This section of the FEDERAL REGISTER contains documents other than rules or proposed rules that are applicable to the public. Notices of hearings and investigations, committee meetings, agency decisions and rulings, delegations of authority, filing of petitions and applications and agency statements of organization and functions are examples of documents appearing in this section.

ADMINISTRATIVE CONFERENCE OF THE UNITED STATES

Adoption of Recommendations

AGENCY: Administrative Conference of the United States.

ACTION: Notice.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: For Recommendation 2019–1, Todd Rubin; for Recommendations 2019–2 and 2019–4, Alexandria Tindall Webb; and for Recommendation 2019–3, Todd Phillips. For each of these actions the address and telephone number are: Administrative Conference of the United States, Suite 706 South, 1120 20th Street NW, Washington, DC 20036; Telephone 202–480–2080.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The Administrative Conference Act, 5 U.S.C. 591–596, established the Administrative Conference of the United States. The Conference studies the efficiency, adequacy, and fairness of the administrative procedures used by Federal agencies and makes recommendations to agencies, the President, Congress, and the Judicial Conference of the United States for procedural improvements (5 U.S.C. 594(1)). For further information about the Conference and its activities, see www.acus.gov. At its Seventy-first Plenary Session, held on June 13, 2019, the Assembly of the Conference adopted four recommendations.

Recommendation 2019–1, Agency Guidance Through Interpretive Rules identifies ways agencies can offer the public the opportunity to propose alternative approaches to those presented in an interpretive rule and to encourage, when appropriate, public participation in the adoption or modification of interpretive rules. It largely extends the best practices for statements of policy adopted in Recommendation 2017–5, Agency Guidance Through Policy Statements, to interpretive rules, with appropriate modifications to account for differences between interpretive rules and policy statements.

Recommendation 2019–2, Agency Recruitment and Selection of Administrative Law Judges addresses the processes and procedures agencies should establish for exercising their authority under Executive Order 13,843 (2018) to hire administrative law judges (ALJs). It encourages agencies to advertise ALJ positions in order to reach a wide pool of applicants, to publish minimum qualifications and selection criteria for ALJ hiring, and to develop policies for the review of ALJ applications.

Recommendation 2019–3, Public Availability of Agency Guidance Documents offers best practices for promoting widespread availability of guidance documents on agency websites. It urges agencies to develop and disseminate internal policies for publishing, tracking, and obtaining input on guidance documents; post guidance documents online in a manner that facilitates public access; and undertake affirmative outreach to notify members of the public of new or updated guidance documents.

Recommendation 2019–4, Revised Model Rules for Implementation of the Equal Access to Justice Act revises the Conference’s 1986 model agency procedural rules for addressing claims under the Act, which provides for the award of attorney fees to individuals and small businesses that prevail against the government in certain agency adjudications. The revisions reflect, among other things, changes in law and agency practice since 1986.

The Appendix below sets forth the full texts of these four recommendations. In addition, a Notice of Availability, containing the Revised Model Rules referenced in Recommendation 2019–4, is published elsewhere in this issue of the Federal Register. The Conference will transmit the recommendations to affected agencies, Congress, and the Judicial Conference of the United States, as appropriate. The recommendations are not binding, so the entities to which they are addressed will make decisions on their implementation.

The Conference based these recommendations on research reports that are posted at: https://www.acus.gov/meetings-and-events/plenary-meeting/71st-plenary-session.

Dated: August 2, 2019.

Shawne C. McGibbon,
General Counsel.

Appendix—Recommendations of the Administrative Conference of the United States

Administrative Conference Recommendation 2019–1

Agency Guidance Through Interpretive Rules

Adopted June 13, 2019

The Administrative Procedure Act (APA) exempts policy statements and interpretive rules from its requirements for the issuance of legislative rules, including notice and comment.2 The Attorney General’s Manual on the Administrative Procedure Act defines “general statements of policy” as agency statements “issued . . . to advise the public prospectively of the manner in which the agency proposes to exercise a discretionary power.”3 The Manual similarly defines “interpretive rules” as “rules or statements issued by an agency to advise the public of the agency’s construction of the statutes and rules which it administers.”4 Because of the commonalities between policy statements and interpretive rules, including their advisory function, many scholars and government agencies have more recently adopted the umbrella term “guidance” to refer to both interpretive rules and policy statements.5

The Administrative Conference has issued several recommendations on policy statements.6 The latest one, Recommendation

---

1 In accordance with standard parlance, this Recommendation uses the term “interpretive” in place of the APA’s word “interpretative.”
4 Id.

