FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONCERNING MOUNT RAINIER OR OTHER NATIONAL PARKS ADDRESS THE NATIONAL PARK SERVICE WASHINGTON, D. C.
MOUNT RAINIER NATIONAL PARK was established by act of Congress approved March 2, 1899. (30 Stat., 993.) It is about 18 miles square and has an area of 208,000 acres.

Mount Rainier is the third loftiest mountain in the United States exclusive of Alaska. Its summit is approximately the center of the park. The altitude of the summit is 14,408 feet, only 88 feet lower than Mount Whitney in California, and 12 feet lower than Mount Elbert in Colorado. Another interesting fact about the height of Mount Rainier is that it rises nearly 10,000 feet above its immediate base. It is supposed that the mountain was at one time 16,000 feet in height, but a great volcanic eruption tore away nearly 2,000 feet, leaving a great crater that is now filled with ice and snow. It is interesting to note, however, that steam is still emitted from jets in the ice in the crater.

In the sides of the mountain there are 28 great glaciers, varying in thickness from 50 to 500 feet. This great glacial system is the finest in the United States and is not surpassed by any of the glaciers of the Alps.

Around the lower portion of the great mountain, between its glaciers, are beautiful parks carpeted with wild flowers throughout the summer, the most accessible being Paradise Valley and Yakima Park. From these points visitors may secure guides for the ascent of the mountains.

The trail system of the park is extensive and offers many interesting and safe side trips, including a trip entirely around the mountain. Ask Park Rangers about them, and get trail guide pamphlets.

The motorist will find comfortable hotels at Longmire Springs and Paradise Valley. Camps are located at both of these points; and also at Yakima Park. Housekeeping cabins are available at Paradise Valley, Longmire, Yakima Park, and Ohanapecosh.
