SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The U.S. Office of Government Ethics (OGE) is hosting public meetings to obtain the views of experts and interested parties regarding the development of a legal expense fund regulation. On April 15, 2019, OGE sought stakeholder input on issues specifically related to legal expense funds through an advance notice of proposed rulemaking (ANPRM). See Notice and Request for Comments: Legal Expense Fund Regulation, 84 FR 14146 (Apr. 15, 2019). In response to this ANPRM, OGE received written comments and heard testimony at a virtual public hearing on May 22, 2019. See <https://www.oge.gov/Web/oge.nsf/Resources/Rulemaking>.

OGE is now inviting all interested members of the public to share ideas, provide information, and express concerns at public meetings about specific topics related to legal expense funds. These meetings will allow interested groups to hear and respond to the concerns of other affected persons and allow OGE to further develop our understanding of the views of various constituencies. The goal of these meetings is to exchange ideas rather than come to a consensus.

To facilitate discussion at the public meetings, OGE welcomes input on issues related to legal expense funds, including, but not limited to, the following topics:

- Scope of a legal expense fund regulation, including:
 - The types of legal matters to be covered by a legal expense fund regulation if the employee seeks to raise funds for legal expenses arising from those legal matters;
 - Other possible sources of legal expense payments or legal support (e.g., pro bono assistance, established legal aid providers) outside of a legal expense fund; and
 - The possibility of different rules for different types of employees.
- Structure of a legal expense fund, including:
 - Number of eligible beneficiaries for a legal expense fund; and
 - Legal structure used to establish a legal expense fund (e.g., trust, limited liability company, etc.).

An agenda, a list of attendees, and a list of topics discussed will be posted to the following website at the conclusion of the public meetings: <https://www.oge.gov/Web/oge.nsf/Resources/Rulemaking>. There will be no transcription at the meetings. OGE is accepting additional written comments until November 5, 2019, during which time interested parties will have an opportunity to present further comment on issues related to legal expense funds.

Registration: To ensure adequate room accommodations and to facilitate entry to the meeting space, individuals wishing to attend the public meetings must register by close of business on the following dates:

- October 10, 2019, for the meeting on October 17th.
- October 15, 2019, for the meeting on October 22nd.

Individuals must register by sending an email to usoge@oge.gov. The email should include “Legal Expense Fund Public Meeting” in the subject line and include the name of the attendee(s) and the preferred date of attendance.

Written Comments: To submit a written comment to OGE, please email usoge@oge.gov, send a fax to: (202) 482-9237, or submit a paper copy to: Office of Government Ethics, Suite 500, 1201 New York Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20005-3917 by close of business on the date listed in the DATES section of this notice. Individuals must include OGE’s agency name and the words “Legal Expense Fund Regulation” in all written comments. All written comments, including attachments and other supporting materials, will become part of the public record and be subject to public disclosure. Written comments may be posted on OGE’s website, www.oge.gov. Sensitive personal information, such as account numbers or Social Security numbers, should not be included. Regulations Prohibiting Issuance, Reliance, or Defense of Improper Agency Guidance, Notice of Petition for Rulemaking AGENCY: Office of the General Counsel, Department of Energy.

ACTION: Notice of petition for rulemaking; request for comment.

SUMMARY: On August 2, 2019, the Department of Energy (DOE) received a petition from the New Civil Liberties Alliance (NCLA) asking DOE to initiate a rulemaking to prohibit any DOE component from issuing, relying on, or defending improper agency guidance. Through this document, DOE seeks comment on the petition, as well as any data or information that could be used in DOE's determination whether to proceed with the petition.

DATES: Written comments and information are requested on or before December 26, 2019.

Federal eRulemaking Portal: <http://www.regulations.gov>. Follow the instructions for submitting comments.

Email: Guidance@hq.doe.gov.

Postal Mail: U.S. Department of Energy, Office of the General Counsel (GC-33), 6A-179, 1000 Independence Avenue SW, Washington, DC 20585. If possible, please submit all items on a compact disc (CD), in which case it is not necessary to include printed copies.

Hand Delivery/Courier: U.S.

Department of Energy, 6A-179, 1000 Independence Avenue SW, Washington, DC 20585. If possible, please submit all items on a CD, in which case it is not necessary to include printed copies.

Docket: For access to the docket to read background documents, or comments received, go to the Federal eRulemaking Portal at: <http://www.regulations.gov>.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Ms. Jennifer Tiedeman, U.S. Department of Energy, Office of the General Counsel, 1000 Independence Avenue SW, Washington, DC 20585. Telephone: (202) 287-6111. Email: Guidance@hq.doe.gov.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The Administrative Procedure Act (APA), 5 U.S.C. 551 et seq., provides among other things, that "[e]ach agency shall give an interested person the right to petition for the issuance, amendment, or repeal of a rule." (5 U.S.C. 553(e)). DOE received a petition from NCLA, as described in this document and set forth verbatim below, requesting that DOE initiate a rulemaking to prohibit any DOE component from issuing, relying on, or defending improper agency guidance. In publishing this petition for public comment, DOE is seeking views on whether it should grant the petition and undertake a rulemaking. By seeking comment on whether to grant this petition, DOE takes no position at this time regarding the merits of the suggested rulemaking or the assertions made by NCLA.

In its petition, NCLA argues that federal agencies often issue informal interpretations, advice, statements of policy, and other forms of guidance that make law by declaring views about what the public should do even though the Constitution and APA prohibit doing so. NCLA asserts that such practice evades legal requirements and is used for the purpose of coercing persons or entities outside the federal government into taking or not taking action beyond what is required by an applicable statute or regulation. NCLA further states that despite being prohibited by law, improper guidance is typically outside of judicial review because of procedural limits. NCLA discusses a number of authorities in favor of its petition, including the U.S. Constitution, the APA, an OMB Bulletin (Final Bulletin for Agency Good Guidance Practices, issued in 2007), and an OMB Memorandum (OMB Memorandum M-19-14, issued in 2019). It concludes that to solve underlying problems completely, DOE should issue a binding and final rule prohibiting any DOE component from issuing, relying on, or defending improper agency guidance, and that only a new rule binding DOE can assure regulated parties that DOE will refrain from future improper use of guidance. The NCLA petition also presents text for a proposed rule.

DOE welcomes comments and views of interested parties on any aspect of the petition for rulemaking.

DOE invites all interested parties to submit in writing by December 26, 2019 comments and information regarding this petition.

deleted. Submit these documents via email or on a CD, if feasible. DOE will make its own determination about the confidential status of the information and treat it according to its determination.

Factors of interest to DOE when evaluating requests to treat submitted information as confidential include: (1) A description of the items; (2) whether and why such items are customarily treated as confidential within the industry; (3) whether the information is generally known by or available from other sources; (4) whether the information has previously been made available to others without obligation concerning its confidentiality; (5) an explanation of the competitive injury to the submitting person which would result from public disclosure; (6) when such information might lose its confidential character due to the passage of time, and (7) why disclosure of the information would be contrary to the public interest.

It is DOE's policy that all comments may be included in the public docket, without change and as received, including any personal information provided in the comments (except information deemed to be exempt from public disclosure).