Continued
2017–5, Agency Guidance Through Policy Statements, offers best practices to agencies regarding policy statements. The Recommendation advises agencies not to treat policy statements as binding on the public and to take steps to make clear to the public that policy statements are nonbinding. It also suggests measures agencies could take to allow the public to propose alternative approaches to those contained in a policy statement and offers suggestions on how agencies can involve the public in adopting and modifying policy statements.7

During the discussion of Recommendation 2017–5, the Assembly considered whether to extend the recommendations therein to interpretive rules. The Assembly decided against doing so, but it expressed its views that a follow-on study addressing interpretive rules would be valuable.8

“This project takes up that charge. Policy statements and interpretive rules are similar in that they lack the force of law 9 and are often issued without notice-and-comment proceedings, as the APA permits. This similarity suggests that, as a matter of best practice, when interested persons disagree with the views expressed in an interpretive rule, the agency should allow them a fair opportunity to try to persuade the agency to revise or reconsider its interpretation. That is the practice that Recommendation 2017–5, already prescribed in the case of policy statements.9 The benefits to the public of accord such treatment, as well as the potential costs to agencies of accord it, are largely the same regardless of whether a given guidance document is concerned with law, policy, or a combination of both.10

Recommendation 2017–5 provided that “[a]n agency should not use a policy statement to create a standard binding on the public, that is, as a standard with which noncompliance may form an independent basis for action in matters that determine the rights and duties of any member of the public.”11 Although the same basic idea should apply to interpretive rules, the concept of “binding” effect can give rise to misunderstanding in the context of those rules, for several reasons. First, interpretive rules often use mandatory language when the agency is describing an existing statutory or regulatory requirement. Recommendation 2017–5 itself recognized the legitimacy of such phrasing.12 For this reason, administrative lawyers sometimes describe such rules as “binding.” That common usage of words, however, can lead to confusion: It can impede efforts to make clear that interpretive rules should remain nonbinding in a different sense, i.e., that members of the public should be accorded a fair opportunity to request that such rules be modified, rescinded, or waived.

Second, discussions of the circumstances in which interpretive rules may or may not be “binding” bring to mind assumptions that lead from formulating the rulemaking exemption in the APA.13 Courts and commentators have disagreed about whether, under that case law, interpretive rules may be binding on the agency that issues them.14 Despite this diversity of views, officials interviewed for this project did not express the view that they would categorically deny private parties the opportunity to seek modification, rescission, or waiver of an interpretive rule. In this Recommendation, the Administrative Conference addressed best practices and expressed no opinions about how the APA rulemaking exemption should be construed. Nevertheless, assumptions derived from the APA background can divert attention from consideration of what sound principles of administrative law, policy, or a combination of both.10

Third, administrative lawyers currently differ on the question of whether interpretive rules are effectively rendered “binding” when they are reviewed in court under the Auer v. Robbins 15 standard of review, which provides that an agency’s interpretation of its own regulation becomes of “controlling weight” if it is not “plainly erroneous or inconsistent with the regulation.” 16 The question of whether interested persons should be able to ask an agency to modify, rescind, or waive an interpretive rule does not intrinsically have to turn on what level of deference the courts would later accord to the agency’s interpretation. Indeed, the possibility of judicial deference at the appellate level (under Auer or any other standard of review) may augment the

---

7 See Recommendation 2017–5, supra note 6, ¶ 9.
9 Recommendation 2017–5, supra note 6, ¶ 2; see also Recommendation 1992–2, supra note 6, ¶ B.B.
11 Recommendation 2017–5, supra note 6, ¶ 1.
16 Id. at 461; compare Perez, 135 S. Ct. at 1211–12 (Scalia, J., concurring in the judgment) (stating that because of “judge-made doctrines of deference . . . [agencies may not use interpretive rules not just to advise the public, but also to bind them”], with id. at 1208 n.4 [opinion of the Court] (“Even in cases where an agency’s interpretation receives Auer deference, however, it is the court that ultimately decides whether a given regulation means what the agency says.”) The Supreme Court is currently considering whether to overrule Auer in Kirscber v. CitiCorp (granting certiorari). For reasons explained in the text, the present recommendations do not depend on which view of Auer one favors, or on what the Court may decide in Kirscber.
17 Emerson & Levin, supra note 10, at 38–41.
18 See Emerson & Levin, supra note 10, at 25.
19 Parrillo, supra note 5, at 25.
20 See Emerson & Levin, supra note 10, at 38–41.
in Recommendation 2017–5. Interpretive rules that lend themselves to alternative approaches include those that lay out several lawful options for the public but do not purport to be exhaustive. They may also include rules that, in setting forth decisional factors that are relevant to the meaning of a statute or regulation, leave open the possibility that other decisional factors might also be relevant. Typically, such rules speak at a general level, leaving space for informal adjustments and negotiation between the agency and interested persons about how the rule should be applied. On the other hand, certain kinds of interpretive rules, such as those in which an agency has determined that a statutory term has only one construction (e.g., rules that take the view that certain conduct is categorically required or forbidden), do not lend themselves to such flexible treatment.

