Benefit-Risk Factors To Consider When Determining Substantial Equivalence in Premarket Notifications (510(k)) With Different Technological Characteristics; Guidance for Industry and Food and Drug Administration Staff; Availability

AGENCY: Food and Drug Administration, HHS.

ACTION: Notice of availability.

SUMMARY: The Food and Drug Administration (FDA or Agency) is announcing the availability of the final guidance entitled "Benefit-Risk Factors to Consider When Determining Substantial Equivalence in Premarket Notifications (510(k)) with Different Technological Characteristics." This guidance document describes factors FDA considers when evaluating the benefit-risk profile of a device in comparison to a predicate device in a 510(k) when the device has the same intended use as the predicate device, and different technological characteristics that do not raise different questions of safety and effectiveness. This guidance can be helpful in situations when there is an increase in risk and increase or equivalent benefit, or a decrease in benefit and a decrease or equivalent risk when comparing a new device to a predicate device. FDA developed this guidance to improve the predictability, consistency, and transparency of the 510(k) premarket review process.

DATES: The announcement of the guidance is published in the Federal Register on September 25, 2018.

ADDRESSES: You may submit either electronic or written comments on Agency guidances at any time as follows:

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Background

Submitters seeking 510(k) submission must demonstrate to FDA that the new device is substantially equivalent (SE) to a legally marketed predicate device using the criteria identified in section 513(i) of the FD&C Act (21 U.S.C. 360c(i)). To find a new device SE to a predicate device, FDA must first find that the devices have the same intended use. FDA must then determine that the devices have the same technological characteristics, or that any differences in technological characteristics do not raise different questions of safety and effectiveness, and that the new device is as safe and effective as the predicate device.

FDA evaluates differences in technological characteristics between the new device and the predicate device to determine their effect on substantial equivalence (i.e., whether the new device is as safe and effective as the predicate device). Under section 513(a)(2) of the FD&C Act, FDA determines the safety and effectiveness of a device by weighing any probable benefit to health from the use of the device against any probable risk of injury or illness from such use, among other relevant factors.

This guidance document is consistent with FDA guidance entitled “The 510(k) Program: Evaluating Substantial Equivalence in Premarket Notifications [510(k)]” (<https://www.fda.gov/MedicalDevices/DeviceRegulationandGuidance/GuidanceDocuments/UCM284443>), issued on July 28, 2014, and provides additional clarification on factors that FDA takes into consideration when evaluating the benefit-risk profile of a new device in comparison to a predicate device when FDA must evaluate whether the new device is substantially equivalent to the predicate device. More specifically, in situations where (1) an increase in risk and increase or equivalent benefit or (2) a decrease in benefit and a decrease or equivalent risk when comparing a new device to a predicate device, FDA recommends that a benefit-risk assessment be conducted to provide further perspective regarding whether the new device is substantially equivalent to the predicate. FDA does not recommend a benefit-risk assessment in situations where there is (1) an increase in risk and decrease in benefit or (2) decrease or equivalent risk and increase or equivalent benefit because benefit-risk factors are not warranted to determine whether a device is substantially equivalent. This guidance does not add new regulatory requirements for submitters, it does not change the 510(k) premarket review standard, nor does it create extra or new burdens on what has traditionally been submitted in 510(k)s.

In the Federal Register on July 15, 2014 (79 FR 41289), FDA announced the availability of the draft guidance and interested parties were invited to comment by October 14, 2014. FDA has considered all the public comments received prior to finalizing this guidance.

II. Significance of Guidance

This guidance is being issued consistent with FDA’s good guidance practices regulation (21 CFR 10.115). The guidance represents the current thinking of FDA on benefit-risk factors to consider when determining substantial equivalence in premarket notifications (510(k)) with different technological characteristics. It does not establish any rights for any person and is not binding on FDA or the public. You can use an alternative approach if it satisfies the requirements of the applicable statutes and regulations. This guidance is not subject to Executive Order 12866.

III. Electronic Access

Persons interested in obtaining a copy of the guidance may do so by downloading an electronic copy from the internet. A search capability for all Center for Devices and Radiological Health guidance documents is available at <https://www.fda.gov/MedicalDevices/DeviceRegulationandGuidance/GuidanceDocuments/default.htm>.