DOE considers public participation to be a very important part of its process for considering rulemaking petitions. DOE actively encourages the participation and interaction of the public during the comment period. Interactions with and between members of the public provide a balanced discussion of the issues and assist DOE in determining how to proceed with a petition.

Approval of the Office of the Secretary

The Secretary of Energy has approved publication of this notice of petition for rulemaking.

I. Statement of the Petitioner

Pursuant to the Administrative Procedure Act (APA), 5 U.S.C. 553(e), the New Civil Liberties Alliance (hereinafter "NCLA") hereby petitions the United States Department of Energy (hereinafter "DOE" or the "Department") to initiate a rulemaking proceeding to promulgate regulations prohibiting any DOE component from issuing, relying on, or defending improper agency guidance. The proposed rule will formalize and make more permanent policies and best practices from other agencies concerning agency guidance that improperly attempts to create rights or obligations binding on persons or entities outside DOE. The proposed rule will also provide affected parties with a means of redress for improper agency action.

II. Summary of the Petition

Even though both the Constitution and the Administrative Procedure Act prohibit the practice, federal agencies often engage in the "commonplace and dangerous" acts of issuing informal interpretations, advice, statements of policy, and other forms of "guidance" that "make law simply by declaring their views about what the public should do." Philip Hamburger, Is Administrative Law Unlawful? 260, 114 (2014). This practice evades legal requirements and often is "used for the purpose of coercing persons or entities outside the federal government into taking any action or refraining from taking any action beyond what is required by the terms of the applicable statute or regulation." Office of the Att'y Gen., Prohibition on Improper Guidance Documents at 2 (Nov. 16, 2017), available at <https://www.justice.gov/opa/press-release/file/1012271/download>. Despite being prohibited by law, improper guidance is typically "immuniz[ed]" from judicial review by procedural limits. Appalachian Power Co. v. Env'tl. Prot.

Agency, 208 F.3d 1015, 1020 (D.C. Cir. 2000). This conduct results in a form of illegal and unconstitutional “extortion” where agencies obtain compliance through “extralegal lawmaking.” Hamburger, supra, at 115, 260.

To rein in these abuses, NCLA proposes that DOE issue a formal rule prohibiting the Department and each of its subordinate offices from issuing, relying on, or defending the validity of improper guidance that has been issued by any federal entity. The proposed rule not only adopts existing legal limitations on such improper agency action, but also creates a permanent and binding set of limits on departmental practice. The proposed rule also provides means to enforce these limitations by empowering regulated parties to petition DOE to rescind improper guidance and to seek judicial review of improper agency actions.

III. Statement of Interest

NCLA is a nonprofit civil rights organization founded to defend constitutional rights through original litigation, amicus curiae briefs, and other means, including participating in the regulatory process in federal agencies. The “civil liberties” of the organization’s name include rights at least as old as the U.S. Constitution itself, such as jury trial, due process of law, the right to live under laws made by the nation’s elected lawmakers rather than by prosecutors or bureaucrats, and the right to be tried in front of an impartial and independent judge whenever the government brings cases against private parties.

NCLA defends civil liberties by asserting constitutional constraints on the administrative state. Although Americans still enjoy the shell of their Republic, a very different form of government has developed within it—a type that our Constitution was framed to prevent. Since this unconstitutional administrative state violates more rights of more Americans than any other aspect of American law, it is the focus of NCLA’s efforts.

Even when NCLA has not yet sued to challenge an agency’s unconstitutional exercise of administrative power, it encourages the agencies themselves to curb the unlawful exercise of power by respecting constitutional limits on administrative rulemaking, guidance, adjudication, and enforcement. The courts are not the only government bodies with the duty to attend to the law. More immediately, agencies and their leadership have a duty to follow the law, not least by avoiding unlawful modes of governance. Accordingly, a major part of NCLA’s mission and duty is to advise and, if necessary, compel agencies and their leaders to examine whether their modes of rulemaking, guidance, adjudication, and enforcement comply with the APA and with the Constitution. NCLA is therefore an “interested” party concerning the proposed rule set forth in this document. See 5 U.S.C. 553(e).

IV. Legal Authority To Promulgate the Rule

This petition for rulemaking is submitted pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 553(e), which provides any “interested person the right to petition

[an agency] for the issuance . . . of a rule.” Section 301 of the APA provides that the “head of an Executive department or military department may prescribe regulations for the government of his department, the conduct of its employees, and the custody, use, and preservation of its records, papers and property.” Id. § 301. The Department of Energy is one such Executive department. Id. § 101. Accordingly, the Secretary of Energy may “formulate and publish” regulations binding DOE in the exercise of its lawful authority. See Georgia v. United States, 411 U.S. 526, 536 (1973), abrogated on other grounds, Shelby Cty., Ala. v. Holder, 570 U.S. 529 (2013). In addition, 42 U.S.C. 7254 authorizes the Secretary of Energy to “prescribe such procedural and administrative rules and regulations as he may deem necessary or appropriate to administer and manage the functions now or hereafter vested in him.”

When an agency engages in rulemaking procedures it must abide by the requirements set out in 5 U.S.C. 553.

V. Reasons for Creating the Rule

A. Legal Background

No agency has any inherent power to make law. Article I, § 1 of the U.S. Constitution vests “[a]ll legislative powers” in Congress, and “the lawmaking function belongs to Congress . . . and may not be conveyed to another branch or entity.” Loving v. United States, 517 U.S. 748, 758 (1996). This is a constitutional barrier to an exercise of legislative power by an agency. Further, “an agency literally has no power to act . . . unless and until Congress confers power upon it.” Louisiana Pub. Serv. Comm’n v. FCC, 476 U.S. 355, 374 (1986). Thus, even if an agency could constitutionally exercise legislative power, it lacks the authority to bind anyone without congressional authorization.

Significantly, Congress has categorically prohibited the issuance of binding guidance. The Administrative Procedure Act was passed in 1946 in order “to introduce greater uniformity of procedure and standardization of administrative practice among the diverse agencies whose customs had departed widely from each other.” Wong Yang Sung v. McGrath, 339 U.S. 33, 41, modified on other grounds by 339 U.S. 908 (1950). As a result, it sets out a comprehensive set of rules governing administrative action. Id.

Consistent with this design, the APA established a process by which agencies could engage in “rule making.” 5 U.S.C. 553. The APA explains that a “rule” “means the whole or a part of an agency statement of general or particular applicability and future effect designed to implement, interpret, or prescribe law or policy or describing the organization, procedure, or practice requirements of an agency.” Id. § 551(4).

Rules generally may be promulgated by agencies only following notice-and-comment procedures. First, an agency must post a “general notice” of the proposed rulemaking in a prominent place and seek commentary from private parties. Id. § 553(b). This notice must set out “the time, place and nature” of the proposed “public rule making proceedings,” “the legal authority under which the rule is proposed,” and “either the terms or substance of the proposed rule or a description of the subjects and issues involved.” Id. §§ 553(b)(1)–(3).