Recommendation

Recommendations Applicable to All Interpretive Rules

1. An agency should not use an interpretive rule to create a standard independent of the statute or regulation it interprets, to the extent that noncompliance with an interpretive rule would not form an independent basis for action in matters that determine the rights and obligations of any member of the public.

2. An agency should afford members of the public a fair opportunity to argue for modification, rescission, or waiver of an interpretive rule. In determining whether to modify, rescind, or waive an interpretive rule, an agency should give due regard to any reasonable reliance interests.

3. It is sometimes appropriate for an agency, as an internal agency management matter, to direct some of its employees to act in conformity with an interpretive rule. But the agency should ensure that this does not interfere with the fair opportunity called for in Paragraph 2. For example, an interpretive rule could require officials at one level of the agency hierarchy to follow the interpretive rule, with the caveat that officials at a higher level can authorize a modification, rescission, or waiver of that rule. Agency review should be available when officials fail to follow interpretive rules they are properly directed to follow.

4. An agency should prominently state, in the text of an interpretive rule or elsewhere, that the rule expresses the agency’s current interpretation of the law but that a member of the public will, upon proper request, be accorded a fair opportunity to seek modification, rescission, or waiver of the rule.

5. An interpretive rule should not include mandatory requirement, or the language is addressed to agency employees and will not interfere with the fair opportunity called for in Paragraph 2.

6. An agency should make clear to members of the public which agency officials are required to follow an interpretive rule and where to go within the agency to seek modification, rescission, or waiver from the agency.

7. An agency should instruct all employees engaged in an activity to which an interpretive rule pertains that, although the interpretive rule may contain mandatory language, they should refrain from making any statements suggesting that an interpretive rule may not be contested within the agency. Insofar as any employee is directed, as an internal agency management matter, to act in conformity with an interpretive rule, that employee should be instructed as to the expectations set forth in Paragraphs 2 and 3.

8. When an agency is contemplating adopting or modifying an interpretive rule, it should consider whether to solicit public participation, and, if so, what kind, before adopting or modifying the rule. Options for public participation include meetings or webinars with interested persons, advisory committee proceedings, and invitation for written input from the public with or without a response. In deciding how to proceed, the agency should consider:

   a. The agency’s own procedures for adopting interpretive rules.

   b. The likely increase in useful information available to the agency from broadening participation, keeping in mind that non-regulated persons (regulatory beneficiaries and other interested persons) may offer different information than regulated persons and that non-regulated persons will often have no meaningful opportunity to provide input regarding interpretive rules other than at the time of adoption.

   c. The likely increase in rule acceptance from broadening participation, keeping in mind that non-regulated persons will often have no opportunity to provide input regarding interpretive rules other than at the time of adoption, and that rule acceptance may be less likely if the agency is not responsive to input from non-regulated persons.

   d. Whether the agency is likely to learn more useful information by having a specific agency proposal as a focal point for discussion, or instead having a more free-ranging and less formal discussion.

   e. The practicability of broader forms of participation, including invitation for written input from the public, keeping in mind that broader participation may slow the adoption of interpretive rules and may diminish resources for other agency tasks, including issuing interpretive rules on other matters.

9. If an agency does not provide for public participation before adopting or modifying an interpretive rule, it should consider offering an opportunity for public participation after adoption or modification. As with Paragraph 8, options for public participation include meetings or webinars with interested persons, advisory committee proceedings, and invitation for written input from the public with or without a response.

10. An agency may make decisions about the appropriate level of public participation in adopting interpretive rules or by assigning certain procedures for public participation to general categories of interpretive rules. If an agency opts for the latter, it should consider whether resource limitations may cause some interpretive rules, if subject to public procedures for public participation, to remain in draft for substantial periods of time. If that is the case, agencies should either (a) make clear to interested persons which draft interpretive rules, if any, should be used tool to reflect current agency views or (b) provide in each draft interpretive rule that, at a certain time after publication, the rule will automatically either be adopted or withdrawn.

11. All written interpretive rules affecting the interests of regulated parties, regulatory beneficiaries, or other interested parties should be promptly made available electronically and indexed, in a manner in which they may readily be found.

Interpretive rules should also indicate the nature of the reliance that may be placed on them and the opportunities for modification, rescission, or waiver of them.

Recommendations Applicable Only to Those Interpretive Rules Amenable to Alternative Approaches or Analyses

12. Interpretive rules that lend themselves to alternative approaches or analyses include those that lay out several lawful options for the public but do not purport to be exhaustive. They may also include rules that, in setting forth decisional factors that are relevant to the meaning of a statute or regulation, leave open the possibility that other decisional factors might also be relevant. Typically, such rules speak at a general level, leaving space for informal adjustments and negotiation between the agency and interested persons about how the rule should be applied. Paragraphs 1–11 above apply with equal force to such rules. However, with respect to such rules, agencies should take additional steps to promote flexibility, as discussed below.

