Brief History of the Monthly Catalog

The Printing Act of 1895 specified two products for the description and collocation of public documents.

- The Catalogue of the Public Documents of the [...] Congress and of All Departments of the Government of the United States (Document Catalogue) fulfilled the requirement for a "comprehensive index of public documents" to be prepared "at the close of each regular session of Congress."
- The Monthly Catalog of United States Government Publications (MoCat) met the stipulation for a "Monthly Catalogue ... which shall show the publications printed during a month, where [those publications are] obtainable, and the price thereof."

Thus, the original relationship was a current awareness listing (in the MoCat) and a permanent, authoritative, and comprehensive catalog (in the Document Catalogue).

In 1947, the cost and perennial difficulty of compiling the Document Catalogue led the Superintendent of Documents to recommend to the Joint Committee on Printing that the Catalogue be discontinued after the edition for 1940 was completed. The MoCat began to serve in the capacity of a single source for bibliographic information, fulfilling the requirements of the 1895 act, which stand to this day in 44 USC §1710-1711.

From 1895 until 1976, the Government Printing Office (GPO) arranged and described documents according to its own standards and systems. A major revision of the appearance and functionality of the MoCat took place in July 1976.

GPO catalogers began producing machine-readable cataloging records (MARC) conforming to Anglo-American Cataloging Rules (AACR), Library of Congress Subject Headings (LCSH), the Ohio College Library Center (later the Online Computer Library Center, OCLC) bibliographic standards and formats, and other applicable national level standards. Since that time, GPO has gradually expanded the emphasis of its cataloging and indexing program from the production of a single printed product to the creation and maintenance of a database of high-quality, standards-based bibliographic records. These records are used by GPO and the library community to support an expanding array of bibliographic control activities.

The bibliographic data used to produce this abridged paper edition is also used to produce a World Wide Web (WWW) edition. The Web edition links users directly from bibliographic citations to electronic publications, and assists the public to locate information in depository libraries and through GPO sales. GPO bibliographic data is also available to libraries from the Library of Congress and from a variety of commercial sources for the creation of high quality local databases and public access catalogs.

Catalog Arrangement/Sample Entry

This catalog contains brief descriptions of Federal publications arranged in Superintendent of Documents classification number order and may be accessed by title keyword index (alphabetical list of truncated titles, arranged by important words selected from publication titles). These brief records are based on the full bibliographic records available in the "online version of the Monthly Catalog which is cumulated from 1994, available as the Catalog of Government Publications (CGP) on the GPO Access locator services" at http://www.access.gpo.gov/su_docs/locators/cgp/index.html.

Analysis of Experimental Results

The first part of the analysis involves a detailed examination of the data collected during the experiment. This includes a review of the raw data, a calculation of the mean and standard deviation for each variable, and a comparison of the results with the theoretical predictions. The second part of the analysis involves a statistical test of the null hypothesis, which is that there is no significant difference between the experimental results and the theoretical predictions. This is done using a t-test, which compares the mean of the experimental results to the mean of the theoretical predictions. The results of the t-test are then used to determine whether the null hypothesis can be rejected.

The third part of the analysis involves a comparison of the experimental results with the results of previous experiments. This is done by plotting the experimental results on a graph and comparing them to the results of previous experiments. The fourth part of the analysis involves a discussion of the sources of error in the experiment and a suggestion for how these errors can be minimized in future experiments.

The fifth part of the analysis involves a conclusion of the experiment. This includes a summary of the results and a statement of the conclusions that can be drawn from the experiment. The sixth part of the analysis involves a list of references, which includes the books and articles that were used in the experiment.

The seventh part of the analysis involves a list of appendices, which includes the raw data, the calculations, and the graphs. The eighth part of the analysis involves a list of figures, which includes the graphs and the plots. The ninth part of the analysis involves a list of tables, which includes the tables of data and the tables of calculations.

The tenth part of the analysis involves a list of symbols, which includes the symbols used in the experiment. The eleventh part of the analysis involves a list of abbreviations, which includes the abbreviations used in the experiment. The twelfth part of the analysis involves a list of footnotes, which includes the footnotes used in the experiment.

The thirteenth part of the analysis involves a list of references, which includes the books and articles that were used in the experiment. The fourteenth part of the analysis involves a list of appendices, which includes the raw data, the calculations, and the graphs. The fifteenth part of the analysis involves a list of figures, which includes the graphs and the plots.

