PREFACE.

The earliest issue of the Official Register—or Register of Officials and Agents, as it was at first called—was published in 1816. This issue was prepared under the supervision of the Secretary of State, to whom the duty was assigned by a resolution of Congress approved April 27 of that year, and who continued to publish the Register biennially until 1861, when an act of Congress, approved March 2, transferred it to the Department of the Interior. The Secretary of the Interior supervised the issue for 1861 and each succeeding issue up to and including that of 1905. The law governing the publication of the Official Register, which had been amended from time to time, was again revised in 1895 and amended in 1902 and 1904.

In 1906, an act approved June 7 transferred the duty of publishing the Register to the Director of the Census. This issue is therefore the first which has been prepared under the act of 1906.

The growth of the Register in size and number of names contained has been approximately at the rate of 50 per cent in each decade. How great this increase has been is illustrated by the following table:

YEAR.	Number of volumes.	Total pages.	Approximate total names.	Total index (pages).	Total cost.	Printer.
1816.....	1	176	6,327			J. Elliot.

1897.....	2	2,743	192,336	531	43,199.50	Government Printing Office.
1899.....	2	3,128	208,215	606	48,897.67	Government Printing Office.
1901.....	2	3,401	256,081	678	52,894.36	Government Printing Office.
1903.....	2	3,945	300,766	814	60,677.65	Government Printing Office.
1905.....	2	4,219	349,075	869	70,808.66	Government Printing Office.

The great number of pages consumed in presenting the Register for 1905 were unequally distributed between the two parts or volumes: Of the total 4,219 pages, Volume I contained 1,749, and Volume II, 2,470. The two volumes together weighed slightly more than 25 pounds. The index alone consumed 869 pages.

The great size of recent issues of the Register was partially due to the fact that the compiler had continued to allow to each name, with the accompanying data required by law, the same amount of space that had been allotted in the earlier issues, when the small number of names made economy of space comparatively unimportant.

The issue for 1907, if produced in the same manner as previous issues, upon the basis of biennial increase, would have contained 4,588 pages, and cost approximately $78,000. It was therefore obvious that in both size and cost the limit under the old plan had been reached. After full consideration, the Director of the Census decided that the conditions under which the Register is published have changed so completely that the form of presentation must of necessity be altered, so as to secure a material reduction in size and cost. It seemed evident that such a publication under present conditions must conform more and more to the character of ordinary directories and similar reference volumes designed to contain a great amount of information in comparatively small space. The approval of the Printing Commission of Congress was therefore requested for radical changes. The Commission proved to be heartily in sympathy with the proposed changes and has given material assistance to the Director in advice and cooperation. So great has been the economy of space that two volumes are no longer required to contain the information as now presented. As a matter of convenience, however, owing to the distinctive character of the Postal Service, publication in two-volume form has been continued.

By arranging the names alphabetically instead of classifying them by departments, bureaus, and independent offices, as in former issues, it has been possible to dispense with the index altogether. With the approval of the Printing Commission, the names of all temporary employees whose term of service is less than six months have been omitted. The section formerly published listing the substitute carriers in the Postal Service has also been omitted. By omission and condensation, and especially by rearrangement of almost all of the material and the introduction of abbreviations (easily determined by the key) as is customary in all directories containing large numbers of names, it has been possible to present practically all the information contained in the last issue in convenient form and at less than one-half the cost.

The first volume of the Register for 1907 is composed of five sections: 1. Legislative. 2. Executive—a detailed statement of officers or others receiving at least $2,000 per annum, followed by two tabular statements, one of which presents the number of persons in the Federal service at Washington by departments and bureaus, and the other summarizes employees by states from which appointed, showing the aggregate compensation. 3. Judicial. 4. Directory of all persons employed in the United States Government, except those in the Postal Service. 5. List of all vessels belonging to the United States. Two appendices present the pay tables employed for the officers of the Army and Navy and a digest of all the laws relating to the Official Register since 1816.

The second volume is devoted to the Postal Service. It is divided into six sections: 1. Directory of the employees of the Post Office Department in Washington. These names appear also in the Directory presented in Volume I and are repeated in Volume II as a matter of convenience, in order that names of all employees of the Post Office Department may be found in one volume. 2. Postal Service of the United States—a list of all the post offices arranged alphabetically under states, with the names of the postmasters and other employees, if any. In this section, under each post office, will be found grouped all persons employed at that office of whatever grade, with appropriate information. 3. Railway mail service. The employees in this service are arranged alphabetically. 4. Mail messenger service. 5. Mail contractors. 6. Special mail service.

The total number of names included in Volume I is 125,805; in Volume II, 180,336, of which 166,444 names are comprised in the Postal Service and 13,892 in the Railway Mail Service. The aggregate, therefore, of names presented in the Official Register for 1907 is 306,141. The total number of pages in the two volumes is 1,560, or 2,659 pages less than the number printed in the 1905 issue, and approximately 3,000 less than the number of pages which would have been required in the 1907 issue had it been prepared upon the former basis. This saving has been secured almost entirely by condensation. It is believed that no essential facts presented in previous issues have been omitted in this one.

Only by the employment of a large force of clerks was it possible to comply with the law which requires that the information contained in the Official Register shall be gathered on the 1st of July of each year in which a new Congress meets, and that the publication shall be issued on the 1st day of December. This statute was based upon conditions entirely different from those which at present prevail. It is now extremely difficult to obtain information as of July 1 for more than 300,000 persons scattered all over the United States and for Federal employees in Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippine Islands in time to permit preparation of copy, printing, and binding within the four-month period allowed by law. As an illustration of this difficulty, the returns for nearly 3,000 persons employed in the Philippines were not received until October 15, and many scattering returns, especially in the postal service, were received long after that date. Such delays were, however, in most cases unavoidable, and the Director of the Census desires to acknowledge the friendly cooperation of various departmental officials so far as their resources permitted. Wherever the clerical force available proved insufficient to prepare the information within reasonable time, clerks were detailed from the Bureau of the Census to executive departments and bureaus. This policy resulted in securing records, particularly from the Post Office Department, many weeks in advance of what otherwise would have been possible. For many years the difficulty here noted has delayed the publication of Volume II for several months after the date fixed by law.

It is evident that the laws providing for the Official Register ought to be carefully revised before the next compilation. Some of these laws, as appears from Appendix II, in which they are all brought together, were enacted many years ago, when the conditions surrounding the Federal service were widely different from those now prevailing. A portion of the information required by these laws appears to have no practical value, while greatly increasing the difficulties of compilation.

Statistics of the civil service were first collected in 1903 and published as Census Bulletin 12. This publication was prepared by the Director of the Census at the request of the Civil Service Commission, and was based upon information secured by Executive order from the various departments of the Government. Under the law of 1906 it was possible to ask for the information required by statute in such form as to also supply the material necessary for the statistical tables, the continued publication of which has been generally approved. It was originally planned to include this material in Volume I, as a statistical section. Accordingly a large force of clerks, together with the mechanical facilities of the Bureau, were utilized and these tables were completed within the allotted time. As the work progressed, however, it seemed more appropriate and economical to reserve this exclusively statistical matter for separate publication as a Census bulletin, to be issued immediately after the publication of the Register.