13. Agencies should afford members of the public a fair opportunity to argue for lawful approaches or analyses other than those set forth in an interpretive rule, subject to any binding requirements imposed upon agency employees as an internal management matter. The agency should explain that a member of the public may take a lawful approach different from the one set forth in the interpretive rule, request that the agency take such a lawful approach, or request that the agency endorse an alternative or additional analysis of the rule. The interpretive rule should also include the identity and contact information of officials to whom such a request should be made. Additionally, with respect to such rules, agencies should take further measures to promote such flexibility as provided in Paragraph 14.

14. In order to provide a fair opportunity for members of the public to argue for other lawful approaches or analyses, an agency should, subject to considerations of practicability and resource limitations and the priorities described in Paragraph 15, consider additional measures, including the following:

20 This Recommendation uses “interested person” rather than “stakeholder,” which Recommendation 2017–5, supra note 6, uses. The Conference believes that “interested person” is more precise than “stakeholder” and that “stakeholder,” as used in Recommendation 2017–5, should be understood to mean “interested person.”

21 See Emerson & Levin, supra note 10, at 42–44.
a. Promoting the flexible use of interpretive rules in a manner that still takes due account of needs for consistency and predictability. In particular, when the agency accepts a proposal for a lawful approach or analysis other than that set forth in an interpretive rule and the approach or analysis seems likely to be applicable to other situations, the agency should disseminate its decision and the reasons for it to other persons who might make the argument, to other affected interested persons, to officials likely to hear the argument, and to members of the public, subject to existing protections for confidential business or personal information.

b. Assigning the task of considering arguments for approaches or analyses other than those in an interpretive rule to a component of the agency that is likely to engage in open and productive dialogue with persons who make such arguments, such as a program office that is accustomed to dealing cooperatively with regulated parties and regulatory beneficiaries.

c. When officials are authorized to take an approach or endorse an analysis different from that in an interpretive rule but decline to do so, directing appeals of such a refusal to a higher-level official.

d. Investing in training and monitoring of personnel to ensure that: (i) Treat parties’ ideas for lawful approaches or analyses that are different from those in an interpretive rule in an open and welcoming manner; and (ii) understand that approaches or analyses other than those in an interpretive rule are undertaken according to the proper internal agency procedures for approval and justification, are appropriate and will not have adverse employment consequences for them.

e. Facilitating opportunities for members of the public, including through intermediaries such as associations or associations, to propose or support approaches or analyses different from those in an interpretive rule and to provide feedback to the agency on whether its officials are giving reasonable consideration to such proposals.

15. Because measures to promote flexibility (including those listed in Paragraph 14) may take up agency resources, it will be necessary to set priorities for which interpretive rules are most in need of such measures. In deciding when to take such measures, the agency should consider the following, bearing in mind that these considerations will not always point in the same direction:

a. An agency should assign a higher priority to an interpretive rule the greater the rule’s impact is likely to be on the interests of regulated parties, regulatory beneficiaries, and other interested parties, either because regulated parties have strong incentives to comply with the rule or because the rule practically reduces the stringency of the regulatory scheme compared to the status quo.

b. An agency should assign a lower priority to promoting flexibility in the use of a rule insofar as the rule’s value to the agency and interested persons is primarily consistency rather than substantive content.

Administrative Conference Recommendation 2019–2

Agency Recruitment and Selection of Administrative Law Judges

Adopted June 13, 2019

The Administrative Procedure Act (APA) requires that hearings conducted under its main adjudication provisions (sometimes known as “formal” hearings) be presided over by the agency itself, by “one or more members of the body which comprises the agency,” or by “one or more administrative law judges ([ALJs])” appointed under 5 U.S.C. 3105. In turn, the agency authorities “[e]ach agency to “appoint as many [ALJs] as are necessary for proceedings required to be conducted in accordance” with those provisions.

The process for appointing ALJs recently changed as a result of Executive Order (E.O.) 13,843. Until that order was issued, agencies could only hire a new ALJ only from a certificate of qualified applicants (that is, a list of applicants eligible for hire) prepared by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM). Each certificate generally held, for each opening, three applicants selected from a much larger register of applicants OPM deemed “qualified.” The “list of three,” as it was known, consisted of the three highest-scoring applicants based upon, among other things, OPM-administered and -developed examination and panel interview process, as well as veterans’ status.