After the notice has been posted, the agency must “give interested persons an opportunity to participate in the rule making through submission of written data, views, or arguments.” Id. § 553(c). “An agency must consider and respond to significant comments received during the period for public comment.” Perez v. Mortgage Bankers Ass’n, 135 S. Ct. 1199, 1203 (2015). In response to submitted comments, a “general statement” of the purpose of the rules must also be “incorporate[d] in the rules adopted.” 5 U.S.C. 553(c).

The APA’s notice-and-comment period “does not apply . . . to interpretive rules, general organization of policy, or rules of agency organization procedure, or practice.” Id. § 553(b). Instead, this requirement applies only to “substantive rules,” which are sometimes referred to as “legislative rules.” Mendoza v. Perez, 754 F.3d 1002, 1021 (D.C. Cir. 2014); see also 5 U.S.C. § 553(d) (distinguishing between “substantive” and “interpretive” rules for publication and service).

A “substantive” or “legislative” rule is any “agency action that purports to impose legally binding obligations or prohibitions on regulated parties.” Nat’l Mining Ass’n v. McCarthy, 758 F.3d 243, 251 (D.C. Cir. 2014). Stated differently: “A rule is legislative if it supplements a statute, adopts a new position inconsistent with existing regulations, or otherwise effects a substantive change in existing law or policy.” Mendoza, 754 F.3d at 1021. Such “legislative rules” have the “force and effect of law.” Chrysler Corp. v. Brown, 441 U.S. 281, 302–03 (1979). Legislative rules are also accorded deference from courts. United States v. Mead Corp., 533 U.S. 218, 230 (2001).

In contrast, “interpretive rules” are not subject to notice-and-comment requirements. Mendoza, 754 F.3d at 1021. Interpretive rules “do not have the force and effect of law and are not accorded that weight in the adjudicatory process.” Shalala v. Guernsey Mem’l Hosp., 514 U.S. 87, 99 (1995). An interpretive rule is any “agency action that merely interprets a prior statute or regulation and does not itself purport to impose new obligations or prohibitions or requirements on regulated parties.” Nat’l Mining Ass’n, 758 F.3d at 252. “[I]nterpretive rules . . . are issued by an agency to advise the public of the agency’s construction of the statutes and rules which it administers.” Perez, 135 S. Ct. at 1204 (internal citation and quotation marks omitted). Such a rule simply “describes the agency’s view of the meaning of an existing statute or regulation.” Batterton v. Marshall, 648 F.2d 694, 702 n. 34 (D.C. Cir. 1980).

The notice-and-comment process is not merely a technical requirement under the APA. The process serves important purposes. As the Supreme Court has explained, “Congress contemplates administrative action with the effect of law when it provides for a relatively formal administrative procedure tending to foster the fairness and deliberation that should underlie a pronouncement of such force.” Mead Corp., 533 U.S. at 230. “APA notice and comment” is one such formal procedure, “designed to assure due deliberation.” Id. (quoting Smiley v. Citibank (South Dakota) N.A., 517 U.S. 735, 741 (1996)).

By contrast, informal interpretations, such as policy statements, agency manuals, enforcement guidelines and opinion letters, “lack the force of law” and warrant, at best, only limited “respect” from courts concerning matters of interpretation. Christensen v. Harris County, 529 U.S. 576, 587 (2000). Further, to the extent that a court grants any respect to these interpretations, the strength of such respect varies widely depending on the degree of formality employed by the agency. See Mead Corp., 533 U.S. at 228 (discussing the deference owed to agency decisions). It depends in many instances on an agency’s use of “notice-and-comment rulemaking or formal adjudication.” Id. at 228–30 (internal citation and quotation marks omitted). A court gives the least amount of respect to an “agency practice [that lacks] any indication [the agency] set out with a lawmaking pretense in mind” when it acted. Id. at 233.

Despite the relatively straightforward legal distinction, it is not always easy for courts or regulators to draw practical distinctions between “legislative” and “interpretive” rules. Because each agency action is unique, determining whether a given agency action is a legislative rule or interpretive rule “is an extraordinarily case-specific endeavor.” Am. Hosp. Ass’n v. Bowen, 834 F.2d 1037, 1045 (D.C. Cir. 1987).

Perhaps because of this difficulty, or perhaps for more invidious reasons, agencies often promulgate legislative rules under the guise of mere guidance, without following the notice-and-comment requirements of the APA. And courts, in turn, have often struck down such rules. See, e.g., Mendoza, 754 F.3d at 1025 (vacating guidance documents as legislative rules that failed to comply with APA notice-and-comment requirements); Elec. Privacy Info. Ctr. v. U.S. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., 653 F.3d 1, 8 (D.C. Cir. 2011) (same); Hemp Indus. Ass’n v. Drug Enforcement Admin., 333 F.3d 1082, 1091 (9th Cir. 2003) (same); Nat’l Family Planning & Reprod. Health Ass’n, Inc. v. Sullivan, 979 F.2d 227, 231 (D.C. Cir. 1992) (same); Texas v. United States, 201 F. Supp. 3d 810, 825 (N.D. Tex. 2016) (same), appeal dismissed, 2017 WL 7000562 (5th Cir. Mar. 3, 2017).

But the prevalence of court invalidation of improper guidance vastly understates the problem, because “extralegal” agency action “usually occurs out of view.” Hamburger, supra, at 260. “To escape even the notice-and-comment requirement for lawmaking interpretation, agencies increasingly make law simply by declaring their views about what the public should do.” Id. at 114. Such improper guidance statements are often deliberate “evasions” of legal requirements, and “an end run around [an agency’s] other modes of lawmaking.” Id. (internal citation and quotation marks omitted). In many instances, an agency’s “guidance” is actually a means of “extralegal lawmaking.” Id. at 115.

Agencies have strong incentives to resort to this kind of extralegal lawmaking. The “absence of a notice-and-comment obligation makes the process of issuing interpretive rules comparatively easier for agencies than issuing legislative rules.” Perez, 135 S. Ct. at 1204. An agency operating in this fashion can issue rules “quickly and inexpensively without following any statutorily prescribed procedures.” Appalachian Power Co., 208 F.3d at 1020. When this happens, “[l]aw is made, without notice and comment, without public participation, and without publication in the Federal Register or the Code of Federal Regulations.” Id.

More troubling, “[w]hen agencies want to impose restrictions they cannot openly adopt as administrative rules, and that they cannot plausibly call ‘interpretation,’ they typically place the restrictions in guidance, advice, or other informal directives.” Hamburger, supra, at 260. This is “a sort of extortion,” because an agency can secure compliance by “threatening” enforcement or other regulatory action, even if the agency has no genuine authority to act in the first place. Id. at 260–61. An agency’s informal “views about what the public should do,” almost always comes “with the unmistakable hint that it is advisable to comply.” Id. at 114–15.

This extortion is primarily enabled by the judiciary’s inability to review improper guidance. Indeed, an agency often realizes that “another advantage” to issuing guidance documents, is “immunizing its lawmaking from judicial review.” Appalachian Power Co., 208 F.3d at 1020. As discussed above, legislative rules will only be invalidated for failure to conform to the notice-and-comment process after they have been determined to be legislative in the first place. This is neither a simple nor quick task.

