

PHS Act. The notification provisions, including the definition of “emergency response employee,” were then removed from the Ryan White HIV/AIDS Treatment Modernization Act of 2006 and the PHS Act.⁴ The term “emergency response employee,” however, continued to be used in a different part of the statutes pertaining to responsibilities assigned to the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA).⁵ When Congress reinstated the notification provisions in Part G of the Ryan White HIV/AIDS Treatment Extension Act of 2009, a definition of ERE was not included.

NIOSH has interpreted the legislative history and the development of the Ryan White CARE Act of 1990 and subsequent reauthorizations to indicate that Congress’s failure to restore the original definition of ERE was unintentional and merely an oversight. Including the original statutory definition in the NIOSH list and guidelines would allow the notification provisions to be implemented as Congress originally intended.

Including the definition of “emergency response employee” in the definitions section of the list and guidelines is within NIOSH’s authority, pursuant to the August 27, 2018 re-delegation for the sec. 2695 duties. Implicit in this directive is the need to identify the types of EREs who transport or serve victims of emergencies taken to medical facilities, in order to improve the notification system allowing EREs to receive timely diagnosis and post-exposure medical treatment for infectious disease exposures. NIOSH therefore has the authority to include the definition of “emergency response employees” in the list and guidelines.

After consideration of public comment submitted to the docket for this action, NIOSH will update the guidelines and list with the ERE definition and re-publish them on the NIOSH Ryan White HIV/AIDS Treatment Extension Act of 2009 topic

⁴ The notification provisions now included in Part G were formerly found in Part E, which was deleted because the intent of the 2006 reauthorization was, in part, to eliminate programs “which had never been funded or re-examined in the last two reauthorizations.” Congress then “deleted definitions which were no longer relevant (e.g., designated officer of emergency response employees, emergency, emergency response employee, employer of emergency response employees, and exposed),” which were located in Part D of the original statute. See H.R. REP. NO. 109–695, at 12 (2006).
