

FDA’s guidance document “Providing Regulatory Submissions for Medical Devices in Electronic Format—Submissions Under Section 745A(b) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act”⁴ (hereafter referred to as the “745A(b) device parent guidance”) provides a process for the development of templates to facilitate the preparation, submission, and review of regulatory submissions for medical devices solely in electronic format. As described in the 745A(b) device parent guidance, FDA plans to implement the requirements of section 745A(b)(3) of the FD&C Act with individual guidances specifying the formats for specific submissions and corresponding timetables for implementation. When finalized, this guidance will provide such information for De Novo electronic submissions solely in electronic format.

In section 745A(b) of the FD&C Act, Congress granted explicit statutory authorization to FDA to specify in guidance the statutory requirement for electronic submissions solely in electronic format by providing standards, a timetable, and criteria for waivers and exemptions. To the extent that this draft guidance provides such requirements under section 745A(b)(3) of the FD&C Act (i.e., standards, timetable, criteria for waivers of and exemptions), indicated by the use of the mandatory words, such as must or required, this document is not subject to the usual restrictions in FDA’s good guidance practice regulations, such as the requirement that guidances not establish legally enforceable responsibilities (see § 10.115(d) (21 CFR 10.115(d)).) To the extent that this draft guidance describes recommendations that are not standards, timetable, criteria for waivers of, or exemptions under section 745A(b)(3) of the FD&C Act, it is being issued consistent with FDA’s good guidance practices regulation (§ 10.115).

The draft guidance, when finalized, will represent the current thinking of FDA on this topic. It does not establish any rights for any person and is not binding on FDA or the public. You can use an alternative approach if it satisfies the requirements of the applicable statutes and regulations. This draft guidance, when finalized, will contain both binding and nonbinding provisions.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Under the PRA (44 U.S.C. 3501-3521), Federal agencies must obtain approval from the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for each collection of information they conduct or sponsor. "Collection of information" is defined in 44 U.S.C. 3502(3) and 5 CFR 1320.3(c) and includes Agency requests or requirements that members of the public submit reports, keep records, or provide information to a third party. Section 3506(c)(2)(A) of the PRA (44 U.S.C. 3506(c)(2)(A)) requires Federal agencies to provide a 60-day notice in the Federal Register concerning each proposed collection of information, including each proposed extension of an existing collection of information, before submitting the collection to OMB for approval. To comply with this requirement, FDA is publishing notice of the proposed collection of information set forth in this document.

With respect to the following collection of information, FDA invites comments on these topics: (1) whether the proposed collection of information is necessary for the proper performance of FDA's functions, including whether the information will have practical utility; (2) the accuracy of FDA's estimate of the burden of the proposed collection of information, including the validity of the methodology and assumptions used; (3) ways to enhance the quality, utility, and clarity of the information to be collected; and (4) ways to minimize the burden of the collection of information on respondents, including through the use of automated collection techniques, when appropriate, and other forms of information technology.

Data To Support Drug Product Communications as Used by the Food and Drug Administration

OMB Control Number 0910-0695—Extension

This information collection supports Agency outreach and other proactive communication efforts. Evaluating communication messages and supporting materials in advance of a communication campaign provides an important role in improving FDA communications as they allow for an in-depth understanding of individuals' knowledge, attitudes, beliefs, motivations, feelings, and behaviors. Such evaluations are critical in helping FDA develop public health communications that meet the needs and desires of its many diverse target audiences.

We intend to use the following methods with general public health consumers and healthcare professionals in our efforts: individual in-depth interviews, focus group discussions, intercept interviews, self-administered surveys, gatekeeper surveys, all on a voluntary basis. The methods to be used serve the narrowly defined need for direct and informal opinion on a specific topic and, as a qualitative and/or quantitative research tools, have two major purposes: (1) to obtain information that is useful for developing variables and measures for formulating the basic objectives of risk communication campaigns and (2) to assess the potential effectiveness of messages and materials in reaching and successfully communicating with their intended audiences. We will use these methods to test and refine our ideas and to help develop messages and other communications but will generally conduct further research before making important decisions, such as adopting new policies and allocating or redirecting significant resources to support these policies.

We will use this qualitative and/or quantitative research to test messages about regulated drug products on a variety of subjects related to consumer, patient, or healthcare professional perceptions and about use of drug products and related materials, including but not limited to: (1) direct-to-consumer prescription drug promotion; (2) labeling and information about prescription and over-the-counter drugs; (3) patient medication guides; (4) safety and risk communications; (5) online sale of medical products; and (6) consumer and professional education. Annually, we project about 75 communication studies using the variety of research methods listed in this document. FDA is requesting an extension of these burden hours so as not to restrict its ability to gather information on public opinion for its regulatory and communications programs.

We estimate the burden of this collection of information as follows:

TABLE 1—ESTIMATED ANNUAL REPORTING BURDEN ¹

Activity	Number of respondents	Number of responses per respondent	Total annual responses	Average burden per response	Total hours
Interviews/Surveys	45,000	1	45,000	0.75 (45 minutes)	33,750

¹ There are no capital costs or operating and maintenance costs associated with this collection of information.

Our estimated burden for the information collection has changed since the last OMB approval. We attribute this change to screening more potential participants to obtain the very specialized and hard-to-recruit populations often needed for these studies, e.g., vulnerable populations, and patients taking or users of a specific drug or type of drug, such as opioids and other controlled substances, biosimilars, etc.

AGENCY: Food and Drug Administration, HHS.

ACTION: Notice of availability.

SUMMARY: The Food and Drug Administration (FDA or Agency) is announcing the availability of a final guidance entitled “Technical Considerations for Medical Devices with Physiologic Closed-Loop Control Technology.” Physiologic closed-loop control (PCLC) devices are intended for automatic control of a physiologic variable(s) through delivery of energy or substance using feedback from physiologic sensors. PCLC devices may play an important role in reducing cognitive overload, minimizing human error, and enhancing medical care during emergency response and medical surge situations. This guidance provides technical considerations for PCLC technology in order to promote development and availability of safe and effective PCLC medical devices.

DATES: The announcement of the guidance is published in the Federal Register on September 29, 2023.