Simultaneously, even invalid, binding, legislative rules may escape judicial review. The APA typically allows review only of “final agency action.” 5 U.S.C. 704. “[T]wo conditions must be satisfied for agency action to be ‘final’: First, the action must mark the consummation of the agency’s decision-making process. And second, the action must be one by which rights or obligations have been determined, or from which legal consequences will flow.” Bennett v. Spear, 520 U.S. 154, 177–78 (1997) (internal citations and quotation marks omitted).

But “an agency’s action is not necessarily final merely because it is binding.” Appalachian Power Co., 208 F.3d at 1022. An initial or interim ruling, even one that binds, “does not mark the consummation of agency decision-making” and thus might not constitute final agency action. Soundboard Ass’n v. Fed. Trade Comm’n, 888 F.3d 1261, 1271 (D.C. Cir. 2018); see also Ctr. for Food Safety v. Burwell, 126 F. Supp. 3d 114, 118 (D.D.C. 2015) (Contreras, J.) (discussing binding “Interim Policy” of agency that was in effect for 17 years but evaded judicial review as non-final action).

As a result, courts rarely consider the genuinely coercive effects of guidance documents as sufficiently binding to permit review. For example, even a warning letter from an agency alleging a violation of a regulation and threatening an enforcement action does not establish sufficiently concrete “legal consequences” to be considered “final agency action” that a court may review.

Holistic Candles & Consumers Ass’n v. Food & Drug Admin., 664 F.3d 940, 944 (D.C. Cir. 2012). Indeed, “practical consequences, such as the threat of having to defend itself in an administrative hearing should the agency actually decide to pursue enforcement, are insufficient to bring an agency’s conduct under [a court’s] purview.” Indep. Equip. Dealers Ass’n v. Envtl. Prot. Agency, 372 F.3d 420, 428 (D.C. Cir. 2004) (internal citation and quotation marks omitted). Even to the extent that such action coerces compliance from a regulated entity, and even to the extent this might result in “a dramatic impact on the [affected] industry,” it still may not be considered final action subject to review. Soundboard Ass’n, 888 F.3d at 1272; see also Nat’l Mining Ass’n, 758 F.3d at 253 (agency action is not final even if a regulated entity “really has no choice when faced with ‘recommendations’ except to fold,” and might “feel pressure to voluntarily conform their behavior because the writing is on the wall”).

This use of guidance results in “commonplace and dangerous” abuses of administrative power and “often leaves Americans at the mercy of administrative agencies.” Hamburger, supra, at 260, 335. “It allows agencies to exercise a profound under-the-table power, far greater than the above-board government powers, even greater than the above-board administrative powers, and agencies tuggishly use it to secure what they euphemistically call ‘cooperation.’” Id. at 335. This results in an “evasion” of the Constitution and an affront to the basic premise that laws can only be made by the Congress. Id. at 113–14; see also La. Pub. Serv. Comm’n, 476 U.S. at 374. It is also statutorily forbidden. Mendoza, 754 F.3d at 1021. And it often results in violations of the due process of law. Hamburger, supra, at 241, 353. But, perhaps by design, such improper agency conduct routinely occurs with little hope of judicial intervention. See Appalachian Power Co., 208 F.3d at 1020.

B. Prior Responses to These Problems

1. The 2007 Bulletin for Agency Good Guidance Practices

On January 18, 2007, the Office of Management and Budget for the Executive Office of the President, addressed the ongoing problem caused by the issuance of “poorly designed or improperly implemented” “guidance documents” from administrative entities. Office of Mgmt. & Budget, Executive Office of the President, Final Bulletin for Agency Good Guidance Practices, 72 FR 3432, 3432 (Jan. 18, 2007) (OMB Bulletin). OMB explained that many stakeholders had ongoing “[c]oncern about whether agencies” had been improperly issuing guidance documents that actually “establish new policy positions that the agency treats as binding,” without following the notice-and-comment requirements of the APA. Id. at 3433. In addition to promulgating formal rules with the effect of law, many “agencies increasingly have relied on guidance documents to inform the public and to provide direction to their staffs.” Id. at 3432.

While the bulletin characterized this practice as generally positive, it noted that many guidance documents do “not receive the benefit of careful consideration accorded under the procedures for regulatory development and review.” Id. Even worse, “[b]ecause it is procedurally easier to issue guidance documents, there also may be an incentive for regulators to issue guidance documents in lieu of regulations.” Id. Some of these guidance documents also improperly “establish new policy positions that the agency treats as binding,” despite failing to comply with the APA’s notice-and-comment and judicial review provisions. Id. at 3433. To combat this problem, OMB issued its Final Bulletin to help ensure that guidance documents issued by Executive Branch departments and agencies under the OMB’s management would not improperly issue “legally binding requirements.” Id.

First, the OMB Bulletin directed each agency to “develop or have written procedures for the approval of significant guidance documents,” in order to “ensure that the issuance of significant guidance documents is approved by appropriate senior agency officials.” Id. at 3436, 3440. The OMB Bulletin also suggested that each significant guidance document adhere to the following:

- a. Include the term “guidance” or its functional equivalent;
- b. Identify the agenc(ies) or office(s) issuing the document;
- c. Identify the activity to which and the persons to whom the significant guidance document applies;
- d. Include the date of issuance;
- e. Note if it is a revision to a previously issued guidance document and, if so, identify the document that it replaces;
- f. Provide the title of the document, and any document identification number, if one exists;
- g. Include the citation to the statutory provision or regulation (in Code of Federal Regulations format) which it applies to or interprets; and
- h. Not include mandatory language such as “shall,” “must,” “required” or “requirement,” unless the agency is using these words to describe a statutory or regulatory requirement, or the language is addressed to agency staff and will not foreclose agency consideration of positions advanced by affected private parties.

Id. at 3440.

Finally, the OMB Bulletin suggested that each agency establish procedures for improving public access and feedback for significant guidance documents. In the case of “economically significant guidance documents,” these suggestions included following notice-and-comment procedures in certain cases. Id. at 3438.

The OMB Bulletin was limited in two important ways. First, it only applied to the issuance of “significant guidance documents” by Executive Branch agencies. Id. at 3432. This was defined as a “document disseminated to regulated entities or the general public that may reasonably be anticipated to: (i) Lead to an annual effect on the economy of $100 million or more or adversely affect in a material way the economy, a sector of the economy, productivity, competition, jobs, the environment, public health or safety, or State, local, or tribal governments or communities; (ii) create a serious inconsistency or otherwise interfere with an action taken or planned by another agency; (iii) materially alter the budgetary impact of entitlements, grants, user fees, or loan programs or the rights and obligations of recipients thereof; or (iv) raise novel legal or policy issues arising out of legal mandates[.]” Id. at 3439.

Second, the OMB Bulletin did not create any means of review or redress should agencies choose to disregard it. Id. at 3439. Under a heading entitled “Judicial Review,” the Bulletin provided that it was meant only “to improve the internal management of the Executive Branch and is not intended to, and does not, create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law or in equity, against the United States, its agencies or other entities, its officers or employees, or any other person.” Id. Although DOE identifies guidance documents on its website,¹ it has not taken any steps toward forswearing the issuance of guidance documents that support new or amended rights or obligations created outside of the rulemaking process.

