International Services

is a vital program of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. We work on the front line for U.S. agricultural health, carrying out USDA's mission overseas.

We act globally to protect U.S. agriculture locally. Our team of animal and plant health experts works with foreign government officials and industries to build capacity to control, manage, and eradicate certain pests and diseases; establish and manage sustainable animal and plant health programs; and address plant and animal health trade barriers that could limit U.S. access to foreign markets. Day in and day out, with our Foreign Service Officers located around the world, we form lasting relationships in-country, representing America at the highest levels abroad to safeguard U.S. agricultural health.

Our employees are trained diplomats and technical experts who thrive in a global environment and have a passion for public service. We seek adaptable, motivated people from all educational backgrounds to join our team. If you want a prestigious career where you can make a difference for U.S. agriculture, come find your future with us!

We Hire:

- Foreign Service Officers
- Agriculturists
- Trade directors
- Trade policy analysts
- Travel and transportation management specialists
- International visitor coordinators
- Program assistants
- Administrative professionals of all types
