

have on student success, retention, and timely graduation rates.

As a result of public comments, the FAA made several changes to the AC ODA content to clarify the information related to off-site facilities as well as for international activity where an ODA holder may be involved, to correct typos and regulatory references, and to define terminology such as operational approvals.

Comments opposing AC ODA: Some commenters objected to the introduction of the new AC ODA type, stating it will reduce safety. However, these commenters did not provide sufficient data to support their comments. The FAA assessed the expansion of the ODA program to include specific regulatory parts for airmen certification and determined it will not introduce additional risk to the safety of the National Airspace System.

Multiple authorizations: Based on a public comment associated with the use of multiple procedures manuals, the FAA incorporated the ability for an organization to hold more than one authorization when doing so will facilitate efficiency in the oversight of the type(s) associated with the authorization.

Clarifications and consistency: Many comments addressed the procedures governing ODA. Commenters recommended changes to enhance clarity and improve consistency. In response, the FAA modified language in several locations for consistency, such as replacing the word “survey” with “solicitation” for alignment with language used in FAA Notice 8100.19, Updated Policy on Organization Designation Authorization (ODA) Holder Interference with ODA Unit Members (UM) and Communication between UMs and the FAA. The FAA also updated the information on the use of FAA forms to align with deviation memorandum AIR-100-17-160-DM09, which allows organization management teams (OMT) to accept certain customized forms for documentation of ODA certification activities. The FAA updated the draft Order to provide additional clarity on when forms may be replicated or modified. Another example of a change made by the FAA due to public comment is the refinement of ODA holder training requirements; the FAA clarified the training requirements to focus on how to deliver the training content rather than specifying who should present the training content. This clarification establishes quality standards for delivering training and allows for more flexibility in assigning trainers.

Editorial changes: The FAA evaluated and incorporated multiple suggestions where commenters requested editorial changes and corrections, such as typographical errors and inaccurate references to other paragraphs, regulations, and other FAA policy.

This Order is available to the public at http://www.faa.gov/regulations\_policies/orders\_notices, on the Dynamic Regulatory System website at <https://drs.faa.gov>, and in the docket.

Authority: 49 U.S.C. 44702 and 44736.