Under E.O. 13,843, newly appointed ALJs were removed from the “competitive service,” and were instead placed in what is known as the “excepted service.” As a result, agencies now hire new ALJs directly—that is, without OPM’s involvement—generally using whatever selection criteria and procedures they deem appropriate. E.O. 13,843 was premised on two primary bases. The first was the need to “mitigate” the concern that, after the Supreme Court’s 2018 decision in Lucia v. Securities and Exchange Commission, the OPM-administered process might unduly circumscribe an agency head’s discretionary hiring authority under the Constitution’s Appointments Clause. Lucia held that the Securities and Exchange Commission’s (SEC) ALJs holding under the Appointments Clause, with the result being that—assuming that the SEC’s ALJs are inferior rather than principal officers—they must be appointed directly by the Commission itself as the head of a department rather than to be selected by OPM staff. The second basis was the need to give “agencies greater ability and discretion to assess critical qualities in ALJ candidates . . . and [such candidates’] ability to meet the particular needs of the agency.” E.O. 13,843 requires only that ALJs be licensed attorneys. In addition, it identifies desirable qualities for ALJs, such as appropriate temperament, legal acumen, impartiality, and the ability to communicate their decisions, explicitly leaving it to agencies to determine its own selection criteria. This Recommendation does not address the substantive hiring criteria that agencies should employ in selecting among ALJ candidates, though it does recommend that agencies publish the minimum qualifications and selection criteria for their ALJ positions. The selection criteria that an agency adopts might include, for example, litigation experience, experience as an adjudicator, experience in dispute resolution, experience with the subject-matter that comprises the agency’s caseload, specialized technical skills, experience with case management systems, demonstrated legal research and legal writing skills, a dedicated work ethic, and strong leadership and communications skills.

Each agency must decide not only which selection criteria will apply, but also which are mandatory and which are only desirable or preferred. Of course, agencies must also ensure that recruitment and selection comply with generally applicable legal requirements, such as those relating to veterans’ preference and equal employment opportunity and government-wide initiatives to promote diversity and inclusion in the federal workforce.
Because the E.O. allows each agency to design its own selection procedures, each agency must now decide which of its officially will be involved in the selection process, how the process will be structured, how vacancies will be announced and otherwise communicated to potential applicants, and whether the agency will review writing samples or use other evaluation method.

This Recommendation is built upon the view that there is no “one-size-fits-all” procedure for appointing ALJs and is designed to assist agencies that are in the initial stages of thinking through new procedures for appointing ALJs under the E.O. Each agency will have to construct a system that is best suited to its particular needs. Doing so will require consideration of, among other things, the nature of its proceedings, the size of the agency’s caseload, and the substance of the relevant statutes and the procedural rules involved in an agency’s proceedings.

Recommendation

1. To ensure the widest possible awareness of their Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) vacancies and an optimal and broad pool of applicants, agencies should announce their vacancies on the government-wide employment website (currently operated by the Office of Personnel Management as USAJOBS), their own websites, and/or other websites that might reach a diverse range of potential ALJ applicants. Agencies that desire or require subject-matter, adjudicative, or litigation expertise could also reach out to lawyers who practice in the field or those with prior experience as an adjudicator. Each agency should keep the application period open for sufficient time to achieve an optimal and broad pool of applicants.

2. Agencies should formulate and publish minimum qualifications and selection criteria for ALJ hiring. Those qualifications and criteria should include the factors specified in Executive Order 13,843 and the qualifications the agency deems important for service as an ALJ in the particular agency. The notice should distinguish between mandatory and desirable criteria.

3. Agencies should develop policies to review and assess ALJ applications. These policies might include the development of screening panels to select which applicants to interview, interview panels to select which applicants to recommend for appointment, or both kinds of panels. If used, such panels could include internal reviewers only or both internal and external reviewers, and could include overlapping members among the two types of panels or could include entirely different members. These policies might include procedures to evaluate applicants’ writing samples. If used, such writing samples could be submitted with the applicants’ initial applications, as part of a second round of submissions for applicants who meet initial “screening” criteria of the office with impartiality and maintain the appearance of impartiality.

Administrative Conference Recommendation 2019–3

Public Availability of Agency Guidance Documents

Adopted June 13, 2019

Among their many activities, government agencies issue guidance documents that help explain their policies and procedures or communicate other important information to regulated entities and the public. Members of the public should have ready access to these guidance documents so that they can understand how their government works and how their government relates to them. Agencies should manage their guidance documents consistent with legal requirements and principles of governmental transparency and accountability.

Guidance documents can take many forms. They include what the Administrative Procedure Act (APA) calls “interpretive rules” and “general statements of policy,” which are two types of rules that are not required to undergo the notice-and-comment procedures applicable to legislative rules. They may also include other materials considered to be guidance documents under other, separate definitions adopted by government agencies. When managing the public availability of agency information in implementing this Recommendation, agencies should be clear about what constitutes guidance and what does not.

