Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service

Title: Brucellosis and Bovine tuberculosis: Importation of Cattle and Bison

OMB Control Number: 0579–0442.

Summary of Collection: The Animal Health Protection Act (AHPA) of 2002 is the primary Federal law governing the protection of animal health. The law gives the Secretary of Agriculture broad authority to detect, control, or eradicate pests or diseases of livestock or poultry. The Secretary may also prohibit or restrict import or export of any animal or related material if necessary to prevent the spread of any livestock or poultry pest or disease. The AHPA is contained in title X, subtitle E, sections 10401–18 of Public Law 107–171, May 13, 2002, the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002 [7 U.S.C. 8301 et. seq.]

Disease prevention is the most effective method for maintaining a healthy animal population and for enhancing the United States’ ability to compete in the world market of animal and animal product trade. Tuberculosis (TB) is a contagious disease of both animals and humans. Bovine TB, caused by M. bovis, can be transmitted from livestock to humans and other animals. Brucellosis is an infectious disease of animals and humans caused by the bacteria of the genus Brucella. The disease is characterized by abortions and impaired fertility in its principal animal hosts. Brucellosis is mainly a disease of cattle, bison, and swine; Brucella abortus is associated with the disease in cattle and bison. There is no economically feasible treatment for brucellosis in livestock.

Need and Use of the Information: APHIS uses the following information activities to prevent importation of cattle and bison infected with or exposed to TB and brucellosis: Request for Regional Classification; Application for Recognition of Regional Classification;

Request for Additional Information about a Region; Maintaining Classification and Reclassification; and Official Identification and Certification

Failure to collect this information would make it much more difficult for APHIS to prevent, detect, control, and eradicate TB and brucellosis from the United States. Outbreaks of the diseases would have severe economic consequences on the U.S. cattle industry.

Description of respondents: Business or other for-profit; Federal Government.

Number of Respondents: 21.

Frequency of Responses: Reporting: On occasion.

Total Burden Hours: 907.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Background

Until 1972, one of the primary mechanisms for the disposal of munitions and explosives of concern (MEC), including unexploded ordnance, discarded military munitions, and munitions constituents—all of which may pose explosive hazards—was to dispose of them at sea. This disposal, in addition to other mechanisms, has led to a significant buildup of MEC in Federal waters on the outer continental shelf (OCS) with a concentration along the eastern seaboard of the United States. As the demand for renewable energy continues to grow, offshore energy, with a focus on offshore wind, is rapidly increasing. The Biden-Harris Administration has set a goal of significantly increasing the nation’s offshore wind energy capacity to 30 gigawatts by 2030. However, many of the sites leased and targeted for development of these projects overlap with areas where MEC have settled over the decades. To answer questions on how to address the discovery of MEC through a whole-of-government process, the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement (BSEE) approached the U.S. Committee on the Marine Transportation System (CMTS), a Congressionally mandated, Cabinet-level interagency body, to convene Federal agencies to develop this guidance. This document is intended to help Federal agencies coordinate their statutory and regulatory authorities to approve, regulate, or permit the detonation, removal, or mitigation of MEC on the OCS.

The draft national guidance describes the process recommended to industry when responding to MEC discovered in Federal waters and on the OCS during the development of offshore energy installations. This includes procedures for industry to inform the government of MEC discoveries on the OCS, a process to safely develop a risk assessment, and MEC operational response plan. The draft guidance also outlines the interagency process for the government to respond to such discoveries and work with industry.

Comments Invited

The CMTS invites public comments on the draft guidance concerning the proposed process for addressing the discovery of munitions and explosives of concern on the U.S. outer continental shelf during offshore energy development. The CMTS will consider the public comments submitted during this comment period in issuing any final National Guidance.

Issued in Washington, DC.
