Other persons seeking disclosure must follow the procedures delineated in 47 CFR 0.457 and 0.459 of the Commission's rules for requests for and disclosure of information. The information collection discussed here does not affect the confidential treatment of information provided to the FCC through NORS reports.

Needs and Uses: Section 151 of the Communications Act of 1934 (Act), as amended, requires the Commission to promote the safety of life and property through the use of wire and radio communications. Additionally, the Cable Landing License Act, Cable Landing License Act (47 U.S.C. 34-39), and Executive Order 10530, provide the Commission with authority to grant, withhold, condition and revoke submarine cable landing licenses. In concert, the Cable Landing License Act and Executive Order provide that the Commission may place conditions on the grant of a submarine cable landing license in order to assure just and reasonable rates and service in the operation and use of cables so licensed. "Just and reasonable service" entails assurance that the cable infrastructure will be reasonably available. Availability of submarine cables is also critically important for national security, and the economy, because submarine cables carry approximately 95 percent of international communications traffic, and are the primary means of connectivity for numerous U.S. states and territories. The data collection requires all submarine cable licensees to report outages through the network outage reporting system (NORS). The general purpose of NORS reporting is to gather sufficient information regarding disruptions to telecommunications to facilitate FCC monitoring, analysis, and investigation of the reliability and security of networks, and to identify and act on potential threats to our Nation's telecommunications infrastructure. The FCC uses this information collection to identify the duration, magnitude, root causes, contributing factors, and preventive measures taken with respect to significant outages, and to take swift remedial action as required in appropriate circumstances. The Commission also maintains an ongoing dialogue with reporting entities, as well as with the industry at large, generally regarding lessons learned from the information collection in order to foster better understanding of the root causes of significant outages, and to explore preventive measures in the future so as to mitigate the potential impact of such outages on the Nation and the American public.

The data will provide the Commission with greater visibility into the availability and health of these networks, allowing it to better track and analyze submarine cable resiliency, and suggest or take appropriate actions when the data so indicate, i.e. before there is a significant problem. Thus, the data will ensure that submarine cable service is just and reasonable, and that critical communications carried across submarine cables continue to promote the safety of life and property, fulfilling the aforementioned statutory obligations.

The NORS information collection (OMB Control No. 3060-0484) is administered by the FCC's Public Safety and Homeland Security Bureau (PSHSB), which maintains an Internet portal for the electronic submission of NORS reports. This electronic filing requirement entails entering the required information using Commission-approved Web-based outage report templates that are available online at the NORS Internet Web portal. The completion of these online templates results in the information being electronically entered into the Commission's NORS reporting data base in real-time.
