Subject: Financial Statement Restatement Database

On October 4, 2002, we issued a report to you entitled Financial Statement Restatements: Trends, Market Impacts, Regulatory Responses, and Remaining Challenges (Washington, D.C.: GAO-03-138). That report included a listing of 919 restatements we identified as having been made because of accounting irregularities between January 1, 1997, and June 30, 2002. Since its release, the report has drawn considerable attention from academics and other researchers, and we have received numerous requests for additional data about these restatements. As a result, and with the agreement of your office, we are releasing our database of information collected from public sources on the 919 restatements. We encourage researchers and the public to consider our objectives, scope, and methodology (enclosure I) and engage in their own analyses of the data contained in our restatements database (enclosure II).

In addition to providing the name of each company associated with a restatement announcement, we are including the company's stock ticker symbol, the market on which the stock was trading at the time of the announcement, the date of the announcement, the entity that prompted the restatement, and the reason(s) for the restatement. We are not releasing stock price or market capitalization data, since we obtained this information from proprietary sources, but we are including the number of shares outstanding for each company. As we stated in our October report, certain of these items, such as the entity that prompted the restatement and the reason for the restatement, are subject to interpretation, and other researchers may categorize certain restatements differently.

The database we are releasing today is an updated version of the one we used for the original report. It has been a work-in-progress, and we have further refined it as we have obtained additional details. In particular, we uncovered new information for many of the 919 cases, including details about initial announcement dates and the reasons for the restatements. We performed analyses with the new information and determined that the new data resulted in only minor changes to the effects and trends we had initially reported. Incorporating the additional information, we found that the unadjusted and market-adjusted immediate losses in the market capitalization of restating companies approximated $100 billion and $96 billion, respectively, as originally reported.¹ The average holding period abnormal return over the immediate window was unchanged at –9.5 percent.² We also recalculated the unadjusted and market-adjusted intermediate losses in the market capitalization of restating companies and found only marginal differences from the figures given in our original report.³ The average holding period abnormal return over the intermediate window (60 trading days before and 60 trading days after the announcement) remained essentially unchanged (–18.1 percent versus the –18.2 percent originally reported).

The new information incorporated into the database also resulted in virtually no changes in the reasons for the restatements that we originally reported (see table 1, enclosure I). The most notable changes involved restatements that we had originally classified as “other.” Additional information allowed us to reclassify numerous restatements from the “other” category. As a result, the “cost or expense” and “restructuring, assets, or inventory” categories, which had originally included 15.7 percent and 8.9 percent of the 919 restatements, respectively, rose to 16.9 percent and 10.9 percent. Further, with the new information, the share of restatements classified in the “revenue recognition” category fell slightly, from 37.9 percent to 37.4 percent. Losses in the market values of restating companies associated with revenue recognition issues continued to account for more than half of the total losses.

Additionally, with further information we were able to determine that a restatement that we had originally reported as having first been announced in 2000 was more appropriately classified as having first been announced in 1999.

We are sending copies of this report to the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs; the Chairmen and Ranking Minority Members of the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs and the House Committee on Financial Services; and other interested congressional committees. We will also send copies to the Chairman of the SEC and will make copies available to others upon request. The report will also be available at no charge on GAO’s home page at <http://www.gao.gov>.

² We used the average holding period abnormal return, a market-adjusted performance measure calculated from a specified date before (for example, one trading day) to a specified date after (for example, one trading day) the initial announcement of a financial statement restatement, to capture the average impact of a restatement announcement on the stock price of a restating company. In calculating this average, we first calculated the holding period abnormal return (the unexpected return due to the announcement) for each restating company’s stock over the company-specific time period. We then averaged the holding period abnormal returns for all restatement announcements.

If you or your staff have any questions regarding this report, please contact Orice M. Williams or me at (202) 512-8678.

Sincerely yours,

Enclosure I

To determine the number of and reasons for financial statement restatements since 1997, we identified financial statement restatements announced from January 1, 1997, through June 30, 2002, using the Lexis-Nexis on-line information service to search for press releases and other media coverage. When developing our search methodology for identifying financial statement restatements, we reviewed the approaches used in several academic and nonacademic research papers.⁴ Using the Lexis-Nexis “Power Search” command and the “US News, Combined” database, we performed a keyword search using “restate,” “restates,” “restated,” “restating,” or “restatement” within 50 words of “financial statement” or “earnings.” We also used other variations such as “adjust,” “amend,” and “revise.” In addition, we included some restatements identified through other sources, such as the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC).

To our knowledge, no comprehensive and authoritative database of financial statement restatements exists. While several academic and nonacademic researchers have constructed and maintained their own databases, these lists are generally proprietary and, thus, not publicly available. Moreover, in constructing their databases these researchers use different methods, criteria, and sample periods, making it difficult to directly compare their databases with ours.⁵ Because we have no means of determining its relative completeness or accuracy, our database should be viewed as a sample of financial statement restatements identified using our particular search methodology, and the results of our analysis should be viewed with this caveat in mind.

