Bush expresses concern about RP election fraud

by Michael Gelb

WASHINGTON, Reuter - President Bush repeated his concern Thursday that Panamanian strongman Manuel Noriega has rigged his country's elections, but refused to say how the United States would respond to ballot fraud on Sunday.

"We'll cross whatever hypothetical bridge we may have to cross later on," Bush told reporters at a joint news conference with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney. "But it's too hypothetical at this point to go beyond that."

Bush had been asked about a proposal by a top Republican legislator that the United States delay implementation of its treaty commitment to hand over the Panama Canal unless Noriega is removed from power.

Earlier, Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger refused to rule out the use of force by the United States if the elections are fraudulent.

"I would think that we ought to keep that amongst ourselves and think about it until we see how the election comes out," he said. "I would not want to speculate."

The Senate voted 100-0 to urge Noriega to allow free and fair elections, and criticized the obstacles put in the way of the campaign of opposition candidates.

The embassy of Panamanian President Eric Delvalle, who was ousted by Noriega in February 1988 but still recognized by Washington, said Noriega's government had set up a special military command to steal the election and put down any protests.

Bush said that the world would be watching the elections with a view to deciding what action should be taken if the elections are fraudulent.

"I've been very disturbed by reports that the elections will be less than fair, less than free and less than open," added Bush who has previously said he would not recognize the results of a dishonest election.

Newt Gingrich, the second ranking Republican in the House, predicted that the Panama voting would be rigged by Panama Defense Forces chief Noriega on behalf of his handpicked presidential candidate Carlos Duque and said one response would be to hold off on implementing U.S. pledges on the canal.

The American people would not feel in any way comfortable turning over control or administrative leadership of the canal to a puppet government that is dominated by the dictatorship," he said following an early morning meeting between Republican lawmakers and Bush.

The United States is scheduled to yield control of the canal in 1999. The 1977 canal treaties call for a gradual transfer of control and an administrator is scheduled to be appointed by the government of Panama by January 1, 1990.

Ford, Carter prepare to observe, support

by Katherine King

PANAMA CITY, (Reuter) - Former President Gerald Ford, one of dozens of international observers coming to watch Sunday's elections, arrived in Panama Thursday.

Up to 300 individuals tied to half a dozen different observer projects are flocking to watch the polls amid charges that military leader Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega is preparing to rig them.

Ford, a Republican, arrived last evening on a military jet at Howard Air Base, a day ahead of former Democratic President Jimmy Carter.

The two men are co-chairmen of a international delegation sponsored by the Council of Freely Elected Heads of Government, a private Atlanta-based group to promote democracy in Third World countries.

Their 20-member delegation includes the prime minister of Belize, a retired U.S. general and political party leaders and election experts from Mexico, Spain, Venezuela, Puerto Rico, Australia and Costa Rica.

Ford will leave before the voting actually takes place Sunday.

Carter will stay on and hopes to visit polling areas during the vote.

He said their staff would divide into four or five teams on Saturday.

"We want to emphasize that we are not policemen of the vote. We will be here to observe and to provide support," said one of the projects' staffers.

North guilty on 3 felony counts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Oliver North's supporters on Capitol Hill said Thursday his conviction on three felony counts in the Iran-Contra scandal is a hollow victory for the prosecution and one predicted a pardon for the former aide to Ronald Reagan.

Critics of North, notably Democrats who served on the special Iran-Contra investigating committees in 1987, said the mixed verdict underlined the view that the foreign policy affair could be traced to the higher-ups North said authorized all his actions.

"If this is the best the prosecutors can do, Oliver North is largely vindicated," Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, told reporters.

"What we have here is a jury that did not think he was as guilty as so many members of Congress who have been pressing these matters have thought," Hatch said.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said he was "disappointed but not surprised" at what he called a compromise verdict that reinforced his view "that Oliver North was left to twist in the wind" by his superiors.

North was convicted of aiding and abetting the obstruction of Congress by making false statements, destroying documents, and accepting an illegal gratuity.

But after more than two years of investigation costing millions of dollars, Hatch said no one profited and that President Bush "will probably" pardon North.

But Hyde, who was in the courtroom when the verdict was delivered, expressed doubt North will be pardoned. "His opportunity for a pardon disappeared when Ronald Reagan went to California," Hyde said.

Former Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., at a testimonial dinner in Chicago to mark his 80th birthday, said North's conviction "is a damn shame."

Atlantis mission rockets into orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The shuttle Atlantis finally rocketed into orbit Thursday after a "cliffhanger" countdown, and its crew quickly got to work, opening the ship's cargo bay doors and readying a $530 million robot probe for launch to Venus.

Three hours after Atlantis' ground-shaking takeoff, the astronauts beamed down television views of the Magellan Venus radar mapping probe mounted in Atlantis' open payload bay, its 12-foot dish antenna pointed at the crew cabin.

With the blue-and-white Earth as a spectacular backdrop, the spacecraft was poised for release from the shuttle in the first launch of an American planetary probe in 11 years and one that came six days late because of a technical glitch.

"Everything is going exactly according to plan so far," NASA spokesman Brian Welch said as astronaut Mark Lee worked through a complex checklist.

At a Magellan ground station, where controllers awaited the shuttle's launch, a large sign was tacked to a wall that read: "Venus or Bust."

Abuse: some childrens' continual nightmare

This article was compiled by AIC Kristi Moody from several interviews with child abuse victims. Although the characters are fictitious and not meant to single out any victims, the events are real.

LANGLEY AFB, Va. (TACNS) — Child abuse has received a lot of attention on television, in movies, and in books. From my point of view, it can never be discussed enough. For seven long years, I was a child abuse victim.

My name is Rick, and I am 21 years old. From the time I was 8, until I was 14, I had been physically, sexually and emotionally abused.

Unlike some abused children's parents who were either alcoholics or drug addicts, mine were responsible adults who were respected throughout the community. My father was a successful businessman, and my mother was a housewife. The difference was when my father could not handle stressful situations; instead of turning to alcohol or drugs, he turned to me.

One of the main reasons my nightmare started was because of my grandfather's death. My father couldn't handle the situation and became uncontrollable if anything was said or done wrong.

The first time anything happened was when he came home from a long day at work. He was in the kitchen talking to my mother about how he wished things were different and that he couldn't understand why his father had to die.

The next thing I knew, he was in the living room, towering over me and yelling because I'd left my shoes in the middle of the floor.

The rest was almost like a dream, no, a nightmare.

He picked up a baseball bat that had been lying beside an end table — the same bat I had tried to play baseball with earlier that day. Little did I know that my father had different plans for that bat.

As the bat came down across my back for the third and fourth times, I could still hear him yelling, "Why can't you be a good kid?" All I could think was, "What had I done to deserve this?" I had simply left my shoes out on the living room floor. Was this my punishment? Next, I was being rushed to the hospital to take care of the blood pouring down the back of my head.

When he arrived, the questions started coming from the doctors. "How did this happen?" Before I could respond, my mother told her version of the story.

"He was trying to put some things away in the garage, when all at once, the shelf above him broke," she explained, trying not to look my way.

They all bought her story and within an hour I was released with 12 stitches in my head. By this time, half a dozen bruises outlined my back and shoulders.

The ride home was silent. This gave me time to think.

It wasn't the bruises or the aches that hurt the most. It was the fact I had been beaten for something I knew nothing about. Why had my mother lied for my father about something like this? It hurt more inside than it could ever hurt outside.

This was the first of many times my father physically abused me.

Another incident occurred when my father arrived home late one night from a long business trip. Usually when he came home late, I knew to stay in my room because it meant he'd had a hard day.

After hearing a few things crash in the kitchen, an idea arose to climb out my window and save myself from what I knew was coming.

Before I had the chance to decide, my door opened and there stood my father, holding the iron and asking me why I hadn't helped with the weekly laundry. As he approached, I tried to explain that I was too little to reach the ironing board. Before I could get the first two words out, there was a sharp kick to my side and a painful sting on my arm.

I must have blacked out after that, because when I woke up it was around 3 a.m., and I had a swollen arm, aching ribs, and other bruises that must have happened after I'd blacked out. My only concern was to get out — just run.

However, I knew I had no place to go, and I was too scared to even try telling someone about what had happened.

I lived with this for another two years. Then the worst nightmare happened. Not only was I a victim of physical and verbal abuse, but I became a victim of sexual abuse as well.

At was a Saturday afternoon and my father and uncle were getting drunk and watching the "big game." My mother wasn't home, so it was just the three of us.

My father went to get another beer out of the refrigerator, when my uncle picked me up and carried me into my parents' room.

What followed, for the most part, has been blocked from my memory. The one thing I remember vividly is my father standing in the doorway laughing, just laughing at what he saw.

This was the last time I was a victim of any kind of abuse. I ran away and never went back.

I have had many meetings with psychiatrists and I am now involved with a group of people who share those same types of experiences. We discuss any problems we have and try to deal with them.

Now I am finally getting the help I needed and some answers to questions I've had for a very long time. The saddest part of all of this is that I am one of the lucky ones. I got out before it was too late.

These things happen to more than a million children each year. More than 5,000 of these cases result in death of the child. However, there are more and more agencies that can help reduce these statistics.

The Howard Family Advocacy Office and the family support centers offer counselors for these types of situations in homes. Parents with abuse problems or children being abused can call 284-3865 or 284-5302 for help or advice. All those seeking help will be dealt with in the strictest confidence.

People need to become more aware that a definite problem does exist and start working together to help stop this growing epidemic.

'Watch out for your buddy' includes wear of seatbelts

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

"Watch out for your buddy" is one of the first lessons a military recruit learns. Reminding your buddy to use a seatbelt is part of that, said George Siebert, director of occupational safety and health policy in the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Force Management and Personnel.

You'll be hearing more than usual about the importance of seat belts and child restraints during "Buckle Up America" Week, May 22-29.

Laws in 31 states and the District of Columbia require seat-belt use by front-seat drivers and passengers. Approved child-restraint systems for babies and young children are required in all states and the District of Columbia.

Military bases enforce these laws and add stronger regulations of their own in those localities with no seat-belt laws. Military people and DoD civilians must wear seat belts while driving government vehicles or when driving a privately owned vehicle on official business on or off the installation.

Seat-belt use in the United States has increased dramatically. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, a record 47 percent of Americans now use them. In 1983, before the agency's national safety belt campaign and enactment of state belt laws, that figure was 11 percent.

But if half the population uses seat belts, what about the half that doesn't?

"Their risk of being killed or seriously injured if involved in an accident is double that of belt wearers," said Siebert. He cited National Safety Council research showing that belts are 45 percent effective in preventing deaths and 55 percent effective in preventing disabling injuries.

"In fiscal 1988, 1,083 military persons were killed in accidents, both on and off duty. Of these, 778, or 72 percent, were killed in motor vehicle accidents," said Siebert.

