SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: In accordance with the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. 552a, the Office of Personnel Management proposes to establish a new system of records titled “OPM/Central-21 Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey System.” This system of records is being established in order to develop and administer the Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey (FEVS) and to evaluate and distribute the results of that survey. This system of records contains information that OPM collects, maintains, and uses regarding individuals who are potential or actual survey respondents.

The Federal Human Capital Survey (FHCS) was first administered in 2002 under OPM general authorities to conduct studies and research in personnel management, with subsequent biennial administrations in 2004, 2006, and 2008. Starting in 2010, the FHCS was rebranded as the “Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey” and conducted annually. These surveys have roots in the long history of OPM-administered Governmentwide surveys going back to the 1979 Federal Employee Attitudes Survey first administered the same year OPM was instituted under the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978.

A 2003 law enacted by Congress (National Defense Authorization Act for FY 2004) required each agency to conduct an annual survey of their employees and make results available to the public. As required by the law, OPM issued regulations (5 CFR part 250) in 2006 and revised in 2016 containing survey items covering topic areas prescribed by the law and other general requirements. Both the FEVS and the 2008 FHCS (the survey administered after the regulations went into effect) included the required survey items as part of their overall scope and served as a conduit through which participating executive branch agencies have fulfilled their annual employee survey obligation.

The FEVS is a tool that measures Federal employees’ perceptions of whether, and to what extent, conditions that characterize successful organizations are present in their agencies. The FEVS provides general indicators of how well the Federal government is running its human resources management systems, and gives senior managers critical information needed to make their agency work better. It is administered to evaluate elements of strategic human capital management, to assess the general climate of the Federal workforce and to appraise various programs and human capital topics as necessary. The FEVS covers multiple human capital topic areas, including, but not limited to, those specified in 5 CFR 250.302. Survey questions ask participants to share their attitudes, behaviors, and thoughts on these topic areas. In addition, more agency-specific evaluation questions may be added from time to time. Demographic questions are also included to evaluate differences among subgroups in the way responses were distributed.

In order to administer the FEVS, information about Federal employees is collected from OPM’s Enterprise Human Resource Integration (EHRI) system, consistent with the OPM/Govt 1 General Personnel Records system of records. The data from EHRI is used to (1) identify current Federal employees, (2) determine survey eligibility, (3) collect contact information where necessary and available, (4) perform statistical weighting procedures using select demographic information, and (5) support research and reporting functions.

In addition to the EHRI data, additional organizational and employee data are collected from participating agencies. Organizational data includes the hierarchical structure of the agency and the titles associated with all work groups, branches, and divisions of that hierarchy. Employee data can include names, other personal identifiers such as Social Security number and date of birth, email addresses, and work unit identifiers. The combination of organizational data and personnel work unit identifier allows for accurate sampling and reporting of summarized survey results for work units that meet the requirement of meeting or exceeding the minimum number of respondents necessary to adequately protect respondent confidentiality.

Eligible employees selected to participate in the FEVS are sent an email invitation that includes a unique link to the survey. Follow-up emails are sent weekly until the employee either completes the survey or informs OPM that he or she wishes to opt-out. The survey is web-based, designed and operated within OPM using commercial software running on OPM servers. All surveys and survey items are voluntary. That is, employees may choose to respond to all, some, or none of the items. Surveys with at least 25% of the non-demographic items answered are considered complete and will be used. After the survey administration, data cleaning and statistical weighting procedures are executed by OPM and a contractor. Once final data are available, reports of summary survey results are generated and distributed to agencies via an OPM contractor who creates the reports and maintains the distribution platform. At the end of the FEVS cycle, selected summary results and a technical report may be published, and a public release data file released.

The records concerning the potential and actual survey respondents will be maintained in the OPM/Central-21 Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey System. This system of records will be included in OPM’s inventory of records systems. In accordance with 5 U.S.C. 552a(r), OPM has provided a report of this system of records to the Office of Management and Budget and to Congress.
