Abstract of Information Available

Human remains representing, at least, two individuals were likely removed from Madison County, Illinois. In 2007, an anonymous package containing these human remains was mailed to the Santa Barbara Museum of Natural History. The human remains consist of 60% of an intact cranium, and one mandible. The package also contained a type-written note that says: "The skull and jaw bones were found in a closet while cleaning out a person's belongings . . . it appears that the person who collected them dug them up when he was a child in southern Illinois. From what I have been able to determine, he dug them up about 80 years ago on farmland that was about 18 miles from the site of Cahokia. We had absolutely no idea what to do with these bones and want to make sure they are handled respectfully . . . and so are sending them to the Natural History Museum for handling." No associated funerary objects are present.