2. The Justice Department’s 2017 and 2018 Policy Memoranda

Following the OMB Bulletin’s lead more than a decade later, on November 16, 2017, Attorney General Jeff Sessions issued a memorandum for all Justice Department components entitled Prohibition on Improper Guidance Documents (Sessions Memo). This memo immediately prohibited all Department of Justice components from issuing agency guidance documents that “purport to create rights or obligations binding on persons or entities outside the Executive Branch.” Id. at 1, available at <https://www.justice.gov/opa/press-release/file/1012271/download>.

The Sessions Memo explained that “the Department has in the past published guidance documents—or similar instruments of future effect by other names, such as letters to regulated entities—that effectively bind private parties without undergoing the rulemaking process.” It also explained that guidance documents might improperly “be used for the purpose of coercing persons or entities outside the federal government into taking any action or refraining from taking any action beyond what is required by the terms of the applicable statute or regulation.” This practice often evaded “notice-and-comment” rules “required by law,” and deprived the agencies “of more complete information about a proposed rule’s effects than the agency could ascertain on its own.” Id.

The new policy prohibited any agency operating within the Department of Justice from using regulatory guidance “as a substitute for rulemaking.” As such, guidance documents would no longer be promulgated that either “impose new requirements on entities outside the Executive Branch,” or “create binding standards by which the Department will determine compliance with existing regulatory or statutory requirements.” Future guidance documents would only be issued to “educate regulated parties through plain-language restatements of existing legal requirements or provide non-binding advice on technical issues through examples or practices to guide the application or interpretation of statutes and regulations.” Id.

To support these goals, Attorney General Sessions set out the following five “principles” to which all components “should adhere” “when issuing guidelines”:

[1] Guidance documents should identify themselves as guidance, disclaim any force or effect of law, and avoid language suggesting that the public has obligations that go beyond those set forth in the applicable statutes or legislative rules.

[2] Guidance documents should clearly state that they are not final agency actions, have no legally binding effect on persons or entities outside the federal government, and may be rescinded or modified in the Department’s complete discretion.

[3] Guidance documents should not be used to for the purpose of coercing persons or entities outside the federal government into taking any action or refraining from taking any action beyond what is required by the terms of the applicable statute or regulation.

[4] Guidance documents should not use mandatory language such as “shall,” “must,” “required,” or “requirement” to direct parties outside the federal government to take or refrain from taking action, except when restating—with citations to statutes, regulations, or binding judicial precedent—clear mandates contained in a statute or regulation. In all cases, guidance documents should clearly identify the underlying law that they are explaining.

[5] To the extent guidance documents set out voluntary standards (e.g., recommended practices), they should clearly state that compliance with those standards is voluntary and that noncompliance will not, in itself, result in any enforcement action.

Id. at 2.

The memo also defined “guidance documents” to include “any Department statements of general applicability and future effect, whether styled as guidance or otherwise that are designed to advise parties outside the federal Executive Branch about legal rights and obligations falling within the Department’s regulatory or enforcement authority.” Id. Notably, this definition excluded “internal directives [and] memoranda.” Id. at 2–3. In accordance with this new policy, the Attorney General also directed the Justice Department’s Regulatory Reform Task Force “to work with components to identify existing guidance documents that should be repealed, replaced, or modified in light of these principles.” Id. at 2.

Finally, the memo made clear that it “is an internal Department of Justice policy directed at Department components and employees. As such, it is not intended to, does not, and may not be relied upon to, create any rights, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law by any party in any matter civil or criminal.” Id. at 3.

Just over a month later, the Attorney General announced that he was applying his November memo and “rescinding 25 [guidance] documents that were unnecessary, inconsistent with existing law, or otherwise improper.” Press Release, Attorney General Jeff Sessions Rescinds 25 Guidance Documents, Department of Justice, Office of Public Affairs, Press Release No. 17–1469 (Dec. 21, 2017) available at <https://www.justice.gov/opa/pr/attorney-general-jeff-sessions-rescinds-25-guidance-documents>. Then on July 3, 2018, the Attorney General rescinded 24 more improper guidance documents. Press Release, Attorney General Jeff Sessions Rescinds 24 Guidance Documents, Department of Justice, Office of Public Affairs, Press Release No. 18–883 (July 3, 2018) available at <https://www.justice.gov/opa/pr/attorney-general-jeff-sessions-rescinds-24-guidance-documents>. The Attorney General also said that the Department would “continu[e] its review of existing guidance documents to repeal, replace, or modify.” Id.

On January 25, 2018, then Associate Attorney General Rachel Brand, who was the chair of the Department’s Regulatory Reform Task Force, issued a memorandum entitled Limiting Use of Agency Guidance Documents in Affirmative Civil Enforcement Cases (Brand Memo), for all Justice Department litigators. This memo echoed the Sessions Memo’s concerns that Justice Department agencies had previously issued “guidance documents that purport to create rights or obligations binding on persons or entities outside the Executive Branch.” Id. at 1, available at <https://www.justice.gov/file/1028756/download>.

AAG Brand therefore directed that for all affirmative civil enforcement (ACE) cases, “the Department may not use its enforcement authority to effectively convert agency guidance documents into binding rules.” Id. at 2. To accomplish this goal, the Brand Memo went farther than the Sessions Memo and applied to “guide Department litigators in determining the legal relevance of other agencies’ guidance documents,” including the Department of Energy. Id. at 1 (emphasis added). Further, ACE litigators were also prohibited from “us[ing] noncompliance with guidance documents as a basis for proving violations of applicable law.” Id. at 2. “That a party fails to comply with agency guidance expanding upon statutory or regulatory requirements does not mean that the party violated those underlying legal requirements; agency guidance documents cannot create any additional legal obligations.” Id.

As with the Sessions Memo, the Brand Memo contained an elaborate disclaimer carefully setting out that it had no binding effect on any party outside the Department of Justice. “As such, it is not intended to, does not, and may not be relied upon to, create any rights, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law by any party in any matter civil or criminal.” Id.

3. The 2019 Guidance on Compliance With the Congressional Review Act Memorandum

On April 11, 2019, OMB issued a memorandum to all heads of executive departments and agencies, directing them to abide by their Congressional Review Act (CRA) obligations. Office of Mgmt. & Budget, Executive Office of the President, Guidance on Compliance with the Congressional Review Act, No. M–19–14, at 1 (Apr. 11, 2019) (OMB Memo). Among other things, the CRA establishes a process by which Congress, typically through notification by the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs (OIRA) and the Government Accountability Office (GAO), may exercise direct oversight of agencies by resolving to disapprove of agencies’ proposed major rulemaking. See 5 U.S.C. 801(b). At first glance, it may seem peculiar that OMB would have to “reinforce[] the obligations of Federal agencies[,]” but agencies have been disregarding their statutory rulemaking obligations with impunity for years. See OMB Memo at 1, 2 (emphasis added). In fact,

OIRA does not consistently receive from agencies the information necessary to determine whether a rule is major, in part because some regulatory actions are rules under the CRA are not submitted to OIRA through the centralized review process of Executive Order 12866.

