The purpose of this revenue procedure is to set out the rules that will be contained in temporary regulations under section 6232 of the Internal Revenue Code, relating to the applicability of the provisions for consolidated partnership proceedings under sections 6221-6231 to the windfall profit tax. These temporary regulations, which are expected to be issued early in 1984, will be applicable to removal year 1983 only. Until the temporary regulations are published, taxpayers may rely on this revenue procedure.

SEC. 2 BACKGROUND

.01 Beginning with the 1983 removal year, section 6232 of the Code provides for consolidated administrative and judicial proceedings to determine the proper treatment of "partnership items" for windfall profit tax (WPT) purposes. Except to the extent otherwise provided in the regulations under section 6232, the rules governing these consolidated administrative and judicial proceedings will be similar to those set forth in sections 6221-6231 and the regulations thereunder.

.02 The term "partnership item" will be defined in the regulations under section 6232 of the Code. Generally, "partnership items" for WPT purposes will be those items that are more appropriately determined at the partnership level rather than at the partner level. Examples of these items are the quantity of the oil removed from the premises, the removal and base prices, and the tier of the oil. Items that depend on the status of the partner, such as the independent producer amount and certain exemptions, are not partnership items.

.03 Section 4996(a)(1)(C) of the Code provides that the partner, rather than the partnership, shall be treated as the producer of the crude oil for windfall profit tax purposes. Section 51.4997-2(a)(2) of the Excise Tax Regulations requires the partnership to furnish each partner of that partnership a Form 6248, Annual Information Return of Windfall Profit Tax, by the later of 15 days following the receipt of such form by the partnership or the first April 30 following the end of the year to which the form relates.

.04 Although the partners, rather than the partnership, are treated as the producers of the partnership oil for WPT purposes, section 6232(c)(1) of the Code provides that the partnership may act on behalf of the partners with respect to the determination, assessment, and collection of the WPT to the extent provided by the regulations. Section 6232(c)(2) provides, however, that any group of partners owning in the aggregate at least 5 percent of the income interest of the partnership may elect to negate the partnership's authority to act on behalf of all partners.

.05 Section 6232(c)(3) of the Code provides that none of the rights granted to the partners under sections 6221-6231 are lost by virtue of the partnership's authority to act on behalf of the partners.

.06 Whether the partnership acts on behalf of the partners or not, administrative and judicial proceedings with respect to "partnership items" for WPT purposes will be consolidated as provided in sections 6221-6231 of the Code and the regulations under those sections.

SEC. 3 PROCEDURE

.01 If the partnership does not elect to be treated as authorized to act on behalf of the partners or does not comply with the requirements of section 3.03 for making this election, the partnership shall furnish a Form 6248 to each partner within the period prescribed in section 51.4997-2(a)(2) of the regulations. The partnership shall furnish Forms 6248 with respect to the partners to the Internal Revenue Service Center designated on that form within the time prescribed in section 51.4997-2(c)(4) of the regulations.

.02 The partnership shall be treated as authorized to act on behalf of the partners of that partnership if the partnership complies with the requirements of section 3.03. The authority to act on behalf of the partners may be negated by a 5-percent election, the procedures for which are set forth in section 3.07. The authority of the partnership to act on behalf of any particular partner may be negated by an individual election, the procedures for which are set forth in section 3.08.

.03 The partnership may elect to be treated as authorized to act for each partner of the partnership if the partnership complies with the procedures set forth in this paragraph.

1 The partnership shall furnish to the Internal Revenue Service a notice that states that the partnership intends to: 1) act on behalf of all partners in any judicial or administrative proceeding with respect to partnership items for WPT purposes; 2) pay on behalf of the partners any additional WPT determined to be due to reflect the proper treatment of partnership items; and 3) receive on behalf of the partners any credit for, or refund of, any overpayment of WPT attributable to partnership items (and to indemnify the Service for any duplicate refund made).

2 The notice shall be furnished to Austin Service Center (see section 3.09 for complete address) on or before March 31, 1984. The notice shall identify the partnership by name, address, and identification number and shall be signed by the person authorized to sign the Form 1065.

3 The partnership shall, by March 31, 1984, furnish to each partner of the partnership a notice that contains the same information (except partnership identification information and signature) contained in the notice required to be furnished to the Service by the partnership. In addition the notice shall: 1) inform each partner of the partner's allocable share of the WPT paid or withheld during 1983 with respect to partnership production (so that the partner may claim an income tax deduction for that amount); 2) explain the right of any group of partners holding a 5 percent or greater interest in the income of the partnership to negate the authority of the partnership to act on behalf of all partners by filing a notice in accordance with section 3.07; and 3) explain the right of each partner individually to elect not to have the partnership act on behalf of that partner by filing a notice in accordance with section 3.08.

.04 If the partnership elects to be treated as authorized to act on behalf of the partners with respect to the determination, assessment, and collection of the WPT attributable to partnership items and no 5-percent election is made to negate this authority, the following rules shall apply with respect to any partner who has not made an individual election:

1 The Tax Matters Partners (TMP) shall represent that partner in all administratve and judicial proceedings with respect to partnership items. Therefore, the partner is not entitled to receive notice of these proceedings from the TMP or the Service or to participate in these proceedings. A settlement agreement entered into between the Service and the TMP is binding on that partner.

2 The partnership shall compute and pay any additional WPT due on behalf of the partner or file an administrative adjustment request on behalf of the partner with respect to partnership items. That partner will not be allowed to file an administrative adjustment request or a claim for refund with respect to partnership items.

3 The partnership is not required to furnish that partner a Form 6248.

4 The partnership shall furnish a Form 6248 with respect to that partner to the Austin Service Center by August 31, 1984. This Form 6248 shall show the amount of WPT allocable to that partner that was actually withheld or paid during 1983 and the adjustment made by the partnership with respect to that partner to eliminate any overpayment or underpayment. On or before the date on which the partnership furnishes to the Service the Form 6248, the partnership shall file a Form 720, Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return, with Form 6047, Windfall Profit Tax, attached and pay any additional tax due with respect to that partner or file a Form 843, Claim, and claim any credit or refund due with respect to that partner.

.05 If the partnership elects to be treated as authorized to act for each partner and no 5-percent election is made, the following rules shall apply with respect to any partner who makes the individual election:

1 That partner retains any right with respect to the determination of the tax treatment of partnership items for WPT purposes that that partner would possess under sections 6221-6231 of the Code and the regulations under those sections. For example, the partner would be entitled to receive notice of the proceedings from the TMP or the Service if that partner would be entitled to receive notice under section 6223 and the regulations under that section.

2 A settlement agreement entered into between the Service and the TMP is binding on that partner if a settlement entered into under section 6224(c) of the Code would be binding on the partner.

3 The partnership shall furnish a Form 6248 for the partner to the Austin Service Center and to that partner by August 31, 1984. The Form 6248 furnished to the Service will not show any adjustment for an overpayment or underpayment with respect to that partner. The partnership shall also furnish to the Service a statement that identifies each partner that made the individual election by name, address, identification number, and percentage ownership interest in the partnership.

4 The partner shall file a separate Form 720 and pay an additional tax due with respect to the partner or file a Form 843 to claim any credit or refund due. These forms shall be filed with the Austin Service Center; the Form 720 shall be filed by October 31, 1984.

.06 If the partnership elects to act on behalf of the partners in accordance with the procedures set forth in section 3.03 but a 5-percent election is made to negate that authority, the partnership shall furnish a Form 6248 for each partner in the partnership to the Service and to the partner by August 31, 1984. The Forms 6248 furnished to Service shall be filed with the service center designated on that form. The partnership will not be permitted to make any adjustments with respect to the partners under these circumstances. A partner filing Form 720 or Form 843 shall file that form with the service center designated on the form; the Form 720 shall be filed by October 31, 1984.

.07 Any group of partners owning in the aggregate at least 5 percent of the income interest of the partnership may elect to negate the authority of the partnership to act on behalf of the partners by filing a written notice to that effect. The notice shall be filed with the Austin Service Center on or before June 30, 1984. The notice shall identify the partnership by name, address, and identification number and shall identify the partners forming the 5-percent group by name, address, identification number, and percentage interest in the partnership. The notice shall be signed by all members of the group making the election. A copy of the notice shall be furnished to the partnership.

.08 Any partner desiring that the partnership not be authorized to act on its behalf shall file a signed notice to that effect with the Austin Service Center on or before June 30, 1984. The notice shall contain the name, address, and taxpayer identification number of both the partner and the partnership. A copy of the notice shall be furnished to the partnership.

.09 The address of the Austin Service Center to be used for purposes of this revenue procedure is: Internal Revenue Service Center, WPT Staff, P.O. Box 1231, Austin, TX 28767, Stop 89.

Rev. Proc. 84-5[1]

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to bring up to date the procedure to be followed in computing reductions in the credit against the tax reportable on Form 940, Employer's Annual Federal Unemployment Tax Return, for 1983.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Section 3301 of the Internal Revenue Code imposes an excise tax on employers based on wages paid to employees. Section 3306(a) defines the term "employer" for purposes of the tax imposed by section 3301.

.02 Section 3302 of the Code provides for credits against the tax imposed by section 3301. Reductions in the amount of credit otherwise allowable are provided for in section 3302(c). Section 3302(c)(2) provides that reductions shall occur if an employer pays wages for services performed in a state that has not restored amounts that were advanced under Title XII of the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. sections 1321-1324(1976).

.03 Section 3302(c)(2)(A) of the Code, in conjunction with section 3302(d), provides that, for each consecutive calendar year beginning with the second consecutive calendar year in which the advances have not been repaid, the reduction is equal to 0.3 percent of the wages (as defined in section 3306(b)) paid.

.04 Section 3302(c)(2)(B) of the Code provides for an additional reduction for the third or fourth consecutive year in which the advances have not been repaid and section 3302(c)(2)(C) provides for an additional reduction for the fifth or any succeeding consecutive year. Section 3302(d)(7) provides that the percentage of the additional reduction is determined by the Secretary of Labor.

[1] Also released as News Release IR-84-4, dated January 11, 1984.

.05 Section 3302(f) of the Code provides a cap on the credit reduction in the case of any state that meets certain solvency requirements, as determined by the Secretary of Labor on or before November 10. The credit reduction applicable to employers subject to the unemployment compensation law of that state is limited to either 0.6 percent of wages paid or the percentage credit reduction that was in effect in the case of the state for the preceding taxable year, if greater than 0.6 percent. A state that partially meets the solvency requirements may partially limit the credit reduction. Section 512 of the Social Security Amendments of 1983, 1983-29 I.R.B. 20, 35. A state must apply to the Secretary of Labor in order for a cap to be put into effect.

.06 Section 3302(d)(3) of the Code provides that credit reductions for any year may be forestalled if a state restores to the United States Treasury, before November 10 of that year, the full amount of the advances.

.07 For purposes of the tax imposed by section 3301 of the Code, section 3306(j)(1) provides that the term "state" includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

SEC. 3. CREDIT REDUCTIONS FOR 1983

In a letter of November 14, 1983, 48 Fed. Reg. 55931(1983), the Secretary of Labor advised the Secretary of the Treasury that none of the following states had repaid the advances by November 10, 1983. In addition, the Secretary of Labor set forth the appropriate credit reduction for each state's employers. As a result, credit reductions will take effect in the amount of the following percentages of the wages (as defined in section 3306(b) of the Code) paid by employers that are attributable to the following states:

(a) 0.3 percent—Kentucky;
(b) 0.6 percent—Arkansas, Delaware, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, Ohio, Puerto Rico, Rhode Island, Vermont, the Virgin Islands, and West Virginia;
(c) 0.7 percent—Connecticut, Illinois, and Pennsylvania; and
(d) 1.1 percent—the District of Columbia.

SEC. 4. PROCEDURE

If a credit reduction applies, it is computed on Part I, lines 6 and 7 of the Form 940 for 1983, and carried to line 2, Part II or line 4, Part III.

PART A.—GENERAL

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

.01 The purpose of this Revenue Procedure is to provide the requirements and conditions for submitting Form 8027, Employer's Annual Information Return of Tip Income and Allocated Tips, on magnetic tape instead of filing paper returns. Form 8027 information may be filed on magnetic tape and sent annually to the Service beginning in 1984. The due date for the first submission of Form 8027 on magnetic tape to the Internal Revenue Service is February 29, 1984.

SEC. 2. APPLICATION FOR MAGNETIC MEDIA REPORTING

.01 For the purposes of this Revenue Procedure, the employer is the organization supplying the information and the transmitter is the organization preparing the magnetic media file. The employer and transmitter may be the same organization. Employers or their transmitters are required to complete Form 4419, Application for Magnetic Media Reporting of Information Returns. Requests for copies of this form or for additional information on magnetic media reporting should be addressed to the attention of the Magnetic Media Coordinator of the Service Center listed in PART A, SEC. 7. of this Revenue Procedure.

.02 The Service will act on an application and notify the applicant of authorization to file, in writing, within 30 days of receipt of the application. Magnetic media returns may not be filed with the Service until the application has been approved.

.03 The Service will assist new filers with their initial magnetic media submission by encouraging the submission of test files for review in advance of the filing season. Approved employers or transmitters who wish to submit a test file should contact the Magnetic Media Coordinator of the Service Center listed in PART A, SEC. 7. of this Revenue Procedure.

.04 If there are hardware or software changes that would affect the characteristics of the magnetic media submission, the employer (or its transmitter) is required to submit a new Form 4419.

.05 Only employers or transmitters using equipment compatible with the Service's equipment will have their applications approved. Compatible tape characteristics are shown in PART B, SEC. 1.

SEC. 3. FILING OF MAGNETIC MEDIA REPORTS

.01 Packaging, shipping,and mailing instructions will be provided by the Service within 45 days of the granting of approval. A magnetic tape reporting package, which includes all necessary transmittals and labels, will be mailed to all approved filers.

.02 With the Service's concurrence, employers can submit a portion of their returns on magnetic media and the remainder on paper Forms 8027, provided there is NO DUPLICATE FILING. The magnetic media records and paper forms must be filed at the INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE CENTER listed in Part A, SEC. 7. of this Revenue Procedure. A Form 8027-T, Transmittal of Employer's Annual Report of Allocated Tips, must accompany paper submissions and a Form 4804, Transmittal of Information Returns Reported on Magnetic Media, must accompany magnetic media submissions.

.03 The affidavit which appears on Forms 8027-T and 4804 should be signed by the employer. A transmitter, service bureau, or disbursing agent may, however, sign the affidavit on behalf of the employer if all of these conditions are met:

(a) It has the authority to sign the affidavit under an agency agreement (either oral, written, or implied) that is valid under the State law.

(b) It signs the affidavit and adds the caption "For: (name of employer)".

.04 Although a duly authorized agent signs the affidavit, the employer is held responsible for the accuracy of the Form 8027 and will be liable for penalties for failure to comply with filing requirements.

.05 If a portion of the returns are submitted on paper documents, include a statement on the Form 8027-T that the remaining returns are being filed on magnetic media. Please note that Form 8027-T normally applies to the filing of information returns on paper; however, filers of magnetic media must review the Form 8027-T and file Form 8027-T if appropriate.

.06 If an allocation of tips is based on a good faith agreement, a copy of the agreement must accompany the submission.

.07 If an allocation rate of less than 8% has been granted by the District Director, a copy of the determination letter must accompany the submission. Employers with more than one establishment can receive approval from one district in each IRS region where establishments are located (see section 31.6053-3(h)(4) of the Employment Tax Regulations).

SEC. 4. FILING DATES

.01 Magnetic tape reporting to the Service for Form 8027 must be on a calendar year basis. The first due date of either paper or tape Forms 8027 is February 29, 1984.

SEC. 5. PROCESSING OF MAGNETIC MEDIA RETURNS

.01 The Service will copy the information from the original tapes and return the original tapes to the employer. Normally tapes will be returned within three months after the annual due date for submission to the Service, or within three months after actual receipt of acceptable tapes, whichever is later.

.02 All files submitted must conform totally to this revenue procedure. IF FILES ARE UNPROCESSIBLE, THEY WILL BE RETURNED TO THE FILER FOR CORRECTION. Corrected files must be filed with the Service Center as soon as possible. If the delay will be more than two weeks, contact the Service Center Magnetic Media Coordinator for instructions. Corrected files will be returned by the Service within six months of receipt.

SEC. 6. EFFECT ON PAPER RETURNS

.01 If a portion of the returns is reported on magnetic media and the remainder is reported on paper forms, those returns not submitted on magnetic media must be filed on Form 8027.

SEC. 7. MAGNETIC MEDIA COORDINATOR CONTACT

Requests for additional copies of this revenue procedure or for additional information on magnetic media reporting of Forms 8027 should be addressed to the attention of the Magnetic Media Coordinator of:

Internal Revenue Service

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

This Revenue Procedure obsoletes Rev. Proc. 77-15, 1977-1 C.B. 572, relating to the procedures of the Internal Revenue Service for the adoption of Form 5612, Model Profit-Sharing Plan, Form 5613, Restated Model Profit-Sharing Plan, Form 5614, Model Money Purchase Plan, and Form 5615, Restated Model Money Purchase Plan (hereinafter referred to as Model Plans). It also provides that such Model Plans will no longer be considered to automatically meet the requirements of section 401 of the Internal Revenue Code.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND AND GENERAL INFORMATION

01. Rev. Proc. 77-15, 1977-1 C.B. 572, set forth the procedures for employers who adopt the Service-issued

[1] Also released as News Release IR-84-8, dated January 17, 1984.

Model Plans described in Section 1 above. That Revenue Procedure provided that determination letters generally would not be issued with respect to the qualification of an employer's adoption of one of those Model Plans. However, it also provided that such a plan would be considered to satisfy the requirements of section 401 of the Code, even though no determination letter was issued, if the adoption met the requirements of that Revenue Procedure.

02. Rev. Proc. 80-30, 1980-1 C.B. 685, contains procedures relating to the issuance of determination letters concerning the qualification of certain individually designed pension, annuity, profit-sharing, stock bonus, and bond purchase plans described in sections 401, 403(a), and 405 of the Code, and the exemption from federal income tax of any related trust.

03. Rev. Proc. 81-19, 1981-1 C.B. 689, modified Rev. Proc. 80-30 to provide for the optional use of Form 6406, Short Form Application for Determination for Amendment of Employee Benefit Plan (Other than Master or Prototype Plans of Self-Employed Individuals), in requesting determination letters on plan amendments to a plan that has previously received a determination letter as to qualification and to provide for the issuance of determination letters on the qualification of the entire plan, as amended, when requested on the appropriate application form.

SEC. 3. OBSOLESCENCE OF MODEL PLANS

Form 5612, Model Profit-Sharing Plan, Form 5613, Restated Model Profit-Sharing Plan, Form 5614, Model Money Purchase Plan, and Form 5615, Restated Model Money Purchase Plan, are hereby obsolete as of the date of publication of this Revenue Procedure.

SEC. 4. INSTRUCTIONS TO TAXPAYERS

01. Employers may not rely on the qualification of any Model Plan adopted after the publication of this Revenue Procedure.

02. An employer who properly adopted a Model Plan before the publication of this Revenue Procedure may continue to rely upon the qualified status of the form of the plan until the earliest of: a) the date the employer modifies the plan or trust, b) the date the employer files an application for a determination letter in accordance with section 4.03 of this Revenue Procedure, or c) the first plan year beginning after December 31, 1983.

03. An employer who adopted a Model Plan before the publication of this Revenue Procedure may file an application with the appropriate Key District Director for a determination as to the qualified status of such plan and any amendments thereto in accordance with the procedures set forth in Rev. Proc. 80-30 as modified by Rev. Proc. 81-19 and this Revenue Procedure. In addition, such employer may use Form 5307 (Short Form Application for Determination for Employee Benefit Plan; see section 4.05 of Rev. Proc. 80-30) if the plan, trust, and amendments are submitted with such application form. Notwithstanding the above, the employer can use Form 6406 in requesting determination letters on Model Plans only after a determination letter has once been issued with respect to all provisions of that plan.

SEC. 5. DETERMINATION LETTERS

Key District Directors will issue determination letters on the qualification under section 401 of the Code of the Model Plans described above and amendments thereto, and on the exemption from federal income tax of trusts forming part of such plans. Applications for such determination letters will be processed in accordance with procedures set forth in Rev. Proc. 80-30, as modified by Rev. Proc. 81-19 and this Revenue Procedure.

SEC. 6. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

01. Rev. Proc. 77-15, 1977-1 C.B. 572, is obsolete and may not be relied upon after the date of publication of this Revenue Procedure in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

02. Rev. Proc. 80-30, 1980-1 C.B. 685, is modified to remove therefrom sections 2.08 and 15.011 and to permit use of Form 5307 in accordance with this Revenue Procedure.

SEC. 7. EFFECTIVE DATE

This Revenue Procedure is effective February 6, 1984, the date of its publication in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. However, employers who adopted Model plans pursuant to Rev. Proc. 77-15 may continue to rely on those adoptions during the period described in section 4.02.

26 CFR 601.602: Tax forms and instructions. (Also Part I, Section 6011; 1.601-1.)

Rev. Proc. 84-9

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

This revenue procedure states the Internal Revenue Service (the Service) requirements relating to acceptable privately designed and printed (reproduced) or computer-prepared substitute federal tax return forms, (i.e., Forms 1040, 1040A, 1040EZ, 1120, 940, 941, etc.) and computer-generated substitute schedules or forms to be attached thereto. It also authorizes the use of reproductions of official forms and gives direction for the proper completion of returns.

SEC. 2. SCOPE

This revenue procedure is the guide for preparing substitutes for most printed, computer-prepared and computer-generated tax forms. This procedure does not include guidance for Form 1040-ES, Form 1042S, Form 5498, the Form 1099 series, and the Form W-2 series. (See Sec. 18 to obtain guidance for the excluded forms.)

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS USED HERE

.01 Substitute Form. A tax form (or related schedule) that differs in any way from the official version and is intended to replace the entire form that is printed and distributed by the Service. This term also covers those approved substitute forms exhibited in this revenue procedure.

.02 Printed Form. A form produced using conventional printing processes. Also, a printed form which has been reproduced by photocopying or similar processes.

.03 Preprinted Pin-Fed Form. A printed form that has marginal perforations for use with automated and high-speed printing equipment.

.04 Computer-Prepared Substitute Form. A pre-printed form in which the taxpayer's name, address and tax entry information has been inserted by a computer, computer-printer or other computer-type equipment, such as word-processing equipment.

.05 Computer-Generated Substitute Form. A form that is entirely prepared by the use of a computer printer so that all the line numbers, line captions, and the tax amount data entries are in the same typeface. No graphics usually appear on the form. (Most tax returns requiring signature and establishing tax liability may not be computer generated. Among them are Forms 1040, 1040A, 1040EZ, and 1120.)

.06 Manually Prepared Form. A pre-printed form in which the taxpayer's name, address, and tax entry information is entered by an individual using a pen, pencil, typewriter, or other non-automated equipment.

.07 Graphics. Those parts of a printed tax form that are not tax amount entries or called-for information. Generally, these are line numbers, captions, instructions, special indicators, borders, rules, and strokes created by typesetting, photo-graphics, photo-composition, etc.

.08 Acceptable Reproduced Form. A photocopy of an original form or of an unchanged reproduction proof supplied by the Service. (A reproduction is not a substitute form.)

.09 Supporting Statement (Supplemental Schedule). A document providing detailed information to support an entry for a line(s) on an official or approved substitute form and filed with (attached to) a tax return. (A supporting statement is not a tax form and does not take the place of an official form, unless specifically permitted elsewhere in this procedure).

SEC. 4. MESSAGE TO TAX RETURN PREPARERS

IF YOU PLAN TO CHANGE OR MODIFY ANY TAX FORMS, YOU MUST FOLLOW INTERNAL REVENUE PROCEDURES, AND, IN MANY CASES, YOU MUST GET OFFICIAL APPROVAL BEFORE USING SUBSTITUTE FORMS. THE SERVICE IS CONTINUING A PROGRAM TO IDENTIFY AND CONTACT TAX RETURN PREPARERS USING UNAPPROVED FORMS WHICH DO NOT CONFORM TO THIS REVENUE PROCEDURE AND IMPEDE PROCESSING OF THE RETURN.

SEC. 5. HIGHLIGHTS OF PERMITTED CHANGES AND REQUIREMENTS

.01 THINGS YOU CAN DO TO INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE PRINTED TAX FORMS TO MAKE THEM SUITABLE FOR USE AS SUBSTITUTE TAX FORMS. PRIOR APPROVAL IS NOT REQUIRED.

1 You can PHOTOCOPY any tax form and use it instead of the official one.

2 You can REPRODUCE ANY CURRENT tax form as cut sheets, snap-sets, and marginally-punched, pin-fed forms, so long as you use an official Service version of the master copy. Official versions are supplied by the Service, such as those in the taxpayer's tax package, those in Package X, those printed in revenue procedures, and reproduction proofs sold by the Service.

3 You can ADJUST the graphics on specified areas of printed Forms 1040 and 1040A (and other forms) to allow for computer-printed or word processor fill-in. Only the areas listed in this revenue procedure may be adjusted without specific prior approval.

4 You can PRINT AND DUPLICATE the substitute "worksheet-type" versions of Schedules A and B of Form 1040 (see exhibits). The Service will accept these substitute schedules instead of the official versions. These Schedules serve different purposes. One allows the form to contain state tax information which is blocked out before filing with the sevice. The other allows the form to be used singly or as part of a snap-set.

.02 THINGS YOU CANNOT DO TO INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE PRINTED TAX FORMS TO MAKE THEM SUITABLE FOR USE AS SUBSTITUTE TAX FORMS.

1 You cannot, without prior Service approval, change any Internal Revenue Service tax forms or use your own (non-approved) version, unless specifically permitted by revenue procedure.

2 You cannot adjust any of the graphics on Forms 1040, 1040A and 1040EZ (except in those areas specified in revenue procedures) without prior approval from the Service.

3 Generally, you cannot use your own version of Schedule A (Form 1040) UNLESS YOU FIRST GET IT APPROVED. The Service wants only one Schedule A—either yours or ours; yours needs prior approval from the Service.

4 With some exceptions, you cannot omit filling out pertinent referenced (numbered or lettered) lines of the official Schedule A (and other tax forms) when attaching a supporting statement. Exceptions to line completion requirements are listed in this revenue procedure.

5 You cannot use your own preprinted label on tax returns filed with the Service. The ONLY label permitted is the one provided the taxpayers in their tax packages. Otherwise, the taxpayer's name, address, and other identifying information must be entered on the return in the spaces provided.

.03 THINGS YOU CAN DO TO FILE COMPUTER-PREPARED/GENERATED FORMS. PRIOR APPROVAL IS NOT REQUIRED.

1 You can DUPLICATE the approved, computer-generated formats of SCHEDULES A, B, C, D, E, F, G, R, RP, SE, W (of this revenue procedure) and use them without prior approval.

2 You can FILL IN official Internal Revenue Service supplied forms using computer or word-processing equipment. Internal Revenue Service forms are designed for a vertical spacing of six lines to the inch, with money amount columns wide enough to allow for the computer printing of ten characters.

3 You can CHANGE CERTAIN SPECIFIED AREAS on the Forms 1040 and 1040A (spelled out in the revenue procedures) to assist computer-printing requirements and to allow for a little more room on certain lines.

4 If you meet the requirements, standards, and qualifications of this revenue procedure, you can, without prior approval, computer-generate your own substitutes of the tax forms (except for actual tax returns) not exhibited here. (See Agreement in Sec. 21)

.04 THINGS YOU CANNOT DO TO INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE FORMS.

1 You cannot use computer graphics on any Internal Revenue Service form without prior approval. (See Exception in Sec. 22).

2 You cannot computer-generate the TAX RETURNS THEMSELVES (i.e. forms requiring signatures and that establish tax liability; for example, Forms 1040, 1040A, 1400EZ, 1120, 940 and 941). These forms must be preprinted using conventional printing processes, photocopying or similar reproduction processes. The forms may be filled in by a computer, by a word processor, or the like, but the forms themselves must be printed like the Service versions are. First-time users of forms designed using computer graphics submitted must receive prior written approval. (See Exception in Sec. 22)

SEC. 6. APPROVAL

.01 Basic Requirements. Preparers who desire to file substitute privately designed and printed tax forms and/or computer-generated and computer-prepared tax forms must develop such substitutes using these guidelines. These substitutes, unless excepted by revenue procedure, must be approved by the Service before being filed.

.02 Requests for Approval.

1 IRS cannot approve your substitute form until the official form has been published. Please propose your substitute after you have examined the official form.

2 You should know the IRS revenue procedure relating to the official form before you attempt to alter the form to meet your needs. Any alteration of forms must be within the limits acceptable to the Internal Revenue Service. It is possible that, from one filing period to another, a change in law or a change in internal need (processing, audit, compliance, etc.) may change the allowable limits for the alteration of the official form.

3 When specific approval of any substitute form is desired, a sample of the proposed substitute should be forwarded for consideration by letter to the Internal Revenue Service, Attention: Substitute Forms Program Coordinator, D:R:R:I, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20224. To expedite multiple forms approval, we prefer that your proposed forms be submitted in separate sets by return. For example, Forms 1040 and their normally related schedules or attachments should be separated from Forms 1120, etc., if at all possible. Schedules and forms (i.e., Forms 3468, 4136, etc.) that can be used with more than one type of substitute return (1040, 1041, 1120, etc.) should be submitted only once for approval, regardless of the number of different tax returns they may ultimately be associated with.

4 As no IRS office outside Washington, D.C. is authorized to approve substitute forms, unnecessary delay may result if forms are sent elsewhere for approval. All such forms must be forwarded to the above address for formal control, review, and official approval.

.03 When to Send Proposed Substitutes. Proposed substitutes should be sent to the address listed in .02 above, as much in advance of the filing period for the form as possible. This is to allow adequate time for analysis and response and to permit notice to our field offices that your substitute is acceptable. Quarterly filed forms, such as the Form 941, must be submitted by the first day of the last month of the quarter.

.04 Accompanying Statement. When the sample substitute is submitted, there should be an accompanying statement that lists the form number of each substitute requested and details those items that deviate from the official form in position, arrangement, appearance, line numbers, additions, deletions, etc. Included with each of the items should be a detailed reason or justification for the change and an approximation of the number of forms expected to be filed.

.05 Approval/Non-Approval Letter. The Service sends a formal letter of approval/non-approval. Approval letters may contain qualifications for use of the substitutes. Non-approval letters may specify the changes required for approval, but also may require resubmission for approval.

.06 Duration of Approval.

1 Approvals are good for only one calendar year (January through December) or, in the case of corporation tax forms (with the exception noted below), for the remainder of the quarters of the calendar year.

2 PLEASE NOTE: In most cases each new filing season requires a new approval, even if the official form does not change. But see the exceptions in 3 and 4 below.

3 Exception: Quarterly tax forms in the 94X series (941, 942, etc.) are approved only for one quarter. Each new quarter requires a new approval.

4 Exception: Limited continued use of a minor change approved for a tax year 1982 form is allowed for the same form in tax year 1983. See 07. below for the limitations and for other requirements. Examples of such changes are the use of abbreviated words, revised form spacing, compressed text lines, shortened captions, etc., which do not change the consistency of lines or text on the official forms.

.07 Limited Continued Use of an Approved Change.

1 If you received written approval of a tax year 1982 substitute form governed by this revenue procedure and wish to continue to use the approved change in your tax year 1983 substitute form, you may revise the official form current in 1983 to include this change, and without additional written approval, use it as a tax year 1983 substitute form, PROVIDED you comply with the requirements in this revenue procedure. See exception in 2 below.

2 This means that if you received written approval for a specific change on a specific form last year, you may again make the same change on the same form this year, if the item changed is present on this year's official form. Thus, the change allowed in last year's approved substitute Schedule A, for example, can be continued in your new substitute for this year. This does not, however, include continuation of the limited approval previously granted authorizing extended use of the 1981 (double-column format) Schedule A, during the 1982 tax year only. The new substitute does not have to be sent to the IRS, and written approval is not required. However, the new substitute must conform to the official 1983 form in other respects: date, Office of Management and Budget (OMB) approval number, Paperwork Reduction Act Notice Statement, sequence number, arrangement, item caption, line number, line reference, sequence, etc. It must also comply with this revenue procedure—which may have eliminated, added to, or otherwise changed the guideline which affected the change approved last year. Additionally, you will be bound by the "Agreement" in Section 21.
EXCEPTION: Those written approvals which stated that the approved change or form would not be allowed in any other tax year.

3 This authorization for continued use of an approved change is limited to the continuation of design logic from a tax year 1982 substitute form to a tax year 1983 substitute form.

.08 Requested Copies. In our letter of approval, you may be requested to send to the Service eleven (11) copies of each approved form. When received, the copies will be used to notify Internal Revenue Service Centers that your substitute forms are approved. The requested forms should be assembled in sets. A set constitutes a return with the related schedules and forms in the same order as they will be filed, i.e., Form 1040, Schedules A, B, C, etc., Forms 2440, 2441, etc.

.09 Responsibility. Following the receipt of initial approval for a substitute forms package, or of a software output program to print substitute forms, it is the responsibility of the originator (designer or distributor) to provide each subsequent client firm or individual with the pertinent Service forms requirements which must be met for continuing acceptability. Examples of this responsibility include the use of prescribed print paper, font size, legibility, state tax data deletion, the legal requirement of the Paperwork Reduction Act Notice for informing all users of substitute forms of the official use and collection requirements stated in the instructions for the official IRS forms, completion of documents, etc.

SEC. 7. OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET (OMB) REQUIREMENTS FOR ALL SUBSTITUTE FORMS

.01 New Legal Requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. Public Law 96-511 requires that: (1) OMB approve IRS tax forms, (2) each IRS form contains (in the upper right corner) the OMB approval number and any expiration date, and (3) each IRS form (or its instructions) state why IRS is collecting the information, how it will be used, and whether or not the information is required to be furnished. This information must be provided to every user of any official or substitute tax form.

.02 Application to Substitute Forms.

1 Approval Number and Date Is Required. All substitute forms must contain in the upper right corner (see Marginal Printing, Sec. 11.02.1(c)) the OMB number and any expiration date that is on the IRS form.

2 Format Required (3 Options).

(a) OMB No. XXXX-XXXX (preferred)
or
OMB # XXXX-XXXX

(b) OMB No. XXXX-XXXX (preferred)
Expires XXXXXX (mmddyy)
or
OMB # XXXX-XXXX
Expires XXXXXX (mmddyy)

(c) OMB No. XXXX-XXXX Expires XXXXXX (mmddyy) (preferred)
or
OMB # XXXX-XXXX Expires XXXXXX (mmddyy)

3 Required Explanation to Users of Substitute Forms. You must also inform the users of your substitute forms of the IRS use and collection requirements stated in the instructions for the official IRS form.

.03 Obtaining OMB Number, Date, and Statement. The OMB approval number, expiration date, and use and collection requirements may be obtained from the IRS printed form (or its instructions), the reproduction proof (or instructions), or from IRS.

SEC. 8. GENERAL GUIDELINES

.01 Official Form Is the Standard. Because a substitute form is a variation from the official form, you should know the requirements of the official form for the year of use before you modify it to meet your needs. For the most frequently used tax forms, the quickest way to obtain an official form is to request reproduction proofs of these forms. (See Sec. 20.)

.02 Design. Each form must follow the design of the official form as to format, arrangement, item caption, line numbers, line references, and sequence.

.03 State Tax Information Prohibited. State tax information must not appear (be visible) on the federal tax return which is filed with the Internal Revenue Service Center, except where amounts are claimed on or required by the federal return, e.g., line 8, Schedule A (Form 1040). (See Sec. 12.05 Block Out Methods.)

.04 Federal and State Columns. When a form is designed with both federal and state columns, THE FEDERAL COLUMN MUST BE TO THE LEFT OF THE STATE COLUMN AND ADJACENT TO THE LINE CAPTION.

.05 Vertical Alignment of Amount Fields.

1 When a form is to be computer-prepared, you may remove the vertical line in the amount field that separates dollars from cents. When a form is to be computer-generated, vertically align the amount entry fields where possible. You must also use one of the ten-character amount formats shown in Sec. 23.04.

2 When a form is to be manually prepared, the federal column must have a vertical line or some type of indicator in the amount field to separate dollars from cents if the official form has a vertical line. The cents columns must be at least ⅛-inch wide.

.06 Sequence Number. Please note that most forms have a recently added "sequence number" located just below the year designation in the upper right corner of the form. Form 1040 also has one opposite line 56 on the left side. The Service uses this number to indicate the order in which forms are processed when filed with a return. On computer-prepared forms it must be printed no less than 12-point, bold-face type and centered below the form's year designation. On computer-generated forms, place this sequence number following the year designation for the tax form and separate with an asterisk. (Example: 1983 * 07).

.07 Forms with Sequence Numbers Required. THE SEQUENCE NUMBER IS REQUIRED ON THE FORMS LISTED BELOW. Please note that some of the numbers have been changed since last year.

.08 Paid Preparer's Information and Signature Area.

1 On Forms 1040A, 1040, and 1120 etc., the "Paid Preparer's Use Only" area may not be rearranged or relocated. You may, however, add three extra lines to the paid preparer's address area without prior approval. This applies to other tax forms as well.

2 On Form 1040EZ this information must be provided at the bottom of the form below the taxpayer's signature area. As an alternative, the printed Paid Preparer's Information and Signature Area from either a Form 1040 or 1040A may be attached to the bottom of Form 1040EZ.

.09 Assemblage of Forms. When filing a return (i.e., Form 1040), the return must be arranged in this order: (1) the tax return, (2) Form 1040 schedules and forms in sequence number order, (3) all others (Form 1120, 1120S, 1065, 1041, etc.), lettered schedules (Schedule D, etc.) in alphabetical order and numbered forms in numerical order (Forms 2220, 4626, etc.), (4) supporting statements in the same sequence as the forms they support, and (5) additional information required or voluntarily submitted. In this way, they are received in the order in which they must be processed. If you do not send them to us in this order, the Service has to disassemble them and place them in this order before processing is continued.

SEC. 9. PHYSICAL ASPECTS AND REQUIREMENTS: PAPER

.01 Paper Content. The paper must be:

1 Chemical wood writing paper that is equal to or better than the quality used for the official form;

2 at least 18 pound (17″ x 22″, 500 sheets) or

3 at least 45 pound (25″ x 38″, 500 sheets).

.02 Paper Prohibited. Carbon-bonded paper is prohibited from use for all substitute forms filed with the Service.

.03 Paper with Chemical Transfer Properties—LIMITED USE. Chemical transfer paper for all substitute forms may be used ONLY when the following specifications are met.

1 Each ply within the chemical transfer set of forms must be labeled.

2 Only the top ply (ply one and white in color), the one which contains chemical on the back only (coated back), may be filed with the Service. For example, a set containing three plies would be constructed as follows: ply one (coated back), "Federal Return, File with IRS"; ply two (coated front and back), "Taxpayer's copy"; and ply three (coated front), "Preparer's copy."

3 The file designation, "Federal Return, File with IRS," for ply one must be printed in the bottom right margin (just below the last line of the form) in 12-point, bold-face type. It is not mandatory, but recommended, that the file designation, "Federal Return, File with IRS," be printed in a contrasting ink for visual emphasis.

4 Carbon Paper. We prefer that you do not attach any carbon paper to any return you file with the Service.

.04 Paper and Ink color. We prefer that the color of paper substantially duplicate that of the original form. You may use white paper. This means that your substitute must be printed in black ink and may be on white or on the color paper the Service form is printed on. An exception to this rule is that Forms 1040A, 1040EZ and 1040 substitute reproductions may be in black ink without the colored screening. Any additional exception to this rule requires written approval from the Service.

.05 Page Size. Substitute or reproduced forms and computer-prepared/generated substitutes may be the same size as the official form (8″ x 11″, in most cases or they may be the standard commercial size (8½″ x 11″) exclusive of pin-feed holes. The thickness of the stock cannot be less than .003 inch.

.06 Lined Paper. Computer-generated substitute forms must be submitted on quality lined, machine paper. Lined, color-barred paper is also acceptable. Lined paper assists Service employees during processing of the returns by allowing speedy and accurate location of tax entries corresponding to line captions. The lines provide the basic means for eye-travel from one side of the form to the other.

.07 Exception to Lined Paper Requirement. If your printer has underlining capability, you do not have to use lined or color-barred paper so long as you underline every other text line on the form. The underlining must be a continuous line and extend from the left text margin to the right text margin and be the same length for all lines on the page.

SEC. 10. PHYSICAL ASPECTS AND REQUIREMENTS: PRINTING

.01 Printing Medium. The private printing of all substitute tax forms must be by conventional printing processes, photocopying, computer-graphics, or similar reproduction processes.

.02 Legibility. All forms must have a high standard of legibility, both as to printing and reproduction and as to fill-in matter. The Service reserves the right to reject those with poor legibility.

.03 Type Font. Almost all federal tax forms are printed using "News Gothic" as the basic type font. We request that you use this type font when composing any substitute forms.

.04 Image Size. The image size of printed substitute forms should be as close as possible to that of the official form. You may omit any text on both computer-prepared and computer-generated forms that is solely instructional.

.05 Title Area Changes. To allow a larger top margin for marginal printing and more lines per page (see Sec. 11 below), the title line(s) for all substitute forms (not including the form's year designation and sequence code, when present), may be photographically reduced by 40 percent or reset as one line of type. When reset as one line, the type size may be no smaller than 14-point. You may omit "Department of the Treasury Internal Revenue Service" and reference to instructions in the form's title area.

.06 Remove Government Printing Office Symbol. When privately printing substitute tax forms, the Government Printing Office symbol and/or jacket number must be removed. In the same place, using the same type size, print the Employer Identifying Number (EIN) or the Social Security Number (SSN) of the printer or designer.

.07 Printing On One Side of Paper. While it is preferred that both sides of the paper be used for substitute and reproduced forms, resulting in the same page arrangement as that of the official form or schedule, the Service will not object if only one side of the paper is used.

.08 Photocopy Equipment. The Service does not undertake to approve or disapprove the specific equipment or process used in reproducing official forms, but requires only that the reproduced forms satisfy the conditions stated in revenue procedures.

.09 Reproductions. Reproductions of official forms and substitute forms which do not meet the requirements of this revenue procedure may not be filed instead of the official forms.

.10 Removal of Instructions. You may remove all references to instructions. No prior approval is needed.

SEC. 11. PHYSICAL ASPECTS AND REQUIREMENTS: MARGINS

.01 Margin Size.

1 The format of the reproduced tax return when printed on the page must have margins on all sides at least as large as the margins on the official form. This allows room for Service employees to make the necessary entries on the form during processing.

2 A one-half to one quarter inch margin must be maintained across the top, bottom, and both sides (exclusive of any pin-feed holes) of all computer-generated substitutes. The margin area is also used by Service employees to make necessary entries on the form during processing.

.02 Marginal Printing.

1 Non-Tax Material Allowed in Limited Areas.

(a) One any 8- or 8½-inch-wide Service or substitute form, you may print your logo, company or firm name, identifying and collation symbols, etc., in the left half of the top margin.

(c) Printing is never allowed in the right half of the top margin of the tax return form (i.e. Forms 1040, 1040A, 1040EZ, 1120, 940, 941, etc). The Service uses this area to imprint a File Location Number for each return.

2 Prior Approval Not Required. Prior approval is not required for the marginal printing allowed in 1 above when used with the unchanged exhibits in this revenue procedure or when printed on an official form, on a photocopy of an official form or on an (unchanged) IRS reproduction proof.

3 Prior Approval Required. The marginal printing allowance in 1 above is also the guide for the preparation of acceptable substitute forms. There is no exception to the requirement that no printing is allowed in the right half of the top margin of the tax return form.

SEC. 12. APPROVED SUBSTITUTE FORMATS FOR FORM 1040 SCHEDULES

.01 Exhibits of Approved Formats. Two sets of exhibits (Exhibits A-1 and B-1 and A-2 & B-1) are at the end of this revenue procedure. They are acceptable substitutes for the official forms. They are intended to be used in place of the official forms and may be used without prior approval. Both sets are usable for manual entry or computer preparation. Vertical spacing is six (6) lines to the inch. You may also refer to them as examples of how the guidelines in this revenue procedure may be used in some specific cases. Please note that the Service does NOT supply reproduction proofs for these exhibits.

.02 Printing or Duplication of Exhibits A-1 and A-2 and B-1 and B-2. You may (1) print these exhibits or (2) duplicate them photographically or by using photo-reproduction techniques, PROVIDING YOUR PRINTED OR REPRODUCED IMAGES ARE EXACTLY LIKE THE ONES IN THE EXHIBITS. WITH THE EXCEPTION NOTED BELOW, NOTHING CAN BE CHANGED.

.03 EXCEPTION. In Exhibit A-1 and A-2 you may change the areas containing "other" items (lines 4c, 11, 15, 18 and 24), as follows: (1) the areas inside the perimeter of the boxes containing the dash-leaders (---) and designated by the circled numbers may be used to print any particular deduction item associated with the corresponding deduction category, and (2) the dash-leaders may be removed (BUT YOU MAY NOT CHANGE THE AMOUNT COLUMN BOX SIZE OR POSITION).

1 Exhibit A-1. This substitute Schedule A format may be used as a single sheet or as one of the copies of a snap-set. It is designed to be used in place of the official Schedule A (Form 1040).

2 Exhibit A-2. This substitute Schedule A format may be used as a single sheet when both federal and state tax information is placed on the same form.

3 No State Tax Information. NO STATE TAX INFORMATION CAN APPEAR ON THESE FORMS WHEN FILED WITH THE FORM 1040. THE STATE COLUMN MAY BE PRESENT BUT THE STATE TAX INFORMATION MUST NOT BE VISIBLE WHEN FILED WITH THE SERVICE. We prefer that the entire state column be COMPLETELY BLOCKED OUT.

.05 BLOCK OUT METHODS. A suggested method to block out the state tax information is: (1) place the substitute form in a clear plastic folder, (2) on the folder, place a strip of opaque material the exact width and length of the column you wish to block out, then (3) photocopy the substitute form while still in the folder. The result will be a form with only the federal tax information visible. Another method is to take a black marking pen and, using either vertical or horizontal strokes, cross out the state figures. Carbon-interleaved sets may be used where the amounts entered in the state column are filled in with black carbon overprint. This copy may be filed with the return.

.06 Exhibits B-1 and B-2. These exhibits correspond to Exhibits A-1 and A-2, the provisions in .04.1 and 2 above apply. Both of these exhibits are acceptable for use in place of the official Schedule B (Form 1040).

.07 Exhibits A-1 and B-1 and A-2 and B-2. These exhibits may be used as sets when the return calls for both Schedule A and B.

Acceptable computer-generated formats for the schedules usually attached to the Form 1040 are shown in the Exhibits section of this revenue procedure. The exhibits are for Schedule A, B, C, D, E, F, G, R, RP, SE and W. All are acceptable substitutes for the official forms. They are intended to be used (without change) in place of the official forms and may be used without prior approval. All lines (including those not used for tax information) must be printed. (Any change to text or format of an exhibit requires prior written approval.) Vertical spacing is six (6) lines to the inch. You may also refer to them as examples of how the guidelines in this revenue procedure may be used in specific cases.

SEC. 13. SPECIFICATIONS FOR FILING SUBSTITUTE SCHEDULES K-1

Prior approval is NOT required for a substitute Schedule K-1 that accompanies Form 1065 (for partnership), a Form 1120-S (for small business corporation), or a Form 1041 (for fiduciary) when the substitute Schedule K-1 meets all of the following requirements.

.01 The Schedule K-1 need contain only the line items required for use by the taxpayer.

.02 The line items must be in the same order and arrangement as those in the official form.

.03 The line items must be numbered, titled, and/or captioned exactly as shown on the official form.

.04 Each taxpayer's information must be on a separate piece of paper.

SEC. 14. REQUIRED PREPARATION OF FORMS

.01 Completely Fill In Lines. You must completely fill in all the applicable numbered or reference lines on computer-prepared or generated forms (not just the totals) BUT ALL THE ITEMS THAT MAKE UP THE TOTALS AS WELL before attaching any supporting statement (see Sec. 15 below for exceptions).

.02 IRS Processing of Forms. The Service processes the return based on information entered on the official forms or approved substitutes. References are made to attachments ONLY as required by law and as processing requirements direct. When you fail to complete all the pertinent lines on the official forms, Internal Revenue Service Tax Examiners have to locate the information on your attachment and write it on the proper line of the official form. This unfortunate process causes delays in processing the return and increases the potential for errors both in transcription and in interpretation.

.03 Notification of Preparers. THE SERVICE IS CONTINUING A PROGRAM TO NOTIFY PREPARERS WHO FAIL TO MEET THE REQUIREMENT TO COMPLETELY FILL IN LINES.

SEC. 15. EXCEPTIONS TO LINE COMPLETION REQUIREMENTS

.01 Zero Entries. Detailed information for any deduction or income category may be omitted from the printout if the category total to be reported is zero. However, the substitute form must show the total (zero when applicable) for each category. This means when no tax information is applicable, leave the line blank.

.02 Lines Captioned "Other" (All Forms). It is not necessary to fill in every numbered or referenced line of tax forms when the line caption calls for "Other," i.e., "Other (itemize)," "Other (specify)," "Other (attach schedule), etc. Examples of this exception are lines 4c, 11, 15, 18 and 24 for Schedule A, Form 1040. When this occurs, you may use a supporting statement and enter only the total amount of these "Other" items on the line of the official form. However, we prefer that you use the space on the official form when it is adequate.

.03 Schedule A (Form 1040). All numbered and lettered lines must be filled in, if applicable. Supporting statements may be used to give the details of the totals entered on such lines but may not be used as a substitute for a collection of lines. For example, the detailed information for "Taxes" may not be shown on a supporting statement (supplemental schedule) and only line 12 filled in. Also, for example, the details of "State and local income taxes" may be shown on a supporting statement and the total of such taxes entered on line 8. Also, the total of itemized deductions must be entered on line 26.

.04 Schedule B (Form 1040). Lines 2, 4 and 9 need not be filled in on the form. A supporting statement may be used for the details of interest and dividend income and the appropriate totals of such income entered on lines 3, 5 and 10 unless nominee distribution or accrued interest criteria apply. (See the tax package instructions concerning interest).

.05 Schedule C (Form 1040). All lines must be filled in when applicable except the lines where "Other expenses-specify" are listed. (See instruction in .02 above).

.06 Schedule E (Form 1040).

1 When there are entries on page 1 for any of the Part I, the following requirements must be met: (1) in Part I, lines 1 and 2, the questions must be answered and tax information must be entered on the lines provided.

2 Supporting statements may be used for the details of rental and royalty income and expenses. The appropriate totals must be carried and entered in the total column for lines 3, 17, 18 and 21 through 25.

3 Part II (page 2)—The income and loss from various partnerships, estates or trusts, and small business corporations also may be detailed on a supporting statement, but the appropriate total income and total loss must be entered on lines 26 through 40.

.07 Form 4562. This form need not always be used to report depreciation. Instead, you may use a supporting statement so long as it contains the same information as called for on the Form 4562. It is important that your form provides the required computations equivalent to the official form so that related return entries can be confirmed and/or recomputed if required.

.08 Schedule F (Form 1040). If the cash method is used, only page one is needed. Otherwise both pages one and two must be entirely printed.

SEC. 16. SUPPORTING STATEMENTS

.01 Use of Supporting Statements. SUPPORTING STATEMENTS ARE TO BE USED TO SUPPORT LINE ENTRIES ON THE OFFICIAL FORM. Unless specifically authorized by this revenue procedure (see Sec. 15), THEY MUST NOT BE USED TO AVOID COMPLETING REQUIRED LINES ON THE OFFICIAL FORM.

.02 Requirements for Supporting Statements. Supporting statements must: (1) provide details and explain entries made on the official form, (2) furnish all required information in the same sequence as called for on the official form, and (3) furnish any additional information in the order of appearance on the form to which it refers.

.03 Cross-Reference. Each supporting statement must be referenced to the form it supports, and the entry on the form must be cross-referenced to the supporting statement. For example, put "Statement X" on the top of the supporting statement that contains the identified line number and the supporting information, and put "See Statement X" on the line of the form that references the statement.

.04 Extent of Use. You may attach supporting statements to explain or support any line item on an official or approved substitute form.

.05 Assemblage. For filing purposes, supporting statements are not attached directly to their related forms. Rather, all supporting statements are assembled in the same sequence as the forms they support; they are then placed after the lettered and numbered forms (See Sec. 8.09).

.06 Multiple Supporting Statements. Supporting statements for each numbered or lettered tax form may be on one page or may be on multiple pages. But each numbered or lettered form must have a separate page for its supporting statement(s). Each page should be the size of the form it supports, or it may be 8″ x 11″ or 8½″ x 11″.

.07 Not Reviewed for Approval. The Service does not give its approval for specific supporting statements. The taxpayer or the tax practitioner for the taxpayer, must meet the needs as they arise, using the guidelines in this revenue procedure.

SEC. 17. SPECIFICATIONS FOR FILING SUBSTITUTE FORMS

.01 Filing Substitute Forms. Follow the same instructions as for filing official forms. These instructions are in the taxpayer's tax package.

.02 Computer-Prepared Tax Forms. For filing purposes the Service will accept computer-prepared tax forms (i.e., Forms 1040, 1040A, 1040EZ, 1120, 940, 941, etc.) filled in by a computer or by word-processing equipment, but these forms MUST be pre-printed.

.03 Computer-Generated Forms. For filing purposes, the Service will accept computer-generated versions of forms that are attached to individual and business income tax returns, provided the substitutes and their manner of completion meet the guidelines prescribed herein.

.04 Combination of Manually Prepared and Computer-Prepared/Generated Forms. For filing purposes, the Service will accept substitute tax forms that contain a combination of computer-prepared/generated and manually filled in information.

.05 Taxpayer and Preparer Signatures. All taxpayer signatures on forms to be filed with the Service must be original signatures, affixed subsequent to the reproduction process. However, the income tax preparer can satisfy the manual signature requirement by signing a completed income tax return form, making a photocopy of the return form, and having the taxpayer sign and file the photocopy. (See Rev. Rul. 78-370, 1978-2 C.B. 336.)

.06 Use Preaddressed Label. When filing substitute or reproduced forms, use the preaddressed label included in the tax package the Service sent to the taxpayer. Use of the label avoids larger processing costs because it reduces the potential for error—the kind of error which can delay the receipt of refund and information needed by the taxpayer. No other label may be used.

.07 Use Internal Revenue Service Envelope. When filing substitute or reproduced forms, use the envelope enclosed with the taxpayer's tax package. This envelope is coded for sorting into several categories. Use of the coded envelope can help speed up the processing and reduce processing costs. Do not use the Service-provided, tax-package envelope for other correspondence with the Service, as its misuse can delay the correspondence.

.08 Voluntarily Submitted Information. Additional information required or voluntarily submitted should be on the same size paper as the official form and attached to the return following the supporting statements. (See Sec. 8.09.)

SEC. 18. GUIDANCE FROM OTHER REVENUE PROCEDURES

Guidance for the substitute tax forms not covered in this revenue procedure and the revenue procedures which govern their use, are as follows:

Order for Reproduction Proofs. Form 6747 can be obtained by written request to Internal Revenue Service, PM:S:FM:P, Attention: Reproduction Proof Coordinator, Room 1528, 1111 Constitution Ave., N.W., Washington, DC 20224.

.02 Basic specifications, such as margin, pagination, etc., will be printed in the margins of the reproduction proofs and must be removed before printing. The official reproduction proof margins across the top, bottom, and sides must be maintained on all reproductions and substitute forms.

.03 A charge of $1.00 per page will be made for each reproduction proof regardless of page size. After an order has been filled, invoices will be maled to the requestor.

SEC. 21. AGREEMENT

Any person or company who uses substitute forms and makes all or part of the changes specified in this revenue procedure, agrees to the following stipulation: The Service presumes the changes are made in accordance with these procedures and, as such, will be noninterruptive to the processing of the tax return. Should any of the changes prove to be not exactly as described, and as a result become disruptive to the Service during processing of the tax return, the person or company agrees to accept the determination of the Service as to whether or not the form may continue to be used during the filing season, and also agrees to work with the Service in correcting noted deficiencies. Notification of deficiencies may be made by letter, phone call, or both.

1 COMPUTER-GENERATED VERSIONS.

Computer-generated versions of a tax return form (e.g. Form 1040, 1040EZ, 1040A, 1120, 940, 941 etc.) which requires a signature are not permitted. Only preprinted substitutes of these forms are allowed. Approval is extended to consider certain types of computer-generated graphic formats as acceptable "preprinted" substitutes. All such forms must have formal approval prior to their use.

2 COMPUTER-GENERATED GRAPHICS—First Time Users.

First-time users who design substitute forms using computer-graphics (e.g. laser printing), dot matrix (addressable printing, etc.) must receive prior approval before using them. Exception: Experienced users who have previously received written approval from the Service for tax forms do not need written approval before using their forms. This assumes that all new requirements for the tax year have been fully complied with, based on actual comparison with the final versions of the official IRS forms. However, users are bound by agreement in Sec. 21.

.02 FILL-IN INFORMATION.

The tax return form itself (i.e., 1040, 1040A, 1040EZ, 1120, 940, 941, etc.) may be filled in by a computer printer or other similar automated equipment, but the form itself must be created beforehand (i.e. preprinted) using conventional printing methods, photocopying, computer-graphics (laser printing) or other similar reproduction processes.

.03 CHANGES PERMITTED TO THE FORMS 1040, 1040A & 1040EZ.

1 Certain changes (listed below) are permitted to the graphics of the form without prior approval, but these changes apply only to preprinted forms as described in .02 above.

2 Changes not requiring prior approval are good only for the annual filing period, January through December.

3 Other Changes Not Listed. All changes not listed here require prior approval from the Service BEFORE the form may be filed with the Service.

SEC. 23. CHANGES PERMITTED TO GRAPHICS (FORMS 1040A, 1040 AND 1040EZ)

Changes Permitted to the Graphics on Forms 1040, 1040A and 1040EZ and, Where Applicable, on Other Forms as Well for Use With Computer-Prepared (i.e. printed forms Only).

.01 Adjustments.

You may make minor vertical and horizontal spacing adjustments to allow for computer or word-processing printing. This includes widening the amount columns or tax entry areas so long as the adjustments do not exceed other provisions stated in revenue procedures. No prior approval is needed for these changes. However, the user of forms with such changes are bound by the "Agreement" in Section 21.

.02 Name and Address Area.

1 The horizontal rules and instructions within the name and address area may be removed and the entire area left blank; no line or instruction can remain in the area.

2 The heavy ruled border (when present) that outlines the name and address area must not be removed, relocated, expanded or contracted.

3 Required Format

(a) When the name and address area is left blank, as provided in 1 above, the following format MUST be used when printing the taxpayer's name and address. Otherwise, unless the taxpayer's preprinted label is affixed over the information entered in this area, the lines must be filled-in as shown.

1st name line (35 characters maximum)

In-care-of name line (35 characters maximum)

Street address (35 characters maximum)

City, State (24 char. max.), one blank char., & zip (five char.)

(b) When there is no in-care-of name line, the name and address will consist of only three lines. Examples of the formats follow:

Example of name and address with NO in-care-of name line:

JOHN AND MARY JONES
1234 ANYWHERE ST. APT 111
ANYTOWN, DC. 12345

Example of name and address WITH in-care-of name line:

JOHN AND MARY JONES
C/O THOMAS A. JONES
4311 SOMEWHERE AVE.
SAMETOWN, DC 54321

(c) YOU MAY NOT USE YOUR OWN PREADDRESSED LABEL ON ANY INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE FORM.

(d) The ONLY label that may be used is the OFFICIAL INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE LABEL SUPPLIED to the taxpayer in his/her tax package. Please use the official Internal Revenue Service supplied label to help reduce errors.

(e) For identification purposes, you may computer print the taxpayer's name and address on the form and afterward affix the OFFICIAL INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE SUPPLIED LABEL over the computer printed address. This applies whether or not the horizontal rules and the instructions have been removed from the address area.

.03 Social Security Number (SSN) AND Employer Identification Number (EIN) Area.

1 The vertical lines separating the format arrangement of the SSN/EIN may be removed.

2 When the vertical lines are removed, the SSN and EIN formats must be 000-00-0000 or 00-0000000, respectively.

.04 Cents Columns.

1 You may remove the vertical rule that separates the dollars from the cents.

2 All entries in the amount column should have a decimal point following the whole dollar amounts whether or not the vertical line that separates the dollars from the cents is present.

3 You may omit printing the cents, but all amounts entered on the form must follow a consistent format. YOU ARE STRONGLY URGED TO ROUND OFF THE FIGURES TO WHOLE DOLLAR AMOUNTS.

4 When printing money amounts, you must use one of the following ten-character formats: (a) 0,000,000. (b) 000,000.00

5 When there is no entry for a line, leave the line blank.

.05 "Paid Preparer's Use Only" Area.

1 On all forms, where present, the paid preparer's information area may NOT be rearranged or relocated.

2 You may add three lines and remove the horizontal rules in the preparer's address area.

3 Form 1040EZ preparers must sign the return and provide all other required information. This information should be provided at the bottom of the form below the taxpayer's signature area. (See Section 8.)

SEC. 24. CHANGES PERMITTED TO FORM 1040A GRAPHICS

No prior approval is needed for the following changes (for use with computer-prepared forms only).

The line caption may be compressed vertically to one line (to allow for same line entry for the name of the qualifying unmarried child) by using the following caption:

"Head of household; unmarried childs's name. . . . . ." name field

To allow for a two-line field for printing dependent children's names, you may shorten the caption to:

"Dep. children" (names field)

1 The number of lines for listing "other dependents" may be expanded to a maximum of 5.

2 Column captions may be shortened to one line descriptions.

.04 LINE 9a (and 9b).

These lines may be changed to allow larger amount entry fields by removing references to instructions.

.05 Other Lines.

Any line whose caption takes up two or more vertical lines may be compressed to one line by using contractions, etc., and by removing instructional references.

All lines must be present and numbered in the order shown on the official form. (Note that Page 2 has been substantially revised for 1983.)

SEC. 25. OTHER CHANGES PROHIBITED

NO OTHER CHANGES TO THE FORM 1040A GRAPHICS ARE ALLOWED WITHOUT PRIOR APPROVAL.

SEC. 26. CHANGES PERMITTED TO THE FORM 1040 GRAPHICS (FOR USE WITH COMPUTER-PREPARED FORMS ONLY)

No prior approval is needed for the following changes:

.01 Line 4. This line may be compressed horizontally (to allow for a larger entry area for the name of the qualifying unmarried child) by using the following caption:

"Head of household; unmarried child's name" (name field)

To allow for a two-line field for printing dependent children's names you may shorten the caption to:

"Dep. children" (names field)

1 The vertical lines separating columns (1) through (5) may be removed. The captions may be shortened to allow a one-line caption for each column.

2 The number of lines for listing "other dependents" may be expanded to a maximum of 5 by compressing other noted areas and lines.

.04 Other Lines.

Any other line whose caption takes up two or more vertical lines may be compressed to one line by using contractions, etc., and by removing instructional references.

.05 Line 21.

1 This line may be expanded vertically to a maximum of 3 lines.

2 The amount entry box must remain a single entry and the cross hatched shading must extend down the numbered line box to the same number of lines you add.

.06 Line 38. You may change the line caption to read "Tax" and computer-print either the words "FROM TAX TABLES:" OR "FROM SCHEDULE/FORM" and computer-print the appropriate text.

.07 Line 39. You may change the caption to read: "Additional taxes from Form/Section" and computer-print only the form(s) or/and section number that apply.

SEC. 27. OTHER CHANGES PROHIBITED

NO OTHER CHANGES TO THE FORM 1040 GRAPHICS ARE PERMITTED WITHOUT PRIOR APPROVAL.

SEC. 28. ACCEPTABLE FORMATS OF COMPUTER-GENERATED FORMS AND SCHEDULES

1 Exhibits of acceptable computer-generated formats for the schedules usually attached to the Form 1040 are shown in the Exhibits section of this revenue procedure.

2 Use of Acceptable Formats. If your computer-generated forms appear exactly like the exhibits, no prior authorization is needed.

3 CHANGES TO EXHIBITS NOT PERMITTED WITHOUT PRIOR APPROVAL. Any change to the text or format of any of the exhibits requires PRIOR WRITTEN APPROVAL.

SEC. 29. COMPUTER-GENERATED FORMS NOT SHOWN AS EXHIBITS IN THIS REVENUE PROCEDURE

.01 Those desiring to computer-generate forms not shown here may do so, but they must design such forms themselves by following the manner and style of those in the Exhibits section of this publication and by taking care to observe other requirements and conditions stated here.

.02 Computer-generated forms so designed DO NOT require prior approval from the Service. However, the user of such forms is bound by the "Agreement" in Sec. 21 above.

.03 If you wish, you may submit any substitute form to the Service for approval consideration.

SEC. 30. INSTRUCTIONS FOR PREPARING COMPUTER-GENERATED SUBSTITUTES

.01 Format Arrangement.

The format of each substitute schedule or form must follow the format of the official schedule or form as to item caption, line reference, line numbers, sequence, form arrangement and format, etc. Basically try to make the form look like the official one, with readability being a primary factor. Use periods and/or other special characters to separate the various parts and sections of the form. With the exceptions in .02 below, all line numbers and items must be printed even though an amount is not entered on the line.

1 When a line on an official form is designated by a number or a letter, that designation (reference code) must be used on a substitute form.

2 The reference code must be printed to the left of the corresponding captioned line and also immediately preceding the data field even if there is no reference code immediately preceding the data field on the official form.

3 In addition, the reference code that is immediately before the data field must either be followed by a period or enclosed in parentheses. There also must be at least two blank spaces between the period or the right parentheses and the first character of the data field. (See example below.)

4 A decimal point (i.e., a period) should be used for each money amount regardless of whether the amount is reported in dollars and cents or in whole dollars, or whether or not the vertical line that separates the dollars from the cents is present. The decimal points must be vertically aligned when possible.

Example:

9 REAL ESTATE	9.	495.00
10A GENERAL SALES	10A.
10B GEN SALES MOTOR VEH	10B.	198.00
or
9 REAL ESTATE	(9)	496.00
10A GENERAL SALES	(10A)
10B GEN SALES MOTOR VEH	(10B)	198.00

.03 Multiple Page Forms. With the exceptions noted below, when printing multiple page forms the entire form with all its parts and pages must be printed. When printed on continuous forms, they must be burst and pin-feed holes removed before filing with the return.

.04 Exception to Forms that must be entirely printed in whole or in part. Schedule F. Depending on which accounting method is used, cash or accrual, the following will apply. If the cash accounting method is used only page one needs to be printed. Otherwise both page one and two must be entirely printed.

SEC. 31. ADDITIONAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR ALL FORMS

.01 Internal control numbers and identifying symbols of the computer preparer may be shown on the substitute, if the use of such numbers or symbols is acceptable to the taxpayer and the taxpayer's representative. If shown, such information must not be printed in the top one-half inch clear area, from the center to the right edge, of any form or schedule requiring a signature. With the exception of the actual tax return form (i.e. Forms 1040, 1120, 940, 941, etc.), you may also print in the left vertical and bottom left margins. The bottom left margin you may use extends 3½ inches from the left edge of the form. (See Sec. 11 for more information on this subject.)

.02 Descriptions for captions, lines, etc., appearing on the substitute forms may be limited to one print line by using abbreviations and contractions and by omitting articles, prepositions, etc. However, sufficient key words must be retained to permit ready identification of the caption, line or item.

1 Explanatory detail and/or intermediate calculations for derivation of fine line totals, may be included on the substitute. We prefer that such calculations be submitted in the form of a supporting statement. If intermediate calculations are included on the substitute, the line on which they appear may not be numbered or lettered. Intermediate calculations may not be printed in the right column. This column is reserved for official numbered and lettered lines that correspond to the ones on the official form. If a supporting statement is submitted, intermediate calculations or subtotals may be formatted at the preparer's option.

2 Text prescribed for the official form, which is solely instructional in nature, e.g., "Attach this schedule to Form 1040," "See instructions," etc., may be omitted from the substitute form.

3 Information for more than one schedule may not be shown on the same printout page without prior approval from the Service. Except for computer-generated Schedules A and B (Form 1040), almost any form may be continued on two or more pages if necessary. When a form is continued on two or more pages, clearly identify at the bottom of each page, including page 1, that is continued, e.g., "page 1, Schedule C continued." It is strongly recommended that a substitute form not exceed the same number of pages used for the official form.

4 Identify all computer-prepared substitutes clearly; print the form designation one-half inch from the top margin and one and one-half inches from the left margin; print the title centered on the first line of print; and print the taxable year and, where applicable, the sequence number on the same line one-half to one inch from right margin. Include the taxpayer's name and SSN on all forms and attachments. Also print the OMB number and (when applicable) the forms expiration date.

5 The state tax column may be present, but the state tax information must NOT be visible on the copy filed with the Service. When a form is designed with both federal and state columns, THE FEDERAL COLUMN MUST BE TO THE LEFT OF THE STATE COLUMN AND ADJACENT TO THE LINE CAPTION.

6 Attach all payments (check or money order, no cash) to the front of the tax return.

SEC. 32. FILING SUBSTITUTE FORMS WITH IRS

Follow the same instructions as for filing official forms. These instructions are in the taxpayer's tax package.

SEC. 33. SPECIAL FORM 1040EZ OPTICAL CHARACTER RECOGNITION (OCR) REQUIREMENTS

.01 The 1983 Form 1040EZ is designed in OCR format. IRS has the capability to machine read this form by optical character recognition (OCR) equipment (Scan-Optics-System 540).

.02 It is optional to produce the 1040EZ substitute as a normal (black and white) reproduction, or as an actual OCR version. The following criteria applies if the form is to be OCR scannable. Otherwise, you may print this form under the previous general guidelines of this Revenue Procedure.

.03 An acceptable substitute OCR Form 1040EZ must generally be an exact replica of the official OCR reproduction proof with respect to layout, content and required OCR characteristics.

.04 The specific paper requirements which must be met for the development of substitute (privately printed) forms include the following.

1 Color and quality of paper—Paper must be white, OCR grade bond, with no flourescent additives or water marks, and with zero rag content.

2 Reflectivity of paper—Must be 80% or greater.

3 Opacity—The paper opacity ratio must be 80% or more.

4 Paper Weight—Specified paper weight is 20 lb. OCR bond (.0035").

5 Dirt—Must not exceed 10 parts per million.

6 Finish (smoothness)—Must be between 90 and 160 units (Sheffield).

7 Porosity—Paper should have a Gurley reading between 15 and 95.

8 Gloss—Paper with shiny or lustrous appearance (glossy) should be avoided.

9 Size—Form trim size must be 8" x 11".

.05 The specific ink requirements which must be met for this form include the following.

1 Print Color—The face of the form print in black and green, the back prints in black only.

2 Ink—Green ink used must be highly reflective OCR type such as Sinclair and Valentine J-27975 or an exact match. Black ink used must be non-reflective.

3 Face Registration—Black to green must be .02" (plus or minus) both horizontally and vertically.

4 Face Screen—Forms contain a green screened background equal to a 15% tone of a 110-line screen. Follow registration marks on repro-proof for screen positioning. Handprint boxes are included on Page 1 of the reproduction proof and should be printed as a 50% value of the recommended OCR green ink. Inks used for handprint boxes must reflect at least 90% of the background on which it is printed as measured in the visible range.

5 Face Margins—Approximately ⅜" head from top trimmed edge to screen (½" to black image). ⅛" outside from trimmed edges to screen. Exact margins are provided with repros.

6 Back Margins—½" head, 5/16" foot, and 5/16" sides.

06. Typography—Type must be substantially identical in both size and shape with corresponding type on the official from reproduction proof.

.07 To assure proper alignment and position of hand-printed characters representing return lines 1 through 11 tax data, they must be hand printed (entered) into the preprinted amount field boxes on the form.

A #2 lead wooden pencil is recommended as the writing tool which will consistently provide the required stroke width and print contrast on entered characters.

.08 Reading of handprinted characters requires adherance to the following techniques.

2 Enter numeric amount digits carefully and clearly. Fill at least ⅔ of the individual character box height, keeping the character within the box with no overlapping or touching characters. Specific required digit constraints are shown below.

2 When entering "fours", keep the top open.

3 When entering "one", do not use serifs.

4 When entering "twos", do not add extra loops.

5 All character lines must be connected, with no gaps.

.09 Use Taxpayer's Preaddressed Label. Reproduced OCR Forms 1040EZ must have ONLY the taxpayer's preaddressed label affixed to be processable as an OCR document. Substitute labels and handwritten name/address information is not acceptable.

.10 All the general and detailed provisions of this Revenue Procedure apply (in addition to this specific OCR Section) for the development of substitute OCR Forms 1040EZ.

SEC. 34 EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

This revenue procedure supersedes Revenue Procedure 83-9, 1983-1 C.B. 639 and Revenue Procedure 83-10, 1983-1 C.B. 651.

PART A.—GENERAL

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

.01 The purpose of this revenue procedure is to present the requirements of the computer matching program announced in Internal Revenue Service News Release IR-83-150 (dated 12-2-83) on how payers of reportable interest or dividends can verify the names and taxpayer identification numbers (social security numbers) of their account holders.

.02 Under this revenue procedure, only accounts required to use social security numbers (SSNs) as the taxpayer identification number should be submitted for Service validation. For this project, the IRS will access a file which contains only names and SSNs. Any account submitted with an employer identification number (EIN) will fail the validation and cause an incorrect setting of the Valid/Incorrect Indicator in the Payee "B" Record. Therefore, the payer should delete from the tape file sent to the IRS for validation, all accounts that are properly using EIN's such as corporations, financial institutions, exempt organizations and all others exempt from backup withholding.

.01 This document is a revenue procedure under the Interest and Dividend Tax Compliance Act of 1983 related to backup withholding requirements and the exercise of due diligence under sections 3406 and 6676 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. Section 3406 was added to the Code by section 104 of the Interest and Dividend Tax Compliance Act of 1983 (Pub. L. 98-67, 97 Stat. 371) and section 6676 of the Code was amended by section 105 of the Act (Pub. L. 98-67, 97 Stat. 380). Regulations issued under the Act added a new Part 35a, Temporary Employment Tax Regulations under the Interest and Dividend Tax Compliance Act of 1983, to Title 26 of the Code of Federal Regulations.

.02 Under the Interest and Dividend Tax Compliance Act of 1983, payers of reportable interest, dividends, or patronage dividends are subject to a $50 penalty for each Form 1099 with an incorrect or missing taxpayer identification number unless the payer has exercised "due diligence" in soliciting the number from the payee. In general, to show that due diligence has been exercised in connection with accounts established or instruments acquired on or before December 31, 1983, a payer must have sent a mailing or mailings as described in A-5 and A-6 of section 35a.9999-1 to each payee who has not certified under penalties of perjury that the payee's taxpayer identification number is correct.

.03 Also under the Interest and Dividend Tax Compliance Act of 1983 payers are required to commence backup withholding on any payment made to a payee if the Service notifies the payer that the payee has provided an incorrect taxpayer identification number unless the payee provides corrected information to the payer within 30 days.

.04 This document explains what payers are required to do in order to participate in this computer matching program. Incorrect payee taxpayer identification numbers (social security numbers) on the payer's files will result in penalties to the payer if the payer makes information returns using such numbers and has not exercised due diligence. Payers must send magnetic tape files in the format specified in PART B of this document to the Magnetic Media Coordinator at the Service Center shown in PART A, SEC. 7 of this document. Upon receipt of these records, the Service will compare the payee's name and SSN against a Social Security Administration (SSA) file of SSN/name combinations and will provide the payer/transmitter with tapes on which the payee records have been marked as either valid or incorrect. Because the Service is using the number provided by SSA for such name, an invalid number notification may occur if the payee has not recorded a name change with SSA. Thus, payees will be instructed to contact SSA if the number is correct, but the name is not. Payers are required (1) to notify the payees of the name and social security number listed on the payer's record for that account, (2) to provide a form for use in correcting and certifying the information or for certifying the correctness of listed information; and (3) to notify the payees that backup withholding will commence in 30 days unless the payer receives certified corrected information or certification that the listed information is correct. The Service will provide a form letter for explaining this to payees.