Several laws require agencies to make at least certain guidance documents available to the public. The Federal Records Act requires agencies to identify “records of general interest or use to the public that are appropriate for public disclosure, and . . . post[s] such records in a publicly accessible electronic format.” The Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) requires that agencies publish “statements of general policy or interpretations of general applicability formulated and adopted by the agency” in the Federal Register. FOIA also requires that agencies “make available for public inspection in an electronic format . . . [specific] statements of policy and interpretations which have been adopted by the agency,” as well as “administrative staff manuals and instructions to staff that affect a member of the public.” Finally, Congress has occasionally enacted agency-specific requirements for posting guidance documents online. For example, the Food and Drug Administration is required to “maintain electronically and update and publish periodically in the Federal Register a list of guidance documents” and to ensure that “[a]ll such documents [are] made available to the public.”

The Administrative Conference has recommended that various types of guidance documents be made available online. Recommendation 2017–5, Agency Guidance Through Policy Statements, provided that “[a]ll written policy statements affecting the interests of regulated parties, regulatory beneficiaries, or other interested parties should be promptly made available electronically and indexed, in a manner in which they may readily be found.”

1. To allow agencies flexibility to manage their varied and unique types of guidance documents, this Recommendation does not seek to provide an all-encompassing definition of guidance documents. This Recommendation is addressed, at a minimum, to those guidance documents required by law to be published in the Federal Register and any other guidance document required by law to be made publicly available. See infra notes 4–7 and accompanying text.

2. Interpretive rules and general statements of policy are “rules” under the APA. See 5 U.S.C. 551(4), 553. Although the APA does not define these two terms, the Attorney General’s Manual on the Administrative Procedure Act defines “interpretive rules” as “rules or statements issued by an agency to advise the public of the agency’s construction of the statutes and rules which it administers,” and “general statements of policy” as “statements issued by an agency to advise the public prospectively of the manner in which the agency proposes to exercise a discretionary power.” Attorney General’s Manual on the Administrative Procedure Act 30 n.3 (1947). In accordance with standard parlance, this Recommendation uses the term “interpretive” in place of the APA’s word “interpretative.” See Gary Cognolati, Public Availability of Agency Guidance Documents (May 15, 2019) (report to the Admin. Conf. of the U.S.).

5. 5 U.S.C. 552(a)(1)(D) (emphasis added). To the extent that the documents the committee or court determines guidance would fall within any of the nine FOIA exceptions, such as “records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes,” 5 U.S.C. 552(b)(7), agencies would not be required to disclose them.

Continued
Recommendation 2019–1 includes identical language directing agencies to do the same for interpretive rules. Similarly, Recommendation 2018–5, Public Availability of Adjudication Rules, urged agencies to “provide updated access on their websites to all sources of Adjudication Rules and related guidance documents and explanatory materials that apply to agency adjudications.”

Although many agencies do post guidance documents online, in recent years concerns have emerged about how well organized, up to date, and easily accessible these documents are to the public. At various times, the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) has instructed agencies on their management of guidance documents. The United States Government Accountability Office has conducted an audit that highlights the management challenges associated with agency dissemination of guidance documents online. Several legislative proposals have been introduced (but not enacted) to create standards for public disclosure of guidance documents.

Agencies should be cognizant that the primary goal of online publication is to facilitate access to guidance documents by regulated entities and the public. In deciding how to provide availability of their guidance documents, agencies must be mindful of how members of the public will find the documents they need. Four principles for agencies to consider when developing and implementing plans to track and disclose their guidance documents to the public include: (a) comprehensiveness (whether all relevant guidance documents are available), (b) currency (whether guidance documents are up to date), (c) accessibility (whether guidance documents can be easily located by website users), and (d) comprehensibility (whether website users are likely to be able to understand the information they have located).

With these principles in mind, this Recommendation calls on agencies to consider opportunities for improving the public availability of their guidance documents. Each agency must decide which guidance documents to post online and how to present them in a manner that will ensure their availability and usefulness for regulated parties and the public. The Recommendation provides best practices to guide agencies to make their guidance documents more publicly available. These best practices are intended to be adaptable to fit agency-specific circumstances. The Administrative Conference notes that each agency is different, and the practices outlined in this Recommendation may be employed with flexibility as necessary (perhaps based on factors such as an agency’s internal structures, available resources, types and volume of documents, the parties it regulates, and its end users) so that guidance documents are made available to the public in a logical and suitably comprehensive manner.

Recommendation

Procedures for Managing Guidance Documents

1. Agencies should develop written procedures pertaining to their internal management of guidance documents.
   a. The procedures should include:
      i. A description of relevant categories or types of guidance documents subject to the procedures; and
      ii. Examples of specific materials not subject to the procedures, as appropriate.
   b. The procedures should address measures to be taken for:
      i. Development of guidance documents, including any opportunity for public comment;
      ii. Publication and dissemination of draft or final guidance documents; and
      iii. Periodic review of existing guidance documents.
   c. Agency procedures should indicate the extent to which any of the measures created or identified in response to Paragraph 1(b) should vary depending on the type of guidance document or its category, as defined by any provisions in agency procedures responsive to Paragraph 1(a).
   d. All relevant agency staff should receive training in agency’s guidance management procedures.

