

area, or in the case of any block group not located within a metropolitan area, the rate found in the State in which the block group is located. For a proposed Revitalization Area to be eligible based on the low homeownership criterion, each individual block group in the proposed area must meet the definition for substantially low homeownership rate as described above.

The proposed method for calculating the low homeownership rate is the standard method defined in all known literature concerning homeownership rates. The method for defining “substantially low homeownership rate” as 60 percent of the homeownership rate for the metropolitan areas ensures that revitalization areas will have lower homeownership rates relative to the market area, even where the overall market homeownership rates are low.

For example, if the homeownership rate for the State is 65 percent, then a nonmetropolitan block group being evaluated must have a homeownership rate at or below 39 percent to qualify as a revitalization area based on a low homeownership rate; i.e., if the nonmetropolitan block group has 50 households/homes, for the nonmetropolitan block group to qualify as a revitalization area, then 19 or fewer households/homes would have to be owner-occupied.

Finally, HUD proposes that revitalization areas must have an average HUD REO sales price of $200,000 or less, as determined by calculating the average sales price of HUD REO properties within the identified area that reached closed/settlement sale status in the previous 12 months. This provision would ensure that revitalization areas are restricted to places most in need, that is, where the average HUD REO sales price is well below the national median existing home sales price of $269,600 in July of 2018, as reported by the National Association of Realtors.