.05 With respect to payees who are identified as having provided incorrect number/name combinations to the payers by the computer matching program, payers will be required to impose backup withholding on payments made to such payee unless the payer receives certified corrected information or certification that the listed information is correct from the payee within 30 days after the Service notifies the payer of such incorrect name and/or taxpayer identification number.

.06 If the payer obtains new information from the payee, the payer is required to use the corrected information on 1984 and future 1099s.

.07 WARNING: As previously indicated in Information Release 83-150, dated December 2, 1983, using this computer matching program is not a substitute for the mailing or mailings required by the Temporary Employment Tax Regulations under the Interest and Dividend Tax Compliance Act of 1983. Thus, payers who have not sent the mailing or mailings as described in A-5 and A-6 of section 35a.9999-1 of the Temporary Employment Tax Regulations will be liable for a $50 penalty for each information return filed in respect of payments made during 1984 without the payee's correct name or social security number. However, those payers who obtain corrected information from payees before the information returns are filed for 1984 will be able to avoid penalties with respect to those Forms 1099 containing corrected information.

SEC. 3. APPLICATION FOR MAGNETIC TAPE REPORTING

.01 For the purpose of this revenue procedure, the payer is the organization requesting SSN validation and the transmitter is the organization preparing the magnetic tape file. The payer and transmitter may be the same organization.

.02 Any payer electing to use this procedure must send a Letter of Intent addressed to the attention of the Magnetic Media Coordinator at one of the Service Centers listed in PART A, SEC 7. The letter must contain all of the following:

(a) Payer name;

(b) Payer address;

(c) Payer city, state and zip code;

(d) Payer's Employer Identification Number (EIN);

(e) Name of person to contact in payer's office;

(f) Phone number of contact in payer's office;

(g) Transmitter name, if applicable;

(h) Transmitter address, if applicable;

.04 The Magnetic Media Coordinator will respond in writing to the Letter of Intent by March 30, 1984.

SEC. 4. FILING OF TAPES

.01 The Magnetic Media Coordinator will provide the following items to the payer/transmitter once the Letter of Intent has been approved:

(b) Form 5064, Magnetic Tape Labels, stamped as "SSN Validation".

.02 The affidavit appearing on Form 4804 does not have to be signed.

.03 The payer/transmitter must provide the Service with a number of blank tapes equal to the number input for Service validation. The Service will return the marked file to the payer/transmitter on these tapes.

.04 All tape files submitted must conform exactly with this revenue procedure. IF FILES ARE UNPROCESSABLE, THEY WILL BE RETURNED TO THE FILER.

SEC. 5. PROCESSING TIMETABLE

.01 Tapes will be accepted by the Magnetic Media Coordinator whenever the payer/transmitter is able to create them in conformance with the procedures outlined herein.

.02 These tape files may be submitted any time after March 31, 1984 and will be processed and returned to the payor/transmitter within 60 days after receipt at the Service Center.

Rev. Proc. 84-11

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

.01 The purpose of this revenue procedure is to provide a means whereby Reporting Agents preparing Form 941, Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Returns, for groups of taxpayers can furnish the required information in the form of magnetic tape instead of paper documents.

.02 This revenue procedure reflects the current changes to the tape specifications.

SEC. 2. APPLICATION FOR TAPE REPORTING

.01 Agents who desire to file authorized federal tax returns on magnetic tape must first file a letter of application or submit Form 4995, Application for Magnetic Tape Filing of Form 941, Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return (see Exhibit 1). The letter should be addressed to the Director, Internal Revenue Service Center, Attention: Magnetic Tape Coordinator, where the Reporting Agent normally files the returns. Addresses of the Internal Revenue Service Centers are shown in Section 10 of this revenue procedure. The letter of application must contain the following:

1. Name, address and EIN (Employer Identification Number) of the person, organization, or firm making the application.

2. Name, title, and telephone number of the person to contact regarding the application.

3. Type and nature of equipment to be used to prepare the tape file, i.e., manufacturer and model of main frame and tape drives, tape width (½", ¾", etc), density (characters per inch), and recording code (BCD, Excess 3, Octal, etc.).

4. List of the taxpayers to be included on the initial establishment of the Magnetic Tape Filing system. The list must be in triplicate with the data shown in the exact order as Exhibit 2. Show each taxpayer's name, complete address (including Zip Code), and EIN: sort into EIN sequence. See Section 6.03 for additional details.

5. Internal Revenue Service Center where paper tax returns were last filed.

6. Signature of the Agent or Agent's employee authorized to prepare federal tax returns for taxpayers.

7. An agreement by the Reporting Agent to keep copies of the Powers of Attorney on file at the Agent's principal place of business for examination by the Internal Revenue Service upon request. Such copies must be retained until the statute of limitations for the last return filed under its authority expires.

8. An agreement to fully pay the tax by Federal Tax Deposits.

SEC. 3. POWER OF ATTORNEY

.01 A Power of Attorney must be submitted for each filer on the list attached to Form 4995 or the letter of application. The Power of Attorney may be submitted on an Internal Revenue Service Form 2848. Power of Attorney and Declaration of Representative (see Exhibit 3), which is available on request; or any other instrument which clearly states that the Reporting Agent is granted the authority to file and sign the return. The Power of Attorney filed under this revenue procedure is not subject to the rules contained in the Conference and Practice Requirements (Treasury Regulation 601.502).

.02 Both the taxpayer, or his authorized representative, and the Reporting Agent must sign the Power of Attorney. The signed document will remain in effect until such time as it is revoked by the taxpayer, terminated by written notification from the Reporting Agent, or expires under its own terms.

1. The following persons may execute a Power of Attorney on behalf of a corporation or other business taxpayer:

(a) The individual if the person required to make the return is an individual;

(b) The president, vice president, or other principal officer, if the person required to make the return is a corporation;

(c) A responsible and duly authorized member or officer having knowledge of its affairs, if the person required to make the return is a partnership or other unincorporated organization.

(d) The fiduciary, if the person required to make the return is a trust or estate; or

(e) An agent who is duly authorized in accordance with Regulations 31.6011(a)-7.

.03 The scope of the Power of Attorney for Magnetic Tape Filing will be governed according to the following:

1. Power of Attorney will delegate to the Reporting Agent the power to sign and file appropriate federal tax returns.

2. The Power of Attorney becomes effective for the tax period the Agent notifies the Service that the employer or filer is being added to the Magnetic Tape Filing System and remains in effect for subsequent periods until revoked, terminated or expired.

3. The Power of Attorney is automatically revoked when the Reporting Agent notifies the Service that a taxpayer is no longer included in the Magnetic Tape Filing System.

4. The receipt of a Power of Attorney for Magnetic Tape Filing has no effect on prior Powers of Attorney on file for other purposes for a given taxpayer.

5. The Power of Attorney for Magnetic Tape Filing will be a limited power of attorney, i.e., notices, refunds and other output resulting from filing on magnetic tape will be mailed to the taxpayer.

6. Requests from a Reporting Agent for information or adjustments on an account for which the taxpayer has authorized Magnetic Tape Filing will be honored by the service center.

7. Requests for address changes may not be made by the Reporting Agent. Requests for address changes for taxpayers that are reported under Magnetic Tape Filing will be processed only if they originate with one of the following:

(a) The taxpayer,

(b) An employee of the Internal Revenue Service, or

(c) An attorney-in-fact if the attorney has a full Power of Attorney for all tax matters concerning a taxpayer, and has filed a copy of the Power of Attorney with the Internal Revenue Service.

SEC. 4. ATTORNEY OF AGENTS APPLICATION

.01 The Service will act on applications and notify applicants of authorization or disapproval within 30 days of receipt of Form 4995.

.02 Generally, Reporting Agents using equipment compatible with the Service's can presume that tape filing will be approved. Compatible tape characteristics are shown in Section 12. If the Reporting Agent has the capability to prepare several types of tapes, the Service prefers that compatible tapes be prepared.

.03 If the Reporting Agents propose to submit convertible tapes, i.e., tapes requiring translation, the Service will either translate these tapes or provide translation through other government agencies. Magnetic Tape Filing will be disapproved when the Service is unable to obtain facilities to translate a Reporting Agent's file to a compatible form. (See Section 12 for specifications.)

.04 Once authorization to file tax data on magnetic tape has been granted to a Reporting Agent, such approval will continue to effect in succeeding tax periods as long as the requirements of this revenue procedure are met, and there are no equipment changes by the Reporting Agent. However, new applications are required if users change from compatible tapes to equipment producing tapes that require translation, or if they discontinue Magnetic Tape Filing for one or more periods, then decide to resume this method of reporting.

SEC. 5. EFFECT ON PAPER DOCUMENTS

.01 Authorization to file on magnetic tape does not immediately stop the filing on paper tax returns, but merely initiates filing of such returns on the Magnetic Tape Filing System.

.02 The initial filing of tax returns on magnetic tape will be on trial tapes. Each taxpayer included on the magnetic tape must also be on the paper form until authorized by the Service to discontinue filing returns on paper. The paper returns must be arranged in the same order as the returns reported on the magnetic tape and filed at the same location and in the same shipment. In general, the Service will be able to notify the Reporting Agent to discontinue filing paper returns within one quarter after the initial filing of magnetic tape. The notification will depend upon the performance standard of the magnetic tape.

.03 Duplicate returns or duplicate tape and paper returns should never be submitted after the Reporting Agent is authorized to discontinue filing paper returns.

.04 "Paper" 941 filers are required to transmit with their return, copies of any W-4's claiming 14 or more exemptions. If the Reporting Agent files magnetic tape 941's for a taxpayer, but does not report W-4 information on magnetic tape, the paper W-4's should be submitted to the service center with a cover letter.

SEC. 6. FILING TAPE RETURNS

.01 Packaging, shipping, and mailing instructions will be provided in the letter granting initial approval issued by the Service in response to the letter of application for Magnetic Tape Filing.

.02 The Service will expect a tape return to be submitted for those individually approved magnetic tape filers until the Reporting Agent formally notifies IRS that specific employers are being deleted from their current Magnetic Tape Filing inventory.

.03 The Reporting Agent will be provided with a validated copy of the Agent's Listing for taxpayers authorized to file on magnetic tape. This authorization will contain each taxpayer's EIN, four position alpha Name Control, the DO (District Office) Code and the Tax Class. This will be the source of the EIN and Name Control to be used on magnetic tape by the Reporting Agent as an identification of each taxpayer.

.05 Enclose in the first box of the tape shipment to the Service the following:

1. Form 4996, Magnetic Tape Filing Transmittal for Form 941, Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return, in duplicate. (See Exhibit 4.)

2. A control listing identifying actual taxpayers previously approved by the Service for Magnetic Tape Filing that are contained on the current tape file being submitted. List the taxpayers in EIN sequence with each taxpayer's name and address.

.06 Agents must submit a paper Schedule A for those taxpayers who elect to treat backup withholding as a separate tax and make separate Federal Tax Deposits. The paper Schedule A should be sent with the magnetic tape shipment.

SEC. 7. ADDING AND DELETING FILERS FROM MAGNETIC TAPE FILING SYSTEM

.01 When adding or deleting filers, the Service must receive (in triplicate and in the same format as shown in Exhibit 2) a listing which contains the complete names, addresses and EIN's of the taxpayers the Reporting Agent wants added or deleted from the Magnetic Tape Filing System. The words "ADDITIONS" or "DELETIONS" should be entered after the title, "Agent's Listing," and the effective date.

.02 The Service will provide a validated copy of the updated Agent's Listing to the Reporting Agent. Under no circumstances is a new filer to be included on the Magnetic Tape Filing System until the validated copy is received from the Service.

.03 A Power of Attorney authorization must be included for each taxpayer to be added to the Magnetic Tape Filing System.

.04 The Reporting Agent should indicate on the last magnetic tape return submitted for a filer that it is either the "Final Return" or a "Discontinued Filer" in the Tax Data "B" Record.

.05 The Reporting Agent may not always know that the final magnetic tape return for a particular taxpayer is being submitted at the time the tape is being sent in. When the Reporting Agent determines that the previous tape contained the last return to be prepared for the individual filer, action should be taken to notify the service center which authorized the Magnetic Tape Filing of one of the following conditions:

1. The taxpayer is out of business (state the effective date) and will no longer be liable for filing returns (Final Return), or

2. The Reporting Agent will no longer be submitting returns on magnetic tape for the taxpayer who is still in business and is still liable for such returns (Discontinued Filer).

.06 Lists of proposed quarterly (Form 941) filer additions, deletions, etc., must be received in the service center at least 2 working days prior to the end of the second month of a quarter. This will permit the Service to properly validate applications and to respond to the Agent within 30 days of receipt of the lists.

SEC. 8. DUE DATES AND CORRECTED RETURNS

.01 The due dates prescribed for filing paper returns with the Service will also apply to Magnetic Tape Filing of Federal tax returns.

.02 In no case should returns with more than one due date be included on one tape file.

.03 Adjustments may be made on returns submitted on magnetic tape. If an offsetting entry is required to FICA taxes because there is a difference between the total amount of employee tax included in Line 8 (Total FICA Taxes) of Forms 941 and the total amounts actually deducted from the remuneration of employees, due to fractions of cents added or dropped in collecting employee tax from employees, this difference should be reported as a "Fractions Only" adjustment to FICA taxes on the magnetic tape (Tax Data "B" Record, tape positions 257-266).

.04 If employee FICA tax is not applicable to amounts included in Line 6 of Form 941 (Taxable FICA Wages Paid), report this amount as "FICA TIP" adjustment on the magnetic tape (Tax Data "B" Record, tape positions 257-266).

.05 All other adjustments, including adjustments to Income Tax Withheld, combinations of "Fractions Only" and FICA-TIP" adjustments, and Sick Pay Adjustment to Income Tax Withheld must be reported as Adjustment for Preceding Quarters on the magnetic tape (Tax Data "B" Record, tape, positions 189-198).

.06 All adjustments reported in Tax Data "B" Record in tape positions 257-266 must be explained on Form 941c or in a detailed statement. All other adjustments reported (Tax Data "B" Record, tape positions 189-198 and 346-355) must also be explained in an appropriate statement except as provided in section 08. Include all statements and Forms 941c with the magnetic tape shipment for approval and subsequent adjustment action.

SEC. 9. FILING FORMS W-2 (COPY A) WITH THE SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION

The Reporting Agents who file Forms 941 on magnetic tape for employers must file the wage information directly with the Social Security Administration on tape or paper documents. For directions for tape filing, you may call or write the appropriate Service Center Magnetic Tape Coordinator, or any Social Security Administration office and ask for Technical Information Bulletin 4a (TIB-4a), or you can write to the following address:

SEC. 11. CONVENTIONS AND DEFINITIONS

.01 Conventions

1. Certain conventions may be required by the programming system or equipment used by the Reporting Agent, with respect to header and trailer labels, record and tape marks. Their use is optional, but if present they must adhere to the following:

(a) Header Label
  (1) Can only be the first record on a reel.
  (2) Must consist of a maximum of 80 characters.
  (3) First 4 characters must be 1HDR/VOL 1/HDR1/or HDR2

(b) Trailer Label
  (1) Can only be the last record of a reel.
  (2) Must consist of a maximum of 80 characters.
  (3) First 4 characters must be 1EOR (End of Reel) or 1EOF (End of File).

(c) Record Mark
  (1) Can only be at the end of a block or the end of a record.

(d) Tape Mark
  (1) If trailer labels are not used, the tape mark can only follow an End of Reel "F" Record or an End of File "E" Record.
  (2) If header and trailer labels are used, the tape mark must precede the header label and must follow the trailer label.

.02 Definitions

Element	Description
Reporting Agent	Person or organization preparing and filing magnetic tape equivalents of Federal tax returns. NOTE: This revenue procedure does not restrict a non-financial organization who performs a payroll or tax service from being a Reporting Agent. However, see Revenue Procedure 80-31, Employment Taxes, concerning the requirements under which Federal Tax Deposits can be made by the Reporting Agent.
Taxpayer	Persons or organization liable for the payment of tax. The taxpayer will be held responsible for the completeness, accuracy and timely submission of the magnetic tape files.
b	Denotes a bland position.
EIN	Employer Identification Number.
Record	A group of related fields of information, treated as a unit.
Blocked Records	Two or more records grouped together between interrecord gaps.
Blocking Factors	The number of records grouped together to form a block.
Unblocked Records	Single records written between interrecord gaps.
File	A file consists of all tape records submitted by a Reporting Agent.
Record Mark	Special character used either to limit the number of characters in data transfer or to separate blocked records on tape. For compatibility with the Service's equipment, use BCD bit configuration A82.
Tape Mark	Special character that is written on tape. For compatibility with the Service's equipment, use BCD bit configuration 8421.
Lozenge	Special character to indicate name line combination. For compatibility with the Service's equipment, use BCD bit configuration BA84.
Special Character	Any character that is not a numeral, letter, or blank.
Reel	A spool of magnetic tape.

SEC. 12. MAGNETIC TAPE SPECIFICATIONS

.01 These specifications prescribe the required format and content of the records to be included in the file, but not the methods or equipment to be used in their preparation. A compatible tape file must conform to all of the following:

Type of tape	½ inch Mylar base, oxide coated
Recording density	556, 800, 1600, or 6250 CPI (characters per inch)
Parity	Even or odd
Interrecord Gap	¾ inch
Recording Code	7 channel binary coded decimal (BCD), 9 channel, EBCDIC, ASCII

.02 An acceptable file will contain, for each Reporting Agent, the following:

1. An Agent "A" Record,
2. A series of Tax Data "B" Records,
3. A series of Checkpoint "C" Records,
4. An End of Location "D" Record, and
5. An End of File "E" Record. In addition, multiple reel files will have an End of Reel "F" Record.

.03 All records including headers and trailers, if used, must be written at the same density.

.04 Affix an external lable to each tape with the following information:

1. Name of Reporting Agent,
2. Number of tax returns transmitted on this reel of tape,
3. Payment period in YYMM (Year, Year, month, month) format, for example 8109,
4. Density (200, 556, 800, 1600, 6250),
5. Channel (7 or 9),
6. Parity (odd or even),
7. Name of computer manufacturer,
8. Tape Drive,
9. Main Frame, and
10. Sequence number of reel and total number of reels in file (for example, 1 of 3).

.05 Since the Service is not restricting Magnetic Tape Filing or Reporting Agents with specific types of equipment, or prescribing the methods used to prepare the tape files, the Agent "A" Record, End of Reel "F" Record and End of File "E" Record perform the functions normally assigned to header and trailer labels and related conventions. The Agent "A" Record serves the purpose of a header label, the End of Location "D" Record signals that no more Tax Data "B" Records are written on the file for a given location of the Reporting Agent, the End of Reel "F" Record signals that no more Tax Data "B" Records are written on the reel, and the End of File "E" Record indicates that there is no further data to be processed. In addition to the functions stated above, the End of Reel "F" Record and the End of Location "D" Record are used to balance each reel or each series of Tax Data "B" Records for a given location of the Reporting Agent on a reel.

.06 Record Length

1. The tape records prescribed in the specifications may be blocked or unblocked subject to the following:

(a) A block may not exceed 4,000 tape positions.

(b) If the use of blocked records would result in a short block at the end of a Tax Data "B" Record and the next record is too large to include in the block, the remaining positions of the block should be filled with 9's. No other digits or characters other than 9's are specified or acceptable for filling (or padding) any tape input data blocks.

(c) Two forms of blocking are acceptable:

(1) Only Tax Data "B" Records are blocked; all other records are unblocked.

(2) All records, except header and trailer labels, if used, are blocked. In this case, if employers from more than one location are reported on the same tape, the Agent "A" Record cannot be in the middle of a block, but must be the first record in a block.

.07 Agent "A" Record

1. Identifies the Reporting Agent who prepares and transmits the tape file. When multiple reels are required for a single file, the Agent "A" Record must be repeated at the first record (second record if header labels are used) on every succeeding reel in the file, and the reel number must be incremented by 1 for each tape reel after the first reel. A Reporting Agent may include Tax Data "B" Records prepared at more than one location, on the same tape, but they must have the same DO Code; however, Tax Data "B" Records prepared at different locations with different DO Codes must be on separate tapes and preceded by an Agent "A" Record. Contact the Magnetic Tape Coordinator for additional details if necessary.

.08 Tax Data "B" Record

1. Contains tax information for each filer reported by the Reporting Agent. The number of Tax Data "B" Records appearing on one tape reel will depend on the number of taxpayers represented (only one tax return for each EIN). A Checkpoint Totals "C" Record and then an End of Location "D" Record must follow the last Tax Data "B" Record for a location or DO Code change. In addition, the Tax Data "B" Records must be arranged in ascending order EIN sequence within DO Code.

2. Tax Data "B" Records may be blocked together with Record Types A, C, D, E, and F or the Tax Data "B" Records may be blocked alone with Record Types A, C, D, E, and F unblocked. Records should have a blocking factor for which blocks will not exceed 4,000 tape positions. All records must be fixed length and for the current tax period. All money amount fields must contain dollars and cents and all liability amounts must be fullpaid.

26 CFR 145.4-2: Application of the floor stocks tax on tires.

Rev. Proc. 84-16

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to establish an alternative method of computing the amount of the floor stocks tax on tires.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

Section 521(b) of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982, Pub. L. 97-424, 1983-1 C.B. 405, 413, imposes a floor stocks tax on certain tires held in a dealer's inventory for sale on January 1, 1984. Section 145.4-2(b) of the regulations thereunder provides that the floor stocks tax is computed by applying the total weight of the tire to rates specified in the regulation.

Many retail tire dealers have encountered difficulty in determining the weight of the tires in their inventory to which the tax applies.

SEC. 3. PROCEDURE

In lieu of weighing the tires, dealers may compute the floor stocks tax as the excess of the amount of tax that would have been imposed if a tire had been sold by the manufacturer after December 31, 1983, over the amount of tax that was imposed on the tire. For this purpose the tax imposed on any type and size tire may be determined using the dealer's purchase invoice for that tire, if the tax is separately stated, or the amount of tax listed for that type and size tire in the manufacturer's or distributor's price list effective for December 1983. The tax that would be imposed on the sale by the manufacturer after December 31, 1983, may be determined using the tax listed for that type and size tire in the manufacturer's or distributor's price list in effect for January 1, 1984. For tube type tires, the amount of tax listed on the invoice or price list for December 31, 1983, must be reduced by any tax attributable to the inner tube which is included in the tax listed for the tire.

SEC. 4. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure is effective January 1, 1984.

(Also Part I, Sections 584, 2031, 2032, 2512; I.584-1, 20.2031-2, 20.2032-1, 25.2512-1.)

Rev. Proc. 84-17

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this Revenue Procedure is to provide guidelines for the determination of the fair market values of participating interests in common trust funds for purposes of section 2031, 2032, and 2512 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Section 584(a) of the Code defines a common trust fund as a fund maintained by a bank exclusively for the collective investment and reinvestment of moneys contributed to the fund by the bank in its capacity as a trustee, executor, administrator, or guardian, or custodian of accounts and which is maintained in conformity with rules and regulations of the Board of Trustees of the Federal Reserve System or the Comptroller of the Currency. Section 584(b) provides that a common trust fund is exempt from normal taxes and surtaxes and is not considered a corporation. Section 584(c) provides that income, gains and losses of a common trust fund are passed through to each participant in the fund.

.02 Section 2031 of the Code provides that the value of the gross estate is the value of the included property as of the date of decedent's death. Section 2032 provides for an alternate valuation date six months from the date of death with the added provision that property disposed of during the six month interval be valued as of the date of disposition. Section 2512 provides that the value of property transferred by gift is the value of such property on the date of the gift.

SEC. 3. SCOPE AND OBJECTIVE

For estate and gift tax purposes, the property to be valued is the participating interest in the common trust fund. To value the participating interest it is first necessary to value the common trust fund in which the participating interest own a proportionate share. Comptroller of the Currency Regulations section 9.18, 12 C.F.R. Section 9.18 (1982), requires that national banks administering common trust funds must value the assets of the fund at least quarterly and that additions and withdrawals be accomplished only on valuation dates.

SEC. 4. APPLICATION

The valuation date for estate and gift tax purposes often does not coincide with the scheduled bank valuation date. In such instances it is necessary to find a method of valuing participating interests in common trust funds for dates falling between two scheduled bank valuation dates, and the following computations should be employed.

.01 Fair market value is determined using the same weighted average method as is used for valuing stocks and bonds provided in section 20.2031-2 of the Estate Tax Regulations.

.02 The interpolation is accomplished by weighting the values on the scheduled bank valuation dates in inverse proportion to the number of days between those valuation dates and the valuation date for estate and gift tax purposes. Thus, if the scheduled bank valuation dates fell A days before and B days after the valuation date for estate and gift tax purposes and the values were $X and $Y respectively, fair market value would be:

$$\frac{AY + BX}{A + B}$$

.03 This application may be illustrated by the following example:

Assume the scheduled bank valuation date occurred 25 days before the valuation date for estate and gift tax purposes and resulted in a value determination of at $100 per unit. The next scheduled bank valuation date occurred 66 days after the valuation date for estate and gift tax purposes at $105 per unit. The fair market value on the valuation date for estate and gift tax purposes is:

$$\frac{25(105) + 66(100)}{91} = $101.37$$

SEC. 5. EFFECTIVE DATE

This Revenue Procedure is effective March 5, 1984, the date of publication in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

26 CFR 601.105: Examination of returns and claims for refund, credit or abatement; determination of correct tax liability. (Also Part I, Section 6661.)

Rev. Proc. 84-19

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to identify, for returns filed in 1984, circumstances under which the disclosure on a taxpayer's return of an item or a position taken, with no specific reference to section 6661 of the Internal Revenue Code, is adequate disclosure for the purpose of reducing the understatement under section 6661.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Section 6661 of the Code imposes an addition to the tax for a substantial understatement. A substantial understatement is defined as an understatement of liability for income tax which exceeds the greater of 10 percent of the amount required to be shown on the return or $5,000 ($10,000 in the case of a corporation other than an S corporation or a personal holding company). An understatement is defined as the excess of the amount required to be shown on the return over the amount reported thereon.

.02 In the case of an item not attributable to a tax shelter, the amount of the understatement is reduced if the taxpayer discloses in the return or an attachment thereto the identity and amount of the item as well as the specific facts or the position taken relevant to the tax treatment of the item. Disclosure on a return of items attributable to a tax shelter will not reduce an understatement.

.03 In general, rules providing guidance on the adequacy of disclosure for purposes of reducing an understatement under section 6661 of the Code will be set forth in regulations. The Commissioner has determined that in certain circumstances described in section 3 of this revenue procedure, disclosure of an item on the return with no further statement is adequate disclosure for purposes of section 6661, provided the taxpayer furnishes all required information in accordance with the applicable forms and instructions. This revenue procedure provides guidelines as to when such disclosure is adequate.

Additional disclosure of facts relevant to, or positions with respect to, issues involving any of the items set forth below is unnecessary for purposes of reducing any understatement of tax under section 6661 of the Code provided, however, the forms and attachments are completed in a clear manner and in accordance with the instructions thereto, and the information on the return is disclosed in the manner described below.

Rev. Proc. 84-20

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

.01 The purpose of this Revenue Procedure is to provide instructions to Federal and State agencies requesting the following data from the Internal Revenue Service:

a) Taxpayer Addresses

b) Tax Delinquent Account Status Indicator (Federal agencies only)

.02 The instructions in this Revenue Procedure relate to large volume requests. Information on procedures regarding non-volume requests can be obtained by contacting the local Internal Revenue District Office.

.03 The Internal Revenue Service is authorized to provide taxpayer addresses under certain provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. Among these provisions are:

a) Section 6103(m)(2) which reads as follows:

"(2) FEDERAL CLAIMS—

(A) IN GENERAL—Except as provided for in subparagraph (B), the Secretary may, upon written request, disclose the mailing address of a taxpayer for use by officers, employees, or agents of a Federal agency for purposes of locating such taxpayer to collect or compromise a Federal claim against the taxpayer in accordance with sections 3711, 3717, and 3718 of Title 31.

(B) SPECIAL RULE FOR CONSUMER REPORTING AGENCY—In the case of an agent of a Federal agency which is a consumer reporting agency (within the meaning of section 603(f) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681a(f))), the mailing address of a taxpayer may be disclosed to such agent under subparagraph (A) only for the purpose of allowing such agent to prepare a commercial credit report on the taxpayer for use by such Federal agency in accordance with sections 3711, 3717, and 3718 of Title 31."

b) Section 6103(d) relating to the disclosure to any State agency, body, or commission, or its legal representative, which is charged under the laws of such State with responsibility for the administration of State tax laws.

.04 The Internal Revenue Service is authorized to provide a Tax Delinquent Account Status Indicator to Federal agencies under Section 6103(l)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code. This Section authorizes the Secretary of Treasury to disclose to a Federal agency administering any included Federal loan program, whether an applicant for a loan under such program has a tax delinquent account (TDA).

a) For purposes of the above paragraph, the term "included Federal loan program" means any program under which the United States or a Federal agency makes, guarantees, or insures loans, and with respect to which there is in effect a determination by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget (which has been published in the Federal Register) that the application of the above paragraph to such program will substantially prevent or reduce future delinquencies under such program. A listing of included Federal loan programs was published in the Federal Register dated December 27, 1982, 47 F.R. 57595.

.05 Recipients of information under section 6103(l)(3) and (d) of the Code are subject to the safeguard requirements of section 6103(p)(4). Agencies which receive information under section 6103(m)(2) of the Code are subject to the safeguard requirements of section 6103(p)(4) if they redisclose the information to an agent. The agent also will be subject to the safeguard requirements.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 The information provided will be extracted monthly from the Internal Revenue Service Individual Master File (IMF) and Business Master File (BMF) located at the Internal Revenue Service National Computer Center (NCC) in Martinsburg, West Virginia. The IMF contains tax accounts of individuals. The BMF contains tax accounts of business entities (i.e. corporations, subchapter S corporations, partnerships, exempt organizations and estates).

.02 IMF Address Requests may be made on magnetic tape or computer punch cards.

.03 Tax Delinquent Account Status Indicator Requests and BMF Address Requests must be made on magnetic tape.

.04 The Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN) provides an indication whether the taxpayer's account would be found on the IMF or BMF. Accounts are established on the IMF under Social Security Numbers (SSN, format xxx-xx-xxxx). Accounts are established on the BMF under Employer Identification Numbers (EIN, format xx-xxxxxxx), except for estates, which appear on the BMF with an SSN.

.05 Data will be extracted from the IMF and BMF based on the existence of a match between the master file and the data record submitted by the requester. Both the Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN) and name control on the data record request must match with a record on the Master File before any data is extracted. Without a match, the Service will not be able to provide the requested data. See Section 13 for instructions for determining Name Control.

.06 If unsure as to whether an account would appear on the IMF or BMF it may be expedient to request information from both the IMF and the BMF.

.07 Accounts for married individuals are sometimes established on the IMF using the SSN of one of the individuals as the control or primary SSN. Submissions for IMF extracts will first be run against the IRS Spouse-Primary SSN Record File to determine the primary SSN. Although the primary SSN identified will be used in the IMF extract process, the SSN shown on the output tape will be that provided by the requesting agency.

SEC. 3. APPLICATION FOR INCLUSION IN PROGRAM

.01 Federal agencies wishing to receive data under Sections 6103(m)(2) or (1)(3) for debt collection purposes should submit their application to:

Internal Revenue Service

Washington, D.C. 20224
Attn: Debt Collection Requests

The application should indicate whether the agency wishes to enter into an agreement to receive address data, TDA data or both. The application should also indicate whether data will be requested from the IMF, BMF (or both) and whether the request submissions will be made via magnetic tape or punch cards.

.02 Federal or State agencies wishing to receive data under sections other than 6103(m)(2) or (1)(3) should submit their application to:

Internal Revenue Service

.04 The requesting agency will complete boxes 5a, b, and c and 9a, b, and c of the Form 5181. The person indicated in box 5a will be the person coordinating requests and receipt of data from the Service. The signature in box 9a must be that of the agency head or other delegated official authorized to request data under the Act.

.05 The original of the signed agreement should be returned to the Service at the address indicated in .01 above.

.06 The Service will receive the signed agreement from agencies. After signature of the Service's approving official is obtained, a copy of the agreement will be returned to the requesting agency. Upon receipt of the signed agreement, the agency may begin making submissions for the type of data specified in the agreement.

.07 Each approved agreement returned to a requesting agency will provide an "Agency Code(s)" to be used in all data requests. Distinct agency codes will be provided for each type of request.

These cards will not be converted to tape for matching.

.04 Include a transmittal letter with each shipment. The transmittal should identify the punch cards as input to IRS Project 719, indicate the number of cards submitted and the return address. The transmittal should also include the name and telephone number of an individual within the agency who can aid in reconciling shipping problems.

.05 After the NCC matching extract, output will be returned to the Service Centers for creation of Forms 4453, Taxpayer Address. SEC. 12. USE OF REQUEST OUTPUT

.01 Users should be aware of the limitations of the delinquency indication. It reflects only the Master File status of the account at the time of the extract. For instance, the account could show delinquency status but a payment agreement could have been recently established between the Service and the taxpayer. Or the extract could show an account as delinquent but by the time the agency receives the output or is ready to use the information, the delinquent amount may have been paid.

.02 There is also the possibility that a taxpayer may be delinquent but in an amount less than that which creates a delinquency indication on the Master File. In such a case, the extract will indicate that the taxpayer's account is not in delinquent status.

.03 Requestors should take care to provide correct information to the Service. They should be aware that if they fail to do so, there is the slight possibility that through coincidental circumstances, the data provided may not be that of the individual for whom the request was made. For instance, if information is requested for John Smith, but an erroneous SSN is provided which happens to be that of a Joe Smith, the Master File will match the account of Joe Smith and the data provided will reflect that account.

SEC. 13. DETERMINING A NAME CONTROL

.01 Each input data record will require a name control. Determine according to the following instructions.

.02 Individuals

a) The name control of an individual is the first four significant characters of the last name (including hyphens). In surnames of less than four characters, the remaining positions are blank. Disregard blanks or apostrophes between letters.

.03 Corporations

a) The name control of a corporation is derived from the first four significant characters of the name.

b) An exception to this rule is to exclude the word "the" when used as a prefix to the name and the word "the" is followed by more than one word.

c) In instances where a numeric is followed by a decimal (.) as part of the name, replace the decimal point (.) with a hyphen (-) when determining the name control.

Business Name	Name Control

.04 Partnerships

a) Derive the name control for partnership entities from the legal name of the partnership. If the legal name contains the name of a partner, derive the name control from the surname of the first listed partner. If the legal name does not contain the name of a partner, derive the name control from the first four characters in the legal name. Do not use a trade name (doing business as) to determine name control.

.05 Other Organizations

Terms and Conditions

1.- The authority to perform services on a cost basis is contained in Section 6103(p)(2) and Section 6108(b) of the Internal Revenue Code (IRC). The performance of services is authorized only when consistent with the basic public obligations of the Internal Revenue Service (the Service). If necessary to fulfill its public obligations, the Service may reject or terminate any part of this agreement and return the unused balance of funds advanced.

2. Although every reasonable effort is made to avoid delays and errors in the performance of its work, the Service is not responsible for delays or errors in the services performed. The cost of data recompilations or corrections must be paid for by the requesting party.

3. Direct and indirect actual costs will be charged for reimbursable work. If funds advanced to the Service are more than the actual cost of performing the work, the difference will be returned. If an estimate is less than the actual costs incurred, the requesting organization agrees to pay for the actual costs incurred.

4a. Section 6103(p)(4) of the IRC provides specific requirements for Federal, state and local organizations to safeguard Federal returns and return information as a condition for receiving the information.

b. Section 7213 of the IRC makes illegal disclosure of returns or return information a felony punishable by a fine not to exceed $5000 or imprisonment of not more than 5 years, or both, together with the costs of prosecution. IRC Section 7431 makes persons liable for civil damages who knowingly or negligently disclose returns or return information illegally.

6. The requester may cancel this agreement only by giving the Service written notice 30 days before cancellation. Payment to the Service shall include actual costs to the date of cancellation. The Service will exercise due diligence to prevent incurring costs after the cancellation date. However, payment shall also be made for unavoidable commitments up to the date the agreement would have expired.

which the Service is prohibited by statute from issuing rulings or determination letters.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND AND SCOPE OF APPLICATION

.01 Background.

Whenever appropriate in the interest of sound tax administration, it is the policy of the Service to answer inquiries of individuals and organizations regarding their status for tax purposes and the tax effects of their acts or transactions, prior to the filing of returns or reports that are required by the revenue laws.

There are, however, certain areas in which, because of the inherently factual nature of the problems involved, or for other reasons, the Service will not issue advance rulings or determination letters. These areas are set forth in three sections of this revenue procedure. Section 3 reflects those areas in which advance rulings and determinations will not be issued. Section 4 sets forth those areas in which they will not ordinarily be issued. "Not ordinarily" connotes that unique and compelling reasons must be demonstrated to justify a ruling or determination letter. Those sections reflect a number of specific questions and problems as well as general areas. Section 5 lists specific areas for which the Service is temporarily not issuing advance rulings and determinations because those matters are under extensive study.

With respect to the items listed, revenue rulings or revenue procedures may be published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin from time to time to provide general guidelines regarding the position of the Service.

Additions or deletions to this revenue procedure as well as restatement of items listed will be made by modification of this revenue procedure. Changes will be published as they occur throughout the year and will be incorporated annually in a new revenue procedure published in the first quarter of the next calendar year. These lists should not be considered all inclusive. Decisions not to rule on individual cases, as contrasted with those that present significant pattern issues, are not reported in this revenue procedure and will not be added to subsequent revisions.

The authority and general procedures of the Technical Function of the National Office of the Internal Revenue Service or the Offices of the District Directors of the Internal Revenue with respect to the issuance of advance rulings and determination letters with respect to Code sections under the jurisdiction of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical) are outlined in Rev. Proc. 84-1, page 342, this Bulletin.

.02 Scope of Application.

This revenue procedure is not to be considered as precluding the submission of requests for technical advice to the National Office from the Office of a District Director of the Internal Revenue or a Chief, Appeals Office.

SEC. 3. AREAS IN WHICH RULINGS OR DETERMINATION LETTERS WILL NOT BE ISSUED

8 Section 162.—Trade or Business Expenses.—Whether compensation is reasonable in amount.

9 Section 163.—Interest.—The income tax consequences of transactions involving "shared appreciation mortgage" (SAM) loans in which a taxpayer, borrowing money to purchase real property, pays a fixed rate of interest on the mortgage loan below the prevailing market rate and will also pay the lender a percentage of the appreciation in value of the real property upon termination of the mortgage. This applies to all SAM arrangements where the loan proceeds are used for commercial or business activities, or where used to finance a personal residence if the facts are not similar to those described in Rev. Rul. 83-51, 1983-1 C.B. 48. (Also sections 61, 451, 461, 856, 1001, and 7701).

10 Section 170.—Charitable, Etc., Contributions and Gifts.—Whether a charitable lead interest qualifies as a guaranteed annuity interest for purposes of section 170(f)(2)(B) of the Code if that interest may be prepaid before the expiration of the specified term of that interest or before the 11 Section 170.—Charitable, Etc., Contributions and Gifts.—Whether a taxpayer who advances funds to a charitable organization and receives therefor a promissory note may deduct as contributions, in one taxable year or in each of several years, amounts forgiven by the taxpayer in each of several years by endorsement on the note.

17 Section 302.—Distributions in Redemption of Stock.—Whether section 302(b) of the Code applies when the consideration given in redemption by a corporation in exchange for a shareholder's stock consists entirely or partly of the corporation's promise to pay an amount is based on, or contingent on, future earnings of the corporation, when the promise to pay is contingent on working capital being maintained to a certain level, or any other similar contingency.

18 Section 302.—Distributions in Redemption of Stock.—Whether section 302(b) of the Code applies to a redemption of stock if after the redemption the distributing corporation used property that is owned by the shareholder from whom the stock is redeemed and the payments by the corporation for the use of the property are dependent upon the corporation's future earnings or are subordinate to the claims of the corporation's general creditors. Payments for the use of property will not be considered to dependent upon future earnings merely because they are based on a fixed percentage of receipts or sales.

19 Section 302.—Distributions in Redemption of Stock.—Whether the acquisition or disposition of stock described in section 302(c)(2)(B) of the Code has, or did not have, as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of federal income taxes within the meaning of that section, unless the facts and circumstances are materially identical to those set forth in Rev. Rul. 56-556, 1956-2 C.B. 177, Rev. Rul. 56-584, 1956-2 C.B. 179, Rev. Rul. 57-387, 1957-2 C.B. 225, Rev. Rul. 77-293, 1977-2 C.B. 91, or Rev. Rul. 79-67, 1979-1 C.B. 128.

25 Section 351.—Transfers to Controlled Corporation.—

(a) That this section applies to a transfer by a shareholder of stock in one corporation (acquired) to another corporation (acquiring), in an exchange otherwise qualifying for treatment under this section, if the exchange is part of a larger transaction that fits a pattern common to acquisitive reorganizations, and after the transaction the acquiring corporation has control of the acquired corporation (within the meaning of section 368(c)), unless there is a continuing interest through stock ownership in the acquiring corporation on the part of the former shareholders of the acquired corporation that is equal in value to at least 50 percent of the value of all of the stock of the acquired corporation outstanding immediately before the overall transaction. For purposes of this determination, liabilities assumed or liabilities to which the property transferred is subject, will be considered to be part of the total consideration received. See Rev. Rul. 80-284, 1980-2 C.B. 117, and section 3.02 of Rev. Proc. 77-37, 1977-2 C.B. 568, 569.

For purposes of this determination, liabilities assumed or liabilities to which the property transferred is subject, will be considered to be part of the total consideration received. In addition, for purposes of this revenue procedure, an acquired corporation shall be deemed to have transferred a substantial portion of its assets if the transferred assets constitute 15 percent or more of its gross assets. See Rev. Rul. 80-285, 1980-2 C.B. 119, and section 3.02 of Rev. Proc. 77-37.

Rul. 80-251, 1980-2 C.B. 40, and Rev. Rul. 80-339, 1980-2 C.B. 42, when payments not pledged as security for the bonds are received in respect of the bond-financed property used in the trade or business of nonexempt persons in an amount equal to more than 25 percent of the principal or interest payments on the bonds.

5 Section 103.—Interest on Certain Governmental Obligations. —Whether an issue of industrial development bonds is exempt under section 103(b) of the Code when 10 percent or more of the proceeds of the issue (minus "neutral costs" as described in Rev. Rul. 80-171, 1980-2 C.B. 44) are used to finance a facility in which an owner (or a related person) or a lessee (or a related person), who was a user of the facility at any time before the bonds were issued, will be a user of the facility after the bonds are issued.

6 Section 162.—Trade or Business Expenses.—Whether the requisite risk shifting and risk distribution necessary to constitute insurance are present for purposes of determining the deductibility under section 162 of amounts paid (premiums) by a taxpayer for insurance, unless the facts of the transaction are within the scope of Rev. Rul. 80-240, 1980-2 C.B. 116, holding that sections 304(a)(1) and 357(a) of the Code are inapplicable because there was no assumption of liability, unless the taxpayer can satisfy the Internal Revenue Service that the liability was incurred by the taxpayer as a mere intermediary agent for the newly created corporate transferee. To establish this, the taxpayer must submit to the Internal Revenue Service documented evidence, composed at the time the liability was incurred, which indicates that the unrelated lender had agreed to release the transferor-borrower from any and all obligation on the liability in favor of the corporate transferee. Rul. 72-48, 1972-1 C.B. 102, (2) has had an aggregate change in the shareholders' interests of not more than 10 percent during that period (except for transfers among family members, as defined in section 267(c)(4)), and (3) had conducted substantially the same trade or business during that period. SECTION 1. PURPOSE

This revenue procedure updates Rev. Proc. 80-29, 1980-1 C.B. 681, to set forth the procedures of the Internal Revenue Service pertaining to the issuance of opinion letters relating to master or prototype pension, annuity, and profit-sharing plans involving sections 401 and 403(a) of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA), Pub. L. 97-248, 1982-2 C.B. 462, and the status for exemptions of related trusts or custodial accounts under section 501(a).

SEC. 2. GENERAL INFORMATION

.01 Rev. Proc. 83-36, 1983-1 C.B. 763, sets forth the general procedures of the Service relating to the issuance of rulings, determination letters, and opinion letters on Employee Plans and Exempt Organization matters.

.02 Rev. Proc. 80-29 sets forth the general procedures relating to the issuance of opinion letters by the National Office as to the acceptability of the form of master and prototype plans.

.03 Rev. Proc. 80-30, 1980-1 C.B. 685, sets forth the general procedures relating to the issuance of determination letters on the qualification of pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus, and bond purchase plans.

.04 TEFRA substantially altered the requirements that a plan must meet in order to be qualified under section 401(a) of the Code. The TEFRA qualification changes are effective for years beginning after December 31, 1983, except for provisions amending Code section 415, which have an earlier effective date. The Service has issued substantive guidelines, specifically cited later in this revenue procedure, for conforming plans to the TEFRA requirements.

SEC. 3. OVERVIEW OF REVENUE PROCEDURE

.01 Reliance—Under Rev. Proc. 80-29, most master and prototype plans designed to cover self-employed individuals (HR-10 M & P's) were automatically deemed to satisfy the requirements of section 401(a) of the Code with respect to a particular adopting employer where the sponsor of the master or prototype plan had been issued a favorable opinion letter. However, most opinion letters issued for master and prototype plans not designed to cover self-employed individuals (corporate M & P's) did not express an opinion with respect to whether the plan as adopted by an employer satisfied the requirements for qualification under section 401(a). An employer wishing to know the effect of the adoption of an approved corporate M & P could, however, request a determination letter from the Service as to whether the plan as adopted was qualified. Except in the case of rare or unusual circumstances, an employer adopting an HR-10 M & P received automatic assurance that any disqualification of the plan would be non-retroactive (i.e. reliance), but an employer adopting a corporate M & P needed to obtain a favorable determination letter (and satisfy section 13 of Rev. Proc. 80-30) to have the same reliance. The difference in treatment between HR-10 and corporate M & P's stemmed from the fact that under corporate M & P's many of the qualification requirements (such as coverage and discrimination) depended on the facts and circumstances of the particular employer, while under HR-10 M & P's, the plan would attain qualified status solely on the basis of the applicable statutory provisions.

TEFRA changed the law relating to both plans that cover self-employed individuals and plans that do not. Most of the distinctions between these two types of plans were eliminated. Consequently, plans covering self-employed individuals may utilize plan provisions for which plan qualification may vary with the facts and circumstances of adopting employers. Because the previous distinctions between HR-10 and corporate M & P's have disappeared, it is necessary for the Service to make changes with respect to the reliance on opinion letters. Notwithstanding the changes made by TEFRA, some plans may still attain qualified status without regard to the particular facts and circumstances of the adopting employers. An employer adopting such a plan, a standardized form plan, for which a favorable opinion letter has been issued does not need a determination letter in order to obtain reliance. For the definition of standardized form plan see section 4.07. For special instructions applicable to standardized form plans see section 6. An employer adopting any master or prototype plan other than a standardized form plan must obtain a determination letter for that plan in order to obtain reliance.

.02 Defined Contribution M & P's Allocation Provision/Employer Reliance—Rev. Rul. 76-250, 1976-2 C.B. 124, holds that a defined contribution plan may require that a participant be employed as of the last day of the plan year to share in the allocation of employer contributions for that year (employment requirement) but that such an employment requirement may result in prohibited discrimination. Whether or not a defined contribution plan that contains such an employment requirement is discriminatory can only be determined from the facts and circumstances in the actual operation of the plan. Under this revenue procedure defined contribution M & P's, including standardized form plans (see section 4.07), may contain this employment requirement. However, a defined contribution M & P which contains this employment requirement, including a standardized form plan and a plan for which a favorable determination letter has been issued, may subsequently become discriminatory in operation and lose its qualified status as of the date it becomes discriminatory.

.03 Reductions in Permissible Number of Plans—Pre-TEFRA, sponsors frequently maintained a large number of different master and prototype plans (HR-10, corporate, pension, profit-sharing, etc.). Because of the parity provisions of TEFRA, the same master or prototype plan can be used for corporate and non-corporate employers. Thus, a single TEFRA plan may be used to replace several plans. However, the sponsor should indicate in accordance with section 9.03 the master or prototype plans that the new plan replaces.

Under this revenue procedure, combinations of certain categories of plans in one document are not permitted. See section 9.04. However, to ease the administrative burden, the use of one basic plan document for a combination of defined contribution plans and one basic plan document for several defined benefit plans is permitted. See section 4.04 for the definition of the term "basic plan document." The only differences will be in the adoption agreements. See section 4.03 for the definition of the term "adoption agreement."

.04 Multiple Plans—A sponsor may utilize one basic plan document with respect to several plans. A sponsor, for example, may submit four plans with respect to a given defined benefit basic plan document (an integrated standardized form plan, a nonintegrated standardized form plan, a non-integrated non-standardized form plan, and an integrated non-standardized form plan). A sponsor also may use one basic plan document for a money purchase plan other than a target benefit plan, a target benefit plan, and a profit-sharing plan. A separate adoption agreement and completed application form must be submitted with respect to each such defined benefit and defined contribution plan. In the case of a simultaneous submission, only one basic plan document need be provided. If the request is not simultaneous, separate basic plan documents must be submitted (but the number of the basic plan document remains the same).

Paired plans must be submitted simultaneously. See section 4.08 for the definition of the term "paired plans." Paired plans are paired by the basic plan documents. Two defined contribution plans that are paired (a profit-sharing and a money purchase plan) must share one basic plan document. A sponsor in pairing a defined benefit plan with a defined contribution plan may provide an integrated defined benefit, and a non-integrated defined benefit plan, as part of the paired plan arrangement only if both the integrated defined benefit plan and the non-integrated defined benefit plan share the identical basic plan document.

.05 Special Provisions Required in Master and Prototype Plans—Because of the nature of the master and prototype program, this revenue procedure requires that special provisions be included in every master or prototype plan. Section 5 includes some of these requirements. Thus, for example, plans must contain language permitting the sponsor to amend the master or prototype plans. Furthermore, provisions must be included that assure compliance with section 411(a)(10) and (d)(6) of the Code, such as in the event an adopting employer amends the plan by revising the options selected in the adoption agreement. The plan language is required in order that the employer's plan may remain in the master and prototype program and still satisfy the requirements of sections 411(a)(10) and (d)(6).

Master and prototype plans may be adopted by an employer that has other plans covering the same employees. Such plans must be aggregated for purposes of section 415 of the Code. Aggregation under section 416 of the Code may also be required. It is impossible for sponsors of master or prototype plans to include form language that properly aggregates with any other plan of an adopting employer. Therefore, provision is made to enable adopting employers to add additional language to the master or prototype plan.

.06 Experimental Mass Submitter Program—In order to further reduce the paperwork burden, the Service is establishing an experimental mass submitter program. See section 17. This program offers reduced paperwork coupled with faster service. After the TEFRA submissions are substantially completed, the Service will evaluate the effects of this program and decide whether it should be established on a permanent basis.

SEC. 4. DEFINITIONS

.01 Master Plan—A "master plan" is a plan (including a plan covering self-employed individuals) that is made available by a "sponsoring organization" (see section 4.06) for adoption by employers and for which a single funding medium (for example, a trust or custodial account) is established, as part of the plan, for the joint use of all adopting employers. A master plan consists of two separate documents, an adoption agreement and a basic plan document (see sections 4.03 and 4.04).

.02 Prototype Plan—A "prototype plan" is a plan (including a plan covering self-employed individuals) which is made available by a sponsoring organization for adoption by employers and under which a separate funding medium is established for each adopting employer. A prototype plan consists of two separate documents, an adoption agreement and a basic plan document.

.03 Adoption Agreement—An "adoption agreement" is the portion of the plan containing all the options that may be selected by the adopting employer.

.04 Basic Plan Document—A "basic plan document" is the portion of the plan containing all the nonelective provisions applicable to all adopting employers. No options (including blanks to be completed) may be provided in the basic plan document.

.05 Opinion Letter—An "opinion letter" is a written statement issued by the National Office to a sponsoring organization pursuant to this revenue procedure as to the acceptability of the form of a master or prototype plan and any related trust or custodial account under sections 401, 403(a), and 501(a) of the Code.

.06 Sponsoring Organization—A "sponsoring organization" is a trade or professional organization having characteristics similar to those described in section 1.501(c)(6)-1 of the Income Tax Regulations, a bank (as defined in section 581 of the Code), an insured credit union (within the meaning of section 101(6) of the Federal Credit Union Act), an insurance company, a regulated investment company (as defined in section 851), an investment advisor that has an advisory contract with one or more regulated investment companies, or a principal underwriter that has a principal underwriting contract with one or more regulated investment companies.

.07 Standardized Form Plan—A "standardized form plan" is a master or prototype plan which meets the following requirements:

1 The provisions governing eligibility and participation are such that the plan by its terms must cover all employees except those that may be excluded under section 410(a)(1) or (b)(3) of the Code. For example, a plan providing full and immediate vesting may exclude employees who do not have at least three years of service. However, the adoption agreement may provide options as to whether some or all of the employees described in sections 410(a)(1) and (b)(3) are to be excluded.

2 The eligibility requirements under the plan are not more favorable for officers, owners, or highly compensated employees than for other employees.

3 The vesting schedule in the plan provides vesting at a rate at least as favorable for every year as would be required by the schedules set forth in section 416(b)(1)(A) or (B) of the Code if the plan were top-heavy for every year after 1983.

4 The contributions (including forfeitures) provided under the plan (if a defined contribution plan other than a target benefit plan) or the benefits (if a defined benefit plan or a target benefit plan that complies with Rev. Rul. 76-464, 1976-2 C.B. 115) are a uniform percentage of total compensation. In making this determination, the plan may take into account benefits provided under the Social Security Act, provided the plan is properly integrated.

.08 Paired Plans—"Paired plans" are either a combination of two defined contribution standardized form plans or a combination of one or two defined contribution standardized form plans and one defined benefit standardized form plan (for example, a money purchase pension plan, a profit-sharing plan and a unit benefit or flat benefit pension plan), so designed that if any single plan, or combination of plans, is adopted by an employer, each plan by itself, or the plans together, will meet the anti-discrimination rules set forth in section 401(a)(4) of the Code, the contribution and benefit limitations set forth in section 415, and the top-heavy provisions set forth in section 416. Paired plans must have the same sponsoring organization.

SEC. 5. PROVISIONS REQUIRED IN EVERY MASTER OR PROTOTYPE PLAN

.01 Sponsor Amendments—Master or prototype plans must provide a procedure for sponsor amendment so that changes in the Code, regulations, revenue rulings or other statements published by the Internal Revenue Service, or corrections of prior approved plans may be applied on a group basis.

.02 Employer Amendments—Except for amendments permitted under sections 5.04 and 5.08, an employer that amends any provision of an approved master or prototype plan including its adoption agreement (other than to change the choice of options, if the plan permits or contemplates such a change) or an employer that chooses to discontinue participation in a plan as amended by its sponsoring organization and does not substitute another approved master or prototype plan is considered to have adopted an individually designed plan. The procedures stated in Rev. Proc. 80-30 and Notice 83-12, 1983-2 C.B. 412, relating to the issuance of determination letters for individually designed plans, will then apply to the plan as adopted by the employer.

.03 Anti-Cutback Provisions—Master or prototype plans must specifically provide for the protections of sections 411(a)(10) and (d)(6) of the Code in the event that the employer amends the plan in any manner such as revising the options selected on the adoption agreement or adopting a new master or prototype plan. In the case of a master or prototype plan that does not contain vesting for all years at least as favorable to participants as that provided in section 416(b) in the event a plan is not top-heavy, such plan must specifically provide that the vesting that occurs while the plan is top-heavy will not be cut back if the plan ceases to be top-heavy.

.04 Adopting Employer Modification to Satisfy Sections 415 and 416—Master or prototype plans must provide that the plan provisions may be amended by overriding plan language completed by the employer in the adoption agreement where such language is necessary to satisfy section 415 or 416 of the Code because of the required aggregation of multiple plans under these sections. (In the event of such an amendment the adopting employer must obtain a determination letter in order to continue reliance on the plan's qualified status.)

.05 Defined Contribution Section 415 Aggregation—Plan language must be incorporated that aggregates all defined contribution master and prototype plans to satisfy section 415(c) of the Code. Acceptable language is provided in the Service's Listing of Required Modifications and may be obtained by writing to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, DC 20224, Attention OP:E:EP:RQ:1.

.06 Top-heavy Requirements—Except to the extent described in section 7.03 relating to paired plans, each plan must either provide that all the additional requirements applicable to top-heavy plans (described in section 416 of the Code) apply at all times or provide that such requirements apply automatically if the plan is top-heavy regardless of how the adoption agreement is completed. In any case where the latter option is chosen, all the requirements for determining whether the plan is top-heavy must be included in the plan. See Questions T-25 and T-26 in section 1.416-1 of the Proposed Income Tax Regulations, 48 F.R. 10868, 1983-1 C.B. 832, 840.

.07 Additional Top-heavy Minimums to Satisfy Section 415(e)—Each plan must provide automatically or by optional provisions the additional minimums described in section 416(h)(2)(A) of the Code.

.08 Plan Language Required in Money Purchase Plans Receiving Waivers—Each money purchase master or prototype plan (including target benefit plans) must provide either standard language (obtainable as described in section 5.05) that satisfies Rev. Rul. 78-223, 1978-1 C.B. 125, in the event of a waiver of the minimum funding requirements or that an employer may amend the plan by adding overriding plan provisions in the adoption agreement in the event of a waiver of the minimum funding requirement under section 412(d) of the Code.

.09 Provision in Adoption Agreement on Extent of Reliance—In order to avoid unnecessary confusion as to the scope of an opinion letter, sponsoring organizations must include in the adoption agreement of all master or prototype plans (other than standardized form and paired plans), in close proximity to the signature blank, a statement that adopting employers may not rely on an opinion letter issued by the National Office with respect to the qualification of that plan and should apply to the appropriate key district for a determination letter in order to obtain reliance. Standardized form and paired plans must also include a similar statement in the adoption agreement that the adopting employer may not rely on the opinion letter issued by the National Office and should apply for a determination letter if the employer maintains or later adopts any plan in addition to the standardized form plan or paired plans. The adoption agreement must state that it is to be used with one and only one specific basic plan document.

.10 Definition of Employee/Sections 414(b), (c), (m), and (n)—Each master or prototype plan must include a definition of employee as any employee of the employer maintaining the plan or of any other employer aggregated under section 414(b), (c), or (m) of the Code. The definition of employee shall also include any individual deemed under section 414(n) of the Code to be an employee of any employer described in the previous sentence.

.11 Definition of Service/Sections 414(b), (c), (m) and (n)—Each master or prototype plan must specifically credit all service with any employer aggregated under section 414(b), (c), or (m) of the Code as service with the employer maintaining the plan. In addition, in the case of an individual deemed under section 414(n) of the Code to be the employee of any employer described in the previous sentence, service with such employer must be credited to such individual.

.12 Specific Non-TEFRA Requirements—In addition to other substantive requirements, master or prototype plans must comply with the requirements of the Revenue Rulings and Notices listed below:

1 Rev. Rul. 79-90, 1979-1 C.B. 155 (statement in plan of basis for determining actuarial equivalence),

2 Rev. Rul. 81-211, 1981-2 C.B. 98 (requiring full vesting at normal retirement age rather than at normal retirement date),

3 Notice 82-7, 1982-1 C.B. 357 (amendments to comply with the requirements under section 414(m) of the Code),

4 Notice 82-9, 1982-1 C.B. 358 (amendments to comply with final regulations under section 415 of the Code prior to amendment by TEFRA), and 5 Notice 82-23, 1982-2 C.B. 752 (amendments to comply with final regulations on suspension of benefits).

SEC. 6. STANDARDIZED FORM PLANS

.01 Reliance—An employer adopting a standardized form plan or paired plans has reliance, except as provided in section 6.02, if the provisions of section 15.011 of Rev. Proc. 80-30, as modified by section 18.02 of this revenue procedure, are satisfied.

.02 Non-Reliance by Employer Maintaining More than One Plan—Except in the case of one combination of paired plans, an employer may not rely on opinion letters for standardized form plans without obtaining a determination letter if the employer maintains at any time, or has maintained at any time, any other plan, including a standardized form plan, that was qualified or determined to be qualified covering some of the same participants.

.03 Sharing Basic Plan Document By Standardized and Non-Standardized Plans—A sponsor may establish a basic plan document that applies to both a standardized form plan and a plan that is not a standardized form plan. Such plans may differ only by the different adoption agreements. For example, the adoption agreement for the plan that is not a standardized form plan may have additional coverage options.

SEC. 7. SPECIAL REQUIREMENTS FOR PAIRED PLANS

.01 Limits of Section 415(e) Must Be Provided in Defined Benefit Plan Only—The benefits under a defined benefit plan in a combination of paired plans must be limited by the requirements of section 415(e) of the Code relating to the aggregation of defined benefit and defined contribution plans. Adjustments to satisfy the requirements of section 415(e) may only be provided in the defined benefit plan with respect to benefits thereunder.

.02 Section 416(h) Adjustment to Section 415(e) Limits—Paired plans that include a defined benefit plan must compute the denominators of defined benefit and defined contribution fractions in a manner satisfying section 416(h)(1) of the Code unless the requirements of section 416(h)(2) are satisfied. Paired plans providing the additional section 415(e) limits must provide, regardless of how the adoption agreement is completed, the additional top-heavy minimums described in section 416(h)(2)(A) and provide that the higher section 415(e) limits will not apply if the plan is super top-heavy as described in question T-24 in section 1.416-1 of the Proposed Income Tax Regulations, 48 F.R. 10868, 1983-1 C.B. 832, 838. In testing for super top-heavy, all the requirements of questions T-25 and T-26 in section 1.416-1 of the proposed regulations must be included in the plan.

.03 Coordination of Minimum Benefits and Contributions Under Top-Heavy Plans—Paired plans, subject to the limits of section 415 of the Code, may provide duplication of the minimum benefits and contributions in each of the plans being paired. The paired plans (when they become top-heavy) may, however, provide minimum contributions and benefits that are not duplicative. In that case, only two methods may be used:

1 The defined benefit plan must provide the 2% (3% if the additional section 415(e) limit is used) defined benefit minimum for all its participants. The defined contribution plan must provide the defined contribution minimum for participants in the defined contribution plan who are not participants in the paired defined benefit plan, or

2 The defined contribution plan must provide a contribution not less than 5% (7½% if the additional section 415(e) limit is used) with respect to any participant who is a participant in a paired defined benefit plan and a contribution not less than 3% (4% if the additional section 415(e) limit is used) for any participant who is not a participant in the paired defined benefit plan. The defined benefit plan must provide the 2% minimum (3% if the additional section 415(e) limit is used) with respect to any participant who is not in the defined contribution plan or who does not receive the entire defined contribution allocation.

.04 Pairing Provisions Must be in the Basic Plan Document—In the case of paired plans, all provisions necessary to coordinate the plans must be set forth in the basic plan document and not in the adoption agreement.

.05 Sponsor Limited to One Set of Paired Basic Plan Documents—A sponsor may not adopt more than one set of paired basic plan documents. Such set is limited to two different basic plan documents: one for defined benefit and one for defined contribution. The pairing of defined contribution plans requires only one basic plan document such as a profit-sharing plan and a money purchase plan containing the identical basic plan document and two different adoption agreements. A sponsor may provide a pairing of defined benefit and defined contribution plans in such a manner that with two different basic plan documents and three adoption agreements, an adopting employer may adopt a profit-sharing plan, a money purchase plan, and a defined benefit plan.

SEC. 8. OPINION LETTERS-SCOPE

.01 Issuance Only to Appropriate Sponsors—Opinion letters will be issued only to sponsoring organizations and do not constitute rulings or determinations as to either the qualification of the plans as adopted by particular employers or, in the case of prototype plans, the exempt status of related trusts or custodial accounts.

.02 Nonapplicability of this Procedure to IRAs and SEPs—Opinion letters will not be issued under this revenue procedure for prototype plans intended to meet the requirements for individual savings programs or simplified employee pension programs under section 408 of the Code (see Rev. Proc. 75-6, 1975-1 C.B. 646, Rev. Proc. 76-32, 1976-2 C.B. 634, and Rev. Proc. 80-17, 1980-1 C.B. 621).

.03 Areas Not Covered by Opinion Letters—Opinion letters will not be issued for:

1 Collectively-bargained plans (section 413(b) of the Code);

2 Stock bonus plans;

3 Plans containing a cash or deferred arrangement as described in section 401(k) of the Code;

4 Bond purchase plans;

5 Employee stock ownership plans (see Rev. Proc. 75-48, 1975-2 C.B. 583);

6 Pooled fund arrangements contemplated by Rev. Rul. 81-100, 1981-1 C.B. 326;

7 Annuity contracts under section 403(b) of the Code;

8 Pattern plans (see Rev. Proc. 76-15, 1976-1 C.B. 553);

9 Field prototype plans (see Rev. Proc. 77-23, 1977-2 C.B. 530);

10 Defined contribution plans (except for target benefit plans) under which the test for prohibited discrimination under section 401(a)(4) of the Code is made by reference to benefits rather than contributions;

11 Plans that involve integration with Social Security benefits except for plans that define annual compensation to be all of each employee's compensation (such plans may, however, limit the dollar amount of compensation that will be considered) that would be subject to taxation under section 3101(a) of the Code without the dollar limitation of section 3121(a)(1);

12 Plan described in section 414(k) of the Code (relating to a defined benefit plan which provides a benefit derived from employer contributions which is based partly on the balance of the separate account of a participant);

13 Target benefit plans that integrate with Social Security benefits using the offset method of integration;

14 Profit-sharing plans that allocate contributions or forfeitures to the account of any participant in any manner other than on the basis of compensation;

15 Governmental plans described in section 414(d) of the Code;

16 Church plans described in section 414(e) of the Code that have not made the election provided by section 410(d).

SEC. 9. OPINION LETTERS—INSTRUCTIONS TO SPONSORING ORGANIZATIONS

.01 National Office Issues Opinion Letters—The National Office will, upon the request of a sponsoring organization, issue an opinion letter as to the acceptability under section 401 of the Code of the form of a master or prototype plan and any related trust or custodial account.

.02 Forms and Address for Requesting Opinion Letters—A request for an opinion letter relating to a master or prototype plan must be submitted on the current version (revision of February 1984 or more current date when subsequently revised) of Form 4461, Application for Approval of Master or Prototype Defined Contribution Plan, or Form 4461-A, Application for Approval of Master or Prototype Defined Benefit Plan, as appropriate, regardless of whether the plan is designed to include self-employed individuals. The request is to be filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D.C. 20224, Attention: OP:E:EP:RQ:E.

.03 Replacement of Plans—If the plan is intended to replace one or more other plans of the sponsoring organization, the sponsoring organization must identify the replaced plan(s) by the file folder number(s).

.04 Separate Master or Prototype Plan Required for Different Categories of Plans—An application for a master or prototype plan shall not contain any combination of profit-sharing, money purchase (other than target benefit), target benefit, non-integrated defined benefit, or integrated defined benefit plan features. However, separate defined contribution plans may have the same basic plan document. Similarly, separate integrated and non-integrated defined benefit plans may have the same basic plan document. In the case where plans share the same basic plan document, the provisions of such basic plan document must be word for word identical.

.05 Additional Information May Be Requested—The Service may, at its discretion, require any additional information that it deems necessary.

.06 Inadequate Submissions—The Service will return, without further action, plans which are not in substantial compliance with the qualification requirements or plans that are so deficient that they cannot be reviewed in a reasonable amount of time. A plan will not be considered to be in substantial compliance if, for example, it omits any of the TEFRA requirements set forth below, or merely incorporates these requirements by reference to the applicable Code section. The Service will not consider these plans until after they are revised, and they will be treated as new requests as of the date they are resubmitted. The following are some examples of TEFRA requirements the omission of which will cause a plan to be regarded as not being in substantial compliance:

1 Section 401(a)(9) of the Code, as amended by section 242 of TEFRA, relating to required distributions from qualified plans (see Notice 83-23, 1983-2 C.B. 418).

2 Section 415 of the Code, as amended by section 235 of TEFRA, relating to lower contribution and benefit limits for qualified plans. (See Notice 83-10, 1983-1 C.B. 536, for guidelines in meeting these requirements.)

3 Section 416 of the Code, as added by section 240 of TEFRA, containing special rules for top-heavy plans. (See section 1.416-1 of the Proposed Income Tax Regulations, 48 F.R. 10868, 1983-1 C.B. 832,833, for guidance in meeting the top-heavy requirements.)

4 If the plan is an integrated defined contribution plan, section 401(1) of the Code, as added by section 249 of TEFRA, relating to nondiscriminatory coordination with Social Security benefits. (See Rev. Rul. 83-110, 1983-2 C.B. 70, for guidance in meeting this requirement.)

5 Section 414(m) of the Code, including section 414(m)(5), as added by section 236 of TEFRA.

6 Section 414(n) of the Code, as added by section 248 of TEFRA.

7 Section 401(c) and (d) of the Code, as amended by sections 237 and 238 of TEFRA, unless the plan precludes participation by self-employed individuals.

.07 Material Furnished to Adopting Employers—A sponsoring organization must furnish each adopting employer with a copy of the approved plan, copies of any subsequent amendments, and the most recently issued Internal Revenue Service opinion letter.

.08 Nonidentification of Questionable Issues May Cause Delay—If the plan document submitted as part of an opinion letter request contains a provision that gives rise to an issue for which contrary authorities exist, failure to disclose and distinguish significant contrary authorities may result in requests for additional information, which will delay action on the request (see section 7.06 of Rev. Proc. 83-36).

.09 Material Furnished to Key District Offices—A copy of the approved master or prototype plan and the Internal Revenue Service opinion letter must be furnished by the sponsoring organization to each Internal Revenue Service key district office in whose jurisdiction there are employers who adopt the plan. The sponsoring organization must also furnish key district offices with a copy of all amendments subsequently approved as to form by the National Office.

SEC. 10. AMENDMENTS

.01 Opinion Letters for Sponsor Amendments—A sponsoring organization may amend its previously approved plan (including any related trust or custodial account) and the National Office will entertain a request for a written opinion as to the acceptability, for purposes of sections 401, 403, and 501(a) of the Code, of the form of the plan as amended. If the plan is being amended for the first time to comply with TEFRA, the procedures set forth in section 9 must be followed. Otherwise, the sponsoring organization must submit Form 4461 or Form 4461-A, as applicable, to the National Office, together with a copy of the amendment(s), and a cover letter summarizing the changes to the plan effected by such amendment(s).

.02 No Opinion Letters for Certain Amendments—No opinion letter will be issued regarding the effect of amendment solely covering the following:

1 Amendments to conform a plan to the requirements of section 402(a) of Title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1, relating to named fiduciaries.

2 Amendments to conform a plan to requirements of section 503 of ERISA, relating to claims procedures.

3 Amendments that merely adjust the maximum limitations under section 415 of the Code to reflect annual cost-of-living increases, other than amendments that add an automatic cost-of-living adjustment provision to the plan.

Any amendment noted above will not affect the status of a favorable opinion letter previously issued with respect to a plan. The Service will not accept any requests for opinion letters regarding such amendments.

.03 Required Plan Restatement—No more than four consecutive amendments may be submitted without restating the plan. Furthermore, amendments to initially comply with TEFRA must restate the plan. The Service may, at its discretion, require plan restatement at any time that it deems necessary.

SEC. 11. DETERMINATION LETTER PROCEDURES

Except as provided in section 6, approval by the Service of the form of a master or prototype plan under this revenue procedure does not constitute a determination that an employer who adopts the plan will have a qualified plan. Therefore, such an adopting employer should request a determination letter in accordance with the procedures set forth in Rev. Proc. 80-30.

SEC. 12. EFFECT OF PRIOR SERVICE APPROVAL

.01 Continued Reliance/Proper Amendment by Sponsor—The reliance obtained by prior adopters of master or prototype plans for which favorable opinion or determination letters were received under the procedures in effect before the effective date of this revenue procedure will continue for plan years beginning after December 31, 1983, only if: (1) the sponsoring organization submits the plan or a replacement plan to the Service with the provisions required by section 5 on or before December 31, 1984, and (2) unless subject to section 12.03, the employer adopts the amendments or replacement plan and, except as provided in section 6, requests a determination letter on or before the later of (a) the last day of the twelfth calendar month from the time the Service issues an opinion letter with respect to such plan, or (b) the end of any remedial amendment period provided by regulations under section 401(b) of the Code. Such amendments must be effective as of the beginning of the first plan year commencing after December 31, 1983, except for amendments described in section 5.12, which must be effective as provided in the respective revenue rulings and notices.

.02 Lists of Plans to be Published by the Service—The Service will publish in the Internal Revenue Bulletin

1 Periodically, after June 30, 1984, a list of the sponsoring organizations and their related plans which have been submitted in accordance with this procedure, and

2 Quarterly, after the first list is published, the list of sponsoring organizations and their related plans (included in the list in paragraph 1) which (a) receive favorable opinion letters (and the respective date issued), (b) receive unfavorable opinion letters, or (c) withdraw their requests for opinion letters.

.03 Continued Reliance/No Proper Amendment by Sponsor—A previously adopting employer whose master or prototype plan is not included in the list described in subsection .021 that contains those plans that have been properly submitted by December 31, 1984, or whose plan is included in one of the lists described in subsection .022(b) or (c) may either (a) amend its plan to satisfy the requirements of section 5 in which case the plan will be treated as individually designed, or (b) adopt another master or prototype plan with TEFRA amendments which has been the subject of a favorable opinion letter from the Service under this revenue procedure and, if appropriate, request a determination letter with respect to that plan. In either case, the adoption date shall not be later than the last day of the month which is six months after the month of publication of such list.

SEC. 13. APPROVED PLANS—MAINTENANCE OF APPROVED STATUS

.01 Revocation of Opinion Letter by the Service—An opinion letter found to be in error or not in accord with the current views of the Service may be revoked. Revocation may be effected by a notice to the sponsoring organization to which the letter was originally issued, or by a regulation, revenue ruling or other statement published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

.02 Subsequent Required Amendments—An approved master or prototype plan must be amended to retain its approved status if any provisions therein fail to meet the requirements of law, regulations, or other rules and guidelines affecting qualification that become effective subsequent to the issuance of an opinion letter.

.03 Amendments Following Revenue Rulings—An opinion letter will not be adversely affected by the publication of a revenue ruling if an amendment conforming the plan to the requirement of the revenue ruling is made by the sponsoring organization within one year after publication of the revenue ruling in the Internal Revenue Bulletin to be effective for all adopting employers for their plan years beginning within such one year period.

SEC. 14. WITHDRAWAL OF REQUESTS

.01 Notifications and Effect—A sponsoring organization may withdraw its request for an opinion letter at any time prior to the issuance of such letter by notifying the National Office in writing of such withdrawal. The sponsoring organization must also notify each employer who adopted the plan that the request has been withdrawn. Such an employer will be deemed to have an individually designed plan to which Rev. Proc. 80-30 applies.

.02 Service Retains Information—Even though a request is withdrawn, the National Office will retain all correspondence and documents associated with that request and will not return them to the sponsoring organization. The National Office may furnish its views concerning the qualified status of the plan to District Directors who have or will have audit jurisdiction of the returns of any employers who have adopted the plan.

SEC. 15. ABANDONED PLANS

.01 Notification to the Service—A sponsoring organization should notify the National Office in writing of an approved master or prototype plan that is no longer used by any employer and that the sponsoring organization no longer intends to offer for adoption. Such written notification should be filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D.C. 20224, Attention: OP:E:EP:RQ:E, and should refer to the file folder number appearing on the latest opinion letter issued.

.02 Notification to Employers—A sponsoring organization that intends to abandon an approved master or prototype plan that is in use by any adopting employer must inform each adopting employer that the form of the plan has been terminated and that the employer may not continue to rely on the plan's opinion letter. After so informing all adopting employers, the sponsoring organization should notify the National Office in accordance with the subsection .01 above.

SEC. 16. SPECIAL PROVISIONS RELATED TO TEFRA

.01 Delayed Submissions—No applications for approval of master and prototype plans under this revenue procedure may be submitted prior to the expiration of 90 days after the effective date of this revenue procedure. Any such application will be returned.

