ensure availability of analgesics for patients who need them.

For FDA to approve an abbreviated new drug application (ANDA), the Agency must find, among other things, that the generic drug product has the same active ingredient(s), dosage form, route of administration, strength, and, with limited exceptions, labeling as the reference listed drug (RLD); is bioequivalent to its RLD; that the methods used in, or the facilities and controls used for, the manufacture, processing, and packing of the drug are adequate to assure and preserve its identity, strength, quality, and purity; and that the inactive ingredients and composition of the generic drug are not unsafe for use under the conditions prescribed, recommended, or suggested in the labeling (see, e.g., the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (the FD&C Act) 505(j)(2)(A) and (j)(4) (21 U.S.C. 355(j)(2)(A) and (j)(4))). FDA classifies as "therapeutically equivalent" those products that meet the following general criteria: (1) They are approved as safe and effective; (2) they are pharmaceutical equivalents in that they: (a) Contain identical amounts of the same active ingredient in the same dosage form and route of administration, and (b) meet compendial or other applicable standards of strength, quality, purity, and identity; (3) they are bioequivalent; (4) they are adequately labeled; and (5) they are manufactured in compliance with current good manufacturing practices regulations. (See preface of Approved Drug Products with Therapeutic Equivalence Evaluations (commonly referred to as the Orange Book).) FDA believes that a product classified as therapeutically equivalent can be substituted with the full expectation that the substituted product will produce the same clinical effect and safety profile as the reference product.

Accordingly, if the RLD's labeling describes abuse-deterrent properties, the ANDA applicant should evaluate its product to show that it is no less abuse-deterrent than the RLD with respect to all potential routes of abuse. Marketing a generic opioid drug product that is less abuse-deterrent than the RLD could lead opioid abusers to preferentially seek out and abuse generics.

This draft guidance describes FDA's current thinking about the studies that should be conducted by a potential ANDA applicant and submitted to FDA in an ANDA to demonstrate that a generic solid oral opioid drug product is no less abuse-deterrent than its RLD with respect to all potential routes of abuse.

This draft guidance is being issued consistent with FDA's good guidance practices regulation (21 CFR 10.115). The draft guidance, when finalized, will represent the current thinking of FDA on the principles for evaluating the abuse-deterrence of generic solid oral opioid drug products. It does not establish any rights for any person and is not binding on FDA or the public. You can use an alternative approach if it satisfies the requirements of the applicable statutes and regulations.

FDA intends to hold a public meeting following the close of the comment period to discuss further the evaluation of the abuse deterrence of generic opioid drug products and related issues, as appropriate. Further details will follow in a notice of public meeting published in the Federal Register.