Id. at 4.

The OMB Memo reaffirmed “the broad applicability of the CRA to all Federal agencies and a wide range of rules[.]” Id. at 2. It also noted that the CRA adopts the APA’s “expansive definition of ‘rule.’” Id. Thus, the OMB Memo concluded that “[t]he CRA applies to more than just notice-and-comment rules; it also encompasses a wide range of other regulatory actions, including, inter alia, guidance documents, general statements of policy, and interpretive rules.

Id. at 3 (citing 5 U.S.C. 551(4)). Effective May 11, 2019, all proposed rules—whether the agency believes a rule to be major or minor or legislative or interpretive—must be submitted to OIRA for review. See id. at 5. This mandatory reporting requirement encompasses all guidance—including DOE guidance—that alters the legal duties of private parties.

4. The 2019 Kisor v. Wilkie, Secretary of Veterans Affairs Decision

On June 26, 2019, the Supreme Court decided Kisor v. Wilkie, Secretary of Veterans Affairs. Announcing the judgment of the Court, Justice Kagan’s plurality opinion reiterated the Court’s long-standing view that rulemaking under APA Section 553 “mandates that an agency use notice-and-comment procedures before issuing legislative rules.” Kisor v. Wilkie, No. 18–15, 588 U.S. ___, slip op. at 22 (2019). An agency may avoid notice-and-comment procedures only where a proposed rule is interpretive and “not supposed to ‘have the force and effect of law’—or, otherwise said, to bind private parties.” Id. “[I]nterpretive rules are meant only to ‘advise the public’ of how the agency understands, and is likely to apply, its binding statutes and legislative rules.” Id. Since interpretive rules “never” form the basis of enforcement actions, courts cannot—and will not—attribute the force of law to interpretive rules. See id. at 23. Thus, when reviewing agency action, courts “must heed the same procedural values as [APA] Section 553 reflects[,]” when considering whether the agency has issued “authoritative and considered judgments.” See id. These principles are part of the foundation of administrative law. See, e.g., Perez, 135 S.Ct. at 12003–04.

5. Current Status of Guidance and the Department of Energy

The Sessions and Brand Memoranda are unequivocal—Executive Branch departments and agencies must cease the unconstitutional practice of issuing guidance as a means of avoiding notice-and-comment procedures when promulgating substantive rules. Indeed, as the Kisor plurality stated, “[n]o binding of anyone occurs merely by [an] agency’s say-so.” Kisor, 139 S. Ct. at 2420. Despite this admonishment and current Justice Department directives, DOE’s pending notices of rulemaking do not include a proposed rule that would unequivocally and permanently bind the Department in a manner consistent with the Justice Department Memoranda.

The DOE’s dilatory approach to cementing the Justice Department’s directive is puzzling given DOE’s commitment to regulatory reform, as evidenced by the Department’s request for public comment on implementing Executive Order 13771, its final report on Executive Order 13783, and Secretary Perry’s December 7, 2017 directive to each Departmental element to identify areas for regulatory reform. While regulatory redesign is laudable, these actions do not address the Department’s past, present, or future use of guidance. Indeed, the Department’s regulatory reform and deregulatory initiatives, while important, are only one component of the Administration’s larger strategy to reform the regulatory landscape and the relationship between the regulators and the regulated. The other co-equal regulatory reform component is transparent, open, and accountable notice-and-comment rulemaking where agencies seek to create, define, and regulate the rights, duties, and powers of private parties. In fact, to call this regulatory “reform” may be a bit of a misnomer, as the Supreme Court has long held that agencies cannot avoid notice-and-comment procedures when promulgating substantive rules because such procedures “were designed to assure fairness and mature consideration of rules of general application.” See NLRB v. Wyman-Gordon Co., 394 U.S. 759, 764 (1969).

C. The Rule Is Necessary Because Meta-Guidance Is Insufficient

Given the legal background just discussed, the various reform efforts outlined above are extremely important measures to rein in the improper use of guidance documents. The 2007 OMB Bulletin and 2019 Memo, in conjunction with the Sessions and Brand Memos, clearly identify some of the worst features of the guidance problem and provide a good start for the broader regulatory reform effort. Unfortunately, even these documents do not go far enough to combat the pernicious harms caused by binding guidance, primarily because they constitute, at most, mere “guidance on guidance.”

While these meta-guidance documents advance essential points, and identify regulatory pathologies, they ultimately constitute nothing more than temporary policy announcements within their supervised agencies. Hence, they should not be the sole model for DOE's reform efforts. To solve the underlying problems completely, DOE should issue binding and final rules prohibiting any Department component from issuing, relying on, or defending improper agency guidance.²

The first and most significant problem with the previously-issued meta-guidance documents is that they lack any permanent or binding effect. Even though the 2007 OMB Bulletin was issued following notice-and-comment proceedings, it nevertheless serves only as a guide for good agency practice in future contexts. It provides non-binding suggestions for good practice, and specifically disclaims the creation of "any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law or in equity, against the United States, its agencies or other entities, its officers or employees, or any other person." OMB Bulletin, 72 FR at 3439. In other words, to the extent that the OMB Bulletin might be ignored, an affected party has no means of redress.

Notably, since the OMB Bulletin was issued, Executive Branch agency action has been promulgated in apparent defiance of the Bulletin. See, e.g., Elec. Privacy Info. Ctr., 653 F.3d at 8 (invalidating Department of Homeland Security rule as legislative rule that failed to comply with APA notice-and-comment requirements); Hemp Indus. Ass'n, 333 F.3d at 1091 (same for DEA rule); Texas v. United States, 201 F. Supp. 3d at 825 (N.D. Tex. 2016) (same for Department of Education rule). Further, to the extent that improper guidance may escape judicial review for other reasons, one may only guess how many other improper guidance documents have been issued notwithstanding the Bulletin. See, e.g., Soundboard Ass'n, 888 F.3d at 1271–73 (agency documents issued in 2009 and 2016 could not be reviewed even if "regulated entities could assert a dramatic impact on their industry" resulting from the documents).

The Sessions and Brand Memos suffer from this same defect. In fact, both disclaim that those documents even rise to the level of "guidance" and insist instead that they are mere "internal directives [and] memoranda." Sessions Memo at 2–3; Brand Memo at 1. Thus, to the extent offices or individuals within the Department of Justice ignore these guidelines, they could "not be relied upon to create any rights, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law by any party in any matter civil or criminal." Sessions Memo at 3; Brand Memo at 2.

² The proposed internal rule would be controlling only within DOE and is not strictly a "substantive" or "legislative" rule as that term is otherwise used in this document. NCLA invokes the Secretary's authority "to prescribe regulations for the government of his department, the conduct of its employees, the distribution and performance of its business, and the custody, use, and preservation of its records, papers, and property." 5 U.S.C. 301. Such rules should be considered "housekeeping" rules that have a controlling effect within DOE but cannot bind parties outside DOE without an additional grant of rulemaking authority. See Chrysler Corp. v. Brown, 441 U.S.281, 283, 309 (1979) (describing section 301 as a "housekeeping statute" and "simply a grant of authority to the agency to regulate its own affairs.").

