

fan efficacy; and heating and cooling equipment sizing.

Under the energy conservation standards, the stringency of the requirements under subpart B will depend on the size of the manufactured home for the tiered approach. Accordingly, two sets of standards will be established in subpart B (i.e., Tier 1 and Tier 2). Tier 1 will apply to single-section manufactured homes and will incorporate building thermal envelope measures based on certain thermal envelope components subject to the 2021 IECC, but only including components that would increase the incremental purchase price by less than $750. Tier 2 will apply to multi-section manufactured homes and incorporate building thermal envelope measures based on certain thermal envelope components and specifications of the 2021 IECC, with alternate exterior wall insulation requirements for climate zones 2 and 3, as presented in the August 2021 SNOPR and the October 2021 NODA and analyzed in the final EIS. Further, the energy conservation standards for both tiers also include duct and air sealing, insulation installation, HVAC and service hot water system specifications, mechanical ventilation fan efficacy, and heating and cooling equipment sizing provisions, based on the 2021 IECC. DOE will adopt a compliance date such that the standards will apply to manufactured homes starting one year after the publication date of the final rule in the Federal Register.

DOE notes that its decision to adopt Alternative B2 differs from the preferred alternative presented in the final EIS (Alternative C2). DOE decided to adopt Alternative B2 because of affordability and cost-effectiveness concerns identified in the consultation process and during the rulemaking process. Following the issuance of the final EIS, DOE continued to consider comments received on the rulemaking and in the interagency review process under Executive Order 12866, which included the aforementioned concerns regarding first-costs, affordability, and cost-effectiveness. DOE believes that access to affordable housing and reducing energy burdens of low-income purchasers are of the utmost importance in the manufactured housing market. Alternative B2 better addresses both of these concerns than Alternative C2 because it will ensure continued availability for the homes most often purchased by low-income purchasers (single-section homes) with little change to the current manufactured housing market, while providing energy cost savings in the nearer term for residents of these homes. A more detailed explanation of DOE's bases for adopting Alternative B2 will be provided in the final rule and its Technical Support Document in the rulemaking docket. The docket, and all documents contained therein, may be found at www.regulations.gov/docket?D=EERE-2009-BT-BC-0021.

Mitigation

The analyses presented in the final EIS identify both beneficial and adverse impacts to indoor air quality, health, socioeconomic conditions, environmental justice, and cumulative effects of DOE's proposed action alternatives. The final EIS describes measures that could mitigate potential adverse impacts. To address adverse impacts to indoor air quality, health, socioeconomic, and environmental justice, the final EIS identifies the following mitigation measures:

- Promoting installation of energy-efficient fans for ventilation,
- Advancing research and stakeholder engagement to increase implementation of energy-efficient ventilation,
- Promoting training and technical assistance to manufacturers, and
- Promoting improved indoor air quality and environmental justice through efficiency labeling and informational resources about healthy homes and financing options.

The final EIS identifies that DOE could further address adverse impacts to socioeconomic and environmental justice by promoting financial mechanisms to offset first costs through incentives, assistance, and informational resources. Also, the final EIS identifies that DOE could promote awareness of DOE's energy justice initiative to address impacts to environmental justice.

Along with DOE's decision to implement energy conservation standards for manufactured housing, DOE will:

- Collaborate with HUD to promote efficient ventilation, including whole-house ventilation and exhaust fan techniques.
- Advance research and stakeholder engagement on energy-efficient heating, ventilation, and air-conditioning solutions for modular housing.
- Leverage existing funded research projects to provide training and technical assistance to manufactured housing manufacturers intended to help manufacturers achieve the energy conservation standards in the most cost-efficient manner.
- Develop and implement informational campaigns to promote improved indoor air quality and environmental justice—specifically to aid potential buyers in identifying and comparing energy efficiency between homes.

- Collaborate with the Manufactured Housing Task Force to address market barriers to energy-efficient manufactured housing as an affordable, equitable, and accessible housing option, including better consumer education around how energy-efficient manufactured homes are financed.
- Coordinate with DOE's Office of Economic Impact and Diversity to promote partnerships that enhance community awareness and engagement in advancing energy justice concepts for manufactured housing.

DOE has committed to all practicable means to avoid or minimize environmental harm.