.02 Nonprocessing of Non-TEFRA Master and Prototype Plans—Effective immediately no master or prototype (new plan or amendment) will be processed if the new plan or amendment does not satisfy TEFRA. Furthermore, all pending cases (both new plans and amendments) will be returned.

SEC. 17. EXPERIMENTAL ONE-TIME MASS SUBMITTER PROGRAM

.01 Opinion Letters Issued to Mass Submitters—Notwithstanding anything to the contrary, opinion letters will be issued to any entity whether or not such entity is a sponsoring organization if such entity can establish that there are at least 10 sponsoring organizations who will sponsor the identical master or prototype plans. The list of sponsoring organizations must be included in the submission. Such opinion letters will only apply to the mass submitter and may be made available by the mass submitter to an adopting employer only if the mass submitter is also a sponsoring organization defined in section 4.06. All other sponsoring organizations must obtain an opinion letter.

.02 Reduced Procedural Requirements for Sponsoring Organizations Which Use Mass Submitter Plans—A sponsoring organization of a master or prototype plan of a mass submitter must obtain an opinion letter. The request for the opinion letter must be submitted by the mass submitter on behalf of the sponsoring organization and must contain a declaration by the mass submitter under penalty of perjury that the sponsoring organization has adopted a particular, word for word identical, master or prototype plan of the mass submitter, which plan must be identified by the letter serial number and date of the opinion letter issued to the mass submitter with respect to that plan. If the sponsoring organization is sponsoring the identical plan, a copy of the plan need not be submitted. However, the mass submitter on behalf of the sponsoring organization must complete Part I, Items 1-17, of the forms described in section 9.02. Upon receipt of the request for an opinion letter, described above, the Service will, as soon as clerically feasible, issue an opinion letter to the sponsoring organization. After 10 sponsoring organizations have adopted the identical plan, other sponsoring organizations may adopt the plan with minor modifications. In that case the request must contain, in addition to the material described above, a copy of the plan for which that mass submitter received the opinion letter with the minor modifications inserted in a manner that is easily identifiable as well as a statement indicating the purpose and effect of each change. The mass submitter must submit the request on behalf of the sponsoring organization and must certify under penalty of perjury that the plan of the sponsoring organization except for the delineated changes is word for word identical to the plan upon which the mass submitter received a favorable opinion letter. The Service will review the changes on a priority basis and issue an opinion letter to the sponsoring organization as soon as possible.

.03 Expeditious Processing Accorded Mass Submitter Plans—Mass submitter plans, including the adoption of approved mass submitter plans by sponsoring organizations, will be accorded more expeditious processing than master and prototype plans submitted by non-mass submitters.

.04 Applicability—This section is not applicable to restatements or replacements of plans for which a favorable opinion letter has been issued in accordance with this procedure.

SEC. 18. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

.01 Rev. Proc. 80-29 is hereby superseded.

.02 Section 15.01 of Rev. Proc. 80-30 is modified by renumbering paragraph 4 as 2 after replacing paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 with the following:

1 A standardized form plan or paired plans as defined in sections 4.07 and 4.08 of Rev. Proc. 84-23 provided that:

(a) The sponsoring organization of such plan or plans has a currently valid favorable opinion letter from the National Office,

(b) The employer has followed the terms of the plan(s), and the coverage and contributions or benefits under the plan(s) are not more favorable for officers, owners or highly compensated employees than for other employees,

(c) The employer has properly notified all interested parties of the adoption of the plan(s) in accordance with sections 7 and 8, above, and

(d) The employer has not received, within 120 days after the date of adoption of the plan(s), notice from the Service that the plan(s) will not be treated as qualified pursuant to this subsection. (In this regard, see section 4.14, above.)

26 CFR 601.602: Tax forms and instructions.

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to provide requirements for the preparation of transmittal documents for annual information returns (Forms 1099, Statement for Recipients series; W-2G, Statement for Certain Gambling Winnings; and 5498, Individual Retirement Arrangement Information) and to estabish guidelines for the proper use of names and taxpayer identification numbers on such transmittals.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Information returns, whether filed on paper documents or on magnetic media, must be accompanied by transmittal documents. For magnetic media submissions, the transmittal document is Form 4804, Transmittal of Information Returns Reported on Magnetic Media. For transmittal of Forms 1099-R or W-2G on paper documents, the required transmittal document is Form W-3G, Transmittal of Certain Information Returns. For all other 1099 series returns and Forms 5498 filed on paper documents, the required transmittal is Form 1096, Annual Summary and Transmittal of U.S. Information Returns.

.02 For purposes of this revenue procedure, a transmittal document and its related information returns is a transmittal. One or more transmittals filed together is a shipment.

.03 Additional procedures concerning the preparation of magnetic media returns, transmittal documents, transmittals and shipments are contained in the revenue procedures for magnetic media reporting of information returns.

.04 Additional instructions concerning the preparation of paper document returns are contained in the instructions on Forms 1096 and W-3G.

SEC. 3. GENERAL GUIDELINES FOR PREPARATION AND USE OF TRANSMITTAL DOCUMENTS

.01 Separate transmittals are required when a payer is filing more than one type of information return on paper documents.

.02 One transmittal is required for all information returns included on magnetic media. If a transmitter is submitting information returns for more than one payer, the transmittal will be continued by attaching Forms 4802, Multiple Payer Transmittal for Magnetic Media Reporting.

.03 Correction documents are not permitted on the same transmittal as original documents.

.04 Separate transmittals are required if a payer files some information returns on magnetic media and other information returns on paper documents.

.05 Separate transmittals are required if a payer files some information returns directly and files other returns through a service bureau or agent or files returns through several service bureaus or agents.

.06 Payers, service bureaus, or agents filing information returns on paper documents may include several transmittals in a single shipment. In the case of service bureaus or agents, the shipment may come from several payers as long as each payer is clearly identified.

SEC. 4. PROVISIONS FOR MULTIPLE TRANSMITTALS

.01 Multiple transmittals may be filed at the option of the payer when magnetic media information returns are prepared at multiple business locations or by different segments of the payer's organization and cannot be conveniently consolidated into a single transmittal.

.02 Multiple transmittals may be filed at the option of the payer when the same type of information return is prepared on paper documents at multiple locations or by different segments of the payer's organization and cannot be conveniently consolidated into a single transmittal.

SEC. 5. PAYER'S TAXPAYER IDENTIFICATION NUMBER (TIN)

.01 The same payer TIN must be used on all transmittals; i.e., the same TIN must appear on all transmittal documents and information returns filed by a payer, regardless of whether such transmittals are filed from more than one location or segment of the payer's organization.

.02 The following must be used on transmittal documents and information returns:

(a) For taxable trade or business payers, the TIN used on the payer's tax returns (Exception: Sole proprietors must use their Employer Identification Number (EIN) unless they are not required to have an EIN and then they must use their Social Security Number (SSN)),

(b) For non-profit organizations, the TIN used on the payer's Form 990 return,

(c) For governmental bodies, the TIN issued to the headquarters organization having financial reporting responsibilities, and

(d) For individuals not engaged in a trade or business, their SSN.

.03 The payer must use the same TIN on transmittal documents and information returns each year returns are filed.

.04 A parent corporation and its subsidiary corporations are separate payer entities and must submit appropriate transmittals for each corporation under its own name and TIN. See Revenue Ruling 65-303, 1965-2 C.B. 434.

.05 Payer TINs on the information returns filed with the Internal Revenue Service must be identical to those on the statements issued by the payers to recipients of such payments.

SEC. 6. PAYER'S NAME AND ADDRESS

.01 The payer must use the same name each year on transmittal documents and information returns. The name must be consistent with the name contained on the income tax return, exempt organization return, or other return filed under the payer's TIN (see Section 5 above).

.02 When multiple transmittals are filed because information returns are prepared at different business locations or by different segments of the payer's organization, the payer must provide two name lines on the transmittal document.

(a) The first name line of the payer contains the primary name of the payer entity (see Section 6.01 above). For governmental bodies, the primary name is that of the federal, state, or local agency.

(b) The second name line must identify the specific business locations or segment of the organization preparing the transmittal document and information return and must be consistent each year. (The second name line will be helpful to payees in identifying the source of payment and will be helpful to payers in resolving questions on transmittals referred to them by the Service).

.03 The following examples illustrate the name, address, and TIN to be used on multiple transmittal documents and information returns by payers.

.04 For individuals engaged in a trade or business with a "doing business as" (dba) name, the individual payer must provide two name lines on the transmittal document. The first name line must be the name shown on the individual's income tax return. The second name line must be the "dba" name.

.05 The following examples illustrate the name, address, and TIN to be used by sole proprietors.

(a) Person with a dba name, who has an EIN:

(b) Person with a dba name and not required to have an EIN:

(c) Person who has EIN and does not use a dba name::

(d) Person not required to have an EIN and does not use a dba name:
Tom Plum SSN: 111-11-1111
55 Pine Street
Beechdale, MS 77777

.06 Payers' names on the information returns filed with the Service must be identical to those on the statements issued by the payers to the recipients of such payments.

SEC. 7. TRANSMITTAL BY SERVICE BUREAUS AND AGENTS

.01 A service bureau or agent must prepare transmittals using the same procedures as payers.

.02 A service bureau or agent preparing information returns for more than one payer on magnetic media must prepare a Form 4804 and attach a separate Form 4802 continuation sheet for each payer. The revenue procedures on magnetic media submissions contain further instructions for filing these transmittal documents and related information returns.

.03 When service bureaus or agents file paper document transmittal Forms 1096 or W-3G on behalf of payers, the following requirements apply:

(a) The payer's TIN, name, and address appearing on transmittal documents and information returns must be that of the payer and not that of the service bureau.

(b) The service bureau or agent's name and address may be included on paper transmittal documents and information returns if: (1) its name and address are clearly identified, (2) it has the authority to sign and signs the transmittal document, and (3) the payer wants the Service to contact the agent on questions concerning the transmittal. To do this the service bureau or agent will substitute its name and address for the payer's name and address beginning with the second name line. In this case, the second name line should begin with the abbreviation "c/o". For example, the XYZ Bank prepares Form 1099-DIV returns for M Corporation. The name, address and TIN on Form 1096 should be:
M Corporation
Payer TIN: 11-1111111
c/o XYZ Bank
1010 Main Street
Anytown, N.Y. 12121

.04 The preparation, signing and filng of transmittal documents with information returns by service bureaus or agents does not relieve the payer of the liability for any penalties for not filing a correct, complete, and timely return on the appropriate transmittal documents, Forms 1096, 4804, and/or W-3G.

SEC. 8. SERVICE CONTACTS WITH PAYERS

.01 The Service will direct inquiries related to transmittal documents and information returns to the payer whose name and TIN are on the documents. When multiple transmittals are filed (see Section 5.02), inquiries will include the second name line and address to enable the payer to identify the location or segment of the organization in order to resolve the inquiry.

.02 When appropriate, the Service will direct inquires to the service bu reau or agent that prepared and transmitted the return (see Section 7.03). If the inquiry is not resolved, it will then be referred by the Service to the payer as provided in Section 8.01.

.03 The preparation and filing of multiple transmittal documents with information returns by different locations and segments of the payer's organization does not relieve the payer of the liability for any penalties for not filing a correct, complete, and timely return on the appropriate transmittal documents, Forms 1096, 4804, and/or W-3G. The sum of all transmittals by the components of the organization are the responsibility of the trade or business as one entity.

SEC. 9. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure is effective beginning with shipments and transmittals due after December 31, 1983, for payments during 1983.

Rev. Proc. 84-25

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

This revenue procedure provides that the Internal Revenue Service will recognize as valid certain corporations' elections to be S corporations under section 1362 of the Internal Revenue Code, under the limited circumstances described below.

SECTION 2. CORPORATIONS AFFECTED

.01 This revenue procedure applies only to small business corporations (as defined in section 1361(b) of the Code) that meet the following four conditions:

(a) The corporation filed an election to be an S corporation on Form 2553 with the appropriate Service Center during the period beginning after October 19, 1982, and ending before January 26, 1983.

(b) The corporation failed to file before March 16, 1983, a request to retain (or adopt) a fiscal year, that is, a taxable year ending other than on December 31. (See section 18.1378-1(b)(3)(ii) of the Temporary Income Tax Regulations.)

(c) The corporation received a written notification from the Service Center that the corporation's election to be an S corporation is ineffective by reason of the corporation's failure to file the request described in subparagraph (b), above, before March 16, 1983; and

(d) The corporation either (1) decides to adopt a calendar year beginning with the short taxable year ending December 31, 1982, or to change to a calendar year ending December 31, 1982, provided it meets the qualification for change set forth in section 18.1378-1(b)(1), or (2) selects a fiscal year that meets the specific circumstances described in section 4 of Rev. Proc. 83-25, 1983-1 C.B. 689 for approval of a fiscal year.

SECTION 3. PROCEDURE

01. The Service will recognize as valid the election to be an S corporation that was filed by a corporation described in subsection 2.01, provided, within 90 days after the publication of this revenue procedure, the corporation files with the appropriate Service Center a statement to be associated with its S corporation election indicating the following:

2. Employer Identification Number.

3. A representation that the four conditions in section 2 of this revenue procedure apply to the corporation.

4. If section 2.01(d)(2) of this revenue procedure applies (that is, if the corporation selects a tax year ending other than on December 31), one of the representations set forth in section 7.01(4) of Rev. Proc. 83-25, whichever is applicable, to verify that the corporation meets the conditions in section 4 of Rev. Proc. 83-25.

5. The selected tax year of the corporation and whether that selection represents an adoption, retention, or change of an accounting period, and

6. The selected tax year of all shareholders.

7. A representation that the corporation's books (i.e. records which clearly and adequately reflect income on the basis of an annual accounting period) were or will be closed as of the last day of the short period establishing a new tax year.

.02 If, pursuant to this revenue procedure, a corporation's election to be an S corporation is effective for a taxable year that has ended and the return for such taxable year is past due, the corporation must file a Form 1120S for that taxable year, and the corporation's shareholders must file amended income tax returns (Form 1040X, if applicable) that include their shares of income, gain, loss, deduction, or credit in accordance with the S corporation rules. These returns, if required, must be filed within 90 days of the date of publication of this revenue procedure. A copy of the statement required by section 3.01 must be attached to the Form 1120S.

26 CFR 601.201: Rulings and determination letters.
(Also Part I, Section 103; 1.103-14.)

Rev. Proc. 84-26

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to set forth guidelines under which the Internal Revenue Service will issue an advance ruling on whether a portion of the proceeds of obligations to be issued by a state or political subdivision of a state that will be part of a reserve or replacement fund will be "reasonably required" within the meaning of section 103(c)(4)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code and section 1.103-14(d) of the Income Tax Regulations.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Section 103(a)(1) of the Code provides that gross income does not include interest on the obligations of a state or a political subdivision of a state. Section 103(c)(1) provides that, with certain exceptions, any arbitrage bond will not be treated as an obligation described in section 103(a)(1).

An arbitrage bond is any obligation that is part of an issue all or a major portion of the proceeds of which are reasonably expected to be used to acquire securities that will produce a yield over the term of the issue that is materially higher than the yield on such issue.

.02 Section 103(c)(4)(B) of the Code provides that an obligation shall not be treated as an arbitrage bond solely by reason of the fact that an amount of the proceeds of the issue of which such obligation is a part may be invested in securities or other obligations that are part of a reasonably required reserve or replacement fund. The amount of the bond proceeds invested in securities or other obligations that is part of a reasonably required reserve or replacement fund shall not exceed 15 percent of the proceeds of the issue unless the issuer establishes that a higher amount is necessary.

.03 Section 1.103-14(d)(2) of the regulations generally provides that if an amount in excess of 15 percent of the original face amount of the issue is invested in a reserve or replacement fund, such excess will be considered to be invested in a reasonably required reserve or replacement fund if (i) the issuer applies for a ruling that the specific reserve or replacement fund is necessary, and (ii) a ruling to that effect is subsequently issued to the governmental unit.

.04 Issuers of municipal bonds may not use the "15 percent of bond proceeds" referred to in section 103(c)(4)(B) of the Code and section 1.103-14(d)(1) of the regulations as a safe harbor for the establishment of reserve or replacement funds. Example (2) of section 1.103-13(b)(5)(v) illustrates that an issuer of municipal bonds may not use bond proceeds to establish a reserve fund equal to 15 percent of the bond proceeds if the amount reasonably required for such reserve fund is equal to only 8 percent of the bond proceeds. That example concludes that the over-issuance provisions of section 1.103-13(b)(5)(iv) apply and the bonds are arbitrage bonds. The over-issuance provisions apply because the proceeds of the issue exceed the amount necessary for the governmental purpose of the issue by the 7 percent difference between the 15 percent amount used and the 8 percent amount required. Any portion of an issue issued solely for the purpose of investing such portion at a materially higher yield, as less than a major portion, is not issued for a governmental purpose.

SEC. 3. APPLICATION

.01 Requests for advance rulings concerning reserve or replacement funds will be considered by the Service, and the determination of whether such funds are "reasonably required" within the meaning of section 103(c)(4)(B) of the Code and section 1.103-14(d) of the regulations will be made based on all facts and circumstances.

.02 The Service ordinarily will not issue a favorable advance ruling that reserve or replacement funds are "reasonably required" within the meaning of section 103(c)(4)(B) of the Code and section 1.103-14(d) of the regulations if such funds exceed the lesser of (1) maximum annual debt service or (2) one and one-quarter times the average annual debt service, regardless of whether the reserve or replacement funds are more or less than 15 percent of the original face amount of the issue. The Service ordinarily will not issue a favorable advance ruling that a reserve or replacement fund is reasonably required within the meaning of section 103(c)(4)(B) if the bonds are "general obligation" bonds. A request for an advance ruling that reserve or replacement funds are "reasonably required" within the meaning of section 103(c)(4)(B), when such funds exceed the lesser of (1) maximum annual debt service, or (2) one and one-quarter times the average annual debt service, or when such funds are established in connection with an issue of "general obligation" bonds, must set forth the rare and unusual circumstances that would require such reserve or replacement funds.

.03 The requester must comply with requirements of Rev. Proc. 79-4, 1979-1 C.B. 483; as amplified by Rev. Proc. 79-12, 1979-1 C.B. 492; as amplified by Rev. Proc. 80-1, 1980-1 C.B. 579, and any other applicable revenue procedures that relate to submission to the Service of requests for ruling.

SEC. 4. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure shall be effective with respect to advance rulings regarding required reserve or replacement funds for municipal obligations to be sold after April 2, 1984.

SEC. 5. INQUIRIES

Inquiries with respect to this revenue procedure should refer to its number and should be addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:IND:S, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

(Also Part I, Sections 163, 446, 451, 461, 481, 1381; 1.163-1, 1.446-1, 1.451-1, 1.461-1, 1.481-1, 1.1381-1.)

Rev. Proc. 84-27

SECTION 1. PURPOSE AND SCOPE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to provide a mandatory procedure for taxpayers to change their method of accounting for interest on indebtedness when they have been reporting interest income or deductions in accordance with the Rule of 78's computation.

This revenue procedure applies to lenders and borrowers who report interest income or who claim interest deductions with respect to loans using the Rule of 78's method, other than for consumer loans coming within the administrative exception in Rev. Proc. 83-40, 1983-1 C.B. 774, and other than for loans covered by the procedures set forth in Rev. Proc. 84-28. Rev. Proc. 84-28 sets forth a mandatory procedure for changing the method with respect to loans for which the interest computed under the Rule of 78's exceeds the loan payments during any year of the term of the loan. For consumer loans described in Rev. Proc. 83-40, the change is not mandatory. However, taxpayers proposing to change their method for such loans for any tax year must do so by complying with the provisions of Rev. Proc. 84-30.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 The Rule of 78's is described in Rev. Rul. 83-84, 1983-1 C.B. 97, as a method of allocating interest on a loan among time periods during the term of the loan. Under this method, the amount of interest allocable to each period is determined by multiplying the total interest payable over the life of the indebtedness by a fraction, (a) the numerator of which is the number of periods remaining on such indebtedness at the time the calculation is made and (b) the denominator of which is the sum of the periods' digits for the term of the indebtedness.

.02 Rev. Rul. 83-84 indicates that the Rule of 78's represents a purely mechanical formula for allocating interest among periods. Because interest is earned by the lender by application of the effective rate of interest over the term of the loan, any agreement between a borrower and a lender that provides that interest is earned in another manner, such as under the Rule of 78's computation, lacks economic substance since it fails to reflect the true cost of borrowing. Rev. Rul. 83-84 indicates further that no tax effect will be given to the Rule of 78's provision.

.03 Rev. Rul. 83-84 states that an agreement between a borrower and a lender with respect to any one year of a loan is not independent of the agreement with respect to any other year of the loan. In general, the substance of a loan agreement is that the same rate of interest applies to each tax year of the loan, regardless of any contrary formulas that may be stated in the agreement. The amount of interest attributable to the use of money for each period between payments is determined by applying the "effective rate of interest" on the loan to the "unpaid balance" of the loan for that period. The unpaid balance of a loan is the amount borrowed plus interest earned minus amounts paid. The effective rate of interest is a measure of the cost of credit, expressed as a yearly rate, that relates the amount and timing of values received to the amount and timing of payments made, and is thus a reflection of the cost of the amount borrowed for the time it is actually available. See Conf. Rep. No. 97-760, 97th Cong., 2d Sess. 553 (1982), 1982-2 C.B. 600, 639; S. Rep. No. 97-494 (Vol. 1), 97th Cong., 2d Sess. 209 (1982); Supplement I to Regulation Z issued by the Federal Reserve System, 12 CFR Sections 226.6 and 226.40 (1979). Therefore, the effective rate of interest, which is a uniform rate over the term of the loan and is based on the amount of the loan and the repayment schedule provided in the loan agreement, when applied to the unpaid balance of the indebtedness for a given period, will produce the true cost of that indebtedness for that period. This true cost of borrowing is sometimes referred to as the economic accrual of interest. (For purposes of this revenue procedure, the economic accrual of interest is hereinafter referred to as the "prescribed method.")

.04 Rev. Proc. 83-40 states that in a typical short-term consumer loan transaction, the Internal Revenue Service will accept the Rule of 78's method for computing the borrower's interest deduction and the lender's interest income as a matter of administrative convenience. The administrative exception for short-term consumer loans applies only when there is a self-amortizing loan that requires level payments, at regular intervals at least annually, over a period not in excess of five years (with no balloon payment at the end of the loan term), and when the loan agreement between the borrower and the lender provides that interest is earned, or upon the prepayment of the loan interest is treated as earned, in accordance with the Rule of 78's method. As indicated above under "PURPOSE AND SCOPE", any change in method of accounting regarding loans described in Rev. Proc. 83-40 is not a mandatory change. However, taxpayers proposing to change their method for such loans must do so by complying with the provisions of Rev. Proc. 84-30.

.05 Section 446(e) of the Internal Revenue Code and section 1.446-1(e) of the Income Tax Regulations provide that in order to change a method of accounting for federal income tax purposes the taxpayer must obtain the consent of the Commissioner. Section 1.446-1(e)(3)(i) requires that in order to obtain such consent an application must be filed within 180 days after the beginning of the tax year in which the taxpayer desires to make the change. Section 1.446-1(e)(3)(ii) authorizes the Commissioner to prescribe administrative procedures setting forth the limitations, terms, and conditions deemed necessary to permit a taxpayer to obtain consent to a change in its method of accounting in accordance with section 446(e).

.06 Section 481(a) of the Code requires that those adjustments necessary to prevent amounts from being duplicated or omitted be taken into account when the taxpayer's income is computed under a method of accounting different from the method used to compute taxable income for the preceding tax year. Section 481(c) and section 1.481-5 of the regulations provide that the adjustment required by section 481(a) may be taken into account in determining taxable income in the manner and subject to the conditions agreed to by the Commissioner and the taxpayer.

SEC. 3. APPLICATION

.01 Consent. In accordance with section 1.446-1(e)(3)(ii) of the regulations, the 180-day rule is waived and under section 1.446-1(e)(2)(i) consent is hereby granted to taxpayers to change a method of accounting with respect to interest on indebtedness from the method of computing interest income and deductions using the Rule of 78's method to the "prescribed method." See section 2.03 above. Such consent is granted for the first or second tax year ending on or after December 31, 1983, and the change shall be made in accordance with the provisions of this revenue procedure, including the adjustment under section 481(a) of the Code described in section 3.03 below.

.02 Year for change. Pursuant to the consent granted in section 3.01, both the lender and borrower to whom this revenue procedure applies and who are using the Rule of 78's method of accounting for computing interest income and deductions must change such method of accounting to the "prescribed method" on their federal income tax returns. The taxpayer has the choice of making the change on the federal income tax return filed for either the first or second tax year ending on or after December 31, 1983.

.03 Section 481(a) adjustment. An adjustment is required to prevent amounts of income and deduction from being duplicated within the meaning of section 481 of the Code and the regulations thereunder when the change in method of accounting is made pursuant to the provisions set forth in this revenue procedure. Such adjustment, whether positive or negative, referred to as the "section 481(a) adjustment," shall be taken into account in computing taxable income and in computing corporate earnings and profits. As to taxable income, the adjustment is made in the manner provided in sections 3.04-3.07 below. As to corporate earnings and profits, the adjustment is made in the manner provided in Rev. Proc. 79-49, 1979-2 C.B. 528. The change in method of accounting shall be considered to be a change in method of accounting initiated by the taxpayer.

.04 Period for positive section 481(a) adjustment.

1 When the section 481(a) adjustment results in an increase in taxable income and the change to the "prescribed method" is made in accordance with section 3.02, the period for taking into account the section 481(a) adjustment referred to in section 3.03 (adjustment period) is generally to be determined as follows:

(a) When the entire amount of the section 481(a) adjustment is attributable to the tax year immediately preceding the year of change (first preceding year), the total adjustment is to be taken into account in computing taxable income for the year of change. The amount attributable to the tax year immediately preceding the year of change is the difference in the amount of the adjustment determined under section 481(a) of the Code for the year of change and the amount that would have been required under section 481(a) if the change to the "prescribed method" had been made in the preceding year.

(b) When (a) above does not apply and 67 percent or more of the amount of the section 481(a) adjustment is attributable to the 1-tax year period, 2-tax year period, or 3-tax year period immediately preceding the year of change, the highest percent attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-tax year period will be taken into account ratably over a 3-tax year period beginning with the year of change. Any remaining balance will be taken into account ratably over an additional period equal to the remainder of the number of tax years the taxpayer has continuously used the Rule of 78's method. However, the total adjustment period shall not exceed six tax years. This subparagraph, 3.04 1(b), only applies if the taxpayer has used the Rule of 78's method for more than three tax years. If the Rule of 78's method has been used for no more than four tax years, 75 percent shall be substituted for 67 percent. An amount attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-tax year period is the difference in the amount of the adjustment determined under section 481(a) of the Code for the year of change and the amount that would have been required under section 481(a) if the change to the "prescribed method" had been made at the beginning of the preceding 1, 2, or 3-tax year period.

(c) In all other situations in which (a) and (b) above do not apply, the section 481(a) adjustment will be taken into account ratably over the number of years (not to exceed six) the taxpayer has continuously used the Rule of 78's method.

2 In applying sections 3.04 1(a) or (b), if a taxpayer's books and records do not contain sufficient information to compute the section 481(a) adjustment attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-tax year period immediately preceding the year of change, the taxpayer may reasonably estimate the amount and attach and sign (or have signed by an officer who has personal knowledge of the facts) the following statement to the Form 3115, Application for Change in Accounting Method:

Under penalty of perjury, I hereby certify that:

(a) the books and records of (name of the taxpayer) do not contain sufficient information to permit a computation of the section 481(a) adjustment attributable to the 1-tax year period, 2-tax year period, or 3-tax year period immediately preceding the year of change as required by section 3.04 1(b) of Rev. Proc. 84-27.

(b) Based on the information that is contained in the records, to the best of my information and belief, the entire amount of the section 481(a) adjustment for the year of change (indicate "is" or "is not," as the case may be) attributable to the tax year immediately preceding the year of change, and 67 percent (or 75 percent in applicable cases) or more of the section 481(a) adjustment for the year of change (indicate "is" or "is not," as the case may be) attributable to the 1-tax year period, 2-tax year period, or 3-tax year period immediately preceding the year of change.

3 A cooperative within the meaning of section 1381(a) of the Code shall take the total amount of the section 481(a) adjustment into account in computing taxable income for the year of change.

.05 Change in subsequent year for positive section 481(a) adjustment. If the taxpayer fails to change to the "prescribed method" in accordance with the consent granted in section 3.01 of this revenue procedure, consent is hereby granted to taxpayers to change to the "prescribed method" for tax years subsequent to the required tax years set forth in section 3.02. The change must be made on the taxpayer's timely filed federal income tax return for such subsequent year. The section 481(a) adjustment will be taken into account ratably over the number of years the taxpayer has continuously used the Rule of 78's method, not to exceed three tax years.

.06 Period for negative section 481(a) adjustment.

1 When the section 481(a) adjustment results in a decrease in taxable income and the change to the "prescribed method" is made in accordance with section 3.02, the period for taking into account the section 481(a) adjustment referred to in section 3.03 (adjustment period) is generally to be determined as follows:

(a) When the entire amount of the section 481(a) adjustment is attributable to the tax year immediately preceding the year of of change (first preceding year), the total adjustment is to be taken into account in computing taxable income for the year of change. The amount attributable to the tax year immediately preceding the year of change is the difference in the amount of the adjustment determined under section 481(a) of the Code for the year of change and the amount that would have been required under section 481(a) if the change to the "prescribed method" had been made in the preceding year.

(b) In all other situations, the section 481(a) adjustment will be taken into account ratably over the number of years (not to exceed three) the taxpayer has continuously used the Rule of 78's method.

2 A cooperative within the meaning of section 1381(a) of the Code shall take the total amount of the section 481(a) adjustment into account in computing taxable income for the year of change.

.07 Change in subsequent year for negative section 481(a) adjustment. If the taxpayer fails to change to the "prescribed method" in accordance with the consent granted in section 3.01 of this revenue procedure, consent is hereby granted to taxpayers to change to the "prescribed method" for tax years subsequent to the required tax years set forth in section 3.02. The change must be made on the taxpayer's timely filed federal income tax return for such subsequent year. The section 481(a) adjustment will be taken into account ratably over the number of years the taxpayer has continuously used the Rule of 78's method, not to exceed six tax years.

.08 Net Operating Loss Carryovers and Net Operating Losses.

1 No part of any (consolidated or separate) net operating loss carryover (NOL carryover) available at the beginning of the year of change may be used as an offset against the portion of the positive section 481(a) adjustment taken into account in the year of change. This condition will not apply to tax years subsequent to the year of change.

2 Any portion of any net operating loss arising in the year of change or in any subsequent year in the adjustment period that is attributable to the negative section 481(a) adjustment may not be carried to those 3 tax years preceding the year of change, to which section 172 of the Code otherwise would require it first to be carried.

.09 Investment credit or any other credits. No part of any (consolidated or separate) investment credit carryover or any other credit carryover available at the beginning of the year of change may be used to reduce the federal income tax liability resulting from, or attributable to, the inclusion in income of a portion of the section 481(a) adjustment in the year of change. This restriction does not apply, however, to a credit arising in the year of change.

.10 Ceasing to engage in the trade or business.

(a) With respect to a corporation:

If a corporate taxpayer ceases to engage in the trade or business to which the section 481(a) adjustment (section 3.03) relates at any time prior to the expiration of the adjustment period, the taxpayer shall take into account in that year the balance of the adjustment not previously taken into account in computing taxable income. See Rev. Rul. 80-39, 1980-1 C.B. 112, which holds that if a division of a corporation, for which a change in method of accounting had been granted, ceases to operate the trade or business for which the change in method was granted, the remaining section 481(a) adjustment applicable to the business conducted by that division of the corporation must be taken into account in the year the corporation ceases to engage in that trade or business. For purposes of this condition, the taxpayer is not considered to have ceased the trade or business if the cessation is the result of a transaction to which section 381 of the Code applies, but in that case the acquiring corporation shall continue to be subject to this revenue procedure as though it were the acquired corporation.

(b) With respect to a partnership:

In the event a partnership terminates or ceases to engage in the trade or business (within the meaning of section 708 of the Code) to which the section 481(a) adjustment (section 3.03) relates at any time prior to the expiration of the adjustment period, the balance of the section 481(a) adjustment not previously taken into account in computing the partnership's income or deductions shall be taken into account in the year of cessation. A partnership ceasing to engage in the trade or business includes the incorporation of the trade or business in a transaction to which section 351 applies (see Rev. Rul. 77-264, 1977-2 C.B. 187).

(c) With respect to a sole proprietor:

If a sole proprietor ceases to engage in the trade or business to which the section 481(a) adjustment (section 3.03) relates at any time prior to the expiration of the adjustment period, the balance of the adjustment not previously taken into account in computing taxable income shall be taken into account in the year of cessation. A sole proprietor ceasing to engage in the trade of business includes the incorporation of such trade or business in a transaction to which section 351 of the Code applies (see Rev. Rul. 77-264). A sole proprietorship does not cease to engage in that trade or business when the individual taxpayer sells a partial interest in the proprietorship and continues to be actively engaged in the management of the business that is subsequently operated as a partnership. The section 481(a) adjustment remaining at the time the partnership is formed is taken into account by the partnership as though there had been no change in ownership (see Rev. Rul. 66-206, 1966-2 C.B. 206).

SEC. 4. RECORDS

Taxpayers must maintain adequate records so that the Service may, upon examination, verify the data concerning the change in method of accounting.

SEC. 5. COMPLIANCE WITH CONDITIONS

Taxpayers making a change from the Rule of 78's method to the "prescribed method" without complying with all the conditions of this revenue procedure will be deemed to have made the change without obtaining the consent of the Commissioner.

SEC. 6. MANNER OF EFFECTING CHANGE

.01 Taxpayers to which this revenue procedure applies must effect the change in their methods of accounting for either their first or second tax year ending on or after December 31, 1983, pursuant to the provisions set forth in this revenue procedure by filing a current Form 3115, Application for Change in Accounting Method, in duplicate. The original of the Form 3115 shall be attached to the taxpayer's timely filed federal income tax return. However, if the taxpayer chooses to make the change for the first tax year ending on or after December 31, 1983, the taxpayer may make the change on an amended return for such year filed no later than the extended time prescribed in section 6081 of the Code and regulations thereunder whether or not the taxpayer has, in fact, been granted an extension of time for filing its income tax return for such year. For example, a domestic corporation, whose tax year ends on December 31st, may effect the change described in this revenue procedure on the original timely filed return for either 1983 or 1984, or on an amended return for the 1983 tax year filed no later than September 15, 1984. Similarly, an individual, whose tax year ends on December 31st, may effect the change described in this revenue procedure on the original timely filed return for either 1983 or 1984, or on an amended return for the 1983 tax year filed no later than August 15, 1984. At the time the original of the Form 3115 is filed with the federal income tax return, a copy of the Form 3115 shall be filed with the National Office addressed to the Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, Attention: CC:C:C:1, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224. In addition to the information required on Form 3115, the taxpayer must provide (1) a computation of the section 481(a) adjustment and (2) the period over which the section 481(a) adjustment will be taken into account and the basis for such conclusion. The National Office will sample the Form 3115's to determine whether the requirements of this revenue procedure have been followed. The National Office or the District Director may advise the taxpayer of required adjustments to the change in method of accounting for interest income and deductions.

.02 Taxpayers described in section 3.05 or section 3.07 must also follow the procedures set forth in section 6.01 regarding the place for filing of the original and the copy of the Form 3115 with respect to the tax year for which the change to the "prescribed method" is made. Such taxpayers must also furnish with the Form 3115 the additional information set forth in section 6.01 above regarding the section 481(a) adjustment and its adjustment period.

.03 In order to assist in the processing of these changes in method of accounting and to ensure proper handling, reference to this revenue procedure shall be made a part of the Form 3115 by either typing or legibly printing the following statement at the top of Page 1 of Form 3115: "FILED UNDER REV. PROC. 84-27".

SEC. 7. EXAMPLES

Example A

A taxpayer, that uses the accrual method of accounting and reports its income on a calendar year basis, borrowed $100,000 on January 1, 1980, payable in 10 annual installments of $17,698 each. The total interest on the loan will be $76,980 (10 x $17,698 = $176,980; $176,980 − $100,000 = $76,980). The terms of the loan state that interest is earned by the lender in accordance with the Rule of 78's computation, and beginning in 1980 the taxpayer computed its annual interest deduction using the Rule of 78's. The effective rate of interest is 12 percent. Commencing with 1980 and continuing through 1983, the taxpayer used the Rule of 78's method for computing interest deductions and deducted a total of $47,587 in interest during those four years. If the taxpayer had used the "prescribed method" for computing its deductions for interest during those four years, the total interest deduction would have been $43,558. The difference in the interest deduction using the two methods is $4,029. The following table shows the interest computed under the two methods for the first four years.

Table

Years	Economic accrual of interest (Prescribed Method)	Rule of 78's
1981	11,316	12,597
1983	9,692	9,797

The taxpayer chose to make the change to the "prescribed method" on its tax return for 1984, rather than the return for 1983. Therefore, with the taxpayer's timely filed federal income tax return for the fifth year (1984), the taxpayer filed a Form 3115 in accordance with the provisions set forth in sections 3 and 6.01 of this revenue procedure. By changing to the "prescribed method" commencing with the fifth year of the loan and continuing to use that method, the taxpayer will eventually receive a double deduction for interest in the amount of $4,029. Thus, under section 481(a) of the Code, an adjustment is necessary solely by reason of the change in method of accounting in order to prevent the $4,029 from being duplicated, i.e., taken again as a deduction. If the taxpayer had made the change to the "prescribed method" for the tax years 1981, 1982, or 1983, the amount of the adjustment would have been $1,996, $3,277, or $3,924, respectively. The percent of the section 481(a) adjustment attributable to the 1, 2 or 3-tax year period preceding the year of change is determined as follows:

1-tax year period
Adjustment as of January 1, 1984.	$ 4,029
Less: hypothetical adjustment as of January 1, 1983	3,924
Amount attributable to 1-tax year period.....	$ 105
Percent of adjustment attributable to 1-tax year period: 105 / 4,029	= 2.6%

2-tax year period
Adjustment as of January 1, 1984.	$ 4,029
Less: hypothetical adjustment as of January 1, 1982	3,277
Amount attributable to 2-tax year period.....	$ 752
Percent of adjustment attributable to 2-tax year period: 752 / 4,029	= 18.7%

3-tax year period
Adjustment as of January 1, 1984.	$ 4,029
Less: Hypothetical adjustment as of January 1, 1981	1,996
Amount attributable to 3-tax year period	$ 2,033

Percent of adjustment attributable to 3-tax year period: 2,033 / 4,029 = 50.5%

Because less than 75 percent of the adjustment is attributable to the 1983, the 1982, and the 1981 tax years, section 3.04 1(c) of this revenue procedure requires that an adjustment under section 481(a) in the amount of $4,029 be taken into account as an item of gross income ratably over four tax years, the number of tax years that the taxpayer has used the Rule of 78's method.

Example B

The facts are the same as in Example A except that the taxpayer entered into three loans each for $100,000 with identical terms to the loan described in Example A. The first loan was entered into on January 1, 1979, and the other two loans were entered into on January 1, 1981. The following table shows the interest computed using the "prescribed method" and using the Rule of 78's method for the five years that the taxpayer computed its annual interest deduction using the Rule of 78's method.

Table

Year	Economic accrual of interest (Prescribed Method)			Rule of 78's
	1st loan	2nd & 3rd loans	Total	1st loan	2nd & 3rd loans	Total
1979	12,000		12,000	13,966		13,966
1980	11,316		11,316	12,597		12,597
1981	10,550	24,000	34,550	11,197	27,932	39,129
1982	9,692	22,632	32,324	9,797	25,194	34,991
1983	8,731	21,100	29,831	8,398	22,394	30,792

During the five years the taxpayer deducted a total of $131,475 in interest based on the Rule of 78's method. If the taxpayer has used the "prescribed method" for computing its deductions for interest during those five years, the total interest deduction would have been $120,021. The difference in the interest deduction using the two methods is $11,454.

With the taxpayer's timely filed federal income tax return for the sixth year (1984), the taxpayer filed a Form 3115 in accordance with the provisions set forth of section 3 and 6.01 of this revenue procedure. By changing to the prescribed method commencing with the sixth year and continuing to use that method, the taxpayer will eventually receive a double deduction for interest in the amount of $11,454. Thus, under section 481(a) of the Code, an adjustment is necessary solely by reason of the change in method of accounting in order to prevent the $11,454 from being duplicated, i.e., taken again as a deduction. If the taxpayer had made the change to the "prescibed method" for the tax year 1981, 1982, or 1983, the amount of the adjustment would have been $3,247, $7,826, or $10,493, respectively. The percent of the section 481(a) adjustment attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-tax year period preceding the year of change is determined as follows:

1-tax year period
Adjustment as of January 1, 1984.	$11,454
Less: hypothetical adjustment as of January 1, 1983	10,493
Amount attributable to 1-tax year period	$ 961

Percent of adjustment attributable to 1-tax year period: 961 / 11,454 = 8.4%

2-tax year period
Adjustment as of January 1, 1984.	$11,454
Less: hypothetical adjustment as of January 1, 1982	7,826
Amount attributable to 2-tax year period	$ 3,628

Percent of adjustment attributable to 2-tax year period: 3,628 / 11,454 = 31.7%

3-tax year period
Adjustment as of January 1, 1984.	$11,454
Less: hypothetical adjustment as of January 1, 1981	3,247
Amount attributable to 3-tax year period	$ 8,207

Percent of adjustment attributable to 3-tax year period: 8,207 / 11,454 = 71.7%

In this example, the percent of the section 481(a) adjustment attributable to the 3-tax year period preceding the year of change is more than 67 percent and represents the highest percent of the adjustment attributable to any one of the 1, 2, or 3-tax year periods preceding the year of change. Under the provisions of section 3.04 1(b) of this revenue procedure, the actual section 481(a) adjustment for 1984 of $11,454 shall be taken into account in the amount of $2,737.51 in 1984, 1985, and 1986 (71.7 percent times $11,454 divided by 3, for each of the 3 years) and $1,620.74 in 1987 and 1988 (the remainder from the $11,454 adjustment taken ratably in the two remaining years that the taxpayer used the Rule of 78's method).

Example C

The taxpayer, a commercial bank that reports its income on a calendar year basis, has used the Rule of 78's method to compute interest income on many of its loans for eleven years. Interest income reported by the taxpayer did not exceed the loan payments received by the taxpayer with respect to any loans for which the taxpayer used the Rule of 78's method. In accordance with section 3.02 of this revenue procedure, the taxpayer must change to the "prescribed method" for loans with terms in excess of five years by filing the original of the Form 3115 with its timely filed federal income tax return for either 1983 or 1984, or with an amended return for 1983 filed no later than September 15, 1984. The taxpayer's application must comply with the procedures set forth in section 6.01 of this revenue procedure. The period for taking into account the negative section 481(a) adjustment for 1984 is determined under section 3.06 1 of this revenue precedure. However, the total adjustment period may not exceed three tax years.

Example D

The facts are the same as Example C except that the taxpayer ignores the mandatory requirement of section 3.02 of this revenue procedure, i.e., the taxpayer does not change to the "prescribed method" for either 1983 or 1984. If the taxpayer changes to the "prescribed method" for any year subsequent to 1984, it must comply with sections 3.07 and 6.02 of this revenue procedure and its section 481(a) adjustment must be taken into account ratably over six tax years. See section 3.07.

SEC. 8. MISCELLANEOUS

Where a taxpayer's change in method of accounting falls within the scope set forth in section 1 of this revenue procedure, that taxpayer must use this revenue procedure to effectuate such change in method of accounting and may not use the provisions of Rev. Proc. 80-51, 1980-2 C.B. 818. Thus, the original of the application for permission to change the method of accounting described in this revenue procedure, if filed with the National Office under the general provisions of Rev. Proc. 80-51, will not be considered a valid application. Any such original applications erroneously filed with the National Office will be returned without processing and with instructions to comply with this revenue procedure.

SEC. 9. ALTERNATIVE PROCEDURE FOR CERTAIN INDIVIDUAL BORROWERS

Individual borrowers, who previously reported interest expense based upon the Rule of 78's method, may have difficulty computing the amount of interest that economically accrues in order to comply with the provisions of this revenue procedure. Many of these taxpayers may qualify to use the alternative procedure, contained in Rev. Proc. 84-29, for computing allowable interest deductions. One of the requirements that must be met in order to qualify for the alternative procedure contained in Rev. Proc. 84-29 is that the proceeds of the loan were not used for investment purposes or to purchase items in connection with a trade or business. See Rev. Proc. 84-29 for complete details.

SEC. 10. INQUIRIES

Inquiries regarding this revenue procedure may be addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue,

Rev. Proc. 84-28

SECTION 1. PURPOSE AND SCOPE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to provide a mandatory procedure for taxpayers to change their method of accounting for interest on indebtedness when they have been reporting interest income or deductions in accordance with the Rule of 78's computation.

This revenue procedure applies to lenders and borrowers, who report interest income or who claim interest deductions with respect to loans using the Rule of 78's method, for those loans in which the interest computed using the Rule of 78's exceeds the loan payments during any year of the term of the loan. See Rev. Proc. 84-27 for a mandatory procedure for changing the method with respect to loans, which are not described in Rev. Proc. 83-40, 1983-1 C.B. 774, and for which the interest computed under the Rule of 78's does not exceed the loan payments during any year of the term of the loan. See Rev. Proc. 84-30 with respect to consumer loans coming within the administrative exception of Rev. Proc. 83-40. For consumer loans described in Rev. Proc. 83-40, the change is not mandatory. However, taxpayers proposing to change their method of accounting for such loans for any tax year must do so by complying with the provisions of Rev. Proc. 84-30.

.01 The Rule of 78's is described in Rev. Rul. 83-84, 1983-1 C.B. 97, as a method of allocating interest on a loan among time periods during the term of the loan. Under this method, the amount of interest allocable to each period is determined by multiplying the total interest payable over the life of the indebtedness by a fraction, (a) the numerator of which is the number of periods remaining on such indebtedness at the time the calculation is made and (b) the denominator of which is the sum of the periods' digits for the term of the indebtedness.

.02 Rev. Rul. 83-84 indicates that the Rule of 78's represents a purely mechanical formula for allocating interest among periods. Because interest is earned by the lender by application of the effective rate of interest over the term of the loan, any agreement between a borrower and a lender that provides that interest is earned in another manner, such as under the Rule of 78's computation, lacks economic substance because it fails to reflect the true cost of borrowing. Rev. Rul. 83-84 indicates further that no tax effect will be given to the Rule of 78's provision.

.03 Rev. Rul. 83-84 states that an agreement between a borrower and a lender with respect to any one year of a loan is not independent of the agreement with respect to any other year of the loan. In general, the substance of a loan agreement is that the same rate of interest applies to each tax year of the loan, regardless of any contrary formulas that may be stated in the agreement. The amount of interest attributable to the use of money for each period between payments is determined by applying the "effective rate of interest" on the loan to the "unpaid balance" of the loan for that period. The unpaid balance of a loan is the amount borrowed plus interest earned minus amounts paid. The effective rate of interest is a measure of the cost of credit, expressed as a yearly rate, that relates the amount and timing of values received to the amount and timing of payments made, and is thus a reflection of the cost of the amount borrowed for the time it is actually available. See Conf. Rep. No. 97-760, 97th Cong., 2d Sess. 553 (1982), 1982-2 C.B. 600, 639; S. Rep. No. 97-494 (Vol. 1), 97th Cong., 2d Sess. 209 (1982); Supplement I to Regulation Z issued by the Federal Reserve System, 12 CFR Sections 226.6 and 226.40 (1979). Therefore, the effective rate of interest, which is a uniform rate over the term of the loan and is based on the amount of the loan and the repayment schedule provided in the loan agreement, when applied to the unpaid balance of the indebtedness for a given period, will produce the true cost of that indebtedness for that period. This true cost of borrowing is sometimes referred to as the economic accrual of interest. (For purposes of this revenue procedure the economic accrual of interest is hereinafter referred to as the "prescribed method.")

.04 Rev. Proc. 83-40 states that in a typical short-term consumer loan transaction, the Internal Revenue Service will accept the Rule of 78's method for computing the borrower's interest deduction and the lender's interest income as a matter of administrative convenience. The administrative exception for short-term consumer loans applies only when there is a self-amortizing loan that requires level payments, at regular intervals at least annually, over a period not in excess of five years (with no balloon payment at the end of the loan term), and when the loan agreement between the borrower and the lender provides that interest is earned, or upon the prepayment of the loan interest is treated as earned, in accordance with the Rule of 78's method. As indicated above under "PURPOSE AND SCOPE", any change in method of accounting regarding loans described in Rev. Proc. 83-40 is not a mandatory change. However, taxpayers proposing to change their method for such loans must do so by complying with the provisions of Rev. Proc. 84-30.

.05 Section 446(e) of the Internal Revenue Code and section 1.446-1(e) of the Income Tax Regulations provide that in order to change a method of accounting for federal income tax purposes the taxpayer must obtain the consent of the Commissioner. Section 1.446-1(e)(3)(i) requires that in order to obtain such consent an application must be filed within 180 days after the beginning of the tax year in which the taxpayer desires to make the change. Section 1.446-1(e)(3)(ii) authorizes the Commissioner to prescribe administrative procedures setting forth the limitations, terms, and conditions deemed necessary to permit a taxpayer to obtain consent to a change in its method of accounting in accordance with section 446(e).

.06 Section 481(a) of the Code requires that those adjustments necessary to prevent amounts from being duplicated or omitted be taken into account when the taxpayer's taxable income is computed under a method of accounting different from the method used to compute taxable income for the preceding tax year. Section 481(c) and section 1.481-5 of the regulations provide that the adjustment required by section 481(a) may be taken into account in determining taxable income in the manner and subject to the conditions agreed to by the Commissioner and the taxpayer.

SEC. 3. APPLICATION

.01 Consent. In accordance with section 1.446-1(e)(3)(ii) of the regulations, the 180-day rule is waived and under section 1.446-1(e)(2)(i) consent is hereby granted to taxpayers to change a method of accounting with respect to interest on indebtedness from the method of computing interest income or deductions using the Rule of 78's method to the "prescribed method." See section 2.03 above. Such consent is granted for the first tax year ending on or after December 31, 1983, and the change shall be made in accordance with the provisions of this revenue procedure, including the adjustment under section 481(a) of the Code described in section 3.03 below.

.02 Year of change. Pursuant to the consent granted in section 3.01, both the lender and borrower to whom this revenue procedure applies and who are using the Rule of 78's method of accounting for computing interest income or deductions must change such method of accounting to the "prescribed method" on their federal income tax returns for the first tax year ending on or after December 31, 1983.

.03 Section 481(a) adjustment. An adjustment is required to prevent amounts of income and deduction from being duplicated within the meaning of section 481 of the Code and the regulations thereunder when the change in method of accounting is made pursuant to the provisions set forth in this revenue procedure. Such adjustment, whether positive or negative, referred to as the "section 481(a) adjustment," shall be taken into account in computing taxable income and in computing corporate earnings and profits. As to taxable income, the adjustment is made in the manner provided in sections 3.04 - 3.07 below. As to corporate earnings and profits, the adjustment is made in the manner provided in Rev. Proc. 79-49, 1979-2 C.B. 528. The change in method of accounting shall be considered to be a change in method of accounting initiated by the taxpayer.

.04 Period for positive section 481(a) adjustment.

1 When the section 481(a) adjustment results in an increase in taxable income and the change to the "prescribed method" is made in accordance with section 3.02, the period for taking into account the section 481(a) adjustment referred to in section 3.03 (adjustment period) is generally to be determined as follows:

(a) When the entire amount of the section 481(a) adjustment is attributable to the tax year immediately preceding the year of change (first preceding year), the total adjustment is to be taken into account in computing taxable income for the year of change. The amount attributable to the tax year immediately preceding the year of change is the difference in the amount of the adjustment determined under section 481(a) of the Code for the year of change and the amount that would have been required under section 481(a) if the change to the "prescribed method" had been made in the preceding year.

(b) When (a) above does not apply and 67 percent or more of the amount of the section 481(a) adjustment is attributable to the 1-tax year period, 2-tax year period, or 3-tax year period immediately preceding the year of change, the highest percent attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-tax year period will be taken into account ratably over a 3-tax year period beginning with the year of change. Any remaining balance will be taken into account ratably over an additional period equal to the remainder of the number of tax years the taxpayer has continuously used the Rule of 78's method. However, the total adjustment period shall not exceed six tax years. This subparagraph, 3.04 1(b), only applies if the taxpayer has used the Rule of 78's method for more than three tax years. If the Rule of 78's method has been used for no more than four tax years, 75 percent shall be substituted for 67 percent. An amount attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-tax year period is the difference in the amount of the adjustment determined under section 481(a) of the Code for the year of change and the amount that would have been required under section 481(a) if the change to the "prescribed method" had been made at the beginning of the preceding 1, 2, or 3-tax year period.

(c) In all other situations in which (a) and (b) above do not apply, the section 481(a) adjustment will be taken into account ratably over the number of years (not to exceed six) the taxpayer has continuously used the Rule of 78's method.

2 In applying sections 3.04 1(a) or (b), if a taxpayer's books and records do not contain sufficient information to compute the section 481(a) adjustment attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-tax year period immediately preceding the year of change, the taxpayer may reasonably estimate the amounts and attach and sign (or have signed by an officer who has personal knowledge of the facts) the following statement to the Form 3115, Application for Change in Accounting Method:

Under penalty of perjury, I hereby certify that:

(a) the books and records of (name of the taxpayer) do not contain sufficient information to permit a computation of the section 481(a) adjustment attributable to the 1-tax year period, 2-tax year period, or 3-tax year period immediately preceding the year of change as required by section 3.04 1(b) of Rev. Proc. 84-28.

(b) Based on the information that is contained in the records, to the best of my information and belief, the entire amount of the section 481(a) adjustment for the year of change (indicate either "is" or "is not," as the case may be) attributable to the tax year immediately preceding the year of change, and 67 percent (or 75 percent in applicable cases) or more of the section 481(a) adjustment for the year of change (indicate "is" or "is not," as the case may be) attributable to the 1-tax year period, 2-tax year period, or 3-tax year period immediately preceding the year of change.

3 A cooperative within the meaning of section 1381(a) of the Code shall take the total amount of the section 481(a) adjustment into account in computing taxable income for the year of change.

.05 Change in subsequent year for positive section 481(a) adjustment.

1 Under certain circumstances, a taxpayer who has a positive section 481(a) adjustment and who does not change to the "prescribed method" for the first tax year ending on or after December 31, 1983, may not use this revenue procedure to make the change for a later year. The provisions of this revenue procedure are not available to such a taxpayer who has been contacted in any manner by a representative of the Service for the purpose of scheduling an examination of its federal income tax return(s). If a taxpayer has not been contacted by the Service for the purpose of scheduling an examination of its return(s), consent is hereby granted to the taxpayer to change to the "prescribed method" for tax years subsequent to the required tax year set forth in section 3.02. The change must be made on the taxpayer's timely filed federal income tax return for such subsequent year.

2 The section 481(a) adjustment will be taken into account ratably over a number of years, which depends on the number of years that the section 481(a) adjustment would have been taken into account if the taxpayer had made the change for the first tax year ending on or after December 31, 1983. If the taxpayer had made the change for the first tax year ending on or after December 31, 1983, and if the section 481(a) adjustment would have been taken into account over (a) four through six tax years, (b) three tax years, or (c) two or less tax years, then, when the taxpayer makes the change for a subsequent tax year, the number of years over which the section 481(a) adjustment is taken into account shall be (a) three tax years, (b) two tax years, or (c) one tax year, respectively. See Examples C and D, contained in section 7 of this revenue procedure.

1 When the section 481(a) adjustment results in a decrease in taxable income and the change to the "prescribed method" is made in accordance with section 3.02, the period for taking into account the section 481(a) adjustment referred to in section 3.03 (adjustment period) is generally to be determined as follows:

(a) When the entire amount of the section 481(a) adjustment is attributable to the tax year immediately preceding the year of change (first preceding year), the total adjustment is to be taken into account in computing taxable income for the year of change. The amount attributable to the tax year immediately preceding the year of change is the difference in the amount of the adjustment determined under section 481(a) of the Code for the year of change and the amount that would have been required under section 481(a) if the change to the "prescribed method" had been made in the preceding year.

(b) In all other situations, the section 481(a) adjustment will be taken into account ratably over the number of years (not to exceed three) the taxpayer has continuously used the Rule of 78's method.

2 A cooperative within the meaning of section 1381(a) of the Code shall take the total amount of the section 481(a) adjustment into account in computing taxable income for the year of change.

.07 Change in subsequent year for negative section 481(a) adjustment. If the taxpayer fails to change to the "prescribed method" in accordance with the consent granted in section 3.01 of this revenue procedure, consent is hereby granted to change to the "prescribed method" for tax years subsequent to the required tax year set forth in section 3.02. The change must be made on the taxpayer's timely filed federal income tax return for such subsequent year, and the section 481(a) adjustment will be taken into account ratably over the number of years the taxpayer continuously has used the Rule of 78's method, not to exceed six tax years.

.08 Under examination. This revenue procedure does not apply to a lender or a borrower who uses the Rule of 78's method and whose reported interest income or claimed interest deduction exceeds the loan payments made during any of the tax years of the loan, if an issue concerning the amount of reported interest income or claimed interest deduction has been raised and is pending on April 2, 1984, in connection with the examination of the taxpayer's federal income tax return. In such situations, the provisions of section 481 of the Code will be applied by the examining agent, i.e., those adjustments necessary to make the change in method will be taken into account in one tax year.

.09 Net Operating Loss Carryovers and Net Operating Losses.

1 No part of any (consolidated or separate) net operating loss carryover available at the beginning of the year of change may be used as an offset against the portion of the positive section 481(a) adjustment taken into account in the year of change. This condition will not apply to tax years subsequent to the year of change.

2 Any portion of any net operating loss arising in the year of change or in any subsequent year in the adjustment period that is attributable to the negative section 481(a) adjustment may not be carried to those 3 tax years preceding the year of change, to which section 172 of the Code otherwise would require it first to be carried.

.10 Investment credit or any other credits. No part of any (consolidated or separate) investment credit carryover or any other credit carryover available at the beginning of the year of change may be used to reduce the federal income tax liability resulting from, or attributable to, the inclusion in income of a portion of the section 481(a) adjustment in the year of change. This restriction does not apply, however, to a credit arising in the year of change.

.11 Ceasing to engage in the trade or business.

(a) With respect to a corporation:

If a corporate taxpayer ceases to engage in the trade or business to which the section 481(a) adjustment (section 3.03) relates at any time prior to the expiration of the adjustment period, the taxpayer shall take into account in that year the balance of the adjustment not previously taken into account in computing taxable income. See Rev. Rul. 80-39, 1980-1 C.B. 112, which holds that if a division of a corporation, for which a change in method of accounting had been granted, ceases to operate the trade or business for which the change in method was granted, the remaining section 481(a) adjustment applicable to the business conducted by that division of the corporation must be taken into account in the year the corporation ceases to engage in that trade or business. For purposes of this condition, the taxpayer is not considered to have ceased the trade or business if the cessation is the result of a transaction to which section 381 of the Code applies, but in that case the acquiring corporation shall continue to be subject to this revenue procedure as though it were the acquired corporation.

(b) With respect to a partnership:

In the event a partnership terminates or ceases to engage in the trade or business (within the meaning of section 708 of the Code) to which the section 481(a) adjustment (section 3.03) relates at any time prior to the expiration of the adjustment period, the balance of the section 481(a) adjustment not previously taken into account in computing the partnership's income or deductions shall be taken into account in the year of cessation. A partnership ceasing to engage in the trade or business includes the incorporation of the trade or business in a transaction to which section 351 applies (see Rev. Rul. 77-264, 1977-2 C.B. 187).

(c) With respect to a sole proprietor:

If a sole proprietor ceases to engage in the trade or business to which the section 481(a) adjustment (section 3.03) relates at any time prior to the expiration of the adjustment period, the balance of the adjustment not previously taken into account in computing taxable income shall be taken into account in the year of cessation. A sole proprietor ceasing to engage in the trade or business includes the incorporation of such trade or business in a transaction to which section 351 of the Code applies (see Rev. Rul. 77-264). A sole proprietorship does not cease to engage in that trade or business when the individual taxpayer sells a partial interest in the proprietorship and continues to be actively engaged in the management of the business that is subsequently operated as a partnership. The section 481(a) adjustment remaining at the time the partnership is formed is taken into account by the partnership as though there had been no change in ownership (see Rev. Rul. 66-206, 1966-2 C.B. 206).

SEC. 4. RECORDS

Taxpayers must maintain adequate records so that the Service may, upon examination, verify the data concerning the change in method of accounting.

SEC. 5. COMPLIANCE WITH CONDITIONS

Taxpayers making a change from the Rule of 78's method to the "prescribed method" without complying with all the conditions of this revenue procedure will be deemed to have made the change without obtaining the consent of the Commissioner.

SEC. 6. MANNER OF EFFECTING THE CHANGE

.01 Taxpayers to which this revenue procedure applies must effect the change in their methods of accounting for their first tax year ending on or after December 31, 1983, pursuant to the provisions set forth in this revenue procedure by filing a current Form 3115, Application for Change in Accounting Method, in duplicate. The original of the Form 3115 shall be attached to the taxpayer's timely filed federal income tax return for such year, or to an amended return for such year filed no later than the extended time period prescribed in section 6081 of the Code and the regulations thereunder whether or not the taxpayer has, in fact, been granted an extension of time for filing its income tax return for such year. For example, a domestic corporation, whose tax year ends December 31, 1983, must effect the change described in this revenue procedure on the original timely filed return for 1983, or on an amended return for the 1983 tax year filed no later than September 15, 1984. Similarly, an individual, whose tax year ends December 31, 1983, must effect the change described in this revenue procedure on the timely filed return for 1983, or on an amended return for the 1983 tax year filed no later than August 15, 1984. At the time the original of the Form 3115 is filed with the federal income tax return, a copy of the Form 3115 shall be filed with the National Office addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue Service, Attention: CC:C:C:1, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224. In addition to the information required on Form 3115, the taxpayer must provide (1) a computation of the section 481(a) adjustment and (2) the period over which the section 481(a) adjustment will be taken into account and the basis for such conclusion. The National Office will sample the Form 3115's to determine whether the requirements of this revenue procedure have been followed. The National Office or the District Director may advise the taxpayer of required adjustments to the change in method of accounting for interest income and deductions.

.02 Taxpayers described in section 3.05 or section 3.07 must also follow the procedures set forth in section 6.01 regarding the place for filing of the original and the copy of the Form 3115 with respect to the tax year for which the change to the "prescribed method" is made. Such taxpayers must also furnish with the Form 3115 the additional information set forth in section 6.01 above regarding the section 481(a) adjustment and its adjustment period.

.03 In order to assist in the processing of these changes in methods of accounting and to ensure proper handling, reference to this revenue procedure shall be made a part of the Form 3115 by either typing or legibly printing the following statement at the top of Page 1 of Form 3115: "FILED UNDER REV. PROC. 84-28".

SEC. 7. EXAMPLES

Example A.

LP, a limited partnership that uses the accrual method of accounting and reports its income on a calendar year basis, borrowed $100,000 on January 1, 1977, payable in 30 annual installments of $12,414 each. The total interest on the loan will be $272,420 (30 × 12,414 = $372,420; $372,420 − $100,000 = $272,420). The terms of the loan state that interest is earned by the lender in accordance with the Rule of 78's computation, and the taxpayer computed its annual interest deduction for six years using the Rule of 78's. The effective rate of interest is 12 percent. The table appearing in the "Law and Analysis" section of Rev. Rul. 83-84 describes the overall transaction. During the six years LP deducted a total of $96,665 in interest based on the Rule of 78's method. If LP had used the "prescribed method" for computing its deductions for interest during those six years, the total interest deduction would have been $71,124. The difference in the interest deduction using the two methods is $25,541. The following table shows the interest computed under the two methods for the first six years.

Table
Economic accrual of interest

Years	(Prescribed Method)	Rule of 78's
1977	$12,000	$17,575
1978	11,950	16,990
1979	11,895	16,404
1980	11,832	15,818
1981	11,763	15,232
1982	11,684	14,646

With LP's timely filed federal income tax return for the seventh year (1983), LP filed a Form 3115 in accordance with the provisions set forth in sections 3 and 6.01 of this revenue procedure. By changing to the "prescribed method" commencing with the seventh year of the loan and continuing to use that method, LP will eventually receive a double deduction for interest in the amount of $25,541. Thus, under section 481(a) of the Code, an adjustment is necessary solely by reason of the change in method of accounting in order to prevent the $25,541 from being duplicated, i.e., taken again as a deduction. If LP had made the change to the "prescribed method" for the tax years 1980, 1981, or 1982, the amount of the adjustment would have been $15,124, $19,110, or $22,579, respectively. The percent of the section 481(a) adjustment attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-tax year period preceding the year of change is determined as follows:

1-tax year period

Adjustment as of January 1, 1983.	$25,541
Less: hypothetical adjustment as of January 1, 1982	22,579
Amount attributable to 1-tax year period	$ 2,962
Percent of adjustment attributable to 1-tax year period:	$ 2,962 / 25,541	= 11.6%

2-tax year period

Adjustment as of January 1, 1983.	$25,541
Less: hypothetical adjustment as of January 1, 1981	19,110
Amount attributable to 2-tax year period	$ 6,431
Percent of adjustment attributable to 2-tax year period:	6,431 / 25,541	= 25.2%

3-tax year period

Adjustment as of January 1, 1983.	$25,541
Less: hypothetical adjustment as of January 1, 1980	15,124
Amount attributable to 3-tax year period	$10,417
Percent of adjustment attributable to 3-tax year period:	10,417 / 25,541	= 40.8%

Because less than 67 percent of the adjustment is attributable to the 1982, the 1981, and the 1980 tax years, section 3.04 1(c) of this revenue procedure requires that an adjustment under section 481(a) in the amount of $25,541 be taken into account as an item of gross income ratably over six tax years (⅙ each year) beginning with the year of change.

Example B

The facts are the same as Example A except that LP's federal income tax returns filed for 1980 and 1981 were under examination by the Service and an issue concerning the amount of a claimed interest deduction has been raised and is pending on April 2, 1984. Since LP's claimed interest deductions for the years under examination ($15,818 and $15,232) exceeded the actual loan payments of $12,414 during each of those years, this revenue procedure does not apply to it. The provisions of section 481 of the Code will be applied by the examining agent to change LP's method of accounting for interest as of January 1, 1980. See section 3.08 of this revenue procedure.

Example C

The facts are the same as Example A except that LP ignores the mandatory requirement of section 3.02 of this revenue procedure, i.e., the taxpayer does not change to the "prescribed method" for 1983. If LP has not been contacted by the Service for purposes of scheduling an examination, LP may change to the "prescribed method" for any year subsequent to 1983 by complying with sections 3.05 and 6.02 of this revenue procedure. The section 481(a) adjustment must be taken into account ratably over three tax years. See section 3.05 2.

Example D

LP, a limited partnership that uses the accrual method of accounting and reports its income on a calendar year basis, borrowed money on January 1, 1981. The terms of the loan state that interest is earned by the lender in accordance with the Rule of 78's computation, and the taxpayer computed its annual interest deduction for two years using the Rule of 78's method. If LP had made the change to the "prescribed method" for its 1983 tax year, the amount of the section 481(a) adjustment would have been taken into account ratably over two years (one-half in 1983 and one-half in 1984). LP does not change to the "prescribed method" for 1983. If LP has not been contacted by the Service for purposes of scheduling an examination, LP may change to the "prescribed method" for any year subsequent to 1983 by complying with sections 3.05 and 6.02 of this revenue procedure. The total section 481(a) adjustment must be taken into account in the year of change. See section 3.05 2.

SEC. 8. MISCELLANEOUS

Where a taxpayer's change in method of accounting falls within the scope set forth in section 1 of this revenue procedure, that taxpayer must use this revenue procedure to effectuate such change in method of accounting and may not use the provisions of Rev. Proc. 80-51, 1980-2 C.B. 818. Thus, the original of the application for permission to change the method of accounting described in this revenue procedure, if filed with the National Office under the general provisions of Rev. Proc. 80-51, will not be considered a valid application. Any such original applications erroneously filed with the National Office will be returned without processing and with instructions to comply with this revenue procedure.

SEC. 9. ALTERNATIVE PROCEDURE FOR CERTAIN INDIVIDUAL BORROWERS

Individual borrowers, who previously reported interest expense based upon the Rule of 78's method, may have difficulty computing the amount of interest that economically accrues in order to comply with the provisions of this revenue procedure. Many of these taxpayers may qualify to use the alternative procedure, contained in Rev. Proc. 84-29, for computing allowable interest deductions. One of the requirements that must be met in order to qualify for the alternative procedure contained in Rev. Proc. 84-29 is that the proceeds of the loan were not used for investment purposes or to purchase items in connection with a trade or business. See Rev. Proc. 84-29 for complete details.

SEC. 10. INQUIRIES

Rev. Proc. 84-29

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to provide a simplified procedure for individual borrowers to compute current and future years' interest deductions with respect to certain loans, when they have been reporting interest deductions in accordance with the Rule of 78's computation.

SEC. 2. SCOPE

.01 This revenue procedure may be used only if all of the following conditions are met:

(1) the borrower is an individual taxpayer who uses the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting and who reports income on a calendar year basis;

(2) the proceeds of the loan were used for personal items (that is, not for investment purposes or to purchase items in connection with a trade or business);

(3) the amount of principal originally borrowed on the loan did not exceed $50,000;

(4) the taxpayer has claimed interest deductions based upon the Rule of 78's method on a federal income tax return;

(5) the interest deductions claimed by the taxpayer during any tax year did not exceed the amount of payments made on the loan during the tax year;

(6) the loan was in existence on January 1, 1984, and the loan requires periodic payments at least annually; and

(7) the loan was not a short-term consumer loan described in Rev. Proc. 83-40, 1983-1 C.B. 774. See section 3.04 of this revenue procedure for a brief discussion of Rev. Proc. 83-40.

.02 Taxpayers who meet all the requirements set forth in section 2.01 of this revenue procedure may choose either to follow the procedure in this revenue procedure or to follow the procedure in either Rev. Proc. 84-27 or Rev. Proc. 84-28, whichever is applicable. Rev. Proc. 84-27 provides a mandatory procedure for changing an accounting method from the Rule of 78's method for loans that are not described in Rev. Proc. 83-40 and for which the interest computed under the Rule of 78's does not exceed the loan payments during any year of the term of the loan. Rev. Proc. 84-28 provides a mandatory procedure for changing an accounting method from the Rule of 78's method for loans, for which the interest computed under the Rule of 78's exceeds the loan payments during any year of the term of the loan.

.03 Taxpayers who do not meet all the requirements set forth in section 2.01 of this revenue procedure must follow the procedure in Rev. Proc. 84-27 or Rev. Proc. 84-28, whichever is applicable.

.04 Taxpayers whose loans come within the administrative exception contained in Rev. Proc. 83-40 may continue to use the Rule of 78's method for computing their deductions for interest expense with respect to those loans. If taxpayers want to change their method of accounting for such loans, they must do so by complying with the provisions of Rev. Proc. 84-30.

SEC. 3. BACKGROUND

.01 The Rule of 78's is described in Rev. Rul. 83-84, 1983-1 C.B. 97, as a method of allocating interest on a loan among time periods during the term of the loan. Under this method, the amount of interest allocable to each period is determined by multiplying the total interest payable over the life of the indebtedness by a fraction, (a) the numerator of which is the number of periods remaining on such indebtedness at the time the calculation is made and (b) the denominator of which is the sum of the periods' digits for the term of the indebtedness.

.02 Rev. Rul. 83-84 indicates that the Rule of 78's represents a purely mechanical formula for allocating interest among periods. Because interest is earned by the lender by application of the effective rate of interest over the term of the loan, any agreement between a borrower and a lender that provides that interest is earned in another manner, such as under the Rule of 78's computation, lacks economic substance because it fails to reflect the true cost of borrowing. Rev. Rul. 83-84 indicates further that no tax effect will be given to the Rule of 78's provision.

.03 Rev. Rul. 83-84 states that an agreement between a borrower and a lender with respect to any one year of a loan is not independent of the agreement with respect to any other year of the loan. In general, the substance of a loan agreement is that the same rate of interest applies to each tax year of the loan, regardless of any contrary formulas that may be stated in the agreement. The amount of interest attributable to the use of money for each period between payments is determined by applying the "effective rate of interest" on the loan to the "unpaid balance" of the loan for the period. The unpaid balance of a loan is the amount borrowed plus interest earned minus amounts paid. The effective rate of interest is a measure of the cost of credit, expressed as a yearly rate, that relates the amount and timing of values received to the amount and timing of payments made, and is thus a reflection of the cost of the amount borrowed for the time it is actually available. See Conf. Rep. No. 97-760, 97th Cong., 2d Sess. 553 (1982), 1982-2 C.B. 600, 639; S. Rep. No. 97-494 (Vol. 1), 97th Cong., 2d Sess. 209 (1982); Supplement I to Regulation Z issued by the Federal Reserve System, 12 CFR Sections 226.6 and 226.40 (1979). Therefore, the effective rate of interest, which is a uniform rate over the term of the loan and is based on the amount of the loan and the repayment schedule provided in the loan agreement, when applied to the unpaid balance of the indebtedness for a given period, will produce the true cost of that indebtedness for that period. This true cost of borrowing is sometimes referred to as the economic accrual of interest.

.04 Rev. Proc. 83-40 states that in a typical short-term consumer loan transaction, the Service will accept the Rule of 78's method for computing the borrower's interest deduction and the lender's interest income as a matter of administrative convenience. The administrative exception for short-term consumer loans applies only when there is a self-amortizing loan that requires level payments, at regular intervals at least annually, over a period not in excess of five years (with no balloon payment at the end of the loan term), and when the loan agreement between the borrower and the lender provides that interest is earned, or upon the prepayment of the loan interest is treated as earned, in accordance with the Rule of 78's method.

.05 Rev. Proc. 84-27 and Rev. Proc. 84-28 provide mandatory procedures for taxpayers to change their method of accounting for interest on indebtedness when they have been reporting interest income or deductions in accordance with the Rule of 78's. These revenue procedures apply to lenders and borrowers on loans which are not short-term consumer loans covered by the administrative exception contained in Rev. Proc. 83-40.

.06 Some individual taxpayers, who previously reported interest expense based upon the Rule of 78's method, may have difficulty computing the amount of interest that economically accrues in order to comply with the provisions of Rev. Proc. 84-27 and Rev. Proc. 84-28. Therefore, the Service will accept, as a matter of administrative convenience, an alternative procedure for computing current and future years' interest deductions.

SEC. 4. APPLICATION

.01 The alternative procedure for computing deductions for interest expense is as follows:

(1) take the total amount of finance charge over the life of the loan that was disclosed to the borrower by the lending institution at the beginning of the loan;

(2) subtract from (1) the total of the amounts of interest that the lender has reported to the borrower to have been paid through December 31st of the year prior to the year the change is made;

(3) find the column on the table in section 5 of this revenue procedure that corresponds to the number of years (full and partial) remaining in the loan term as of January 1st of the year the change is made; and

(4) determine the amount of interest deduction in the year of change and each subsequent year by multiplying the appropriate figure from the table in section 5 by the amount computed in (2) above.

.02 The taxpayer can choose to begin using this procedure either for the 1983 or 1984 tax year, by claiming the interest deduction computed in the manner described in section 4.01 on the taxpayer's timely filed federal income tax return for the year chosen. However, the taxpayer may begin to use the alternative procedure for the 1983 tax year on an amended return for such year filed no later than August 15, 1984. The taxpayer cannot use the alternative procedure if the taxpayer has previously complied with the provisions of Rev. Proc. 84-27 or Rev. Proc. 84-28.

.03 In the year of change and each subsequent year, the taxpayer must indicate near the claimed interest deduction on the taxpayer's federal income tax return: "Interest computed under Rev. Proc. 84-29."