"The same year, 28,755 military members suffered disabling injuries due to motor vehicle accidents," he added. "These are tragic losses that seriously affect defense readiness."

On-base activities available this weekend

QUARRY HEIGHTS (USSOUTHCOM PAO) — The Republic of Panama will hold national elections Sunday (see related articles in this edition), and members of the U.S. forces, civilian employees, contractors, and family members are urged to stay close to home for their safety and welfare. For that purpose, an array of special activities have been scheduled at Fort Clayton, Howard Air Force Base, Albrook Air Force Station, Naval Station Panama Canal, Rodman and the Atlantic community this weekend.

Except for Fort Amador Officers' Club which will be closed Sunday, Officers' and Noncommissioned Officers' Clubs will extend operating hours throughout the election weekend. Other Morale, Welfare and Recreation (MWR) and community facilities will also offer special activities. And — except for food, beverages, child care services and golf course fees — there will be a 20 percent discount on all prices at MWR facilities (bowling lanes, supply and recreation centers, etc.).

Sunday, the Howard Chapel located on Bruja Road, will sponsor a barbeque at 3 p.m., while the Albrook Chapel on Hall St., will have one at 6 p.m. Both events will feature barbequed chicken, refreshments and covered dishes. Picnics will be held at Naval Station Panama Canal Officers' Club bohios at 10 a.m. Saturday and Sunday. The Naval Station Panama Canal gymnasium will be open for volleyball, basketball, softball and racquetball. The trap range will also be open.

For music-lovers, the 79th Army Band will offer a concert at the quadrangle behind Building 95, Fort Clayton, at 4 p.m. Sunday.

AAFES is offering a selection of films this weekend and has added a 12:30 and 3:30 matinee to the Monday billboard at both Howard and Clayton.

Personnel are also advised that the Miraflores Visitors Pavilion will be closed Sunday and Monday.

Because civil disturbances may develop, at a minimum, Personnel Movement Limitation (PML) "Bravo" will be in effect starting Saturday at 6 p.m. and may be restricted further, if necessary. Personnel who do not live on U.S. defense sites or military areas of coordination, should stay near their residence unless traveling to and from their place of duty, and are advised to reduce time in public areas of Panama.

Also, personnel are reminded that local law forbids the sale or transfer of liquor on election day. Therefore, all night clubs, discos, bars and other facilities that sell liquor in Panama will be closed from midnight Saturday, through midnight Sunday.

To further decrease the chances of U.S. forces personnel being unintentionally or unwittingly drawn into political events, all MWR trips or scheduled activities off post have been cancelled from May 6 through May 8.

Personnel are reminded that according to the Panama Canal Treaty, members of the U.S. Forces, the civilian component, designated contractors, and family members "shall abstain from all political activity in the Republic of Panama."

Personnel are encouraged to review scheduled activities in today's "Tropic Times," call their hotline for information (see numbers on this page), and avoid all non-essential travel outside U.S. military installations.

Use hotlines, PMLs for information, safety

QUARRY HEIGHTS (US SOUTHCOM) — A network of Information hotlines is now operating for U.S. forces, their families and PCC employees to provide up-to-date information to the U.S. community about events affecting their safety and well-being during the Panamanian election period.

U.S. Southern Command, component units, and PCC personnel are manning telephone lines to answer questions and dispel rumors with accurate information. Information on Personnel Movement Limitation status and traffic conditions are being provided continuously, 24 hours daily, now until further notice.

Personnel manning the information hotlines will also be accepting calls from individuals with information concerning traffic conditions or other safety related happenings in their areas which may affect the U.S. community. When the information is verified it will be passed to other members of the community.

The Information hotlines will not provide election information, but only information on local situations as they develop and the impact on the U.S. community.

There will be a "Straight Talk Center" staffed by the 24th Composite Wing, Howard Air Force Base, to answer any questions concerning Air Force personnel. The number to call is 284-5650 or 284-6552.

U.S. Navy South, Fort Amador, will provide the Naval community with Hotline information at 252-5649.

In the Fort Clayton area, individuals may call U.S. Army South's Hotline at 287-4636.

The Panama Canal Commission is also assisting concerned callers at 252-7474 or 252-7946. PCC numbers will be operating through 4:15 this afternoon; Saturday, from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday and Monday, from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

SCN will broadcast live radio and TV updates as situations develop that affect U.S. forces personnel. Additionally, SCN runs a recorded PML hotline which provides the current PML status. The number for this 24-hour hotline is 287-3113.

Personnel are reminded that PML Bravo will go into effect at 6 p.m. tomorrow. PMLs are mandatory for all DOD personnel and are advisory for other U.S. citizens. A combination of following the PMLs and using common sense will minimize the possibility of personnel becoming involved in a civil disturbance.

--PML ALPHA (Exercise Caution) There is a potential for some type of disturbance activity. Avoid potentially hostile crowds, meetings and demonstrations. Monitor SCN to learn which areas to avoid and to receive other important details.

--PML BRAVO (Decrease Visibility) Some civil disturbance activity is probable. Reduce the amount of time spent in public areas of Panama. If you do not live on a defense site or military area of coordination stay around your residence unless traveling to and from work or conducting personal business in a non-affected area. Monitor SCN.

--PML CHARLIE (Limit Movement) Major civil disturbances are occurring or will probably occur. Do not go into public areas in Panama except for essential business. Limit your travel to work, a non-affected area, or another defense site or military area of coordination. Monitor SCN closely to avoid trouble areas.

--PML DELTA (Remain in Place) Serious civil disturbances are occurring and will probably continue. If you live on a defense site or military area of coordination, stay there. If you do not live on a defense site or military area of coordination, stay home and be prepared to relocate to a defense site or military area of coordination if told to by U.S. military authorities. Travel to, or through, an area not on a defense site or military area of coordination will be done only when specifically authorized by USSOUTHCOM or a component commander for essential, emergency reasons. Some important areas on certain defense sites or military areas of coordination will be declared "Limited Movement Areas" (LMAs). People living within LMAs will be requested to remain in their homes, and visitors will be requested to stay away. LMAs, safety instructions and other details will be passed over SCN and official channels. (SCN-TV, Channel 8-Pacific, Channel 10 Atlantic) SCN Radio - AM-790 Pacific and 1420 Atlantic, FM-91.5 Pacific and 98.3 Atlantic.)

The above map of Colon is provided for Atlantic side residents, and in the event of a disturbance in Colon, SCN-TV and radio will notify the listening audience of the location. Using the attached map, personnel should locate the general location of the disturbance and avoid that location or area.

Manta Raya '89 meets fly and fight mission

by AIC Tamara S. Jacobson

HOWARD AFB (24 COMPW PA) — Tactical Air Command's mission in 1989 is to fly and fight - and those who don't, support those who do, according to TAC Commander Gen. Robert D. Russ. For 33 personnel assigned to Howard AFB, it was a job description on a recent deployment for training to Manta, Ecuador.

"Manta Raya '89 was a deployment that met or exceeded all of its objectives," said Lt. Col. Dave Robertshaw, detachment commander with 24th Tactical Air Support Squadron. "We were able to deploy a small operations package 600 miles to a strange environment, work under unfamiliar conditions, and do so successfully."

"Just as important was the fact that we were working side by side with our allies in the Latin American theater and exchanging ideas."

During the nine-day deployment, 30 sorties were flown, with only three cancelled due to weather. "Flying training was outstanding, since our forward air controllers (FAC) had the chance to control numerous fighters, with many from the Ecuadorian Air Force (FAE), and on two ranges outside of Panama," stated Capt. John B. McClanahan, deployment deputy commander.

Close air support training, using six pilots and four OA-37 aircraft assigned to TASS, and two tactical air control party (TACP), was conducted with FAE members of Escuadron de Combate, the highly regarded "Dragon" squadron equivalent to TASS. Throughout the week, pilots from both squadrons were seen flying wing to wing and even side by side, as several FAE members took a turn in the right seat of the cockpit.

The exchanges taking place were not just in the air, but down on the ground as 19 maintenance personnel, one life support specialist, one radio operator and an operations administrator were intrigued by how their counterparts kept their pilots in the air.

What they all discovered were many similarities between the two Air Forces, including the mission, and many differences. U.S. personnel arrived back at Howard with a greater appreciation for the Air Force here, and for the FAE. "I was impressed with their Egress Shop," said SSgt. Barbara A. White, aircrew egress systems mechanic with 24th Consolidated Aircraft Maintenance Squadron. "They were limited in equipment, but really used everything they had."

It was just the opposite in the instrument shop, according to TSgt. Ray E. Martinet, avionics instrument technician with 24th CAMS. "They had updated equipment, some better than ours, but didn't know how to use it."

One thing became clear to the deployed personnel, they could take a lesson in appreciation from the Ecuadorians, who accomplish much without the same benefits of manpower, technology and training that they receive.

"The bottom line here is that these guys are working just as hard as we are in the same types of support jobs, with much less," said SSgt. Anthony Guadalupe, production supervisor for the deployment. "You have to be dedicated to do that."

Dedication for the job was apparent when it was discovered that many FAE members have more than one. Capt. Fernando Cano, Ecuadorian project officer for Manta Raya, is typical of the FAE, holding several positions including Public Affairs Officer, Safety Officer, A-37 instructor, ranking official in Escuadron de Combate, and member of the directory of the FAE Officers Club. When he can schedule it in, he can also be found with the first love of the FAE - flying.

Their reverence toward flying can best be understood by the translation of a prayer all FAE pilots hold dear:

"...Aviation is the most elevated of the human species. It's the being that detaches from the earth's vulgarity to take communion with the pureness of the sky and later descend to purify the earth after having received the communion of the infinite..."

The FAE extended their enthusiasm for aviation to the reception of their counterparts in the U.S. Air Force. They published schedules, printed pilot aids, extended diving privileges and did everything possible to make conditions more comfortable for those who weren't used to their climate, food and water.

Unfortunately the flight surgeon was kept busy but it never affected the mission of the deployment according to McClanahan.

"All of those involved deserve credit for a job well done and under difficult circumstances," he said.

"It was our first trip to Ecuador, and a lot of effort was put into it by both countries. The interaction was valuable to both Air Forces. It would be worth it to make it an annual event."

Ecuador great place to calibrate compasses

by AIC Tamara S. Jacobson
HOWARD AFB (24 COMPW PAO) — "Ecuador" is Spanish for equator — the area on Earth exactly midpoint between North and South Pole and which runs continuously east and west. It is also one of two places in South America which has a compass rose to accurately calibrate compasses.

During a recent deployment for training to Manta, Ecuador, six OA-37 aircraft assigned to the 24th Tactical Air Support Squadron here, had compass swings completed on them.

"It seems appropriate that Ecuador would be the place, but actually it has nothing to do with the equator," said TSgt. Ray E. Martinet, avionics instrument technician with 24th Consolidated Aircraft Maintenance Squadron.