Although companies restate their financial statements for many reasons, most restatements are routine and do not indicate accounting irregularities. For purposes of our review, we focused on financial restatements resulting from accounting irregularities, including so-called “aggressive” accounting practices, intentional and unintentional misuse of facts applied to financial statements, oversight or misinterpretation of accounting rules, and fraud. Also, we included in our database all restatements made because of such irregularities, regardless of the impact on the restating company’s financials. We excluded restatements resulting from ⁴ Our sources included Financial Executives International and M. Wu, Quantitative Measures of the Quality of Financial Reporting, Internet-Based Special Report (Morristown, NJ: FEI Research Foundation, 2001); M. Jickling, Accounting Problems Reported in Major Companies Since Enron, Report for Congress (Washington, D.C.: Congressional Research Service, 2002); Z.V. Palmrose, V. Richardson, and S. Scholz, “Determinants of Market Reactions to Restatement Announcements,” Working Paper (Los Angeles, Ca.: University of Southern California, 2002); Z.V. Palmrose and S. Scholz, “Accounting Causes and Litigation Consequences of Restatements,” Working Paper (Los Angeles, Ca.: University of Southern California, 2002); Huron Consulting Group, A Study of Restatement Matters, Internet-Based Report (Chicago, Ill: Huron Consulting Group, 2002); L. Turner, J. Dietrich, K. Anderson, and A. Bailey, “Accounting Restatements,” Working Paper (Washington, D.C.: Securities and Exchange Commission, 2001); and M. Wu, “Earnings Restatements: A Capital Market Perspective,” Working Paper (New York: New York University, 2002).

mergers and acquisitions, discontinued operations, stock splits, issuance of stock dividends, currency-related issues (for example, converting from Canadian dollars to U.S. dollars), changes in business segment definitions, changes due to transfers of management, changes made for presentation purposes, general accounting changes under generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP), litigation settlements, and arithmetic and general bookkeeping errors. As a general rule, we also excluded restatements resulting from accounting policy changes because they did not necessarily reveal previously undisclosed, economically meaningful data to market participants.⁶

Once we had identified a relevant restatement, we classified it into 1 or more of 13 categories based on the information presented in the initial restatement announcement or collected from other relevant information.⁷ For purposes of analysis, we further collapsed these 13 categories into 9 categories—(1) acquisitions and mergers; (2) cost or expense; (3) in-process research and development; (4) reclassification; (5) related-party transactions; (6) restructuring, assets, or inventory; (7) revenue recognition; (8) securities related; and (9) other (table 1).⁸ Our classification closely resembles that employed by Financial Executives International and M. Wu in Quantitative Measures of the Quality of Financial Reporting (2001) and Huron Consulting Group in A Study of Restatement Matters (2002).⁹

⁸ Some restatement announcements cited multiple accounting issues (for example, improper revenue recognition, improper recording of cost of goods sold, and improper valuation of inventory). In these cases, we included the restatement in all applicable categories, and in the analyses involving stratification by restatement reason, we assigned equal fractional weights to the reasons. For the above example, we would assign each reason (revenue recognition, cost or expense, and restructuring, assets, or inventory) a weight of one-third when calculating the market capitalization loss.

Enclosure I

Table 1: Categories of Restatements

Category	Description
Acquisitions and mergers	Restatements of acquisitions or mergers that were improperly accounted for or not accounted for at all. These include instances in which the wrong accounting method was used or losses or gains related to the acquisition were understated or overstated. This category does not include in-process research and development or restatements for mergers, acquisitions, and discontinued operations when appropriate accounting methods were employed.
Cost or expense	Restatements due to improper cost accounting. This category includes instances of improperly recognizing costs or expenses, improperly capitalizing expenditures, or any other number of mistakes or improprieties that led to misreported costs. It also includes restatements due to improper treatment of tax liabilities, income tax reserves, and other tax-related items.
In-process research and development	Restatements resulting from instances in which improper accounting methodologies were used to value in-process research and development at the time of an acquisition.
Other	Any restatement not covered by the listed categories. Cases included in this category include restatements due to inadequate loan-loss reserves, delinquent loans, loan write-offs, improper accounting for bad loans and restatements due to fraud, and accounting irregularities that were left unspecified.
Reclassification	Restatements due to improperly classified accounting items. These include restatements due to improprieties such as debt payments being classified as investments.
Related-party transactions	Restatements due to inadequate disclosure or improper accounting of revenues, expenses, debts, or assets involving transactions or relationships with related parties. This category includes those involving special-purpose entities.
Restructuring, assets, or inventory	Restatements due to asset impairment, errors relating to accounting treatment of investments, timing of asset write-downs, goodwill, restructuring activity and inventory valuation, and inventory quantity issues.
Revenue recognition	Restatements due to improper revenue accounting. This category includes instances in which revenue was improperly recognized, questionable revenues were recognized, or any other number of mistakes or improprieties were made that led to misreported revenue.
Securities related	Restatements due to improper accounting for derivatives, warrants, stock options, and other convertible securities.

Source: GAO.

Note: We excluded announcements involving stock splits and changes in accounting principles, as well as other financial statement restatements that were not made to correct mistakes in the application of accounting standards.

We collected data on the number of shares outstanding, typically by using SEC's Electronic Data Gathering Analysis and Retrieval (EDGAR) on-line database. We obtained the number of shares outstanding from a company's Form 10-Q covering the 3-month period during which the restatement announcement was made. Specifically, we obtained the average number of diluted shares over this period.¹⁰ If this figure was not available, we used either the latest Form 10-Q, the appropriate Form 10-K, or other company sources. The stock price and number of shares outstanding for each restating company were subsequently used to calculate the approximate market capitalization for relevant periods.
