SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Background

FDA is announcing the availability of a final guidance for industry entitled “Processes and Practices Applicable to Bioresearch Monitoring Inspections.” This finalizes the draft guidance entitled “Processes and Practices Applicable to Bioresearch Monitoring Inspections; Guidance for Industry,” which was announced in the Federal Register on June 5, 2024 (89 FR 48170) (hereafter, the “draft guidance”).

FDA is issuing this final guidance to comply with section 3612(b)(2) of the Food and Drug Omnibus Reform Act of 2022 (FDORA), enacted as part of the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2023.

This provision of FDORA directs FDA to issue guidance describing the processes and practices applicable to inspections of certain sites and facilities, to the extent not specified in existing publicly available FDA guides and manuals for such inspections. These sites and facilities are inspected under FDA’s Bioresearch Monitoring (BIMO) inspection program. Specifically, this guidance addresses the following (to the extent not publicly available in FDA guides and manuals): the types of records and information required to be provided, best practices for communication between FDA and industry in advance of or during an inspection or request for records or other information, and other inspections-related conduct.

FDA’s BIMO program is a comprehensive portfolio of programs designed to assess and monitor all aspects of the conduct and reporting of FDA-regulated research as well as certain postmarketing activities through on-site inspections, investigations, and Remote Regulatory Assessments. The BIMO program was established to assess the quality and integrity of data submitted to the Agency in support of regulatory decision-making, as well as to provide for protection of the rights, safety, and welfare of human and animal trial participants involved in FDA-regulated research. The program assesses compliance with statutory requirements and FDA’s regulations governing the conduct of nonclinical and clinical studies, and applicable postmarketing activities.

FDA also is confirming that the following two guidances will be withdrawn upon publication of this guidance, as their substance is superseded by this final guidance and other guidances and related documents described in this final guidance: the 2010 “Information Sheet Guidance For IRBs, Clinical Investigators, and Sponsors: FDA Inspections of Clinical Investigators,” and the 2006 “Information Sheet Guidance For IRBs, Clinical Investigators, and Sponsors: FDA Institutional Review Board Inspections.”

FDA received 15 comments on the draft guidance. The comments primarily came from industry (including trade and professional associations). The comment period for the draft guidance ended on August 5, 2024. Commenters expressed interest in the Agency’s current practices with respect to accessing electronic databases during an inspection, the logistics of the Agency’s inspection pre-announcement notices and communications, and types of communication after an inspection.

This final guidance reflects consideration of the public comments on the draft guidance. Specifically, the final guidance, among other things, contains changes to: (1) clarify the Agency’s practices for accessing and obtaining copies of electronic records; (2) provide additional details with respect to the Agency’s inspection pre-announcement notices and communications; and (3) offer additional information on post-inspection communications.

This final guidance is being issued consistent with FDA’s good guidance practices regulation (21 CFR 10.115). The final guidance represents the current thinking of FDA on “Processes and Practices Applicable to Bioresearch Monitoring Inspections.” It does not establish any rights for any person and is not binding on FDA or the public. You can use an alternative approach if it satisfies the requirements of the applicable statutes and regulations.