"A compass rose is a master compass marked on the ground with exact directional points for north, south, east and west, and has an area 600 feet in diameter cleared of all metal and wiring around it," explained Martinet, who performed the task.

Adjustments are made by using the rose and taking exact readings in opposite directions, beginning with north and south, and calibrating the average differences on the compasses in the aircraft. "The key is the absence of metal, which affects readings. Besides here, Venezuela is the next closest place with a compass rose."

The J-2 Compass System, while not the only navigational aid nor the most sophisticated on the OA-37, its role is not to be overlooked, according to Martinet. Coordinates, targets and direction are dependent upon a navigation system, and the J-2 system aids a pilot in making those operational decisions by supplying an accurate north reference.

For many, a sense of direction is important, but never more so than for pilots sitting in cockpits 20,000 feet up, hoping to reach their destination. They rely on the aircraft's navigation system to get them where they are going — on time and safe.

"Aircraft need to be flying with not more than a two degree variance in the system, and those worked on in Ecuador were all in need of adjustment," said Martinet. "Ecuador provided an excellent opportunity to improve the flying condition of our aircraft here."

Bridge dedication conducted in Costa Rica

by Spec. Frank L. Marquez

PUERTO JIMINEZ, COSTA RICA — Costa Rican President Oscar Arias headed the list of U.S. and Costa Rican dignitaries who attended the bridge dedication ceremony held here April 23.

The ceremony brought to a close three months of bridge and road building by Task Force 36 (mainly the 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, Fort Benning, Ga.) and the Costa Rican government during exercise Camino de La Paz (Road of Peace) '89.

Arias extended his appreciation and that of the Costa Rican people to the American soldiers. "It is much better to build bridges, to bring nations and people together, than to build walls that separate nations and people. That's precisely what you have done," he said to the engineers.

"The people of Costa Rica and the people of the United States are much closer than before," he continued. "I am sure that there is no country in the whole of Latin America that appreciates the United States, your democracy and your people more than the Costa Rican people."

U.S. officials on hand for the event included Deane Hinton, U.S. ambassador to Costa Rica; Maj. Gen. Bernard Loeffke, commander of U.S. Army South; and Col. Douglas R. Church, commander of Fort Benning's 36th Engineer Group and of Task Force 36, which built the bridges.

Costa Rican officials present included, besides Arias, Guillermo Constenla, Minister of Public Works and Transportation, and Hernan Garron, Minister of Public Security. Personnel from those ministries, as well as from the Ministry of Health, played an integral part in Camino de la Paz.

More than 400 soldiers from Task Force 36 participated in the ceremony, held at the 290-foot bridge over the El Tigre River.

School children and area residents were here too, along with the 79th Army Band and the U.S. Army South Chorus, both of which flew in from Panama for the occasion.

In his remarks, Church noted that the members of Task Force 36 were "soldiers, but soldiers dedicated to peace and construction, not war and destruction."

During the past three months, the Fort Benning engineers, with support from units stationed in Panama and in the United States, constructed seven Bailey bridges over rivers from Rincon to Puerto Jimenez on the remote Osa Peninsula. After those bridges were finished, they rebuilt an eight-foot-long bridge in the village of Bahia Rincon. The bridges will make transit possible when the tropical rainy season floods the rivers.

The engineers also built 3.2 kilometers of unpaved road and improved 17 kilometers of the existing road.

During the bridge and road construction, civil engineers of the Air National Guard built seven one- or two-room schools and two community centers. They also made desks and installed blackboards for the schools. Officers of the 43rd Engineer Battalion built a lunchroom for another school.

Also incidental to the bridge and road project were two medical training exercises, in which first the 142nd Medical Battalion of Fort Clayton, Panama, and then the 5501st U.S. Army Hospital, an Army reserve unit from Minneapolis/St. Paul, Minn., provided medical and dental treatment to about 3,000 people in six nearby communities.

After the speeches, the ribbon cutting, and the first official crossing of the longest bridge built by the engineers, the community hosted a day-long celebration for the soldiers and local residents, including a concert by a Costa Rican "salsa" band, a rodeo and an evening dance.

Now that their task is completed, the engineers and support personnel are heading for home. All are expected to return by mid-May.

After the ribbon cutting, a long line of vehicles inaugurates the 290-foot bridge over the Rio Tigre.

FORT KOBBE, Panama —Some people get up with the proverbial chickens, but PFC Sylmarie Cajigas goes to bed after the rooster retires and gets up before he crows again.

It's a catchy line Cajigas might use in a letter home, but there's more than that about life here to tell her family.

Cajigas, a member of the 3678th Ordnance Company, Army National Guard, Levittown, Toa Baja, Puerto Rico, has been wrestling bulldozers, rollers and scrapers for nearly two months.

She neglected to tell her mother that she'd be operating heavy equipment on a roadbuilding project when she accepted a 60-day tour of duty here.

"My mother wouldn't have understood why I wanted to do something like that, so I never explained what I was doing in Panama," Cajigas said. "Now, she'll have to hear it from me before the story comes out."

More than one person has done a double take after learning the slightly-built individual manipulating the machinery with consummate skill was in reality a female.

She's the only female on the project operating heavy equipment.

For the record, Mother, her supervisor, SFC Raymond Bronson, said he'd like a few more just like her.

Originally trained as a crane operator, Cajigas took time out from college studies to come here to be trained on heavy equipment.

Bronson, a platoon sergeant with the 15th Engineer Company, 536th Engineer Battalion, said she's a natural.

"She has what it takes to be a super operator," said Bronson. "It normally takes up to two weeks to get good with a scraper, but she mastered it in one week."

He asked Cajigas if she'd be willing to extend her tour 30 days, but she needed to be back for classes at the University of Puerto Rico where she's majoring in biology with emphasis on sports medicine.

Cajigas said she had always been something of the oddball in her family, so being the only female operating heavy equipment on the project hadn't made her uncomfortable. Her co-workers didn't seem to mind either.

"She's doing a great job, and in fact has become one of the better operators among all the new people in the unit," PFC Howard Hord said. "And that's quite an accomplishment considering she had no prior training."

Cajigas, who joined the Army National Guard two years ago, said she didn't want to be sitting around on college break and jumped at the chance to go to Panama to train in a new military occupational skill.

It's an interesting experience but not as glamorous as it may sound, she said.

Active army and reserve component personnel are building a 3.5 mile road around Howard Air Force Base and Fort Kobbe which will allow commercial traffic between Panama City and Vera Cruz to bypass the military reservations.

"It takes work, a lot of hard work, to get the job done," said Cajigas. "We have a rigorous schedule and I just remind myself that I'm part of the team and it has to be done."

The workday runs from sunrise to sunset, six days per week.

"We are trying to beat the rainy season and we're looking to a June 1 completion," Bronson said.

His platoon was assigned the "cutting and filling" portion of the roadbuilding project.

Aside from the precision required to operate heavy equipment while trying to avoid other pieces of equipment and rolling stock, the biggest challenges facing operators here are the sun and bees.

Cajigas unearthed a large colony of bees and they attacked in swarms. No, she was not seriously injured.

But be forewarned.

Jokes about bees in her bonnet will not be appreciated.

AF evaluation system undergoes change

RANDOLPH AFB (AFMPC) -- The revised Enlisted Evaluation System went into effect May 1 and with it are bound to be many questions.

During December 1987, the Air Force chief of staff chartered an Airman Performance Report study group to examine the system from top to bottom.

The APR had not been changed substantially in 20 years. The task was to identify problems, propose solutions and make recommendations. No assumption was made that the APR was "broken," rather the charter was to look for ways to improve the system.

After data gathering from many sources and analysis of information collected by the APR study group, the revised Enlisted Evaluation System was created and approved by the Secretary of the Air Force for implementation May 1.

Following are frequently asked questions and answers regarding the EES:

Q: What change from the APR to the EES?

A: The EES was adopted for several reasons. First there was a perceived need for more feedback on job expectations and performance. Secondly, due to inflation of APR numerical ratings, indorsement levels and narrative comments, it was becoming difficult to identify top performers. Third, it was determined that the APR was more of an administrative burden than it should be and, finally, the APR was not fully used in the promotion process.

Promotions to airman first class to senior airman are on a non-competitive basis and indorsements are not used in the promotion process until master sergeants compete for promotion to senior master sergeant.

Q: How did you know these problems existed?

A: The APR study group interviewed numerous commanders, senior enlisted advisors, first sergeants, promotion board members, functional managers, professional military education students and ratees. There was also an analysis of rating and indorsement data. In addition, a survey was conducted of more than 6,900 officers and airmen.

Q: What are the major changes?

A: Formal feedback sessions will be mandatory for technical sergeants and below, and highly encouraged for master sergeants and above. In addition, reports on most airmen basic, airmen, and airmen first class with less than 20 months' total active federal military service are no longer required. Indorsements for technical sergeants and below will be capped at the rater's rate. Final voluntary indorsements for master sergeants through chief master sergeants will be a maximum of the senior rater (usually the wing commander or equivalent). The first field grade officer in the chain can close out the report. There will be no general officer indorsements unless the general officer is the senior rater or in the immediate rating chain. There will also be a new regulation and forms with revised scales.

Q: What will the EES do for the average enlisted person?

A: First, the Air Force is increasing the involvement of senior NCOs and others immediately in the supervisory chain. Raters will be closer to their ratees and will have direct knowledge of duty performance. Second, the Air Force sees feedback as a big plus. With this process the top quality enlisted force will get even better. Ratees will know what their boss expects, strong and weak areas, and how to improve. Finally, the job of producing evaluation reports has been made easier with fewer and simpler forms, fewer evaluators, and less need to send reports with justification to a faraway headquarters. This will free up time to work on each unit's mission.

Q: When is the change effective?

A: The system went into effect May 1. Most of the changes will be effective then with these exceptions:

- EPRs on E-4s begin Oct. 1, 1989.
- EPRs on E-5s begin Jan. 1, 1990.
- EPRs on E-6s begin Jan. 1, 1990.
- EPRs on E-7s begin Oct. 1, 1989.
- EPRs on E-8s begin Aug. 1, 1989.
- EPRs on E-9s begin Aug. 1, 1989.

Q: Why the phase-in?

A: The phase-in is being used to maintain fairness.

All records during the first promotion cycle after the May 1 implementation will contain only APRs. This allows a full year for EPRs to be generated naturally.

Q: How will the EES affect the Weighted Airman Promotion System?

A: The EES will not change the WAPS process. The same factors will be considered and 135 points will still be given for evaluation reports.

Q: What if my senior rater only signs deserving reports but another rater signs them all?

A: The whole issue boils down to integrity. Raters must be willing to identify top performers from weak performers. In addition, senior Air Force leadership is expected to provide guidance that will minimize large indorsement variations and keep equity in the system.

Finally, indorsement data will be tracked at AFMPC and provided to the major commands. This will go a long way toward avoiding the problem.

Q: What should be talked about in a feedback session?

