FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM

[DOCKET NO. OP–1716]

Temporary Actions To Support the Flow of Credit to Households and Businesses by Encouraging Use of Intraday Credit; Extension of Expiration Date

AGENCY: Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

SUMMARY: Due to the extraordinary disruptions from the coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID–19), the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (Board) is extending through March 31, 2021 the temporary actions, announced on April 23, 2020, that encourage healthy depository institutions to utilize intraday credit extended by Federal Reserve Banks (Reserve Banks). The temporary actions were previously scheduled to expire on September 30, 2020.

DATES: These temporary actions will expire on March 31, 2021.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The availability of intraday credit from the Reserve Banks supports the smooth functioning of payment systems and the settlement and clearing of transactions across a range of credit markets. The COVID–19 pandemic has disrupted economic activity and financial markets in the United States.

On April 23, 2020, as part of a series of actions to support the flow of credit to households and business aimed at mitigating the disruptions from the COVID–19 pandemic, the Board approved several temporary actions that encourage healthy depository institutions to utilize intraday credit from the Reserve Banks.1 Specifically, the temporary actions (1) suspend uncollateralized intraday credit limits (net debit caps) and waive daylight overdraft fees for institutions that are