The sixteenth part of the analysis involves a list of tables, which includes the tables of data and the tables of calculations. The seventeenth part of the analysis involves a list of symbols, which includes the symbols used in the experiment. The eighteenth part of the analysis involves a list of abbreviations, which includes the abbreviations used in the experiment.

The nineteenth part of the analysis involves a list of footnotes, which includes the footnotes used in the experiment. The twentieth part of the analysis involves a list of references, which includes the books and articles that were used in the experiment. The twenty-first part of the analysis involves a list of appendices, which includes the raw data, the calculations, and the graphs.

The twenty-second part of the analysis involves a list of figures, which includes the graphs and the plots. The twenty-third part of the analysis involves a list of tables, which includes the tables of data and the tables of calculations. The twenty-fourth part of the analysis involves a list of symbols, which includes the symbols used in the experiment.

Document 8: The Great Depression

The Great Depression was a severe economic downturn that began in 1929 and lasted through the 1930s. It was caused by a combination of factors, including overproduction, falling demand, and a stock market crash. The depression led to widespread unemployment, poverty, and social unrest. In response, governments around the world implemented various policies to stimulate the economy and provide relief to the suffering population. In the United States, President Franklin D. Roosevelt introduced the New Deal, a series of programs and reforms aimed at addressing the economic crisis.

The New Deal included a variety of measures, such as the creation of the Federal Reserve, the establishment of the Social Security Administration, and the passage of the National Industrial Recovery Act. These programs were designed to provide relief to the unemployed, stimulate economic growth, and prevent future depressions. The New Deal also led to the creation of the Works Progress Administration (WPA), which provided jobs for millions of Americans. The Great Depression was a challenging time for the United States, but the New Deal helped to bring the economy back to a level of stability.

The Great Depression had a profound impact on the lives of millions of Americans. It led to the loss of jobs, homes, and savings. Many people were forced to live in poverty and struggle to survive. The depression also led to a loss of faith in the government and the economy. However, the New Deal provided a sense of hope and relief to many Americans. It showed that the government was willing to take action to address the economic crisis and provide support to the people. The Great Depression was a difficult time, but it also led to significant changes in the way the government and the economy were run.

The Great Depression was a global phenomenon that affected many countries around the world. It led to economic hardship and social unrest in many parts of the world. In the United States, the New Deal was a response to the crisis, but it was not the only one. Other countries implemented their own policies to address the depression. The Great Depression was a challenging time for the world, but it also led to significant changes in the way the world was run. The New Deal was a key part of the response to the crisis, and it helped to bring the economy back to a level of stability.

FEDERAL DEPOSITORY LIBRARY PROGRAM

The Federal Depository Library Program was established by Congress to provide free public access to Government publications. Over 1,300 public, academic, State, and law libraries serve as an information link with the Federal Government by maintaining collections of Government publications. These collections, which are tailored to local needs, are open to the public. Fifty-three of the libraries are designated as regional depository libraries. They have the responsibility of retaining material permanently and providing inter-library loan and reference services in their regions.

Copies of documents no longer available through the GPO Sales Program can usually be found in regional depository collections. To determine which depository libraries have selected copies of publications listed in this catalog, consult the Superintendent of GPO Access Web site. A complete listing of regional depositories follows. Locate the depository libraries in your area online at http://www.access.gpo.gov/su_docs/locators/findlibs/index.html.

The 1955-1956 season was characterized by a series of events that significantly impacted the local community. The first major event was the severe drought that began in the spring, leading to a shortage of water for both domestic and agricultural use. This was followed by a series of heavy rains in the summer, which caused significant flooding in the low-lying areas of the town. The flooding resulted in the loss of many homes and businesses, and a large number of people were displaced. In the fall, the weather was relatively mild, but the economic impact of the previous season was still being felt. Many families were struggling to make ends meet, and the local economy was in a state of decline. The winter months were also difficult, with heavy snow and frequent blizzards. This made travel and commerce nearly impossible, and many people were unable to find work. Despite these challenges, the community showed remarkable resilience. Many people volunteered their time and resources to help those in need, and the local government provided financial assistance to the most vulnerable. By the end of the season, the community had begun to recover, but the scars of the previous year were still visible. The 1955-1956 season was a difficult one for everyone involved, but it also served as a reminder of the strength and unity of the community in the face of adversity.