SEC. 6. EXAMPLE

On January 1, 1979, an individual taxpayer borrowed $10,000 to purchase a boat that the taxpayer will use for pleasure. The loan is payable in equal annual installments of $1,770 on December 31st of each year for ten years. The terms of the loan state that interest is earned in accordance with the Rule of 78's method. The total finance charge over the term of the loan is $7,700. The lender has previously informed the taxpayer that the taxpayer's interest was $1,400 for 1979, $1,260 for 1980, $1,120 for 1981, and $980 for 1982. Thus, the total interest deduction that the taxpayer has claimed through December 31, 1982, is $4,760. The taxpayer can choose to use the alternative procedure beginning in either 1983 or 1984. The taxpayer chooses to use the alternative procedure for computing the taxpayer's interest deductions beginning in 1983. Using the alternative procedure, the total finance charge of $7,700 minus previously deducted interest of $4,760 leaves a balance of $2,940. There are six years remaining in the loan term. Using the figures from the column for six years, the interest deductions are computed as follows:

Year	Factor From Column 6		Interest Remaining at Beginning of Year of Change		Interest Deduction
1983	.24	X	$2,940	=	$705.60
1984	.22	X	2,940	=	646.80
1985	.19	X	2,940	=	558.60
1986	.16	X	2,940	=	470.40
1987	.12	X	2,940	=	352.80
1988	.07	X	2,940	=	205.80

Rev. Proc. 84-30

SECTION 1. PURPOSE AND SCOPE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to provide an expeditious procedure for taxpayers to obtain consent to change their method of accounting for interest on indebtedness when they have been reporting interest income or deductions in accordance with the Rule of 78's computation.

This revenue procedure applies to lenders and borrowers who report interest income or who claim interest deductions using the Rule of 78's method with respect to consumer loans described in Rev. Proc. 83-40, 1983-1 C.B. 774. See Rev. Proc. 84-27, which provides a mandatory procedure for changing an accounting method from the Rule of 78's method for loans that are not described in Rev. Proc. 83-40 and for which the interest computed under the Rule of 78's does not exceed the loan payments during any year of the term of the loan. See Rev. Proc. 84-28, which provides a mandatory procedure for changing an accounting method from the Rule of 78's method for loans, for which the interest computed under the Rule of 78's exceeds the loan payments during any year of the term of the loan.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 The Rule of 78's is described in Rev. Rul. 83-84, 1983-1 C.B. 97, as a method of allocating interest on a loan among time periods during the term of the loan. Under this method, the amount of interest allocable to each period is determined by multiplying the total interest payable over the life of the indebtedness by a fraction, (a) the numerator of which is the number of periods remaining on such indebtedness at the time the calculation is made and (b) the denominator of which is the sum of the periods' digits for the term of the indebtedness.

.02 Rev. Rul. 83-84 indicates that the Rule of 78's represents a purely mechanical formula for allocating interest among periods. Because interest is earned by the lender by application of the effective rate of interest over the term of the loan, any agreement between a borrower and a lender that provides that interest is earned in another manner, such as under the Rule of 78's computation, lacks economic substance because it fails to reflect the true cost of borrowing. Rev. Rul. 83-84 indicates further that no tax effect will be given to the Rule of 78's provision.

.03 Rev. Rul. 83-84 states that an agreement between a borrower and a lender with respect to any one year of a loan is not independent of the agreement with respect to any other year of the loan. In general, the substance of a loan agreement is that the same rate of interest applies to each tax year of the loan, regardless of any contrary formulas that may be stated in the agreement. The amount of interest attributable to the use of money for each period between payments is determined by applying the "effective rate of interest" on the loan to the "unpaid balance" of the loan for that period. The unpaid balance of a loan is the amount borrowed plus interest earned minus amounts paid. The effective rate of interest is a measure of the cost of credit, expressed as a yearly rate, that relates the amount and timing of values received to the amount and timing of payments made, and is thus a reflection of the cost of the amount borrowed for the time it is actually available. See Conf. Rep. No. 97-760, 97th Cong., 2d Sess. 553 (1982), 1982-2 C.B. 600, 639; S. Rep. No. 97-494 (Vol. 1), 97th Cong., 2d Sess. 209 (1982); Supplement I to Regulation Z issued by the Federal Reserve System, 12 CFR Sections 226.6 and 226.40 (1979). Therefore, the effective rate of interest, which is a uniform rate over the term of the loan and is based on the amount of the loan and the repayment schedule provided in the loan agreement, when applied to the unpaid balance of the indebtedness for a given period, will produce the true cost of that indebtedness for that period. This true cost of borrowing is sometimes referred to as the economic accrual of interest. (For purposes of this revenue procedure the economic accrual of interest is hereinafter referred to as the "prescribed method.")

.04 Rev. Proc. 83-40 states that in a typical short-term consumer loan transaction, the Internal Revenue Service will accept the Rule of 78's method for computing the borrower's interest deduction and the lender's interest income as a matter of administrative convenience. The administrative exception for short-term consumer loans applies only when there is a self-amortizing loan that requires level payments, at regular intervals at least annually, over a period not in excess of five years (with no balloon payment at the end of the loan term), and when the loan agreement between the borrower and the lender provides that interest is earned, or upon the prepayment of the loan interest is treated as earned, in accordance with the Rule of 78's method.

.05 Section 446(e) of the Internal Revenue Code and section 1.446-1(e) of the Income Tax Regulations provide that in order to change a method of accounting for federal income tax purposes the taxpayer must obtain the consent of the Commissioner. Section 1.446-1(e)(3)(i) requires that in order to obtain such consent an application must be filed within 180 days after the beginning of the tax year in which the taxpayer desires to make the change. Section 1.446-1(e)(3)(ii) authorizes the Commissioner to prescribe administrative procedures setting forth the limitations, terms, and conditions deemed necessary to permit a taxpayer to obtain consent to a change in its method of accounting in accordance with section 446(e).

.06 Section 481(a) of the Code requires that those adjustments necessary to prevent amounts from being duplicated or omitted be taken into account when the taxpayer's income is computed under a method of accounting different from the method used to compute taxable income for the preceding tax year. Section 481(c) and section 1.481-5 of the regulations provide that the adjustment required by section 481(a) may be taken into account in determining taxable income in the manner and subject to the conditions agreed to by the Commissioner and the taxpayer.

SEC. 3. APPLICATION

.01 Consent. In accordance with section 1.446-1(e)(3)(ii) of the regulations, the 180-day rule is waived and under section 1.446-1(e)(2)(i) consent is hereby granted to taxpayers to change a method of accounting with respect to interest on indebtedness from the method of computing interest income and deductions using the Rule of 78's method to the "prescribed method." See section 2.03 above. Such consent is granted for any tax year ending on or after December 31, 1983, for which the taxpayer requests a change (i.e., year of change) by filing a current Form 3115 in the manner described in section 6 and by otherwise complying with the provisions of this revenue procedure.

.02 Section 481(a) adjustment. An adjustment is required to prevent amounts of income and deduction from being duplicated within the meaning of section 481 of the Code and the regulations thereunder when the change in method of accounting is made pursuant to the provisions set forth in this revenue procedure. Such adjustment, whether positive or negative, referred to as the "section 481(a) adjustment," shall be taken into account in computing taxable income and in computing corporate earnings and profits. As to taxable income, the adjustment is made in the manner provided in section 3.03 below. As to corporate earnings and profits, the adjustment is made in the manner provided in Rev. Proc. 79-49, 1979-2 C.B. 528. The change in method of accounting shall be considered to be a change in method of accounting initiated by the taxpayer.

1 When the change to the "prescribed method" is made in accordance with section 3.01, the period for taking into account the section 481(a) adjustment referred to in section 3.02 (adjustment period) is generally to be determined as follows:

(a) When the entire amount of the section 481(a) adjustment is attributable to the tax year immediately preceding the year of change (first preceding year), the total adjustment is to be taken into account in computing taxable income for the year of change. The amount attributable to the tax year immediately preceding the year of change is the difference in the amount of the adjustment determined under section 481(a) of the Code for the year of change and the amount that would have been required under section 481(a) if the change to the "prescribed method" had been made in the preceding year.

(b) When (a) above does not apply and 67 percent or more of the amount of the section 481(a) adjustment is attributable to the 1-tax year period, 2-tax year period, or 3-tax year period immediately preceding the year of change, the highest percent attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-tax year period will be taken into account ratably over a 3-tax year period beginning with the year of change. Any remaining balance will be taken into account ratably over an additional period equal to the remainder of the number of tax years the taxpayer has continuously used the Rule of 78's method. However, the total adjustment period shall not exceed six tax years. This subparagraph, 3.03 1(b), only applies if the taxpayer has used the Rule of 78's method for more than three tax years. If the Rule of 78's method has been used for no more than four tax years, 75 percent shall be substituted for 67 percent. An amount attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-tax year period is the difference in the amount of the adjustment determined under section 481(a) of the Code for the year of change and the amount that would have been required under section 481(a) if the change to the "prescribed method" had been made at the beginning of the preceding 1, 2, or 3-tax year period.

(c) In all other situations in which (a) and (b) above do not apply, the section 481(a) adjustment will be taken into account ratably over the number of years (not to exceed six) the taxpayer has continuously used the Rule of 78's method.

2 For an example of the application of the rules prescribed in this revenue procedure, see section 7.

3 In applying sections 3.03 1(a) or (b), if a taxpayer's books and records do not contain sufficient information to compute the section 481(a) adjustment attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-tax year period immediately preceding the year of change, the taxpayer may reasonably estimate the amount and attach and sign (or have signed by an officer who has personal knowledge of the facts) the following statement to the Form 3115, Application for Change in Accounting Method:

Under penalty of perjury, I hereby certify that:

(a) the books and records of (name of the taxpayer) do not contain sufficient information to permit a computation of the section 481(a) adjustment attributable to the 1-tax year period, 2-tax year period, or 3-tax year period immediately preceding the year of change as required by section 3.03 1(b) of Rev. Proc. 84-30.

(b) Based on the information that is contained in the records, to the best of my information and belief, the entire amount of the section 481(a) adjustment for the year of change (indicate "is" or "is not," as the case may be) attributable to the tax year immediately preceding the year of change, and 67 percent (or 75 percent in applicable cases) or more of the section 481(a) adjustment for the year of change (indicate "is" or "is not," as the case may be) attributable to the 1-tax year period, 2-tax year period, or 3-tax year period immediately preceding the year of change.

4 A cooperative within the meaning of section 1381(a) of the Code shall take the total amount of the section 481(a) adjustment into account in computing taxable income for the year of change.

.04 Net Operating Loss Carryovers and Net Operating Losses.

1 No part of any (consolidated or separate) net operating loss carryover (NOL carryover) available at the beginning of the year of change may be used as an offset against the portion of the positive section 481(a) adjustment taken into account in the year of change. This condition will not apply to tax years subsequent to the year of change.

2 Any portion of any net operating loss arising in the year of change or in any subsequent year in the adjustment period that is attributable to the negative section 481(a) adjustment may not be carried to those 3 tax years preceding the year of change, to which section 172 of the Code otherwise would require it first to be carried.

.05 Investment credit or any other credits. No part of any (consolidated or separate) investment credit carryover or any other credit carryover available at the beginning of the year of change may be used to reduce the federal income tax liability resulting from, or attributable to, the inclusion in income of any part of the section 481(a) adjustment in the year of change. This restriction does not apply, however, to a credit arising in the year of change.

.06 Ceasing to engage in the trade or business.

(a) With respect to a corporation:

If a corporate taxpayer ceases to engage in the trade or business to which the section 481(a) adjustment (section 3.02) relates at any time prior to the expiration of the adjustment period referred to in section 3.03, the taxpayer shall take into account in that year the balance of the adjustment not previously taken into account in computing taxable income. See Rev. Rul. 80-39, 1980-1 C.B. 112, which holds that if a division of a corporation, for which a change in method of accounting had been granted, ceases to operate the trade or business for which the change in method was granted, the remaining section 481(a) adjustment applicable to the business conducted by that division of the corporation must be taken into account in the year the corporation ceases to engage in that trade or business. For purposes of this condition, the taxpayer is not considered to have ceased the trade or business if the cessation is the result of a transaction to which section 381 of the Code applies, but in that case the acquiring corporation shall continue to be subject to this revenue procedure as though it were the acquired corporation.

(b) With respect to a partnership:

In the event a partnership terminates or ceases to engage in the trade or business (within the meaning of section 708 of the Code), to which the section 481(a) adjustment (section 3.02) relates, at any time prior to the expiration of the adjustment period referred to in section 3.03, the balance of the section 481(a) adjustment not previously taken into account in computing the partnership's income or deductions shall be taken into account in the year of cessation. A partnership ceasing to engage in the trade or business includes the incorporation of the trade or business in a transaction to which section 351 applies (see Rev. Rul. 77-264, 1977-2 C.B. 187).

(c) With respect to a sole proprietor:

If a sole proprietor ceases to engage in the trade or business, to which the section 481(a) adjustment (section 3.02) relates, at any time prior to the expiration of the adjustment period referred to in section 3.03, the balance of the adjustment not previously taken into account in computing taxable income shall be taken into account in the year of cessation. A sole proprietor ceasing to engage in the trade of business includes the incorporation of such trade or business in a transaction to which section 351 of the Code applies (see Rev. Rul. 77-264). A sole proprietorship does not cease to engage in that trade or business when the individual taxpayer sells a partial interest in the proprietorship and continues to be actively engaged in the management of the business that is subsequently operated as a partnership. The section 481(a) adjustment remaining at the time the partnership is formed is taken into account by the partnership as though there had been no change in ownership (see Rev. Rul. 66-206, 1966-2 C.B. 206).

.07 Conformity. Taxpayers electing to change from the Rule of 78's method to the "prescribed method" under this revenue procedure must keep their books and records, including financial statements and statements for credit purposes, for the year of change and for later years on the "prescribed method"

.08 Reporting to borrowers. If a lender changes from the Rule of 78's method to the "prescribed method" under this revenue procedure and if the lender reports to the borrower the amount of interest that the borrower has paid during a year, the lender must continue to use the Rule of 78's computation in reporting the amount of interest to the borrower with respect to loans in existence at the beginning of the year of change.

SEC. 4. RECORDS

Taxpayers must maintain adequate records so that the Service may, upon examination, verify the data concerning the change in method of accounting.

SEC. 5. COMPLIANCE WITH CONDITIONS

Taxpayers making a change from the Rule of 78's method to the "prescribed method" without complying with all the conditions of this revenue procedure will be deemed to have made the change without obtaining the consent of the Commissioner.

SEC. 6. MANNER OF EFFECTING THE CHANGE

.01 Taxpayers to which this revenue procedure applies may effect the change in their methods of accounting for any tax year ending on or after December 31, 1983, pursuant to the provisions set forth in this revenue procedure by filing a current Form 3115, Application for Change in Accounting Method, in duplicate. The original of the Form 3115 shall be attached to the taxpayer's timely filed federal income tax return for the tax year that the taxpayer requests a change in method. For example, a domestic corporation whose tax year ends on December 31, 1983, may effect the change described in this revenue procedure for the 1983 tax year on a timely filed return, no later than September 15, 1984. At the same time a copy of the Form 3115 shall be filed with the National Office addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue Service, Attention: CC:C:C:1, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224. In addition to the information required on Form 3115, the taxpayer must provide (1) a computation of the section 481(a) adjustment and (2) the period over which the section 481(a) adjustment will be taken into account and the basis for such conclusion. The National Office will sample the Form 3115's to determine whether the requirements of this revenue procedure have been followed. The National Office or the District Director may advise the taxpayer of required adjustments to the change in method of accounting for interest income and deductions.

.02 In order to assist in the processing of these changes in method of accounting and to ensure proper handling, reference to this revenue procedure shall be made a part of the Form 3115 by either typing or legibly printing the following statement at the top of Page 1 of Form 3115: "FILED UNDER REV. PROC. 84-30".

For 11 years a financial institution, that reports its income on a calendar year basis, has used the Rule of 78's method for reporting interest income for loans that have terms of 5 years or less and that are described in Rev. Proc. 83-40. The taxpayer wants to change to the "prescribed method" of reporting interest for the tax year ending on December 31, 1983. In each year 1976 through 1982, the taxpayer made 10 loans of $10,000 each payable in 5 annual installments. For the loans made in 1976, 1977, and 1978, the annual payment was $2,638 for each loan. The total interest on each of these loans was $3,190 (5 × $2,638 = $13,190; $13,190 − $10,000 = $3,190). The effective rate of interest was 10 percent. For the loans made in 1979 and subsequent years, the annual payment was $2,774 for each loan. The total interest on each of these loans was $3,870 (5 × $2,774 = $13,870; $13,870 − $10,000 = $3,870). The effective rate of interest was 12 percent. The terms of all these loans state that interest is earned by the lender in accordance with the Rule of 78's computation. All loans made during 1978 and earlier years had been paid off by January 1, 1983. During the four years (1979 through 1982), for which there were still loans outstanding as of January 1, 1983, the taxpayer included a total of $103,200 as interest computed under the Rule of 78's method. If the taxpayer had used the "prescribed method" for computing its interest income during those four years, the total interest income would have been $99,940. The difference in interest income using the two methods is $3,260. Table 1 shows the interest computed under the Rule of 78's method, and Table 2 shows the interest computed under the "prescribed method."

With the taxpayer's timely filed federal income tax return for 1983, the taxpayer filed a current Form 3115 in accordance with the provisions set forth in sections 3 and 6.01 of this revenue procedure. By changing to the "prescribed method" commencing with the 1983 tax year and continuing to use that method, the taxpayer will eventually have a double inclusion of interest income in the amount of $3,260. Thus, under section 481(a) of the Code, an adjustment is necessary solely by reason of the change in method of accounting in order to prevent the $3,260 from being duplicated, i.e., included again in income. If the taxpayer had made the change to the "prescribed method" for the tax years 1980, 1981, or 1982, the amount of the adjustment would have been $2,550, $2,880, or $3,140 respectively (see Table 3 for the computations). The percent of the section 481(a) adjustment attributable to the 1, 2, or 3-tax year period preceding the year of change is determined as follows:

1-tax year period
Adjustment as of January 1, 1983.		$ 3,260
Less: hypothetical adjustment as of January 1, 1982		3,140
Adjustment attributable to 1-tax year period		$ 120
Percent of adjustment attributable to 1-tax year period:	120 / 3,260	= 3.7%

2-tax year period
Adjustment as of January 1, 1983.		$ 3,260
Less: hypothetical adjustment as of January 1, 1981		2,880
Amount attributable to 2-tax year period		$ 380
Percent of adjustment attributable to 2-tax year period:	380 / 3,260	= 11.7%

Percent of adjustment attributable to 3-tax year period: $\frac{710}{3,260} = 21.8\%$

Because less than 67 percent of the adjustment is attributable to the 1982, the 1981, and the 1980 tax years, section 3.03 1(c) of this revenue procedure requires that an adjustment under section 481(a) in the amount of $3,260 be taken into account as a deduction from gross income ratably over six tax years (⅙ each year) beginning with the year of change.

SEC. 8. MISCELLANEOUS

.01 Where a taxpayer's change in method of accounting falls within the scope set forth in section 1 of this revenue procedure, that taxpayer must use this revenue procedure to effectuate such change in method of accounting and may not use the provisions of Rev. Proc. 80-51, 1980-2 C.B. 818. Thus, the original of the application for permission to change the method of accounting (Form 3115) described in this revenue procedure, if filed with the National Office under the general provisions of Rev. Proc. 80-51, will not be considered a valid application. Any such original applications erroneously filed with the National Office will be returned without processing and with instructions to comply with this revenue procedure.

.02 Notwithstanding the provisions of section 8.01 above, if, prior to April 2, 1984, a taxpayer timely filed a form 3115 with the Commissioner to change from the Rule of 78's method to the "prescribed method" and filed its federal income tax return for the requested year of change, the taxpayer may comply with this revenue procedure by attaching a Form 3115 to an amended return for that year and by otherwise complying with the conditions of this revenue procedure. The amended return must be filed no later than the extended time prescribed in section 6081 of the Code and the regulations thereunder whether or not the taxpayer has, in fact, been granted an extension of time for filing its income tax return (for example, no later than September 15, 1984, for a domestic corporation whose tax year ends December 31, 1983).

SEC. 9. INQUIRIES

Inquiries regarding this revenue procedure may be addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention CC:C:C:1, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

Rev. Proc. 84-31

PART A — GENERAL

SEC. 1. PURPOSE AND NATURE OF CHANGES

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to update Rev. Proc. 82-69, 1982-2 C.B. 854, concerning the requirements and conditions for filing annual information returns for Windfall Profit Tax on magnetic tape instead of on paper returns. Specifications for filing Form 6248, Annual Information Return of Windfall Profit Tax are contained in this procedure. For Tax Year 1983 the following changes have been included in this revenue procedure:

.01 In Part B, Section 1, the provision for 6250 BPI tape density has been added for both EBCDIC and ASCII recording modes.

.02 In Part B, Section 3, the option to use 80 or 120 positions in the header and trailer labels has been added.

.03 In Part B, a new Section 4 has been added which is a table of valid state abbreviations and zip codes. The table is to be used in the "G" and "H" records.

.04 In Part B, Section 6.03, additional information regarding signed decimal data is provided.

.05 In Part B, Section 6, for the Type of Producer in positions 349-351 of the Producer/Recipient "H" record, a new code of Zero has been added to indicate that the type of producer cannot be determined.

.06 In Part B, Section 6, for the Producer Status in positions 352 to 354 of the Producer/Recipient "H" record, two new codes have been added. Code 0 (Zero) indicates that the status cannot be determined, and Code 8 indicates a Trust Beneficiary.

.07 In Part B, Section 6, a new twelve position field has been added in order to enter the total number of barrels of exempt stripper well oil. This field is located in positions 617 through 628 of the Producer/Recipient "H" record.

.08 In Part B, Section 6, the following "H" record fields have the rate in the title changed from "27½" to "25":

Number of Barrels Newly Discovered 25% Rate (positions 965-976)

Tax Liability Newly Discovered 25% Rate (positions 1013-1024)

SEC. 2. APPLICATION FOR MAGNETIC MEDIA REPORTING

.01 For the purpose of this revenue procedure only, the first purchasers, filers, and payers are equivalent to each other, and are considered to be the person making the payments. The producer, recipient, or payee is the receiver of the payments. The transmitter is the organization preparing the tape file. Payers or transmitters who decide to file information returns on magnetic tape must complete Form 4419, Application for Magnetic Media Reporting of Information Returns. Instructions for completing the application appear on the reverse side of the form.

.02 The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) will act on an application and notify the applicant of authorization to file within 30 days of receipt of the application. No magnetic tape returns may be filed with the IRS until authorization to file is received.

.03 The IRS will assist new filers with their initial magnetic tape submission by reviewing test tapes in advance of the filing season. Approved payers or transmitters who wish to submit test tapes should contact the magnetic media coordinator at the Service Center where the application was filed. A list of the Service Center addresses is provided in Section 10.

.04 Once authorization to file on magnetic tape has been granted to a payer or transmitter, it will remain in effect in succeeding years, provided that all the requirements of this revenue procedure are met and there are no equipment changes by the filer. If a filer discontinues filing on magnetic tape, a new application must be filed before this method of filing may be resumed.

SEC. 3. FILING OF TAPE REPORT

.01 A magnetic tape reporting package, which includes all the necessary transmittals, labels, and instructions, will be mailed to all approved filers between October and December of each year.

.02 Payers may submit a portion of their information returns on magnetic tape and the remainder on paper forms provided there is no duplicate filing. The magnetic tape records and paper forms must be filed at the same location, but in separate shipments. A Form 6248-T, Summary and Transmittal of Windfall Profit Tax, must accompany paper submissions and a Form 4804, Transmittal of Information Returns Reported on Magnetic Media, must accompany magnetic tape submissions.

.03 The affidavit which appears on Forms 6248-T and Form 4804 must be signed by the payer. However, one of the following, the transmitter, service bureau, or disbursing agent may sign the affidavit on behalf of the payer if three conditions are met. The conditions are that the Agent must:

a. have the authority to sign the affidavit under an agency agreement (either oral, written, or implied) that is valid under state law;

b. have the responsibility (either oral, written or implied) conferred on it by the payer to request the taxpayer identifying numbers of payees reported on magnetic tape or paper returns; and

c. sign the affidavit and add the caption "From: (name of payer)".

.04 Although a duly authorized agent signs the affidavit, the payer is held responsible for the accuracy of the Form 4804 and will be liable for penalties for failure to comply with filing requirements.

.05 The preceding requirements also apply to paper filers submitting Form 6248-T. The failure of duly authorized "agents" of paper filers to comply with filing requirements for Form 6248-T and attachments does not relieve the payers of any penalties that may arise as a result of such failure to comply.

.06 If a portion of the returns is submitted on paper documents, include a statement on the Form 6248-T that the remaining returns are being filed on magnetic tapes. Please note that Form 6248-T instructions normally apply to filing of information returns on paper; however, filers of magnetic tape must review the Form 6248-T instructions and file Form 6248-T if appropriate.

.01 Magnetic tape reporting to the IRS for Forms 6248 is on a calendar year basis.

.02 The dates prescribed for filing paper returns with the Internal Revenue Service will also apply to magnetic tape filing. Tapes must be submitted to the service center by April 30. Copies required to be furnished to the producer or other recipients must be furnished by March 31.

SEC. 5. EXTENSIONS OF TIME TO FILE

.01 If a payer or transmitter is unable to submit the tape file by the date prescribed in Section 4.02 above, a letter requesting an extension must be filed before April 30. The letter should be sent to the attention of the magnetic media coordinator at the service center which will receive the tape file (see Part A, Section 10, below). The request should include the estimated number of returns which will be filed late, the reason for the delay, and the date by which the returns will be filed.

.02 If an extension is granted by the IRS, a copy of the letter granting the extension must be attached to the transmittal Form 4804 when the file is submitted.

SEC. 6. PROCESSING OF TAPE RETURNS

.01 The IRS will process tax information from the tapes. Tapes which are timely received by the IRS will be returned to the filer within six months of receipt.

.02 All tapes submitted must conform totally to this revenue procedure. If tapes are unprocessable, they will be returned to the filer for correction. Corrected tapes must be filed with the IRS as soon as possible. Corrected files will be returned by the IRS within six months of receipt.

SEC. 7. CORRECTED RETURNS, SUBSTITUTE FORMS AND COMPUTER-GENERATED FORMS

.01 If returns must be corrected or amended, approved magnetic media filers should make every attempt to provide such corrections on tape. The filer must contact the magnetic media coordinator for format and shipping instructions. A corrected Form 4804 must accompany the shipment and be marked "Magnetic Media Correction" on the top margin of the form. Corrected or amended Form 6248 data must be filed in accordance with Revenue Procedure 83-86.

.02 If corrections are not submitted on tape, payers must submit them on official Forms 6248 (Copy A). Approved substitutes or computer-generated forms that are exact facsimiles of the official form (except for minor page size or print style deviations) may be submitted without obtaining prior IRS approval before using the form. In all other cases, IRS approval must be obtained before the substitute or computer-generated form can be used. Revenue procedures containing specifications for paper returns are available from most IRS offices.

.03 Requests for approval of a computer-generated or substitute form should be sent to the following address with a copy of the proposed form:
Internal Revenue Service
Attn: Substitute Forms Program
Room 7037 D:R:R:I
1111 Constitution Avenue N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20224

.04 Form 6248 instructions are to be followed when paper returns are filed to correct returns submitted on magnetic media. The caption "Magnetic Media Correction" must appear on the top right corner of the form. Corrections must be sent to the attention of the magnetic media coordinator where the original tape file was filed.

SEC. 8. TAXPAYER IDENTIFICATION NUMBERS

.01 Under Section 6109 of the Internal Revenue Code, recipients of income are required to furnish Taxpayer Identification Numbers (TINs) to the payer whether or not the payee is required to file a tax return.

.02 Payers are expected to keep to a minimum those statements submitted without TINs. It is particularly important that correct Social Security and Employer Identification Numbers for payees be provided on magnetic media or paper forms submitted to the IRS.

.03 For each omission of a required TIN, Section 6676 of the Internal Revenue Code imposes a $50 penalty, unless the payer or payee responsible for furnishing the number establishes reasonable cause for not having done so.

.04 The TIN to be furnished depends primarily upon the manner in which the account is maintained or set up on the record of the payer. The number to be provided must be that of the owner of record. If the account is recorded in more than one name, furnish the TIN and name of one of the holders of the record. For those engaged in a trade or business (including employee trusts, retirement systems, etc.) the TIN is the Employer Identification Number (EIN), without hyphens. For individuals, it is a Social Security Number (SSN), without hyphens.

.05 Sole proprietors who are payers should show their Employer Identification Number and/or their Social Security Number in the Filer/Transmitter "G" Record. The tables provided in .06 below should help to determine the number to be furnished to the IRS.

.06 Any person required to file an information return that is based, in whole or in part, upon information received from another person MUST include the Taxpayer Identifying Number of that person on the return. The tables below will help determine the number to be furnished to the IRS.

SEC. 9. EFFECT ON PAPER RETURNS

.01 Magnetic tape reporting of the information return listed in Section 1 above applies only to the original (Copy A).

.02 Payers are permitted considerable flexibility in designing the copy of the information return to be furnished to the payee. The payer may combine the information return data with other reports or financial or commercial notices, or expand them to include other information. This is permissable so long as all required information present on the official form is included and the payees' copies are conducive to proper reporting of income on tax returns. Payers must include the message "This information is being furnished on Form 6248 to the Internal Revenue Service" on the recipients' copies.

.03 If a portion of the returns are reported on magnetic tape and the remainder are reported on paper forms, those returns not submitted on magnetic tape must be filed on official Forms 6248.

PART B. — MAGNETIC TAPE SPECIFICATIONS

SECTION 1. GENERAL

.01 The magnetic tape specifications contained in this part prescribe the required format and contents of the records to be included in the file. These specifications must be adhered to unless deviations have been specifically granted by the IRS in writing.

.02 In most instances, the IRS will be able to process any compatible tape files. Compatible tape files must meet any one set of the following:

(a) 7 channel BCD (binary coded decimal) with
(1) Either Even or Odd Parity and
(2) A density of 556 or 800 BPI

(b) 9 channel EBCDIC (Extended Binary Coded Decimal Interchange Code) with
(1) Odd Parity and
(2) A density of 800, 1600, or 6250 BPI

(c) 9 channel ASCII (American Standard Coded Information Interchange) with
(1) Odd Parity and
(2) A density of 800, 1600, or 6250 BPI

.03 All compatible tape files must have the following characteristics:

(a) Type of tape - ½ inch Mylar base, oxide coated; and
(b) Interrecord Gap - ¾ inch.

.04 IRS programs are capable of accommodating some minor deviations. Filers who can substantially conform to these specifications, but do require some minor deviations, must contact the magnetic media coordinator at the service center where the file will be submitted. Under no circumstances may tapes deviating from the specifications in this revenue procedure be submitted without prior written approval from the IRS.

SEC. 2. RECORD LENGTH

.01 The tape records prescribed in these specifications may be blocked or unblocked, subject to the following:

(a) A block must not exceed 14,500 tape positions.

(b) If the use of blocked records would result in a short block, all remaining positions of the block must be filled with 9's. Do not pad a block with blanks.

(c) All records except the Header and Trailer Labels, may be blocked.

.02 All records, other than Header and Trailer records, must be 1450 characters long.

SEC. 3. OPTIONS FOR FILING

.01 For filing convenience, this procedure contains two options for using Header Labels and Filer/Transmitter "G" Records. For the purposes of this procedure the following conventions must be used:

Header Label:

1. Payers may use standard headers, however they begin with 1 HDR, HDR1, HDR2, VOL1 or VOL2.

2. Consist of either 80 or 120 positions each.

Trailer Label:

1. Standard trailer labels may be used, however they must begin with 1EOR, 1EOF, EOR1, EOF1.

2. Consist of either 80 or 120 positions each.

Record Mark:

1. Special character used to separate blocked records on tape.

2. Can be written only at the end of a record or block.

3. For odd parity tapes, use BCD bit configuration 011010 ("A82").

Tape Mark:

1. Used to signify the physical end of the recording on tape.

2. Must be even parity, BCD configuration 001111 ("8421").

3. May follow the header label(s) and precede and/or follow the trailer label(s).

Option 1: When using this option, a correct Filer/Transmitter "G" Record, described in Sec. 4 below, is required as the first record on each reel. Filers using this option may have Header Labels preceding the "G" Record, however, headers are not required. The reel sequence number must appear in positions 3-5 of each "G" Record and must be incremented by 1 on each tape reel of the file after the first reel.

Option 2: Requires a Header Label as the first record on each reel. The Header Label must contain the reel sequence number and it must be incremented by 1 on each reel. The "G" Record will contain the location of the reel sequence number in the Header Label. If your system generates a four digit reel sequence number, ignore the first digit when determining the location of the reel sequence in the "G" Record.

Example 1: If your Header Label reel sequence is four digits (e.g., 0001) and is in positions 28-31, enter 29 as the location in positions 3 and 4 of the "G" Record and also enter an "X" in position 5 of the "G" Record.

Example 2: If your Header Label reel sequence number is 3 digits (e.g., 001) and is in position 10-12, enter 10 as the location in positions 3 and 4 of the "G" Record. This option requires a Trailer Label at the end of each reel. Also, ignore the "J" Record instructions in this part if you use option 2.

SEC. 4. STANDARD STATE ABBREVIATIONS AND ZIP CODES

The following table gives the list of valid state abbreviations and zip codes to be used in the "G" and (in the case of zip codes) "H" records. If the producer lives in a foreign country, then a period followed by a blank (".b") should be entered in the two position state field and blanks should be entered for Zip Code. The table lists the only valid data entries for state information.

26 CFR 601.602: Tax forms and instructions.

Rev. Proc. 84-33

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to provide an optional method for an authorized transfer/paying agent to report and deposit amounts withheld for payers under the statutory provisions of backup withholding.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Section 31.3504-1(a) of the Employment Tax Regulations provides that applications for authorization to act as agent with respect to wages under Chapter 24 of the Code shall be filed with the district director or director of a service center with whom the agent, on approval of the application, will file returns.

.02 Rev. Proc. 70-6, 1970-1 C.B. 420, describes the procedure to be followed in applying for authorization to act as agent for employers under section 3504 of the Code for purposes of chapters 21, 22, 24 and 25 with respect to acts required of employers under the federal employment tax statutes.

.03 Section 3406 of the Internal Revenue Code provides that under certain circumstances, payers of payments reportable under sections 6041, 6041A, 6042, 6044, 6045, 6049, and 6050A shall deduct and withhold tax of 20 percent of the payments. Section 3406(a) defines the four conditions that trigger the backup witholding requirements.

[1] Also released in News Release IR-84-43 dated March 28, 1984.

.04 Section 3406(h)(10) of the Code provides that for purposes of Chapter 24, payments which are subject to backup withholding under section 3406 shall be treated as if they were wages paid by an employer to an employee and any amounts withheld shall be treated as if they were income tax withholding under section 3402.

SEC. 3. SCOPE AND OBJECTIVE

.01 Current rules provide, in sections 35a.9999-1, 2 and 3 of the Temporary Employment Tax Regulations under the Interest and Dividend Tax Compliance Act of 1983, that the person who is required by the applicable Code sections to file the information returns is the person (payer) required to do the backup withholding. Thus, a transfer/paying agent who actually makes the reportable payments and withholds on behalf of such payers must deposit the withheld amounts separately for each payer using that payer's taxpayer identification number (TIN) and must notify each payer of the withholding and deposits made on the payer's behalf. The payer, in turn, is required to report the backup withholding on the same Form 941, Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return, or Form 941-E, Quarterly Return of Withheld Federal Income Tax, filed by the payer with respect to its own employees.

.02 However, in lieu of the provision in 3.01 above, a transfer/paying agent may report and deposit backup withholding amounts for payers under the agent's TIN if the agent complies with the procedures listed below.

SEC. 4. APPLICATION

.01 A transfer/paying agent making the election under 3.02 above must take the actions specified below:

.02 The agent must apply for authorization, in writing, to the Director of the Internal Revenue Service Center with whom the agent intends to file the returns involved.

(a) The application must be accompanied by a Form 2678, Employer Appointment of Agent under Section 3504, completed by each payer for whom the agent is to act. (Form 2678 is available at any Internal Revenue Service district or local office.) Even if the agent has already filed a Form 2678 for another purpose, a new Form 2678 from each payer is required under this optional procedure.

(b) The agent must enter "BACKUP WITHHOLDING" in red above the service center address area of Form 2678. The name and TIN of both the payer and the agent must be entered on the form. See Exhibit 1 for an example of a properly completed Form 2678. If the agent does not have a TIN, a properly completed Form SS-4, Application for Employer Identification Number must accompany the application for authorization.

(c) One application for authorization may be filed to cover more than one payer as long as a properly completed Form 2678 from each payer is attached.

(d) The application will be approved by letter to the agent from the service center director. Approval is effective as of the date of the letter.

(3) If the agreement to act as an agent is terminated for any payer(s) for whom a Form 2678 was filed, the agent must revoke the Form 2678 by notifying the Director of the Internal Revenue Service Center, by sending a letter with the name(s) of the payer(s) to be revoked and a statement that the originally filed Form 2678 is no longer in effect.

.03 Filing of Tax Returns

(a) The agent must file a single tax return (Form 941) for each tax period, regardless of the number of payers for whom the agent is acting.

(b) The return must include the backup withholding amounts for all liable payers as well as for the agent, if the agent is liable for any on its own account.

(c) The agent's name and TIN must be used on the tax return as well as on any Federal Tax Deposit (FTD) coupons.

.04 Filing of Information Returns and Transmittals—If the agent submits a Form 2678 electing this option, all information returns and transmittals must be completed as specified below, whether or not backup withholding is required to be reported.

(a) If the information returns are filed on magnetic media:

(1) A separate transmittal, Form 4804, Transmittal of Information Returns Reported on Magnetic Media, must be filed for each payer.

(2) Enter the agent's name, address and TIN in box 5 of Form 4804.

(3) See Rev. Proc. 83-48, 1983-2 C.B. 420 for instructions on magnetic media filing of information returns.

(b) If the information returns are filed on paper:

(1) A separate transmittal document, Form 1096, Annual Summary and Transmittal of U.S. Information Returns, or Form W-3G (if appropriate), Transmittal of Certain Information Returns must be filed for each payer. See Exhibits 2 and 3 for examples of properly completed forms.

(2) The transmittal document must have the payer's name and the agent's name (in care of—c/o) and the agent's address in the address area of the form.

(3) For both forms, enter three slashes (/ / /) before the payer's name to identify the document as being filed by an agent.

(4) Enter the agent's TIN in the lower right hand portion of the title area on Form 1096. Enter the agent's TIN in the blank box on Form W-3G.

(5) Enter the payer's TIN in the block for Employer Identification Number (EIN) on Form 1096. Enter the payer's TIN in the identifying number block on Form W-3G.

(6) For the Forms 1099 attached to the transmittal, enter the payer's name followed by the agent's name (in care of—c/o) and the agent's address in the name and address area of the form. See Exhibit 4 for an example of a properly completed form. The only exception is on Form 1099-R, Statement for Recipients of Total Distributions from Profit-sharing, Retirement Plans, Individual Retirement Arrangements, etc. For this form, enter the agent's name directly to the right of the printed words "Street Address". See Exhibit 5 for an example of a properly completed form.

(7) For all Forms 1099, enter the payer's TIN in the space for Federal identifying number.

SEC. 5. GENERAL

.01 The agent must maintain records that will disclose the full amount of interest, dividends, patronage dividends and other reportable payments reported and tax withheld for each payer and each recipient.

.02 In accordance with section 3504 of the Code, all provisions of the law and regulations (including penalties) applicable with respect to a payer will be applicable to the agent, and despite the acts performed by the agent pursuant to authority granted under Section 3504, the payer will remain subject to all provisions of the law and regulations (including penalties).

SEC. 6. INQUIRIES

Inquiries concerning this revenue procedure should refer to its number and should be addressed to the Director, Internal Revenue Service Center, serving the district in which the agent is located.

SEC. 7. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

This revenue procedure amplifies Revenue Procedures 70-6, 83-48 and 84-24.

SEC. 8. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure is effective for returns for taxable periods beginning after December 31, 1983.

(2) the short period required to effect the change of annual accounting period is not a tax year in which the corporation has a net operating loss as defined in section 172 of the Internal Revenue Code;

(3) the taxable income of the corporation for the short period required to effect the change in accounting period is, if placed on an annual basis, 80 percent or more of the taxable income of the corporation for the tax year immediately preceding the short period;

(4) the corporation, if it had a special status (as defined in section 1.442-1(c)(2)(iv) of the regulations) either for the short period or for the tax year immediately preceding the short period, must have the same special status for both the short period and such tax year; and

(5) the corporation does not attempt to make an S corporation election (under section 1362 of the Code) that purports to initially become effective for the tax year immediately following the short period.

Rev. Proc. 84-35

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to update Rev. Proc. 81-11, 1981-1 C.B. 651, to conform to the small partnership provisions of section 6231(a)(1)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code. Rev. Proc. 81-11 sets forth the procedures under which partnerships with 10 or fewer partners will not be subject to the penalty imposed by section 6698 for failure to file a partnership return.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Section 6031(a) of the Code

provides that every partnership must make a return for each taxable year including all information that the Secretary may by forms and regulations prescribe.

.02 Section 402 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, 1982-2 C.B. 462, 585, added sections 6221 through 6232 to the Code to provide that the tax treatment of partnership items must be determined at the partnership level. For purposes of these sections, section 6231(a)(1)(A) defines "partnership" to mean any partnership required to file a return under section 6031(a) except as provided in section 6231(a)(1)(B).

.03 Section 6231(a)(1)(B) of the Code provides an exception to the definition of "partnership" for small partnerships. In general, the term "partnership" does not include a partnership if the partnership has 10 or fewer partners, each of whom is a natural person (other than a nonresident alien) or an estate, and each partner's share of each partnership item is the same as such partner's share of every other item. A husband and wife, and their estates, are treated as one partner for this purpose.

.04 Section 6698 of the Code imposes a penalty if any partnership required to file a return under section 6031 fails to file a timely return, or files a return that fails to show the information required by that section, unless the failure is due to reasonable cause.

.05 The Conference Committee Report concerning section 6698 of the Code states:

> The penalty will not be imposed if the partnership can show reasonable cause for failure to file a complete or timely return. Smaller partnerships (those with 10 or fewer partners) will not be subject to the penalty under this reasonable cause test so long as each partner fully reports his share of the income, deductions, and credits of the partnership. . . .

H.R. Rep No. 95-1800 (Conf. Report), 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 221 (1978), 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 521, 555. See also H.R. Rep. No. 95-1445, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 75 (1978), 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 181, 249, and S. Rep. No. 95-1263, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 106 (1978), 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 315, 403, which contain similar statements.

SEC. 3. REQUIRED PROCEDURES

.01 A domestic partnership composed of 10 or fewer partners and coming within the exceptions outlined in section 6231(a)(1)(B) of the Code will be considered to have met the reasonable cause test and will not be subject to the penalty imposed by section 6698 for the failure to file a complete or timely partnership return, provided that the partnership, or any of the partners, establishes, if so requested by the Internal Revenue Service, that all partners have fully reported their shares of the income, deductions, and credits of the partnership on their timely filed income tax returns.

.02 Partnerships having a trust or corporation as a partner, tier partnerships, and partnerships where each partner's interest in the capital and profits are not owned in the same proportion, or where all items of income, deductions, and credits are not allocated in proportion to the prorata interests, do not come within the exception provisions of section 6231(a)(1)(B) of the Code and, are subject to the penalty imposed by section 6698.

.03 Although a partnership of 10 or fewer partners may not be automatically excepted from the penalty imposed by section 6698 of the Code under section 3.01, the partnership may show other reasonable cause for failure to file a complete or timely partnership return.

.04 In determining whether a partner has fully reported the partner's share of the income, deductions, and credits of the partnership, for purposes of section 3.01, all the relevant facts and circumstances will be taken into account. In making this determination, the nature and materiality of any error or omission will be considered. For example, although an isolated clerical error normally reflects no more than mere inadvertence, such an error may be of such magnitude that the partner will not be considered to have fully reported. If the error or omission results in a de minimis understatement of the net amount payable with respect to any income tax, the penalty will not be asserted. However, if the error or omission results in a material understatement of the net amount payable with respect to any income tax, the partner generally will not be considered to have fully reported and the penalty will be applied.

SEC. 4. EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE PROCEDURES

Rev. Proc. 81-11 is modified and superseded.

SEC. 5. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure is effective for returns required to be filed after June 22, 1984.

Rev. Proc. 84-36

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to provide a list of subdivisions of Indian tribal governments that are to be treated as political subdivisions of states for specified purposes under the Internal Revenue Code for a two-year period.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 The Indian Tribal Governmental Tax Status Act of 1982, (Title II of Pub. L. No. 97-473, 96 Stat. 2605, 2607-11, as amended by Pub. L. No. 98-21, 97 Stat. 65, 87 [1983-1 C.B. 510, 511]) added certain provisions to the Code that pertain to the status of Indian tribal governments. For two years beginning in 1983, Indian tribal governments (or subdivisions thereof) will be treated as states (or political subdivisions thereof) for specified federal tax purposes. For example, under new section 7871 of the Code interest on public activity bonds issued during the years 1983 and 1984 by a tribal government may be tax exempt, and a tribal government will be entitled to exemption from certain excise taxes. Also, charitable contributions made in 1983 and 1984 to or for the use of a tribal government may be deductible under federal gift and estate tax laws. Charitable contributions made during a taxpayer's tax years beginning in 1983 and 1984 may be deductible under the federal income tax laws.

.02 The term "Indian tribal government" is defined under section 7701(a)(40) of the Code (as amended) to mean the governing body of any tribe, band, community, village or group of Indians, or (if applicable) Alaska Natives, that is determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, after consultation with the Secretary of the Interior to exercise governmental functions. Section 7871(d) of the Code provides that for purposes of section 7871, a subdivision of an Indian tribal government shall be treated as a political subdivision of a state if (and only if) the Secretary of the Treasury determines (after consultation with the Secretary of the Interior) that such subdivision has been delegated the right to exercise one or more of the substantial governmental functions of the Indian tribal government.

.03 A list of Indian tribal entities that exercise governmental functions for purposes of section 7871 of the Code has been published as Revenue Procedure 83-87, 1983-2 C.B. 606.

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to provide guidance as to the manner in which a governmental unit of an Indian tribe or a political subdivision of an Indian tribal government not included among those listed in Revenue Procedures previously published by the Service can request a determination qualifying it for treatment as a state or a political subdivision of a state as provided under section 7871 of the Internal Revenue Code.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 The Indian Tribal Governmental Tax Status Act of 1982, (Title II of Pub. L. No. 97-473, 96 Stat. 2605, 2607-11, as amended by Pub. L. No. 98-21, 97 Stat. 65, 87 [1983-1 C.B. 510, 511]) added certain provisions to the Code that pertain to the status of Indian tribal governments. For two years beginning in 1983, Indian tribal governments (or subdivisions thereof) will be treated as states (or political subdivisions thereof) for specified federal tax purposes. For example, under new section 7871 of the Code interest on public activity bonds issued during the years 1983 and 1984 by a tribal government may be tax exempt, and a tribal government will be entitled to exemption from certain excise taxes. Also, charitable contributions made in 1983 and 1984 to or for the use of a tribal government may be deductible under federal gift and estate tax laws. Charitable contributions made during a taxpayer's tax years beginning in 1983 and 1984 may be deductible under the federal income tax laws.

.02 The term "Indian tribal government" is defined under section 7701(a)(40) of the Code (as amended) to mean the governing body of any tribe, band, community, village or group of Indians, or (if applicable) Alaska Natives, that is determined by the Secretary of Treasury, after consultation with the Secretary of the Interior, to exercise governmental functions. Section 7871(d) of the Code provides that, for purposes of section 7871, a subdivision of an Indian tribal government shall be treated as a political subdivision of a state if (and only if) the Secretary of the Treasury determines (after consultation with the Secretary of the Interior) that such subdivision has been delegated the right to exercise one or more of the substantial governmental functions of the Indian tribal government.

.03 Three generally accepted sovereign powers of states are the power to tax, the power of eminent domain and the police power. See Rev. Rul. 77-164, 1977-1 C.B. 20; Rev. Rul. 77-165, 1977-1 C.B. 21; and Rev. Rul. 61-181, 1961-2 C.B. 21. Section 7871(d) of the Code provides that a subdivision of an Indian tribal government shall be treated as a political subdivision of a state under certain circumstances. A subdivision of an Indian tribal government that has been delegated one of the generally accepted sovereign powers may qualify as a political subdivision of a state for purposes of 7871(d) of the Code.

04. A list of Indian tribal entities that exercise governmental functions for purposes of section 7871 of the Code has been published as Revenue Procedure 83-87, 1983-2 C.B. 606.

.05 A list of Indian tribal subdivisions has been published as Rev. Proc. 84-36, page 510, this Bulletin.

SEC. 3. APPLICATION

.01 If a tribal entity or tribal subdivision is not included in Rev. Proc. 83-87 or Rev. Proc. 84-36, a request for recognition as such should be submitted in the form of an application for a private letter ruling in accordance with Rev. Proc. 84-1.

.02 All determinations will be made based on all the facts and circumstances. Each request should include an explanation how the entity satisfies the statutory definition of an Indian tribal government or to what extent the entity has been delegated one or more of the sovereign powers that would qualify it as an Indian tribal subdivision. Each request should also provide the actual or approximate date on which such entity satisfied the statutory definition of an Indian tribal government or was delegated one or more of the sovereign powers of an Indian tribal government. The explanation should be sufficiently detailed to show to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the entity in question qualifies as a governmental unit of an Indian tribe or a political subdivision of an Indian tribal government.

.03 Each determination will specify whether or not the entity qualifies as an Indian tribal government (or subdivision thereof) and the date on which such determination is effective for purposes of section 7701 and 7871 of the Code.

.04 Requests for determination that an Indian tribal government qualifies for treatment as a state or that a subdivision of an Indian tribal government qualifies for treatment as a political subdivision of a state as provided under section 7871 of the Code should be sent to Internal Revenue Service, Associate Chief Counsel (Technical), Attention CC:IND:S, Room 6545, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

Rev. Proc. 84-38

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

This Revenue Procedure establishes a handling and shipping charge for processing requests for bulk quantities of tax forms. This charge only applies to those engaged in the preparation of tax returns for private gain.

SEC. 2. CHARGES

.01 Charges for tax forms will be established on the basis of each 100 printed units ordered. The schedule of charges for handling and shipping bulk quantities of tax forms will be based on a rate of $1.00 per hundred printed units, or fraction thereof. A 10% discount will be applied to any bulk order for tax forms postmarked on or before the discount deadline date specified in Publication 1045; however, all orders for tax forms will be subject to a minimum charge of $3.00.

.02 No charge will be made to a bank, post office, public library or other organization for any quantity of forms and instructions intended for the convenience and use of the taxpayer, so long as such organization is not engaged in the preparation of tax returns for private gain.

.03 Single copies of Publications 17 and 334 will be provided without charge. Multiple copies of either publication will not be provided to individuals or organizations except where the Regional Commissioner or District Director determines that such distribution will further the interests of taxpayer service or education. A user charge of $.50 per copy will apply to all approved multiple copy requests. Regional Commissioners, District Directors and appropriate National Office officials may continue to provide multiple copies without charge for use in IRS-sponsored programs (e.g. Understanding Taxes and VITA). Priority must be given to filling single copy requests for Publications 17 and 334. Requests for bulk quantities of either publication which jeopardize the Service's ability to respond on a timely basis to such single copy demand should not be honored. For individuals who wish for their own purposes to print copies of Publication 17 or 334, IRS will provide page negatives of either publication for a user charge of $3.00 per page negative.

.04 All user charges will be commensurate with the prevailing postage and handling costs and will be established by the Assistant Commissioner (Support and Services).

Rev. Proc. 84-41

PART "A" GENERAL

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

.01 The purpose of this Revenue Procedure is to provide the requirements and conditions for submitting certain Forms W-4, Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificates, on magnetic tape instead of filing paper returns. All employers are required to send to the Internal Revenue Service copies of all Forms W-4 submitted by their employees who claim the following:

(a) 15 or more withholding allowances, or

(b) exempt status and usually earn more than $200 a week at the time the Form W-4 was filed.

Forms W-4 information may be filed on magnetic tape and sent monthly to the Service.

SEC. 2. APPLICATION FOR MAGNETIC MEDIA REPORTING

.01 Tape reporting is not restricted to employers with the ability to submit all their information on magnetic tape; a combination of tape records and paper documents is acceptable as long as there is no duplication or omission of documents.

.02 Employers or transmitters who desire to file statements in the form of magnetic tape must first file a letter of application or Form 4419, Application for Magnetic Media Reporting of Information Returns. This letter or form should be addressed to the attention of the Magnetic Media Coordinator of one of the following service centers:

The letter of request must contain the following:

(a) Name, address, and employer identification number of the person, organization, or entity making the request.

(b) Name, title, and telephone number of the person to contact regarding the request.

(c) Estimate of the number of Forms W-4 to be reported in tape format, and the number, if any, expected to be reported on copies of paper Forms W-4.

(d) Type and nature of equipment to be used to prepare the tape; i.e., manufacturer and model of the mainframe and tape drives, tape width (½", ¾", etc.), density (characters per inch), recording code (BCD, Excess 3, Octal, etc.).

(e) Signature of the official responsible for the preparation and submission of Forms W-4 to the Service.

.03 The Service will act on applications and notify applicants of authorization to file or of disapproval within 30 days of receipt of an application. No magnetic tape returns may be filed with the Service until authorization to file is received.

.04 Only employers or transmitters using equipment compatible with the Service's equipment will have their applications approved. Compatible tape characteristics are shown in PART "B" Section 1.01.

.05 In general, once authorization to file on magnetic tape has been granted, such approval will continue in effect in succeeding years, providing that the requirements of this Revenue Procedure are met and there are no equipment changes by the employer or transmitter. However, new applications are required whenever any of the following situations arise:

(a) If the users change from equipment producing compatible tapes.

(b) If the users submit tapes that are not listed as compatible.

(c) If the users discontinue tape reporting for one or more quarters, then decide to resume this method of reporting.

SEC. 3. FILING DATES

.01 Magnetic tape reporting to the Service must be quarterly (monthly reporting is encouraged), following the quarter ending due dates below:

Period Covered	Due Date
Jan. 1 thru March 31	April 30
Apr. 1 thru June 30	July 31
July 1 thru Sept. 30	October 31
Oct. 1 thru Dec. 31	January 31

SEC. 4. FILING OF MAGNETIC MEDIA REPORTS

.01 Packaging, shipping, and mailing instructions will be provided by the Service to all approved filers within 45 days of the granting of approval. A magnetic tape reporting package, which includes all necessary transmittals and labels, will be mailed to all approved filers.

.02 Employers or transmitters may submit a portion of their Forms W-4 information on magnetic tape and the remainder on paper forms, provided there is NO DUPLICATE FILING. The magnetic tape records and paper forms must be filed at the same location, i.e., the appropriate service center, but in separate shipments. A Service-provided transmittal Form 6466 must accompany all magnetic tape shipments to the service center. (For all paper Forms W-4 sent to IRS, employers or transmitters must supply a cover letter which included the employer's name, address, employer identification number, and number of Forms W-4 being submitted.)

.03 The affidavit which appears on the Service-provided Form 6466 for tape submission must be signed by the employer, the transmitter, service bureau, or disbursing agent who must:

(a) have the authority to sign the affidavit under an agency agreement (either oral, written, or implied) that is valid under State law; and

(b) have the responsibility (either oral, written, or implied) conferred on it by the employer to request taxpayer identifying numbers of employees reported on magnetic tape or paper returns; and

(c) sign the affidavit and add the caption "For: (name of employer)."

.04 Although a duly authorized agent signs the affidavit, the employer is held responsible for the accuracy of Forms W-4 contained on magnetic tape.

SEC. 5. PROCESSING OF MAGNETIC MEDIA STATEMENTS

.01 The magnetic tape specifications contained in Part B of this Revenue Procedure must be strictly adhered to. If files are unprocessable, they will be returned to the filer for correction and resubmission of tapes or for submission of copies of paper Forms W-4. Corrected files must be filed with the Service as soon as possible. If the delay will be more than two weeks, contact the Service Center Magnetic Media Coordinator for instructions.

.02 The Service will copy the information from the original tapes and will return the original tapes to the employer. Normally tapes will be returned either within three months after the quarterly due date for submission to the Service, or within three months after actual receipt of acceptable tapes, whichever is later.

SEC. 6. EFFECT ON PAPER DOCUMENTS

.01 Magnetic tape reporting to the Service eliminates the need for submission of copies of paper Forms W-4. However, employers must maintain the original Form W-4 for their records.

.02 If only a portion of the statements is reported on magnetic tape and the remainder is reported on paper forms, those paper statements must be filed on the prescribed forms.

SEC. 7. ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Request for additional copies of this Revenue Procedure or for additional information on tape reporting of Forms 941, 1099, 5498, or 1042S should be addressed to the attention of the Magnetic Media Coordinator of the appropriate Internal Revenue Service Center listed in Section 2.02 above.

PART "B" MAGNETIC TAPE SPECIFICATIONS

SECTION 1. GENERAL

.01 These specifications prescribe the required format and content of the records to be included in the file, but not the methods or equipment to be used in their preparation. Usually, the Service will be able to process, without translation, any compatible tape file. To be compatible, a tape file must meet all of the following specifications:

(a) Type of Tape—½ inch Mylar base, oxide coated

(b) Recording Density—556 or 800 bits per inch (BPI)

(c) Parity—Even or Odd

(d) Interrecord gap—¾ inch

(e) Recording Code—7 channel binary coded decimal (BCD)

.02 Conversion facilities are currently available for the following tapes:

(a) 9 channel EBCDIC (Extended Binary Coded Decimal Interchange Code) with

(1) Odd Parity

(2) 800, 1600, or 6250 Densities

(b) 9 channel ASCII (American Standard Coded Information Interchange) with

(1) Odd Parity

(2) 800, 1600, or 6250 Densities

.03 Although the Service can process, after translation, tapes created at 6250 BPI, it is preferred that filers submit 1600 BPI tapes if possible.

.04 The employer or the transmitter must affix an external label to each tape with the following information:

(a) Name of Transmitter

(b) Number of data records on that reel

(c) Density (556, 800, 1600, or 6250 BPI)

(d) Channel (7 or 9)

(e) Parity (odd or even)

(f) Manufacturer and model of main frame and tape drives

(g) Sequence number of reel, and total number of reels in the file (i.e., 1 of 3, 2 of 4)

.05 All records, including Header and Trailer Labels (if used), must be transmitted at the same density.

.06 Do not submit an employee W-4 record without the required employer identification information. Every record must contain both employee and employer data.

SEC. 2. LABEL CONVENTIONS

.01 Header Labels, Trailer Labels, Record Marks, and Tape Marks are all optional. They may be used as required by the transmitter's equipment or programming. If used they must conform to the following standards:

(a) Header Labels

(1) Transmitters may use standard headers, provided they begin with 1HDR, HDR1, VOL1, or VOL.2.

(2) Header labels may not exceed 80 characters in length.

(b) Trailer Labels

(1) Standard trailer labels may be used provided that they begin with 1EOR, 1EOF, EOR1, or EOF1.

(2) Trailer labels may not exceed 80 characters in length.

(c) Record Marks

(1) Special character used to separate blocked records on tape.

(2) Can be written only at the end of a record or block.

(3) For odd parity tapes, use BCD bit configuration of 011010; for even parity use 111010.

(4) All records are of uniform length; therefore, record marks are not necessary on this file.

(d) Tape Marks

(1) Used to signify the physical end of the recording on tape.

(2) Tape marks, if used, must be BCD configuration 001111 in even parity.

(3) May follow the header label and precede and/or follow the trailer label.

SEC. 3. RECORD LENTH AND BLOCKING

.01 Tape records prescribed in the specifications may be blocked or unblocked, subject to the following:

(a) All data records are of a fixed length of 400 positions.

(b) All records may be blocked, except header and trailer labels.

(c) If blocking is used (more than one record per block) the desired blocking factor is ten records per block. At no time may a block contain more then 4,000 characters, but a smaller block size may be used if necessary. If sufficient records are not available for a full block, the remainder should be "padded" with 9's to fill all unused positions. Do not pad the block with blanks, or create blank records.

.02 Rev. Proc. 84-22, page 449, this Bulletin, sets forth areas in which advance rulings or determination letters will not be issued by the Internal Revenue Service. Section 5 of Rev. Proc. 84-22 is entitled, Areas Under Extensive Study in which Rulings or Determination Letters Will Not Be Issued Until the Service Resolves the Issue Through Publication of a Revenue Ruling, Revenue Procedure, Regulations or Otherwise.

SEC. 2. PROCEDURE

.01 Section 3.03 of Rev. Proc. 77-37 is amplified to read as follows:

ercent of the maximum number of hares of each class of stock which nay be issued is issued in the initial listribution; (5) the agreement evi- lencing the right to receive stock in he future prohibits assignment (ex- cept by operation of law) or if the agreement does not prohibit assign- ment, the right must not be evidenced by negotiable certificates of any kind and must not be readily marketable; (6) such right can give rise to the re- ceipt only of additional stock of the corporation making the underlying listribution; (7) such stock issuance will not be triggered by an event the occurrence or nonoccurrence of which is within the control of share- holders; (8) such stock issuance will not be triggered by the payment of additional tax or reduction in tax paid as a result of a Service audit of the shareholders or the corporation either (a) with respect to the reorganization or section 351 transaction in which he contingent stock will be issued, or (b) when the reorganization or section 351 transaction in which the contin- gent stock will be issued involves per- sons related within the meaning of section 267(c)(4) of the Code; and (9) he mechanism for the calculation of he additional stock to be issued is ob- ective and readily ascertainable. Until the fi- al distribution of the total number of shares of stock to be issued in the xchange is made, the interim basis of he stock of the issuing corporation eceived in the exchange by the share- holders (not including that portion of ach share representing interest) will e determined, pursuant to section 58(a), as though the maximum num- er of shares to be issued (not includ- ng that portion of each share repre- enting interest) has been received by he shareholders.

In connection with item 3.03(8) bove, the Service reserves the right o refuse to rule if, based on all the acts and circumstances of a case, it is etermined that the principal purpose f the triggering mechanism is the re- uction in federal income taxes (see section 3.02(1) of Rev. Proc. 84-22, page 449, this Bulletin.

.02 Section 3.06 of Rev. Proc. 77-37 is amplified to read as follows:

In transactions under section 368(a)(1)(A), 368(a)(1)(B), 368(a)(1)(C), 368(a)(1)(D), 368(a)(1)(E), and 351 of the Code, a portion of the stock issued in exchange for the requisite stock or property may be placed in escrow by the exchanging shareholders, or may be made subject to a condition pursuant to the agreement, or plan of reorganization or of the transaction, for possible return to the issuing corporation under specified conditions provided (1) there is a valid business reason for establishing the arrangement; (2) the stock subject to such arrangement appears as issued and outstanding on the balance sheet of the issuing corporation and such stock is legally outstanding under applicable state law; (3) all dividends paid on such stock will be distributed currently to the exchanging shareholders; (4) all voting rights of such stock (if any) are exercisable by or on behalf of the shareholders or their authorized agent; (5) no shares of such stock are subject to restrictions requiring their return to the issuing corporation because of death, failure to continue employment, or similar restrictions; (6) all such stock is released from the arrangement within 5 years from the date of consummation of the transaction (except where there is a bona fide dispute as to whom the stock should be released); (7) at least 50 percent of the number of shares of each class of stock issued initially to the shareholders (exclusive of shares of stock to be issued at a later date as described in .01 above) is not subject to the arrangement; (8) the return of stock will not be triggered by an event the occurrence or nonoccurrence of which is within the control of shareholders; (9) the return of stock will not be triggered by the payment of additional tax or reduction in tax paid as a result of a Service audit of the shareholders or the corporation either (a) with respect to the reorganization or section 351 transaction in which the escrowed stock will be issued, or (b) when the reorganization or section 351 transaction in which the escrowed stock will be issued involves persons related within the meaning of section 267(c)(4) of the Code; and (10) the mechanism for the calculation of the number of shares of stock to be returned is objective and readily ascertainable.

In connection with item 3.06(9) above, the Service reserves the right to refuse to rule if, based on all the facts, and circumstances of a case, it is determined that the principal purpose of the triggering mechanism is the reduction in federal income taxes (see section 3.02(1) of the Rev. Proc. 84-22, page 449, this Bulletin).

.03 Rev. Proc. 84-22 is hereby modified by deleting section 5.18 which reads "Section 368.-Definitions Relating to Corporate Reorganization.-The tax consequences of a transaction intended to qualify as a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(E) of the Code when the plan of reorganization provides for the use of contingent or escrow stock arrangements, and where the share adjustment is triggered by an event the occurrence or non-occurrence of which is within the control of the shareholders or is triggered by a Service audit of the shareholders or the corporation."

(a) That this section applies to a transfer by a shareholder of stock in one corporation (acquired) to another corporation (acquiring), in an exchange otherwise qualifying for treatment under this section, if the exchange is part of a larger transaction that fits a pattern common to acquisitive reorganizations, and after the transaction the acquiring corporation has control of the acquired corporation (within the meaning of section 368(c)), unless there is a continuing interest through stock ownership in the acquiring corporation on the part of the former shareholders of the acquired corporation that is equal in value to at least 50 percent of the value of all of the stock of the acquired corporation outstanding immediately before the overall transaction. For purposes of this determination, liabilities assumed or liabilities to which the property transferred is subject will be considered to be part of the total consideration received. See Rev. Rev. Proc. 84-44

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

.01 The purpose of this revenue procedure is to state the requirements of the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) and the Social Security Administration (SSA) relating to substitutes for Form W-2, Wage and Tax Statement, Form W-2P, Statement for Recipients of Annuities, Pensions, Retired Pay or IRA Payments, and Form W-3, Transmittal of Income and Tax Statements. The IRS provides a six-part Form W-2 and W-2P set. The official Form W-3 is provided as a two-part set.

.02 This revenue procedure supersedes Rev. Proc. 83-46, 1983-1 C.B. 780.

SEC. 2. GENERAL RULES FOR FILING FORMS W-2 AND W-2P

.01 Employers and payers (hereafter and where applicable collectively referred to as payers) with computer capability are encouraged to use magnetic media for filing Forms W-2 (Copy A) and W-2P (Copy A) with the SSA. Requests for additional information concerning magnetic media filing should be directed to either the Regional IRS Magnetic Media Coordinator or to the Regional SSA Magnetic Media Coordinator. Since many states and localities accept Forms W-2 and W-2P on magnetic media, savings may be obtained if a similar medium is used for filing with both the SSA and state or local agencies. Magnetic media users can design their own statements to give to employees, pensioners, annuitants, recipients of retired pay, recipients of IRA (Individual Retirement Account) payments, and recipients of disability income (hereafter and where applicable collectively referred to as payees). Statements designed by payers must comply with the requirements of Section 5 below.

.02 The following Technical Information Bulletins (TIB) contain the specifications and procedures for filing Forms W-2 (Copy A) and W-2P (Copy A) data on magnetic media directly with SSA.

1 TIB-4a—Magnetic Tape Reporting, "Submitting FICA Wage and Tax Data to the Social Security Administration Form W-2 (Copy A);

2 TIB-4b—Magnetic Tape Reporting, "Submitting Annuity, Pension, Retired Pay or IRA Payments to the Social Security Administration" Form W-2P (Copy A);

3 TIB-4c—Diskette Reporting, "Submitting FICA Wage and Tax Data to the Social Security Administration" Form W-2 (Copy A).

Copies of these publications are available at any IRS Service Center; IRS District Office; and SSA, (Reports Preparation Section, P.O. Box 2317, Baltimore, Maryland 21203); or by contacting the Regional SSA Magnetic Media Coordinator.

.03 Payers not using magnetic media must file Copy A of Form W-2 or Copy A of Form W-2P with SSA on either an official form or a privately printed substitute paper form meeting the specifications shown below.

.04 Payers using magnetic media are cautioned to obtain the most recent Technical Information Bulletins and supplements due to possible changes in the specifications and procedures.

SEC. 3. GENERAL RULES FOR FILING FORM W-3

.01 Employers and payers (hereafter and where applicable collectively referred to as payers) required to file Forms W-2 or W-2P must transmit Forms W-2 or W-2P with Form W-3.

.02 Form W-3 must be the same width (i.e., 7 inches, 7.5 inches, or 8 inches) as the Forms W-2 or W-2P filed.

.03 Payers using magnetic media must transmit magnetic media Forms W-2 or W-2P with Form 6559, Transmittal Report of Magnetic Media Filing, along with either Form 6560, Employer Summary of Form W-2 Magnetic Media, or Form 6561, Payer Summary of Form W-2P Magnetic Media Pension Information. SSA will provide these forms to all approved magnetic media filers.

SEC. 4. PAPER SUBSTITUTES FOR FORMS W-2 (COPY A), W-2P (COPY A), AND W-3

.01 Paper substitutes conforming to the specifications contained in this revenue procedure must be privately printed without the prior approval of the IRS. Proposed substitutes not conforming totally to these specifications must be submitted by letter to the Commissioner of the IRS, Attention: D:R:R:I, 1111 Constitution Ave., N.W., Washington, DC 20224, for consideration. These requests should contain an explanation of the specific need for the deviations and the number of Forms W-2, W-2P, and/or W-3 to be printed.

.02 Forms W-2, W-2P, and W-3 are subject to annual review and possible change. Payers are cautioned against overstocking supplies of privately printed substitutes.

.03 Copies of the official form for the reporting year may be obtained from any IRS office. The IRS provides only cut sheet sets with no carbon interleaves for Forms W-2, W-2P, and W-3.

.04 Substitute Forms W-2, W-2P, and W-3 transmitted to the SSA should generally contain only data provided to payees and summary data as requested by the form's instructions.

.05 Substitute Forms W-2, W-2P, and W-3 may be redesigned as to the spacing for state and local tax data as long as the vertical and horizontal spacing for all federal payment and data boxes are in compliance with the specifications contained herein.

.06 The sizes for the ballot boxes on all Forms W-2 (Copy A), W-2P (Copy A), and W-3 are as follows:

1 For Forms W-2, ballot boxes must be 8-point boxes.

2 For Forms W-2P, ballot boxes must be 8-point boxes.

3 For Forms W-3, ballot boxes must be 8-point boxes.

NOTE: More than 50% of the applicable ballot box must be covered by an "X".

SEC. 5. REQUIREMENTS FOR SUBSTITUTE FORMS FURNISHED TO PAYEES (COPIES B, C, AND 2 OF FORMS W-2 AND W-2P)

.01 All payers, including those filing Copy A using magnetic media, must furnish payees with at least two statements. The dimensions of these copies may be expanded from the dimensions of the official form to allow space for conveying additional information such as withholding from pay for health insurance, union dues, bonds, charity, etc. This may permit the payer to eliminate other statements or notices which would otherwise be furnished to payees. The maximum allowable dimensions are:

1 depth should be no more than five inches;

2 width no more than eight inches.

.02 The paper for all copies should be white. The substitute Copy B (or its equal), that payees are instructed to attach to their Federal income tax return, must be at least 24-pound paper (basis 17 x 22-1000), while the other copies furnished the payee should be at least 18-pound paper (basis 17 x 22-1000).

.03 Chemical transfer paper is permitted only if the following standards are met:

1 All copies must be clearly legible;

2 All copies must have the capability to be photocopied;

3 Fading must not be of such a degree as to preclude legibility and the ability to photocopy.

In general, black chemical transfer inks are preferred; other colors are permitted only if the above standards are met. "Spot carbons" are not permitted.

.04 Interleaved carbon must meet the requirements specified in .03 above.

NOTE: Chemical transfer paper is permitted for additional payee copies.

.05 Substitute forms for payees need contain only the payment boxes and captions that are applicable (in any desired sequence). Other boxes contained on the official form may be omitted, except that in all cases the payee name, address and social security number must be present. Payment boxes and captions that are applicable must be clearly identified, using where possible the same wording as on the official form. On Form W-2, Copy B, payers are required to identify the amount of Federal income tax withheld as "Box 9" and the amount of Wages, tips, other compensation as "Box 10." On Form W-2P, Copy B, payers are required to identify the taxable amount as "Box 10" and the amount of Federal income tax withheld as "Box 11." These aforementioned payment boxes on Copy B are required to be outlined in bold 2-point rule (see Exhibit M). Note: Captions in boxes previously identified as FICA tax withheld, FICA wages, and FICA tips on Form W-2 must be identified as Social Security tax withheld, Social Security wages, and Social Security tips as shown on the official Form W-2. If the form contains additional data (e.g., savings bonds withholding, retirement withholding, payroll savings, etc.), there should be a special highlighting of the areas pertaining to (1) Federal income tax withheld, (2) Wages, tips, and other compensation, and (3) Advance EIC payment.

.06 For substitute forms for payees (Copies B, C, and 2 of Forms W-2 and Copies B, C, and 2 of Forms W-2P), the following requirements must be met:

1 All copies of Forms W-2 and W-2P must contain the form title. For Form W-2, the title is "Form W-2 Wage and Tax Statement". For Form W-2P, the title is "Form W-2P Statement for Recipients of Annuities, Pensions, Retired Pay, or IRA Payments".

2 If the substitute forms are not labelled as to the disposition of the copies, then written notification must be provided to each payee as specified below:

(a) The first copy of the form should be filed with the employee's (or recipient's) Federal tax return.

(b) The second copy of the form should be for the employee's (or recipient's) records.

(c) If applicable, the third copy of the form should be filed with the employee's State, City, or Local income tax return.

3 If the substitute forms are labelled, then the forms must contain the applicable description:

(a) "Copy B, to be filed with employee's Federal tax return", "Copy C, for employee's records", and the designation "Form W-2 Department of the Treasury—Internal Revenue Service", or

(b) "Copy B, file with recipient's Federal tax return", "Copy C, for recipient's records", and the designation "Form W-2P Department of the Treasury—Internal Revenue Service".

(c) The reference to the Department of the Treasury—Internal Revenue Service should be omitted from other copies provided in the set.

4 Instructions similar to those contained on the back of Copy C of the official form should be provided to each employee (recipient). For Form W-2, the Social Security (FICA) rates applicable for the current tax year must:

(a) appear either on the front or the back of the copy (Copy C) retained by the employee; or

(b) be communicated to the employee via a separate statement. Note: If you are a Federal employer, you must provide the current rate for hospital insurance benefits (Medicare) for Federal employees.

5 Such substitutes are acceptable and payees should be advised that substitute wage and tax statements are acceptable for filing with their Federal income tax returns.

SEC. 6. REQUIREMENTS FOR SUBSTITUTE "PRIVATELY PRINTED" FORMS W-2 (COPY A), FORMS W-2P (COPY A), AND FORMS W-3 THAT PAYERS SUBMIT TO THE SSA

.01 Payers may file privately printed substitute Forms W-2 and W-2P with the SSA (hereafter referred to as a substitute Copy A). Payers may file privately printed substitute Forms W-3 with the SSA (hereafter referred to as a substitute W-3). The substitute form must be an exact replica of the official repro-proof with respect to layout and contents. Spot carbons are not permitted for Copy A or for Form W-3 filed with SSA. The dimensions of a substitute form may differ as far as width (see Section 6.05 below) and the printing of the Government Printing Office (GPO) symbol must be deleted (see Section 6.12 below). The specifications and allowable tolerances for the Copy A of substitute Forms W-2 and W-2P are provided in Exhibits A, B, D, E, F, and G respectively. The specifications and allowable tolerances for Forms W-3 are provided in Exhibits C, H, and I.

NOTE: Printers of Forms W-2 or W-2P that are wider than 7 inches must provide Forms W-3 that are of the same width as the Forms W-2 or W-2P (i.e. 7½" width Forms W-3 with 7½" width Forms W-2 or W-2P; 8" width Forms W-3 with 8" width Forms W-2 or W-2P).

.02 Color and quality of paper.