A: The performance feedback worksheet outlines the topics and Air Force Pamphlet 39-15, USAF Guide to the Airman and NCO Feedback System, describes in more detail what the topics mean. In general, feedback should focus on duty performance: what the rater's expectations are, how the ratee is meeting those expectations (positive and negative), specific examples to explain ratings, and ways to improve.

Q: Will I be receiving more information on the new system?

A: AFP 39-15 is available at all publishing distribution offices and describes the "How to" of performance feedback. Briefings on the EES are being conducted at bases all over the world. The new regulation, AFR 39-62, Enlisted Personnel -- Enlisted Evaluation System -- will be available this month. The April edition of Airman Magazine also has an article on the EES.

Guatemalans, Costa Ricans enjoy MAC Band

Story and photos
by Capt. Glen Lee Davis Sr.
QUARRY HEIGHTS (US

SOUTHCOM) — Capacity crowds in Guatemala and Costa Rica were treated to one of the premiere U.S.

military bands. Sponsored by U.S.
Southern Command, the Military
Airlift Command Band from Scott
AFB, Illinois, lead by Maj. Bruce Gilkes, toured major population centers from April 3-13.

The MAC Band is actually two bands: the Show Band, a 45-piece concert band, and Starlifter, a seven-piece rock band. Their audiences included foreign military personnel, cadets, students, U.S. and European tourists, and general audiences.

Some of the notable guests of the band were the U.S. Ambassadors to Costa Rica and Guatemala, the Governor of the Province of Heredia, Costa Rica, the President of the Guatemalan Society for the Performing Arts, and many flag-grade military officers.

This was the band's second goodwill tour. Last year band members learned Latin American survival techniques which they again put to good use while on the road.

An estimated 25,550 people attended the 12 band concerts in Guatemala and Costa Rica.

Many local schools used the concerts to expose their students to American culture. A common follow-up assignment for students was to write a thank you note to a favorite band member in English.
Enough letters have been received to date to keep vocalist Normia Carter busy writing for the next six months.

Bush says U.S. won't recognize rigged balloting

WASHINGTON (AP) - President George Bush called Tuesday for all U.S. allies to condemn anticipated massive election fraud in Panama, where the administration predicts Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega will steal Sunday's vote.

"All nations that value democracy, that understand free and fair elections are the very heart of their democratic system should speak out against election fraud in Panama," Bush said in remarks to the Council of the Americas, an organization of business people. "That means the democracies of Europe, as well as nations in this hemisphere struggling to preserve the democratic systems they've fought so hard to put in place."

In a speech touching on the economic, political and social situation throughout the hemisphere, the president also said that unless Nicaragua's leftist government changes the "ominous" actions leading to its elections next February, "It will be a tragic setback, and a dangerous one. The consolidation of tyranny will not be peace. It will be a crisis waiting to happen."

He said Paraguay, where Monday's elections led to victory for Gen. Andres Rodriguez, "is on its way to joining the democratic mainstream."

"We congratulate President-elect Rodriguez on his electoral victory and look forward to working with him," Bush said.

Various U.S. officials have claimed that Noriega and his supporters plan steal the election through vote fraud. The Panamanians claim Washington has funneled 10 million dollars to the opposition and plans to take over Panama militarily if the opposition fails to win.

Bush continued to step up the administration's anti-Noriega rhetoric. He repeated his promise that the United States "will not recognize the results of a fraudulent election engineered to keep Noriega in power."

Noriega, commander of Panama's defense forces and de facto ruler, is backing Carlos Duque for president. An opposition coalition is backing Guillermo Endara.

"A free and fair vote in the elections," Bush said, would enable Panama "to take a significant step towards ending the international isolation and internal economic crisis brought on by the Noriega regime."

But, added Bush, "It is evident that the regime is ready to resort to massive election fraud in order to remain in power."

In Nicaragua, where the Bush administration is supplying non-lethal aid to the Contra rebels until the elections next year, the president blasted the election laws recently passed by the Sandinista-controlled national assembly.

He accused the Sandinistas of imposing a "stacked deck" against their opposition, by unilaterally setting the rules, giving excessive enforcement powers to the Interior Ministry, and barring private ownership of television stations.

Bush praised the recent elections in El Salvador and said the new president, Alfredo Cristiani, "has our support."

Opposition welcomes fair election efforts

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — A senior opposition leader Tuesday welcomed U.S. efforts to ensure fairness in next week's Panamanian presidential elections but cautioned against possible military intervention.

"We want the United States to support democracy in Panama," said opposition vice presidential candidate Guillermo Ford, who praised President Bush for helping bring international pressure on the Panamanian government.

Bush accused Panamanian strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega of plotting "massive election fraud" during Sunday's election, and urged European allies and Latin American democracies to "speak out against election fraud in Panama."

"Let me be clear," Bush told a news conference. "The United States will not recognize the results of a fraudulent election engineered simply to keep Noriega in power."

But Ford, a member of the Democratic Opposition Civilist Alliance, rejected the possibility of U.S. military intervention to oust Noriega even if Sunday's elections are fraudulent.

"We don't want to use Panama's special relations with the United States to solve our problems," Ford said.

In Guatemala City, Guatemalan President Vinicio Cerezo Arevalo said Central American leaders were sending a letter to the Panamanian government calling for fairness in Sunday's polls.

"In this letter we indicate that, God willing, there will be free elections that respect the will of the people," Cerezo told a news conference. "This will be good for both Panama and peace in Central America."

Opposition parties have accused the Panamanian government of preparing to steal the election and of monopolizing the country's news media in favor of Carlos A. Duque, presidential candidate of the pro-government Coalition for National Liberation.

Noriega is seen as the real power behind Panama's civilian government, which ousted former president Eric Arturo Delvalle on Feb. 26, 1988, after he tried to fire Noriega.

The U.S. government still recognizes Delvalle as Panama's legitimate president and has indicted Noriega for alleged drug-trafficking in the United States.

ADOC charges Noriega with padding voter lists

by Douglas Tweedale

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — Opposition leaders Wednesday accused Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega and his supporters of padding voter registration lists and intimidating voters in an attempt to steal presidential elections.

The charges by the presidential and vice presidential candidates of the Civil Democratic Opposition Alliance, known by its Spanish acronym as ADOC, were made as tension between Noriega's supporters and opponents grew, with both sides planning campaign rallies and accusing the other of fraud.

Opposition activists shouting anti-Noriega slogans and waving flags began gathering Wednesday morning in downtown Panama City for the alliance's final campaign rally before Sunday's presidential elections.

The pro-government National Liberation Coalition, known by its Spanish initials as COLINA, headed by longtime Noriega associate Carlos Duque, said more than 500,000 people would attend its own final campaign rally Thursday.

Guillermo Endara, ADOC's presidential candidate, told reporters Wednesday the government ordered buses and taxis off the streets to prevent opposition supporters from getting to the rally, but said, "It will be a show of our strength anyway."

Ricardo Arias Calderon, the opposition alliance's vice presidential candidate, told a news conference, "The fraud is being prepared."

Arias Calderon said election officials loyal to Noriega, who as chief of the military is the country's most powerful leader, have padded voter registration lists with thousands of duplicated names and the names of dead people.

He also charged that potential opposition supporters have been assigned to polling stations far from where they live.

The Bush administration has warned of possible fraud in Panama, and many diplomats and political observers predict Sunday's vote will be altered to give Duque a narrow victory.

Duque and government officials have denied the fraud charges, saying the opposition is trying to discredit the elections to offset a victory by COLINA. For days, pro-Noriega newspapers have been filled with predictions of a Duque win.

But an independent opinion poll released Tuesday showed the opposition favored to defeat COLINA by 61 percent of the vote to 27 percent. Duque's campaign has not released any polling data.

The opposition candidates said their victory would make it impossible for the government to impose a Duque victory through fraud, but said they were worried of possible violence Sunday.

"We hope the margin of our victory will be such that it will neutralize the attempted fraud, as long as it is not accompanied by crude forms of repression," Arias Calderon said. "If there is repression ... nobody can foresee what will happen."

Speculation has centered on what the opposition will do if they feel they have been cheated.

Endara said "We will not hide, we don't know what will happen, but we will be leading the people in their struggle."

Guillermo Ford, a second vice-presidential candidate for the opposition, said there would be protests, but ruled out violence.

Poll indicates 61 percent favor opposition

WASHINGTON (USIA) — Opposition presidential candidate Guillermo Endara is the choice of 61 percent of Panamanians, compared to only 27 percent for the government candidate, Carlos Duque, according to a recent Univision poll.

Endara heads the ADOC Coalition and Duque is running with the Colina Coalition. Hildebrando Nicosia of the PPA received three percent in the poll, and nine percent of the poll ballots were invalidated.

However, the poll, done as a prelude to the May 7 election, showed that few Panamanians are expecting a fair and open election, with 61 percent saying there will be fraud. Only 25 percent expect an honest election.

Nearly 60 percent said the opposition has been treated unfairly by the government during the campaign, and over half do not believe the government will honor an opposition victory.

Former U.S. presidents Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford are planning to go to Panama as leaders of an international delegation of election observers from the council of Freely-Elected Heads of Government. Carter has said he hopes "the council's presence will contribute to a climate that will permit free and fair elections and will encourage all Panamanians to exercise their right to vote and to determine their own future."

In the poll, over 60 percent said they believe the presence of foreign observers would decrease the incidence of election fraud during the election.

The poll, conducted by Bendiken and Schroth, a Washington-based research firm for Univision, asked 1,312 Panamanians in 21 cities to cast secret ballots with their choice for president. It was carried out between April 11 and 18. Other results of the poll show:

—Four out of five Panamanians think things are going badly in their country, and 62 percent believe Panamanian leader Manuel Noriega is doing a bad job running the country.

—Nearly half of those polled believe Gen. Noriega is seriously involved in drug trafficking, and Panama's drug problem has increased since Noriega came to power. Over half believe that high officials in the Panamanian military have enriched themselves through drug trafficking.

—Nearly half think the United States will not turn over the Panama Canal to Panama in 1999 unless the country involvement of the military.

Balboa High School to present 'Wizard of Oz'

by Johanna Leffler

The Balboa High School Drama department will be presenting the musical version of L. Frank Baum's The Wizard of Oz May 12, 13, 19, and 20 at 7 p.m. with matinees May 13 and 20 at 2 p.m.

Directed by English and Drama teacher Richard Johnston, Mr. J, and high school junior Noelle Woodrow, the show will be the biggest school production ever at BHS with a cast of over 60 and consisting of six sets.

Cast members include students from kindergarten through twelfth grade. Although pleased with the audition turnouts, the bad part about them was not being able to cast all the talented kids, said Mr. J.

However, a large cast does present difficulties. As the otherwise smoothly running rehearsals progress, Mr. J must tackle the problem of coordinating the cast and sets during scene changes, in addition to the building of all the sets.

In spite of the hard work involved building these sets, the results are rewarding and students are diligently staying after school to help out.

