- Federal Depository Library Program (FDLP) makes information produced by Federal Government agencies available for public access at no fee.
- Access is through over 1,250 depository libraries located throughout the U.S. and its territories, or through GPO Access on the Internet for online electronic Federal information at <http://www.gpoaccess.gov>.

Government Information at a Library near You: The Federal Depository Library Program

The Federal Depository Library Program (FDLP) was established by Congress to ensure that the American public has access to its Government's information (44 U.S.C. §§1901-1916). For more than 140 years, depository libraries have supported the public's right to know by collecting, organizing, preserving, and assisting users with information from the Federal Government.

The Government Printing Office provides Government information products at no cost to designated depository libraries throughout the country. These depository libraries, in turn, provide local, no-fee access in an impartial environment with professional assistance.

The collections contain information on

- careers,
- business opportunities,
- consumer information,
- health and nutrition,
- legal and regulatory information,
- demographics, and
- countless other subjects reflecting the activity of the Government, in print, microform, CD-ROM, and online publications.

Federal depository libraries are located in nearly every congressional district throughout the United States and its territories. Selective depository libraries tailor their selections of Government information products to their community's primary needs. Regional depository libraries receive all the products available through the program. Any member of the public can visit these depository libraries and use the Federal depository collections. Before visiting a depository library, call to verify their hours of operation.

Preface

The print and electronic publications distributed to the depository libraries are listed in the Catalog of U.S. Government Publications, available on GPO Access at <<http://catalog.gpo.gov>>. Once an information product is identified, a link is available to locate depository libraries that receive that product. The Catalog of U.S. Government Publications can therefore be used to determine what recent titles are available in the libraries and which depository libraries have them. Cataloging records for online publications contain links to the content at either the publishing agency's Web site or on a GPO server.

Through cooperative collection development, interlibrary loan resource sharing, and the complete collections housed at regional depositories, the system provides service and access to all.

Congressional Designations of Federal Depository Libraries

Most libraries receive Federal depository status through designation by an elected or appointed Federal official. Once designated as a depository in the Federal Depository Library Program (FDLP), the library can select from a wide range of U.S. Government publications that are disseminated to participants. These libraries serve as the primary source for Government information to the people of these areas. An effective Federal depository library can noticeably enhance the economy and the quality of life in its local area.

Each U.S. Representative can designate up to two libraries for inclusion in the FDLP, if there are vacancies in the Representative's congressional district.

In addition, States may have two libraries designated by each U.S. Senator. Each U. S. Senator can designate up to two libraries, if there are vacancies available under his/her class. The Senator can designate a depository in any section of the State. In designating depositories, Senators usually consider the location of previously designated libraries in an effort to strike a geographic balance between the State's Federal depository libraries. To learn more about Senatorial classes, visit the Senate's web site at http://www.senate.gov/reference/glossary_term/class.htm.

The Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico, Mayor of the District of Columbia, and Governor of the American Virgin Islands may designate two depositories if vacancies exist. The Governor of American Samoa and Governor of Guam may designate one depository if a vacancy exists.

The FDLP is administered by Office of the Superintendent of Documents. Email the Superintendent of Documents at SuDocs@gpo.gov for assistance with designations.