.03 All printing will be in red OCR dropout ink, as specified, except for the '22222', '55555', or '33333' at the top of the form and the descriptive information at the bottom (see Exhibits J, K, and L) which will be printed in nonreflective black ink. All other printing will be in red OCR dropout ink with or comparable to the specifications below. The screened area of any substitute form (Copy A of Form W-2 and W-2P, and the Form W-3 that is sent to SSA) should generally correspond to that present on the official form. Vertical rules require screening of .05 inches on each side of an inside rule. Horizontal screening should follow the standard format and allow for typewriter spacing. All screened areas are to be printed in the red OCR dropout ink. The numbered captions are printed as a solid with no screened background. (See Exhibits) Printing in red OCR dropout ink other than those listed below must be cleared by contacting: Manager of Media Support, Recognition Equipment, Inc., P.O. Box 222307, Dallas, Texas 75222; telephone number 214-438-8611, extension 1416. The red OCR dropout ink specifications already approved by Recognition Equipment, Inc., are:

Ink Manufacturer	Red Ink Identification No.
Gans Ink Co.	CS-310
General Printing Inks Div. (Sun Chemical Corp.)	SS-40B
Ink Masters, Inc. (Chicago)	B-6056
Inmont Canada, Ltd.	4T-39605
Lorilleux Lefranc	U-17410
Sinclair & Valentine (U.S.)	J-24893
Toyo Ink Company	OMR-57

.04 Topography—Type must be substantially identical in size and shape with corresponding type on the official form. NOTE: The form identifying number must be in OCR A font.

1 On Copy A of Forms W-2 and W-2P and for Form W-3, all the perimeter rules must be 1-point (0.014 inch), while all other rules must be one half point (0.007 inch).

2 Vertical rules must be parallel to the left edge of the document; horizontal rules parallel to the top edge.

.05 Dimension—Three official Forms W-2, W-2P (Copy A) or one official Form W-3 are contained on a single page which is 7 inches wide (exclusive of any snap-stubs) by 11 inches deep. The width of privately printed substitute pages must be 7 inches, 7 ½ inches, or 8 inches exclusive of any left or right snap-stubs, or pin-feed holes, although adherence to the size of the official page is preferred. If a 7 inch form is produced, the image must be an exact copy of the official repro-proof. If the width of the substitute page is increased, the width of specified fields on the substitute page must be increased in accordance with Exhibits D, E, F, G, H, and I. The top margins and the right margin must be ¼ inch plus or minus .0313 inch and must be free of all printing. For Forms W-2, the combination width of Box 1, "Control number", and the box containing the form identifying number must always be 2.2 inches. For Forms W-2P and W-3, the combination width of Box 1, "Control Number", and the box containing the form identifying number must always be 2.15 inches.

2 When the width of Copy A is increased to 7 ½ inches, exclusive of any left or right snap-stubs or pin-feed holes, the form identifying number must be shown as 2222 for Form W-2, 5555 for Form W-2P, or 3333 for Form W-3. This number tells the scan equipment used by the SSA which information document it is reading, the width size and the position of individual data fields (see Exhibits E, G, and I).

.06 The depth of the individual image on a page (for Form W-2 and W-2P) must be the same (3 ⅓ inches) as that of the official repro-proof. The depth of the Form W-3 on a page must be 3.37 inches.

.07 The words "Do Not Cut or Separate Forms on This Page" must be printed in red OCR dropout ink between the three Forms W-2 or W-2P (Copy A) (see Exhibits A and B) and must also be present on 7 ½ inch and 8 inch wide substitute Forms W-2 or W-2P. Perforations are required on all copies (except Copy A) to enable the separation of individual forms.

.08 The words "For Paperwork Reduction Act Notice, see back of Copy D" must be printed on the Forms W-2 or W-2P (Copy A) (see Exhibits A and B for format and location) and must also be present on 7 ½ inch and 8 inch wide substitute Forms W-2 or W-2P.

.09 The OMB Number must be printed on each ply of Form W-2, W-2P, and W-3 (see Exhibits A, B, and C for format and location) and must also be present on 7 ½ inch and 8 inch wide substitute Forms W-2, W-2P, or W-3.

.10 The words "Please return this entire page to the Social Security Administration address for your State as listed below" as well as the list of SSA addresses must be printed on all Forms W-3 (see Exhibit C) whether Forms W-3 are 7 inches wide, 7 ½ inches wide, or 8 inches wide.

.11 The Paperwork Reduction Act Notice must be printed on Form W-3 (see Exhibit C for format and location) whether Forms W-3 are 7 inches wide, 7 ½ inches wide, or 8 inches wide.

.12 Privately printed continuous substitute Forms W-2 and W-2P (Copy A) must be perforated at each 11" (3-on) page depth. No perforations are allowed between the 3 ⅓" forms on a single copy page of Copy A.

NOTE: Perforations are required between all the other individual copies (Copy 1, B, C, 2, and D) included in the set.

.13 The back of a substitute Copy A must be free of all printing.

.14 Spot carbons are NOT permitted for Copy A of Forms W-2 or W-2P or for Form W-3. Interleaved carbon must be of good quality to assure legibility of information on all parts to preclude smudging, and should be black (see Section 5.04).

.15 The use of "chemical transfer paper" on Copy A may be approved after review by IRS and SSA. Submit all requests with a minimum sample of 100 sheets of at least 20-lb. paper (17X22-1000) to: Internal Revenue Service, Attention: D:R:R:IM, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224. The paper will be tested and the results reported to the requester.

.16 Printer's symbol—The GPO symbol must not be placed on substitute Copy A of Forms W-2 and W-2P. In the place of the GPO symbol, the Employer Identification Number (EIN) of the forms printer must be printed in the bottom margin on the face of each individual sheet of Copy A. In addition, the EIN of the forms printer must be printed on the face of the Form W-3 which is filed with SSA.

.17 All printers of substitute or privately printed Forms W-2, W-2P, or W-3 are requested to provide 3 copies of each version of each form to SSA, P.O. Box 2317, Baltimore, Maryland 21235. Paper substitutes conforming to the specifications contained in this procedure may be sent to SSA directly. Paper substitutes requiring IRS consideration and approval should be sent to SSA only after IRS approval has been granted.

SEC. 7. ADDITIONAL INSTRUCTIONS

.01 Arrangement of assembly—Except as provided below, if magnetic media is not used for filing with SSA, the substitute copies of Forms W-2 and W-2P assembly should be arranged in the same order as the official Forms W-2 and W-2P. Copy A first, followed sequentially by perforated sets (Copies 1, B, C, 2, and D). The substitute form to be filed with SSA by the payer must carry the designation Copy A.

1 Copy D for Employer or Payer. It is not required that privately printed substitute forms contain a copy to be retained by payers although payers must be prepared to verify or duplicate this information if it is requested by the IRS or SSA.

(a) If Copy D is provided for the employer or payer, instructions contained on the back of Copy D of the official form must appear on the back of the substitute form Copy D.

(b) If Copy D is not provided for the employer or payer, instructions contained on the back of Copy D of the official form must be furnished on a separate statement to the employer or payer.

2 Additional Copies. Except as provided in the arrangement of the official assemblies, additional copies which may be prepared by payers shall not be placed ahead of the copy "For employee's records," Copy C (Form W-2) or "For Recipient's Records," Copy C (W-2P).

3 Notice to Employees. Instructions similar to those contained on the back of Copy C of the official form should be provided to each employee (recipient). For Form W-2, the social security (FICA) rates applicable for the current tax year must:

(a) appear either on the front or the back of the copy (Copy C) retained by the employee; or

(b) be communicated to the employee via a separate statement.

Note: If you are a Federal employer, you must provide the current rate for hospital insurance benefits (Medicare) for Federal employees. The IRS recommends that the other text on the back of the official form Copy C be provided to the employee.

.02 All privately printed Forms W-2 and W-2P (Copy A) must have the tax year printed on the bottom face of each, using identical type to that of the official format.

.03 The substitute Copy B (or its equal), which the payee is instructed to attach to his/her Federal income tax return, must be at least 24-pound paper (basis 17 x 22-1000), while the other copies furnished the payee should be at least 18-pound paper (basis 17 x 22-1000).

.04 The OCR bond Form W-3 that is filed with SSA must have no printing on the reverse side.

.05 Instructions for Form W-3—Instructions similar to those provided as part of the official form must be provided as part of any substitute Form W-3.

.06 All privately printed Forms W-3 must have the tax year printed on the bottom face of each Form W-3, using identical type to that of the official format.

.07 The copy of the substitute Form W-3 which contains the instructions and is to be retained by the employer should be at least 18-pound paper (basis 17 x 22-1000).

SECTION 8. INSTRUCTIONS FOR PAYERS

.01 Only originals or ribbon copies of Copy A of Forms W-2 and W-2P and of Form W-3 may be filed. Carbon copies and photocopies are not acceptable.

.02 The Service requests the cooperation of the payers in typing or machine printing whenever possible and in providing good quality data entries on the forms, i.e., using black ribbon, inserting data in the middle of blocks, well separated from other printing and guidelines, and taking any other measures that will guarantee clear, sharp images. However, payers are not required to acquire equipment solely for the purpose of preparing these forms.

.03 The Employer Identification Number (EIN) may be entered anywhere in Box 2 along with the Payer's name and address on Copy A of Forms W-2 and W-2P. (If this is done, the EIN need not be entered in Box 3 of either Form W-2 or W-2P.) For Forms W-3, the EIN must be entered where prescribed by the Form W-3 Instructions.

.04 The payer's name, address and EIN may be pre-printed.

.05 State agencies—The amounts of wages paid and employee contributions withheld under a State-Federal Agreement, entered into pursuant to Section 218 of the Social Security Act, may be shown in the space on Form W-2 for Federal Insurance Contribution Act Wages and Employee Tax. In such cases, the identification number assigned by the Social Security Administration to the state (prefixed by 69) should be shown in the employer name and address area block on Form W-2. This "69" number may be pre-printed.

.06 The optional employer's state number may be pre-printed in the employer's (payer's) name, address, and ZIP code box. If this is done, Box 4 of Forms W-2 and W-2P need not be completed, so long as the applicable state taxing authority does not object.

.07 The preparation and filing instructions for Forms W-2 and W-2P are contained in the 1984 Instructions for Forms W-2 and W-2P. The preparation and filing instructions for Form W-3 are contained as part of the 1984 Form W-3 snap set assembly.

.08 To avoid confusion and questions by payees, payers are encouraged to delete the following items from copies of Forms W-2 and W-2P provided to payees:

(1) Form identifying number (e.g., 22222, 55555);

(2) The words "subtotal" and "void" and their boxes;

(3) Any other captions or box number that would not be of any informational use to payees.

.09 Payers are encouraged to use IRS-supplied labels for affixing to all Forms W-3 filed with SSA.

SECTION 9. OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET (OMB) REQUIREMENTS FOR SUBSTITUTE FORMS

Public Law 96-511 requires: (1) OMB approval of IRS tax forms, (2) that each form (all copies) show the OMB approval number and when appropriate, the form's expiration date, and (3) that the form (or it's instructions) state why IRS is collecting the information, how we will use it and whether it must be given to us. The official IRS forms will contain this information.

As it applies to substitute IRS forms this means:

1. All substitute forms (all copies) must show the OMB number and any expiration date as they appear on the official IRS form (see Exhibits A, B, and C).

2. The OMB number (and date) must use one of the following formats:

a. OMB No. XXXX-XXXX (preferred)

or

OMB # XXXX-XXXX

b. OMB No. XXXX-XXXX Expires XXXXXX (mmddyy) (preferred)

or

OMB # XXXX-XXXX
Expires XXXXXX (mmddyy)

3. You must inform the users of your substitute forms of the reasons for IRS collection, use and requirements, as stated in the instructions for the IRS form.

4. The official OMB approval numbers (and expiration date) may be obtained from reproduction proofs, official IRS printed forms, or when approval is requested for a substitute form.

SECTION 10. REPRODUCTION PROOFS

.01 Order blanks for reproduction proofs are mailed annually to requestors of record, and on request to other users. Reproduction copies of Forms W-2 (Copy A), W-2P (Copy A), and W-3 (Page 1) each consists of two parts. Part 1 is line art, i.e., type and ink. Part 2 is a black solid which should be photographically screened by the user to allow a 10%-20% dot pattern when printed in red OCR dropout ink. In some cases where the production method requires the use of something other than a standard dot pattern, the printed value of part 2 must still be 10%-20%. Printers and others wishing to obtain reproduction proofs may send their requests to Internal Revenue Service, Attn: Distribution Manager, PM: S:FM:P—Room 1528, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

.02 A charge of $1 per page will be made for each reproduction proof regardless of page size. Invoices will be mailed after orders have been filled.

SECTION 11. EFFECT ON OTHER PROCEDURES

Rev. Proc. 83-46, 1983-1 C.B. 780, is superseded.

Rev. Proc. 84-45

SECTION 1. BACKGROUND

Rev. Proc. 84-22, page 449, this Bulletin, sets forth areas in which advance rulings or determination letters will not be issued by the Internal Revenue Service. Section 3 of Rev. Proc. 84-22 is entitled, Areas In Which Rulings Or Determination Letters Will Not Be Issued.

Rev. Proc. 84-22 is amplified by adding the following to section 3:

Section 274—Disallowance of Certain Entertainment, Etc., Expenses—Whether a taxpayer who is traveling away from home on business may, in lieu of substantiating the actual cost of meals, deduct a fixed per-day amount for meal expenses that differs from the amount prescribed in Rev. Proc. 83-71, 1983-2 C.B. 590, or any later revenue procedure that modifies Rev. Proc. 83-71.

SECTION 3. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure is effective for all ruling requests on hand in the National Office on May 29, 1984, the date that this revenue procedure is published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin, as well as all requests received thereafter.

SECTION 4. EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE PROCEDURES

Rev. Proc. 84-22 is amplified.

26 CFR 601.201: Rulings and determination letters.
(Also Part I, Sections 170, 501, 509, 521, 4942, 7428; 1.170A-1, 1.501(a)-1, 1.509(a)-1, 1.521-1, 53.4942(b)-1, 1.9100-1)

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

This revenue procedure sets forth revised procedures with regard to applications for recognition of exemption from federal income tax under sections 501 and 521 of the Internal Revenue Code and with respect to revocation or modification of exemption rulings and determination letters, other than those subject to Rev. Proc. 80-30, 1980-1 C.B. 685, (relating to pension, annuity, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans). This revenue procedure also supplements Rev. Proc. 76-34, 1976-2 C.B. 656, with respect to the effects of section 7428 on the classification of organizations under sections 509(a) and 4942(j)(3). See Rev. Proc. 80-27, 1980-1 C.B. 677, for procedures under which exemption may be recognized on a group basis for subordinate organizations affiliated with and under the general supervision or control of a central organization. Also, see Rev. Proc. 72-5, 1972-1 C.B. 709, for information on applications for recognition of exemption filed by certain religious and apostolic organizations. Requests for rulings or determination letters generally are governed by the procedures outlined in Rev. Proc. 83-36, 1983-1 C.B. 763.

SEC. 2. NATURE OF CHANGES

This revenue procedure updates and restates the procedures previously set forth in Rev. Proc. 80-25, 1980-1 C.B. 667, relating to processing requests for exemption. Because protests of initial adverse rulings issued by the Exempt Organizations Technical Branch in the National Office are handled by that office, the term "protest" has been substituted for "appeal" with regard to those cases. In certain declaratory judgment cases, a request for relief under section 1.9100 of the Income Tax Regulations is an additional requirement for exhaustion of administrative remedies. The list of issues to which the declaratory judgment provisions of section 7428 of the Code apply has been clarified. Also, it is made clear that the standards for a substantially complete application apply not only to exemption applications on Form 1023 but others too, and to the notice requirement under section 508(a) as well as the 270 day period of section 7428(b)(2), and that although a substantially complete application may have been submitted, additional information may be necessary before a ruling or determination letter can be issued. An additional item is added to the list of information necessary for a substantially complete application form. Instances are listed in which a key District Director is not required to seek technical advice before proposing revocation of a National Office ruling or technical advice. Finally, section 14.01, dealing with revocation or modification of ruling or determination letters recognizing exemption, has been amended to make it clear that the determination of the effective date of revocation or modification is governed by the section 7805(b) relief procedures outlined in sections 14 and 17 of Rev. Proc. 83-36.

SEC. 3. GENERAL

.01 When used in this revenue procedure, the term "key District Director" means the District Director of one of the 10 key district offices for exempt organization matters.

.02 The term "determination letter" refers to a letter issued by a key District Director, or an Appeals Office in the case of an exemption application, in response to a written inquiry by an individual or an organization that applies to the particular facts involved, and to the principles and precedents previously announced by the National Office. This includes a letter issued on the basis of advice secured from the National Office pursuant to the procedures prescribed herein and in Rev. Proc. 80-26, 1980-1 C.B. 671. The term "ruling" refers to a letter issued by the National Office.

.03 The declaratory judgment provisions of section 7428 of the Code, with regard to this revenue procedure, apply to an actual controversy involving a determination by the Service or a failure by the Service to make a determination with respect to the initial or continuing qualification or classification of an organization under section 501(c)(3) (charitable, educational, etc.); 170(c)(2) (deductibility of contributions); 509(a) (private foundation status); or 4942(j)(3) (operating foundation status).

SEC. 4. FILING AND PROCESSING APPLICATIONS AND RECOGNITION OF EXEMPTIONS

An organization seeking recognition of exempt status under section 501 or 521 of the Code is required to file an application with the key District Director for the Internal Revenue District in which its principal place of business or principal office is located. The 10 key district offices that process the applications, the Internal Revenue districts covered by each, and the regional office designations are as follows:

Key District(s)	IRS Districts Covered
	CENTRAL REGION
Cincinnati	Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis, Louisville, and Parkersburg
	MID-ATLANTIC REGION

	MIDWEST REGION
Chicago	Aberdeen, Chicago, Des Moines, Fargo, Milwaukee, Omaha, St. Louis, St. Paul, and Springfield
	NORTH-ATLANTIC REGION
Brooklyn	Albany, Augusta, Boston, Brooklyn, Buffalo, Burlington, Hartford, Manhattan, Portsmouth, and Providence
	SOUTHEAST REGION
Atlanta	Atlanta, Birmingham, Columbia, Greensboro, Jackson, Jacksonville, and Nashville
	SOUTHWEST REGION
Dallas	Albuquerque, Austin, Cheyenne, Dallas, Denver, Houston, Little Rock, New Orleans, Oklahoma City, and Wichita
	WESTERN REGION

San Francisco	Reno, Salt Lake City, Sacramento, San Jose, and San Francisco
Seattle	Anchorage, Boise, Helena, Portland, and Seattle

SEC. 5. STANDARDS FOR ISSUING RULINGS OR DETERMINATION LETTERS WITH RESPECT TO EXEMPT STATUS

.01 A ruling or determination letter will be issued to an organization, provided its application and supporting documents establish that it meets the particular requirements of the section under which exemption is claimed. Any oral representation of additional facts or modification of facts as represented or alleged in the application for a ruling or determination letter must be reduced to writing over the signature of the taxpayer or authorized representative.

.02 Exempt status will be recognized in advance of operations if proposed operations can be described in sufficient detail to permit a conclusion that the organization will clearly meet the particular requirements of the section under which exemption is claimed. A mere restatement of purposes or a statement that proposed activities will be in furtherance of such purposes will not satisfy this requirement. The organization must fully describe the activities in which it expects to engage, including the standards, criteria, procedures, or other means adopted or planned for carrying out the activities; the anticipated sources of receipts; and the nature of contemplated expenditures. Where the organization cannot demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Service that its proposed activities will be exempt, a record of actual operations may be required before a ruling or determination letter will be issued. In those cases where an organization is unable to describe fully its purposes and activities, a refusal to issue a ruling or determination letter will be considered an initial adverse determination from which administrative appeal or protest rights will be afforded.

.03 Where an application for recognition of exemption does not contain the required information, the application may be returned to the applicant without being considered on its merits with an appropriate letter of explanation. In the case of an application under section 501(c)(3) of the Code that is returned, the applicant will also be informed of the time within which the completed application must be resubmitted in order for the application to be considered as a timely notice within the meaning of section 508(a).

.04 A ruling or determination letter recognizing exemption will not ordinarily be issued if an issue involving the organization's exempt status under section 501 or 521 of the Code is pending in litigation or is under consideration within the Service.

.05 In the case of an application under section 501(c)(3) of the Code, the 270-day period referred to in section 7428(b)(2) will be considered by the Service to begin on the date a substantially completed Form 1023, Application for Recognition of Exemption Under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, is filed with or mailed to the appropriate key District Director. A substantially completed Form 1023 is one that:

1 is signed by an authorized individual;

2 includes an Employer Identification Number (EIN) or a completed Form SS-4, Application for Employer Identification Number;

3 includes information regarding previously filed federal income tax and exempt organization information returns;

4 includes a statement of receipts and expenditures and a balance sheet for the current year and the three preceding years (or the years the organization was in existence, if less than four years). If the organization has not yet commenced operations, or has not completed one accounting period, a proposed budget for two full accounting periods and a current statement of assets and liabilities will be acceptable;

5 includes a statement of proposed activities and a description of anticipated receipts and contemplated expenditures;

6 includes a copy of the organizing or enabling document that is signed by a principal officer or is accompanied by a written declaration signed by an officer authorized to sign for the organization certifying that the document is a complete and accurate copy of the original; and

7 if the organization is a corporation or unincorporated association and it has adopted by-laws, includes a copy that is signed or otherwise verified as current by an authorized officer.

.06 If a Form 1023 does not contain all of the items set out in section 5.05, it will not be further processed and may be returned to the applicant for completion. The 270-day period will not be considered as starting until the date the Form 1023 is refiled with or remailed to the Service with the requested information, or, if remailed and a postmark is not evident, on the date the Service receives a substantially completed Form 1023.

.07 The standards of section 5.05 for a substantially completed application form apply also to applications for recognition of exemption under other paragraphs of section 501(c) of the Code. They also apply to the notice requirement of section 508. Even though an application is considered substantially complete, more information may be required before a ruling or determination letter can be issued.

.08 If the application for recognition of exemption involves an issue where contrary authorities exist, failure to disclose and distinguish significant contrary authorities may result in requests for additional information, which will delay action on the application (see section 7.06 of Rev. Proc. 83-36).

SEC. 6. ISSUING RULINGS OR KEY DISTRICT DETERMINATION LETTERS WITH RESPECT TO EXEMPT STATUS

.01 Under the general procedures outlined in Rev. Proc. 83-36, key District Directors are authorized to issue determination letters involving applications for recognition of exemption under sections 501 and 521 of the Code.

.02 A key District Director will refer to the National Office those applications that present questions the answers to which are not specifically covered by statute or regulations, or by a ruling, opinion, or court decision published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. In addition, key District Directors will refer those applications that have been specifically reserved by revenue procedure and/or Internal Revenue Manual instructions for National Office handling for purposes of establishing uniformity or centralized control of designated categories of cases. The National Office will consider each such application, issue a ruling directly to the organization, and send a copy of the ruling to the key District Director.

.03 If at any time during the course of consideration of an exemption application the organization believes that its case involves an issue on which there is no published precedent or there is nonuniformity between districts, the organization should ask the key District Director to request technical advice from the National Office. See Rev. Proc. 80-26.

.04 If the key District Director proposes to recognize exemption of an organization to which the National Office had issued a previous contrary ruling or technical advice, the key District Director must seek technical advice from the National Office before issuing a determination letter. See Rev. Proc. 80-26.

SEC. 7. WITHDRAWAL OF APPLICATIONS

.01 The Applications for recognition of exemption under section 501 or 521 of the Code may be withdrawn, upon the written request of a principal officer or authorized representative of the organization, at any time prior to the issuance of the initial adverse ruling or determination letter. Even though the application is withdrawn, however, the application and all supporting documents will be retained by the Service and will not be returned to the organization.

.02 The Service will not consider the withdrawal of an application under section 501(c)(3) of the Code as either a failure to make a determination within the meaning of section 7428(a)(2) or as an exhaustion of administrative remedies within the meaning of section 7428(b)(2).

SEC. 8. NATIONAL OFFICE POST REVIEW OF DETERMINATION LETTERS

.01 Some determination letters issued by the key districts will be reviewed in the National Office by the Exempt Organizations Division, or the Corporation Tax Division (for cases under section 521 of the Code), to assure uniform application of the statutes or regulations, or rulings, opinions, or court decisions published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

.02 Where the National Office takes exception to a key district determination letter, the key District Director will be advised. If the organization disagrees with the exception taken, the file will be returned to the National Office. The referral will be treated as a request for technical advice and sections 6, 7, and 8 of Rev. Proc. 80-26 will be followed.

SEC. 9. PROTEST OF INITIAL ADVERSE RULING LETTERS

In the case of an initial adverse ruling letter from the National Office, the organization will be informed of the basis for the conclusion, of its right to file a protest within 30 days, and for a conference in the National Office. If a conference is requested, the conference procedures outlined in section 8 of Rev. Proc. 83-36, will be followed.

SEC. 10. APPEAL OF INITIAL ADVERSE DETERMINATION LETTERS

.01 Upon the issuance of an initial adverse determination letter or a letter proposing revocation or modification of exempt status, the key District Director will advise the organization of its right to appeal the determination by requesting Appeals Office consideration. To do this, the organization must submit to the key District Director within 30 days from the date of the letter, a statement of the facts, law, and arguments in support of its position. The organization must also state whether it wishes an Appeals office conference.

.02 Any determination letter issued on the basis of National Office technical advice may not be appealed to the Appeals Office on issues that were the subject of the technical advice.

.03 Upon receipt of an organization's request for Appeals office consideration, the key district will, if it maintains its position, forward the request and the case file to the Chief of the appropriate Appeals Office.

SEC. 11. CONSIDERATION AT THE APPEALS OFFICE

.01 The Appeals Office, after considering the organization's appeal and any additional information developed in conference, will advise the organization of its decision and issue the appropriate determination letter to the organization.

.02 Organizations should make full presentation of the facts, circumstances, and arguments at the initial level of consideration by the Appeals Office, since submission of additional facts, circumstances, and arguments may result in suspension of appeal procedures and referral of the case back to the key district for additional consideration. Any oral representation of additional facts or modification of facts originally represented or alleged must be reduced to writing.

.03 If the Appeals Office believes that an exemption or private foundation status issue is not covered by published precedent or that there is non-uniformity, the Appeals Office must request technical advice from the National Office. Unless the Appeals Office feels that the conclusions reached by the National Office should be reconsidered and promptly requests such consideration, the case will be disposed of by the Appeals Office on the basis of the decision in the technical advice memorandum. See Rev. Proc. 80-26.

.04 If at any time during the course of Appeals Office consideration, the organization believes that its case involves an issue on which there is no published precedent or there is non-uniformity between districts, the organization should ask the Appeals Office to request technical advice from the National Office. See Rev. Proc. 80-26.

.05 If the proposed disposition by the Appeals Office is contrary to a prior National Office technical advice or ruling concerning this organization, the proposed disposition will be submitted through the Office of the Regional Director of Appeals to the Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations), or, in a case under section 521 of the Code, to the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical). Unless the Appeals Office feels that the conclusions reached by the National Office should be reconsidered and promptly requests such consideration, the decision of the National Office will be followed by the Appeals Office. In any event, the Assistant Commissioner or the Associate Chief Counsel will make the final decision.

SEC. 12. EXHAUSTION OF ADMINISTRATIVE REMEDIES FOR DECLARATORY JUDGMENT PURPOSES

.01 Section 7428 of the Code, in part, requires that an organization seeking initial or continuing recognition of exemption under section 501(c)(3) must exhaust its administrative remedies by taking timely, reasonable steps to secure a determination prior to filing for declaratory judgment. Those steps and administrative remedies required to be exhausted within the Service are:

1 the filing of a substantially completed application Form 1023 pursuant to section 5.05 or the filing of a request for a determination of foundation status pursuant to Rev. Proc. 76-34;

2 in appropriate cases, requesting relief pursuant to section 1.9100 of the Income Tax Regulations regarding applications for extension of the time for making an election or application for relief from tax (see Rev. Proc. 79-63, 1979-2 C.B. 578);

3 the timely submission of all additional information requested by the Service to perfect an exemption application or request for determination of private foundation status; and

4 exhaustion of all administrative appeals available within the Service pursuant to sections 10 and 11 or protest of an initial adverse ruling pursuant to section 9 in National Office original jurisdiction exemption application cases.

.02 An organizaiton will in no event be deemed to have exhausted its administrative remedies prior to the earlier of:

1 the completion of the steps in section 12.01, and the sending by certified or registered mail of a notice of final determination; or

2 the expiration of the 270-day period described in section 7428(b)(2) of the Code in a case where the Service has not issued a notice of final determination and the organization has taken, in a timely manner, all reasonable steps to secure a ruling or determination.

.03 The steps described in section 12.01 will not be considered completed until the Service has had a reasonable time to act upon the appeal or protest as the case may be.

.04 A notice of final determination to which section 7428 of the Code applies is a ruling or determination letter, sent by certified or registered mail, which holds that the organization is not described in section 501(c)(3) or 170(c)(2), is a private foundation as defined in section 509(a), is not a private operating foundation as defined in section 4942(j)(3), or is a public charity described in a part of section 509 or section 170(b)(1)(A) other than the part under which the organization requested classification.

SEC. 13. EFFECT OF RULINGS OR DETERMINATION LETTERS RECOGNIZING EXEMPTION

.01 A ruling or determination letter recognizing exemption is usually effective as of the date of formation of an organization if its purposes and activities during the period prior to the date of the ruling or determination letter were consistent with the requirements for exemption. However, for special rules regarding organizations formed after October 9, 1969, applying for recognition of exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code, see section 508(a) and Rev. Rul. 77-208, 1977-1 C.B. 153. If the organization is required to alter its activities or to make substantive amendments to its enabling instrument, the ruling or determination letter recognizing its exempt status will be effective as of the date specified therein. If a nonsubstantive amendment is made, exemption will ordinarily be recognized as of the date of formation. Examples of non-substantive amendments include correction of a clerical error in the enabling instrument or the addition of a dissolution clause where the activities of the organization prior to the ruling or determination are consistent with the requirements for exemption.

.02 A ruling or determination letter recognizing exemption may not be relied upon if there is a material change, inconsistent with exemption, in the character, the purpose, or the method of operation of the organization.

SEC. 14. REVOCATION OR MODIFICATION OF RULINGS OR DETERMINATION LETTERS RECOGNIZING EXEMPTION

.01 A ruling or determination letter recognizing exemption may be revoked or modified by (1) a notice to the taxpayer to whom the ruling or determination letter originally was issued, (2) enactment of legislation or ratification of a tax treaty, (3) a decision of the United States Supreme Court, (4) issuance of temporary or final regulations, or (5) issuance of a revenue ruling, a revenue procedure, or other statement published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. The revocation or modification may be retroactive if the organization omitted or misstated a material fact, operated in a manner materially different from that originally represented, or, in the case of organizations to which section 503 of the Code applies, engaged in a prohibited transaction with the purpose of diverting corpus or income of the organization from its exempt purpose and such transaction involved a substantial part of the corpus or income of such organization. Where there is a material change, inconsistent with exemption, in the character, the purpose, or the method of operation of an organization, revocation or modification will ordinarily take effect as of the date of such material change. In cases where a ruling or determination letter was issued in error or is no longer in accord with the holding of the Service, when section 7805(b) relief is granted (see sections 14 and 17 of Rev. Proc. 83-36), retroactivity of the revocation or modification ordinarily will be limited to a date not earlier than that on which the original ruling or determination letter is modified or revoked.

.02 In the case of a revocation or modification, the appeal and conference procedures are the same as set out in sections 10 and 11, including the right of the organization to request that the key District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, seek technical advice from the National Office. If the case involves a status issue on which the National Office had issued a previous contrary ruling or technical advice, the key District Director generally must seek technical advice from the National Office. The key District Director does not have to seek technical advice if the prior ruling or technical advice has been revoked by subsequent contrary published precedent or if the proposed revocation involves a subordinate unit of an organization that holds a group exemption letter issued by the National Office, the National Office ruling or technical advice was issued under the Internal Revenue Code of 1939 or prior revenue acts, or if the ruling was issued in response to Form 4653 Notification Concerning Foundation Status.

.03 The provisions of section 10 and 11 relating to appeal and conference rights before a final revocation notice is issued are not applicable to matters where delay would be prejudicial to the interests of the Internal Revenue Service (such as in cases involving fraud, jeopardy, the imminence of the expiration of the statute of limitations, or where immediate action is necessary to protect the interests of the Government).

SEC. 15. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Rev. Proc. 80-25 is superseded. Sections 3.01, 3.04, 4.02, 6.02, 6.04, and 8.02 of Rev. Proc. 76-34 are modified.

SEC. 16. EFFECTIVE DATE

Rev. Proc. 84-47

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of the revenue procedure is to describe situations that involve the computation of the 15-month period for notification under section 1.508-1(a)(2)(i) of the Income Tax Regulations where an organization makes nonsubstantive amendments to its governing instrument.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

01. Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code provides for the exemption from federal income tax of organizations organized and operated exclusively for charitable purposes. Section 1.501(c)(3)-1(a)(1) of the regulations provides that in order to be exempt as an organization described in section 501(c)(3), an organization must be both organized and operated exclusively for one or more of the purposes in such section. If an organization fails to meet either the organizational test or the operational test, it is not exempt. The organizational test is set forth in section 1.501(c)(3)-1(b).

02. Section 508(a) of the Code provides, with certain exceptions, that an organization organized after October 9, 1969, shall not be treated as an organization described in section 501(c)(3) unless, within the time prescribed in the regulations, it gives notice that it is applying for recognition of exempt status. Section 1.508-1(a)(2)(i) of the regulations provides that notice must be given 15 months from the end of the month in which the organization was organized. Notice is given by submitting a properly completed and executed Form 1023, Application for Recognition of Exemption, to the appropriate key District Director. Section 1.508-1(a)(2)(iii) provides that an organization shall be considered "organized" on the date it becomes an organization described in section 501(c)(3) (determined without regard to section 508(a)). Section 508(c) and section 1.508-1(a)(3) describe organizations such as churches, that are not subject to section 508(a) notice requirements.

.03 Section 13.01 of Rev. Proc. 84-46, page 541, this Bulletin, provides that a ruling or determination letter recognizing exemption is usually effective as of the date of formation of an organization of its purposes and activities during the period prior to the date of the ruling or determination letter were consistent with the requirements for exemption. If an organization is required to alter its activities or to make substantive amendments to its enabling instrument, the ruling or determination letter recognizing its exempt status will be effective as of the date the changes are made. It is the administrative practice of the Service to recognize exemption from the date of formation in situations where nonsubstantive amendments to an enabling document are subsequently made. For an example of a nonsubstantive change, see section 13.01, Rev. Proc. 84-46, page 541. Where only a nonsubstantive amendment is made, for purposes of the notice requirement of section 1.508-1(a)(2)(i), the organization will be considered organized, within the meaning of section 1.508-1(a)(2)(iii), on the date it is organized under appropriate state law. See Rev. Rul 75-290, 1975-2 C.B. 215.

SEC. 3. APPLICATION.

.01 The following examples illustrate the effective date for recognition of exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code where a nonsubstantive governing instrument amendment is made. To clarify its satisfaction of the organizational test, the applicant adds a specific dissolution clause to its governing instrument insuring preservation of its assets for charitable purposes. All examples assume that the organizations have otherwise complied with the requirements of section 501(c)(3) since their incorporation. All examples also assume that the organizations are not described in section 508(c).

1. An organization submits an application within 15 months from the end of the month in which it was organized. At the request of the Service, it makes a nonsubstantive amendment to its enabling instrument. Under these circumstances, the organization's exemption will be effective as of its date of incorporation because it filed notice within 15 months from the date it was deemed "organized" for section 501(c)(3) purposes.

2. An organization submits an application more than 15 months from the end of the month in which it was organized. The Service requests a nonsubstantive amendment to its enabling instrument and the amendment is made three months subsequent to the submission of an application for exemption. Under the circumstances, the organization will be recognized as exempt under section 501(c)(3) on the date it submitted its application, even though the amendatory action was completed later.

3. Two years after it was organized, an organization makes a nonsubstantive amendment to its enabling instrument. Within 15 months after the date of the amendment, the organization applies for exemption. Under these circumstances, the organization will be recognized as exempt effective as of the date it sent an application to the Service because it failed to file notice within 15 months from the end of the month in which it was organized under applicable state law.

02. The principles set forth in the three situations in 01. above are equally applicable to corporations, trusts, and unincorporated associations.

SEC. 4 EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE PROCEDURES

Section 13.01 of Rev. Proc. 84-46 is amplified.

APPLICATIONS FOR EXTENSIONS OF THE TIME FOR FILING NOTICE UNDER SECTION 508(a)

The Service will give consideration to applying the Commissioner's discretionary authority under section 1.9100-1 of the regulations to extend the time for satisfying the notice requirement of section 508(a) of the Code.

Under section 1.9100-1 of the regulations the Commissioner has discretion, upon a showing of good cause by a taxpayer, to grant a reasonable extension of the time fixed by the regulations for making an election or application for relief in respect of tax under subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code, provided:

(1) the time for making the election or application is not expressly prescribed by the statute;

(2) the request for the extension is filed with the Commissioner within a period of time the Commissioner considers reasonable under the circumstances; and

(3) it is shown to the Commissioner's satisfaction that granting the extension will not jeopardize the Government's interests.

Rev. Proc. 79-63, 1979-2 C.B. 578, sets forth information and representations that must be furnished by the taxpayer and some factors that will be taken into consideration in determining whether such extensions will be granted.

Rev. Proc. 84-48

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this Revenue Procedure is to set forth procedures for the submission of requests for rulings to the Internal Revenue Service under sections 103 and 7478 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, and to update the procedures described in Rev. Proc. 79-4, 1979-1 C.B. 483. References in this Revenue Procedure to section 103 of the Code also refer to section 103A of the Code.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Section 7478 of the Code allows, under the conditions specified therein, the issuer (and only the issuer) of prospective obligations to petition the United States Tax Court for a declaratory judgment in a case of actual controversy involving a determination by the Service, or a failure by the Service, to make a determination, with respect to whether prospective obligations are described in section 103(a).

.02 The Tax Court may not issue a declaratory judgment or decree under section 7478 of the Code in any proceeding unless it determines that the issuer of the prospective obligations has exhausted all available administrative remedies within the Service.

.03 Any ruling request that is made by an issuer is subject to section 7478 of the Code and, accordingly, must be made in full compliance with this Revenue Procedure. Instructions for making a ruling request by parties other than the issuer of an obligation and for requesting rulings that do not address all possible tax issues under section 103 of the Code are set forth in Rev. Proc. 84-49.

SEC. 3. REQUESTS FOR RULINGS UNDER SECTION 103

.01 A request for a ruling under section 103 of the Code is to submitted and signed, under the penalty of perjury, 1) by an authorized officer of the issuer, or 2) in the case of a joint submission, by both an authorized officer of the issuer and a party with a material financial interest in the issuance of the governmental obligations.

.02 In those instances in which an authorized representative is retained, the request for a ruling must be submitted with powers of attorney that are properly executed and that are signed 1) by an authorized officer of the issuer, or 2) in the case of a joint submission, by both an authorized officer of the issuer and a party with a material financial interest in the issuance of the governmental obligations.

.03 Each request for a ruling must contain a complete and detailed statement of all facts relating to the prospective obligations, and must comply with the requirements of Revenue Procedure 84-1, page 342, this Bulletin, to the extent that Rev. Proc. 84-1 is not inconsistent with this Revenue Procedure. Each request for a ruling must be submitted in duplicate and must be accompanied by two copies of all relevant documents, including copies of state statutes, bond resolutions, bond indentures, leases, management contracts, output contracts and other agreements. However, relevant facts reflected in the documents submitted must be included in the body of the ruling request and not merely incorporated by reference, and must be accompanied by an analysis of their bearing on the issue or issues specifying pertinent provisions. In addition, in order to assist the Internal Revenue Service in making the deletions required by section 6110(c) of the Code, each request for a ruling must be accompanied by a deletion statement submitted in accordance with section 601.201 of the Statement of Procedural Rules (26 CFR Part 601).

.04 Each request for a ruling must contain a statement of all reasons and legal authority that are pertinent in determining whether prospective obligations are described in section 103(a) of the Code. Thus, for example, a request for a ruling that interest on prospective obligations to provide an airport facility will be excludable from gross income under section 103(a) must contain a statement of facts, reasons, and legal authority that will enable the Service to determine whether the prospective obligations will be 1) issued by or on behalf of a state or local governmental unit, 2) industrial development bonds within the meaning of section 103(b)(2), 3) obligations which are issued as part of an issue substantially all of the proceeds of which will be used to provide facilities described in section 103(b)(4)(D), 4) obligations not held by persons described in section 103(b)(13), 5) in compliance with the maturity requirements of section 103(b)(14), 6) obligations that are not arbitrage bonds within the meaning of section 103(c)(2), 7) in registered form within the meaning of section 103(j), and 8) in compliance with the public approval requirements of section 103(k) and the information reporting requirement of section 103(l).

SEC. 4. ISSUING RULING LETTERS

.01 The 180-day period referred to in section 7478(b)(2) of the Code will be considered by the Service to begin on the date that a ruling request that complies with section 3 of this Revenue Procedure is received by the National Office of the Internal Revenue Service. Upon receipt of a request for a ruling, the Service will send a written acknowledgment to the requester. If a request for a ruling does not comply with all the requirements of section 3, it will not be processed further and the requester will be sent a letter that will point out the requirements that have not been met. The 180-day period will not be considered as starting until the date an amended request for ruling containing the additional information requested by the Service is received by the National Office of the Internal Revenue Service.

.02 Although the Service may initially determine that a request for a ruling complies with section 3 of this Revenue Procedure, and thus begin the 180-day period described above, the Service may, nevertheless, request additional information in support of a request for ruling. A failure to timely submit additional information requested by the Service will be considered a failure to exhaust administrative remedies within the meaning of section 7478(b)(2) of the Code. Additional information or statements of legal authority will be considered timely submitted to the National Office of the Internal Revenue Service if the letter containing such information is sent within 30 days after the date the additional information is requested. The additional information or statements of legal authority must be signed and submitted in the manner set forth in section 3.01 of this Revenue Procedure.

.03 Any oral representation of additional facts or modification of the facts as represented or alleged in the request for ruling must be confirmed by letter to the National Office of the Internal Revenue Service under the penalty of perjury, within 7 days after the oral representation or modification, by the issuer, and in the case of a joint submission, by a party with a material financial interest and the issuer. Failure to submit a written statement of the oral representation of additional facts or modification of the facts within the time set forth in this subsection will be considered a failure to exhaust administrative remedies within the meaning of section 7478(b)(2) of the Code.

.04 Requests for rulings and additional correspondence or documents (including withdrawals of requests for rulings) submitted with respect to request for rulings will be considered to be sent to the National Office of the Interal Revenue Service if addressed to the Internal Revenue Service, Associate Chief Counsel (Technical), Attention CC:IND:S, - SECTION 103 REQUEST, 1111 Constitution Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

SEC. 5. WITHDRAWAL OF REQUESTS FOR RULINGS

.01 All withdrawals of requests for rulings must be sent in writing to the National Office of the Internal Revenue Service by the issuer or its authorized representative. A withdrawal will not be considered by the Service as a failure to make a determination within the meaning of section 7478(a)(2) of the Code or as an exhaustion of administrative remedies wihtin the meaning of section 7478(b)(2).

SEC. 6. EXHAUSTION OF ADMINISTRATIVE REMEDIES

.01 Section 7478 of the Code requires that an issuer must exhaust its administrative remedies by taking, in a timely manner, all reasonable steps to secure a determination. Those steps and administrative remedies required to be exhausted within the Service are:

1 The filing of a request for ruling that complies with section 3 of this Revenue Procedure; and

2 The timely submission, in writing, of all additional information of representation of additional facts or modification of facts requested by the Service to process a request for ruling.

.02 An issuer will in no event be deemed to have exhausted its administrative remedies prior to the earlier of:

1 The date that the Internal Revenue Service sends by certified or registered mail notice of an unfavorable determination that the prospective obligations are not described in section 103(a) of the Code; or

2 The expiration of the 180-day period described in section 7478(b)(2) of the Code, in a case in which the Service has not made a determination whether the prospective obligations are described in section 103(a), and the issuer has completed the steps in section 6.01 of this Revenue Procedure.

SEC. 7. NOTICE OF DETERMINATION

.01 A notice of determination to which section 7478 of the Code applies is an unfavorable ruling letter, sent by certified or registered mail, which holds that prospective obligations are not described in section 103(a) of the Code.

SEC. 8. INQUIRIES

.01 Inquiries with respect to this Revenue Procedure should refer to its number and should be addressed to the Internal Revenue Service, Associate Chief Counsel (Technical), Attention CC:IND:S, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20024.

SEC. 9. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

This Revenue Procedure supplements Rev. Proc. 84-1, and supersedes Rev. Proc. 79-4.

(Also Part 1, Sections 103, 103A, 7478; 1.103-1.)

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this Revenue Procedure is to set forth the procedures for submission of requests for rulings to the Internal Revenue Service where section 103 of the Internal Revenue Code 1954 applies, in those instances where the requester of the ruling is other than the issuer of the prospective obligation, or in those instances where the issuer of an outstanding obligation makes a ruling request with respect to that obligation. See Rev. Proc. 84-48, for the procedures where the issuer of a prospective bond issue requests a ruling from the Service. References in this Revenue Procedure to section 103 of the Code also refer to section 103A of the Code.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Section 103(a) of the Code provides that gross income does not include interest on 1) the obligations of a state or political subdivision thereof, and 2) qualified scholarship funding bonds. Section 7478 allows the issuer of prospective obligations to petition the United States Tax Court for a declaratory judgment in a case of actual controversy involving a determination by the Service, or a failure by the Service to make a determination, with respect to whether prospective obligations are described in section 103(a). The Tax Court may not issue a declaratory judgment or decree under section 7478 in any proceeding unless it determines that the issuer of the prospective obligations has exhausted all available administrative remedies within the Service. After obligations have been issued, the issuer is no longer eligible to petition the Tax Court for a declaratory judgment under section 7478 of the Code. The issuer may seek a ruling under this Revenue Procedure. See section 3.04, below.

.02 Historically, the Service has issued rulings under section 103 of the Code to an issuer of governmental obligations (issuer) and other parties with a material financial interest in the issuance. In addition, it has been the practice of the Service to issue rulings, in its discretion, that address only certain issues pertaining to whether an obligation is described in section 103(a). In the case of a ruling request that addressed only certain issues, the request would contain a statement of facts, reasons, and legal authority, together with supporting documents, that would discuss only the issue raised by the person requesting the ruling and would not address other issues pertaining to whether the obligations were described in section 103(a). In response to such requests, the Service might issue a ruling in which it would determine, for example, that a dock financed by governmental obligations was a facility described in section 103(b)(4)(D), but would not express an opinion with respect to whether the prospective obligations were otherwise described in section 103(a).

.03 However, to comply with the provisions of section 7478 of the Code, the Service has set forth procedures in Rev. Proc. 84-48 that preclude the issuance of a ruling to an issuer of prospective obligations (or to an issuer and another party in a joint submission) unless the issuer has submitted a statement of facts, reasons, and legal authority, together with supporting documents, that addresses all issues pertaining to whether the prospective obligations are described in section 103(a). See section 3.04 of Rev. Proc. 84-48. The reason for the requirements set forth in Rev. Proc. 84-48 is that, under section 7478, the issuer (and only the issuer) of the prospective obligations may ultimately petition the United States Tax Court to determine whether the prospective obligations are described in section 103(a). See section 2.01 of Rev. Proc. 84-48. Because that determination involves an examination of all issues pertaining to the status of the prospective obligations, the Service must in the ruling process examine and address all issues pertaining to whether the prospective obligations are described in section 103(a) to assure that the issuer has exhausted its administrative remedies.

.04 In the case of requests for rulings made by a person, other than the issuer, with a material financial interest in the issuance of governmental obligations, the Service will issue rulings whether such obligations are arbitrage bonds as defined in section 103(c)(2) of the Code in situations referred to in Rev. Proc. 84-50. Thus, for example, a party that has a material financial interest in the issue may request a ruling that a single computation of yield may be made pursuant to section 1.103-13(c)(1)(ii) of the regulations.

SEC. 3. APPLICATION

.01 In the case of requests for rulings made by a person other than the issuer, to which neither section 3.02 of Rev. Proc. 84-48 (joint submission) nor section 3.04 of this Revenue Procedure (requester subsequently joined by issuer) applies, the Service will continue to issue rulings that address a specific issue pertaining to whether the prospective obligations are described in section 103(a) of the Code. The Service also will issue rulings to these requesters that the prospective obligations are described in section 103(a). The requester must comply with the requirements of any other applicable Revenue Procedures, other than Rev. Proc. 84-48, that relate to submission to the Service of requests for ruling.

.02 In the case of requests for rulings by a person other than the issuer, the failure of the Service to issue a ruling or the issuance of an adverse ruling will not be considered by the Service as either a failure to make a determination within the meaning of section 7478(a)(2) of the Code or an exhaustion of administrative remedies by the issuer within the meaning of section 7478(b)(2).

.03 If, subsequent to the date a person other than the issuer requests a ruling, the issuer of the prospective obligations joins in the request, the Service will treat the request as a joint submission by the issuer and the original requester and the requirements set forth in Rev. Proc. 84-48 must be satisfied. The Service will notify in writing the joint requester of any additional information or documents required. In the case of requests for rulings that are subject to the provisions of this subsection, the 180-day period referred to in section 7478(b)(2) of the Code will be considered to begin on the later of the date the issuer joins in the request or the date set forth in section 4.01 of Rev. Proc. 84-48.

.04 In the case of requests for rulings made by an issuer after the issuance of the governmental obligation, the Service will continue to issue rulings that address one or more tax questions pertaining to whether the outstanding obligation is described in section 103(a) of the Code. The issuer requesting a ruling must comply with the requirements of any other Revenue Procedure, other than Rev. Proc. 84-48, that relate to the submission to the Service of requests for a ruling. If interest has been paid on the obligation, the Service will determine whether the subject of the request should be processed as a ruling request in the National Office or should be referred to the district director having jurisdiction over the matter.

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to set forth procedures for the submission of requests to the Internal Revenue Service for a ruling to which section 103(c) of the Internal Revenue Code and sections 1.103-13, 1.103-14, and 1.103-15 of the Income Tax Regulations apply, in those instances in which the requester of the ruling is other than the issuer of the prospective obligations.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Section 103(a) of the Code provides that gross income does not include interest on 1) the obligations of a state or political subdivision thereof, and 2) qualified scholarship funding bonds. Section 103(c)(1) provides that, with certain exceptions, any arbitrage bond will not be treated as an obligation described in section 103(a)(1) or (2). An arbitrage bond is any obligation that is part of an issue all or a major portion (more than 15 percent) of the proceeds of which are reasonably expected to be used to acquire securities that will produce a yield over the term of the issue that is materially higher than the yield on such issue.

.02 Sections 1.103-13, 1.103-14, and 1.103-15 of the regulations provide rules relating to whether bonds are arbitrage bonds as defined in section 103(c)(2) of the Code. Certain provisions of those regulations describe conditions under which an issuer of prospective obligations must obtain a ruling that such obligations will not be arbitrage bonds if certain actions proposed by the issuer are taken. For example, section 1.103-13(c)(1)(ii), relating to computation of yield, provides that in the case of governmental obligations, the computation must be made separately for each issue of obligations issued by a governmental unit, except that a single computation may be made for two or more issues if, before the issuance of the last issue, the issuer establishes to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the single computation will not distort yield or otherwise tend to defeat the purposes of section 103(c).

There are also other situations, in addition to the example described above, under which an issuer must request a ruling pursuant to provisions of sections 1.103-13, 1.103-14 and 1.103-15 of the regulations that prospective obligations are not arbitrage bonds as defined in section 103(c)(2) of the Code.

.03 Rev. Proc. 84-48, sets forth procedures that preclude the issuance of a ruling to an issuer of prospective obligations unless the issuer has submitted a statement of facts, reasons, and legal authority, together with supporting documents that address all issues pertaining to whether the prospective obligations are described in section 103(a) of the Code. The reason for the requirements set forth in Rev. Proc. 84-48 is that, under section 7478, the issuer (and only the issuer) of the prospective obligations may ultimately petition the United States Tax Court to determine whether the prospective obligations are described in section 103(a).

.04 Rev. Proc. 84-49 compliments Rev. Proc. 84-48 and sets forth the procedures for submitting requests for ruling to which section 103 of the Code applies in those instances in which the requester is other than the issuer of the prospective obligations. Rev. Proc. 84-49 permits parties with a material financial interest in the prospective obligations to obtain rulings that address a specific issue pertaining to whether the prospective obligations are described in section 103(a). The Service also will issue rulings to such requesters that the prospective obligations are described in section 103(a).

SEC. 3. APPLICATION

.01 In the case of requests for rulings made by a person, other than the issuer, with a material financial interest in the issuance of governmental obligations, the Service will issue rulings whether such obligations are arbitrage bonds as defined in section 103(c)(2) of the Code in situations referred to in section 2.02 of this revenue procedure. Thus, for example, a party with a material financial interest in the issue may request a ruling that a single computation of yield may be made pursuant to section 1.103-13(c)(1)(ii) of the regulations. Such requests will be processed under Rev. Proc. 84-49 rather than Rev. Proc. 84-48.

.02 The requester must comply with the requirements of any other applicable revenue procedures, other than Rev. Proc. 84-48, that relate to the submission to the Service of requests for a ruling.

SEC. 4. INQUIRIES

Inquiries with respect to this revenue procedure should refer to its number and should be addressed to the Internal Revenue Service, Associate Chief Counsel (Technical), Attention: CC:IND:S, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

SEC. 5. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

This Revenue Procedure supersedes Rev. Proc. 80-1.

26 CFR 145.1-7: Credit or refund in respect of floor stocks of tires, inner tubes, and tread rubber.

Rev. Proc. 84-51 [1]

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to provide an alternative method of determining the inventory of tires and inner tubes that were held by a dealer on January 1, 1984 for sale on, or in connection with, other articles sold by the dealer, and that qualify for a floor stocks refund of manufacturers excise tax.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Public Law No. 97-424 provided for the repeal of manufacturers excise taxes on the sale of highway-type tires weighing 40 pounds or less, non-highway tires, inner tubes, tread rubber and laminated tires, effective January 1, 1984. A manufacturer, producer, or importer who paid the manufacturers tax imposed under section 4071(a) or (b) of the Internal Revenue Code with respect to tires, inner tubes, and tread rubber that were taxable before January 1, 1984 but not on or after that date, and which were held by a dealer as floor stocks on that date, is entitled to a credit or refund of that tax to the extent provided by, and subject to the conditions of, sections 522(a) and 523(b) of the Highway Revenue Act of 1982 and sections 145.1-1 and 145.1-7 of the Temporary Excise Tax Regulations.

.02 In general, a credit or refund is available if the manufacturer files a claim before October 1, 1984 and, in support of the claim, can show that it is based on requests received from dealers before July 1, 1984 and that the manufacturer has either reimbursed the dealers in the amount of the claim or has received from the dealers written consents to the allowance of the refund or credit.

.03 Section 145.1-1 of the regulations provides specific requirements to be met by dealers requesting reimbursement and manufacturers filing claims for refund. One requirement, in section 145.1-1(c)(3), is that the dealer's request be supported by an inventory statement signed by the dealer or by the dealer's authorized representative. The statement shall declare it is made under penalties of perjury and shall set forth the following information:

(i) The name and address of the dealer and of the claimant (except, if unknown to the dealer, the name and address of the claimant may be inserted by any person in the chain of distribution);

(ii) The identification numbers of the articles, such as their serial, stock, model, type, or class numbers, or some other suitable means of identification;

(iii) A brief description of the articles, such as their common names or designations;

(iv) The quantities of the articles held by the dealer as floor stocks;

(v) The gross vehicle weight rating of the vehicle, if applicable, unless such rating is indicated in the serial number of the article as shown on the inventory statement;

(vi) The employer identification number of the dealer;

(vii) A statement that no other request with respect to any article included in such inventory statement has been made; and (viii) Such other information or computations as requested by the manufacturer.

The dealer may submit this request either directly to the claimant or through another dealer in the chain of distribution. Where a dealer addresses the request to the person whom, from markings on the article, the dealer presumes to be the claimant, the request may be treated as made to the actual claimant if the actual claimant accepts the dealer's request.

.04 Under section 145.1-7 of the regulations the term "dealer" includes a wholesaler, jobber, distributor, or retailer of vehicles who holds tires, inner tubes, or tread rubber for sale on, or in connection with, other articles sold by the retailer.

SEC. 3. PROCEDURE

.01 In the case of original equipment tires and inner tubes held for sale on January 1, 1984 on, or in connection with, a vehicle in a vehicle dealer's inventory, the vehicle dealer may submit the claim and supporting statements through the vehicle manufacturer to the tire manufacturer. As an alternative method of determining the inventory information required by the temporary regulations with respect to such original equipment tires and inner tubes, the vehicle dealer, with the consent of the vehicle manufacturer and the tire manufacturer, may submit, in lieu of an inventory of tires, a certified inventory of new vehicles held for sale on January 1, 1984.

.02 The vehicle manufacturer receiving the request will then determine the number and size of original equipment tires and inner tubes attributable to the dealer's new vehicle inventory. If the vehicle manufacturer purchased tires and inner tubes from more than one manufacturer, the vehicle manufacturer may apportion the tire inventory among those manufacturers in proportion to its purchases of each size and type of tire or inner tube from each tire manufacturer during the most recent four consecutive quarter or twelve consecutive month period ending before January 1, 1984 for which it has records available.

.03 Also, the vehicle manufacturer, with the consent of the tire manufacturer, may act as the tire manufacturer's agent for receipt of requests for reimbursement and may consolidate the requests and apportioned inventory statements for forwarding to the tire manufacturer.

SEC. 4. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure is effective January 1, 1984.

26 CFR 601.201: Rulings and determination letters.

Rev. Proc. 84-52

SECTION 1. BACKGROUND

Rev. Proc. 84-22, page 449, this Bulletin, contains in section 4 a list of those areas of the Internal Revenue Code under the jurisdiction of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical) in which rulings or determination letters will not ordinarily be issued.

SEC. 2. PROCEDURE

Rev. Proc. 84-22 is modified by deleting from section 4.01 the following subsection:

12 Sections 304 and 357.—Redemption Through Use of Related Corporations; Assumption of Liability.—A transaction similar to that described in Rev. Rul. 80-240, 1980-2 C.B. 116, holding that sections 304(a)(1) and 357(a) of the Code are inapplicable because there was no assumption of liability, unless the taxpayer can satisfy the Internal Revenue Service that the liability was incurred by the taxpayer as a mere intermediary agent for the newly created corporate transferee. To establish this, the taxpayer must submit to the Internal Revenue Service documented evidence, composed at the time the liability was incurred, which indicates that the unrelated lender had agreed to release the transferor-borrower from any and all obligation on the liability in favor of the corporate transferee. Further, the taxpayer must show, or represent to the Internal Revenue Service that the transfer and assumption actually occurred, or will actually occur within 12 months of the date the debt was incurred.

SEC. 3. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure will apply to all ruling requests dealing with transactions governed by section 304(b)(3) of the Code as enacted by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA) (i.e., in general it will apply to transfers occuring after August 31, 1982, in taxable years ending after such date). The Service, will continue its present ruling policy on transactions described in section 4.0112 of Rev. Proc. 84-22 that are not governed by section 304(b)(3) as enacted by TEFRA.

SEC. 4. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Rev. Proc. 84-22 is modified.

BACKGROUND

On April 12, 1983, the FEDERAL REGISTER published miscellaneous amendments to the statement of procedural rules (48 F.R. 15623) [1983-1 C.B. 799]. The amendments were issued under the authority contained in 5 U.S.C. 301 and 552.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER H, PART 601—STATEMENT OF PROCEDURAL RULES

MISCELLANEOUS AMENDMENTS

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Amendment of Statement of Procedural Rules.

SUMMARY: This document contains miscellaneous amendments to the Statement of Procedural Rules (SPR). The SPR sets forth the procedural rules of the Internal Revenue Service for all taxes administered by the Service as well as certain rules that apply to the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. These amendments update the SPR and make certain changes in the Service's procedure.

DATE: The amendments are effective May 9, 1984.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Duane H. Pellervo of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, Attention: CC:LR:T (202-566-3458, not a toll-free number).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains amendments to the SPR (26 CFR Part 601). The amendments are issued under the authority contained in 5 U.S.C. 301 and 552.

These amendments will be described in order of the sections of the SPR being amended.

SECTION 601.105(c)(2)(i): FIELD EXAMINATION

Procedures for reviewing unagreed field examination case files have been revised to eliminate, in some cases, mandatory technical review before the examination report and 30 day letter are sent to the taxpayer. In all cases, however, Centralized Services will perform a computational and procedural review before the report is sent to the taxpayer. The amendment conforms the SPR to this procedure.

SECTION 601.401(a)(3): EMPLOYMENT TAXES; COLLECTION METHODS

This amendment adds a cross-reference to Rev. Proc. 81-48, 1981-2 C.B. 623, which provides guidance in calculating an employee's wages when the employee tax under chapter 21 of the Code is paid by the employer without deducting that amount from the employee's pay. The revenue procedure reflects an amendment made by section 1141 of the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1980 [Pub. L. 96-499, 1980-2 C.B. 509], under which employee FICA taxes paid by the employer without deduction from pay are included in wages unless the wages are paid for domestic service or agricultural labor. See I.R.C. §3121(a)(6)(A) and 3306(b)(6)(A).

SECTION 601.502(b)(1)(iv) AND RELATED PROVISIONS: RECOGNITION OF ENROLLED ACTUARIES TO PRACTICE

Several amendments have been made to conform the SPR to Treasury Department Circular No. 230, 31 CFR §10.3(d), which provides that enrolled actuaries may practice before the Internal Revenue Service if they meet certain requirements. Such practice is limited to matters relating to specifically enumerated statutory provisions. A new subdivision is added to section 601.502(b)(1), and conforming amendments are made to sections 601.502(b)(5), 601.503(a) and (c), and 601.504(d)(2) and (e).

SECTION 601.502(b)(4): EMPLOYEES OF PERSONS RECOGNIZED TO PRACTICE

This section is amended to remove the inference that employees of persons recognized to practice can only receive from the Internal Revenue Service "information as to the status of tax cases." As amended, the section provides that "returns or return information" will be made available to the employee if the employer specifically designates the employee to receive such material, regardless of whether such material relates "to the status of tax cases." Language is also added to emphasize that the power of attorney or tax information authorization, if appropriate, must provide the representative with sufficient authority to designate the employee. Under an amendment to section 601.504(a) contained herein, a completed Form 2848 or general power of attorney is sufficient for this purpose, even absent specific authorization. A tax information authorization, however, must specifically authorize such a delegation.

SECTION 601.502(c)(1): REQUIREMENT OF POWER OF ATTORNEY

Two amendments have been made to conform the SPR to Form 2848 and the Instructions for Form 2848. Section 601.502(c)(1)(ii), which provides that a representative cannot execute a waiver of restriction on assessment or collection of a deficiency in tax without a power of attorney, is broadened to include offers of waiver. In addition, the requirement that authorized acts be specified in the power of attorney is deleted with respect to most of the functions for which a power of attorney is required, provided that Form 2848 or a general power of attorney employing similar authorizing language is used. (Form 2848 authorizes the attorney-in-fact "to perform any and all acts the principal(s) can perform" respecting the specified tax matters.) Specific authority is still required, however, in order to receive refund checks and sign returns. If the taxpayer wishes to prohibit the representative from performing any acts, including those for which a power of attorney is required, language to that effect should be included in the power of attorney.

SECTION 601.502(c)(2)(ii): REQUIREMENT OF A TAX INFORMATION AUTHORIZATION

Section 601.502(c)(2)(ii) is clarified by providing that a tax information authorization is not required if the representative has already filed a power of attorney in the matter which is "sufficient to permit the performance of" one or more acts for which a power of attorney is required. Prior to amendment, the section referred to a power of attorney filed by the representative "in order to perform" such acts.

SECTION 601.504(a): FORMAL REQUIREMENTS FOR POWERS OF ATTORNEY AND TAX INFORMATION AUTHORIZATIONS

Several clarifying and conforming amendments are made to this section. The requirement that tax matters to which the representative's authority extends must be specified is clarified by enumerating the specific information that must be included in the power of attorney or tax information authorization. In addition, the SPR is conformed to Form 2848 by providing that the power of attorney need not specify the acts the representative is authorized to perform. A completed Form 2848 or general power of attorney authorizing the representative to perform any and all acts the taxpayer can perform is sufficient, except that specific authority is still required in order to receive refund checks and sign returns. In accord with this amendment, the provision on substitution of representatives or delegation of authority to other representatives is revised to eliminate the requirement that such acts must be specifically authorized in the power of attorney. Such authority cannot be granted through a tax information authorization, however, unless specified therein. Since the provision stating that the power of attorney need not include the names of representatives who may be substituted (or to whom authority may be delegated) is unnecessary, it has been removed.

SECTION 601.506(a): NOTICES GIVEN RECOGNIZED REPRESENTATIVES

This section is amended by deleting the rule that notices and communications containing confidential information cannot be given to the taxpayer's representative unless the power of attorney or tax information authorization specifically authorizes the representative to receive such notices and communications. New language is added to provide that notices will be sent to the representative first named on the power of attorney or tax information authorization if the taxpayer does not designate a representative to receive notices.

SECTION 601.702(f)(9): PREPAYMENT OF FEES

This amendment provides that the Revenue Service will require prepayment of search or duplication fees if previous fees have not been paid. In addition, payment of the previous fees may be required before new requests are honored. Generally, these rules apply if the person on behalf of whom a current request is made is the person on behalf of whom the prior request was made. With respect to both the current and prior requests, such person is deemed to be the person in whose name the request is (or was) made unless the request clearly indicates (or identified) another person as the principal.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291; PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT OF 1980

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required. The reporting requirement contained in §601.502(b)(1)(iv), as added by this document, has been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. The reporting requirement has been approved by OMB.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these amendments to the Statement of Procedural Rules is Duane H. Pellervo of the Legislation and Regulations, Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service participated in developing the amendments both on matters of substance and style.

The right to receive refund checks and sign returns, however, must be specifically granted in Form 2848 or a general power of attorney. If the taxpayer wishes to exclude granting authority to perform any specific acts (including acts for which a power of attorney is required by this paragraph (c)), language excluding such acts should be inserted in the power of attorney. ***

Par. 4. Section 601.503 is amended as follows:

1. The third sentence of paragraph (a) is amended by removing the words "or an enrolled agent" and by adding in their place the words "an enrolled agent, or an enrolled actuary," and by removing the words "paragraph (b)(1)(i) and (ii), and (iii)" and by adding in their place the words "paragraph (b)(1)(i), (ii), (iii), and (iv)".

2. Paragraph (c) is amended by removing the words "or enrolled agent" and by adding in their place the words "enrolled agent, or enrolled actuary" and by removing the words "or (iii)" and by adding in their place the words "(iii), or (iv)".

Par. 5. Section 601.504 is revised as follows:

1. So much of paragraph (a) as precedes the sixth sentence is revised to read as set forth below.

2. Paragraph (d)(2) is amended by removing the words "or (iii)" and by adding in their place the words "(iii), or (iv)".

3. Paragraph (e) is amended by removing the words "or (iii)" and by adding in their place the words "(iii), or (iv)".

§601.504 Requirement for execution, attestation, acknowledgement or witnessing, and certification of copies of power of attorney and tax information authorization.

(a) Formal requirements. The use of technical language in the preparation of a power of attorney or a tax information authorization is not necessary, but the instrument should clearly express the taxpayer's intention as to the scope of the authority of the representative, and must show the type of tax involved, the federal tax form number, and the year(s) or period(s) involved. If the power of attorney or tax information authorization is being used for an estate tax matter, it must also show the date of death of the decedent. A power of attorney or tax information authorization thus may relate to more than one matter as, for example, a tax information authorization which relates to a taxpayer's income taxes for several different taxable years. If the taxpayer wishes to authorize the taxpayer's representative to perform one or more of the acts set forth in paragraph (c)(1) of §601.502 for which a power of attorney is required by the Revenue Service, the power of attorney must clearly specify which act or acts the representative is authorized to perform. In the alternative, a Form 2848 or general power of attorney authorizing the representative to perform any and all acts the taxpayer can perform with respect to the specified tax matters may be used. If this alternative is chosen, care should be taken to specifically exclude granting authority to perform any acts otherwise authorized by the power of attorney which the taxpayer does not wish to authorize. This alternative does not permit the representative to receive refund checks or sign returns unless such acts are specified in the Form 2848 or general power of attorney. This alternative does permit the taxpayer's representative, without a specific grant of authority, to make substitution of representatives or delegate authority to other representatives. (A tax information authorization, Form 2848-D, does not convey authority to make such substitution or delegation absent a specific grant of authority therein.) Such substitution or delegation, when it occurs, must be evidenced by a statement signed by the representative named in the power of attorney (or tax information authorization which specifically authorizes such substitution or delegation). ***

Par. 6. Paragraph (a) of §601.506 is revised as follows:

1. Paragraph (a) is revised by removing from the second sentence the words "and, except with respect to a ruling, which specifically authorizes the representative to receive such notices and communications."

2. Paragraph (a) is revised by removing the seventh and eighth sentences and by adding a new sentence in place of those sentences, to read as set forth below.

§601.506 Notice to be given to recognized representatives; delivery of refund checks to recognized representatives.

(a)  In a case in which the taxpayer does not designate which representative is to receive notices, it will be the practice of the Revenue Service to give notices to the representative first named on the instrument which reflects the latest date. ***

* * * * *

Par. 7. Section 601.702 is revised by adding a new paragraph (f)(9), to read as set forth below.

§601.702 Publications and public inspection.

(f) Fees for services. ***

(9) Prepayment of fees. If previous search or duplication fees have not been paid by a person making a request for records, the Service will require an advance payment of fees before processing the request. In addition, payment of all outstanding fees may be required before current requests are honored. The "person making a request" for purposes of this paragraph (f)(9) is the person in whose name a request is made, except that if such person is making the request on behalf of another person whose identity is apparent on the face of the request (including attached documents), such other person is considered the "person making a request." The person who made the prior request with respect to which fees are outstanding is identified in the same manner.

These amendments to the Statement of Procedural Rules are issued under the authority contained in 5 U.S.C. 301 and 552.

SUPPLEMENTAL INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under sections 170(b)(1)(A) and 501(e) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. These proposed amendments are to be issued to conform the regulations to section 109(a) of the Revenue and Expenditure Control Act of 1968 (82 Stat. 269)[Pub. L. 90-364, 1968-2 C.B. 715, 733] and section 1312(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat.

1730) [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 206] and are issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Code (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

HISTORY

Prior to the enactment of section 501(e), the law as to the tax status of shared hospital service organizations was uncertain. The Service took the position that if two or more tax exempt hospitals created an entity to perform commercial services for them, that entity was not entitled to exemption. Rev. Rul. 54-305, 1954-2 C.B. 127. That position, however, was rejected in Hospital Bureau of Standards and Supplies, Inc. v. United States, 158 F. Supp. 560 (Ct. Cl. 1958). After expressly noting the uncertainty in the law and recognizing the ever increasing cost of hospital services, Congress enacted subsection (e) of section 501, effective for taxable years ending after June 28, 1968.

COOPERATIVE HOSPITAL SERVICE ORGANIZATIONS IN GENERAL

The purpose of section 501(e) is to exempt from taxation a cooperative organization which provides specified services to exempt hospitals. These cooperatives are organized and operated to achieve economies of scale for their patron-hospitals by performing administrative and other similar services on a joint basis and are afforded tax treatment which is similar to that of their patron-hospitals. Section 501(e) limits the services which such a cooperative may perform on a centralized basis to the following: data processing, purchasing warehousing, billing and collection, food, clinical, industrial engineering, laboratory, printing, communications, record center, and personnel. In 1969, the Service emphasized that an organization seeking to qualify under section 501(e) may perform only one or more of these specifically enumerated services. Rev. Rul. 69-160, 1969-1 C.B. 147, held that a hospital service organization which performed laundry services for its patron-hospitals did not meet the requirements of section 501(e) and therefore did not qualify for exemption under any other provision of the Code. That position has been upheld in HCSC-Laundry v. United States, 450 U.S. 1 (1981). The proposed regulations therefore limit the activities of cooperative hospital service organizations solely to those specified in section 501(e) which is the exclusive and controlling section governing the exemption of such organizations.

The proposed regulations also require that the specified services must be performed solely for two or more patron-hospitals, all of which are recognized as exempt under section 501(c)(3) or owned by the United States or a State or one of its political subdivisions. The proposed regulations recognize, however, that the specified services may also be performed for other cooperative hospital service organizations meeting the requirements of section 501(e). Moreover, because a section 501(e) organization may only perform specified services for specified organizations, it cannot have unrelated business taxable income as defined in section 512 (other than that indicated in §1.501(e)-1(b)(4)).

The proposed regulations additionally require that the hospital service organization be organized and operated on a cooperative basis, that any capital stock be held by its patron-hospitals (no dividends, however, may be paid on such stock), and that the organization allocates or pays all net earnings to such patrons within 8½ months of the close of its taxable year. Allocations or payments must be made on the basis of the percentage of the services performed for each patron-hospital.

Although section 501(e)(2) requires that "all net earnings" be allocated or paid, the proposed regulations recognize that the retention of an amount for retiring indebtedness, expanding services or for other necessary purposes is not inconsistent with the requirements of section 501(e). In addition, although all outstanding capital stock of the organization must be held by its patron-hospitals, the proposed regulations recognize that not all patron-hospitals transacting business with the organization need have voting rights in the organization. However, the proposed regulations require that, where the organization has both voting and nonvoting patron-hospitals, the percentage of services done with nonvoting patrons may not exceed the percentage of services done with voting patrons. This provision is applicable to both stock and membership cooperatives so that either type of cooperative must do more than 50 percent of its business with voting patrons.

Conforming changes are also made under §1.170A-9(c)(1) and §1.501(k)-1 of the Income Tax Regulations.

NONAPPLICABILITY OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Treasury Department has determined that this Regulation is not subject to review under Executive Order 12291 or the Treasury or Office of Management and Budget implementation of the Order dated April 29, 1983.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT

Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking which solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these proposed regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

The requirement relating to collection of information contained in this notice of proposed rulemaking have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for review under section 3504(h) of the Paperwork Reduction Act. Comments on these requirements should be sent to the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs of OMB, Attention: Desk Officer for Internal Revenue Service, New Executive Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20503. The Internal Revenue Service requests that persons submitting comments on these requirements to OMB also send copies of those comments to the Service.

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably seven copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations is Harry Beker of the Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, it is proposed to amend the Income Tax Regulations, 26 CFR Part 1, as follows:

Paragraph 1. Paragraph (c)(1) of §1.170A-9 is amended to read as follows:

§1.170A-9 Definition of section 170 (b)(1)(A) organization.

* * * * *

(c) Hospitals and medical research organizations—(1) Hospitals. An organization (other than one described in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph) is described in section 170 (b)(1)(A)(iii) if:

(i) It is a hospital, and

(ii) Its principal purpose or function is the providing of medical or hospital care or medical education or medical research.

The term "hospital" includes (a) Federal hospitals and (b) State, county, and municipal hospitals which are instrumentalities of governmental units referred to in section 170(c)(1) and otherwise come within the definition. A rehabilitation institution, outpatient clinic, or community mental health or drug treatment center may qualify as a "hospital" within the meaning of subdivision (i) of this subparagraph if its principal purpose or function is the providing of hospital or medical care. For purposes of this subdivision, the term "medical care" shall include the treatment of any physical or mental disability or condition, whether on an inpatient or outpatient basis, provided the cost of such treatment is deductible under section 213 by the person treated. An organization, all the accommodations of which qualify as being part of an "extended care facility" within the meaning of 42 U.S.C. 1395x(j), may qualify as a "hospital" within the meaning of subdivision (i) of this subparagraph if its principal purpose or function is the providing of hospital or medical care. For taxable years ending after June 28, 1968, the term "hospital" also includes cooperative hospital service organizations which meet the requirements of section 501(e) and §1.501(e)-1. The term "hospital" does not, however, include convalescent homes or homes for children or the aged, nor does the term include institutions whose principal purpose or function is to train handicapped individuals to pursue some vocation. An organization whose principal purpose or function is the providing of medical education or medical research will not be considered a "hospital" within the meaning of subdivision (i) of this subparagraph, unless it is also actively engaged in providing medical or hospital care to patients on its premises or in its facilities, on an inpatient or outpatient basis, as an integral part of its medical education or medical research functions. See, however, subparagraph (2) of this paragraph with respect to certain medical research organizations.