Among those is sophomore Aaron Izicki, the wizard. "I love everything about the play but mostly the music."

Music coordinators include Dottie

Nelson, in charge of vocals, Wilma Monlouis directing the orchestra, and Mitch Swanson, the "Munchkin master," responsible for teaching the Munchkins their musical parts.

One Munchkin farmer, fifth-grader Ginger Corbett said she is enjoying herself because "I have lots of lines."

Other BHS faculty members involved with the show include Industrial Arts teacher Rafael Chen; English teacher Sydney Corbett, who serves as an advisor and all around handyperson; French and English teacher Cynthia Piper, in charge of publicity; and Art teachers Barbara Reeves, Marty Kober and David Young. In addition, others involved are community volunteers Dan Goldsworthy, technical director and Linda Dahlstrom, choreographer; Curundu Jr. High Art teacher Joan Beasley and local artist Al Sprague.

Young Atlantic 'athletes' perform at Mini-Olympics

by SFC Marshall B. Wilkins

(USARSO PAO) -- Billowy white clouds were visible in the blue sky above as pairs of anxious eyes looked upward. Then a steady chorus of "ooohs" and "aaahs" erupted from the crowd when the tiny figures of two men hurtled through the sky enveloped in pink smoke.

From three miles above, the red and blue parachutes slowly brought the men to the ground.

The crowd was comprised of children, parents and teachers of the Child Development Center who gathered outside the Margarita complex April 26 to watch a free fall demonstration by the Jumping Ambassadors of the 3rd Battalion, 7th Special Forces Group (Airborne).

The demonstration preceded the 1989 Mini-Olympics which CDC hosted to celebrate the Month of the Military Child.

A parade was held after the free fall demonstration. Each class wore colored shirts and represented a country.

Countries represented were: Costa

Rica, Germany, Japan, Panama and the United States.

Following the parade the children paid their respects to the American flag, then released dozens of colorful balloons into the sky which signaled the beginning of the games. CDC Director Cynthia Johnson said the "Olympics" were coordinated by preschool teachers Theresa Herring and Mary Mouw.

Activities included; the giraffe toss, turtle race, tug-of-war, hurdles, high jump and a train ride (courtesy of the Mount Hope Fire Department).

McGruff, the crime dog from the Atlantic provost marshal's office, was also on hand to greet the children. He participated in the tug-of-war and hurdles.

A drawing was held and the winner of the McGruff doll was Amanda Digby. Twenty other youngsters also won McGruff T-shirts.

The Mini-Olympics brought laughter and smiles to the faces of children, parents and teachers, and recognition to the Atlantic community's military children.

U.N. ambassador answers RP charges to resolve their differences peacefully. Tragically, however, the military dictatorship of General Noriega, which employs Mr. Ritter, will not permit a free and fair election nor will it permit open debate on the country's future.

We are discussing Panama before the Security Council because the regime will not permit a free and open debate to take place among the Panamanian people in Panama.

The solution to Panama's lack of democracy does not lie here in the Security Council. The solution lies in Panama.

The people of Panama should be able to vote freely. The people of Panama should be able freely to debate the issues of their election.

As the countries of the Western Hemisphere, indeed the world, move toward democracy and greater openness, Panama lags behind and is now moving in the opposite direction.

The international community should not now be asked to accord legitimacy to a regime which is unwilling to face the judgment of its own people. That would be a travesty. Nor should the military regime be allowed to conceal its own unpopularity and illegitimacy by alleging a plot by the United States with the sole intention of deflecting world attention away from Panama's basic problem: its lack of freedom and its apparent intention to conduct fraudulent elections.

Because Mr. Ritter's government cannot face being judged by its own citizens, it has been systematically subverting the electoral process. Illustrative of the activities which the regime is taking to control the results of the May 7th elections are the following steps:

- One, manipulation of voter lists, including the printing of false lists, changing data in voting registries and last minute changes in the assignment of voters to polling locations.
- Two, manipulation of cedula, individual identity cards required for voting, including invalidating the voter registration identity cards of opposition supporters and the issuing of duplicate voter cards to regime supporters to permit multiple voting.

- Three, developing plans to disenfranchise large numbers of voters at polling booths; and,

- Four, working out deliberate arrangements to misprint ballots and to mix ballots from different polling booths in order to invalidate the vote count.

Among the other actions to influence the electoral process which the regime in Panama has taken are:

- Limiting observers of the elections only to those accorded "official" status by the regime and denying entry into Panama during the election period of other interested international observers and organizations;

- By reserving on a priority basis and withholding from use all rooms at hotels, the regime seeks to deprive visitors and observers of accommodations;

- Placing restrictions on the entry of foreign journalists;

- Denying the use of commercial rental vehicles to anyone not authorized by the regime in order to prevent travel within Panama for the purpose of evaluating the electoral process.

The international community should not become part of an effort by the Noriega regime to deflect attention from itself through bringing what is in essence a problem with its unfair and fraudulent elections to this body. Instead, the Noriega regime should immediately restore the minimum conditions for free elections. These include; freedom of expression, freedom of assembly, and personal freedom. The regime should also permit full international and press monitoring of the elections.

Panamanians should of course have an opportunity to resolve Panama's political and economic crisis. But a manipulated and stolen electoral process will only compound Panama's troubles. The United States remains firmly committed to supporting the efforts of the Panamanian people to restore genuine, civilian democracy. We also remain fully committed to the Panama Canal Treaties. All friends of the people of Panama should affirm the right of their people to realize their aspirations for democratic government and to rejoice the community of free nations

Drug tests: Afraid of a false positive?

by Evelyn D. Harris

(AFIS) — You're not a drug abuser. But when you found out that you are in a testing-designated position, you definitely became nervous.

Terror is an accurate word to describe your feelings when you were told to go to the laboratory for your drug test. After all, you've read the stories about people whose careers were ruined by a false positive on a drug test. You've heard that if you take prescription drugs or over-the-counter allergy pills or even if you eat poppyseed bagels, you'll test as positive as a hardened addict.

Calm down. According to Navy Cdr. John Irving. "If you are not abusing illegal drugs, you have no reason to fear the tests." He is acting chief of the Drug Testing Section, Office of Workplace Initiatives at the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

The Department of Defense uses only military and certified civilian drug-testing labs. To ensure accuracy, DOD regularly sends special coded "dummy" specimens through them. If a lab comes up with even one false positive on the dummy specimens, it loses its certification.

DOD drug screening involves a two-step process. The first is a screening test, where specimens are analyzed to indicate the presence of drugs. Specimens that test positive in the screening phase are retested to confirm beyond doubt that the urine does contain the drug in question. The second test involves a procedure called gas chromatography/mass spectrometry. Using it, the possibility of obtaining false positives is virtually eliminated. In fact, the results of urine tests using these procedures have been accepted and sustained in the federal courts.

Job applicants and a percentage of DOD civilian employees in testing-designated positions are being screened for THC (the active ingredient in marijuana), cocaine, PCP, opiates and amphetamines. Unless an individual agency wants to do so, there will be no test for barbiturates.

Irving said that certain over-the-counter drugs could produce a false positive in the initial screening. These drugs include some antihistamines and Vicks-brand inhalers. However, recent improvements in the screening test have reduced the likelihood of this happening, and the more accurate second test, the gas chromatography/mass spectrometry, usually eliminates the problem.

However, as a safeguard, the medical review officer will talk to individuals who test positive before their agency is notified of the results. During the interview, the individual can demonstrate that the positive finding is due to a valid prescription the result is sent back to the agency as negative.

Eating poppyseeds — even in normal amounts — can result in a positive screening. Therefore, positive readings for opiates are routinely retested to look for a metabolite found only in heroin. As a further protection, the medical review officer routinely retested to look for a metabolite required to verify other clinical evidence of drug abuse before the individual's opiate-positive results are sent back to the agency.

Music fans have nothing to fear either. Irving said the detectable cutoff level for THC is such that the specimen from a person attending a rock concert or being in a room where marijuana has been smoked would not come up positive in a drug Drinking an herbal tea called "Inca" could result in a positive test for cocaine. The tea has been off the market since 1987 and is prohibited in the United States because it is made from the coca leaf. However, said Irving, if someone "found some in the attic" and drank it, the medical review officer could determine if that was the cause of the positive test.

"The amount of cocaine in the urine from drinking herbal tea would be very low, and the individual's sample would probably be declared negative. But if there was high level, the officer wouldn't buy it — the test result would be positive," said Irving.

You may have heard that drug tests discriminate against blacks because they mistake melanin, the substance responsible for skin pigmentation and present in urine, for marijuana. Scientists have been unable to replicate the research that was responsible for this concern and thus have concluded that it was faulty. The conclusion: Testing will not mistake melanin for marijuana.

What if you're not afraid of a false positive but are offended by an "invasion of privacy?" You can lay that concern to rest as well. "There will be no direct observation of civilians while they are giving their sample," said Irving.

Planning prevents accidental food poisoning

by Evelyn D. Harris

(AFIS) — For most people, the word "picnic" evokes fond memories — good food, good friends, games and music shared in a beautiful outdoor setting. But anyone who has gotten sick from eating improperly handled food may not have such glowing memories.

A little planning before the picnic is the best way to ensure that food is safe as well as tasty. Here are some tips from military and Department of Agriculture food-safety experts:

- When shopping for food, buy perishable items such as meat for food, buy perishable items such as meat last. Get them into a refrigerator or portable cooler as soon as possible. Never leave perishables in a hot car while you run other errands.

- If you are going to use perishable food quickly, refrigerate it. Otherwise, freeze it.

- Don't thaw meat on the counter. Thaw in the refrigerator or in your microwave oven. If meat is not completely defrosted when you're ready to leave, just cook it longer at the picnic.

- Cook everything thoroughly. Cook pork chops and ribs until the pink is gone; poultry should have no red near the bone. Steak and hamburger are safer when cooked until well-done.

- Clean your hands before cooking and after tasting. If there's no water faucet, use disposable handwipes. Don't reuse the same utensils and dishes that touched raw meat for serving.

- Keep hot foods above 140 degrees and cold foods below 45 degrees Fahrenheit. Invest in a thermometer to check temperature range.

- Keep perishable foods in a cooler as long as possible. Pack the cooler with plenty of ice or use an ice pack. Try to keep it in the shade.

- The high-acid content of commercial mayonnaise actually helps protect foods from spoiling. But homemade mayonnaise, if made without vinegar or lemon juice, could be risky.

- Keep food covered to avoid exposing it to flies and common bacteria.

- If you were gone no more than five hours and your perishables were kept on ice except when cooked and served, you may be able to save the leftovers. But if you have any doubts about a food, throw it out.

Poison-proof your home

Military hospitals in the United States and overseas have the equipment trained staffs necessary to treat poisonings. But prevention is much better than cure. Here are some tips that may help you avoid a call to the poison hotline or a trip to the emergency room:

- Poison-proof your home if you have children or if children visit regularly by keeping poisons out of reach — preferably locked up.