Although these memos constitute noble policy goals, they could also be immediately rescinded at any time—without seeking any input from affected entities. While the OMB Bulletin followed notice-and-comment procedures, it was not required to do so because it was not a binding legislative rule. See 5 U.S.C. 553(b). If a new administration wants to rescind it, it can do so without any formal procedures. See Perez, 135 S. Ct. at 1203 (agency action not subject to mandatory notice-and-comment procedures may be altered or rescinded at will). The Sessions and Brand Memos could also be rescinded with little notice or fanfare.

Moreover, none of these efforts solved the underlying problem. Even when improperly issued, defective guidance documents evaded judicial review—and continue to do so. Even where "regulated entities could assert a dramatic impact on their industry," and even when such agency guidance is improper legislative rulemaking, it may nevertheless escape judicial review as non-final action. See Soundboard Ass'n, 888 F.3d at 1272. If an agency action also violates the OMB Bulletin, the result remains the same. The inability to subject such actions to judicial review can have momentous, and even disastrous, consequences for regulated industries that might "feel pressure to voluntarily conform their behavior because the writing is on the wall." Nat'l Mining Ass'n, 758 F.3d at 253.

Finally, even to the extent that the documents genuinely confine improper rulemaking, each contains significant limitations to its scope. The OMB Bulletin only applies to "significant guidance" documents issued by the limited number of "Executive Branch departments and agencies," not to independent agencies. OMB Bulletin, 72 FR at 3433, 3436. Similarly, the Sessions Memo only applies to a subset of Department of Justice actions. Sessions Memo at 1. And while the Brand Memo has some effect when external agency guidance documents are relevant to DOJ action, it is still confined to an extremely narrow class of future "affirmative civil enforcement" cases. Brand Memo at 1.

The 2019 OMB Memo, however, is much broader in scope—it seeks to stop unlawful agency rulemaking Executive Department-wide. As such, it could rectify the shortcomings of the Sessions and Brand Memos, but it is not clear what enforcement mechanisms will be in place, if any, to ensure that departments and agencies comply. Moreover, DOE does not have a policy or rule in place that contemplates OIRA's review of all proposed departmental action, as mandated by the 2019 OMB Memo. Only a new rule binding DOE and its various components can assure regulated parties that the Department will refrain from the improper use of guidance in the future. For that reason, Petitioner has provided the text for an adequate and effective rule below.

D. Text of the Proposed Rule

While the most effective, efficient, and logical way to promote the following rule would be to do so at the departmental level, the following text could readily be adapted by individual Department offices and administrations wishing to pursue reform on their own, if necessary.

Section 1: Congressional Review Act Compliance

a. The Department of Energy and its offices and administrations ("DOE" or "Department") will comply with all Congressional Review Act, 5 U.S.C. 801–808, requirements for review of all proposed regulatory actions, including, but not limited to, legislative rules, regulations, guidance documents, general statements of policy, and interpretive rules.

b. All proposed regulatory actions that DOE submits to the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs ("OIRA") pursuant to Executive Order 12866, will include:

i. A DOE-proposed significance determination; and

ii. A DOE-proposed determination as to whether the regulatory action meets the definition of a "major rule" under 5 U.S.C. 804(2).

c. Where proposed regulatory actions would not meet Executive Order 12866's OIRA review requirement, and where the category of regulatory action had not been previously designated as presumptively not-major by OIRA, the Department will notify OIRA of the proposed regulatory action in writing. The written notification to OIRA will include:

i. DOE's summary of the proposed regulatory action;

ii. DOE's assessment as to the nature of the proposed regulatory action, including, but not limited to, whether the action is legislative or interpretive and whether it is applicable to the Department or to private parties outside the Department; and

iii. DOE's recommended designation of the regulatory action as a major rule or not, as defined by 5 U.S.C. 804(2).

d. If OIRA designates DOE's proposed regulatory action as a possible major rule, the Department will:

i. Submit the proposed regulatory action to OIRA for CRA review at least 30 days before the Department publishes the proposed rule in the Federal Register or otherwise publicly releases the rule;

ii. submit an analysis sufficient to allow OIRA to make its major rule determination. This analysis should include, but not be limited to, information regarding the degree of uncertainty concerning the regulatory action's impacts; and

iii. provide all required information, analysis, and documentation to OIRA in a manner consistent with the principles and metrics enunciated in OMB Circular A–4 (Sept. 17, 2003) and Part IV of OMB Memorandum M–19–14 (Apr. 11, 2019).

e. If OIRA designates the proposed regulatory action not-major, the Department may proceed with its rulemaking procedures without submitting a CRA report to Congress.

f. If OIRA designates the proposed regulatory action a major rule, the Department will:

i. Submit a CRA report to Congress and the Comptroller in accordance with the provisions of 5 U.S.C. 801(a);

ii. publish the major rule in the Federal Register; and

iii. delay the effective date of the major rule for 60 days after the later of the major rule's submission to Congress or its Federal Register publication date.

g. All DOE rules will include the following statement: "Pursuant to the Congressional Review Act (5 U.S.C. 801 et seq.), the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs designated this rule as [a 'major rule' or not a 'major rule'], as defined by 5 U.S.C. 804(2)."

Section 2: Requirements for Issuance of Legislative Rules

a. Neither the Department of Energy nor any office operating within the Department may issue any "legislative rule" without complying with all requirements set out in 5 U.S.C. 553.

b. Any pronouncement from the Department or any office operating within DOE that is not a "legislative rule" must:

i. Identify itself as "guidance" or its functional non-legislative equivalent, or as an internal DOE regulation as authorized by applicable enabling legislation;

ii. Disclaim any force or effect of law;

iii. Prominently state that it has no legally binding effect on persons or entities outside DOE;

iv. Not be used for purposes of coercing persons or entities outside the Department or office itself into taking any action or refraining from taking any action beyond what is already required by the terms of the applicable statute; and

v. Not use mandatory language such as "shall," "must," "required," or "requirement" to direct parties outside the federal government to take or refrain from taking action, except when restating—with citations to statutes or binding judicial precedent—clear mandates contained in a statute.

c. A regulated entity's noncompliance with any agency pronouncement other than a "legislative rule," issued from any agency (whether or not the agency or office is operating within the Department), may not be considered by any entity within DOE in determining whether to institute an enforcement action or as a basis for proving or adjudicating any violation of applicable law.

d. No office operating within the Department may apply any "legislative rule," as defined by this rule, issued by DOE or any other agency, no matter how styled, which has not complied with all requirements set out in 5 U.S.C. 553.

e. No office operating within the Department may defend the validity of any "legislative rule," as defined by this rule, issued by DOE or any other agency, no matter how styled, which has not complied with all requirements set out in 5 U.S.C. 553, in any court or administrative proceeding.

