Guidelines for Appeals of Material Supervisory Determinations

AGENCY: Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

ACTION: Notice of guidelines.

SUMMARY: The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) is adopting revised Guidelines for Appeals of Material Supervisory Determinations to replace the existing Supervision Appeals Review Committee with an independent, standalone office to consider and decide supervisory appeals.

DATES: The revised Guidelines become effective once the Office of Supervisory Appeals is fully operational.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The FDIC's Guidelines for Appeals of Material Supervisory Determinations (Guidelines) provide the process by which insured depository institutions (IDIs) may appeal material supervisory determinations made by the FDIC.¹ Under these Guidelines, the FDIC's Supervision Appeals Review Committee (SARC) has been the final level of review of the FDIC's material supervisory determinations. The FDIC is revising the Guidelines to replace the SARC with an independent, standalone office within the FDIC, known as the Office of Supervisory Appeals (Office).

The Office will have delegated authority to consider and resolve appeals of material supervisory determinations.

I. Background

Section 309(a) of the Riegle Community Development and Regulatory Improvement Act of 1994 (Riegle Act) required the FDIC (as well as the other Federal banking agencies and the National Credit Union Administration) to establish an "independent intra-agency appellate process" to review material supervisory determinations.² The Riegle Act defines the term "independent appellate process" to mean "a review by an agency official who does not directly or indirectly report to the agency official who made the material supervisory determination under review."³ In the appeals process, the FDIC is required to ensure that (1) an IDI's appeal of a material supervisory determination is heard and decided expeditiously; and (2) appropriate safeguards exist for protecting appellants from retaliation by agency examiners.⁴

On March 21, 1995, the FDIC's Board of Directors (Board) adopted the Guidelines to implement section 309(a) and established the SARC to consider and decide appeals of material supervisory determinations.⁵ Since that time, the SARC has been composed of FDIC Board members and other senior FDIC officials.

In January 2021, the FDIC adopted Guidelines that replaced the SARC with an independent, standalone office within the FDIC, known as the Office of Supervisory Appeals.⁶ The Office was granted delegated authority to consider and resolve appeals of material supervisory determinations and was staffed by reviewing officials with bank supervisory or examination experience. However, in May 2022, prior to the Office considering any appeals, the FDIC adopted revised Guidelines that restored the SARC as the final level of review of material supervisory determinations made by the FDIC.⁷

II. July 2025 Proposal

In July 2025, the FDIC proposed to re-establish an Office of Supervisory Appeals as the final level of review of material supervisory determinations made by the FDIC, replacing the SARC in the appellate process.⁸ The FDIC noted that reinstating the Office would