- Poison experts no longer consider the poinsettia plant toxic, but some other common houseplants most garden shops can tell you which plants to avoid if you have young children.

- Never put kerosene, antifreeze or other poisons in cups, glasses milk or soft drinks bottles. Never transfer poisonous products to a container without a child-resistant closure.

- Keep purses, briefcases and diaper bags closed when children are around. They may contain medicine, cosmetics or other items little hands could get into.

- If you have children, don't leave alcoholic drinks around. After a party, empty drink glasses before you go to bed.

- Buy a bottle of syrup of ipecac, and keep it where you can find it fast. Don't forget to tell your baby sitter where it is. Post the number of the nearest poison-control center or emergency room by the phone; use it if poisoning is suspected. Don't give ipecac unless told to do so.

- Never tell a child medicine is "candy."

- Since 1971, the United States government has regulated the amount of lead permissible in paints. Old houses and furniture could still have enough lead in paint flakes to cause lead poisoning, so be careful.

- Adults can accidentally poison themselves, too. Always take medicine in good light. Never take someone else's medicine. Throw away medicine that has passed its expiration date; old medicine can become toxic.

154th Signal provides essential commo support

by PFC A. Scott Lawrence

FORT CLAYTON (USARSO PAO) — "You can talk about us, but you can't talk without us," said Sgt. Earnest Downs, team chief for a multichannel communications team from Signal Support Company, 154th Signal Battalion, Ft. Clayton.

While on the 193rd Brigade Field Training Exercise, earlier this month, the 154th supported the brigade with communications.

The 154th not only made available station-to-station communication within the FTX sites, but also set up communication links which allow people in the field to call people on post using commercial phones.

"This enables people in the field to receive support from individuals on the other end of a commercial link," said Downs. "If a soldier needed to talk to someone on Ft. Davis we could set up the connection and that soldier could talk person-to-person on a military phone in the field."

The phones are not only used for supporting the mission. They also serve an important role in keeping soldiers informed if a family crisis should arise.

"This type of communication is necessary for the accomplishment of the mission, Downs said. "If there were a personal emergency and a soldier needed to be contacted, this is the fastest way to reach him."

Since units in the field want communication for the duration of the exercise, signal ends up spending more time in the field.

They must arrive in the field early and set up so units can communicate as soon as they arrive. Signal is also the last unit out so communications can be accessed right up to the last minute, if necessary.

As Spec. Andre Sykes, assistant team chief, said, "We are always the first out and the last to pack it in."

Volunteers 'light up our lives'

HOWARD AFB (24 COMPW-PAO) — Is a paycheck the measure of the value of work? Fortunately for the military community here, there's a group of individuals who don't feel money measures everything. They are called Family Services Volunteers, and they work for free — but not for nothing.

More than 700,000 volunteers provide millions of hours of service annually to the welfare of military and civilian personnel. Locally, in the past six months, 18 volunteers under the direction of Family Services Coordinator Melodie Miller, have contributed 4100 hours of time, energy and talents toward making this a better place to live.

Where can these volunteers be seen? Every Monday and Thursday they can be found on the flightline, meeting and caring for children of incoming personnel while parents clear customs and baggage. They can be seen carrying baskets of baby items and handmade gifts to new parents. And, they can always be found at the Family Services office in Building 47, manning the phones and stocking the loan closet.

Family Services also provides information pertaining to the base and surrounding area, and maintains information packets on nearly every U.S. Air Force base in the world.

Not to forget the younger members, they coordinate "Kids in Touch With Kids," a program which helps children find a pen pal and friend before they arrive or leave Panama. Volunteers fill a need in the community, and were recently recognized for their contributions during National Volunteer Week, April 9 through 15. The theme this year was "Volunteers Light Up Our Lives."

At an awards banquet held April 11 at the Howard Officers' Club, Family Services volunteers who brighten the community here, were honored. Certificates of Recognition were given to Maria Ojeda, Cathy Porter, Glenn Porter, Cindy Roldan, Herman Smith, Helen Timm, Wendy Tovado and Diana Turner. One-year pins were awarded to JoAnn Bookwalter, Brenda Merchant, Dede Mix, Cathy Porter and Helen Timm.

Two-year pins were presented to Maria Ojeda and Diana Turner, with Family Services Emblems awarded to Mark Miller and Glenn Crane.

Receiving hour guards were Kim Schwark, 100; Penny Crane, 250, 500, 750 and 1,000; Dede Mix, 500; Kathy Johnson, 750; Brenda Merchant, 750; JoAnn Bookwalter, 1,250; Sima Zaldivar, 1,750; and Melodie Miller, 2,000, 2,250 and 2,500.

Volunteer of the Quarter, January through March, was presented to Brenda Merchant, with top honors of Volunteer of the Year, 1988, awarded to Mrs. Miller by 24th Composite Wing Commander Col. Lansford E. Trapp Jr.

Wives club seeks new members

HOWARD AFB (24TH COMPW/PA) — The Howard/Albrook NCO Wives Club is presently seeking members for their organization. According to Jeanne Musick, NCOWC president, "The club is a source of learning, laughter and goodwill to all those people who will open their hearts to us."

The new philosophy of the NCOWC is that membership is the "key" that unlocks the door to any good club. "There are many women out there holding the key and don't realize it," Musick explained. "The word needs to be spread that the NCO Wives Club is here for all women."

Some of the things that the club offers are craft sessions, guest speakers with information about the Panama area, and sessions discussing the issues facing women in the community each day.

The club also supports several charities in the community, gives a helping hand to the area Girl and Boy Scout organizations, and is a strong voice in the base populace through the Howard Base Spouse Advisory Committee.

"We will continue to support each and every one of these organizations, as they are a part of our everyday lives," she said. "The Howard/Albrook NCO Wives Club is a wonderful tool each of us can use to aid our community, learn about our host country, and maybe even learn a little bit about ourselves and know that we can make a difference."

The club meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. at the Howard NCO Club. The dues are $1.25 per month or $12 per year. For more information on NCOWC activities call Musick at 284-3681 or Karen Boyd at 284-5680.

Performance feedback required of supervisors for tech sergeants, below

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFMPC) — Supervisors must provide performance feedback for all technical sergeants and below within 120 days of the May 1 start date of the new enlisted evaluation system.

The feedback system was established in response to enlisted people's desires for more feedback on supervisors' job expectations and how they are actually performing the work.

Formal, written feedback is mandatory for technical sergeants and below and "highly encouraged" for master sergeants and above.

Feedback does not replace formal counseling for serious problems. It is intended to improved individual performance by telling the ratee that the job expectations are and how the ratee's performance is meeting those expectations.

Feedback will consist of the rater filling out a simple handwritten form, followed by face-to-face discussion between the rater and ratee. The original copy of the form will be given to the ratee to enhance objectivity and candor.

Raters may keep copies of the form for their own records, for future feedback sessions and for preparation of enlisted performance reports. Raters may not use the form for any other purpose nor show it to anyone else.

Feedback must be provided by the rater who actually writes the performance report.

Separate feedback forms will be used for airmen and NCOs. Air Force Form 931, Airman Performance Feedback worksheet, is designed specifically to assist raters in helping first-term airmen adjust to the service.

The NCO form, Air Force Form 932, will be more specific, focusing on leadership and managerial performance.

After the 120-day initial phase-in period, mandatory formal feedback must begin within 30 days of an individual receiving a new assignment, change of rating official, or the closeout of a report by a continuing rater.

A follow-up session is required midway through the reporting period.

Airmen with less than 20 months, total active service will not receive an enlisted performance report; however, performance feedback will be required every 180 days.

Raters can provide additional sessions when needed. Raters also can request sessions, but raters are not required to give feedback if a session has occurred within the last 60 days.

Instructions on completing the feedback form are in Air Force Pamphlet 30-15, USAF Guide to the Airman and NCO Feedback System. The pamphlet is available to all raters of airmen and NCOs and can be ordered through the publication distribution office.

Air Force Regulation 39-62, enlisted personnel — the enlisted evaluation system, contains specific requirements. For more information, call 284-3508.

'D' Battery uses eyes, brains, brawn in missions

by PFC A. Scott Lawrence

FORT CLAYTON (USARSO PAO) — "Sierra 26, Sierra 26, this is Lima 13, request artillery support, over."

"Lima 13, do you have a map or compass? Over."

"Negative."

"Where are you located? Describe the terrain around you."

Where is the sun setting as you face the enemy?

Is there a long, straight, narrow body of water around you?

Can you see a large hill? How many football fields away from the peak of the hill is the enemy?"

These are only some of the questions asked in the untrained observer mission, conducted by D Battery, 320th Field Artillery, Fort Kobbe, during the 193rd Field Training Exercise, at Empire Range recently.

In all artillery missions there are three sections: the forward observer, the fire direction control center (FDC), and the actual gun teams.

The forward observer calls for and adjusts all artillery fire. The FDC plots the coordinates of both the observer and the target. Then they translate the information into how far the gunners need to turn their weapons and how high. The gunners adjust their weapons according to the information given by the FDC, and fire.

"A simple way to think of it is the forward observers are the eyes, FDC is the brain, and the guns are the brawn," said SSgt. Donald E. Ruffin, fire support NCOIC for Company C, 1.508th Airborne Infantry, Fort Kobbe.

According to Ruffin, the untrained observer mission is conducted so a soldier without forward observer skills can still call in artillery support.

"In this mission, the soldier can not use a map or compass. In addition, FDC does the computations manually. Both prepare us for the worst possible scenario," commented 2nd Lt. Kent K. Gibson, fire direction officer for the FDC.

Gibson admitted, "In combat, it is more than likely that we will have an untrained observer directing fire. However, someone in the unit should have a compass or map." Since these tools are not used in the training mission, FDC must locate the observer on a map based on his description of the terrain.

FDC narrows down the area by asking questions about the terrain. Then once they have outlined an area around the enemy and no friendly troops are within those constraints, they fire.

"The FDC will ask the observer if he saw the first round and how far it was from the target. From that information they readjust the guns and fire again. This process continues until the target has been destroyed," Ruffin explained.

D Battery is the only artillery unit in South and Central America. Their duty is to support the infantry with artillery.

The untrained observer mission is only one of the ways D Battery trains to remain, "Fit to fight."

PCC personnel repair baffle piers at Gatun Dam Spillway

BALBOA HEIGHTS (PCC PAO) — Maintenance Division personnel are currently repairing the baffle piers at the base of the Gatun Dam Spillway after a routine annual inspection revealed significant water erosion of the concrete portion of the piers and water erosion coupled with normal oxidation of the metal parts.

The 19 baffle piers, which look like huge blocks and are lined up in a staggered fashion at the foot of the dam, break up the enormous volume of water that pours over the dam during spilling operations. Without the baffles, the water's force might destroy much of the surrounding area and the bridge crossing the Chagres River just south of the dam.

