

normal or accident conditions, are expected as a result of granting this exemption with respect to reporting requirements to the Navy.

Environmental Impacts of the Alternatives to the Proposed Action

As an alternative to the proposed action, the staff considered not issuing the requested exemptions (no-action alternative).

The impact of the no-action alternative would be similar to the proposed action. Based on the review of the circumstances surrounding losses of the IBIS devices, the NRC believes that both the burden to the licensee of reporting and the expenditure of NRC and MML resources performing reactive inspections after reports of loss of control of these devices do not enhance their safe use.

The impact of implementing the no-action alternative will be the same as the proposed action with respect to public health because the proposed action and alternative address device loss reporting requirements only. Impacts on water, geology, soils, air quality, demography, biota, and historic resources would therefore be similar or same.

Agencies and Persons Consulted

In accordance with its stated policy, on November 29, 2018, the staff consulted with the U.S. Navy MML National Radiation Program Oversight Committees regarding the environmental impact of the proposed action. State consultation is not necessary, given that the requested exemption would apply to the Navy's national (and some international) operations, are not focused on any particular state, and further, are generally limited to federally-controlled facilities and properties.

III. Finding of No Significant Impact

The NRC is considering the issuance of an exemption and associated license amendment to the Navy in the form of a license condition that would exempt the Navy from the requirements contained in 10 CFR 20.1802, "Control of material not in storage," when the Navy employs these devices during exercises or maneuvers and 10 CFR 20.2201, "Reports of theft or loss of licensed byproduct material," when these devices are lost when they are used during military exercises or maneuvers.

On the basis of this environmental assessment, the NRC staff concludes that the proposed action, issuing the requested exemptions concerning certain reporting requirements, will not have a significant effect on the quality of the human environment. Accordingly, the NRC has determined not to prepare an environmental impact statement for the proposed action.
