SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Abstract

The U.S. Census Bureau seeks a revision for the American Community Survey (ACS) and the Puerto Rico Community Survey (PRCS).

Since its founding, the Census Bureau has balanced the demands of a growing country requiring information about its people and economy with concerns for respondents' confidentiality and the time and effort it takes respondents to answer questions. Beginning with the 1810 Census, Congress updated the set of questions asked in the 1790 and 1800 Censuses by adding questions to support a range of public concerns and uses. Over the course of a century, federal agencies requested to add questions about agriculture, industry, and commerce, as well as individuals' occupation, ancestry, marital status, disabilities, place of birth, and other topics. In 1940, the Census Bureau introduced the long-form census questionnaire to ask more detailed questions from a sample of the public.

In the early 1990s, the demand for current, nationally consistent data from a wide variety of data users led federal government policymakers to consider the feasibility of collecting social, economic, housing, and demographic data continuously throughout the decade. The benefits of providing current data, along with the anticipated decennial census benefits in cost savings, planning, improved census coverage, and more efficient operations, led the Census Bureau to plan the implementation of the Continuous Measurement Survey, later called the American Community Survey (ACS). After years of testing, the ACS was implemented in 2005, replacing the need for long-form data collection in future decennial censuses. The ACS is conducted throughout the United States including in Puerto Rico, where it is called the Puerto Rico Community Survey (PRCS). The ACS samples approximately 3.5 million housing unit addresses in the United States and about 36,000 in Puerto Rico each year. A housing unit is a house, an apartment, a mobile home, a group of rooms, or a single room occupied or intended for occupancy as separate living quarters. The ACS also collects detailed data from a sample of about 150,000 residents living in group quarters facilities in the United States and about 600 in Puerto Rico. Group quarters are places where people live or stay in a group living arrangement owned or managed by an entity or organization providing housing and/or services for the residents. People living in group quarters usually are not related to each other. Group quarters include college/university student housing, residential treatment centers, skilled nursing facilities, group homes, military barracks, correctional facilities, workers' group living quarters, Job Corps centers, and emergency and transitional shelters.

The ACS program provides estimates annually for the nation, all states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, congressional districts, metropolitan areas, and counties and places with a population of 65,000 or more. It takes five years for smaller areas and population groups to accumulate enough data to provide reliable estimates. Every community in the nation continues to receive a detailed, statistical portrait of its social, economic, housing, and demographic characteristics each year through one-year and five-year ACS products.

The ACS collects detailed social, economic, housing, and demographic data on over 40 topics. The list of topics and questions can be found here: <https://www.census.gov/acs/www/about/why-we-ask-each-question/>.

In 2027, the ACS plans to introduce an internet self-response option to the Puerto Rico Community Survey (PRCS) data collection operation. The Census Bureau believes there is value in offering an internet self-response option to households and people living in certain types of group quarters—