Making optimum use of the remaining weeks of dry season, repairs were begun about five weeks ago. The piers with the worst erosion were tackled first, and those with lesser damage were left for last.

Several epoxy substances have been used in the repairs, different ones on different baffles. When the baffles are inspected next year, the epoxy products will be examined to determine which have held up the best and should be used for future repairs.

Most of the epoxy substances are being used only on metal, but one is being tested on concrete as well. Another product, which is considered three times harder and more resistant than concrete, is also being tested on some concrete and metal surfaces.

"Surface preparation has been one of the most important aspects of the job," says Rafael Samuels, who has acted as general foreman on the project. The project has included sandblasting both metal and concrete surfaces.

At the start, maintenance engineer Luis Ferreira gave a seminar to Samuels, maintenance mechanic Sabino Vargas and cement worker leader Victor Fuentes on some of the products that are being used in the work.

Safety matters were also considered before the project began. Samuels, who takes great pride in maintaining a safe environment at the work site, says preparation was the most time-consuming part of the job.

This stage included building sandbag dikes, erecting stairs, transporting equipment, setting up safety barriers and having divers caulk several of the Spillway gates.

Richmond wins Rookie of the Year

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Mitch Richmond, who overcame Coach Don Nelson's aversion to rookies and helped Golden State post the fourth most improved record in NBA history, was named Rookie of the Year on Monday.

The Warriors' first-round draft choice from Kansas State, Richmond played his way into the starting lineup early in the preseason and averaged 22 points per game, 16th best in the NBA, along with 5.9 rebounds and 4.2 assists.

"He's as good as anybody that I've ever coached," said Nelson, who had All-NBA players Marques Johnson and Sidney Moncrief during 11 years as coach of the Milwaukee Bucks.

Golden State's shooting guard was an easy winner in balloting for the Eddie Gottlieb Trophy, receiving 80 of 85 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Willie Anderson of the San Antonio Spurs received four votes and Chris Morris of the New Jersey Nets drew one vote from the media panel, composed of three from each league city and 10 representatives of the national media.

"This is something very special to me, something I'll cherish," Richmond said at a press conference at the Oakland Coliseum, where the Warriors will try to complete a three-game playoff sweep over Utah Tuesday night.

"I was fortunate to be drafted by Golden State, which gave me the opportunity to play early and prove myself early. I'm surprised that things happened so early for me. When I got confidence in myself, everything jelled and came a little easier for me."

The 6-foot-5, 225-pound Richmond, a member of the 1988 U.S. Olympic team, started all 79 games he played as the Warriors improved their record by 23 victories over last season.

He helped the Warriors go from a 20-62 record a year ago to a 43-39 mark and their second playoff berth in 12 years.

"He's turned this whole team around," said Chris Mullin, who teamed with Richmond to form the league's highest-scoring duo this season at 48.6 points per game.

"Mitch is a much better player as a rookie than I was. He's been a great player from Day One. He's got no weaknesses, and he has a great attitude. He's hungry and wants to be the best."

Nelson, who for years has disliked giving rookies a lot of playing time, told Richmond last summer that he might not play much in his first season even though he was the fifth player selected in the June draft.

But Nelson was impressed enough to give him a great deal of playing time during preseason, and he responded by averaging 21 points. One night in October, he scored 14 of Golden State's 16 overtime points in a victory over the Jazz.

Griffey turns mistake into double play

SEATTLE (AP) All rookies make mistakes, but seldom do those foul-ups turn into fielding gems that help win games.

Seattle was leading Detroit 5-3 in the eighth inning Monday night at the Kingdome. The Tigers had runners on first and second with one out, and Fred Lynn was at the plate.

Lynn lifted a long fly to left-center that sent Ken Griffey Jr. to the warning track where the left-handed centerfielder made the catch and let his momentum turn him around before he unleashed "a lifetime throw" to the wrong base.

Instead of pegging the ball to second to keep the potential tying run from reaching scoring position, Griffey sent the ball to third base, where Mariner Mario Diaz was planning the usual decoy for the advancing runner.

"I never thought the throw would come to third," Diaz said. "I was just trying to decoy him. Even when you're not expecting it, he just does it."

The throw took a short hop in front of the bag but still caught Lou Whitaker by a step and a half.

"We're on the bench yelling 'throw it to second' and he throws the guy out at third," said Mariners manager Jim Lefebvre.

"I turned to (Mariners pitching coach) Mike Paul and said, 'That shows you how much we know about this game.'"

Griffey, the American League's player of the week last week, said he

"Hac's behind me and he says, 'Ooooooh, OK,'" Griffey said. "He told me that it was a once-in-a-lifetime throw, but that next time I should throw it to second because you get burned more times throwing to third."

Relief pitcher Mike Schooler, who picked up the save, watched from the mound.

"I felt like running out and giving the guy a big hug," he said. "Plays like that are awesome. It picks everybody up."

It picked the fans up: The 14,788 in attendance gave the rookie a standing ovation.

Mancini beats top players

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Only 19 years old, Argentina's Alberto Mancini is too young to enter the famed Casino in Monte Carlo. Still he left Monaco with more than $120,000 in winnings Monday.

Mancini wasn't too young to be on the tennis courts of the Monte Carlo Country Club during the weekend, when he scored stunning upsets over Mats Wilander of Sweden and Boris Becker of West Germany on consecutive days. That helped him earn $122,900 in only his second pro final Sunday, for winning the Monte Carlo Open.

"If you beat Wilander twice and Becker, something is telling you that you can be a great player," said Mancini, who will be 20 this month. "I don't realize it much now, but I expect to do very well on the tour."

Mancini was rated No. 31 before the Monte Carlo tournament. He will jump in the rankings after victories over the No. 2 and No. 3 players in the world. He started the year in 49th place.

Last year, Mancini got to the quarterfinals of nine of 16 tournaments he played, but won only one, at Bologna, Italy. He earned less than $19,000 for that title. His overall winnings for 1988 were less than $122,000.

"This year is beginning very good and giving me a lot of confidence for the rest of the year."

Mancini's topspin and speed from the forehand and backhand sides gave opponents fits at Monte Carlo.

"Mancini hits so hard from both sides, you can't come to the net with a normal approach because he's going to pass you," Becker said. "You have to work. If he keeps playing like that, he'll be dangerous."

"I've never seen anyone with such strokes from both sides," Wilander said.

Wilander, who won three Grand Slam tournaments in 1988, was beaten by Mancini 6-0, 6-3 in the semifinals of the Monte Carlo tournament.

"I never saw anyone beat Wilander so bad in a semifinal on clay like that," said Becker, who lost in the final 7-5, 2-6, 7-6 (7-4), 7-5.

It was not the first time that Mancini had beaten Wilander. The Argentine defeated Wilander last month in the International Players Championship at Key Biscayne, Fla.

The previous week, in a tournament at Nice, Fraaments on the road to the French Open in Roland Garros at Paris, starting May 29.

1097th Trans earns USARSO softball title

by SFC Marshall B. Wilkins

FORT DAVIS (USARSO PAO)—The 1097th Transportation Company (Medium Boat) scored six runs in the first inning and went on to beat USARSO 12-10 and win the USARSO Softball championship at Fort Davis April 26.

Both teams served notice that the game would be a slugfest in the first inning. USARSO's Brian Kerr and Linwood Thomas got on base. James Nelson followed them with a long home run over the left field fence to give the Pacific team a 3-0 lead.

The boat company came back to score six runs in the bottom half. Steve Bartell led off with a single. Mike Byers hit a hard line drive that was dropped by the USARSO left fielder Then Larry Wiginton grounded to short but the infielder's high throw popped out of the stretching first baseman's glove. Alfred Keeter delivered a run with a single and the second baseman bobbled Tomaakuino Leota's ground ball. Dexter Fell's single, Dave Stepp's single and Hector Figuerroa's double added to the scoring.

Trailing 12-8 USARSO made an exciting attempt to tie the game in its last chance to bat in the seventh. Howell singled to center and slid safely into third after the next batter's base hit. Kerr hit a long line drive to Bartell in rightfield that scored Howell to make it 12-9. USARSO loaded the bases when Figuerroa fielded Ulysses Brown's grounder at second but threw the ball over the first baseman's head; and the dangerous Thomas was walked intentionally. Nelson, who had homered in the first inning, hit another long drive to left that looked like it would clear the fence.

The ball was hit so high and far that when it hit the top of the fence the baserunner's were surprised. Only one run could score because the leftfielder caught the bounce off the fence and quickly threw the ball to the infield. The next batter was retired to end the game.

Transportation scored a run in the sixth to lead 12-8 when Keeter singled to center. He drove in Bartell who reached on a double over the rightfielder's outstretched glove. The team scored in the fifth on RBIs by Leota and Fells, tallied a single run in the fourth, and two in the third on a homer by Joseph Wren.

USARSO cut 1097th's lead to a one run margin and threatened for more in the fifth. Howell singled and when he rounded the bag he noticed Fells was taking too long to field the ball so he slid into second base ahead of the tag.

Carlos Cardenas pinch hit for Rolland Zamora and knocked Howell in with a base hit. Bartell couldn't hold Kerr's line drive to right field and Brown singled to load the bases for Thomas. The menacing right handed batter had homered in the third inning with nobody on base. But on this occasion Wren got him to bounce to shortstop. Keeter fielded the ball and flipped it to second for the force on Brown.

After the game Lt. Col. Robert J. Henry, Atlantic garrison commander, presented the championship and runners-up trophies to the teams.

USARSO air support helps Camino de La Paz

by Spec. Frank L. Marquez
CAMP RUGGED SEAHORSE, COSTA RICA (USARSO PAO) — For U.S. Army South's aviation support team, flying the friendly skies of Costa Rica can be a big job. But they take pride in doing that job and earning their wings every day.

For the past three months, the 1st Battalion, 228th Aviation Regiment, Fort Kobbe, Panama, has provided air support for the Camino de La Paz (Road of Peace) bridge building project, gaining valuable experience in what the aviators call a "real mission."

The project entails the building of seven Bailey bridges and 3.2 kilometers of unpaved road on the isolated Osa Peninsula of Costa Rica by the 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, Fort Benning, Ga.

"We are a General Support Aviation Company (GSAC). We give general support to U.S. forces in Latin America," said CWO3 John Robertson, operations officer.

"In Costa Rica, our morale is high. We have flown many hours in direct support of the mission and have developed a good working relationship with the engineers from Fort Benning. We enjoy flying when we see results and they see results. It makes it worthwhile," said Robertson, who has been here since Feb. 28.

The aviation regiment began their support with A Company's UH-60s and B Company's OH-58 at the start of the project.

On Feb. 28, B Company assumed complete air support responsibility with two UH-1 Hueys and four Huey pilots, one OH-58 pilot, and crews, including technical inspectors, for each aircraft.