* * * * *

Par. 2. Section 1.501(e)-1 is redesignated as §1.501(k)-1.

Par. 3. The following new section is added immediately after §1.501(d)-1:

§1.501(e)-1 Cooperative hospital service organizations.

(a) General rule. Section 501(e) is the exclusive and controlling section under which a cooperative hospital service organization can qualify as a charitable organization. A cooperative hospital service organization which meets the requirements of section 501(e) and this section shall be treated as an organization described in section 501(c)(3), exempt from taxation under section 501(a), and referred to in section 170(b)(1)(A)(iii) (relating to percentage limitations on charitable contributions). In order to qualify for tax exempt status, a cooperative hospital service organization must—

(1) Be organized and operated on a cooperative basis,

(2) Perform, on a centralized basis, only one or more specifically enumerated services which, if performed directly by a tax exempt hospital, would constitute activities in the exercise or performance of the purpose or function constituting the basis for its exemption, and

(3) Perform such service or services solely for two or more patron-hospitals as described in paragraph (d) of this section.

(b) Organized and operated on a cooperative basis—(1) In general. In order to meet the requirements of section 501(e), the organization must be organized and operated on a cooperative basis (whether or not under a specific statute on cooperatives) and must allocate or pay all of its net earnings within 8½ months after the close of the taxable year to its patron-hospitals on the basis of the percentage of its services performed for each patron. For the recordkeeping requirements of a section 501(e) organization, see §1.521-1(a)(1).

(2) Percentage of services defined. The percentage of services performed for each patron-hospital may be determined on the basis of either the value or the quantity of the services provided by the organization to the patron-hospital, provided such basis is realistic in terms of the actual cost of the services to the organization.

(3) Retention of net earnings. Exemption will not be denied a cooperative hospital service organization solely because the organization, instead of paying all net earnings to its patron-hospitals, retains an amount for such purposes as retiring indebtedness, expanding the services of the organization, or for any other necessary purpose and allocates such amounts to its patrons. However, such funds may not be accumulated beyond the reasonable needs of the organization. Whether there is an improper accumulation of funds depends upon the particular circumstances of each case. Moreover, where an organization retains net earnings for necessary purposes, the organization's records must show each patron's rights and interests in the funds retained.

(4) Nonpatronage income. An organization described in section 501(e) may have income from nonpatronage sources such as investment of retained earnings. However, such an organization cannot be exempt if it engages in any business other than that of providing the specified services, described in paragraph (c), for the specified patron-hospitals, described in paragraph (d). Thus, it cannot have unrelated business taxable income as defined in section 512 other than debt-financed income which is treated as unrelated business taxable income solely because of the applicability of section 514. Such an organization may also have certain interest, annuities, royalties, and rents which are excluded from unrelated business taxable income because of the modifications contained in sections 512(b)(1), (2) or (3). The nonpatronage income permitted under this subparagraph must be allocated or paid as provided in subparagraph (1) or retained as provided in subparagraph (3).

(5) Stock ownership. An organization does not meet the requirements of section 501(e) unless all of the organization's outstanding capital stock, if there is such stock, is held solely by its patron-hospitals. However, no amount may be paid as dividends on the capital stock of the organization. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term "capital stock" includes common stock (whether voting or nonvoting), preferred stock, or any other form evidencing a proprietary interest in the organization.

(c) Scope of services. An organization meets the requirements of section 501(e) only if the organization performs, on a centralized basis, one or more of the following services and only such services: data processing, purchasing (including the purchasing and dispensing of drugs and pharmaceuticals to patron-hospitals), warehousing, billing and collection, food, clinical, industrial engineering (including the installation, maintenance and repair of biomedical and similar equipment), laboratory, printing, communications, record center, and personnel (including recruitment, selection, testing, training, education and placement of personnel) services. An organization is not described in section 501(e) if, in addition to or instead of one or more of these specified services, the organization performs any other service.

Example. An organization performs industrial engineering services on a cooperative basis solely for patron-hospitals each of which is an organization described in section 501(c)(3) and exempt from taxation under section 501(a). However, in addition to this service, the organization operates laundry services for its patron-hospitals. This cooperative organization does not meet the requirements of this paragraph because it performs laundry services not specified in this paragraph.

(d) Patron-hospitals—(1) Defined. Section 501(e) only applies if the organization performs its services solely for two or more patron-hospitals each of which is—

(i) An organization described in section 501(c)(3) which is exempt from taxation under section 501(a),

(ii) A constituent part of an organization described in section 501(c)(3) which is exempt from taxation under section 501(a) and which, if organized and operated as a separate entity, would constitute an organization described in section 501(c)(3), or

(iii) Owned and operated by the United States, a State, the District of Columbia, or a possession of the United States, or a political subdivision or an agency or instrumentality of any of the foregoing.

(2) Business with nonvoting patron-hospitals. Exemption will not be denied a cooperative hospital service organization solely because the organization (whether organized on a stock or membership basis) transacts business with patron-hospitals which do not have voting rights in the organization and therefore do not participate in the decisions affecting the operation of the organization. Where the organization has both patron-hospitals with voting rights and patron-hospitals without such rights, the organization must provide at least 50 percent of its services to patron-hospitals with voting rights in the organization. Thus, the percentage of services provided to nonvoting patrons may not exceed the percentage of such services provided to voting patrons. Notwithstanding that an organization may have both voting and nonvoting patron-hospitals, patronage refunds must nevertheless be allocated or paid to all patron-hospitals solely on the basis specified in paragraph (b) of this section.

(3) Services to other organizations. An organization does not meet the requirements of section 501(e) if, in addition to performing services for patron-hospitals (entities described in subdivisions (i), (ii) or (iii) of subparagraph (1)), the organization performs any service for any other organization. For example, a cooperative hospital service organization is not exempt if it performs services for convalescent homes for children or the aged, vocational training facilities for the handicapped, educational institutions which do not provide hospital care in their facilities, and proprietary hospitals. However, the provision of the specified services between or among cooperative hospital service organizations meeting the requirements of section 501(e) is permissible.

(e) Effective dates. An organization, other than an organization performing clinical services, may meet the requirements of section 501(e) and be a tax exempt organization for taxable years ending after June 28, 1968. An organization performing clinical services may meet the requirements of section 501(e) and be a tax exempt organization for taxable years ending after December 31, 1976.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Tax Treatment of Cafeteria Plans

EE-16-79

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations relating to the tax treatment of cafeteria plans. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 17], by the Technical Corrections Act of 1979 [Pub. L. 96-222, 1980-1 C.B. 499] and by the Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1980 [Pub. L. 96-605, 1980 C.B. 702]. The proposed regulations would provide the public with the guidance needed to comply with those Acts and would affect employees who participate in cafeteria plans.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by July 6, 1984. The regulations are generally proposed to be effective for plan years beginning after December 31, 1978, except with respect to certain provisions set forth in Q&A-21 which are effective as of September 4, 1984. In addition, transitional relief is provided with respect to employer contributions made before June 1, 1984, pursuant to certain "flexible spending arrangements" that satisfy specified conditions. Also, the provision relating to qualified cash or deferred arrangements is effective for plan years beginning after December 31, 1980.

SUPPLEMENTAL INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 125 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. These proposed regulations are to be issued pursuant to section 134 of the Revenue Act of 1978 (92 Stat. 2763) [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 17], section 101 of the Technical Corrections Act of 1979 (92 Stat. 2227) [Pub. L. 96-222, 1980-1 C.B. 499], section 226 of the Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1980 (94 Stat. 3529) [Pub. L. 96-605, 1980-2 C.B. 702] and under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Code (68A Stat. 917, 26 U.S.C. 7805).

FORMAT

These proposed regulations are presented in the form of questions and answers. The questions and answers do not address various issues regarding the application of the discrimination standards under section 125. Written comments are requested specifically with respect ot the application of these discrimination standards. In particular, comments are requested regarding tests that a plan may use to determine whether it is nondiscriminatory, methods by which to value benefits, appropriate safe harbors from discrimination, and tests to assure that the pricing of benefits under a cafeteria plan is not discriminatory.

The guidance provided by these questions and answers may be relied upon to comply with provisions of section 125 and will be applied by the Internal Revenue Service in resolving issues arising under cafeteria plans and related Code sections. However, pending the issuance of final regulations, advance determinations and rulings regarding whether a cafeteria plan is or is not discriminatory will not be issued; determinations regarding discrimination will be made only on audit.

If final regulations are more restrictive than the guidance in this Notice, the regulations will not be applied retroactively. No inference, however, should be drawn regarding issues not expressly raised that may be suggested by a particular question or answer or by the inclusion or exclusion of certain questions.

NONAPPLICABILITY OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

Proposed amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, it is proposed to amend the Income Tax Regulations, 26 CFR Part 1, by adding the following new section:

§1.125-1 Questions and Answers Relating to Cafeteria Plans

Q-1: What does section 125 of the Internal Revenue Code provide?

A-1: Section 125 provides that a participant in a nondiscriminatory cafeteria plan will not be treated as having received the taxable benefits offered under the plan solely because the participant has the opportunity, before the benefits become currently available to the participant, to choose among the taxable and nontaxable benefits offered under the plan.

Q-2: What is a "cafeteria plan" under section 125?

A-2: A "cafeteria plan" is a separate written benefit plan maintained by an employer for the benefit of its employees, under which all participants are employees and each participant has the opportunity to select the particular benefits that he desires. A cafeteria plan may offer participants the opportunity to select among various taxable benefits and nontaxable benefits, but a plan must offer at least one taxable benefit and at least one nontaxable benefit. For example, if participants are given the opportunity to elect only among two or more nontaxable benefits, the plan is not a cafeteria plan.

Q-3: What must the written cafeteria plan document contain?

A-3: The written document embodying a cafeteria plan must contain at least the following information: (i) a specific description of each of the benefits available under the plan, including the periods during which the benefits are provided (i.e., the periods of coverage), (ii) the plan's eligibility rules governing participation, (iii) the procedures governing participants' elections under the plan, including the period during which elections may be made, the extent to which elections are irrevocable, and the periods with respect to which elections are effective, (iv) the manner in which employer contributions may be made under the plan, such as by salary reduction agreement between the participant and the employer or by nonelective employer contributions to the plan, (v) the maximum amount of employer contributions available to any participant under the plan, and (vi) the plan year on which the cafeteria plan operates.

In describing the benefits available under the cafeteria plan, the plan document need not be self-contained. For example, the plan document may include by reference benefits established under other "separate written plans," such as coverage under a qualified group legal services plan (section 120) or under a dependent care assistance program (section 129), without describing in full the benefits established under these other plans. But, for example, if the plan offers different maximum levels of coverage under a dependent care assistance program, the descriptions must specify the available maximums. In addition, an arrangement under which a participant is provided with coverage under a dependent care assistance program for dependent care expenses incurred during the period of coverage up to a specified amount (e.g., $500) and the right to receive, either directly or indirectly in the form of cash or any other benefit, any portion of the specified amount that is not reimbursed for such expenses will be considered a single benefit and must be fully described as such in the plan document. This also is the case with other benefits, such as coverage under an accident or health plan and coverage under a qualified group legal services plan. See Q&A-17 and Q&A-18 regarding the taxability of such benefit arrangements.

Q-4: What does the term "employees" mean under section 125?

A-4: The term "employees" includes present and former employees of the employer. All employees who are treated as employed by a single employer under subsections (b), (c), or (m) of section 414 are treated as employed by a single employer for purposes of section 125. The term "employees" does not, however, include self-employed individuals described in section 401(c) of the Code. Even though former employees generally are treated as employees, a cafeteria plan may not be established predominantly for the benefit of former employees of the employer.

In addition, even though the spouses and other beneficiaries of participants may not be participants in a cafeteria plan, a plan may provide benefits to spouses and beneficiaries of participants. For example, the spouse of a participant may not be permitted to participate actively in a cafeteria plan (i.e., the spouse may not be given the opportunity to select or purchase benefits offered by the plan), but the spouse of a participant may benefit from the participant's selection of family medical insurance coverage or of coverage under a dependent care assistance program. A participant's spouse will not be treated as actively participating in a cafeteria plan merely because the spouse has the right, upon the death of the participant, to select among various settlement options available with respect to a death benefit selected by the participant under the cafeteria plan or to elect among permissible distribution options with respect to the deceased participant's benefits under a cash or deferred arrangement that is part of the cafeteria plan.

Q-5: What benefits may be offered to participants under a cafeteria plan?

A-5: With the exception of benefits that defer the receipt of compensation (see Q&A-7), a cafeteria plan may offer participants the opportunity to select among certain taxable benefits and nontaxable benefits described in the plan document. The term "taxable benefit"means cash, property, or other benefits attributable to employer contributions that are currently taxable to the participant under the Internal Revenue Code upon receipt by the participant. The term "nontaxable benefit" means any benefit attributable to employer contributions to the extent that such benefit is not currently taxable to the participant under the Internal Revenue Code upon receipt of the benefit. Thus, a cafeteria plan may offer participants the following benefits, which will be nontaxable when provided in accordance with the applicable provisions of the Internal Revenue Code: group-term life insurance up to $50,000 (section 79), coverage under an accident or health plan (section 106), coverage under a qualified group legal services plan (section 120), and coverage under a dependent care assistance program (section 129). Also, amounts received by participants under one of these benefits may or may not be taxable depending upon whether such amounts qualify for an exclusion from gross income. See Q&A-17 and Q&A-18 regarding the inclusion of an accident or health plan, dependent care assistance program, or qualified group legal services plan in a cafeteria plan. Also, see Q&A-7 regarding the inclusion of deferred compensation benefits in a cafeteria plan.

In addition, a cafeteria plan may offer benefits that are nontaxable because they are attributable to after-tax employee contributions. For example, a cafeteria plan may offer participants the opportunity to purchase, with after-tax employee contributions, coverage under an accident or health plan providing for the payment of disability benefits. A participant's receipt of coverage under such an accident or health plan would not trigger taxable income because the coverage would be purchased with after-tax employee contributions. Similarly, any amounts paid to a participant under such an accident or health plan on account of disability incurred during the year of coverage may be nontaxable under section 104(a)(3).

Q-6: May employer contributions to a cafeteria plan be made pursuant to a salary reduction agreement between the participant and employer?

A-6: Yes. The term "employer contributions" means amounts that have not been actually or constructively received (after taking section 125 into account) by the participant and have been specified in the plan document as available to a participant for the purpose of selecting or "purchasing" benefits under the plan. A plan document may provide that the employer will make employer contributions, in whole or in part, pursuant to salary reduction agreements under which participants elect to reduce their compensation or to forgo increases in compensation and to have such amounts contributed, as employer contributions, by the employer on their behalf. A salary reduction agreement will have the effect of causing the amounts contributed thereunder to be treated as employer contributions under a cafeteria plan only to the extent the agreement relates to compensation that has not been actually or constructively received by the participant as of the date of the agreement (after taking section 125 into account) and, subsequently, does not become currently available to the participant. In addition, a plan document also may provide that the employer will make employer contributions on behalf of participants equal to specified amounts (or specified percentages of compensation) and that such nonelective contributions will be available to participants for the selection or purchase of benefits under the plan.

Q-7: May a cafeteria plan offer a benefit that defers the receipt of compensation?

A-7: No. A cafeteria plan does not include any plan that offers a benefit that defers the receipt of compensation, with the exception of the opportunity for participants to make elective contributions under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement defined in section 401(k). Thus, employer contributions made at a participant's election to a profit-sharing plan containing a qualified cash or deferred arrangement will be treated as nontaxable benefits under a cafeteria plan.

In addition, a cafeteria plan does not include a plan that operates in a manner that enables participants to defer the receipt of compensation. Generally, a plan that permits participants to carry over unused benefits or contributions from one plan year to a subsequent plan year operates to enable participants to defer the receipt of compensation. This is the case regardless of whether the plan permits participants to convert the unused contributions or benefits into another benefit in the subsequent plan year. For example, a plan that offers participants the opportunity to purchase vacation days (or to receive cash or other benefits under the plan in lieu of vacation days) will not be a cafeteria plan if participants who purchase the vacation days for a plan year are allowed to use any unused days in a subsequent plan year. This is the case even though the plan does not permit the participant to convert, in the subsequent plan year, the unused vacation days into any other benefit. In determining whether a plan permits participants to carry over unused vacation days, a participant will be deemed to have used his nonelective vacation days (i.e., the vacation days with respect to which the participant had no election under the plan) before his elective vacation days. For example, assume that an employer provides a participant with three weeks of vacation for a year and, under the plan, the participant is permitted to receive cash or other benefits in lieu of one of these three weeks. Assume that the participant elects not to exchange the one elective week of vacation for another benefit. If the participant uses two weeks of vacation during the year, he will be treated as having used the two nonelective weeks of vacation. Thus, if the participant is permitted to carry the one unused week over to the next year, the plan will be treated as operating to enable participants to defer the receipt of compensation. Thus, the plan will fail to be a cafeteria plan and the section 125 exception to the constructive receipt rules will not apply.

In addition, a plan that allows participants to use employer contributions for one plan year to purchase a benefit that will be provided in a subsequent plan year operates to enable participants to defer the receipt of compensation.

Q-8: What requirements apply to participants' elections under a cafeteria plan?

A-8: A plan is not a cafeteria plan unless the plan requires that participants make elections among the benefits offered under the plan. A plan may provide that elections may be made at any time. However, benefit elections under a cafeteria plan should be made in accordance with certain guidelines (see Q&A-15) in order for participants to qualify for the protections of the section 125 exception to the constructive receipt rules. An election will not be deemed to have been made if, after a participant has elected and begun to receive a benefit under the plan, the participant is permitted to revoke the election, even if the revocation relates only to that portion of the benefit that has not yet been provided to the participant. For example, a plan that permits a participant to revoke his election of coverage under a dependent care assistance program or of coverage under an accident or health plan after the period of coverage has commenced will not be a cafeteria plan. However, a cafeteria plan may permit a participant to revoke a benefit election after the period of coverage has commenced and to make a new election with respect to the remainder of the period of coverage if both the revocation and new election are on account of and consistent with a change in family status (e.g., marriage, divorce, death of spouse or child, birth or adoption of child, and termination of employment of spouse).

Q-9: What is the tax treatment of benefits offered under a nondiscriminatory cafeteria plan?

A-9: A participant in a nondiscriminatory cafeteria plan will not be treated as having received taxable benefits offered under the plan and thus will not be required to include the benefits in gross income solely because the plan offers the participant the opportunity, before the benefits become currently available to the participant, to elect to receive or not to receive the benefits. Section 125 thus provides an exception to the constructive receipt rules that apply with respect to employee elections among nontaxable and taxable benefits (including cash). These constructive receipt rules generally provide that an individual will be required to include in gross income the taxable benefits that he could have elected to receive if the individual had the opportunity to elect to receive or not to receive the benefits even though both the opportunity to make this election occurs and the actual election is made before the benefits become currently available to the individual. Section 125 does not, however, alter the application of the constructive receipt rules to a situation in which benefits become currently available to an individual even thought the individual elects not to receive and does not actually receive the benefits. Thus, if taxable benefits become currently available to a participant in a nondiscriminatory cafeteria plan, the participant will be taxable on the benefits, even though the participant has elected or subsequently elects not to receive the benefits and does not actually receive the benefits.

Q-10: What is the tax treatment of benefits offered under a discriminatory cafeteria plan?

A-10: The section 125 exception to the constructive receipt rules is not available to the highly compensated participants in a cafeteria plan that is discriminatory for a plan year. Thus, a highly compensated participant in a cafeteria plan that is discriminatory for a plan year will be taxable on the combination of the taxable benefits with the greatest aggregate value that he could have selected for the plan year. The section 125 exception to the constructive receipt rules remains available to participants who are not highly compensated without regard to whether the cafeteria plan is discriminatory.

Q-11: How are the amounts taxable to a highly compensated participant because a cafeteria plan is discriminatory for a plan year to be allocated among the benefits actually selected by the participant for the plan year?

A-11: A highly compensated participant in a discriminatory cafeteria plan is taxable on the maximum taxable benefits that he could have selected for the plan year. For example, assume that a cafeteria plan provides a highly compensated participant with the opportunity to select, for a plan year, benefits costing $1300 from among the following: up to $300 in cash, coverage under an accident or health plan providing medical expense reimbursement (cost of $600), coverage under an accident or health plan providing disability benefits (cost of $200), coverage under a qualified legal services plan (cost of $400), and coverage under a dependent care assistance program (cost of $400). For the plan year in question, the participant elects to receive $100 in cash, coverage under both of the accident or health plans ($600 and $200), and coverage under the dependent care assistance program ($400). If the cafeteria plan is discriminatory for the plan year, the participant will be taxable on the $100 cash benefit actually selected and on the $200 cash benefit that the participant could have selected. This $300 will be allocated, first, to the taxable benefits actually selected by the participant and, second, on a pro rata basis to the nontaxable benefits actually selected by the participant. Thus, $100 is allocated to the $100 cash benefit actually received and the $200 is allocated as employee contributions among the nontaxable benefits actually selected as follows: $100 to coverage under the accident or health plan for medical care, $33.33 to the coverage under the accident or health plan for disability benefits, and $66.67 to the coverage under the dependent care assistance program. This allocation would not affect the nontaxable status of any of these benefits—the purchase of coverage under any of these plans with employee contributions would not trigger taxable income—but it may affect the taxability of amounts received under any of the plans. In addition, depending upon whether other conditions are satisfied, the participant may be able to deduct under section 213 some or all of the employee cost of the coverage under the accident or health plan for medical care. Thus, reimbursements received by the participant for medical care expenses incurred during the year of coverage may be nontaxable under either section 104(a)(3) or section 105(b), depending upon whether the reimbursements are attributable to after-tax employee or pre-tax employer contributions. Also, if the participant became disabled during the year of coverage, benefits provided under the accident or health plan would be nontaxable to the participant under section 104(a)(3) to the extent that the benefits were attributable to the portion of the coverage purchased with the after-tax employee contributions. Finally, any reimbursements received under the dependent care assistance program for the year of coverage will be nontaxable under section 129 if the requirements of that section are satisfied.

Q-12: When must a highly compensated participant in a discriminatory cafeteria plan include in gross income amounts attributable to the taxable benefits that the participant could have selected, but did not in fact select?

A-12: Amounts required to be included in gross income by a highly compensated participant because a cafeteria plan does not satisfy the applicable nondiscrimination standards for a plan year will be treated as received or accrued in the participant's taxable year within which ends the plan year with respect to which an election was or could have been made.

Q-13: Who are highly compensated participants under section 125?

A-13: The term "highly compensated participant" means a participant who is an officer, a shareholder owning more than 5 percent of the voting power or value of all classes of stock of the employer, or highly compensated. The classification of a participant as highly compensated for this purpose will be made on the basis of the facts and circumstances of each case. A spouse or a dependent (within the meaning of section 152) of any such "highly compensated participant" will be treated as highly compensated.

Q-14: When will a benefit be treated as currently available to a participant in a cafeteria plan?

A-14: A benefit is treated as currently available to a participant if the participant is free to receive the benefit currently at his discretion or the participant could receive the benefit currently if an election or notice of an intent to receive the benefit were given. A benefit will not be treated as not currently available merely because of a requirement that the participant must elect or give notice of intent to receive the benefit in advance of receipt of the benefit. However, a benefit is not currently available to a participant if there is a substantial limitation or restriction on the participant's receipt of the benefit. A benefit will not be treated as currently available if the participant may under no circumstances receive the benefit before a particular time in the future and there is a substantial risk that, if the participant does not fulfill specified conditions during the period preceding this time, the participant will not receive the benefit.

Q-15: What procedures with respect to benefit elections should a cafeteria plan adopt in order to assure that participants are not subject to tax, under the constructive receipt rules, on taxable benefits that the participants have elected not to receive?

A-15: Generally, in order for participants to avoid constructive receipt with respect to taxable benefits offered under a cafeteria plan, the taxable benefits must at no time become currently available to the participants. Thus, a cafeteria plan should require participants to elect the specific benefits that they will receive before the taxable benefits become currently available. A benefit will not be treated as currently available as of the time of the election if the election specifies the future period for which the benefit will be provided and the election is made before the beginning of this period.

In addition, after the beginning of the specified period for which the benefits are provided, the taxable benefits must not become currently available to the participants. After the commencement of this period, taxable benefits will be treated as currently available if participants have the right to revoke their elections of nontaxable benefits and instead to receive the taxable benefits for such period, without regard to whether the participants actually revoke their elections. For example, assume that a cafeteria plan offers each participant the opportunity to elect, for a plan year, between coverage under a dependent care assistance program for up to $2000 of the dependent care expenses incurred by the participant during the plan year or a cash benefit of $2000 for the year. If the plan requires participants to elect between these benefits before the beginning of the plan year and, after the year has commenced, the participants are prohibited from revoking their elections, participants who elected coverage under the dependent care assistance program will not be taxable on the cash benefit of $2000. But if, after the beginning of the plan year, participants have the right to revoke their elections of coverage under the dependent care assistance program and thereby to receive the cash benefit, the participants will be treated as having received the $2000 in cash even though they do not revoke their elections. The same result would obtain even though the cash benefit is not payable until the end of the plan year. See Q&A-8, however, regarding the revocation of elections on account of changes in family status.

Q-16: Do the rules of section 125 affect whether any particular benefit offered under a cafeteria plan is a taxable or nontaxable benefit?

A-16: Generally, no. A benefit that is nontaxable under the Internal Revenue Code when offered separately is treated as a nontaxable benefit under a cafeteria plan only if the rules providing for the exclusion of the benefit from gross income continue to be satisfied when the benefit is offered under the cafeteria plan. For example, if $50,000 in group-term life insurance is offered under a cafeteria plan and the rules under section 79(a) governing the exclusion of the cost of this benefit from gross income are satisfied, the rules of section 79(d) still apply to determine the status of the benefit as taxable or nontaxable for key employees who participate in the plan. See Q&A-17 and Q&A-18, however, regarding the inclusion of coverage under an accident or health plan, dependent care assistance program, or qualified group legal services plan in a cafeteria plan.

Similarly, if a cafeteria plan offers benefits that are nontaxable under the Internal Revenue Code when offered outside of a cafeteria plan, but are prohibited from inclusion in a cafeteria plan, the benefits will be treated as taxable benefits under the cafeteria plan. Thus, coverage under a qualified transportation plan (section 124) and coverage under an educational assistance program (section 127) will be treated as taxable benefits if offered under a cafeteria plan. Also, any benefits (either reimbursement for expenses or in kind benefits) received by a participant under a qualified transportation plan or an educational assistance program will be taxable if the benefits are provided under a cafeteria plan.

Finally, if a benefit that is taxable under the Internal Revenue Code when offered separately is offered under a cafeteria plan, the benefit will continue to be a taxable benefit under the cafeteria plan. For example, if a cafeteria plan offers a participant the opportunity to direct the employer to make charitable contributions or contributions to an individual retirement account on behalf of the participant, such contributions must be included in the participant's gross income for income and employment tax purposes without regard to whether the plan satisfies section 125 and without regard to whether the contributions are deductible by the participant.

Q-17: How are the specific rules of section 105, providing an income exclusion for amounts received as reimbursement for medical care expenses under an accident or health plan, to be applied when coverage under an accident or health plan is offered as a benefit under a cafeteria plan?

A-17: Section 105(b) provides an exclusion from gross income for amounts that are paid to an employee under an employer-funded accident or health plan specifically to reimburse the employee for certain medical care expenses incurred by the employee during the period for which the benefit is provided to the employee, i.e., the period during which the employee is covered under the accident or health plan. Section 105(h) provides that the exclusion provided by section 105(b) is not available with respect to certain amounts received by a highly compensated individual (as defined in section 105(h)(5)) under a discriminatory self-insured medical reimbursement plan. Several rules are of particular importance when coverage under an accident or health plan is a benefit offered under a cafeteria plan.

First, in order for medical care reimbursements paid to a participant under a cafeteria plan to be treated as nontaxable under section 105(b), the reimbursements must be paid pursuant to a employer-funded "accident or health plan," as defined in section 105(e) and §1.105-5. This means that, although the reimbursements need not be provided under a commercial insurance contract, the reimbursements must be provided under a benefit that exhibits the risk-shifting and risk-distribution characteristics of insurance. A benefit will not exhibit the required risk-shifting and risk-distribution characteristics, even though the benefit is provided under a commercial insurance contract, if the ordinary actuarial risk of the insurer is negated either under the terms of the benefit or by any related benefit or arrangement (including arrangements formally outside of the cafeteria plan).

Second, a cafeteria plan benefit under which a participant will receive reimbursements of medical expenses is a benefit within sections 106 and 105(b) only if, under the benefit, reimbursements are paid specifically to reimburse the participant for medical expenses incurred during the period of coverage. Amounts paid to a participant as reimbursement are not treated as paid specifically to reimburse the participant for medical expenses if, under the benefit, the participant is entitled to the amounts, in the form of cash (e.g., routine payment of salary) or any other taxable or nontaxable benefit, irrespective of whether or not he incurs medical expenses during the period of coverage, even if the participant will not receive the amounts not used for expense reimbursement until the end of the period. A benefit under which participants will receive reimbursement for medical expenses up to a specified amount and, if they incur no expenses, will receive cash or any other benefit in lieu of the reimbursements is not a benefit that qualifies for the exclusions under sections 106 and 105(b). See §1.105.2. This is the case without regard to whether the benefit was purchased with contributions made at the employer's discretion, at the participant's discretion (such as pursuant to a salary reduction agreement), or pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement. For example, if a cafeteria plan offers participants coverage under an employer-funded plan that provides for the reimbursement of medical expenses incurred during the plan year up to a specified amount (e.g., $1,000) and the participants are entitled to receive, in the form of any other taxable or nontaxable benefits (including deferrals under a cash or deferred arrangement), any portion of the specified amount that is not paid as reimbursement for medical expenses, the employer contributions used to purchase the coverage will not qualify for the section 106 exclusion and any reimbursements paid to participants for expenses incurred during the year of coverage will not be eligible for the section 105(b) exception. Arrangements formally outside of the cafeteria plan that provide for the adjustment of a participant's compensation or a participant's receipt of any other benefits on the basis of the expenses incurred or reimbursements received by the partcipant will be considered in determining whether the reimbursements are provided under a benefit eligible for the exclusions under sections 106 and 105(b).

Third, the medical expenses that are reimbursed under an accident or health plan must have been incurred during the period for which the participant is actually covered by the accident or health plan in order for the reimbursements to be excluded from gross income under section 105(b). For purposes of this rule, expenses are treated as having been incurred when the participant is provided with the medical care that gives rise to the medical expenses, and not when the participant is formally billed, charged for, or pays for the medical care. Also, for purposes of this rule, medical expenses that are incurred before the later of the date the plan is in existence and the date the participant is enrolled in the plan will not be treated as having been incurred during the period for which the participant is covered by the plan. Thus, in order for reimbursements to be excluded from gross income under section 105(b), the accident or health plan must provide a participant the right to reimbursement for medical expenses incurred during a specified period of plan coverage. Reimbursements of expenses incurred prior to or after the specified period of coverage will not be excluded under section 105(b). However, the actual reimbursement of covered medical care expenses may be made after the applicable period of coverage.

Fourth, in order for reimbursements under an accident or health plan to qualify for the section 105(b) exclusion, the cafeteria plan may not operate in a manner that enables participants to purchase coverage under the accident or health plan only for periods during which the participants expect to incur medical care. For example, if a cafeteria plan permits participants to purchase coverage under an accident or health plan on a month-by-month or an expense-by-expense basis, reimbursements under the accident or health plan will not qualify for the section 105(b) exclusion. If, however, the period of coverage under an accident or health plan offered in a cafeteria plan is twelve months (or, in the case of a cafeteria plan's initial plan year, at least equal to the plan year) and the plan does not permit a participant to select specific amounts of coverage, reimbursement, or salary reduction for less than twelve months, the cafeteria plan will be deemed not to operate to enable participants to purchase coverage only for periods during which medical care will be incurred. See Q&A-8 regarding the revocation of elections during a period of coverage on account of changes in family status.

Fifth, in order for reimbursements to a highly compensated individual under a self-insured accident or health plan to be treated as nontaxable under a cafeteria plan, the discrimination rules of section 105(h) must be satisfied. For purposes of these rules, coverage under a self-insured accident or health plan offered by a cafeteria plan will be treated as an optional benefit (even if only one level and type of coverage is offered) and, for purposes of the optional benefit rule in §1.105-11(c)(3)(i), employer contributions will be treated as employee contributions to the extent that taxable benefits are offered by the plan. In addition, the accident or health plan offered by the cafeteria plan must provide for the nondiscriminatory reimbursement of expenses on a per capita basis, rather than as a proportion of compensation.

Q-18: How are the specific rules of section 129, providing an income exclusion for dependent care assistance provided under a dependent care assistance program, to be applied when coverage under a dependent care assistance program is offered as a benefit under a cafeteria plan?

A-18: Section 129(a) provides an employee with an exclusion from gross income both for employer-funded coverage under a dependent care assistance program and for amounts paid or incurred by the employer for dependent care assistance provided to the employee if the amounts are paid or incurred under a dependent care assistance program. A program under which participants receive reimbursements of dependent care expenses up to a specified amount and are entitled to receive, in the form of any other taxable or nontaxable benefits, any portion of the specified amount not used for reimbursement is to be treated as a single benefit that is not a dependent care assistance program within the scope of section 129. Thus, dependent care assistance provided under a cafeteria plan will be treated as provided under a dependent care assistance program only if, after the participant has elected coverage under the program and the period of coverage has commenced, the participant does not have the right to receive amounts under the program other than as reimbursements for dependent care expenses. This is the case without regard to whether coverage under the program was purchased with contributions made at the employer's discretion, at the participant's discretion, or pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement. For example, assume a cafeteria plan allows participants to elect to receive, for a particular plan year, either the right to reimbursements of dependent care expenses incurred during the year up to $2000 or a cash benefit of $2000. If the participant elects the right to receive reimbursements of dependent care expenses, the reimbursements will not be treated as made under a dependent care assistance program if, after the period of coverage has commenced, the participant has the right to revoke his election of this benefit and instead to receive the cash or if, under the terms of the program itself, the participant is entitled to receive, in the form of cash (e.g., routine payment of salary) or any other benefit, any amounts not reimbursed for dependent care provided during the period of coverage. Arrangements formally outside of the cafeteria plan that provide for the adjustment of a participant's compensation or a participant's receipt of any other benefits on the basis of the assistance or reimbursements received by the participant will be considered a determining whether a dependent care benefit is a dependent care assistance program under section 129.

Moreover, in order for dependent care assistance to be treated as provided under a dependent care assistance program eligible for the section 129 exclusion, the care must be provided to or on behalf of the participant during the period for which the participant is covered by the program. For example, if a participant elects coverage for a plan year under a dependent care assistance program that provides for the reimbursement of dependent care expenses, only reimbursements for dependent care expenses incurred during that plan year will be treated as having been provided under a dependent care assistance program within the scope of the section 129. For purposes of this rule, dependent care expenses will be treated as having been incurred when the dependent care is provided, and not when the participant is formerly billed, charged for, or pays for the dependent care. Also, for purposes of this rule, expenses that are incurred before the later of the date the program is in existence and the date the participant is enrolled in the program will not be treated as having been incurred during the period for which the participant is covered by the program. Similarly, if the dependent care assistance program furnishes the dependent care in kind (e.g., under an employer-maintained child care facility), only dependent care provided during the plan year of coverage will be treated as having been provided under a dependent care assistance program within the scope of section 129.

In addition, in order for dependent care assistance under a cafeteria plan to be treated as provided under a dependent care assistance program eligible for the section 129 exclusion, the plan may not operate in a manner that enables participants to purchase coverage under the program only for periods during which the participants expect to receive dependent care assistance. If the period of coverage under a dependent care assistance program offered by a cafeteria plan is twelve months (or, in the case of a cafeteria plan's initial plan year, at least equal to the plan year) and the plan does not permit a participant to seelct specific amounts of coverage, reimbursement, or salary reduction for less than twelve months, the plan will be deemed not to operate to enable participants to purchase coverage only for periods during which dependent care assistance will be received. See Q&A-8 regarding the revocation of elections during the period of coverage on account of changes in family status.

Finally, if coverage under a dependent care assistance program is a benefit offered under a cafeteria plan, the rules of section 129 will determine the status of the benefit as a taxable or nontaxable benefit. As a result, coverage under a dependent care assistance program in a cafeteria plan will be nontaxable for a plan year only if, among other requirements, the principal shareholder and owner discrimination test contained in section 129(d)(4) is satisfied with respect to employer contributions actually used to provide participants with dependent care assistance during the plan year. In addition, amounts paid or incurred by the employer under a dependent care assistance program are excludable from gross income only to the extent that these amounts do not exceed the lesser of the participant's earned income or the participant's spouse's earned income.

Rules similar to the rules applicable to dependent care assistance programs apply with respect to coverage under a qualified group legal services plan (section 120) offered as a benefit under a cafeteria plan.

Q-19: What are the rules governing whether a cafeteria plan is discriminatory?

A-19: The applicable discrimination rules under section 125 provide that, in order to be treated as nondiscriminatory for a plan year, a cafeteria plan must not disciminate in favor of highly compensated participants as to benefits and contributions for that plan year. Generally, this discrimination determination will be made on the basis of the facts and circumstances of each case. Section 125(c) provides that a cafeteria plan does not discriminate where either (i) total nontaxable benefits and total benefits or (ii) employer contributions allocable to total nontaxable benefits and employer contributions allocable to total benefits do not discriminate in favor of highly compensated participants. A cafeteria plan must satisfy section 125(c) with respect to both benefit availability and benefit selection. Thus, a plan must give each participant an equal opportunity to select nontaxable benefits, and the actual selection of nontaxable benefits under the plan must not be discriminatory, i.e., highly compensated participants do not disproportionately select nontaxable benefits while other participants select taxable benefits.

In addition to not discriminating as to either benefit availability or benefit selection, a cafeteria plan must not discriminate in favor of highly compensated participants in actual operation. A plan may be discriminatory in actual operation if the duration of the plan (or of a particular nontaxable benefit offered under the plan) coincides with the period during which highly compensated participants utilize the plan (or the benefit).

Q-20: May nontaxable benefits provided under a cafeteria plan be counted as "compensation" under section 401(a)(5) for purposes of determining whether a qualified pension, profit-sharing, or stock bonus plan discriminates under section 401(a)(4), or under section 415 for purposes of the limitations contained in that section?

A-20: A qualified pension, profit-sharing, or stock bonus plan will not be treated as discriminatory within the meaning of section 401(a)(4) merely because, for purposes of allocating contributions to the participant or calculating the participant's benefit under the plan, the plan considers nontaxable benefits provided to a participant as compensation. For example, if a participant in a cafeteria plan elects coverage under an accident or health plan, the value of such coverage may be considered as compensation under a qualified plan for purposes of calculating the participant's allocation or benefit under the qualified plan. Nontaxable reimbursements under the accident or health plan, however, generally may not be treated as compensation under a qualified plan. Similarly, the value of coverage under a dependent care assistance program may be counted as compensation under a qualified plan for allocation and benefit purposes, but nontaxable reimbursements of dependent care expenses under the program generally may not be treated as compensation for these purposes. On the other hand, a qualified plan will not be treated as discriminatory under section 401(a)(4) merely because the plan does not consider nontaxable benefits, such as coverage under an accident or health plan or coverage under a dependent care assistance program, as compensation for allocation or benefit purposes under the plan.

For purposes of section 415, "compensation" does not include amounts that are excluded from gross income, such as premiums for group-term life insurance under section 79 or employer contributions to an accident or health plan excluded under section 106.

Q-21: What are the effective dates of the rules contained in these questions and answers?

A-21: These rules contained in questions and answers relating to section 125 generally shall apply to plan years of cafeteria plans beginning after December 31, 1978. However, a cafeteria plan that failed to satisfy one or more of the following rules for plan years beginning before May 7, 1984 will not be deemed thereby to have failed to satisfy section 125 for such plan years if, by September 4, 1984, the plan is amended to operate in accordance with these rules: (i) the rules requiring certain information to be included in the cafeteria plan document (Q&A-3), (ii) the rules governing the active participation of a participant's spouse in a cafeteria plan (Q&A-4), (iii) only in the case of a plan under which participants were permitted neither to carry over unused benefits for more than one plan year nor to convert, into any other benefits, any unused benefits that had been carried over to a subsequent plan year, the rules prohibiting the carryover of any unused contribution or benefit from one plan year to a subsequent plan year (Q&A-7), and (iv) the rules limiting the revocability of benefit elections (Q&A-8). A cafeteria plan may treat the portion of its current plan year remaining after September 4, 1984 as a new period of coverage for purposes of satisfying the rules governing benefit elections (Q&A-8). Also, benefit offering participants the opportunity to make elective contributions under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement may be included in a cafeteria plan only in plan years beginning after December 31, 1980.

The rules contained in Q&A-17 governing the taxability of coverage and benefits under an accident or health plan relate specifically to sections 105 and 106 and thus generally are effective with respect to all taxable years beginning after December 31, 1953. The rules contained in Q&A-18 governing the taxability of coverage and benefits under a dependent care assistance program relate specifically to section 129 and thus generally are effective with respect to all taxable years beginning after December 31, 1981. The rules contained in Q&A-18 governing the taxability of coverage and benefits under a qualified group legal services plan relate specifically to section 120 and thus generally are effective with respect to all taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976. However, if coverage under an accident or health plan, dependent care assistance program, or qualified group legal services plan was offered as a benefit under a cafeteria plan and such benefit failed to satisfy, before May 7, 1984, the rule prohibiting a plan from operating to enable a participant to elect coverage under an accident or health plan, a dependent care assistance program, or a qualified group legal services plan only for periods during which the participant expects to receive medical care, dependent care, or legal services (Q&A-17 and Q&A-18), such benefit will not be deemed solely on account of such failure to have failed to satisfy the statutory rules providing for the income exclusion of such coverage or of any benefits provided thereunder, if, by September 4, 1984, the cafeteria plan is amended to operate in accordance with such election of coverage rule. A cafeteria plan may treat the portion of its current plan year remaining after September 4, 1984 as a new period of coverage and as an initial plan year for purposes of satisfying the rule prohibiting a plan from operating to enable participants to elect coverage under an accident or health plan, dependent care assistance program, or qualified group legal services plan only for periods during which they expect to receive medical care, dependent care, or legal services (Q&A-17 and Q&A-18).

In addition, if the conditions set forth below are satisfied, employer contributions (including elective and nonelective contributions) made before June 1, 1984, under an arrangement described in the next sentence which is part of a cafeteria plan, will not be treated as having been made to an accident or health plan, dependent care assistance program, or qualified group legal services plan that fails to satisfy the rules contained in the second and third paragraphs of Q&A-17 and the first paragraph of Q&A-18, merely because, for a plan year, a participant was entitled to receive, in the form of cash or any other taxable or nontaxable benefit, amounts available for reimbursement under the arrangement without regard to whether covered expenses are incurred. An arrangement is described in this sentence only if, under the arrangement,

(i) an account was actually established on behalf of the participant by the employer, by an entry on the employer's books or in similar fashion, prior to the beginning of the plan year (or prior to the date on which an individual first becomes eligible to participate under the arrangement in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible to participate, on account of years of employment, during the plan year);

(ii) the amount (or specific rate) of contributions to the account under the arrangement was fixed prior to the beginning of the plan year;

(iii) neither the participant nor the employer possessed the right to increase or decrease contributions to the account during the plan year (but a plan may provide that contributions could be terminated during the year on account of the participant's (a) separation from service or (b) cessation of participation under the arrangement for the remainder of the plan year);

(iv) contributions were actually deposited in or credited to the account before being made available for reimbursement; and

(v) distributions were not available for reasons other than reimbursement of covered expenses until the end of the plan year (but a plan may provide that a single distribution of the unreimbursed balance may be made on account of the participant's (a) separation from service or (b) cessation of participation under the arrangement for the remainder of the plan year).

A cafeteria plan may operate on a plan year other than the calendar year for purposes of this transitional rule, so long as terms of the plan permit contributions to a plan to be fixed only once during, and a distribution of the unreimbursed amount to be received, only once for any plan year, provided that contributions may be fixed for a short plan year of the plan's first period of operation. This transitional rule does not affect or alter the requirement of Q&A-17 and-18 that expenses that are reimbursed under an arrangement must have been incurred during the period for which the participant actually is covered by the arrangement.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Second Tier Excise Taxes

EE-16-81

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations relating to second tier excise taxes. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by Pub. L. No. 96-596 [1980-2 C.B. 653]. The regulations will affect private foundations, black lung benefit trusts, pension plans, and disqualified persons with respect to the foregoing, who may become liable for second tier taxes within the meaning of section 4962(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by April 13, 1984. The amendments are proposed to be effective for second tier taxes assessed after December 24, 1980.

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T:EE-16-81, Washington, D.C. 20224

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: George B. Baker of the Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division, Office of the Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, Attention: CC:LR:T:EE-16-81, 202-566-3422 (not a toll-free call).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Foundation and Similar Excise Taxes Regulations (26 CFR Part 53), to the Pension Excise Taxes Regulations (26 CFR Part 54), to the Temporary Excise Tax Regulations under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, (26 CFR Part 141), and to the Procedure and Administration Regulations (26 CFR Part 301), under sections 4941, 4942, 4943, 4944, 4945, 4961, 4962, 4971, 4975, 6213, 6503, 6861, and 7422. These amendments are proposed to conform the regulations to section 2 of the Act of December 24, 1980 (Pub. L. No. 96-596, 94 Stat. 3469) and are to be issued under the authority of section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

PRIOR LAW

The Internal Revenue Code imposes excise taxes in two tiers to insure compliance with certain provisions of the Code by private foundations, black lung benefit trusts, pension trusts, and disqualified persons with respect to the foregoing entities. A first tier excise tax is imposed automatically if the foundation, trust, or disqualified person engages in a prohibited act (such as self-dealing between a disqualified person and a private foundation), or fails to perform a required act (such as private foundation's failure to distribute the amount described in section 4942). A much larger second tier excise tax is imposed for failing to correct the prohibited act or failure to act within a "correction period."

In Adams v. Commissioner, 72 T.C. 81 (1979), the Tax Court held that it lacked the authority to redetermine a deficiency of second tier tax with respect to an act of self dealing by a private foundation under Code section 4941(b). The court found that because the second tier tax was not "imposed" until after the court's decision was final, it did not have jurisdiction to redetermine a deficiency of that tax.

AMENDMENTS TO LAW

The Code was revised by section 2 of Pub. L. 96-596 to impose the second tier taxes at the end of a "taxable period," which begins with the event giving rise to the tax and ends on the earliest of (i) the date a notice of deficiency with respect to the first tier tax is mailed, or (ii) the date the first tier tax is assessed if no deficiency notice is mailed, or (iii) (in come cases) the date the taxable act is corrected.

Under new section 4961, if the taxpayer corrects the act (or failure to act) giving rise to the second tier tax within a "correction period," the tax is not to be assessed, and if assessed, it is to be abated, and if collected, it is to be credited or refunded as an overpayment. If the taxpayer files a petition with the Tax Court to redetermine the deficiency within the time limits of section 6213, the tax also is not to be assessed until the decision of the Tax Court becomes final (under Code section 7481). The correction period begins on the day the taxable event occurs and ends 90 days after the date of mailing of a notice of deficiency with respect to the second tier tax, extended by any period during which section 6213 bars assessment (determined without regard to section 4961) including the period (where applicable) until the decision of the Tax Court becomes final. The correction period may also be extended for any period the Service determines is reasonable and necessary to bring about correction.

If no petition is filed with the Tax Court, the tax will be assessed. If the taxpayer pays the first tier tax in full, files a claim for refund of the amount paid, and files a refund suit if the claim is denied, all within the specified time limits, collection of an assessed second tier tax is suspended during administrative and judicial refund procedures.

Under section 4961, the court that determines that the second tier tax was properly imposed has jurisdiction to conduct supplemental proceedings to determine whether the taxable act was corrected within the correction period.

Finally, the amount involved for second tier tax under section 4941, 4951, or 4975, is the highest fair market value during the taxable period (rather than the correction period).

These revisions to the Code are effective for first tier taxes as if included in the Code when the tax was first imposed. The revisions are effective only for second tier taxes assessed after December 24, 1980, but do not operate to permit the assessment of a second tier tax in a case to which, on December 24, 1980, the doctrine of res judicata applied.

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS

These amendments are proposed to conform the regulations to the changes to the Code made by section 2 of Pub. L. 96-596.

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before these proposed regulations are adopted, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably seven copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

The Internal Revenue Service invites comments on the proposal to delete from existing regulations the special rule for determining the end of the taxable period. See, e.g., §53.4941(e)-1(a)(3). The Service may consider retaining the existing rule (and including it in the regulations under section 4975) when final regulations are published.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT

Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking which solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these proposed regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

NON-APPLICABILITY OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Treasury Department has determined that this regulation is not subject to review under Executive Order 12291 or the Treasury and OMB implementation of the Order dated April 29, 1983.

PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

The collection of information requirements contained in this notice of proposed rulemaking have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for review under section 3504(h) of the Paperwork Reduction Act. Comments on these requirements should be sent to the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs of OMB, Attention: Desk Officer for Internal Revenue Service, New Executive Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20503. The Internal Revenue Service requests that persons submitting comments on these requirements to OMB also send copies of those comments to the Service.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations was George B. Baker of the Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

Amendments to 26 CFR parts 53, 54, 141, and 301 are proposed as follows:

FOUNDATION AND SIMILAR EXCISE TAXES

[26 CFR Part 53]

Paragraph 1. Section 53.4941(b)-1(a) is amended by striking out the words "correction period (as defined in §53.4941(e)-1(d))." and insertng the words "taxable period (as defined in §53.4941(e)-1(a))." in lieu thereof.

Par. 2. Section 53.4941(e)-1 is amended: first, by removing subparagraph (3) of paragraph (a); second, by redesignating subparagraph (4) of paragraph (a) as subparagraph (3) of paragraph (a) and by revising Example (3) of the redesignated subparagraph; third, by striking out, in subparagraph (3) of paragraph (b) and in Example (2) of paragraph (e)(2)(ii), the words "correction period" and inserting the words "taxable period" in lieu thereof; fourth, by revising subparagraph (1) of paragraph (a); fifth, by revising Example (4) of paragraph (b)(4); and sixth, by revising paragraph (d), to read as follows:

§53.4941(e)-1 Definitions.

(a) Taxable period—(1) In general. For purposes of any act of self-dealing, the term "taxable period" means the period beginning with the date on which the act of self-dealing occurs and ending on the earliest of:

(i) The date of mailing of a notice of deficiency under section 6212 with respect to the tax imposed by section 4941(a)(1),

(ii) The date on which correction of the act of self-dealing is completed, or

(iii) The date on which the tax imposed by section 4941(a)(1) is assessed.

(3) Examples.

Example (3). On July 16, 1980, F, a manager of private foundation X acting on behalf of the foundation, knowing his act to be one of self-dealing, willfully and without reasonable cause engaged in an act of self-dealing by selling certain real estate to A, a disqualified person. On March 25, 1981, A files a waiver of the restrictions on assessment and collection of the tax imposed on the sale under section 4941(a)(1) and the tax is assessed on April 1, 1981. The taxable period with respect to the act of self-dealing for both A and F is July 16, 1980, through April 1, 1981.

(b) Amount involved. ***

(4) Examples. ***

Example (4). D, a disqualified person with respect to private foundation T, purchases 100 shares of stock from T for $5,000 on June 15, 1982. The fair market value of the 100 shares of stock on that date is $4,800. D sells the 100 shares of stock on December 20, 1983, for $6,000. On December 27, 1983, a notice of deficiency with respect to the taxes imposed under subsections (a) and (b) of section 4941 is mailed to D and the taxable period ends. D fails to correct during the taxable period. Between June 15, 1982, and the end of the taxable period, the stock was quoted on the New York Stock Exchange at a high of $67 per share. The amount involved with respect to the tax imposed under subsection (a) is $5,000, and the amount involved with respect to the tax imposed under subsection (b) for failure to correct is $6,700 (100 shares at $67 per share), the highest fair market value during the taxable period.

* * * * *

(d) Cross reference. For rules relating to taxable events that are corrected within the correction period, defined in section 4962(e), see section 4961(a), and the regulations thereunder.

* * * * *

Par. 3. Section 53.4942(a)-1 is amended: (1) by striking out, in subparagraph (2) of paragraph (a), the words "correction period" and "paragraph (c)(3)" and inserting the words "taxable period" and "paragraph (c)(1)" respectively in lieu thereof; (2) by removing Example (3) from subparagraph (4) of paragraph (c); and (3) by revising subparagraph (4) of paragraph (a) and subparagraphs (1) and (3) of paragraph (c) to read as follows:

§53.4942(a)-1 Taxes for failure to distribute income.

(a) Imposition of tax. ***

(4) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). M, a private foundation which uses the calendar year as its taxable year, has at the end of 1981, $50,000 of undistributed income (as defined in paragraph (a) of §53.4942(a)-2) for 1981. As of January 1, 1983, $40,000 is still undistributed. On August 15, 1983, a notice of deficiency with respect to the excise taxes imposed by section 4942(a) and (b) is mailed to M under section 6212(a) and the taxable period ends. Thus, under these facts, an initial excise tax of $6,000 (15 percent of $40,000) is imposed upon M. An additional excise tax of $40,000 (100 percent of $40,000) is imposed by section 4942(b). Under section 4961(a), however, if the undistributed income is reduced to zero during the correction period, this latter tax will not be assessed, and if assessed, it will be abated, and if collected, it will be credited or refunded as an overpayment.

Example (2). Assume the facts as stated in example (1), except that the notice of deficiency is mailed to M on Sepember 7, 1984, and as of January 1, 1984, only $10,000 of the $50,000 of undistributed income with respect to 1981 is undistributed. Therefore, initial excise taxes of $6,000 (15 percent of $40,000, M's undistributed income from 1981, as of January 1, 1983) and $1,500 (15 percent of $10,000, M's undistributed income from 1981 as of January 1, 1984) are imposed by section 4942(a). If the $10,000 remains undistributed as of September 7, 1984, the end of the taxable period, an additional excise tax of $10,000 (100 percent of $10,000, M's undistributed income from 1981, as of September 7, 1984) is imposed by section 4942(b).

* * * * *

(c) Certain periods. For purposes of this section—

(1) Taxable period. The term "taxable period" means, with respect to the undistributed income of a private foundation for any taxable year, the period beginning with the first day of the taxable year and ending on the earlier of:

(i) The date of mailing of a notice of deficiency under section 6212(a) with respect to the initial excise tax imposed under section 4942(a), or

(ii) The date on which the initial excise tax imposed under section 4942(a) is assessed.

For example, assume M, a private foundation which uses the calendar year as the taxable year, has $15,000 of undistributed income for 1981. A notice of deficiency is mailed to M under section 6212(a) on June 1, 1983. With respect to the undistributed income of M for 1981, the taxable period began on January 1, 1981, and ended on June 1, 1983.

* * * * *

(3) Cross reference. For rules relating to taxable events that are corrected within the correction period, defined in section 4962(e), see section 4961(a) and the regulations thereunder.

* * * * *

Par. 4. Section 53.4942(a)-3 is amended by revising Example (2) in paragraph (d)(3) to read as follows:

§53.4942(a)-3 Qualifying distributions defined.

* * * * *

(d) Treatment of qualifying distributions. ***

(3) Examples. ***

Example (2). M, a private foundation which uses the calendar year as the taxable year, has undistributed income of $300 for 1981, $200 for 1982, and $400 for 1983. On January 14, 1983, M makes its first qualifying distribution in 1983 when it sets aside (within the meaning of paragraph (b) of this section) $700 for construction of a hospital. On February 24, 1983 a notice of deficiency with respect to the excise taxes imposed by section 4942(a) and (b) in regard to M's undistributed income for 1981 is mailed to M under section 6212(a). M notifies the Commissioner in writing on March 24, 1983, that it is making an election under subparagaph (2) of this paragraph to have its distribution of January 14th applied first against its undistributed income for 1982, next against its undistributed income for 1981, and last against its undistributed income for 1983. Thus, $200 of the $700 qualifying distribution is treated as made out of the undistributed income for 1982; $300, out of undistributed income for 1981; and $200 ($700 less the sum of $200 and $300), out of the undistributed income for 1983. Thus, an initial excise tax of $45 (15 percent of $300) is imposed under section 4942 (a). Since M made the election described above, the $300 (treated as distributed out of undistributed income for 1981) corrects (within the meaning of section 4962(d)(2)) the taxable act because the undistributed income for 1981 is reduced to zero. Furthermore, correction is effected within the correction period (as defined in section 4962(e)(1) and §53.4962-1(e)). Therefore, under the provisions of section 4961(a), the additional tax imposed by section 4942(b) will not be assessed.

* * * * *

Par. 5. Section 53.4943-2 is amended by revising paragraph (b) to read as follows:

§53.4943-2 Imposition of tax on excess business holdings of private foundations.

* * * * *

(b) Additional tax. In any case in which the initial tax is imposed under section 4943(a) with respect to the holdings of a private foundation in any business enterprise, if, at the close of the taxable period (as defined in section 4943(d)(2) and §53.4943-9) with respect to such holdings the foundation still has excess business holdings in such enterprise, there is imposed a tax under section 4943(b) equal to 200 percent of the value of such excess holdings as of the last day of the taxable period.

Par. 6. Section 53.4943-9 is amended by revising subparagraphs (1) and (2) of paragraph (a), and by revising paragraph (b) to read as follows:

§53.4943-9 Business holdings; certain periods.

(a) Taxable period—(1) In general. For purposes of section 4943, the term "taxable period" means, with respect to any excess business holdings of a private foundation in a business enterprise, the period beginning with the first day on which there are such excess business holdings and ending on the earliest of:

(i) The date of mailing of a notice of deficiency under section 6212 with respect to the tax imposed on the holdings by section 4943(a);

(ii) The date on which the excess is eliminated; or

(iii) The date on which the tax imposed by section 4943(a) is assessed.

(2) Example. M, a private foundation, first has excess business holdings in X, a corporation, on February 5, 1972. A notice of deficiency is mailed under section 6212 to M on June 1, 1974. With respect to M's excess business holdings in X, the taxable period begins on February 5, 1972, and ends on June 1, 1974.

* * * * *

(b) Cross reference. For rules relating to taxable events that are corrected within the correction period, defined in section 4962(e), see section 4961(a) and the regulations thereunder.

* * * * *

Par. 7. Section 53.4944-2 is amended by striking out the words "correction period" throughout the section and inserting the words "taxable period" in lieu thereof and by striking out, in paragraph (a), the words "4944(e)(3)" and inserting the words "4944(e)(1)" in lieu thereof.

Par. 8. Section 53.4944-5 is amended by revising paragraphs (a) and (d) to read as follows:

§53.4944-5 Definitions.

(a) Taxable period. For purposes of section 4944, the term "taxable period" means, with respect to any investment which jeopardizes the carrying out of a private foundation's exempt purposes, the period beginning with the date on which the amount is invested and ending on the earliest of:

(1) The date of mailing of a notice of deficiency under section 6212 with respect to the tax imposed on the making of the investment by section 4944(a)(1);

(2) The date on which the amount invested is removed from jeopardy; or

(3) The date on which the tax imposed by section 4944(a)(1) is assessed.

* * * * *

(d) Cross reference. For rules relating to taxable events that are corrected within the correction period, defined in section 4962(e), see section 4961(a) and the regulations thereunder.

Par. 9. Section 53.4945-1 is amended: (1) by striking out, in subparagraph (1) of paragraph (b), the words "correction period" and inserting the words "taxable period" in lieu thereof; and (2) by revising Example (2) in paragraph (c)(3) and by revising paragraph (e) to read as follows:

§53.4945-1 Taxes on taxable expenditures.

* * * * *

(c) Special rules. ***

(3) Examples. ***

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1). Further assume that within the taxable period A makes a motion to correct the taxable expenditure at a meeting of the board of directors. The motion is defeated by a two-to-one vote, A voting for the motion and B and C voting against it. In these circumstances an additional tax is imposed on the private foundation in the amount of $100,000 (100 percent of $100,000). The additional tax imposed on B and C is $10,000 (50 percent of $100,000 subject to a maximum of $10,000). B and C are jointly and severally liable for the $10,000, and this sum may be collected by the Service from either of them.

* * * * *

(e) Certain periods—(1) Taxable period. For purposes of section 4945, the term "taxable period" means, with respect to any taxable expenditure, the period beginning with the date on which the taxable expenditure occurs and ending on the earlier of:

(i) The date of mailing of a notice of deficiency under section 6212 with respect to the tax imposed on taxable expenditures by section 4945(a)(1); or

(ii) The date on which the tax imposed by section 4945(a)(1) is assessed.

(2) Cross reference. For rules relating to taxable events that are corrected within the correction period, defined in section 4962(e), see section 4961(a) and the regulations thereunder.

Par. 10. Subpart K of Part 53 is redesignated subpart L, and a new subpart K is added to read as follows:

SUBPART K—SECOND TIER EXCISE TAXES

§53.4961-1 Abatement of second tier taxes for correction within correction period.

If any taxable event is corrected during the correction period for the event, then any second tier tax imposed with respect to the event shall not be assessed. If the tax has been assessed, it shall be abated. If the tax has been collected, it shall be credited or refunded as an overpayment. For purposes of this section, the tax imposed includes interest, additions to the tax and additional amounts. For definitions of the terms "second tier tax," "taxable event," "correct," and "correction period," see §53.4962-1.

53.4961-2 Court proceedings to determine liability for second tier tax.

(a) Introduction. Under section 4961(b) and (c), the period of limitations on collection may be suspended and assessment or collection of first or second tier tax may be prohibited during the pendency of administrative and judicial proceedings conducted to determine a taxpayer's liability for second tier tax. This section provides rules relating to the suspension of the limitations period and the prohibitions on assessment and collection. In addition, this section describes the administrative and judicial proceedings to which these rules apply.

(b) Initial proceeding—(1) Defined. For purposes of subpart K, an initial proceeding means a proceeding described in subparagraph (2) or (3).

(2) Tax Court proceeding before assessment. A proceeding is described in this subparagraph (2) if it is a proceeding with respect to the taxpayer's liability for second tier tax and is commenced in accordance with section 6213(a).

(3) Refund proceeding commenced before correction period ends. A proceeding is described in this subparagraph (3) if it is a proceeding commenced under section 7422, in accordance with the provisions of §53.4962-1(e)(4) and (5) (relating to prerequisites to extension of the correction period during certain refund proceedings), and with respect to the taxpayer's liability for second tier tax.

(c) Supplemental proceeding—(1) Jurisdiction. If a determination in an initial proceeding that a taxpayer is liable for a second tier tax has become final, the court in which the initial proceeding was commenced shall have jurisdiction to conduct any necessary supplemental proceeding to determine whether the taxable event was corrected during the correction period.

(2) Time for beginning proceeding. The time for beginning a supplemental proceeding begins on the day after a determination in an initial proceeding becomes final and ends on the 90th day after the end of the correction period.

(d) Restriction on assessment during Tax Court proceeding. If a supplemental proceeding described in section 4961(b) and §53.4961-2(c) is commenced in the Tax Court, the provisions of the second and third sentences of section 6213(a) and the first and third sentences of §301.6213-1(a)(2) apply with respect to a deficiency in second tier tax until the decision of the Tax Court in the supplemental proceeding is final.

(e) Suspension of period of collection for second tier tax—(1) Scope. Except as provided in subparagraph (6), this paragraph (e) applies to the second tier tax assessed with respect to a taxable event if a claim described in subparagraph (2) is filed.

(2) Claim for refund. A claim for refund is described in this subparagraph (2) if, no later than 90 days after the day on which the second tier tax is assessed with respect to a taxable event, the taxpayer—

(i) Pays the full amount of first tier tax for the taxable period, and

(ii) Files a claim for refund of the amount paid.

(3) Collection prohibited. No levy or proceeding in court for the collection of the second tier tax shall be made, begun, or prosecuted until the end of the collection prohibition period described in subparagraph (5). Notwithstanding section 7421(a), the collection by levy or proceeding may be enjoined during the collection prohibition period by a proceeding in the proper court.

(4) Suspension of running of period of limitations on collection. With respect to a second tier tax to which this paragraph (e) applies, the running of the period of limitations provided in section 6502 (relating to collection of tax by levy or by a proceeding in court) shall be suspended for the collection prohibition period described in subparagraph (5).

(5) Collection prohibition period. The collection prohibition period begins on the day the second tier tax is assessed and ends on the latest of:

(i) The day a decision in a refund proceeding commenced before the 91st day after denial of the claim described in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph (including any supplemental proceeding under §53.4961-2(c)) becomes final;

(ii) The 90th day after the claim referred to in subparagraph (2) is denied; or

(iii) The 90th day after the second tier tax is assessed.

(6) Jeopardy collection. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of the second tier tax is in jeopardy, nothing in this paragraph (e) shall prevent the immediate collection of such tax.

(f) Finality—(1) Tax Court proceeding. For purposes of this subpart K, section 7481 applies in determining when a decision in a Tax Court proceeding becomes final.

(2) Refund proceeding. For purposes of this subpart K, §301.7422-1 applies in determining when a decision in a refund proceeding becomes final.

§53.4962-1 Definitions.

(a) First tier tax. For purposes of this subpart K, the term "first tier tax" means any tax imposed by subsection (a) of section 4941, 4942, 4943, 4944, 4945, 4951, 4952, 4971, or 4975. A first tier tax may also be referred to as an "initial tax" in parts 53 and 54.

(b) Second tier tax. For purposes of this subpart K, the term "second tier tax" means any tax imposed by subsection (b) of section 4941, 4942, 4943, 4944, 4945, 4951, 4952, 4971, or 4975. A second tier tax may also be referred to as an "additional tax" in parts 53 and 54.

(c) Taxable event. For purposes of this subpart K, the term "taxable event" means any act, or failure to act, giving rise to liability for tax under section 4941, 4942, 4943, 4944, 4945, 4951, 4952, 4971, or 4975.

(d) Correct—(1) In general. Except as provided in subparagraph (2), the term "correct" has the same meaning for purposes of this subpart K as in the section which imposes the second tier tax or the regulations thereunder.

(2) Special rules. The term "correct" means—

(i) For a second tier tax imposed by section 4942(b), reducing the amount of the undistributed income to zero,

(ii) For a second tier tax imposed by section 4943(b), reducing the amount of the excess business holdings to zero, and

(iii) For a second tier tax imposed by section 4944(b), removing the investment from jeopardy.

(e) Correction period—(1) In general. The correction period with respect to any taxable event shall begin with the date on which the taxable event occurs and shall end 90 days after the date of mailing of a notice of deficiency under section 6212 with respect to the second tier tax imposed with respect to the taxable event.

(2) Extensions of correction period. The correction period referred to in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph shall be extended by any period in which a deficiency cannot be assessed under section 6213(a). In addition, the correction period referred to in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph (e) shall be extended in accordance with subparagraphs (3), (4), and (5) of this paragraph except that subparagraph (4) or (5) shall not operate to extend a correction period with respect to which a taxpayer has filed a petition with the United States Tax Court for redetermination of a deficiency within the time prescribed by section 6213(a).

(3) Extensions by Commissioner. The correction period referred to in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be extended by any period which the Commissioner determines is reasonable and necessary to bring about correction (including, for taxes imposed by section 4975, equitable relief sought by the Secretary of Labor) of the taxable event. The Commissioner ordinarily will not extend the correction period unless the following factors are present:

(i) The taxpayer on whom the second tier tax is imposed, the Secretary of Labor (for taxes imposed by section 4975), or an appropriate State officer (as defined in section 6104(c)(2)) is actively seeking in good faith to correct the taxable event;

(ii) Adequate corrective action cannot reasonably be expected to result during the unextended correction period;

(iii) For taxes imposed by section 4975, the Secretary of Labor requests the extension because subdivision (ii) applies; and

(iv) For taxes imposed by chapter 42 (other than taxes imposed by section 4940), the taxable event appears to have been an isolated occurrence so that it appears unlikely that similar taxable events will occur in the future.

(4) Extension for payment of first tier tax. If, within the unextended correction period, the taxpayer pays the full amount of the first tier tax imposed with respect to the taxable event the Commissioner shall extend the correction period to the later of—

(i) Ninety days after the payment of the first tier tax, or

(ii) The last day of the correction period determined without regard to this paragraph.

(5) Extensions for filing claim for refund or refund suit. If prior to the expiration of the correction period (including extensions) a claim for refund is filed with respect to payment of the full amount of the first tier tax imposed with respect to the taxable event, the Commissioner shall extend the correction period during the pendency of the claim plus an additional 90 days. If within that time a suit or proceeding referred to in section 7422(g) with respect to the claim is filed, the Commissioner shall extend the correction period until the determination in the suit for refund (determined without regard to a supplemental proceeding under section 4961(b)) is final, determined under §301.7422-2(a).

(6) End of correction period if waiver accepted. If the notice of deficiency referred to in paragraph (1) is not mailed because there is a waiver of the restrictions on assessment and collection of the deficiency or because the deficiency is paid, the correction period will end with the end of the collection prohibition period described in §53.4961-2(e)(5).

(7) Date on which taxable event occurs. For purposes of subparagraph (1), the taxable event shall be treated as occurring—

(i) Under section 4942, on the first day of the taxable year for which there is undistributed income,

(ii) Under section 4943, on the first day on which there are excess business holdings,

(iii) Under section 4971, on the last day of the plan year in which there is an accumulated funding deficiency, and

(iv) In all other cases, the date on which the event occurred.

(f) Effective date. The provisions of this subpart K are effective with respect to second tier taxes assessed after December 24, 1980. The preceding sentence shall not be construed to permit the assessment of a tax in a case to which, on December 24, 1980, the doctrine of res judicata applied.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Computation of "Income" of an electric cooperative under section 501(c)(12)

EE-17-81

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Registrations relating to electric cooperatives under section 501(c)(12) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. These proposed regulations will provide necessary guidance to those electric cooperatives making a determination of their exempt status under section 501(c)(12) and will affect such cooperatives and their members.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by March 12, 1984. The amendments are proposed to be effective for taxable years beginning after [THE DATE OF PUBLICATION OF THESE REGULATIONS IN THE FEDERAL REGISTER AS A TREASURY DECISION].

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (EE-17-81), Washington, D.C. 20224).

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Patricia K. Keesler of the Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Construction Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224 (Attention: CC:LR:T), 202-566-3430, not a toll-free number).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations under section 501(c)(12) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. Section 501(c)(12) provides that local benevolent life insurance companies, mutual irrigation and telephone companies and like organizations are exempt from federal income tax if certain requirements are met. Rev. Rul. 67-265, 1967-2 C.B. 205, provides that a cooperative organization furnishing light and water to its members is a "like organization" within the meaning of section 501(c)(12). The proposed regulations amend the existing regulations to conform them to the current position of the Internal Revenue Service that cooperatives that furnish light, water, heat, gas, or electricity to their members are like organizations under 501(c)(12).

COMPUTATION OF INCOME

Under section 501(c)(12) an organization must receive 85 percent or more of its income from members in order to be exempt from federal taxation. The existing regulations do not provide a method for electric cooperatives to compute income for purposes of the 85 percent member-income test. This lack of clarity has caused administrative difficulties for the Service as well as the public. The proposed amendments to the regulations provide that income is determined by subtracting cost of goods sold from gross sales and cost of goods sold is determined in accordance with the full absorption method of inventory costing under §1.471-11 of the Income Tax Regulations. Comments are requested on alternative methods of computing cost cost of goods sold, in lieu of or in addition to the full absorption method.

EFFECTIVE DATE

The requirement that an electric cooperative's income be determined by subtracting the cost of goods sold from gross sales would be effective for taxable years beginning after the date on which final regulations are issued. For taxable years beginning before final regulations are issued, an electric cooperative may continue to determine its income for purposes of the 85 percent member-income test pursuant to the method consistently applied by the organization prior to January 10, 1984.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291 AND REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT

The Commissioner has determined that this proposed regulation is not a major regulation for purposes of Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a regulatory impact analysis is not required.

Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comments, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these proposed regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably six copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations is Patricia K. Keesler of the Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

It is proposed to amend 26 CFR Part 1 by adding the following new §1.501(c)(12)-2 immediately after §1.501(c)(12)-1:

§1.501(c)(12)-2 Like Organizations.

(a) In general. For purposes of section 501(c)(12) and §1.501(c)(12)-1, the term "like organization" includes an organization that furnishes light, water, heat, gas or electricity to its members on a cooperative basis. Thus, for example, a cooperative that provides electricity to its members may qualify for exemption from federal income taxes as a "like organization" under section 501(c)(12) provided 85 percent or more of its income consists of amounts collected from members for the sole purpose of meeting losses and expenses.

(b) Electric cooperatives. For taxable years of an electric cooperative beginning after [THE DATE ON WHICH THIS REGULATION IS PUBLISHED AS A TREASURY DECISION], income from the sale of electricity shall be determined for purposes of applying the 85 percent member-income test by subtracting the cost of producing or purchasing electricity (whichever is applicable) from the gross receipts derived from sales of electricity. The cost of producing or purchasing electricity shall be determined in the manner described in §1.471-11, relating to the full absorption method of inventory. Section 1.471-11 shall apply as if the sale of electricity were an income producing factor, with inventories required at the beginning and end of each taxable year. However, notwithstanding any contrary provision in §1.471-11, for purposes of this section, the cost of producing electricity shall not include patronage dividends (as defined in section 1388(a)), whether paid by way of cash or qualified or nonqualified written notice of allocation.

(c) Example. The following example illustrates the provisions of this section.

Example. For its most recently completed taxable year, an electric power cooperative had gross receipts of $185*x*: $170*x* from sales of electricity to its members, $10*x* from sales of electricity to nonmembers, and $5*x* from capital gains, dividends and interest. The cost of goods sold, determined in accordance with the provisions of §1.471-11, was $102*x* for the sales to members and $6*x* for the sales to nonmembers. For purposes of the 85 percent member-income requirement of section 501(c)(12), the electric power cooperative's "income" from sales of electricity to its members is its gross income of $68*x* ($170*x* from sales to members minus $102*x*, cost of goods sold to members). Its "income" from sales of electricity to nonmembers is its gross income of $4*x* ($10*x* from sales to nonmembers minus $6*x*, cost of goods sold to nonmembers). Therefore, of the total gross income of $77*x* ($68*x* from sales to members plus $4*x* from sales to nonmembers plus $5*x* from capital gains, dividends and interest), the amount collected from members for the sole purpose of meeting losses and expenses is 88 percent ($68*x* gross income from members dividend by total gross income of $77*x*). Thus, the cooperative meets the 85 percent test of section 501(c)(12).

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Individual Retirement Plans, Simplified Employee Pensions, and Qualified Voluntary Employee Contributions

EE-148-81

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations relating to individual retirement plans, simplified employee pensions, and qualified voluntary employee contributions. Changes to the applicable law were made by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 [Pub. L. 97-34, 1981-2 C.B. 256]. The regulations would provide the public with the guidance needed to comply with the Act. The regulations would affect: institutions which sponsor individual retirement plans and simplified employee pensions, employers and individuals who use individual retirement plans and simplified employee pensions for retirement income, employers who maintain plans which accept qualified voluntary employee contributions and employees who make qualified voluntary employee contributions.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by March 23, 1984. The regulations are generally effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1981.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1), the Estate Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 20), the Gift Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 25), and the Procedure and Administration Regulations (26 CFR Part 301) under sections 219, 408, 409, 415, 2039, 2517, and 6652 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. These amendments are proposed to conform the regulations to sections 311 (except subsection (b)) and 314(b) of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (95 Stat. 274, 286) [Pub. L. 97-

34, 1981-2 C.B. 256, 310, 317]. These regulations are to be issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT PLANS

Section 219, as amended by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, allows an individual a deduction of up to the lesser of $2,000 or compensation includible in gross income for contributions to an individual retirement plan. Unlike old section 219, an individual is allowed this deduction whether or not he is an "active participant" in an employer's plan. The deduction for individual retirement plan contributions is reduced, however, by amounts which the employee contributes to an employer's plan and treats as qualified voluntary employee contributions. The remainder of the individual retirement plan rules are similar to those under prior law.