2. All relevant agency staff should receive training in agency’s guidance management procedures.

3. Agencies should develop and apply appropriate internal controls to ensure adherence to guidance document management procedures.

4. To facilitate internal tracking of guidance documents, as well as to help the public identify unique identification numbers to guidance documents covered by their written guidance procedures. Once a guidance identification number has been assigned to a guidance document, it should appear on that document and be used to refer to the document whenever it is listed or referenced on the agency’s website, in public notices issued by federal departments and agencies, in the Federal Register or the Code of Federal Regulations.

5. Using appropriate metrics, agencies should periodically review their guidance document management procedures and their implementation in order to assess their performance in making guidance documents available as well as to identify opportunities for improvement.

6. Agencies should provide opportunities for public feedback on their efforts to promote the public availability of their guidance documents.

Guidance Documents on Agency Websites

7. Agencies should maintain a page on their websites dedicated to informing the public about the availability of guidance documents and facilitating access to those documents. Such guidance document web pages should include:
   a. Agencies’ written guidance document management procedures pursuant to Paragraph 1, if developed;
   b. Plain language explanations (sometimes known as “explainers”) that define guidance documents, explain their legal effects, or give examples of different types of guidance documents;
   c. A method for users to find relevant guidance documents, which might include:
      i. Comprehensively listing and indexing agency guidance documents;
      ii. Displaying links to pages where guidance documents are located, which could be organized by topic, type of guidance document, agency sub-division, or some other rubric; or
      iii. A dedicated search engine; and
   d. Contact information or a comment form to facilitate public feedback related to potentially broken links, missing documents, or other errors or issues related to the agency’s procedures for the development, publication, or disclosure of its guidance documents.

8. Agencies should provide the public with access to a comprehensive set of its guidance documents—either on the dedicated guidance document web page or other web pages—in accordance with its written procedures.

Agency websites should include, at minimum, (1) all guidance documents required by law to be published in the Federal Register and (2) all other guidance documents required by law to otherwise be made publicly available.

b. Guidance documents should generally be made available in downloadable form.
agency staff speak about guidance documents at relevant conferences or meetings, or preparing printed pamphlets or other hard-copy documents. Even when not required to do so by law, agencies should consider publishing information about new or revised guidance documents in the Federal Register.

12. Agencies should consider providing descriptive references (such as links, if possible) to relevant guidance documents in appropriate sections of the Code of Federal Regulations, stating where the public can access the documents.

Administrative Conference Recommendation 2019–4

Revised Model Rules for Implementation of the Equal Access to Justice Act
Adopted June 13, 2019

[Note from the Office of the Chairman: Recommendation 2019–4 immediately follows; however, the Revised Model Rules for Implementation of the Equal Access to Justice Act, which were adopted by the Assembly as an appendix to Recommendation 2019–4, are published elsewhere in this issue of the Federal Register. Federal agencies should consider the Revised Model Rules when adopting or revising their own rules in order to promote the uniformity of procedure contemplated by the Equal Access to Justice Act, and in discharging their obligation to consult with the Chairman of the Administrative Conference of the United States under 5 U.S.C. 504(c)(1).1]

The Equal Access to Justice Act (EAJA), first enacted in 1980, authorizes the award of attorney fees and other expenses to certain individuals, small businesses, and other entities that prevail against the federal government in judicial proceedings and certain adversarial agency adjudicative proceedings, when the position of the government is not substantially justified.2 The stated purpose of EAJA is to, among other things, “diminish the deterrent effect of foreseeing or defending against governmental action by providing” the award of certain costs and fees against the United States.2 In the case of agency adjudications, agencies must establish “uniform procedures for the submission and consideration of applications for an award of fees and other expenses” “[a]fter consultation with the Chairman of the Administrative Conference of the United States.”3 To carry out this statutory charge, the Conference’s 1986 model rules required agencies to consult with the Chairman on draft model rules and make additional revisions. The Conference considered, among other things, EAJA amendments and added additional revisions to promote greater consistency and clarity.

The Conference’s revised model rules appear in the appendix to this Recommendation.

Substantial changes have been made to the 1986 model rules. They include, most notably, the elimination of most of what was Subpart A. Subpart A of the 1986 model rules consisted of general provisions addressing, among other things, when EAJA applies, eligibility of applicants, proceedings covered, standards for awards, allowable fees and expenses, rulemaking on maximum rates for attorney fees, awards against other agencies, and fees against the United States.4

5 U.S.C. 504.

5 U.S.C. 504(c)(1).

and delegations of authority. The Conference recommends the elimination of these provisions because they address the substantive standard for EAJA awards and other such matters beyond the Conference’s statutory charge identified above. Other changes to the rules, including the addition of a definitions section, have also been made to improve their clarity and comprehensibility.