After that, the aviators flew 121 hours in 40 days. "Our missions are resupply; transportation of soldiers on emergency leave to San Jose enroute to the U.S.; mail pickup and delivery; bringing in fresh troops on rotations; delivery of noncritical medical patients to Gorgas Army Hospital in Panama; and transporting VIPs," said Robertson.

Air support includes the 214th Medical Detachment, which has an important role in the case of any medical emergency or situation that necessitates the transport of anyone injured at the base camp or work site.

The medevac unit's UH-60 Blackhawk transports the injured to nearby Golfito, to the Costa Rican capital San Jose, or to Gorgas Army Hospital.

"There has been everything from heat injuries to strained backs. We have also moved Costa Ricans who have injured themselves here on the Osa Peninsula," said Robertson.

"In the field, we take care of the emergencies, providing medical support for Task Force 36 when the injured need to be transported to a hospital," said CWO2 Mike Elliott, pilot in command (instructor pilot), 214th Medical Detachment.

"We have done a lot of missions because of the size of the operation and its proximity to hospitals. And we have given more help to the Costa Rican people than to our soldiers," he added.

"In February, we gave support to the 142nd Medical Battalion for their MEDRETE (medical readiness training exercise) that was held in conjunction with Camino de La Paz," said Elliott.

The first MEDRETE took place in four communities on the Osa Peninsula. In late April, an Army reserve unit from Minneapolis, Minn. carried out a second MEDRETE in two communities on the mainland across from the peninsula. "Both exercises were supported by USARSO," said Elliott.

Unlike the engineers, the air support crews are here for only a two-week stint, then they move back to the "rear." For some of them, rotating is a welcome relief. For others, this is a once-in-a-lifetime experience, or at least a very rare mission that they savor.

"Latin America does not offer many opportunities for the UH-1 pilots to get exposure to other than Canal Area operation," said CWO3 Paul Kahler, key UH-1 instructor pilot and command advisor.

"Costa Rica provides a worthwhile experience for our pilots in command. The environment is different. It gives us the opportunity to see how long we can sustain operations away from home base, staging coordination with other units and responding to other-than-normal situations. It boils down to how effective we are in that mission. That is what gives us the edge," said Kahler.

Not only has the mission been beneficial for the pilots and crew in training experience; so has the quality of life in base camp.

UH-1 crew chief Spec. Daniel Carter said "this is one of the best base camps" he has seen. He was in Costa Rica during last year's road building project, and this year there's a "wider range of recreational activities," he said. "You can run down to the beach if you want."

And there's a good reason why others have volunteered to stay here beyond the required two weeks.

"I'd rather be in the field, because you don't have to deal with the hustle and bustle of Panama," said crew chief Spec. Mick Deering, who has been here for a month and a half. "Things are so organized out here; all you have to do is your job. And because of it, I've learned more in the field," he said.

"This is a lot better than Lebanon," said WO1 Jeff Wagner, who was there in 1982 as a Marine. "They should bring other engineer units here to see the base camp setup and the construction of the bridges."

"Compared to last year's project, Task Force 36 has done an excellent job of making the troops comfortable. The base camp's soldier's club is excellent, and the dining facility is much nicer than the one for last year's project," said SSgt. Eli Flores, OH-58 technical inspector.

Satisfied, the pilots and crew will take back valuable experience to Panama because of the mission.

Thousands attend local political rallies

by Douglas Tweedale

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — Pro-military candidate Carlos Duque staged a final campaign rally Thursday before Sunday's national election, which opposition leaders and foreign observers say he is planning to steal on behalf of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Supporters of Duque's National Liberation Coalition began pouring into the capital Thursday morning, snarling traffic as party activists completed preparations for the early afternoon rally by hanging banners and posters and finishing the construction of a huge stage where Duque planned to speak.

The rally was planned to culminate a bitter campaign that pitted Duque, a Noriega crony, against Guillermo Endara, candidate of the U.S.-backed Civil Democratic Opposition Alliance, a three-party coalition opposed to Noriega.

The alliance held one of the biggest opposition rallies ever Wednesday, drawing more than 100,000 flag-waving supporters who chanted: "Not one day more."

"As much as a race between Duque and Endara, this election will be a referendum on Noriega's rule," said a Latin American diplomat.

An independent poll released this week showed Endara with a 2-to-1 lead over Duque.

But opposition leaders and U.S. officials, including President Bush, have said Duque forces plan to stage massive fraud Sunday to keep Noriega in power as Panama's military chief and effective ruler.

Endara has promised to try to negotiate Noriega's departure from the Panamanian Defense Forces and to fire him if he refuses.

The elections also may deepen the 2-year-old confrontation between Noriega and the United States, which has tried since 1987 to remove him with a combination of economic sanctions, covert propaganda campaigns and support for anti-Noriega forces inside Panama.

Noriega has been indicted in the United States on drug trafficking charges.

Bush said Tuesday the United States will not recognize the results of a fraudulent election in Panama, and U.S. officials say they are studying a range of options to step up pressure on Noriega if Duque wins by fraud.

Duque has denied accusations his eight-party coalition, known by its Spanish acronym COLINA, is planning to steal the election, and government officials accuse the Bush administration of trying to discredit the elections to justify further moves against Noriega.

Independent election monitors say there is enough evidence - including the padding of voting registration lists with duplicate names and government intimidation of opposition supporters - to suggest Sunday's elections will be less than honest, but say the extent of possible fraud will not be known until after the vote, if ever.

More than 300 U.S., Latin American and European election observers - including former U.S.

Presidents Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter - are expected to monitor voting, although the government will not permit them to observe vote counting.

Should Noriega remain in power through a Duque victory virtually all analysts in Panama agree it will present the Bush administration with a particularly difficult foreign policy dilemma.

"The approach we've tried so far clearly hasn't worked," said one U.S. official who requested anonymity. "And our options for the immediate future are limited."

Economic sanctions imposed by former President Reagan have helped drag Panama's once-prosperous economy into a crushing economic crisis, but they have not created enough discontent inside Panama to push Noriega out.

The most likely scenario for U.S. action if Duque wins through fraud, according to several informed sources, is a combination of stepped-up economic sanctions and a withdrawal of U.S. diplomatic personnel, including the recall of U.S. Ambassador Arthur Davis.

But some U.S. officials and Panamanian analysts say it is difficult to see how such measures could be effective, because Noriega and his Panamanian Defense Forces are "economically independent" of the government and the economy at large. Private businessmen say economic sanctions so far have hurt them much more than Noriega.

Opposition leaders have said they will contest the results of Sunday's voting if they believe fraud has been committed, but declined to say what form their protest will take. Some advocate peaceful street demonstrations but others suggest a nationwide strike would be more appropriate.

Endara, 53, is the political heir of Arnulfo Arias, a populist politician cheated four times of victory in past presidential elections, either by fraud or by a military coup.

Duque, 59, is an associate of Noriega in several business ventures and has won praise for his loyalty from the military.

In addition to the presidential race, slightly less than 1.2 million Panamanians will cast votes for two vice presidents, 67 deputies to the Legislative Assembly and representatives to 510 municipal councils.

Panamanian elections set stage for conflict

by Katherine King

PANAMA CITY, Reuter - With accusations of electoral fraud, threats of unrest and an ongoing struggle with Washington, the stage seems set for conflict no matter who wins Sunday's Panama general elections, independent observers say.

The presidential election pits lawyer Guillermo Endara for the opposition against businessman Carlos Duque in a contest many see as a plebiscite for or against Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Noriega's supporters say he represents nationalism and independence from Washington; his opponents call him a dictator.

"Of all the campaigns I have seen, this one has to be the most acrimonious. The two sides cannot even talk to each other," one election observer said.

"I do not believe the elections will resolve this crisis.

No matter who wins, there will be controversy," he said.

The opposition candidates say that if they win the vote they will move to retire Noriega, head of the Panama Defense Forces and a former U.S. ally who has been indicted in Florida on drug trafficking and racketeering charges.

But Noriega, who has consolidated his power despite more than a year of U.S.-backed efforts to oust him, is unlikely to give in. The last Panamanian president who tried to fire him, Eric Arturo Delvalle, now lives in exile in Miami.

Manuel Solis Palma is acting president but Noriega is the country's de facto leader.

If the pro-Noriega candidates win, the opposition is unlikely to believe the vote was fair. The opposition already says the government is preparing election fraud and its supporters have vowed to "defend the vote in the streets."

Opposition leaders said Wednesday they had examined the electoral register and found it to be infested with irregularities pointing to fraud in favor of Noriega's hand-picked candidate.

Opposition vice-presidential candidate Ricardo Arias Calderon said 100,000 names appeared at least twice on the register and that it contained the names of at least 1,000 dead people.

U.S. government officials, joining in the fraud accusations, have threatened to increase sanctions against Panama if they view the results as "unfair."

"Let me be clear: the United States will not recognize the results of a fraudulent election engineered to keep Noriega in power," President Bush said Tuesday.

But political analysts with long experience in Panama predict that Noriega, the nation's de facto leader since 1983, will not give up power no matter what happens in Sunday's vote.

Angry exchanges during campaigning have made many Panamanians fearful of political and possibly violent conflict as soon as polls close Sunday night.

The Panama Defense Forces say they have distributed guns to civilian militias to defend against what they say is a planned U.S. invasion requested by the "traitorous opposition."

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler accused Panama of adopting an "increasingly threatening tone," citing high-profile media reports about the distribution of arms.

"The campaign of intimidation undertaken by the regime press and the Panama Defense Forces is aimed at reducing voter turnout and discouraging any popular protest following the announcement of a victory for regime presidential candidate Carlos Duque," she said.

Opposition fears of fraud stem from 1984 elections, when the Noriega-backed candidate Nicolas Ardito Barletta won by a tiny margin after a delayed vote count and amid accusations of vote-rigging.

Analysts say Noriega, an astute strategist and expert intelligence officer, will be ready to cope with any unrest and may deploy troops.

A doctor at the state social security hospital said an emergency plan would be drawn up for election weekend as a precaution. The plan calls for a suspension of all non-emergency surgery and an increase in staffing.

The U.S. Southern Command has also issued an advisory to its personnel, calling on them to stay close to home throughout election weekend and cancelling classes at U.S. Defense Department schools the day after the vote.

Although tension is high, the streets are quiet and campaigning on both sides has continued normally.

U.S. ambassador to U.N. responds to RP charges

Editor's Note: In a recent address to the U.N. Security Council, Panama's Foreign Minister Jorge Ritter accused the U.S. of attempting to renege on its Panama Canal Treaty obligations and interfering in the internal affairs of Panama. The foreign minister also alleged the U.S. Army rented 80 automobiles to destabilize Panama, and engaged in a number of activities against the Panamanian state.

Excerpts of U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. Thomas Pickering's response to the accusation follow:

Mr. Ritter is here for a clear purpose. That purpose has to do with elections in his own country. Our message to him is clear. The election cannot be won in Panama through a debate with the United States in the