Section 3: Judicial Review

a. Any "interested party" may petition any office operating within the Department to determine whether a prior agency pronouncement, no matter how styled, is a "legislative rule" as defined by this rule.

b. Such a petition for review shall be filed in writing with the agency or office, pursuant to the procedures set out in compliance with 5 U.S.C. 553(e).

c. Any office operating within the Department must respond to such a petition for review within 60 calendar days of receipt of the petition.

d. The office operating within the Department must respond by either:

vi. Rescinding the prior Department pronouncement; or

vii. Denying the petition for review on the basis that the Department pronouncement under review did not constitute a "legislative rule," or on the basis that the Department pronouncement was adopted in compliance with the requirements set out in 5 U.S.C. 553.

e. Any agency determination under section (d) must be made in writing and must be promptly made publicly available and must include a formal statement of reasons for determining that the pronouncement under review does or does not constitute a "legislative rule," or does or does not comply with 5 U.S.C. 553.

f. If the office fails to respond to a petition for review within the 60-day period, such an action shall constitute a denial of the petition on the basis that the Department pronouncement under review did not constitute a "legislative rule."

g. If any Department or office pronouncement is determined to not be a "legislative rule" under parts (d), (e) or (f), DOE shall promptly announce that the pronouncement has no binding force.

h. Any DOE pronouncement, action or inaction set out in parts (d), (e), (f) or (g), shall constitute final agency action under 5 U.S.C. 704, and shall be subject to review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 702.

i. For purposes of this rule, no matter how styled or when issued and irrespective of any other Department determination, the issuance of any "legislative rule" by any office operating within the Department shall be deemed final agency action under 5 U.S.C. 704.

Section 4: Definitions

a. For purposes of this rule, the term "legislative rule" means any pronouncement or action from any DOE office that purports to:

i. Impose legally binding duties on entities outside the DOE;

ii. Impose new requirements on entities outside DOE;

iii. Create binding standards by which DOE will determine compliance with existing statutory or regulatory requirements; or

iv. Adopt a position on the binding duties of entities outside DOE that is new, that is inconsistent with existing regulations, or that otherwise effects a substantive change in existing law;

b. For purposes of this rule, the term "interested person" has the same meaning used in 5 U.S.C. 553, 555; provided that a person may be "interested" regardless of whether they would otherwise have standing under Article III of the United States Constitution to challenge an agency action.³

³ See Animal Legal Def. Fund, Inc. v. Vilsack, 237 F. Supp. 3d 15, 21 (D.D.C. 2017) (Cooper, J.) (a party may be an "interested person" under the APA even without Article III standing).

E. Benefits of the Rule

The proposed rule furthers the policy objectives of the OMB Bulletin and Memo, the Sessions and Brand Memos, and the Department's own regulatory reform efforts, but it also addresses the significant limitations of those reforms. The proposed rule will establish DOE's position that all binding guidance is unlawful, and where DOE must act at the behest of Congress to promulgate rules that will have the force of law, it may only do so through APA notice-and-comment procedures.

Substantively, many of the proposed rule's edicts are found either in existing law or the OMB Bulletin, the OMB Memo, and Sessions and Brand Memos. Consistent with these sources, Section 4(a) adopts a comprehensive definition of the term "legislative rule," which accurately encompasses the binding and coercive nature of such agency action, regardless of how it might be styled. Section 2(b) also adopts clear rules for how DOE actions must be undertaken and prohibits improper attempts at evading more formal rulemaking procedures.

The proposed rule also fixes the gaps in those other policy statements. First, and most significantly, as a final rule, the proposed rule is binding and may not be rescinded at will. Section 2(a) directs that DOE may not bypass formal procedures when issuing legislative rules. Section 2(b) further sets out mandatory requirements for informal Department action. Section 2(c) also forbids improper coercive action. To that end, this section prohibits the Department from considering a party's decision to abstain from non-binding suggestions in guidance as somehow constituting evidence of a violation of an actual legal obligation, or as a basis for instituting an enforcement action. Section 2(d) prohibits the Department from applying any agency's legislative rules that do not conform to 5 U.S.C. 553. Finally, Section 2(e) prohibits the Department from defending the validity of improper agency guidance, whether or not it was promulgated within DOE. These requirements are binding on the covered entities.

Critically, this proposed rule also creates a means to enforce these requirements, which applies to both new rules and those already in existence. Section 3 empowers interested parties to alert DOE to improper guidance, whenever issued, and it allows DOE or office to rescind such action without complication. This provision efficiently allows those most affected by agency action to share their institutional knowledge with DOE, and it also allows the DOE to correct improper actions efficiently.

But if this voluntary process falls short, Section 3 also allows an interested person the opportunity to petition for judicial review. If DOE believes that its action is appropriate under this rule, it need only say so pursuant to Section 3(d) and explain why its action does not constitute improper legislative rulemaking. Sections 3(d), (e), (f) and (h) set out a process by which a court may decide this legal issue on the merits. Sections 3(g) and (h) also resolve the difficult finality question that commonly allows improper legislative rulemaking to evade judicial oversight. Section 3(g) designates DOE's decision on a petition for review as final, thus establishing a concrete cause of action. Section 3(h), meanwhile, resolves the problem that may exist when agency action is improperly binding, but nevertheless evades review because it is not yet final, by deeming any binding action necessarily one that is also final.*

VI. Conclusion

Americans should never be “at the mercy” of the whims of administrative agencies, set out in extralegal and extortionate “guidance” for approved behavior. Hamburger, supra, at 260. Purportedly binding rules masquerading as guidance are unlawful and unconstitutional and are among the very worst threats to liberty perpetrated by the administrative state. The Department of Energy should enact clear rules that respect the limits set by the Constitution, the APA, and all other statutes applicable to DOE regarding procedures for promulgating substantive, legislative rules. The Department should therefore prohibit the issuance, reliance on, or defense of improper agency guidance, and promulgate the proposed rule set out in this Petition.

Proposed Amendment and Establishment of Multiple Air Traffic Service (ATS) Routes; Western United States

AGENCY: Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), DOT.

ACTION: Notice of proposed rulemaking (NPRM).

SUMMARY: This action proposes to amend two high altitude United States Area Navigation (RNAV) Air Traffic Service (ATS) routes (Q-13 and Q-15), establish one high altitude RNAV ATS route (Q-174), and establish five low altitude RNAV ATS routes (T-338, T-357, T-359, T-361, and T-363) in the western United States. The proposed Q and T routes will facilitate the movement of aircraft to, from, and through the Las Vegas terminal area. Additionally, the routes will promote operational efficiencies for users and provide connectivity to current and proposed RNAV enroute procedures while enhancing capacity for adjacent airports.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Authority for This Rulemaking

The FAA’s authority to issue rules regarding aviation safety is found in Title 49 of the United States Code. Subtitle I, Section 106 describes the authority of the FAA Administrator. Subtitle VII, Aviation Programs, describes in more detail the scope of the agency’s authority. This rulemaking is promulgated under the authority described in Subtitle VII, Part A, Subpart I, Section 40103. Under that section, the FAA is charged with prescribing regulations to assign the use of the airspace necessary to ensure the safety of aircraft and the efficient use of airspace. This regulation is within the scope of that authority as it modifies the route structure as necessary to support the flow of air traffic within the National Airspace System.