Recommendation

The 1986 model rules should be replaced with the revised model rules for the implementation of the Equal Access to Justice Act that appear in the attached appendix. [Note from the Office of the Chairman: The appendix to Recommendation 2019–4 is published elsewhere in this issue of the Federal Register.]

[FR Doc. 2019–16946 Filed 8–7–19; 8:45 am]
BILLING CODE 6110–01–P

ADMINISTRATIVE CONFERENCE OF THE UNITED STATES

Revised Model Rules for Implementation of the Equal Access to Justice Act

AGENCY: Administrative Conference of the United States.

SUMMARY: The Office of the Chairman of the Administrative Conference of the United States is issuing these Revised Model Rules for Implementation of the Equal Access to Justice Act. These Revised Model Rules update the uniform procedures for the submission and consideration of applications for attorney fees under the Equal Access to Justice Act that were last issued in 1986. These Revised Model Rules reflect, among other things, amendments to the Act made by the Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Fairness Act and evolving adjudicative practices. They are designed to assist Federal agencies in adopting or modifying their own regulations for implementation of the Act.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The Administrative Conference Act, 5 U.S.C. 591–596, established the Administrative Conference of the United States. The Conference studies the efficiency, adequacy, and fairness of the administrative procedures used by Federal agencies and makes recommendations to agencies, the President, Congress, and the Judicial Conference of the United States for procedural improvements (5 U.S.C. 594(1)). For further information about the Conference and its activities, see www.acus.gov.

The Equal Access to Justice Act (EAJA), first enacted in 1980, authorizes the award of attorney fees and other expenses to eligible parties who prevail against the Federal government in judicial proceedings and certain adversarial agency adjudicative proceedings, where the position of the government is not substantially justified.1 In the case of certain adversarial agency adjudications, “[a]fter consultation with the Chairman of the Administrative Conference of the United States, each agency shall by rule establish uniform procedures for the submission and consideration of applications for an award of fees and other expenses.”2 In furtherance of this statutory obligation, the Conference Chairman in 1981 issued a set of Model Rules for agencies to use when adopting rules for the consideration of applications for EAJA awards in agency adjudications.3 The Conference Chairman issued a revised set of Model Rules in 1986.4 Many agencies have since promulgated EAJA rules that are substantially based upon these Model Rules.5

The Office of the Chairman is issuing these Revised Model Rules to replace the 1981 and 1986 Model Rules. These Revised Model Rules include revisions made to reflect changes in law and in practice during the intervening thirty years and to promote greater accuracy and clarity. These rules were set forth in an appendix to Conference Recommendation 2019–4, Revised Model Rules for Implementation of the Equal Access to Justice Act. Recommendation 2019–4 is published elsewhere in this issue of the Federal Register.

Unlike the 1981 and 1986 versions, these Revised Model Rules will not be published in the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR). The Federal Register Act requires codification of agency documents of general applicability and legal effect in the CFR.6 However, these model rules are publishing in the Notices section of this issue of the Federal Register with the same intended effect of encouraging agencies to set out and implement these model rules as part of their own EAJA rules. Because these model rules are published in the Notices section, they will use a different numbering scheme than in past years. Agencies may use a different numbering system than what appears in the Revised Model Rules.

The most significant revision to the 1986 Model Rules is the elimination of much of the former Subpart A. This change was implemented because its provisions largely addressed substantive matters beyond the Conference’s statutory charge. Some provisions of former Subpart A remain and were moved to other parts of the Revised Model Rules for the purpose of improved clarity. A new definitions section comprises Part 2 in the current revision. Additional changes were made to comport with the requirements of the Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Fairness Act, which was enacted in 1996.

The Revised Model Rules adopted by the Conference’s Assembly as an Appendix to Recommendation 2019–4, and now issued by the Office of the Chairman, were developed by a special ad hoc committee that held public meetings to address revision of the Model Rules. The materials related to the meetings, including the agendas, the 1981 and 1986 Model Rules, and draft versions of the Revised Model Rules, can be accessed via a dedicated web page on the Conference’s website at https://www.acus.gov/research-projects/revised-model-rules-implementation-equal-access-justice-act.

Agencies are encouraged to use these Revised Model Rules when drafting or revising their EAJA rules pertaining to adjudications in order to promote the uniformity of procedure contemplated by EAJA. The Office of the Chairman’s expectations of how agencies can fulfill the statutory requirement of consultation with the ACUS Chairman are as follows. Agencies that publish proposed rules for comment should notify the Office of the Chairman of their publication by email to ACUS@info.gov, using “Model EAJA Rules Consultation” in the subject line. The

---

2 5 U.S.C. 504(c)(1).
6 44 U.S.C. 1510.