SPOUSAL INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS

Code section 220 was deleted by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981. In its place is new section 219(c), which allows an individual and his nonworking spouse to contribute up to the lesser of compensation includible in the working spouse's gross income or $2,250 to individual retirement accounts. The spouses must file a joint return to obtain this additional $250 deduction. No deduction is allowed if the spouse for whose benefit the individual retirement plan is maintained has attained age 70½ before the close of the taxable year.

There is no requirement, as under old law, that equal amounts be contributed to the individual retirement accounts of both spouses. However, no more than $2,000 may be contributed to the individual retirement account of either spouse.

SIMPLIFIED EMPLOYEE PENSIONS

The Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 increased the maximum deduction for contributions to simplified employee pensions to the lesser of 15% of compensation from the employer maintaining the simplified employee pension arrangement or the amount contributed by the employer to the simplified employee pension and included in gross income (but not in excess of $15,000). An employee may also contribute and deduct the lesser of $2,000 or compensation includible in gross income regardless of the employer's contribution to the simplified employee pension.

QUALIFIED VOLUNTARY EMPLOYEE CONTRIBUTIONS

Section 219, as amended by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, allows an individual a deduction for qualified voluntary employee contributions (QVEC's). QVEC's are voluntary contributions made by an individual as an employee under an employer's plan. The employer's plan must allow employees to make contributions which may be treated as QVEC's.

The maximum amount which can be deducted as a QVEC is the lesser of $2,000 or the compensation includible in gross income from the employer which maintains the plan which accepts the QVEC's.

Proposed §1.219(a)-5(a) sets forth in type of plans which can accept qualified voluntary employee contributions.

Proposed §1.219(a)-5(c) sets forth the rules a plan must follow to receive qualified voluntary employee contributions.

Additional rules for QVEC's are set forth in proposed §1.219(a)-5(d), (e), and (f).

The reporting rules for qualified voluntary employee contributions are in proposed §1.219(a)-5(g). This provision gives the Commissioner discretionary authority to modify the reporting requirements for these contributions. Any such modification of the reporting requirements would be subject to review by the Office of Management and Budget under the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980.

OTHER AMENDMENTS

Conforming and technical amendments made by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 have been made to the regulations under Code sections 408, 409, 415, 2039, 2517, and 6652.

Although the Treasury Department stopped selling retirement bonds in early 1982, the regulations contain references to Code sections 405 and 409. These references apply to retirement bonds sold through early 1982 and to retirement bonds that may be sold subsequently.

These proposed regulations do not reflect amendments made to the Code by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 [Pub. L. 97-248, 1982-2 C.B. 462]. These proposed regulations reflect changes in the applicable statutory provisions made by the Technical Corrections Act of 1982 [Pub. L. 97-448, 1983-1 C.B. 451].

EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291 AND REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT

The Commissioner has determined that this proposed regulation is not a major regulation for persons of Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a regulatory impact analysis is not required.

Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking which solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these proposed regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably seven copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

The collection of information requirements contained in this notice of proposed rulemaking have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for review under section 3504(h) of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. Comments on these requirements should be sent to the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs of OMB, Attention: Desk Office for Internal Revenue Service, New Executive Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20503. The Internal Revenue Service requests that persons submitting comments on these requirements to OMB also send copies of those comments to the Service.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations is William D. Gibbs of the Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Parts 1, 20, 25, and 301 are as follows:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS

[26 CFR Part 1]

Paragraph 1. There are added after proposed §1.219-3, 46 Fed. Reg. 36202 (1981) [EE-7-78, 1981-2 C.B. 735, 740] the following new sections 1.219(a)-1 through 1.219(a)-6:

§1.219(a)-1 Deduction for contributions to individual retirement plans and employer plans under the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981.

(a) In general. Under section 219, as amended by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, an individual is allowed a deduction from gross income for amounts paid on his behalf to an individual retirement plan or to certain employer retirement plans. The following is a table of contents for the rules for deductions on behalf of individuals to individual retirement plans or employer plans.

§1.219(a)-2: Individual retirement plans.

§1.219(a)-3: Spousal individual retirement accounts.

§1.219(a)-4: Simplified employee pensions.

§1.219(a)-5: Employer plans.

§1.219(a)-6: Divorced individuals.

(b) Definitions. The following is a list of terms and their definitions to be used for purposes of this section and §§1.219(a)-2 through 1.219(a)-6:

(1) Individual retirement plan. The term "individual retirement plan" means an individual retirement account described in section 408(a), an individual retirement annuity described in section 408(b), and a retirement bond described in section 409.

(2) Simplified employee pension. The term "simplified employee pension" has the meaning set forth in §1.408-7(a).

(3) Compensation. The term "compensation" means wages, salaries, professional fees, or other amounts derived from or received for personal service actually rendered (including, but not limited to, commissions paid salesmen, compensation for services on the basis of a percentage of profits, commissions on insurance premiums, tips, and bonuses), but does not include amounts derived from or received as earnings or profits from property (including, but not limited to, interest and dividends) or amounts not includible in gross income such as amounts excluded under section 911. Compensation includes earned income, as defined in section 401(c)(2), reduced by amounts deductible under sections 404 and 405. Compensation does not include amounts received as deferred compensation, including any pension or annuity payment. Compensation does not include unemployment compensation within the meaning of section 85(c).

(4) Qualified voluntary employee contribution. The term "qualified voluntary employee contribution" means any employee contribution which is not a mandatory contribution within the meaning of section 411(c)(2)(C) made by an individual as an employee under a qualified employer plan or government plan, which plan allows an employee to make such contributions, and which the individual has not designated as a contribution other than a qualified voluntary employee contribution. Thus, if employee contributions are required as a condition of plan participation, they are mandatory contributions within the meaning of section 411(c)(2)(C) and cannot be treated as qualified voluntary employee contributions.

(5) Qualified retirement contribution. The term "qualified retirement contribution" means any amount paid in cash for the taxable year by or on behalf of an individual for his benefit to an individual retirement plan and any qualified voluntary employee contribution paid in cash by the individual for the taxable year.

(6) Deductible employee contribution. The term "deductible employee contribution" means any qualified voluntary employee contribution made after December 31, 1981, in a taxable year beginning after such date and allowable as a deduction under section 219(a) for such taxable year.

(7) Qualified employer plan. The term "qualified employer plan" means—

(i) A plan described in section 401(a) which includes a trust exempt from tax under section 501(a).

(ii) An annuity plan described in section 403(a).

(iii) A qualified bond purchase plan described in section 405(a), and

(iv) A plan under which amounts are contributed by an individual's employer for an annuity contract described in section 403(b).

(8) Government plan. The term "government plan" means any retirement plan, whether or not qualified, established and maintained for its employees by the United States, by a State or political subdivision thereof, or by an agency or instrumentality of any of the foregoing.

(c) Effective date. This section and §§1.219(a)-2 through 1.219(a)-6 are effective for taxable years of individuals beginning after December 31, 1981.

§1.219(a)-2 Deduction for contributions to individual retirement plans under the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981.

(a) In general. Subject to the limitations and restrictions of paragraph (b) and the special rules of paragraph (c)(3) of this section, there shall be allowed a deduction under section 62 from gross income of amounts paid for the taxable year of an individual by or on behalf of such individual to an individual retirement plan. The deduction described in the preceding sentence shall be allowed only to the individual on whose behalf such individual retirement plan is maintained and only in the case of a contribution of cash. No deduction is allowable under this section for a contribution of property other than cash. In the case of a retirement bond, no deduction is allowed if the bond is redeemed within 12 months of its issue date.

(b) Limitations and restrictions—(1) Maximum deduction. The amount allowable as a deduction for contributions to an individual retirement plan to an individual for any taxable year cannot exceed the lesser of—

(i) $2,000, or

(ii) An amount equal to the compensation includible in the individual's gross income for the taxable year.

reduced by the amount of the individual's qualified voluntary employee contributions for the taxable year.

(2) Contributions after age 70½. No deduction is allowable for contributions to an individual retirement plan to an individual for the taxable year of the individual if he has attained the age of 70½ before the close of such taxable year.

(3) Rollover contributions. No deduction is allowable under §1.219(a)-2(a) for any taxable year of an individual with respect to a rollover contribution described in section 402(a)(5), 402(a)(7), 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), 405(d)(3), 408(d)(3), or 409(b)(3)(C).

(4) Amounts contributed under endowment contracts. (i) For any taxable year, no deduction is allowable under §1.219(a)-2(a) for amounts paid under an endowment contract described in §1.408-3(e) which is allocable under subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph to the cost of life insurance.

(ii) For any taxable year, the cost of current life insurance protection under an endowment contract described in paragraph (b)(4)(i) of this section is the product of the net premium cost, as determined by the Commissioner, and the excess, if any, of the death benefit payable under the contract during the policy year beginning in the taxable year over the cash value of the contract at the end of such policy year.

(c) Special rules—(1) Separate deduction for each individual. The maximum deduction allowable for contributions to an individual retirement plan is computed separately for each individual. Thus, if a husband and wife each has compensation of $15,000 for the taxable year, the maximum amount allowable as a deduction on their joint return is $4,000. See §1.219(a)-3 for the maximum deduction for a spousal individual retirement plan when one spouse has no compensation.

(2) Community property. Section 219 is to be applied without regard to any community property laws. Thus, if, for example, a husband and wife, live in a community property jurisdiction, the husband has compensation of $30,000 for the taxable year, and the wife has no compensation for the taxable year, then the maximum amount allowable as a deduction for contributions to an individual retirement plan, other than a spousal individual retirement plan, is $2,000.

(3) Employer contributions. For purposes of this chapter, any amount paid by an employer to an individual retirement plan of an employee (other than a self-employed individual who is an employee within the meaning of section 401(c)(1)) constitutes the payment of compensation to the employee. The payment is includible in the employee's gross income, whether or not a deduction for such payment is allowable under section 219 to this employee. An employer will be entitled to a deduction for compensation paid to an employee for amounts the employer contributes on the employee's behalf to an individual retirement plan if such deduction is otherwise allowable under section 162. See §1.404(h)-1 for certain limitations on this deduction in the case of employer contributions to a simplified employee pension.

(4) Year of inclusion in income. Any amount paid by an employer to an individual retirement plan (including retirement account or individual retirement annuity maintained as part of a simplified employee pension arrangement) shall be included in the gross income of the employee for the taxable year for which the contribution was made.

(5) Time when contributions deemed made. A taxpayer shall be deemed to have made a contribution on the last day of the preceding taxable year if the contribution is made on account of the taxable year which includes such last day and is made not later than the time prescribed by law for filing the return for such taxable year (including extensions thereof). A contibution made not later than the time prescribed by law for filing the return for a taxable year (including extensions thereof) shall be treated as made on account of such taxable year if it is irrevocably specified in writing to the trustee, insurance company, or custodian that the amounts contributed are for such taxable year.

(d) Excess contributions treated as contribution made during subsequent year for which there is an unused limitation—(1) In general. This paragraph sets forth rules for the possible deduction of excess contributions made to an individual retirement plan for the taxable years following the taxable year of the excess contribution. If for a taxable year subsequent to the taxable year for which the excess contribution was made, the maximum amount allowable as a deduction for contributions to an individual retirement plan exceeds the amount contributed, then the taxpayer, whether or not a deduction is actually claimed, shall be treated as having made an additional contribution for the taxable year in an amount equal to the lesser of—

(i) The amount of such excess, or

(ii) The amount of the excess contributions for such taxable year (determined under section 4973(b)(2) without regard to subparagraph (C) thereof).

(2) Amount contributed. For purposes of this paragraph, the amount contributed—

(i) Shall be determined without regard to this paragraph, and

(ii) Shall not include any rollover contribution.

(3) Special rule where excess deduction was allowed for closed year. Proper reduction shall be made in the amount allowable as a deduction by reason of this paragraph for any amount allowed as a deduction for contributions to an individual retirement plan for a prior taxable year for which the period for assessing a deficiency has expired if the amount so allowed exceeds the amount which should have been allowed for such prior taxable year.

(4) Excise tax consequences. See section 4973 and the regulations thereunder for the excise tax applicable to excess contributions made to individual retirement plans.

(5) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples. (Assume in each example, unless otherwise stated, that T is less than age 70½ and is not married.)

Example (1). (i) T, a calendar-year taxpayer, earns $1,500 in compensation includible in gross income for 1982. On December 1, 1982, T establishes an individual retirement account (IRA) and contributes $2,000 to the account. T does not withdraw any money from the IRA after the initial contribution. Under section 219(b)(1), the maximum amount that T can deduct for 1982 is $1,500. T has an excess contribution for 1982 of $500.

(ii) For 1983, T has compensation includible in gross income of $12,000. T makes a $1,000 contribution to his IRA for 1983.

(iii) Although T made only a $1,000 contribution to his tax for 1983, under the rules contained in this paragraph, T is treated as having made an additional contribution of $500 for 1983 and will be allowed to deduct $1,500 as his 1983 IRA contribution.

Example (2). (i) For 1982, the facts are the same as in Example (1).

(ii) For 1983, T has compensation includible in gross income of $12,000. T makes a $2,000 contribution to his IRA for 1983.

(iii) T will be allowed a $2,000 deduction for 1983 (the amount of his contribution). T will not be allowed a deduction for the $500 excess contribution made in 1982 because the maximum amount allowable for 1983 does not exceed the amount contributed.

Example (3). (i) For 1982, the facts are the same as in Example (1).

(ii) For 1983, T has compensation includible in gross income of $12,000. T makes a $1,800 contribution to his IRA for 1983.

(iii) For 1983, T will be allowed to deduct his contribution of $1,800 and $200 of the excess contribution made for 1982. He will not be allowed to deduct the remaining $300 of the excess contribution made for 1982 because his deduction for 1983 would then exceed $2,000, his allowable deduction for 1983.

(iv) For 1984, T has compensation includible in gross income of $15,000. T makes a $1,300 contribution to his IRA for 1984.

(v) T will be allowed to deduct both his $1,300 contribution for 1984 and the remaining $300 contribution made for 1982.

Example (4). (i) For 1982, the facts are the same as in Example (1).

(ii) For 1983, T has compensation includible in gross income of $12,000. T makes a $1,000 contribution to his IRA for 1983. T is allowed to deduct the $500 excess contribution for 1983 but fails to do so on his return. Consequently, T deducts only $1,000 for 1983.

(iii) Under no circumstances will T be allowed to deduct the $500 excess contribution made for 1982 for any taxable year after 1983 because T is treated as having made the contribution for 1983.

Example (5). For 1982, T has no compensation includible in gross income.

(iii) T will not be allowed to deduct for 1983 the $500 excess contribution for 1982 because the maximum amount allowable as a deduction under section 219(b)(1) is $0.

§1.219(a)-3 Deduction for retirement savings for certain married individuals.

(a) In general. Subject to the limitations and restrictions of paragraphs (c) and (d) and the special rules of paragraph (e) of this section, there shall be allowed a deduction under section 62 from gross income of amounts paid for the taxable year of an individual by or on behalf of such individual for the benefit of his spouse to an individual retirement plan. The amounts contributed to an individual retirement plan by or on behalf of an individual for the benefit of his spouse shall be deductible only by such individual and only in the case of a contribution of cash. No deduction is allowable under this section for a contribution of property other than cash. In the case of an individual retirement bond, no deduction is allowed if the bond is redeemed within 12 months of its issue date.

(b) Definition of compensation. For purposes of this section, the term "compensation" has the meaning set forth in §1.219(a)-1(b)(3).

(c) Maximum deduction. The amount allowable as a deduction under this section to an individual for any taxable year may not exceed the smallest of—

(1) $2,000,

(2) An amount equal to the compensation includible in the individual's gross income for the taxable year less the amount allowed as a deduction under section 219(a) (determined without regard to contributions to a simplified employee pension allowed under section 219(b)(2)), §1.219(a)-2 and §1.219(a)-5 for the taxable year, or

(3) $2,250 less the amount allowed as a deduction under section 219(a) (determined without regard to contributions to a simplified employee pension allowed under section 219(b)(2)), §1.219(a)-2 and §1.219(a)-5 for the taxable year.

(d) Limitations and restrictions—(1) Requirement to file joint return. No deduction is allowable under this section for a taxable year unless the individual and his spouse file a joint return under section 6013 for the taxable year.

(2) Employed spouses. No deduction is allowable under this section if the spouse of the individual has any compensation for the taxable year of such spouse ending with or within the taxable year of the individual. For purposes of this subparagraph, compensation has the meaning set forth in §1.219(a)-1(b)(3), except that compensation shall include amounts excluded under section 911.

(3) Contributions after age 70½. No deduction is allowable under this section with respect to any payment which is made for a taxable year of an individual if the individual for whose benefit the individual retirement plan is maintained has attained age 70½ before the close of such taxable year.

(4) Recontributed amounts. No deduction is allowable under this section for any taxable year of an individual with respect to a rollover contribution described in section 402(a)(5), 402(a)(7), 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), 405(d)(3), 408(d)(3), or 409(b)(3)(C).

(5) Amounts contributed under endowment contracts. The rules for endowment contracts under this section are the same as the provisions for such contracts under §1.219(a)-2(b)(4).

(e) Special rules—(1) Community property. This section is to be applied without regard to any community property laws.

(2) Time when contributions deemed made. The time when contributions are deemed made is determined under section 219(f)(3). See §1.219(a)-2(c)(5).

§1.219(a)-4 Deduction for contributions to simplified employee pensions.

(a) General rule—(1) In general. Under section 219(b)(2), if an employer contribution is made on behalf of an employee to a simplified employee pension described in section 408(k), the limitations of this section, and not section 219(b)(1) and §1.219(a)-2, shall apply for purposes of computing the maximum allowable deduction with respect to that contribution for that individual employee.

(2) Employer limitation. The maximum deduction under section 219(b)(2) for an employee with respect to an employer contribution to the employee's simplified employee pension under that employer's arrangement cannot exceed an amount equal to the lesser of—

(i) 15 percent of the employee's compensation from that employer (determined without regard to the employer contribution to the simplified employee pension) includible in the employee's gross income for the taxable year, or

(ii) The amount contributed by that employer to the employee's simplified employee pension and included in gross income (but not in excess of $15,000).

(3) Special rules—(i) Compensation. Compensation referred to in paragraph (a)(2)(i) has the same meaning as under §1.219)a)-1(b)(3) except that it includes only the compensation from the employer making the contribution to the simplified employee pension. Thus, if an individual earns $50,000 from employer A and $20,000 from employer B and employer B contributes $4,000 to a simplified employee pension on behalf of the individual, the maximum amount the individual will be able to deduct under section 219(b)(2) is 15 percent of $20,000, or $3,000.

(ii) Special rule for officers, shareholders, and owner-employees. In the case of an employee who is an officer, shareholder, or owner-employee described in section 408(k)(3) with respect to a particular employer, the $15,000 amount referred to in paragraph (a)(2)(ii) shall be reduced by the amount of tax taken into account with respect to such individual under section 408(d)(3)(D).

(iii) More than one employer arrangement. Except as provided in paragraph (c), below, the maximum deduction under paragraph (a)(2) for an individual who receives simplified employee pension contributions under two or more employers' simplified employee pension arrangements cannot exceed the sum of the maximum deduction limitations computed separately for that individual under each such employer's arrangement.

(iv) Section 408 rules. Under section 408(j), the limitations under section 408(a)(1) and (b)(2)(B) (§1.408-2(b)(1) and §1.408-3(b)(2)), shall be applied separately with respect to each employer's contributions to an individual's simplified employee pension.

(4) Additional deduction for individual retirement plan and qualified voluntary employee contribution. The deduction under this paragraph is in addition to any deduction allowed under section 219(a) to the individual for qualified retirement contributions.

(b) Contributions to simplified employee pensions after age 70½. The denial of deductions for contributions after age 70½ contained in section 219(d)(1) and §1.219(a)-2(b)(2) shall not apply with respect to employer contributions to a simplified employee pension.

(c) Multiple employer, etc. limitations—(1) Section 414(b), (c) and (m) employers. In the case of a controlled group of employers within the meaning of section 414(b) or (c) or employers aggregated under section 414(m), the maximum deduction limitation for an employee under paragraph (a)(2) shall be computed by treating such employers as one employer maintaining a single simplified employee pension arrangement and by treating the compensation of that employee from such employers as if from one employer. Thus, for example, for a particular employee the 15 percent limitation on compensation would be determined with regard to the compensation from all employers within such group. Further, the maximum deduction with respect to contributions made by employers included within such group could not exceed $15,000.

(2) Self-employed individuals. In the case of an employee who is a self-employed individual within the meaning of section 401(c)(1) with respect to more than one trade or business, the maximum deduction limitation for such an employee under paragraph (a)(2) shall not exceed the lesser of the sum of such limitation applied separately with respect to the simplified employee pension arrangement of each trade or business or such limitation determined by treating such trades or businesses as if they constituted a single employer.

(d) Examples. The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Corporation X is a calendar-year, cash basis taxpayer. It adopts a simplified employee pension agreement in 1982 and wishes to contribute the maximum amount on behalf of each employee for 1982. Individual E is a calendar-year taxpayer who is employed solely by Corporation X in 1982. Beginning in June, 1982, Corporation X pays $100 each month into a simplified employee pension maintained on behalf of E. X makes a total payment to E's simplified employee pension during the year of $700. E's other compensation from X for the year totals $15,000. The maximum amount which E will be allowed to deduct as a simplified employee pension contribution is 15% of $15,000, or $2,250. Therefore, X may make an additional contribution for 1982 to E's simplified employee pension of $1,550. X makes this additional contribution to E's simplified employee pension in February of 1983. E's total compensation includible in gross income for 1982 is $15,000 + $2,250 or $17,250.

Example (2). (i) Corporation G is a calendar-year taxpayer which adopts a simplified employee pension agreement for 1982. It does not maintain an integrated plan as defined in section 408(k)(3)(E). It wishes to contribute 15% of compensation on behalf of each employee reduced by its tax under section 3111(a). The corporation has 4 employees, A, B, C, and

D. D is a shareholder. The compensation for these employees for 1982 is as follows:
A = $10,000
B = 20,000
C = 30,000
D = 120,000

(ii) The amount of money which the corporation will be allowed to contribute on behalf of each employee under this allocation formula and the amount of the employer contribution each employee will be allowed to deduct is set forth in the following table:

Employee	Compensation	Lesser of $15,000 or 15% of Comp.	3111(a) [1] Tax	SEP [2] Contribution	Sec. 219 (b)(2) deduction
A	$10,000	$1,500	$ 540.00	$ 960.00	$ 960.00
B	20,000	3,000	1,080.00	1,920.00	1,920.00
C	30,000	4,500	1,620.00	2,880.00	2,880.00
D	120,000	15,000	1,749.60	13,250.40	13,250.40

[1] The section 3111 (a) tax is computed by multiplying compensation up to the taxable wage base (32,400 for 1982) by the tax rate (5.40% for 1982).
[2] Simplified Employee Pension

Example (3). Corporations A and B are calendar year taxpayers. Corporations A and B are not aggregated employers under section 414(b), (c) or (m). Individual M is employed full-time by Corporation A and part-time by Corporation B. Corporation A adopts a simplified employee pension agreement for calendar year 1982 and agrees to contribute 15% of compensation for each participant. M is a participant under Corporation A's simplified employee pension agreement and earns $15,000 for 1982 from Corporation A before A's contribution to his simplified employee pension. M also earns $5,000 as a part-time employee of Corporation B for 1982. Corporation A contributes $2,500 to M's simplified employee pension. The maximum amount that M will be allowed to deduct under section 219(b)(2) for 1982 is 15% of $15,000 or $2,250. In addition, M would be allowed to deduct the remaining $250 under section 219(a) for qualified retirement contributions.

Example (4). Individual P is employed by Corporation H and Corporation O. Corporations H and O are not aggregated employers under section 414(b), (c) or (m). Both Corporation H and Corporation O maintain a simplified employee pension arrangement and contribute 15 percent of compensation on behalf of each employee, up to a maximum of $15,000. P earns $100,000 from Corporation H and $120,000 from Corporation O. Corporation H and O each contribute $15,000 under its simplified employee pension arrangement to an individual retirement account maintained on behalf of P. P will be allowed to deduct $30,000 for employer contributions to simplified employee pensions because each employer has a simplified employee pension arrangement and the SEP contributions by Corporation H and O do not exceed the applicable $15,000-15 percent limitation with respect to compensation received from each employer. In addition, P would be allowed to deduct $2,000 under section 219(a) for qualified retirement contributions.

§1.219(a)-5 Deduction for employee contributions to employer plans.

(a) Deduction allowed. In the case of an individual, there is allowed as a deduction amounts contributed in cash to a qualified employer plan or government plan (as defined, respectively, in paragraphs (b)(7) and (b)(8) of §1.219(a)-1) and designated as qualified voluntary employee contributions. If an employee transfers an amount of cash from one account in a plan to the qualified voluntary employee contribution account, such transfer is a distribution for purposes of sections 72, 402 and 403, and the amounts are considered recontributed as qualified voluntary employee contributions. No deduction will be allowed for a contribution of property other than cash.

(b) Limitations—(1) Maximum amount of deduction. The amount allowable as a deduction under paragraph (a) to any individual for any taxable year shall not exceed the lesser of $2,000 or an amount equal to the compensation (from the employer who maintains the plan) includible in the individual's gross income for such taxable year.

(2) Contributions after age 70½. No deduction is allowable for contributions under paragraph (a) to an individual for the taxable year of the individual if he has attained the age of 70½ before the close of such taxable year.

(3) Rollover contributions. No deduction is allowable under paragraph (a) for any taxable year of an individual with respect to a rollover contribution described in section 402(a)(5), 402(a)(7), 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), 405 (d)(3), 408(d)(3), or 409(b)(3)(C).

(c) Rules for plans accepting qualified voluntary employee contributions—(1) Plan provision, etc. (i) No plan may receive qualified voluntary employee contributions unless the plan document provides for acceptance of voluntary contributions. No plan may receive qualified voluntary employee contributions unless either the plan document provides for acceptance of qualified voluntary employee contributions or the employer or the plan administrator manifests an intent to accept such contributions. Such intention must be communicated to the employees. Any manner of communication that satisfies §1.7476-2(c)(1) shall satisfy the requirements of this subparagraph.

(ii) If the plan document provides for the acceptance of voluntary contributions, but does not specifically provide for acceptance of qualified voluntary employee contributions, the plan qualification limitation on voluntary contributions (the limit of 10 percent of the employee's cumulative compensation less prior voluntary contributions) would apply to both qualified voluntary employee contributions and other voluntary contributions. On the other hand, if the plan document provides for acceptance of both qualified voluntary employee contributions and other voluntary contributions, the plan qualification limitation on voluntary contributions would apply only to the contributions other than the qualified voluntary employee contributions.

(2) Plans accepting only qualified voluntary employee contributions. A qualified pension plan or stock bonus plan may be established that provides only for qualified voluntary employee contributions. Similarly, a government plan may be established that provides only for qualified voluntary employee contributions. A plan that provides only for qualified voluntary employee contributions would not satisfy the qualification requirements for a profit-sharing plan.

(3) Recordkeeping provisions. Separate accounting for qualified voluntary employee contributions that are deductible under this section is not required as a condition for receiving qualified voluntary employee contributions. However, failure to properly account for such contributions may result in adverse tax consequences to employees upon subsequent plan distributions and reporting and recordkeeping penalties for employers. See section 72(o) for rules for accounting for such contributions.

(4) Status as employee. An account will not be considered as a qualified voluntary employee contribution on behalf of an individual unless the individual is an employee of the employer at some time during the calendar year for which the voluntary contribution is made. See section 415(c) concerning the effect of a nondeductible voluntary employee contribution on plan qualification.

(5) Contribution before receipt of compensation. A plan may allow an individual to make a qualified voluntary employee contribution greater than the amount he has received in compensation from the employer at the time the contribution is made. However, see paragraph (f) of this section.

(d) Designations, procedures, etc.—(1) Plan procedures. (i) A plan which accepts qualified voluntary employee contributions may adopt procedures by which an employee can designate the character of the employee's voluntary contributions as either qualified voluntary employee contributions or other employee contributions. Such procedures may, but need not, be in the plan document.

(ii) In the absence of such plan procedures, all voluntary employee contributions shall be deemed to be qualified voluntary employee contributions unless the employee notifies the employer that the contributions are not qualified voluntary employee contributions. Such notification must be received by April 15 following the calendar year for which such contributions were made. If such notification is not received, contributions are deemed to be qualified voluntary employee contributions for the prior year.

(2) Characterization procedures, etc. (i) The plan procedures may allow an employee to elect whether or not an employee contribution is to be treated as a qualified voluntary employee contribution or as other voluntary contributions. This election can be required either prior to or after the contribution is made. If a contribution may be treated under such procedures as a qualified voluntary employee contribution or other voluntary contribution for a calendar year and the employee has not by April 15 of the subsequent calendar year designated the character of the contribution, the contribution must be treated as a qualified voluntary employee contribution for the calendar year. An employer may allow the election to be irrevocable or revocable. A procedure allowing revocable elections may limit the time within which an election may be revoked. The revocation of an election after April 15 following the calendar year for which the contribution was made is deemed to be ineffective in changing the character of employee contributions.

(ii) For purposes of this section, if the plan procedures allow employees to make contributions on account of the immediately preceding calendar year, a taxpayer shall be deemed to have made a qualified voluntary employee contribution to such plan on the last day of the preceding calendar year if the contribution is on account of such year and is made by April 15 of the calendar year or such earlier time as provided by the plan procedure.

(e) Nondiscrimination requirements—(1) General rule. Plans subject to the nondiscrimination requirements of section 401(a)(4) which accept qualified voluntary employee contributions must permit such contributions in a nondiscriminatory manner in order to satisfy section 401(a)(4). If a plan permits participants to make qualified voluntary employee contributions, the opportunity to make such contributions must be reasonably available to a nondiscriminatory group of employees. The availability standard will be satisfied if a nondiscriminatory group of employees is eligible to make qualified voluntary employee contributions under the terms of the plan and if a nondiscriminatory group of employees actually has the opportunity to make qualified voluntary employee contributions when plan restrictions are taken into account.

(2) Eligible employees. A nondiscriminatory group of employees is eligible to make qualified voluntary employee contribution under the terms of the plan if the group either meets the percentage requirements of section 410(b)(1)(A) or comprises a classification of employees that does not discriminate in favor of employees who are officers, shareholders, or highly compensated, as provided in section 410(b)(1)(B).

(3) Plan restrictions. In some cases, an employee may not be permitted to make qualified voluntary employee contributions until a plan restriction (such as making a certain level of mandatory employee contributions) is satisfied. In this case, it is necessary to determine whether a nondiscriminatory group of employees actually has the opportunity to make qualified voluntary employee contributions. For this purpose, only employees who have satisfied the plan restriction will be considered to have the opportunity to make deductible contributions. Thus, for example, if a plan requires an employee to make mandatory contributions of 6 percent of compensation in order to make qualified voluntary employee contributions and if only a small percentage of employees make the 6 percent mandatory contributions, then the group of employees who have the opportunity to make qualified voluntary employee contributions may not satisfy either test under section 410(b). A similar rule is applicable to integrated plans: employees who are not permitted to make qualified voluntary employee contributions to such a plan because they earn less than the integration level amount will be considered as employees who do not have the opportunity to make qualified voluntary employee contributions.

(4) Permissible contributions. If the availability standards are met, and if the qualified voluntary employee contributions permitted are not higher, as a percentage of compensation, for officers, shareholders or highly compensated employees than for other participants, the qualified voluntary employee contribution feature will meet the requirement that contributions or benefits not discriminate in favor of employees who are officers, shareholders, or highly compensated. This is so because the contributions are made by the employee, not the employer.

(5) Acceptable contributions. A plan may accept qualified voluntary employee contributions in an amount less than the maximum deduction allowable to an individual.

(f) Excess qualified voluntary employee contributions. Voluntary employee contributions which exceed the amount allowable as a deduction under paragraph (b) of this section will be treated as nondeductible voluntary employee contributions to the plan. See §1.415-6(b)(8).

(g) Reports—(1) Requirements. Each employer who maintains a plan which accepts qualified voluntary employee contributions must furnish to each employee—

(i) A report showing the amount of qualified voluntary employee contributions the employee made for the calendar year, and

(ii) A report showing the amount of withdrawals made by the employee of qualified voluntary employee contributions during the calendar year.

(2) Times. (i) The report required by paragraph (g)(1)(i) of this section must be furnished by the later of January 31 following the year for which the contribution was made or the time the contribution is made.

(ii) The report required by paragraph (g)(1)(ii) of this section must be furnished by January 31 following the year of withdrawal.

(3) Authority for additional reports. The Commissioner may require additional reports to be given to individuals or to be filed with the Service. Such reports shall be furnished at the time and in the manner that the Commissioner specifies.

(4) Authority to modify reporting requirements. The Commissioner may, in his discretion, modify the reporting requirements of this paragraph. Such modification may include: the matters to be reported, the forms to be used for the reports, the time when the reports must be filed or furnished, who must receive the reports, the substitution of the plan administrator for the employer as the person required to file or furnish the reports, and the deletion of some or all of the reporting requirements. The Commissioner may, in his discretion, relieve employers from making the reports required by section 219(f)(4) and this paragraph (g). This discretion includes the ability to relieve categories of employers (but not individual employers) from furnishing or filing any report required by section 219(f)(4) and this paragraph (g).

(5) Effective date. This paragraph shall apply to reports for calendar years after 1982.

§1.219(a)-6 Alternative deduction for divorced individuals.

(a) In general. A divorced individual may use the provisions of this section rather than §1.219(a)-2 in computing the maximum amount he may deduct as a contribution to an individual retirement plan. A divorced individual is not required to use the provisions of this section; he may use the provisions of §1.219(a)-2 in computing the maximum amount he may deduct as a contribution to an individual retirement plan.

(b) Individuals who may use this section. An individual may compute the deduction for a contribution to an individual retirement plan under this section if—

(1) An individual retirement plan was established for the benefit of the individual at least five years before the beginning of the calendar year in which the decree of divorce or separate maintenance was issued, and

(2) For at least three of the former spouse's most recent taxable years ending before the taxable year in which the decree was issued, such former spouse was allowed a deduction under section 219(c) (or the corresponding provisions of prior law) for contributions to such individual retirement plan.

(c) Limitations—(1) Amount of deduction. An individual who computes his deduction for contributions to an individual retirement plan under this section may deduct the smallest of—

(i) The amount contributed to the individual retirement plan for the taxable year,

(ii) $1,125, or

(iii) The sum of the amount of compensation includible in the individual's gross income for the taxable year and any qualifying alimony received by the individual during the taxable year.

(2) Contributions after age 70½. No deduction is allowable for contributions to an individual retirement plan to an individual for the taxable year of the individual if he has attained the age of 70½ before the close of such taxable year.

(3) Rollover contributions. No deduction is allowable under this section for any taxable year of an individual with respect to a rollover contribution described in section 402(a)(5), 402(a)(7), 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), 405(d)(3), 408(d)(3), or 409(b)(3)(C).

(d) Qualifying alimony. For purposes of this section, the term "qualifying alimony" means amounts includible in the individual's gross income under section 71(a)(1) (relating to a decree of divorce of separate maintenance).

Par. 2. Section 1.408-2 is amended by revising paragraph (b)(1) to read as follows:

§1.408-2 Individual retirement accounts.

* * * * *

(b) ***

(1) Amount of acceptable contributions. Except in the case of a contribution to a simplified employee pension described in section 408(k) and a rollover contribution described in section 408(d)(3), 402(a)(5), 402(a)(7), 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), 405(d)(3), or 409(b)(3)(C), the trust instrument must provide that contributions may not be acceptable by the trustee for the taxable year in excess of $2,000 on behalf of any individual for whom the trust is maintained. An individual retirement account maintained as a simplified employee pension may provide for the receipt of up to the limits specified in section 408(j) for a calendar year.

* * * * *

Par. 3. Section 1.408-3 is amended by revising paragraph (b)(2) to read as follows:

§1.408-3 Individual retirement annuities.

* * * * *

(b) ***

(2) Annual premium. Except in the case of a contribution to a simplified employee pension described in section 408(k), the annual premium on behalf of any individual for the annuity cannot exceed $2,000. Any refund of premiums must be applied before the close of the calendar year following the year of the refund toward the payment of future premiums or the purchase of additional benefits. An individual retirement annuity maintained as a simplified employee pension may provide for an annual premium of up to the limits specified in section 408(j).

* * * * *

Par. 4. There is added after proposed §1.408-9, 46 Fed. Reg. 36209 (1981) [EE-7-78, 1981-2 C.B. 735, 747], the following new section 1.407.10:

§1.408-10 Investment in collectibles.

(a) In general. The acquisition by an individual retirement account or by an individually-directed account under a plan described in section 401(a) of any collectible shall be treated (for purposes of section 402 and 408) as a distribution from such account in an amount equal to the cost to such account of such collectible.

(b) Collectible defined. For purposes of this section, the term "collectible" means—

(1) Any work or art,

(2) Any rug or antique,

(3) Any metal or gem,

(4) Any stamp or coin,

(5) Any alcoholic beverage,

(6) Any musical instrument,

(7) Any historical objects (documents, clothes, etc.), or

(8) Any other tangible personal property which the Commissioner determines is a "collectible" for purposes of this section.

(c) Individually-directed account. For purposes of this section, the term "individually-directed account" means an account under a plan that provides for individual accounts and that has the effect of permitting a plan participant to invest or control the manner in which the account will be invested.

(d) Acquisition. For purposes of this section, the term acquisition includes purchase, exchange, contribution, or any method by which an individual retirement account or individually-directed account may directly or indirectly acquire a collectible.

(e) Cost. For purposes of this section, cost means fair market value.

(f) Premature withdrawal penalty. The ten percent penalty described in sections 72(m)(5) and 408(f)(1) shall apply in the case of a deemed distribution from an individual retirement account described in paragraph (a) of this section.

(g) Amounts subsequently distributed. When a collectible is actually distributed from an individual retirement account or an individually-directed account, any amounts included in gross income because of this section shall not be included in gross income at the time when the collectible is actually distributed.

(h) Effective date. This section applies to property acquired after December 31, 1981, in taxable years ending after such date.

Par. 5. Proposed section 1.409-1, 46 Fed. Reg. 36210 (1981) [EE-7-78, 1981-2 C.B. 735, 748], is amended by revising paragraph (b)(2)(i) to read as follows:

§1.409-1 Retirement bonds.

(b) ***

(2) Exceptions. (i) If a retirement bond is redeemed within 12 months after the issue date, the proceeds are excluded from gross income if no deduction is allowed under section 219 on account of the purchase of such bond. For definition of issue date, see 31 CFR §346.1(c). The rule in this subdivision (i) shall not apply to the extent that the bond was purchased with a rollover contribution described in section 402(a)(5), 402(a)(7), 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), 405(d)(3), 408(d)(3) or 409(b)(3)(C).

* * * * *

Par. 6. Section 1.415-1 is amended by removing paragraph (c) and paragraph (f)(3).

Par. 6A. Section 1.415-2 is amended by removing paragraph (b)(8).

Par. 7. Section 1.415-6 is amended by: (1) revising paragraph (b)(3) as set forth below, (2) removing subdivision (iv) of paragraph (b)(7), and (3) adding a new paragraph (b)(8) as set forth below.

§1.415-6 Limitation for defined contribution plans.

* * * * *

(b) Annual additions. ***

(3) Employee contributions. For purposes of subparagraph (1)(ii) of this paragraph, the term "annual additions" includes, to the extent employee contributions would otherwise be taken into account under this section as an annual addition, mandatory employee contributions (as defined in section 411(c)(2)(C) and the regulations thereunder) as well as voluntary employee contributions. The term "annual additions" does not include—

(i) Rollover contributions (as defined in section 402(a)(5), 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), 405(d)(3), 408(d)(3) and 409(b)(3)(C)),

(ii) Repayments of loans made to a participant from the plan,

(iii) Repayments of amounts described in section 411(a)(7)(B) (in accordance with section 411(a)(7)(C)) and section 411(a)(3)(D) (see §1.411(a)-7(d)(6)(iii)(B)),

(iv) The direct transfer of employee contributions from one qualified plan to another,

(v) Employee contributions to a simplified employee pension allowable as a deduction under section 219(a), or

(vi) Deductible employee contributions within the meaning of section 72(o)(5).

However, the Commissioner may in an appropriate case, considering all of the facts and circumstances, treat transactions between the plan and the employee or certain allocations to participants' accounts as giving rise to annual additions.

* * * * *

(8) Qualified voluntary employee contributions. This subparagraph provides rules for qualified voluntary employee contributions that are eligible for the deduction under section 219(a). This subparagraph is applicable only if the total of such contributions for the year is not in excess of

$2,000. If such contributions are not deductible under section 219, and result in an annual addition that causes the section 415 limits to be exceeded, they will not be treated as annual additions to the extent that the portion of the contribution exceeding the limitation (and earnings thereon) is returned to the employee as soon as administratively feasible after the employer knows or has reason to know that such contributions are not deductible employee contributions within the meaning of section 72(o)(5).

* * * * *

Par. 8. Section 1.415-7 is amended by: (1) deleting subdivision (iii) of paragraph (c)(2), (2) renumbering subdivision (iv) of paragraph (c)(2) as subdivision (iii), and deleting paragraph (i).

ESTATE TAX REGULATIONS

[26 CFR Part 20]

Par. 9. Section 20.2C39-2 is revised by adding a new subdivision (ix) to paragraph (c)(1) to read as follows:

§20.2039-2 Annuities under "qualified plans" and section 403(b) annuity contracts.

* * * * *

(c) Amounts excludable from the gross estate.

(1) ***

(ix) Any deductible employee contributions (within the meaning of section 72(o)(5)) are considered amounts contributed by the employer.

* * * * *

Par. 9a. Section 20.2039-4 is revised by adding a new paragraph (h) to read as follows:

§20.2039-4 Lump sum distributions from "qualified plans;" decedents dying after December 31, 1978.

* * * * *

(h) Accumulated deductible employee contributions. For purposes of this section, a lump sum distribution includes an amount attributable to accumulated deductible employee contributions (as defined in section 72(o)(5)(B)) in any qualified plan taken into account for purposes of determining whether any distribution from that qualified plan is a lump sum distribution as determined under paragraph (b) of this section. Thus, amounts attributable to accumulated deductible employee contributions in a qualified plan under which amounts are payable in a lump sum distribution are not excludible from the decedent's gross estate under §20.2039-2, unless the recipient makes the section 402(a)/403(c) taxation election with respect to a lump sum distributable payable from that qualified plan.

GIFT TAX REGULATIONS

[26 CFR Part 25]

Par. 10. Section 25.2517-1 is revised by adding a new subdivision (viii) to paragraph (c)(1) to read as follows:

§25.2517-1 Employees' annuities.

* * * * *

(1) ***

(viii) Any deductible employee contributions (within the meaning of section 72(o)(5)) are considered amounts contributed by the employer.

PROCEDURE AND ADMINISTRATION REGULATIONS

[26 CFR Part 301]

Par. 11. There is added after §301.6652-3 the following new section:

§301.6652-4 Failure to file information with respect to qualified voluntary employee contributions.

(a) Failure to make annual reports to employees. In the case of a failure to make an annual report required by §1.219(a)-5(g) which contains the information required by such section on the date prescribed therefor, there shall be paid (on notice and demand by the Secretary and in the same manner as tax) by the person failing to make such annual report an amount equal to $25 for each participant with respect to when there was a failure to make such report, multiplied by the number of years during which such failure continues.

(b) Limitation. The total amount imposed under this section on any person shall not exceed $10,000 with respect to any calendar year.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Excise Tax on Tires

I-99-82

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed amendments which revise the regulations concerning the excise tax on tires. This revision would change the definition of manufacturing for excise tax purposes to exclude a particular method of recapping or retreading tires. The regulations provide necessary guidance to the public for compliance with the law and affect all persons required to pay excise taxes on recapped or retreaded tires.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by March 9, 1984. The amendments are proposed to be effective for articles sold on or after January 1, 1984. ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, Attention: CC:LR:T (I-99-82).

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Jane E. Wilson of the Interpretative Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, Attention: CC:LR:T, 202-566-4069 (not a toll-free number).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Manufacturers and Retailers Excise Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 48) under section 4071 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

(Code) with respect to the excise tax on recapped or retreated tires.

Prior to its amendment by section 514 of the Highway Revenue Act of 1982 (P.L. 97-424) [1983-1 C.B. 405, 411], effective on January 1, 1984, referred to as the 1982 Act, section 4071(a) generally imposed excise taxes on manufacturers, producers, and importers of tires and tread rubber. The excise tax on tires exceed the tax on tread rubber.

Section 48.4071-1(d) of the regulations draws a distinction between tires that have been retreaded from "shoulder to shoulder," a retreading process that involves the application of tread rubber to the road surface of the worn tire, and tires that have been retreaded from "bead to bead," a retreading process that involves not only the application of tread rubber to the road surface of the worn tire, but also the application of a veneer of rubber on the outside of each tire over the sidewall.

Under the existing regulations, retreading a tire from shoulder to shoulder is not classified as manufacturing of a taxable tire. No excise tax is payable on a tire retreaded shoulder to shoulder so long as there had been a prior taxable sale of the tire in the United States. Retreading a tire from bead to bead, however, does constitute manufacturing of a taxable tire under the current regulations, with the result that the excise tax imposed on the sale of tires under section 4071 of the Code applies to a tire that has been retreaded from bead to bead. The distinction between shoulder to shoulder and bead to bead retreaded tires was adopted in section 4071(f) which subjects an imported, shoulder to shoulder retreaded tire to the manufacturers excise tax on the sale of tread rubber. Section 4071(f) does not apply to bead to bead retreaded tires, since imported, bead to bead retreaded tires are subject to the manufacturers excise tax on the sale of tires.

As amended by the 1982 Act, section 4071(a) no longer imposes an excise tax on tread rubber. The amendment is generally effective for articles sold on or after January 1, 1984. Section 4071(f), therefore, ceases applicability on or after that date.

This document proposes to remove the distinction drawn in section 48.4071-1(d) between shoulder to shoulder and bead to bead retreaded tires. The difference between the two types of retreaded tires is cosmetic rather than structural. The bead to bead process is used where the tire carcass has small defects in the sidewall, which, if not recapped, would detract from the attractiveness of the tire. A bead to bead retreaded tire does not compete with a new tire in the original equipment market and would only compete, if ever, with the lowest quality of new tire in the replacement market. A retreaded tire must be sold for less than a new tire, if it is to be marketed. A bead to bead retreaded tire competes with a shoulder to shoulder retreaded tire in the replacement market. Thus, the proposed regulations would treat bead to bead retreaded tires in the same manner as shoulder to shoulder retreaded tires are treated under section 48.4071-1(d).

The proposed amendment to the regulations would be effective for articles sold on or after January 1, 1984.

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably seven copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT AND EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

Although this document is a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking that solicits public comments, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these proposed regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6). The Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service has also determined that the proposed regulation is not a major regulation as defined in Executive Order 12291 and therefore a regulatory impact analysis is not required.

Proposed Amendments to the Regulations

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Part 48 are as follows:

Section 48.4071-1(d) is revised to read as set forth below:

§48.4071-1 Imposition and rates of tax.

* * * * *

(d) Recapped or retreaded tires.— The recapping or retreading of a tire, whether from shoulder to shoulder or bead to bead, does not constitute manufacture of a taxable tire. The tax on tires imposed by section 4071 does not apply to the sale of a recapped or retreaded tire, except that a used tire or tire carcass not previously sold in the United States that is recapped or retreaded from shoulder to shoulder or bead to bead in a foreign country and imported into the United States is subject to the tax imposed by section 4071 when such tire is sold or used by the importer. This paragraph (d) is effective for recapped and retreaded tires sold on or after January 1, 1984.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document withdraws the notice of proposed rulemaking that was published in the FEDERAL REGISTER for September 5, 1968 (33 FR 12553). That notice proposed regulations under sections 541 through 544, 551 through 554, 856, 1016, 1022, 1023, 1244, and 1361 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to conform the Income Tax Regulations to section 225 of the Revenue Act of 1964 (78 Stat. 79) [Pub. L. 88-272, 1964-1 (Part 2) C.B. 6, 54] and to section 3 of the Act of August 22, 1964 (Pub. L. 88-484, 78 Stat. 598) [1964-2 C.B. 605, 606]. Because of the extreme age of these proposed amendments to the regulations and because of the passage of legislation affecting these sections of the Code in the years intervening since the publication of these proposed amendments to the regulations, it was determined that these proposed amendments should be withdrawn.

Withdrawal of Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Interest on Obligations of a State, Territory, Etc.

LR-8-73

SUMMARY: This document withdraws the notice of proposed rulemaking relating to obligations issued on behalf of governmental units which was published in the FEDERAL REGISTER for February 2, 1976 (41 FR 4829). It was determined that this notice be withdrawn in light of the public comments received thereon and in light of the additional guidance provided in the recently-published Revenue Procedure 82-26 [1982-1 C.B. 476].

ADDRESS ENQUIRIES TO: John A. Tolleris of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of the Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224 (Attention: CC:LR:T) (202-566-3294).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document withdraws a notice of propose rulemaking that would amend §1.103-1 to provide rules under which authorities which are not governmental units may (issue governmental obligations on behalf of such units. The notice was published in the FEDERAL REGISTER for February 2, 1976 (41 FR 4829). A large number of comments were received, and a public hearing was held on April 26, 1976. After consideration of the comments it has been determined that this notice be withdrawn. Accordingly, prior revenue rulings relating to entities issuing obligations on behalf of a State or local governmental unit, such as Rev. Rul. 57-187, 1957-1 C.B. 65, Rev. Rul. 60-248, 1960-2 C.B. 35 (as modified by Rev. Rul. 82-56, 1982-1 C.B. 17), and Rev. Rul. 63-20, 1963-1 C.B. 24, are not superseded and continue to form the primary source of guidance on this question. See also Rev. Proc. 82-26, 1982-1 C.B. 476.

The effective date of the proposed regulations provided issuers the option of applying the proposed rules to issues on or after February 2, 1976. Accordingly, the Internal Revenue Service will continue to permit the application of the proposed regulations, hereby withdrawn, to issues issued on or after February 2, 1976, and before February 14, 1984, at the option of the issuer. In general, it is expected that issuers meeting the standards described in the notice of the proposed rulemaking will also meet the standards of the revenue rulings. To ensure this result in all cases, however, the option provided in the notice of proposed rulemaking is preserved. Issuers that may have relied on the notice standards are thereby provided a 60-day period to consider whether they qualify as "on behalf of" entities under the standards in effect without regard to the option provided by the notice.

Withdrawal of Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Certain Payments for Oil or Gas Which are Not to be Considered as Taxes.

LR-65-75

SUMMARY: This document withdraws the notice of proposed rulemaking relating to certain payments for oil or gas which are not to be considered as taxes that appeared in the FEDERAL REGISTER on November 17, 1980 (45 FR 75692). The notice is being withdrawn because the wording of the statute is sufficiently clear for the rare situations that arise under section 901(f) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document withdraws the notice of proposed rulemaking that appeared in the FEDERAL REGISTER on November 17, 1980 (45 FR 75692). The notice proposed amendments to the regulations under section 901(f) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The principal purpose of the proposed amendments was to provide the public with the guidance needed to comply with section 901(f). The regulations proposed on November 17, 1980, are no longer necessary because the situations within the scope of section 901(f) are rare and the wording of the statute is sufficiently clear.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Farming Syndicate Expenditures

LR-144-76

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations relating to farming syndicate expenditures. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1976, the Revenue Act of 1978, and the Subchapter S Revision Act of 1982. These regulations would provide necessary guidance to the public for compliance with those Acts and would affect passive investors in certain farming enterprises.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by January 16, 1984. The regulations are proposed to be effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1975, except as otherwise provided.

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR-144-76), Washington, D.C. 20224.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Howard A. Balikov of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of the Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224 (Attention: CC:LR:T) (202-566-3288) not a toll-free call.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under sections 278 and 464 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. These amendments are proposed to conform the regulations to sections 207(a) and (b) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 1536 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 12]), section 701(l)(3) of the Revenue Act of 1978 (92 Stat. 2907 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 141]), and section 5(a)(30) of the Subchapter S Revision Act of 1982 (96 Stat. 1695 [Pub. L. 97-354, 1982-2 C.B. 702, 715]), and are to be issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

PURPOSE OF STATUTORY CHANGES

Prior to these statutory changes, the tax laws allowed all persons with interests in farming enterprises to take a current deduction for a number of expenses that might not generate income until later years. If the enterprise did not earn income until later years, as was often the case, the result of these rules was that a person with high income from non-farm sources could shelter such income with currently deductible expenses of the farming enterprise. Thus, the person could defer taxes on the non-farm income until the later years. Sometimes the income generated by the farming enterprise was in the nature of a capital gain, and thus was taxed at a rate lower than the ordinary income rate that would have applied to the non-farm income but for the farming enterprise deductions. Congress enacted the changes in the tax law to prevent the generation of such deductions by farming enterprises that typically attract investors seeking deferral tax shelters.

THE NEW RULES

The new rules place limitations on deductions allowed to farming syndicates. Under the new rules, farming syndicates may not deduct costs of feed, seed, fertilizer and other similar farm supplies before the supplies are actually used or consumed. In addition, farming syndicates must capitalize or inventory certain costs of poultry. Farming syndicates also must capitalize costs of planting, cultivating, maintaining and developing certain groves, orchards and vineyards, if the costs are incurred before the grove, orchard or vineyard bears a commercial crop or yield. Code sections 278(b) and (c), Code sections 464(a) and (b), and proposed regulation §§1.278-2 and 1.464-1 contain details regarding the operation of the new rules.

Farming syndicates subject to the new rules are, in general, enterprises sold by means of registered securities offerings and enterprises with a significant proportion of passive investors. Code section 464(c)(1)(B) defines the term "farming syndicate" to include certain enterprises where "more than 35 percent of the losses during any period are allocable to limited partners or limited entrepreneurs." Proposed regulation §1.464-2(a)(2) provides rules for applying section 464(c)(1)(B). The Internal Revenue Service invites comments on proposed regulation §1.464-2(a)(2).

EFFECTIVE DATES

Generally, the statutory changes and these proposed regulations are effective for expenditures made in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1975. However, proposed regulation §§1.278-2(d) and 1.464-1(c) provide transitional rules that make the new rules inapplicable to certain investments already in existence on that date.

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably seven copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is to be held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this proposed rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required. The Internal Revenue Service has concluded that although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comment, the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, no Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is required for this rule.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations is Howard A. Balikov of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are as follows:

Paragraph 1. A new section 1.278-2 is inserted in the appropriate place to read as follows:

§1.278-2 Certain capital expenditures of farming syndicates.

(a) General rule. (1) Except as provided in paragraph (c) of this section, farming syndicates (as defined in section 464(c) and the regulations thereunder) engaged in planting, cultivating, maintaining or developing a grove, orchard or vineyard in which fruit or nuts are grown must capitalize any amount which—

(i) Would be allowable as a deduction but for the provisions of section 278(b) and this section,

(ii) Is attributable to the planting, cultivation, maintenance or development of such grove, orchard or vineyard, and

(iii) Is incurred in a taxable year before the first taxable year in which such grove, orchard or vineyard bears a crop or yield in commercial quantities.

For purposes of determining whether amounts are described in subparagraph (a)(1)(ii) of this section, the rules of §1.278-1(a)(2)(iii) shall apply as if such section applied to such grove, orchard or vineyard. Subparagraph (a)(1)(iii) of this section is applied without regard to whether an amount is incurred before or after the plants are permanently planted. For purposes of section 278(b) and this section, an amount shall be considered as "incurred" in accordance with the taxpayer's regular tax accounting method used in reporting income and expenses connected with planting, cultivating, maintaining or developing the grove, orchard or vineyard. For purposes of this paragraph (a)(1), any portion of a grove, orchard or vineyard planted in one taxable year shall be treated separately from any other portion of such grove, orchard or vineyard planted in another taxable year, and plants that are more than one year older than other plants shall be treated separately.

(2) For purposes of section 278(b) and this section a grove, orchard, or vineyard in which fruit or nuts are grown includes any group of trees, bushes, shrubs, or vines which produce a crop or yield of fruits or nuts. For purposes of this section, a "fruit" is defined as a fertilized and developed ovary of a plant, including the seeds, or, in the case of a plant that does not bear seeds, the fertile structure of the plant, and a "nut" is defined as a hard-shelled fruit. For example, fruits or nuts include apples, avocados, coffee beans, grapes, jojoba beans or seeds, pecans, pistachios and walnuts.

(3) For purposes of section 278(b) and this section a tree or vine shall be considered to be "planted" on the date on which the tree or vine is placed in the permanent grove, orchard or vineyard from which production is expected.

(4) The period during which expenditures described in section 278(b) and paragraph (a)(1) of this section are required to be capitalized shall, once determined, be unaffected by a sale or other disposition of the grove, orchard or vineyard to any other farming syndicate. Such period shall be computed by reference to the taxable years of the owner of the grove, orchard or vineyard at the time the trees or vines were planted. Therefore, if a grove, orchard or vineyard subject to the provisions of section 278(b) and paragraph (a)(1) of this section is sold or otherwise transferred by the original owner of the grove, orchard or vineyard to a purchaser or other transferee that is a farming syndicate before the first taxable year in which such grove, orchard or vineyard bears a crop or yield in commercial quantities, expenditures described in section 278(b) and paragraph (a)(1) of this section made by the purchaser or other transferee before the beginning of the original holder's first taxable year in which such grove, orchard or vineyard bears a crop or yield in commercial quantities are required to be capitalized. For an illustration of a similar rule, see §1.278-1(a)(3)(ii).

(b) Relationship of section 278(b) to section 278(a)—

(1) In general. In the case of a farming syndicate engaged in the planting, cultivation, maintenance or development of a citrus or almond grove, the capitalization rules of section 278(a) and §1.278-1 apply prior to the capitalization rules of section 278(b) and this section.

(2) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (b)(1) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). X, a farming syndicate on the calendar year basis, plants almond saplings in an almond grove in 1983. Throughout 1983 and later years, X incurs expenditures for cultivating and maintaining the almond grove. During 1985, X's almond grove produces almonds in commercial quantities. Pursuant to section 278(a), X must capitalize any cultivation or maintenance costs of the almond grove that are incurred before the close of 1986.

Example (2). Z, a farming syndicate on the calendar year basis, plants an orange grove in 1983. Z's orange grove does not produce commercial quantities of oranges until 1988. Section 278(a) requires Z to capitalize all amounts attributable to planting, cultivating, maintaining, or developing the orange grove that are incurred before the close of 1986. Section 278(b), however, requires the capitalization of all amounts attributable to such activities that are incurred before the close of 1987. Accordingly, Z must capitalize all such amounts incurred before the close of 1987.

(c) Exceptions. Paragraph (a)(1) of this section shall not apply to amounts allowable as deductions (without regard to section 278(b) or this section) and attributable to a grove, orchard or vineyard (or part thereof) that is replanted by the taxpayer after having been lost or damaged (while in the hands of the taxpayer) by reason of freeze, disease, drought, pests or casualty.

(d) Effective date—(1) In general. Section 278(b) and this section apply to amounts paid or incurred in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1975.

(2) Transitional rule. Section 278(b) and this section do not apply to amounts paid or incurred with respect to a grove, orchard or vineyard which was planted or replanted before January 1, 1976. For this purpose, a tree or vine that was planted before January 1, 1976 at a place other than the grove, orchard or vineyard of the taxpayer, but which was owned by the taxpayer (or with respect to which the taxpayer had a binding contract to purchase) before January 1, 1976, is considered to have been planted on December 31, 1975, in the grove, orchard or vineyard of the taxpayer.

Par. 2. Sections 1.464-1 and 1.464-2 are inserted in the appropriate place to read as follows:

§1.464-1 Limitations on deductions in case of farming syndicates.

(a) General rule—(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (a)(2) of this section, amounts paid by a farming syndicate (as defined in section 464(c) and §1.464-2(a)) for feed, seed, fertilizer or other similar farm supplies (as defined in §1.464-2(c)) shall be deducted only for the taxable year in which actually used or consumed or, if later, for the taxable year for which a deduction for such amounts would be allowed under the taxpayer's method of accounting. In addition, the cost of poultry purchased by a farming syndicate for resale shall not be deducted until the taxable year in which the poultry is sold or otherwise disposed of. The cost of poultry (including egg-laying hens and baby chicks) purchased by a farming syndicate for use in a trade or business (or purchased by a farming syndicate both for use in a trade or business and subsequent resale) is to be capitalized and (taking into account salvage value) deducted ratably on a monthly basis over the lesser of 12 months or their useful life in that trade or business.

(2) Exceptions. The provisions of section 464(a) and the first sentence of paragraph (a)(1) of this section, relating to amounts paid by a farming syndicate for feed, seed, fertilizer or other similar farm supplies, shall not apply to either of the following:

(i) Amounts paid for feed, seed, fertilizer, or other farm supplies which are on hand at the close of the taxable year solely because the consumption of such items during the year was prevented by fire, storm, flood or other casualty or because of disease or drought.

(ii) Amounts required to be capitalized under section 278 and the regulations thereunder. For example, in the case of fertilizer expenditures subject to the rules of section 278, no deduction is allowed upon consumption of the fertilizer. Instead, the amount must be charged to capital account.

(b) Override of accounting methods. To the extent use of any accounting method (such as the farmprice method of inventory valuation) conflicts with the requirements of section 464 and this section, the requirements of section 464 and this section shall prevail.

(c) Effective date—(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(2) of this section, section 464 and this section apply to amounts paid or incurred in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1975.

(2) Transitional rule. In the case of a farming syndicate in existence on December 31, 1975, and for which there was no change of membership throughout its taxable year beginning in 1976, section 464 and this section apply only to amounts paid or incurred in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976. A change in membership which disqualifies a farming syndicate from this transitional rule includes the addition of a new member and the sale of an existing member's interest, but does not include a substitution occurring by operation of law, by gift, or by the death or withdrawal of an existing member.

§1.464-2 Farming syndicates—definitions and special rules.

(a) Farming syndicate—(1) General rule. The term "farming syndicate" means—

(i) A partnership or any other enterprise (other than a corporation which is not an S corporation (as defined in section 1361(a)(1)) engaged in the trade or business of farming (as defined in section 464(e)(1) and paragraph (b) of this section), if at any time any interest in the partnership or enterprise has been offered for sale in any offering required to be registered with any Federal or State agency having authority to regulate the offering of securities for sale, or

(ii) A partnership or any other enterprise (other than a corporation which is not an S corporation) engaged in the trade or business of farming, if more than 35 percent of the losses for any taxable year are allocable to limited partners or limited entrepreneurs.

The form of organization that a farming syndicate may take includes, but is not limited to, a general or limited partnership, a sole proprietorship involving an agency relationship created by a management contract, a trust, a common trust fund (as defined in section 584(a)), and an S corporation (as defined in section 1361(a)(1)). See paragraphs (a)(3), (4), and (5) of this section for rules concerning the definition of the term "limited entrepreneur." See paragraph (a)(7) of this section for rules concerning the registration of offerings with Federal or State agencies.

(2) Special rules—(i) An enterprise described in paragraph (a)(1)(ii) of this section is a farming syndicate for the first taxable year in which more than 35 percent of the losses are allocable to limited partners or limited entrepreneurs, and for all subsequent taxable years.

(ii) For purposes of paragraph (a)(1)(ii) of this section, the term "losses" means the excess of the deductions from the trade or business of farming allowable under the Internal Revenue Code to the enterprise for the taxable year (determined without regard to sections 278(b) and 464 and the regulations thereunder) over the amount of income received or accrued by the enterprise during the taxable year from the trade or business of farming. For purposes of this definition, the following amounts are not included in determining losses: gain and losses from the sale of capital assets or section 1231 assets; charitable contributions; and investment income or expenses.

(iii) A farming syndicate that is a partnership is considered terminated only if it would be considered terminated under section 708(b). The same principles apply to determine whether a farming syndicate that is not a partnership is considered terminated.

(iv) The provisions of paragraph (a)(2) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). In 1983, D and E formed the DE limited partnership, a calendar year cash basis taxpayer. The principal business of the partnership is operating a peanut farm. In addition, the partnership has a business which prepares and sells "DE peanut butter." D, who is the general partner, owns a 75 percent interest in the partnership, and E, who is the limited partner, owns a 25 percent interest. The partnership agreement provides that 75 percent of the partnership's operating income and losses from the peanut farm, exclusive of specially allocated deductions, will be allocated to D, and 25 percent will be allocated to E. The partnership agreement also provides that 40 percent of the partnership's fertilizer expenditures will be specially allocated to D, and 60 percent will be specially allocated to E. The partnership agreement further provides that 50 percent of DE's income and losses from the sale of DE peanut butter will be specially allocated to D, and 50 percent will be specially allocated to E. During 1983, DE incurred taxable losses described in section 702(a)(8) attributable to the peanut farm operations of $100, fertilizer expenditures of $200, and income from the sale of DE peanut butter of $230. The calculation necessary to determine whether DE is a farming syndicate for 1983, under section 464(c)(1)(B) and §1.464-2(a)(1)(ii), is as follows:

Taxable loss described in section 702(a)(8) attributable to the peanut farm operations, for 1983	$100
Specially allocated deduction attributable to the peanut farm operations for 1983	200
Total	$300

Taxable loss described in section 702(a)(8) attributable to the peanut farm operations, for 1983, allocated to E	$ 25
Deduction for 1983 attributable to the peanut farm operations specially allocated to E	120
Total	$145

Total losses attributable to the peanut farm operations allocated to E $145 / Total losses attributable to the peanut farm operations of partnership $300 = 48%

The business of preparing and selling DE peanut butter is not a trade or business of farming. Therefore, neither the income nor the deductions attributable to the preparation or sale of DE peanut butter is included in the section 464(c)(1)(B) calculation. For purposes of paragraph (a)(1)(ii) of this section, 48 percent of the DE partnership's loss from the trade or business of farming for 1983 is considered allocated to E, the limited partner. Therefore, the DE partnership is a farming syndicate for 1983 and all subsequent years.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that during 1983, DE had operating income from the peanut farm, exclusive of specially allocated deductions, of $160. The calculation necessary to determine whether DE is a farming syndicate for 1983, under section 464(c)(1)(B) and §1.464-2(a)(1)(ii), is as follows:

Taxable income described in section 702(a)(8) attributable to the peanut farm operations, for 1983	$ 160
Specially allocated deduction attributable to the peanut farm operations for 1983	(200)
Total	$(40)

Taxable income described in section 702(a)(8) attributable to the peanut farm operations for 1983, allocated to E	$ 40
Deduction for 1983 attributable to the peanut farm operations allocated to E	(120)
Total	$(80)

Total losses attributable to the peanut farm operations allocated to E $(80)

Total losses attributable to the peanut farm operations allocated to E $(40) = 200%

For purposes of paragraph (a)(1)(ii) of this section, 200 percent of the DE partnership's loss from the trade or business of farming for 1983 is considered allocated to E, the limited partner. Therefore, the DE partnership is a farming syndicate for 1983 and all subsequent years.

(3) Limited entrepreneur. For purposes of this section, the term "limited entrepreneur" means a person who has an interest in an enterprise other than as a limited partner and who does not actively participate in the management of such enterprise. The determination of whether a person actively participates in the management or operation of a farming enterprise depends on the facts and circumstances of each case. Factors which tend to indicate active participation include participating in the decisions involving the operation or management of the farm, actually working on the farm, living on the farm, or hiring and discharging employees (as compared to only the farm manager). Factors which tend to indicate a lack of active participation include lack of control of the management and operation of the farm, having authority only to discharge the farm manager, having a farm manager who is an independent contractor rather than an employee, and having limited liability for farm losses. For purposes of this paragraph, lack of fee ownership of the farm land shall not be a factor indicating a lack of active participation.

(4) Limited liability. (i) For purposes of paragraph (a)(3) of this section in determining whether a person has limited liability for farm losses, all the facts and circumstances are to be taken into account.

(ii) A person generally will be considered to have limited liability for farm losses if that person is protected against losses to any significant degree by nonrecourse financing, stop-loss orders, guarantees, fixed price purchase or repurchase agreements, insurance, or other similar arrangements. Examples of persons with limited liability for farm losses include, in appropriate circumstances:

(A) A general partner who has obtained a guaranty or other protection against loss from another general partner or an agent, or

(B) A principal who has given actual authority to another party to conduct the farm operations, such as an investor in feeder cattle who employs a feedlot manager to manage the cattle, and who utilizes nonrecourse financing, stop-loss orders, insurance, or other similar arrangements to limit the risk of loss.

(5) Active partners and entrepreneurs. For purposes of paragraph (a)(1)(ii) of this section, the following shall be treated as an interest which is not held by a limited partner or a limited entrepreneur:

(i) In the case of any individual who has actively participated (for a period of not less than 5 years) in the management of any trade or business of farming, any interest in a partnership or other enterprise which is attributable to such active participation;

(ii) In the case of any individual whose principal residence is on a farm, any interest in a partnership or other enterprise engaged in the trade or business of farming such farm;

(iii) In the case of any individual who is actively participating in the management of any trade or business of farming or who is an individual who is described in paragraph (a)(5)(i) or (ii) of this section, any participation in the further processing of livestock which was raised in such trade or business (or in the trade or business referred to in paragraph (a)(5)(i) or (ii));

(iv) In the case of an individual whose principal business activity involves active participation in the management of a trade or business of farming, any interest in any other trade or business of farming; and

(v) Any interest held by a member of the family as defined in section 267(c)(4) (or a spouse of any such member) of a grandparent of an individual described in paragraph (a)(5)(i), (ii), (iii), or (iv) of this section if the interest in the partnership or the enterprise is attributable to the active participation of the individual described in paragraph (a)(5)(i), (ii), (iii), or (iv).

For purposes of paragraph (a)(5)(i) of this section, an interest in a partnership or other enterprise unrelated to the trade or business in the management of which the limited partner or limited entrepreneur participated will not be considered attributable to such participation; however, where the farming enterprise substitutes one farm for another or adds a farm to its trade or business, both farms shall be treated as one.

(6) Examples. The provisions of paragraphs (a)(5)(i), (iv) and (v) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, an individual who has owned and operated a farm for more than 5 years, retires and forms the AB partnership with B, an unrelated individual who actively manages the farm. More than 35 percent of the losses are allocated to A, the limited partner. The AB partnership will not be treated as a farming syndicate because, pursuant to section 464(c)(2)(A) and paragraph (a)(5)(i) of this section, A's interest is not treated as a limited partnership interest for purposes of determining whether losses are allocated to limited partners. If A's interest is transferred to C, A's child, the BC partnership will not be a farming syndicate, whether the transfer occurs before or after A's retirement or death. See paragraph (a)(5)(v) of this section.

Example (2). H is the owner and full-time manager of the LR apple orchard. H has operated the LR apple orchard for 10 years. H also holds a limited partnership interest in the JHU partnership, which owns and operates another apple orchard. The JHU partnership will not be treated as a farming syndicate solely because of the limited partnership interest held by H Since H's principal business activity is the active management of the LR apple grove, H's limited partnership interest in the JHU partnership shall be treated under section 464(c)(2)(D) and paragraph (a)(5)(iv) of this section as an interest which is not held by a limited partner.

(7) Registration with a Federal or State agency. (i) For purposes of section 464(c)(1)(A) and paragraph (a)(1)(i) of this section, the question of whether an offering is required to be registered with a state agency having authority to regulate the offering of securities for sale is a question of state law. Thus, it may happen that an enterprise in one state is a farming syndicate under paragraph (a)(1)(i) of this section while a similar enterprise in another state is not. In addition, if interests in a particular enterprise are offered for sale in more than one state, any one of which requires registration of the offering, all the interests in the enterprise will be treated as subject to the registration requirement for purposes of section 464(c)(1)(A) and paragraph (a)(1)(i) of this section.

(ii) Offerings made through a dealer who is a member of the National Association of Securities Dealers, or through a real estate company, as well as interests in private enterprises which are not sold by a broker-dealer or similar party, are not offerings within the scope of section 464(c)(1)(A) and paragraph (a)(1)(i) of this section if they are not required to be registered with any Federal or state agency having the authority to regulate the offering of securities for sale. However, such an offering may fall within the scope of paragraph (a)(1)(ii) of this section if it meets the 35 percent test of that paragraph.

(b) Farming. For purposes of section 464 and the regulations thereunder, the term "farming" means the cultivation of land or the raising or harvesting of any agricultural or horticultural commodity, including the raising, shearing, feeding, caring for, training and management of animals. For example, farming includes the raising of fish, poultry, bees, dogs, flowers or vegetables. Farming does not, however, include the raising or harvesting of trees (other than fruit or nut bearing trees). For purposes of this paragraph (b), the raising or harvesting of trees includes forestry (i.e., the care and conservation of forests), the timber and logging industries, and the raising of trees for lumber or pulp, but does not include the raising or harvesting of plants grown for home decoration, aesthetic, or landscaping purposes, including ornamental trees, Christmas trees, house plants that are called trees, and house plants with tree-like qualities (such as scheffleras, Norfolk Island pines, ficus decova, weeping figs, areca palms, and parlor palms).

(c) Other similar farm supplies. The term "other similar farm supplies" in section 464(a) and §1.464-1(a)(1) means those supplies used in raising or producing farm assets the cost of which are allowed (without regard to section 464) as deductions against income in the taxable year in which the supplies are purchased by the taxpayer.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Estate Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 20) and the Gift Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 25). The affected regulations are primarily under sections 2044, 2056, 2207A, 2519, 2523, and 6019 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (Code); conforming changes are proposed for regulations under other sections of the Code. These amendments are proposed to conform the estate and gift tax regulations to the amendments of the Code made by sections 2002(a), (b), and (d) and section 2006(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (Pub. L. 94-455; 90 Stat. 1854-56, 1880) [1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 330, 355]; section 702(g) of the Revenue Act of 1978 (Pub. L. 95-600, 92 Stat. 2930) [1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 164]; sections 403(a), (b), (c)(3)(B), (d) and (e) of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (Pub. L. 97-34; 95 Stat. 301-05) [1981-2 C.B. 256, 324]; and section 104(a) of the Technical Corrections Act of 1982 (Pub. L. 97-448; 96 Stat. 2379-81) [1983-1 C.B. 451, 458]. The proposed amendments, if adopted, will be issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Code (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

GIFT TAX FOR GIFTS PRIOR TO 1982

For interspousal gifts occurring after December 31, 1976, and before January 1, 1982, the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (the 1976 Act) provides for an unlimited gift tax marital deduction until the aggregate marital deduction equals $100,000. Thereafter, no deduction is allowed for the next $100,000 of post-1976 interspousal gifts and a 50 percent deduction is allowed for any additional interspousal gifts.

The 1976 Act did not change the effect of section 2524. Thus, although a marital deduction may be allowed under section 2523, section 2524 provides that a marital deduction may be taken only to the extent interspousal gifts exceed the exclusion for gifts under section 2503(b). For example, if a taxpayer's first post-1976 interspousal gift is a gift of $10,000 cash made during 1977, the marital deduction allowable under section 2523 is $10,000 (100% of $10,000); however, because the section 2503(b) exclusion is $3,000, section 2524 further limits the marital deduction which may be taken to $7,000.

ESTATE TAX FOR ESTATES OF DECEDENTS DYING AFTER 1976 AND BEFORE 1982

For estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1976, and before January 1, 1982, and the 1976 Act increases the maximum allowable estate tax marital deduction to the greater of $250,000 or one-half the decedent's adjusted gross estate. It also provides for two adjustments to the deduction. First, the maximum allowable estate tax marital deduction is reduced by the amount by which the aggregate gift tax marital deductions for post-1976 interspousal gifts exceed 50 percent of the value of those gifts. Second, the $250,000 limitation is adjusted downward where the decedent owned community property at death. This adjustment is like the preexisting adjustments to the 50 percent limitation in the sense that it maintains the parity between common law property states and community property states.

Many wills in existence before the 1976 Act provided for bequests to a surviving spouse in an amount determined by reference to the maximum marital deduction allowed by Federal law. Because Congress was concerned that many testators using such formula clauses may not have wanted their spouses to receive more than one-half of the adjusted gross estate (the maximum allowable deduction under prior law), the 1976 Act provides for a 2-year transitional rule applicable to property passing under certain formula provisions. The marital deduction for property passing under a maximum martial deduction formula provision in a will executed or trust created before December 31, 1976, cannot exceed 50 percent of the adjusted gross estate unless (1) the formula provision of the will is amended after December 31, 1976, (2) the decedent dies after December 31, 1978, or (3) a State statute is enacted that construes the formula provision as referring to the maximum marital deduction available after the amendments made by the Tax Reform Act of 1976.

