

2. Prudential Considerations Do Not Warrant Issuing the Proposed Declaratory Order or Continuing To Contest Island Holdings

The H–2B workers and U.S. workers recruited in connection with the appealing employers' H–2B applications understood their work would be temporary, and they accepted and performed the work at the offered wage. Although the 2013 SPWDs may have given them an initial expectancy of increased wages or back pay, those SPWDs subject to administrative appeals were properly challenged and never became final because the stay of the appeals prevented completion of administrative review. Island Holdings—a “final decision” of the Secretary—held the SPWDs were ultra vires, and no court has ever invalidated that holding. The Notice of Intent proposed overruling Island Holdings, but the Notice never progressed beyond a mere proposal. Five years have passed, and DOL never issued a final declaratory order overturning Island Holdings. In these circumstances, reliance on those SPWDs would not have been reasonable.

On the other hand, many parties relied on the original PWDs before recruitment and hiring. Prior to 2013, DOL had never issued SPWDs, at least not on a large scale to all H–2B employers with then-extant TLCs. Nor did the text of DOL's regulations provide notice of the potential for SPWDs, much less specify the potential increase to wages. Further, the 2013 SPWDs were issued not only to employers who had yet to hire H–2B workers, but also to employers already employing H–2B workers. Such employers had already paid the costs of recruiting workers, and would have had limited options for responding to the SPWDs' increased costs: H–2B workers, once employed, must be employed full-time; the employer must pay return transportation for H–2B workers dismissed earlier than scheduled; and the employer cannot lay off similarly employed U.S. workers. 20 CFR 655.22(h), (i), (m) (2012). And, while employers might have inferred from their Form 9142s that it was possible DOL would issue SPWDs, there was no notice that this would in fact occur, let alone notice of the amount or timing of the SPWD, or the methodology that DOL would use.

V. Conclusion

For all the foregoing reasons, the Notice of Intent is withdrawn.

Signed: at Washington, DC this 9th of March 2020.

Eugene Scalia,
Secretary of Labor.
