SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Overview of RCDG

The RCDG program is authorized under section 310B(e) of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (Con Act) (7 U.S.C. 1932 (e)) as amended by the Agriculture Improvement Act of 2018 (Pub. L. 115–334). The 7 CFR part 4284, subparts A and F are the regulations that govern this program. Terms you need to understand are defined in 7 CFR 4284.504. The primary objective of the RCDG program is to improve the economic condition of rural areas through cooperative development. Grants are awarded on a competitive basis to non-profit corporations or higher education institutions. Grant funds may be used to pay for up to 75 percent of the cost of establishing and operating centers for rural cooperative development and 95 percent of the cost of establishing and operating centers for rural cooperative development when the applicant is a 1994 Institution as defined by 7 U.S.C. 301. The 1994 Institutions are commonly known as Tribal Land Grant Institutions. Centers may have the expertise on staff, or they can contract out for the expertise to assist individuals or entities in the startup, expansion or operational improvement of rural cooperative or mutually owned businesses.

This notice and listening session request information on RBCS’s plan to consider ways streamline the application requirements, establish a multiyear award process, update performance metrics and assess program performance. The public input provided in response to this notice from interested stakeholders will advise RBCS on this plan.

To inform the Federal government’s decision-making, RBCS now seeks public input on the following questions.

1. The authorizing statute prioritizes applications that can demonstrate a proven track record in carrying out activities to promote and assist the development of cooperatively and mutually owned businesses. How can applicants demonstrate they have a proven track record?

2. The authorizing statute prioritizes applications that can demonstrate expertise in providing technical assistance in rural areas. What criteria or factors should the Agency use to determine expertise and experience of the Center in promoting and assisting the development of cooperatives and mutually owned businesses? How many years of experience are appropriate to show that an organization has experience in providing cooperative development technical assistance in rural areas?

3. The authorizing statute prioritizes applications that demonstrate how they can improve economic conditions through new cooperative approaches. How do you interpret the language “new cooperative approach”? What makes a cooperative approach new?

4. The authorizing statute prioritizes applications that demonstrate commitment to providing technical assistance and other services to underserved and economically distressed areas. Developing cooperatives among low resource and underserved groups requires creative approaches to meeting time and capacity restraints. Incubating co-ops, implementing build and recruit methods, and developing a cooperative franchise are all examples of innovative approaches. How can these approaches be structured to clarify members’ responsibilities versus the co-op development center’s responsibility?

5. The authorizing statute prioritizes applications that network with and share the results of their center with other cooperative centers and organizations involved in rural economic development. What suggestions do you have for documenting the results of networking with other cooperative development centers and organizations involved in rural economic development efforts?

6. The authorizing statute prioritizes applications that include multistate and multiorganization approaches to rural economic development. What suggestions do you have for documenting these approaches?

7. The authorizing statute requires applicants to take all practicable steps to develop continuing sources of financial support, particularly from private sector sources to support the sustainability of a center. How should an applicant demonstrate this requirement? What criteria or factors should the Agency use to determine sustainability of a center? How would the Agency verify this information beyond written application narration?

8. The authorizing statute permits the Agency to make multiyear awards, up to a 3-year period of performance for centers that have been previously awarded under this program and have a successful record of performance. What criteria or factors should the Agency focus on in determining eligibility for applicants proposing multiyear awards?

9. RBCS is seeking feedback on how the program’s performance should be assessed. As stated above, the purpose of the program is to improve the economic conditions of rural areas through cooperative development. The required goals of recipients must include facilitating the creation of jobs in rural areas through the development of new rural cooperatives, value-added processing, and other rural businesses. Given this purpose and these goals, what performance measures should be established for the program? How should they be measured?

10. RBCS is seeking feedback on how an applicant can demonstrate the successful establishment of a cooperative or mutually owned business given the varying state incorporation laws. What documentation should the Agency request to demonstrate establishment?

11. RBCS is seeking feedback on how applicants can document previous expertise when the outcome was no incorporation of a cooperative or mutually owned business. Applicants are required to discuss their cooperative development expertise when making an application to the Agency. This information is used as part of the merit-based scoring process. Experience has shown that not all cooperative development efforts result in the incorporation of a new cooperative; in fact, with some projects the most prudent advice is not to proceed. How should “no-go” cooperative development technical assistance efforts be recognized by the Agency and documented by the applicant to show previous cooperative development expertise?

12. RBCS seeks feedback on when the application deadline for the program should be. It is our intention to have a consistent deadline from year to year, rather than released at variable times through a Federal Register Notice. We also must allow sufficient time for processing applications in order to make awards and obligate funds prior to September 30 each year.
