free DDIY tax prep solution, there should be consideration to sell Credit Karma Tax to the IRS so that the IRS may directly provide this service to the American people for free. The $50 million sale would account for <0.5% of the IRS’s operating budget. While this may be an extreme suggestion to some, I believe it is time that the American taxpayers get what they were promised when the industry successfully lobbied and created the Free File Alliance. The FFA program has been a failure since its creation and this is a once in a lifetime opportunity to fix it and truly put the taxpayer first, all for less than one half of a percent of the IRS budget.

Sincerely,
Travis Curtis.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The Employer Assistance and Resource Network on Disability Inclusion (EARN) is a resource for employers seeking to recruit, hire, retain, and advance qualified employees with disabilities.
EARN assists employers through online support and a range of education and outreach activities, including webinars, where employer-focused resources such as toolkits, a monthly e-newsletter, social media posts, and training videos. It is funded by the U.S.
Department of Labor’s Office of Disability Employment Policy under a cooperative agreement with Cornell University.

Phase 1 of the EARN Rapid Cycle Research (RCR) process asked employers about current approaches to online outreach to people with disabilities, the effectiveness of these approaches, their information needs related to online outreach, and remaining priority information needs. Building on this gap assessment relating to employer outreach and people with disabilities, there are two issues not previously addressed and worth further examination under the next phase of the EARN RCR process. These are:

1. How to increase self-identification of disability status in the recruitment process, and
2. Understanding why jobseekers with disabilities may choose to apply (or not) to an organization.

In both cases, employers who participated in the RCR focus groups were interested in hearing directly from jobseekers/employees with disabilities about what might influence these decisions. This project will query individuals with disabilities about their impressions of messaging from organizations, specifically related to career pages on the company website(s). This inquiry directly builds from the EARN Year One RCR-related efforts in conducting a literature review on online recruitment and outreach to people with disabilities, as well as a report from a review of 40 Fortune 500 company career pages. Employers made it clear that, given limited resources, a strong case needs to be made for innovations in this process, and, if only a few things can be changed, they want to understand what will be most impactful in facilitating applicants with disabilities to apply for their positions and to identify as a person with a disability. Findings will be used to add the needed critical perspective of people with disabilities to the development of resources for employers related to effective online outreach to people with disabilities. These resources will be available on the EARN website and promoted through extensive networks of employer national and international professional associations that are partnered with EARN.

Study objectives:
• To build understanding from an applicant’s perspective of how employer messaging in the online outreach process impacts key outcomes related to recruiting people with disabilities;
• To provide information and resources informed by the perspectives of people with disabilities that will support organizations in improving messaging in cost-effective ways.