The 1976 Act imposed a tax on certain generation-skipping transfers. When a decedent is the "deemed transferor" of a generation-skipping transfer occurring at or after the decedent's death, that decedent's marginal estate tax rate is used to determine the generation-skipping transfer tax; however, the tax is imposed on the generation-skipping transfer rather than on the decedent's estate. Congress intended the tax on generation-skipping transfers to be substantially equivalent to the estate tax which would have been imposed if the property were actually transferred outright to successive generations. To accomplish this result, Congress provided for an adjustment to the maximum allowable marital deduction. When a decedent is the "deemed transferor" of a generation-skipping transfer occurring at the same time as or within 9 months after the decedent's death, the marital deduction is calculated by including in the decedent's gross estate the amount of the generation-skipping transfer. Thus, the alternative limitation on the marital deduction of 50 percent of the decedent's adjusted gross estate may be increased.

The Revenue Act of 1978 provides two clarifications regarding the adjustment for post-1976 interspousal gifts. First, because any benefit derived from a gift tax marital deduction is negated if the property is required to be included in the gross estate, the 1978 Act provides that no reduction of the maximum allowable marital deduction is required with respect to property included in the decedent's estate solely by reason of section 2035 of the Code (gifts within 3 years of death). Second, in order to relieve executors of the administrative difficulty of determining the amount of small gifts, the 1978 Act provides that gifts not required to be included in a gift tax return will have no effect on the adjustment to the maximum allowable estate tax marital deduction.

GIFT TAX AND ESTATE TAX AFTER 1981

For transfers by gift occurring after December 31, 1981, and for estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1981, the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (the 1981 Act) generally provides a 100 percent marital deduction for the value of interspousal transfers, including transfers of community property. Under prior law, gifts or bequests of community property did not qualify for the marital deduction.

Many wills which were in existence prior to the 1981 Act provides for bequests to a surviving spouse in an amount determined by reference to the maximum deduction allowed by Federal law. Because Congress was concerned that many testators may not have wanted their spouse to receive an unlimited amount, the 1981 Act provides that the pre-1982 quantitative limitations on the deduction (the greater of $250,000 or 50 percent of the adjusted gross estate) shall apply for property passing under a maximum marital deduction formula provision in a will executed or trust created before September 12, 1981, unless either (1) the formula provision of the will (or trust) is amended after September 11, 1981, or (2) a State statute is enacted that construes the formula provision as referring to the maximum marital deduction available after the amendments made by the 1981 Act.

Under prior law, the marital deduction was available only with respect to property passing outright to the spouse or in specified forms which gave the spouse control over the transferred property. These limitations are referred to as the qualitative limitations. Because the surviving spouse had to be given control over the property, the decedent could not insure that the property would pass to the decedent's children or other persons after the spouse's death. For gifts made after 1981 and estates of decedents dying after 1981, Congress made several changes to the qualitative limitations on the marital deduction. These changes allow the decedent to control the disposition of the property after the spouse's death.

For transfers to a charitable remainder annuity trust or a charitable remainder unitrust of which the donee spouse is the only noncharitable beneficiary (other than a donor), sections 2056(b)(8) and 2523(g) provide that the terminable interest rules (in sections 2056(b)(1) and 2523(b)) do not apply to the donee spouse's interest. The donor will receive a charitable deduction for the value of the remainder interest passing to the charity and a marital deduction for the value of the annuity or unitrust interest passing to the spouse. Consequently, no transfer tax is imposed on such transfers.

In addition, the 1981 Act adopts the qualified terminable interest exception to the terminable interest rules. This new exception provides that if certain conditions are met, a life interest granted to one's spouse, either by gift or bequest, will be treated as a transfer to the spouse of the entire value of the property (not just the value of the life interest) and no interest will be treated as passing to any person other than the spouse. Accordingly, the entire value of such property will qualify for the marital deduction. The conditions which must be met are (1) the donor (or decedent's executor) must elect qualified terminable interest treatment, (2) the spouse must be entitled to all the income from the property for life, payable annually or at more frequent intervals, and (3) no person may have the power to appoint any part of the qualifying property to any person other than the spouse during the spouse's lifetime.

Income interests granted for a term of years or life estates subject to termination upon the occurrence of a specified event during the spouse's lifetime are not interests for life, and thus do not qualify for the qualified terminable interest exception. The spouse's interest need not be in trust to qualify. However, for purposes of determining whether the spouse's income interest meets the income entitlement requirement of section 2056(b)(7)(B)(ii)(I), the regulations adopt the principles contained in §20.2056(b)-5(f). These principles apply to property in trust and property not in trust, thus clarifying that the type of rights to income which qualify, in the case of property not in trust, are equivalent to the rights to income which would qualify if the property were in trust. Accordingly, the spouse's interest must be substantially that degree of beneficial enjoyment of the property during the spouse's life which the principles of the law of trusts accord to a person who is unqualifiedly designated as the life beneficiary of a trust. Under the proposed regulations, the spouse's exclusive and unrestricted right to the use of a residence for life satisfies the income entitlement requirement.

In determining the application of the rules relating to qualified terminable interest property, any "specific portion" (as defined in §20.2056(b)-5(c)) of property is treated as separate property. Thus, for example, if the spouse is given an interest in only 50 percent of the trust income, 50 percent of the entire interest in the property may be treated as qualified terminable interest property. Amendments are proposed to the definition of the term "specific portion" to conform that definition to the rule set forth by the Supreme Court in Northeastern Pennsylvania National Bank and Trust Co. v. United States, 387 U.S. 213 (1967).

The proposed regulation also makes it clear that the election to treat property as qualified terminable interest property may be made with respect to a fraction or percentage of property. However, a partial election is permitted only if it relates to a fractional or percentile share of property. The fraction or percentage may be determined by means of a formula.

Qualified terminable interest treatment delays the imposition of transfer taxes only so long as the property remains in a marital unit. Qualified terminable interest property is subject to transfer taxes at the earlier of (1) the date on which the spouse disposes (either by gift, sale or otherwise) of all or part of the qualifying income interest or (2) the spouse's death.

If the qualified terminable interest property is ultimately subject to tax as a result of the spouse's lifetime transfer of the qualifying income interest, the full value of the entire property subject to the spouse's income interest, less amounts received or retained by the spouse upon the disposition and less amounts which the spouse is entitled to recover under section 2207A (relating to the recovery of taxes paid), will be treated as a taxable gift under Code sections 2511 and 2519. (Any subsequent failure by the donor spouse to recover amounts to which the donor spouse is entitled under section 2207A will be treated as a separate taxable gift, as discussed below.) When the spouse makes a gift of the qualifying income interest, the value of the income interest will be eligible for the annual exclusion under section 2503(b). However, no section 2503(b) annual gift tax exclusion will be permitted for the imputed transfer of the remainder interest unless the transfer of the income interest is to a remainderman who holds full title to the property immediately after the transfer.

If the donee spouse is not treated as having made a complete transfer of the property subject to the qualifying income interest prior to the donee spouse's death, the fair market value of the property subject to the qualifying income interest determined as of the date of the donee spouse's death (or the alternate valuation date, if elected) will be included in the donee spouse's gross estate pursuant to Code section 2044.

Pursuant to Code section 2207A, the spouse is granted a right to recover any gift tax paid on the value of the remainder interests in qualified terminable interest property. The spouse's estate is also granted a right to recover any estate tax paid as a result of including property in the spouse's estate. For purposes of this recovery provision, use of all or part of the spouse's unified credit is not treated as the payment of tax. Proposed regulation §25.2207A-1 clarifies that under section 2511, the spouse's failure to exercise the right under section 2207A(b) to recover gift taxes paid upon the lifetime disposition of qualified terminable interest property is treated as a taxable transfer of the amount of the unrecovered taxes to the persons from whom such recovery could have been obtained.

If property is includible in a spouse's estate under section 2044, section 2207A gives the spouse's estate the right to recover the estate tax attributable to such property. The full value of the qualified terminable interest property is includible in the spouse's gross estate under section 2044 without reduction for the amount recoverable by the spouse's estate under section 2207A. Thus, proposed regulation §20.2207A-1 clarifies that the amount of estate tax recoverable by the spouse's estate under section 2207A is not an amount includible in the spouse's gross estate under section 2041 (relating to property subject to a general power of appointment).

Consistent with certain provisions of the Technical Corrections Act of 1982, these proposed regulations provide that property deemed to be transferred by a spouse under section 2044 shall be deemed to have passed from that spouse for purposes of section 1014 and chapters 11 and 13 of the Code. Thus, the provisions contained in section 1014 (regarding step-up in basis), section 2055 (regarding charitable deductions) and section 2032A (regarding special use valuation) are applicable to qualified terminable interest property included in a spouse's gross estate under section 2044.

Because an unlimited marital deduction is permitted for interspousal transfers after 1981, the 1981 Act generally exempts from the gift tax filing requirements all such transfers eligible for the marital deduction other than transfers of qualified terminable interest property. Property transferred by gift may be treated as qualified terminable interest property only if an election is made with respect to the property on the transferor's gift tax return on or before the first April 15th after the calendar year in which the property was transferred.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Parts 20 and 25 are as follows:

Paragraph 1. The last sentence of §20.0-1(b)(1) is amended by substituting "20.2056(d)-1" for "20.2056(e)-3".

Par. 2. Section 20.2012-1 is amended as follows:

(a) The first sentence of paragraph (a) is revised to read as set forth below.

(b) The fourth and fifth sentences of paragraph (d)(2)(ii) are removed.

(c) Paragraph (d)(3) is removed.

§20.2012-1 Credit for gift tax.

(a) In general. With respect to gifts made before 1977, a credit is allowed under section 2012 against the Federal estate tax for gift tax paid under chapter 12 of the Internal Revenue Code, or corresponding provisions of prior law, on a gift by the decedent of property subsequently included in the decedent's gross estate.

* * * * *

Par. 3. Paragraph (b)(3)(ii) of §20.2013-4 is amended by substituting "20.2056(c)-2A" for "20.2056(c)-2".

Par. 4. Section 20.2014-3 is amended as follows:

(a) The flush material immediately following pragraph (b)(2) is revised to read as set forth below.

(b) The second sentence of subdivision (ii) of example (3) in paragraph (c) is revised to read as set forth below.

§20.2014-3 "Second limitation".

(b) ***

Any reduction described in subparagraph (1) or (2) of this paragraph (b) on account of the marital deduction must proportionately take into account, if applicable, the limitation on the aggregate amount of the marital deduction contained in §§20.2056(c)-1A and (c)-2A. See example (3) of paragraph (c) of this section.

(c) ***

Example (3). ***

(ii)  Assume that the limitation imposed by section 2056(c), as it existed before 1982, is applicable so that the aggregate marital deduction allowed to the estate is limited to one-half the adjusted gross estate, or $400,000 (which is 50% of $800,000). ***

Par. 5. Section 20.2044-1 is redesignated as §20.2045-1 and a new §20.2044-1 is added immediately following §20.2043-1, to read as set forth below.

§20.2044-1 Certain property for which marital deduction was previously allowed.

(a) In general. The value of the gross estate shall include under section 2044 the value of property in which the decedent had a "qualifying income interest for life" (as defined in §20.2056(b)-7(c) or §25.2523(f)-1(c)) if—

(1) A deduction was taken under section 2056(b)(7) or under section 2523(f) upon the transfer that created the decedent's qualifying income interest for life in that property, and

(2) That property was not treated as transferred under section 2519 (relating to dispositions of certain life estates).

The value of the property included in the gross estate under section 2044 shall not be reduced by any section 2503(b) exclusion that may have been taken for the transfer creating the interest. If any income from such property for the period between the date of the transfer that created the decedent's qualifying income interest for life and the date of the decedent's death has not been distributed before the decedent's death, then the gross estate also shall include such undistributed income. See section 2207A in regard to the estate's right to recover the estate tax attributable to such property from persons receiving the property.

(b) Passed from. For purposes of section 1014 and chapters 11 and 13 of Subtitle B of the Code, property included in a decedent's gross estate under section 2044 shall be considered to have been acquired from or to have passed from the decedent to the person receiving the property upon the decedent's death. Thus, the property will be treated as passing from the decedent for purposes of determining the availability of current use valuation under section 2032A, the availability of the charitable deduction under section 2055, and the availability of the marital deduction under section 2056. In order to qualify for special use valuation under section 2032A, the property must pass to a person who is a "qualified heir" (described in section 2032A (e)(1)) of the decedent.

(c) Presumption. If the decedent has a qualifying income interest for life in any property, it shall be presumed that a deduction was taken under section 2056(b)(7) or section 2523(f) upon the transfer which created the decedent's interest. In order to avoid the inclusion of property in the decedent's gross estate under this section, the executor must establish that a deduction was not taken for the transfer of property which created the qualifying income interest.

(d) Amount included. If the executor establishes that upon the transfer of property that created the decedent's qualifying income interest for life, a deduction was taken under section 2056(b)(7) or section 2523(f) for a fractional or percentile share of the entire interest in the property, then the amount includible in the decedent's gross estate under this section (assuming section 2519 has not applied) is equal to the fair market value of the entire interest in the property on the date of the decedent's death (or the alternate valuation date, if applicable) multiplied by such fractional or percentile share. However, such share shall be appropriately reduced if—

(1) The decedent's interest is in a trust and appointments of principal have been made to the decedent, and

(2) The trust provides that the appointments are to be made from the qualified terminable interest share of the trust, and

(3) The executor can establish to the satisfaction of the district director the reduction in that share based on the fair market value of the trust assets at the time of each appointment.

See example (4) of paragraph (e) of this section. If the decedent's interest is in a trust consisting of only qualified terminable interest property, and such trust has been severed (in compliance with §20.2056(b)-7(b) or §25.2523(f)-1(b), whichever is applicable) from a trust which also contained property which was not qualified terminable interest property, then only the value of the property in the severed portion of the trust is includible in the decedent's gross estate. If an executor establishes that upon the transfer of property (including an annuity contract) that created the decedent's lifetime annuity or other income interest, a deduction was taken under section 2056(b)(7) or section 2523(f) for an amount less than the fair market value of the entire property at the time of such transfer, then only a portion of the value of the property is includible in the decedent's gross estate under this section. The includible amount (assuming section 2519 has not applied) is equal to the fair market value of the entire property on the date of the decedent's death (or the alternate valuation date, if applicable) multiplied by a fraction, the numerator of which is the amount of the deductible interest determined under §20.2056(b)-(7)(c)(2) or §25.2523(f)-1(c)(2), and the denominator of which is the fair market value of the entire property at the time of the transfer creating the decedent's annuity or other income interest. See example (7) of paragraph (e) of this section.

(e) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of principles in paragraphs (a) through (d) of this section.

Example (1). D died during 1982 passing property under a will providing that certain income producing assets valued at $800,000 in D's gross estate (net of debts, expenses, and other charges, including death taxes, payable from the property) were to be put in trust with all the income payable to D's surviving spouse, S, for life. The will provides that the corpus of the trust shall be distributed to D's children upon S's death. D's estate deducted $800,000 under section 2056(b)(7). Assume that S dies during 1984, at which time the value of the trust is $740,000; that S's executor does not elect the alternate valuation date; and that S has made no disposition of "all or part of the property" within the meaning of section 2519. The amount included in S's gross estate pursuant to section 2044 is $740,000.

Example (2). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (1) except that the executor of D's estate elected to deduct, pursuant to section 2056(b)(7), only 50 percent of the value of the trust ($400,000). Consequently, only an equivalent portion of the trust is included in S's gross estate, that is, $370,000 (50 percent of $740,000).

Example (3). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (1) except that S received a lifetime interest in only 20 percent of the income of the trust and that D's executor elected to deduct, pursuant to section 2056(b)(7), only 50 percent of the amount allowable, that is, $80,000 (50 percent of 20 percent of $800,000). Consequently, only an equivalent portion of the trust is included in S's gross estate, that is, $74,000 (50 percent of 20 percent of $740,000).

Example (4). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (1) except that the executor of D's estate elected to deduct, pursuant to section 2056(b)(7), only 50 percent of the value of the trust ($400,000), and that the trustee has the discretion to appoint principal to the surviving spouse. Assume that the trust instrument provides that appointments of principal will be made from the qualified terminable interest share first and that the trustee makes only one appointment of principal, to the spouse of $100,000, during 1983 when the value of the trust was $1,100,000. Immediately prior to the appointment, the qualified terminable interest portion of the trust was 50 percent ($550,000 of the $1,100,000). Immediately after the appointment, the qualified terminable interest portion of the trust was 45 percent ($450,000 divided by $1,000,000). Thus, the amount included in S's gross estate will be $333,000 (45 percent of $740,000) rather than $370,000, provided S's executor can establish to the satisfaction of the district director the facts in this example.

Example (5). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (1) except that, during 1983, S transfers to X the right to 40 percent of the income from the trust, for the life of S. Because S's entire interest (other than the right to the remaining 60 percent of the trust income and the amount of gift tax, if any, recoverable by S under section 2207A) is treated as transferred under section 2519, no part of the trust is included in S's gross estate under section 2044. However, since S retains an income interest in 60 percent of the property (the remainder interest in which is treated pursuant to section 2519 as having been transferred by S for both gift and estate tax purposes), 60 percent of the property is included in S's gross estate under section 2036(a)(1).

Example (6). During 1982 A created a trust for A's spouse, B, with the income payable annually to B for the lfe of B. The value of the trust on the day of creation was $800,000. The trust provides that upon B's death, $100,000 of corpus shall be paid to X charity and the remainder distributed to A's children. Assume that at the time of B's death the fair market value of the trust is $1,000,000, and that B's executor does not elect the alternate valuation date. If A had taken a deduction under section 2523(f) for the entire transfer, the amount included in B's estate would be the fair market value at B's death of the property in which B had a qualifying income interest for life, that is, $1,000,000. The amount passing to X charity is treated as a transfer by B to X charity for purposes of section 2055. Therefore, B's estate will be allowed a charitable deduction for the $100,000 transferred from the trust to the charity to the same extent that such a deduction would be allowed by section 2055 for a bequest by B to X charity.

Example (7). D died during 1983 passing property under a will providing that income producing assets valued at $500,000 in D's gross estate (net of debts, expenses, and other charges, including death taxes, payable from the property) were to be put in trust, with the trustee required to pay an annuity to D's surviving spouse, S, of $20,000 a year for life. All of the trust income other than amounts paid to S as an annuity are to be accumulated in the trust and may not be distributed during S's lifetime to any person other than S. D's estate deducted $200,000 under section 2056(b)(7) and §20.2056(b)-7(c)(2). Assume that S dies in 1988, at which time the value of the trust property is $800,000. Also assume that S's executor does not elect the alternate valuation date and that S has made no disposition of "all or part of the property" within the meaning of section 2519. The amount included in S's gross estate pursuant to section 2044 is $320,000 [($200,000/$500,000) x $800,000].

Par. 6. A new §20.2055-6 is added immediately following §20.2055-5, to read as set forth below.

§20.2055-6 Disallowance of double deduction in the case of terminable interest property.

No deduction shall be allowed from the decedent's estate under section 2055 for property transferred, if a deduction is taken from the decedent's estate with respect to that property by reason of section 2056(b)(7). See section 2056(b)(9).

Par. 7. Section 20.2056(a)-1 is revised to read as set forth below.

§20.2056(a)-1 Marital deduction; in general.

(a) A deduction is allowed under section 2056 from the gross estate of a decedent who was a citizen or resident of the United States at the time of the decedent's death for the value of any property interest which passed from the decedent to the decedent's surviving spouse, if the interest is a "deductible interest" as defined in §20.2056(a)-2. However, with respect to decedents dying in certain years, a deduction is allowed under section 2056 only to the extent that the total of the deductible interests does not exceed the applicable limitations set forth in §§20.2056(c)-1A and 20.2056(c)-2A. The deduction allowed under section 2056 is referred to as the "marital deduction." Except as otherwise provided by a death tax convention with a foreign country, the marital deduction is not allowed in the case of an estate of a nonresident who was not a citizen of the United States at the time of death. However, if the decedent was a citizen or resident, the estate is not deprived of its right to the marital deduction by reason of the fact that the decedent's surviving spouse was neither a resident nor a citizen. For convenience, the surviving spouse is generally referred to in the feminine gender, but if the decedent was a woman the reference is to her surviving husband. Sections 20.2056(b)-1 through 20.2056(b)-8 contain miscellaneous rules for determining the amount of "deductible interests"; §§20.2056(c)-1A and 20.2056(c)-2A provide limitations on the allowable amount of the marital deduction for decedents dying in certain years; §§20.2056(c)-1 through 20.2056(c)-3 define various terms used in the aforementioned sections; and §20.2056(d)-1 provides special rules concerning disclaimers of interests in property.

(b) In order to obtain the marital deduction with respect to any property interest, the executor must establish the following facts:

(1) That the decedent was survived by a spouse (see §20.2056(c)-2(e));

(2) That the property interest passed from the decedent to the spouse (see §§20.2056(b)-5 through 20.2056(b)-7 and 20.2056(c)-1 through 20.2056(c)-3);

(3) That the property interest is a "deductible interest" (see §20.2056 (a)-2); and

(4) The value of the property interest (see §20.2056(b)-4).

If a limitation on the allowable amount of the marital deduction applies to the estate (see §§20.2056(c)-1A and 20.2056(c)-2A), the executor must establish the facts relating to the application of such limitation. The executor must submit such proof as is necessary to establish any fact required by this paragraph (b), including any evidence requested by the district director.

Par. 8. The last sentence of paragraph (a) of §20.2056(a)-2 is revised to read as set forth below.

§20.2056(a)-2 Marital deduction; "deductible interests" and "nondeductible interests."

(a)  Subject to the limitations set forth in §§20.2056(c)-1A and 20.2056(c)-2A (relating to quantitative limitations on the marital deduction in certain cases), if applicable, the marital deduction is equal in amount to the aggregate value of the "deductible interests."

Par. 9. Section 20.2056(b)-1 is amended as follows:

(a) Paragraphs (d)(2) and (d)(3) are revised, and new paragraphs (d)(4) and (d)(5) are added immediately following paragraph (d)(3), to read as set forth below.

(b) Paragraph (e)(4) is revised to read as st forth below.

(c) The first sentence of paragraph (g) is replaced by the two sentences set forth below.

§20.2056(b)-1 Marital deductions; limitation in case of life estate or other "terminable interest."

* * * * *

(d) Exceptions. ***

* * * * *

(2) It is a right to income for life with a general power of appointment, meeting the requirements set forth in §20.2056(b)-5;

(3) It consists of life insurance or annuity payments held by the insurer with a general power of appointment in the spouse, meeting the requirements set forth in §20.2056(b)-6;

(4) It is qualified terminable interest property, meeting the requirements set forth in §20.2056(b)-7; or

(5) It is an interest in a qualified charitable remainder trust of which the spouse is the only noncharitable beneficiary, as provided under §20.2056(b)-8.

(e) Miscellaneous principles.

(4) The terms "passed from the decedent," "passed from the decedent to his surviving spouse" and "passed from the decedent to a person other than his surviving spouse" are defined in §§20.2056(c)-1 through 20.2056(c)-3.

* * * * *

(g) Examples. The application of this section may be illustrated by the following examples. In each example it is assumed that the executor made no election under section 2056(b)(7), that the property interest which passed from the decedent to a person other than his surviving spouse did not pass for an adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth, and that section 2056(b)(8) is inapplicable.

Par. 10. Paragraph (b) of §20.2056(b)-4 is amended by revising the reference to "§20.2056(c)-2" to read "§20.2056(c)-2A".

Par. 11. Section 20.2056(b)-5 is amended as follows:

(a) Paragraph (c) is revised to read as set forth below.

(b) The heading and first sentence of paragraph (d) are revised to read as set forth below.

§20.2056(b)-5 Marital deduction; life estate with power of appointment in surviving spouse.

(c) Meaning of "specific portion" —(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (c)(2) and (c)(3) of this section, a partial interest in property is not treated as a specific portion of the entire interest. In addition, any specific portion of an entire interest in property is nondeductible to the extent such specific portion is subject to invasion for the benefit of any person other than the surviving spouse, except in the case of deduction allowable under section 2056(b)(5), relating to invasions by the surviving spouse in the exercise of a general power of appointment.

(2) A partial interest in property is treated as a specific portion of the entire interest if the rights of the surviving spouse in income and the required rights as to the power (described in §20.2056(b)-5(a)) constitute a fractional or percentile share of a property interest so that such interest or share in the surviving spouse reflects its proportionate share of the increment or decline in the whole of the property interest to which the income rights and the power relate. Thus, if the right of the spouse to income and the power extend to a specified fraction or percentage of the property, or the equivalent, the interest is considered as a specific portion.

(3) A specific sum payable annually or at more frequent intervals out of the property and its income that is not limited by the income of the property will be treated as a right to the income of a specific portion of the property. However, no deduction will be allowable under section 2056(b)(5) except to the extent the surviving spouse has the required power of appointment over a fractional or a percentile share of the property. The deductible interest, for purposes of §20.2056(a)-1(a), is the specific portion of the property that, assuming the interest rate generally applicable for the valuation of annuities at the time of the decedent's death, would produce income equal to such specific annual payment. However, such specific sum payable to a surviving spouse will not be treated as a right to the income of a specific portion of the property for purposes of this paragraph (c)(3), if any person other than the surviving spouse may receive, during the surviving spouse's lifetime, any distribution of the property or its income out of which the surviving spouse's payments are made. To determine the applicable interest rate, see section 2031 and the regulations under that section.

(4) A partial interest in property is treated as a specific portion of the entire interest if it is shown that the surviving spouse has rights under local law which are identical to those he or she would have acquired had the size of the share been expressed in terms satisfying the requirements of either paragraph (c)(2) or paragraph (c)(3) of this section.

(5) The following examples illustrate the application of paragraphs (a) through (c)(4) of this section.

Example (1). The decedent, D, transferred to a trustee 500 identical shares of X company stock. D provided that during the lifetime of D's surviving spouse, S, the trustee should pay S annually one-half of the trust income of $6,000, whichever is the larger. All of the trust income other than amounts paid to S are to be accumulated in the trust and may not be distributed during S's lifetime to any person other than S. S was also given a general power of appointment exercisable by S's last will over all the trust corpus. For purposes of paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section, S shall be considered as receiving the greater of (i) all the income from one-half of the entire interest in the stock or (ii) the specific portion of the stock which under §20.2056(b)-5(c)(3) is determined to be the portion required to produce annual income equal to $6,000.

Example (2). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (1) except that S's testamentary general power of appointment is exercisable over only one-fourth of the trust corpus and D's executor does not elect to treat the trust property as qualified terminable interest property under §20.2056(b)-7. Consequently, the marital deduction is only allowed for one-fourth of the trust (the lesser of the portion determined in example (1) or one-fourth of the trust).

Example (3). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (1) except that S's testamentary general power of appointment is exercisable over the sum of $160,000 and D's executor does not elect to treat the trust property as qualified terminable interest property under §20.2056(b)-7. Inasmuch as there is no certainty as to what portion of the stock will be valued at $160,000 on S's death, the power of appointment over $160,000 is not considered a power of appointment over a specific portion of the entire interest. Thus, no marital deduction is allowed.

Example (4). The decedent, D, bequeathed to a trustee an office building and 250 identical shares of Y Company stock. D provided that during the lifetime of D's surviving spouse, S, the trustee should pay S annually three-fourths of the trust income. S was given a general power of appointment exercisable by will over the office building and 100 shares of stock. By the terms of D's will, S is given all the income from a definite fraction of the entire interest in the office building and in the stock. However, since the amount of property represented by a single share of stock would be altered if the corporation split its stock, issued stock dividends, made a distribution of capital, etc., a power to appoint 100 shares at the time of S's death is not the same necessarily as a power to appoint 100/250 of the entire interest which the 250 shares represented on the date of D's death. If it is shown in this case that under local law S has a general power to appoint not only the 100 shares designated by D, but also 100/250 of any shares or amounts that are distributed by the corporation and included in the corpus, the requirements of paragraph (c)(2) of this section will be satisfied and S will be considered as having a general power to appoint 100/250 of the entire interest in the 250 shares.

(d) Meaning of "entire interest." Since a marital deduction is allowed for each qualifying separate interest in property passing from the decedent to the decedent's surviving spouse (subject to any applicable limitation on the aggregate amount of deductions contained in §§20.2056(c)-1A and 20.2056(c)-2A), for purposes of paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section, each property interest with resepct to which the surviving spouse received some rights is considered separately in determining whether the surviving spouse's rights extend to the entire interest or to a specific portion of the entire interest.

* * * * *

Par. 12. There are added immediately following §20.2056(b)-6 the following new sections.

§20.2056(b)-7 Election with respect to life estate for surviving spouse.

(a) In general. A marital deduction is allowed under section 2056(b)(7) with respect to estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1981, for "qualified terminable interest property." All of the property for which a deduction is allowed under this paragraph (a) shall be treated as passing to the surviving spouse (for purposes of §20.2056(a)-1) and no part of such property shall be treated as passing to any person other than the surviving spouse (for purposes of §20.2056(b)-1).

(b) Qualified terminable interest property defined. For purposes of this section, the term "qualified terminable interest property" means property—

(1) Which passes from the decedent,

(2) In which the surviving spouse has a "qualifying income interest for life" as defined in paragraph (c) of this section, and

(3) Which the executor elected to treat as qualified terminable interest property.

For purposes of this section, the term "property" generally means an "entire interest in property" (within the meaning of §20.2056(b)-5(d)) or a "specific portion of the entire interest" (within the meaning of §20.2056(b)-5(c)). The election may relate to all or any part of property that meets the requirements of paragraphs (b)(1) and (2) of this section, provided that any partial election shall relate to a fractional or percentile share of the property so that the elective part will reflect its proportionate share of the increment or decline in the whole of the property for purposes of applying sections 2044 or 2519. Thus, if the interest of the surviving spouse in a trust meets the requirements of paragraphs (b)(1) and (2) of this section, the executor may make an election under paragraph (b)(3) with respect to a part of the trust only if the election relates to a defined fraction or percentage of the entire trust or specific portion thereof (within the meaning of §20.2056(b)-5(c)). The fraction or percentage may be defined by means of a formula. If the interest of the surviving spouse in a trust meets the requirements of paragraphs (b)(1) and (2) of this section, the trust may be divided into separate trusts to reflect a partial election that has been made or is to be made. If a trust is severed, it must be clear, by virtue of the duties imposed on the fiduciary either by applicable state law or by the express or implied provisions of the instrument governing the trust, that the fiduciary must divide the trust according to the fair market value of the assets of the trust at the time of the division. To have a valid election under paragraph (b)(3) of this section, the election shall be made by the executor (defined in section 2203 and the regulations under that section) who is in possession of the qualified terminable interest property and shall be made by such executor on the return of tax imposed by section 2001. For purposes of this paragraph, the term "return of tax imposed by section 2001" means the last estate tax return filed by such executor on or before the due date of the return, or if a timely return is not filed by such executor, the first estate tax return filed by the executor after the due date. The election, once made, is irrevocable. If an executor appointed under state law has made an election with respect to one or more properties, then no subsequent election may be made with respect to other properties in the executor's possession.

(c) Qualifying income interest for life defined. (1) In general. For purposes of this section, the term "qualifying income interest for life" means—

(i) The surviving spouse is entitled for life to all the income from the property, payable annually or at more frequent intervals, and

(ii) No person (including the surviving spouse) has a power, other than a power the exercise of which takes effect only at or after the surviving spouse's death, to appoint any part of the property to any person other than the surviving spouse.

In general, the principles outlined in §20.2056(b)-5(f), relating to whether the spouse is entitled for life to all of the income from the entire interest or a specific portion of the entire interest, are applicable in determining whether the surviving spouse is entitled for life to all the income from the property, regardless of whether the interest passing to the spouse is in trust. An income interest granted for a term of years, or a life estate subject to termination upon the occurrence of a specified event (e.g., remarriage), is not a qualifying income interest for life. In addition, an income interest (or life estate) that is contingent upon the executor's election under paragraph (b)(3) of this section is not a qualifying income interest for life, regardless of whether the election is actually made. On the other hand, an income interest will not fail to constitute a qualifying income interest for life solely because income between the last distribution date and the date of the surviving spouse's death is not required to be distributed to the surviving spouse or the surviving spouse's estate. See §20.2044-1 relating to the inclusion of such undistributed income in the surviving spouse's estate. An income interest in a trust will not fail to constitute a qualifying income interest for life solely because the trustee has a power to distribute corpus to or for the benefit of the surviving spouse. Also, the fact that property (i.e., income or corpus) distributed to a surviving spouse may be transferred by the spouse to another person does not result in a failure to satisfy the requirement of paragraph (c)(1)(ii) of this section. However, if the governing instrument requires the surviving spouse to transfer the distributed property to another person without full and adequate consideration in money or money's worth, the requirement of paragraph (c)(1)(ii) of this section is not satisfied.

(2) Annuities. In general, a surviving spouse's lifetime annuity interest shall be treated as a qualifying income interest for life for purposes of section 2056(b)(7)(B)(ii). The deductible interest, for purposes of §20.2056(a)-1(a), is the specific portion of the property (including an annuity contract) that, assuming the interest rate generally applicable for the valuation of annuities at the time of the decedent's death, would produce income equal to the minimum amount payable annually to the surviving spouse for life. In no case may the value of the deductible interest exceed the value of the property out of which the annuity is paid. If the annual payment may increase, the annuity interest will not be disqualified, but the increased amount shall not be taken into account in valuing the deductible interest. However, an annuity interest will not be treated as a qualifying income interest for life for purposes of section 2056(b)(7)(B)(ii), if any person other than the surviving spouse may receive, during the surviving spouse's lifetime, any distribution of the property or its income (including any distribution under an annuity contract) out of which the annuity is payable. To determine the applicable interest rate for valuing annuities, see section 2031 and regulations under that section. If, assuming such interest rate, the entire property from which the annuity may be satisfied is insufficient to produce income equal to the minimum annual payment, the value of the deductible interest is the entire value of such property.

(d) Application of local law. The provisions of local law shall be taken into account in determining whether or not the conditions of paragraphs (b) and (c) of this section are satisfied. For example, silence of a trust instrument as to the frequency of payment will not be regarded as a failure to satisfy the condition in paragraph (c) of this section that the income must be payable to the surviving spouse annually or more frequently, unless the applicable law permits payment to be made less frequently than annually.

(e) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of paragraphs (a) through (c) of this section. In each example it is assumed that the decedent dies after 1981.

Example (1). A decedent at the time of death owns a personal residence valued at $250,000 for estate tax purposes. Under the decedent's will, which was executed after September 11, 1981, the exclusive and unrestricted right to use such property (including the right to continue to occupy the property as a personal residence or to rent such property and receive the income) passes to the decedent's surviving spouse, S, for life. After S's death the property passes to the decedent's children. If the executor elects to treat all of such property as qualified terminable interest property, the deductible interest is the value of such property for estate tax purposes, i.e., $250,000.

Example (2). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (1) except that the property is a recently planted tree farm which is not expected to be income producing for 20 years after the decedent's death. In addition, assume that S is 70 years old at the time of the decedent's death, and that applicable local law does not require or permit S to require the conversion of the property into a productive asset within a reasonable time after the decedent's death. S does not have a qualifying income interest for life because the bequest does not give S that degree of beneficial enjoyment during S's life which the principles of the law of trusts accord to a person who is unqualifiedly designated as the life beneficiary of a trust. See §20.2056(b)-5(f). Therefore, no deduction for the bequest is allowable under section 2056(b)(7).

Example (3). Pursuant to a will executed after September 11, 1981, the decedent establishes a trust that is funded with property valued at $500,000 for estate tax purposes. The assets used to fund the trust include both income producing assets and non-productive assets. The surviving spouse, S, is given the right exercisable annually to require distribution of all the trust income to himself or herself. There is no power to distribute trust property during S's lifetime to any person other than S. Applicable State law permits S to require that the trustee either make the trust property productive or sell the property and reinvest in productive property within a reasonable time. If the executor elects to treat all of the trust as qualified terminable interest property, the deductible interest is $500,000. If the executor elects to treat only 20 percent of the trust as qualified terminable interest property, the deductible interest is only $100,000, that is, $500,000 multiplied by 20 percent.

Example (4). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (3) except that S is given the right exercisable annually to require distribution to herself or himself of only 50 percent of the trust income for life. The other 50 percent of the trust income is to be distributed among S and the decedent's children in the trustee's discretion or accumulated. If the executor elects to treat the entire portion of the trust in which S has a qualifying income interest as qualified terminable interest property, the deductible interest is $250,000, which is the value of the trust for estate tax purposes ($500,000) multiplied by the spouse's percentile share of the trust income (50 percent). If the executor elects to treat only 20 percent of the portion of the trust in which S has a qualifying income interest as qualified terminable interest property, the deductible interest is only $50,000, that is, $250,000 multiplied by 20 percent.

Example (5). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (3) except that the trustee is given the power to use annually $5,000 from the trust for the maintenance and support of X. S does not have a qualifying income interest for life in any portion of the trust because the bequest fails to satisfy the condition set forth in §20.2056(b)-7(c)(2), which is the condition that no person have a power, other than a power the exercise of which takes effect only at or after S's death, to appoint any part of the property to any person other than S. The trust would also be nondeductible under section 2056(b)(7) if S were given the power, rather than the trustee, to appoint a portion of the corpus to X.

Example (6). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (3) except that, upon S's remarriage, S's interest in the trust will pass to X. The trust is not deductible under section 2056(b)(7). S's income interest is not a "qualifying income interest for life" because it is not for life, but rather is terminable upon S's remarriage.

Example (7). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (3) except that S is given the right to require distribution to S of only that percentage of the trust income which the executor elects to treat as qualified terminable interest property. S does not have a qualifying income interest for life in any portion of the trust because the income interest is contingent upon the executor's election. Accordingly, the executor cannot elect qualified terminable interest treatment for any portion of the trust. If the decedent's will gives the the surviving spouse a qualifying income interest for life in a specific portion of the trust (such as the minimum portion of the trust that is necessary to reduce Federal estate tax to zero) and such interest is not contingent on the executor's election of qualified terminable interest treatment, the executor can elect qualified terminable interest treatment for the specified portion of the trust.

Example (8). Pursuant to a will executed after September 11, 1981, the decedent, D, establishes a trust funded with the residue of D's estate. Income of the trust is to be paid annually to D's surviving spouse, S, for S's life, and the principal is to be distributed to D's children upon S's death. S has the power to require that all the trust property be made productive. There is no power to distribute trust property during S's lifetime to any person other than S. D's executor elects to deduct under section 2056(b)(7) a fractional share of the residuary estate. The executor provides that the numerator of the fraction is the amount of deduction necessary to reduce the Federal estate taxes to zero (taking into account final estate tax values) and the denominator of the fraction is the final estate tax value of the residuary trust (after taking into account any specific bequests or liabilities of the estate paid out of the residuary estate). The formula election is of a fractional share. The value of such share qualifies for the marital deduction even though the executor's determinations to claim administration expenses as estate or income tax deductions and the final estate tax value will affect the amount of the fractional share.

Example (9). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (8) except that, rather than defining a fraction, the executor's formula states: "I elect that portion of the residuary trust, up to 100 percent, necessary to reduce the Federal estate taxes to zero, after taking into account the available unified credit, final estate tax values and any liabilities paid out of and specific bequests funded out of the residuary estate." The formula election is of a fractional share. The share is equivalent to the fractional share determined in example (8).

Example (10). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (8) except that S is also the life beneficiary of the sixteen remaining annual installments of D's individual retirement account for which the 19 original annual installments began being paid when D reached age 70 ½. Also assume that each installment is equal to all the income earned on the remaining principal in the account plus a share of the remaining principal equal to $\frac{1}{19}$ in the first year, $\frac{1}{18}$ in the second year, $\frac{1}{17}$ in the third year, etc. Any remaining payment after S's death passes to D's children. S's interest in the account is a qualifying income interest for life. If D's executor makes two separate elections, one as to 100 percent of the retirement account and a second as to the residuary trust in the same manner as example (8), each election qualifies the property subject to the election for the marital deduction.

Example (11). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (8) except that D's will directs the executor to elect qualified terminable interest treatment for the minimum amount of property necessary to reduce estate taxes on D's estate to zero, directs the executor to divide the residuary estate into two separate trusts to reflect the election and directs that any payments of principal to S shall be charged first to the marital deduction trust. S remains the sole life beneficiary of both trusts. The authorization and direction have no effect on the allowance of a marital deduction, and only the property remaining in the marital deduction trust, after payments of principal to S, will be subject to inclusion in S's gross estate (by section 2044) or subject to gift tax (by section 2519). If rather than authorizing the executor to form two separate trusts, D's will directs the executor to form a single trust and reduce the marital deduction share of that trust by any invasions of principal for S, the executor's formula election will be valid. See §§20.2044-1(d) and 25.2519-1(d) for the effect of appointments of principal.

Example (12). Pursuant to a will executed after September 11, 1981, the decedent, D, establishes a trust funded with income producing property valued at $500,000 for estate tax purposes. The trustee is required by the trust instrument to pay $20,000 a year to D's surviving spouse, S, for life. The rest of the income from the trust is to be accumulated in the trust and may not be distributed during S's lifetime to any person other than S. S's lifetime annuity interest is treated as a qualifying income interest for life. If the executor elects to treat the entire portion of the trust in which S has a qualifying income interest as qualified terminable interest property, the value of the deductible interest is $200,000, since such amount would yield an income to S of $20,000 a year (assuming D died in March 1984 and a 10 percent interest rate applies in valuing annuities).

Example (13). Assume the same facts as in example (12) except that the trustee is required to pay S $70,000 a year for life. If the executor elects to treat the entire portion of the trust in which S has a qualifying income interest as qualified terminable interest property, the value of the deductible interest is $500,000, which is the lesser of the entire value of the property ($500,000), or the amount of property that (assuming a 10 percent interest rate) would yield an income to S of $70,000 a year ($700,000).

Example (14). Pursuant to a will executed after September 11, 1981, the decedent, D, provides that upon his death, the executor shall purchase a commercial annuity for his surviving spouse, S, that will pay S $100,000 a year for life. Based on S's life expectancy at the time of D's death, the cost of the annuity is $700,000. S's annuity interest is treated as a qualifying income interest for life. If the executor elects to treat the entire property in which S has a qualifying income interest for life as qualified terminable interest property, the deductible interest is the cost of the annuity, or $700,000.

Example (15). Pursuant to a will executed after September 11, 1981, the decedent transfers $200,000 to a pooled income fund, within the meaning of section 642(c)(5), designating his wife as the income beneficiary for her life. If the executor elects to treat the entire $200,000 as qualified terminable interest property, the deductible interest is $200,000. The deduction will not be denied under this section if the decedent's transfer to his wife is conditioned on the payment by the wife of state death taxes attributable to the pooled income fund.

§20.2056(b)-8 Special rule for charitable remainder trusts.

With respect to estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1981, section 2056(b)(8) provides that if the surviving spouse of the decedent is the only noncharitable beneficiary of a charitable remainder annuity trust or a charitable remainder unitrust described in section 664 (qualified charitable remainder trust), section 2056(b)(1) shall not apply to any interest in such trust which is transferred to the surviving spouse. Thus, the estate will receive a charitable deduction under section 2055 for the value of the remainder interest and a marital deduction under section 2056(b)(8) for the value of the annuity or unitrust interest. A marital deduction for the value of the surviving spouse's annuity or unitrust interest in a qualified charitable remainder trust is allowable only under section 2056(b)(8). No marital deduction is allowable for any portion of a qualified charitable remainder trust under section 2056(b)(7). The surviving spouse's interest need not be an interest for life. For purposes of this section, the term "non-charitable beneficiary" means any beneficiary of the qualified charitable remainder trust other than an organization described in section 170(c). A deduction will not be denied under this section by reason of the transfer to the surviving spouse being conditioned on the payment of state death taxes attributable to the qualified charitable remainder trust. See §20.2056(b)-4(c) for the effect of such a condition on the amount of deduction allowable.

Par.13. Section 20.2056(c)-1 is redesignated §20.2056(c)-1A and is amended as follows:

(a) Paragraph (a) is revised to read as set forth below.

(b) Paragraph (b) is redesignated as paragraph (d) and a new paragraph (b) is inserted in its place to read as set forth below.

(c) A new paragraph (c) is added to read as set forth below.

(d) Paragraph (d) as redesignated by this document is amended by inserting a new sentence immediately after the second sentence, by revising the reference to "§20.2056(c)-2" to read "§20.2056(c)-2A", and by removing the last sentence of the example and inserting a new sentence in its place, to read as set forth below.

§20.2056(c)-1A Marital deduction; limitation on aggregate of deductions for decedants dying in certain years.

(a) Estates of decedants dying either prior to January 1, 1977, or, in certain cases, after December 31, 1976, and before January 1, 1979. In general, the allowable marital deduction for estates of decedents dying before January 1, 1977, and the allowable marital deduction for certain decedents dying after December 31, 1976, and before January 1, 1979 (as provided in paragraph (c)(1) of this section relating to maximum marital deduction formula provisions), is limited to the smaller of the following amounts:

(1) The aggregate value of the "deductible interests" which passed from the decedent to the surviving spouse (see §20.2056(a)-2(a)); or

(2) Fifty percent of the value of the decedent's "adjusted gross estate."

(b) Estates of decedents dying either after December 31, 1976, and prior to January 1, 1982, or, in certain cases, after December 31, 1981— (1) In general. Except as provided by paragraphs (b)(2) and (c)(1) of this section, the allowable marital deduction for estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1976, and prior to January 1, 1982, and the allowable marital deduction for certain decedents dying after December 31, 1981 (as provided in paragraph (c)(2) of this section relating to maximum marital deduction formula provisions), is limited to the smaller of the following amounts:

(i) the aggregate value of the "deductible interests" which passed from the decedent to the surviving spouse (see §20.2056(a)-2(a)); or

(ii) The greater of—

(A) Two hundred fifty thousand dollars (reduced for community property as provided in §20.2056(c)-2A), or

(B) Fifty percent of the value of the decedent's "adjusted gross estate."

(2) Adjustment for certain gifts to a spouse—(i) In general. The limitation provided by paragraph (b)(1)(ii) of this section shall be reduced (but not below zero) by the excess, if any, of—

(A) The aggregate deductions allowed under section 2523 for post-1976 interspousal gifts made by the decedent and not included in the gross estate under section 2035 (gifts within 3 years of death); over

(B) The aggregate deductions which would have been allowable under section 2523 for those gifts if the amount deductible were 50 percent of the aggregate value of the deductible interests in the gifts.

In the case of remarriage, the adjustment required by this paragraph (b)(2)(i) shall be determined on the basis of gifts to all spouses. For purposes of this paragraph (b)(2)(i), a gift shall be treated as included in the gross estate by section 2035 only if it is included in the gross estate solely by reason of section 2035.

(ii) Determination of post-1976 interspousal gifts. In general, the term "post-1976 interspousal gifts" shall include all transfers by gift occurring after December 31, 1976, from the decedent to the decedent's spouse. However, the term shall not include gifts that were not required to be included in a gift tax return. See §25.6019-1(a)(1). Therefore, so long as a particular year's interspousal gifts do not exceed the annual per donee exclusion and do not include a future interest, that year's interspousal gifts are not included in the adjustment set out in paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section. In years where interspousal gifts are in excess of the annual per donee exclusion or include a future interest, all interspousal gifts transferred during the year are included in the computation.

(iii) Examples. The following examples illustrate the reduction required by paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section. The reduction for post-1976 transfers is equal to the lesser of:

A; or

where the letters correspond to the following amounts:

A = the limitation on the marital deduction before adjustment for interspousal gifts and after the reduction required for community property (paragraph (b) of §20.2056(c)-2A);

B = the aggregate deductions under section 2523 for post-1976 gifts;

C = the aggregate deductions under section 2523 for post-1976 gifts included in the gross estate solely by reason of section 2035;

D = the sum of deductible interests (within the meaning of §25.2523(a)-1(b)(2)) in post-1976 interspousal gifts required to be included in a gift tax return; and

E = the sum of deductible interests (within the meaning of §25.2523(a)-1(b)(2)) in post-1976 interspousal gifts required to be included in the gross estate by reason of section 2035.

Example (1). W died during 1979 having made two gifts to W's spouse after 1976. The first gift was for $103,000 and was made during 1977. With respect to the first gift, W deducted $100,000 under 2523 and excluded $3,000 from taxable gifts under section 2503(b). The second gift was made during 1978 and was in the amount of $4,000, of which $3,000 was excluded from taxable gifts under section 2503(b) and $1,000 was reported as a taxable gift. W never held property as community property and died with an adjusted gross estate of $300,000 (including $107,000 of previous gifts included in the gross estate by reason of section 2035). The reduction in the marital deduction limitation required as a result of post-1976 gifts is zero, computed as follows:

i.e., $100,000 − $100,000 − 50% ($107,000 − $107,000).

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1) except W dies on January 1, 1981, with an adjusted gross estate of $300,000. Pursuant to section 2035, the adjusted gross estate includes the $4,000 gift made during 1978. W made no gifts to W's spouse other than those in example (1). The reduction in the marital deduction limitation as a result of post-1976 gifts is $48,500, computed as follows:

Lesser of:

$48,500, i..e., $100,000 − $0 − 50% ($107,000 − $4,000).

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (2) except W made a second transfer by gift to W's spouse during 1977. The second gift during 1977 was a gift of a nondeductible terminable interest in property. Therefore, the second gift during 1977 has no effect on the limitation on the marital deduction. The reduction in the marital deduction limitation as a result of post-1976 gifts remains $48,500.

Example (4). The facts are the same as in example (2) except the gift made during 1978 was for $3,000 and therefore was not required to be included in a gift tax return. The reduction in the marital deduction limitation as a result of post-1976 gifts is $48,500, computed as follows:

Lesser of:
$48,500, i.e., $100,000 − 0 − 50% ($103,000 − $0).

Example (5). The facts are the same as in example (4) except a portion of W's gross estate includes an interest in community property. Assume for purposes of this example that the maximum allowable marital deduction, after adjustments for community property and prior to adjustments for gifts to the spouse, is $12,500 (see §20.2056(c)-2A). The reduction in the marital deduction limitation as a result of post-1976 gifts is $12,500, computed as follows:
Lesser of:
$48,500, i.e., $100,000 − $0 − 50% ($103,000 − $0).

(c) Special rules for property passing under a maximum marital deduction formula provision—(1) Decedents dying before January 1, 1979. The allowable marital deduction for property passing to a surviving spouse from a decedent dying after December 31, 1976, but before January 1, 1979, under a maximum marital deduction formula provision (defined in paragraph (c)(3) of this section) in a will executed or trust created before January 1, 1977, is limited to the amount determined under paragraph (a) of this section (i.e., the limitation applicable to estates of decedents dying before January 1, 1977) unless—

(i) The maximum marital deduction formula provision of the will or trust (or another provision of the will or trust that refers to the maximum marital deduction formula provision) is amended after December 31, 1976, and before the decedent's death; or

(ii) A state statute applicable to the estate is enacted which construes the type of formula used as referring to the allowable marital deduction limitation under section 2056 as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1976.

The marital deduction allowable to an estate to which the rule in this paragraph (c)(1) applies may exceed the paragraph (a) limitation, but only to the extent that the value of property passing outside of the formula provision is in excess of the paragraph (a) limitation.

(2) Decedents dying after December 31, 1981. The allowable marital deduction for property passing from a decedent dying after December 31, 1981, to a surviving spouse under a maximum marital deduction formula provision (defined in paragraph (c)(3) of this section) in a will executed or trust created before September 12, 1981, is limited to the amount determined in paragraph (b)(1) of this section (i.e., the limitation applicable to estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1976, and prior to January 1, 1982) unless—

(i) The maximum marital deduction formula provision of the will or trust (or another provision of the will or trust that relates to the maximum marital deduction formula provision) is amended after September 11, 1981, and before the decedent's death to refer specifically to an unlimited marital deduction; or

(ii) A state statute applicable to the estate is enacted which construes the type of formula used as referring to the allowable marital deduction under section 2056 as amended by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981.

The marital deduction allowable to an estate to which the rule in this paragraph (c)(2) applies may exceed the paragraph (b) limitation, but only to the extent that the value of property passing outside of the formula provision is in excess of the paragraph (b) limitation. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(2), the paragraph (b) limitation shall be increased by the value of any interest in property that is deducted from the decedent's gross estate by reason of section 2056(b)(7) or (b)(8).

(3) Maximum marital deduction formula provision. For purposes of this section, the term "maximum marital deduction formula provision" means a will or trust provision expressly providing that the decedent's surviving spouse is to receive an amount or share which is determined with reference to the maximum allowable marital deduction, even though the amount passing under the formula provision may be reduced to insure full usage of the decedent's unified credit or to take into account transfers outside of the formula provision that qualify for the marital deduction. However, the term shall not include any provision in a will or trust where the instrument specifically indicates that the decedent intended to give the surviving spouse additional property if Federal law were changed to increase the allowable marital deduction.

(4) Examples. The following examples illustrate the effect of paragraphs (c)(1) through (c)(3) of this section. Unless otherwise specified, in each example it is assumed that sections 2056(b)(7) and (b)(8) are not applicable to the decedent's estate.

Example (1). The decedent died during 1978 with an adjusted gross estate valued at $400,000. All of the decedent's property was disposed of in accordance with a will executed prior to January 1, 1977. It is assumed for purposes of this example that the decedent and the spouse never held any property as community property; that the decedent made no gifts to a spouse after December 31, 1976; that the will was never amended; and that the State did not enact a statute construing the use of maximum marital deduction formula clauses. Although the decedent's will contained a maximum marital deduction formula provision, an aggregate amount of $225,000 passed to the surviving spouse by operation of a specific bequest. The allowable marital deduction is $225,000, because the estate is entitled to the marital deduction allowed for estates of decedents dying after 1976 to the extent property passes outside the maximum marital deduction formula provision (e.g., joint tenancy property, insurance proceeds passing directly to the spouse outside the will, and property passing under provisions of the will other than the marital deduction formula provision).

Example (2). The decedent died after December 31, 1981, passing property under a will executed prior to September 12, 1981, and not amended thereafter. The will contains a formula provision that established a marital deduction trust equal to the maximum amount qualifying for the marital deduction allowable under Federal estate tax law, reduced by transfers outside of the formula provision which qualify for the marital deduction, and further reduced to the extent (if any) necessary to increase the decedent's taxable estate to the largest amount which will result in no Federal estate tax being payable after taking the available unified credit into account. No State statute is enacted to construe the formula provision as referring to the unlimited marital deduction. Pursuant to paragraph (c)(2) of this section, the marital deduction allowable for property passing under the formula provision in this case may not exceed the amount determined in paragraph (b)(1) of this section, reduced by the value of qualifying property interests passing to the spouse outside the formula provision, and further reduced by the available unified credit. Paragraph (c)(2) of this section does not limit the marital deduction allowable for property passing outside the will (e.g., joint tenancy property or insurance proceeds) or property passing under provisions of the will other than the maximum marital deduction formula provision. Thus, if the decedent's adjusted gross estate is $1,500,000, the will makes a specific bequest to the spouse of tangible personal property worth $500,000, and the spouse receives joint bank accounts in the amount of $50,000 outside the will, then the maximum marital deduction allowable for property passing under the formula provision is $650,000, less any amount by which the formula bequest is reduced to insure full usage of the available unified credit. The total marital deduction allowable to the estate in this case is $750,000 (i.e., the $650,000 deductible amount that may pass under the formula provision plus the $50,000 specific bequest and the $50,000 of joint bank accounts). If the facts are as just stated except that the surviving spouse also receives life insurance proceeds of $750,000 that are includable in the decedent's gross estate but pass to the surviving spouse outside the will, no marital deduction is allowable to the estate for property passing under the formula provision and the total marital deduction allowable to the estate is $850,000 (i.e., the $750,000 of life insurance proceeds plus the $50,000 specific bequest and the $50,000 of joint bank accounts).

Example (3). The decedent died after December 31, 1981, passing property under a trust instrument executed prior to September 12, 1981, and not amended thereafter. The trust instrument establishes a separate marital deduction trust for the decedent's spouse at the decedent's death pursuant to a formula provision similar to the one described in example (2), except that the amount passing to the marital deduction trust is determined with reference to the maximum amount qualifying for the marital deduction allowable "under the Federal estate tax law in effect at [the decedent's] death." In this case the trust instrument specifically indicates that the decedent intended to give the surviving spouse additional property if the Federal estate tax law were changed to increase the allowable marital deduction. Accordingly, paragraph (c)(2) of this section does not apply and the marital deduction allowable to the estate is not subject to any quantitative limitation imposed by this section.

Example (4). The decedent died after December 31, 1981, passing property under a will executed prior to September 12, 1981, and not amended thereafter. The will contains a formula provision that establishes a marital deduction trust equal to the maximum amount qualifying for the marital deduction allowable under Federal estate tax law reduced by other property qualifying for the marital deduction and passing to the surviving spouse outside of the formula provision. No State statute is enacted to construe the formula provision as referring to the unlimited marital deduction. The surviving spouse receives no property outside the will. The only other property the surviving spouse receives under the will is (i) an interest in a trust (funded with the residuary of the decedent's estate) that qualifies for qualified terminable interest treatment under section 2056(b)(7) and (ii) an interest in a qualified charitable remainder trust that qualifies for deduction under section 2056(b)(8). The decedent's adjusted gross estate is $1,500,000 and applicable State law provides that the marital deduction trust is funded with one-half the adjusted gross estate. Accordingly, the marital deduction allowable to the estate in this case is $750,000 (one-half the adjusted gross estate of $1,500,000) for the marital deduction trust plus the portion of the residuary trust that the executor elects to treat as qualified terminable interest property plus the value of the spouse's interest in the qualified charitable remainder trust.

(d) Adjusted gross estate.  However, solely for purposes of determining the allowable marital deduction, the decedent's gross estate is deemed to include the amount of any generation-skipping transfer taxable under section 2601 if—

(1) The decedent is the deemed transferor within the meaning of section 2612, and

(2) The generation-skipping transfer occurs at the same time as, or within 9 months after, the decedent's death.

Example.  Assuming the decedent died prior to January 1, 1977, the allowable marital deduction is limited to $85,000 (50 percent of the value of the adjusted gross estate).

Par. 14. Section 20.2056(c)-2 is redesignated §20.2056(c)-2A, retitled to read as set forth below, and amended as follows:

(a) Paragraph (a) is revised to read as set forth below.

(b) Paragraph (j) is revised by removing the first nine words of example (1) and inserting new language in their place, and by adding a new example (3) immediately after example (2), to read as set forth below.

§20.2056(c)-2A Additional limitation on marital deduction applicable in certain cases involving community property.

(a) This section only affects the marital deduction for estates of decedents for which the limitation imposed by either paragraph (a) or (b) of section 20.2056(c)-1A is applicable.

(1) If the decedent and the decedent's surviving spouse at any time held property as "community property," as defined in this section, the "adjusted gross estate" referred to in §20.2056(c)-1A is the entire value of the gross estate less the sum of the following values and amounts:

(i) The value of any property included in the gross estate that was at the time of the decedent's death held by the decedent and the decedent's surviving spouse as "community property," as defined in this section.

(ii) The value of property (to the extent included in the gross estate) transferred by the decedent during the decedent's life, if at the time of such transfer the property was held by the decedent and the decendent's surviving spouse as "community property," as defined in this section.

(iii) The amount (to the extent included in the gross estate) receivable as insurance under policies upon the life of the decedent, to the extent purchased with premiums or other consideration paid out of property then held by the decedent and the decedent's surviving spouse as "community property," as defined in this section.

(iv) An amount that bears the same ratio to the aggregate amount of the deductions for expenses, indebtedness, taxes and losses allowed by sections 2053 and 2054 as the value of the gross estate, reduced by the aggregate amount subtracted under paragraphs (a)(1)(i), (1)(ii) and (1)(iii) of this section, bears to the entire value of the gross estate. The amount to be subtracted under this paragraph (a)(1)(iv) is:

$$\frac{\text{community property}}{\text{entire gross estate}} \times \text{gross estate, less deductions for expenses, indebtedness, taxes, and losses.}$$

(2) If the decedent and the decedent's surviving spouse at any time held property as "community property," as defined in this section, the limitation on the marital deduction set forth in paragraph (b)(1)(ii)(A) of §20.2056(c)-1A (the $250,000 limitation) shall be reduced by the sum of the values and amounts in paragraphs (a)(1)(i) through (1)(iv) of this section and increased by the aggregate amount of the deductions for expenses, indebtedness, taxes and losses allowed by sections 2053 and 2054. The amount to be subtracted (from the $250,000 limitation) under this paragraph (a)(2) is:

$$\frac{\text{community property}}{\text{entire gross estate}} \times \text{community property, less deductions for expenses, indebtedness, taxes, and losses.}$$

* * * * *

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (1) except that the decedent dies after December 31, 1976, and before January 1, 1982. It is assumed for the purpose of this example that no property passed to the surviving spouse by operation of a maximum marital deduction formula provision in a will executed or trust created before January 1, 1977, and that the decedent made no gifts to a spouse after December 31, 1976. The alternative limitation on the marital deduction set forth in §20.2056(c)-1A(b)(1)(ii)(A) is computed as follows:

Maximum limitation on the marital deduction.....	$250,000
Reduction under paragraph (a) of this section ($100,000, less ((($100,000 X $45,000)) (($300,000)))....	$85,000
Limitation adjusted for community property	$165,000

The marital deduction will be $165,000 (the greater of one-half the adjusted gross estate ($85,000, see computation in example (1) above) or the limitation set forth in §20.2056(c)-1A(b)(1)(ii)(A)) if the aggregate value of the deductible interests passing from the decedent to the decedent's surviving spouse equals or exceeds that amount.

Par. 15. Section 20.2056(e)-1 is redesignated 20.2056(c)-1, inserted in the appropriate place, and amended by revising the reference to "§20.2056(c)-2" in paragraph (b) to read "§20.2056(c)-2A".

Par. 16. Section 20.2056(e)-2 is redesignated 20.2056(c)-2, inserted in the appropriate place, and amended as follows:

(a) The first sentence of paragraph (a) is amended by revising the reference to "§20.2056(e)-1" to read "§20.2056(c)-1".

(b) Paragraphs (a)(2) through (a)(5) are redesignated as paragraphs (a)(3) through (a)(6), respectively, and a new paragraph (a)(2) is inserted in the appropriate place to read as set forth below.

(c) The first sentence in the flush material following redesignated paragraph (a)(5) is revised to read as set forth below.

(d) Paragraphs (b)(1)(iv), (b)(2)(iii) and (b)(3)(v) are amended by revising the references to "§20.2056(b)-5" to read "§§20.2056(b)-5 or 20.2056(b)-7".

Par. 17. Section 20.2056(e)-3 is redesignated 20.2056(c)-3, inserted in the appropriate place, and amended by revising the references therein to "§20.2056(e)-1" and "§20.2056(e)-2" to read "§20.2056(c)-1" and "§20.2056(c)-2", respectively.

Par. 18. A new section is added immediately following §20.2207-1, to read as set forth below.

§20.2207A-1 Right of recovery of estate taxes in the case of certain marital deduction property.

(a) In general. If the gross estate includes property the value of which is includable in the gross estate by reason of section 2044 (relating to property received by the decedent as qualified terminable interest property under sections 2056(b)(7) or 2523(f)), such estate shall be entitled to recover from the "person receiving the property" (as defined in paragraph (d) of this section) the amount of estate tax attributable to that property. There shall be no right of recovery from any person for the portion of property received by that person for which a deduction was allowed from the gross estate, because no tax is attributable to such portion. Failure of an estate to exercise a right of recovery provided by section 2207A upon a transfer subject to section 2044 is treated as a transfer for Federal gift tax purposes of the unrecovered amounts from the persons who would benefit from such transfer to the persons from whom such recovery could have been obtained. See §25.2511-1. Such transfer is considered as made when such right to recovery is no longer enforceable and is treated as a gift even if recovery is impossible. This paragraph (a) shall not apply to the extent that the decedent's will provides that a recovery shall not be made.

(b) Amount of estate tax attributable to all such properties. The amount of estate tax that is attributable to all such properties includable in the gross estate is the amount by which—

(1) The total estate tax (including penalties and interest attributable to the tax) under chapter 11 of the Code which has been paid exceeds

(2) The total estate tax (including penalties and interest attributable to the tax) under chapter 11 of the Code which would have been payable if the value of the properties includable in the gross estate by reason of section 2044 had not been included.

(c) Amount of estate tax attributable to a particular property. An estate's right of recovery with respect to a particular property is an amount equal to the amount determined in paragraph (b) of this section multiplied by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the value of the particular property included in the gross estate by reason of section 2044 less any deduction allowed for such property. The denominator of the fraction is the total value of all properties included in the gross estate by reason of section 2044 less any deductions allowed with respect to those properties.

(d) Definition of "person receiving the property." If the property is in a trust at the time of the decedent's death, the "person receiving the property" is—

(1) The trustee, and

(2) Any person who has received a distribution of the property if the property does not remain in trust.

This paragraph (d) shall not affect the right, if any, under local law, of any person with an interest in property to reimbursement or contribution from another person with an interest in such property.

(e) Example. The following example illustrates the application of paragraphs (a) through (d) of this section.

Example. H died in 1982. H's will created a trust funded with certain income producing assets valued in H's estate at $1,000,000. The trust provides that all the income is payable to H's wife, W, for life, remainder to be divided equally among their four children, 25 percent to each. In computing H's gross estate, H's executor deducted, pursuant to section 2056(b)(7), $1,000,000. Assume that W received no other property from H, that W made no section 2519 disposition of the property, that the property was included in W's gross estate during 1983 at a value of $1,080,000, and that W's will contained no provision regarding section 2207A(a). The tax attributable to the property is equal to the amount by which the total estate tax (including penalties and interest) paid for W's estate exceeds the estate tax (including penalties and interest) which would have been paid if W's gross estate had been reduced by $1,080,000. That amount of tax may be recovered by W's estate from the trust. If at the time W's estate seeks reimbursement the trust has been distributed to the four children, W's estate is also entitled to recover the tax from the children.

Par. 19. Paragraph (a) of §20.6018-3 is amended by substituting "20.2056(d)-1" for "20.2056(e)-3" in the second sentence.

Par. 20. A new §25.2207A-1 is added immediately before §25.2501-1, to read as set forth below.

§25.2207A-1 Right of recovery of gift taxes in the case of certain marital deduction property.

(a) In general. If a person is treated as transferring an interest in property by reason of section 2519, such person or such person's estate shall be entitled to recover from the "person receiving the property" (as defined in paragraph (d) of this section) the amount of gift tax attributable to that property. The value of property to which this paragraph (a) applies is the value of all interests in such property other than the qualifying income interest. There shall be no right to recovery from any person for the portion of property received by that person for which a deduction was allowed from the total amount of gifts, because no tax is attributable to such portion. Failure of a person to exercise a right of recovery provided by section 2207A upon a lifetime transfer subject to section 2519 is treated as a transfer for Federal gift tax purposes of the unrecovered amounts to the persons from whom such recovery could have been obtained. See §25.2511-1. Such a transfer is considered as made when such right to recovery is no longer enforceable and is treated as a gift even if recovery is impossible. Any delay in the exercise of such right of recovery shall be treated as an interest-free loan with the appropriate gift tax consequences.

(b) Amount of gift tax attributable to all such properties. The amount of gift tax that is attributable to all such properties includable in the total amount of gifts made during the calendar year is the amount by which—

(1) The total gift tax for the calendar year (including penalties and interest attributable to the tax) under chapter 12 of the Code which has been paid exceeds

(2) The total gift tax for the calendar year (including penalties and interest attributable to the tax) under chapter 12 of the Code which would have been payable if the value of the properties includable in the total amount of gifts by reason of section 2519 had not been included.

(c) Amount of gift tax attributable to a particular property. A person's right of recovery with respect to a particular property is an amount equal to the amount determined in paragraph (b) of this section multiplied by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the value of the particular property included in the total amount of gifts made during the calendar year by reason of section 2519 less any deduction allowed for such property. The denominator of the fraction is the total value of all properties included in the total amount of gifts made during the calendar year by reason of section 2519 less any deductions allowed with respect to those properties.

(d) Definition of "person receiving the property." If the property is in a trust at the time of the transfer, the "person receiving the property" is—

(1) The trustee, and

(2) Any person who has received a distribution of the property if the property does not remain in trust.

This paragraph (d) shall not affect the right, if any, under local law, of any person with an interest in property to reimbursement or contribution from another person with an interest in such property.

(e) Example. The following example illustrates the application of paragraphs (a) through (d) of this section.

Example. Assume that H created an inter vivos trust during 1982 with certain income producing assets valued at $1,000,000. The trust provides that all the income is payable to H's wife, W, for life, with the remainder at W's death to be divided equally among their four children, 25 percent to each. In computing taxable gifts during calendar year 1982, H deducted, pursuant to section 2523(f), $1,000,000 from the total amount of gifts made. In addition, assume that W received no other transfers from H and that W made a gift during 1983 of the entire life interest to one of the children, at which time the value of trust assets was $1,080,000 and the value of W's life interest was $200,000. Although the entire value of the trust assets ($1,080,000) is, pursuant to sections 2511 and 2519, included in the total amount of W's gifts for calendar year 1983, W is only entitled to reimbursement for the tax attributable to the value of the remainder interest, that is, the tax attributable to $880,000 ($1,080,000 less $200,000). The tax attributable to $880,000 is equal to the amount by which the total gift tax (including penalties and interest) paid for the calendar year exceeds the gift tax (including penalties and interest) which would have been paid if the total amount of gifts during 1983 had been reduced by $880,000. That amount of tax may be recovered by W from the trust.

Par. 21. Section 25.2515-1 is amended by inserting a new paragraph (a)(1) immediately before paragraph (a), to read as set forth below, and redesignating paragraph (a) as paragraph (a)(2).

§25.2515-1 Tenancies by the entirety; in general.

(a)(1) Scope. This section and §§25.2515-2 through 25.2515-4 shall have no effect on the creation of a tenancy by the entirety occurring after December 31, 1981, and do not reflect changes made to the Code by sections 702(k)(1)(A) of the Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1), 1,166] or section 2002(c)(2) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1), 1,331].

(a)(2) Nature of. ***

Par. 22. A new §25.2519-1 is added immediately before §25.2521-1, to read as set forth below.

§25.2519-1 Dispositions of certain life estates.

(a) In general. If a person ("the donee spouse") makes a disposition of all or part of a qualifying income interest for life in any property for which a deduction was allowed under section 2056(b)(7) or section 2523(f) for the transfer creating the qualifying income interest, the donee spouse shall be treated for purposes of chapters 11 and 12 of Subtitle B of the Code as transferring all interests in such property other than the qualifying income interest. For example, if the donee spouse makes a disposition of part of a qualifying income interest for life, such spouse will be treated for purposes of section 2036 as having transferred the portion of the property to which the retained income interest is attributable. The amount treated as a transfer under this section upon a disposition of all or part of a qualifying income interest for life in qualified terminable interest property is equal to the full value of the property subject to the qualifying income interest on the date of the disposition (including any accumulated income and unreduced by any section 2503(b) exclusion that may have been taken for the transfer creating the interest), less the value of the qualifying income interest in such property on the date of the disposition and less the amounts that the spouse is entitled to recover under section 2207A (relating to the right to recover taxes attributable to the remainder interest). If the spouse is entitled to recover taxes under section 2207A, the determination of the amount of taxes recoverable and thus also the determination of the value of the remainder interest treated as transferred under section 2519 are made by using the same interrelated computation applicable for other transfers in which the transferee assumes the gift tax liability (commonly referred to as "net gifts"). The gift tax consequences of the disposition of the qualifying income interest are determined separately under §§25.2511-2 and 25.2514-1(b)(2).

(b) Presumption. If a donee spouse has a qualifying income interest for life in any property, it shall be presumed that a deduction was taken under section 2056(b)(7) or section 2523(f) upon the transfer which created the donee spouse's interest. To avoid the application of section 2519 upon a transfer of the donee spouse's income interest, the donee spouse must establish that a deduction was not taken for the transfer of property which created the qualifying income interest.

(c) Amount treated as a transfer. If the donee spouse establishes that, upon the transfer of property that created such spouse's qualifying income interest for life, a deduction was taken under section 2056(b)(7) or section 2523(f) for a fractional or percentile share of the entire interest in the property, the amount treated as a transfer by the donee spouse under this section is equal to the fair market value of the entire interest in the property on the date of the disposition multiplied by such fractional or percentile share. However, such share shall be appropriately reduced if—

(1) The donee spouse's interest is in a trust and appointments of principal have been made to the donee spouse, and

(2) The trust provides that the appointments are made from the qualified terminable interest share of the trust, and

(3) The donee spouse can establish to the satisfaction of the district director the reduction in that share based on the fair market value of the trust assets at the time of each appointment.

See example (5) of paragraph (h) of this section. If the donee spouse's interest is in a trust consisting of only qualified terminable interest property, and such trust had been severed (in compliance with §20.2056(b)-7(b) or §25.2523(f)-1(b), whichever is applicable) from a trust which also contained property which was not qualified terminable interest property, then only the value of the property in the severed portion of the trust at the time of the disposition shall be treated as transferred under this section. If the donee spouse establishes that upon the transfer of property (including an annuity contract) that created such spouse's lifetime annuity or other income interest, a deduction was taken under section 2056(b)(7) or section 2523(f) for an amount less than the fair market value of the entire property at the time of such transfer, then the amount treated as a transfer by the donee spouse under this section is equal to the fair market value of the entire property (other than the qualifying income interest) on the date of the disposition multiplied by a fraction, the numerator of which is the amount of the deductible interest determined under §20.2056(b)-7(c)(2) or §25.2523(f)-1(c)(2), and the denominator of which is the fair market value of the entire property at the time of the transfer creating the donee spouse's annuity or other income interest. See example (6) of paragraph (h) of this section.

(d) Identification of property transferred. If only part of the property in which a donee spouse has a qualifying income interest for life is qualified terminable interest property, then the donee spouse shall, in the case of a disposition of the income interest within the meaning of section 2519, be deemed to have transferred a pro rata portion of the property that is qualified terminable interest property. If consideration is received in exchange for the income interest, see section 2512(b) for the determination of the amount of the gift.

(e) Exercise of power of appointment. A reduction in the value of the qualified terminable interest property by reason of an exercise by any person of a power to appoint property to a donee spouse is not treated as a disposition under section 2519, even though the donee spouse subsequently disposes of the appointed property.

(f) Conversion of qualified terminable interest property. The conversion of property that is qualified terminable interest property into other property in which the donee spouse has a qualifying income interest for life shall not, for purposes of this §25.2519-1, be treated as a disposition of the qualifying income interest. Thus, the sale and reinvestment of assets of a trust which meets the requirements of qualified terminable interest property will not be considered a disposition of the qualifying income interest, provided that the donee spouse continues to have a qualifying income interest for life in the trust after the sale and reinvestment. Similarly, the sale of real property which meets the requirements of qualified terminable interest property, followed by the transfer of the proceeds into a trust which also meets the requirements of qualified terminable interest property, or by the reinvestment of the proceeds in income producing property in which the donee spouse has a qualifying income interest for life, will not be considered a disposition of the qualifying income interest. On the other hand, the sale of such real property, followed by the payment to the donee spouse of a portion of the proceeds equal to the value of the donee spouse's income interest, will be considered a disposition of the qualifying income interest.

(g) Right to recover certain taxes paid. See section 2207A and the regulations under that section for the right of the donee spouse to recover the gift taxes (attributable to a disposition subject to this section) from persons receiving the qualified terminable interest property.

(h) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of principles contained in paragraphs (a) through (g) of this section. Except as provided otherwise, it is assumed in each example that the full amount of the section 2503(b) exclusion has already been utilized for each year with respect to the donee in question; that section 2503(e) is not applicable to the amount deemed transferred; and that the gift taxes for the amount treated as transferred under section 2519 are offset by the donee spouse's unified credit.

Example (1). Assume that a decedent, D, owned at the time of death a personal residence valued at $250,000 for estate tax purposes; that such property passed under D's will to D's surviving spouse, S, for life and after S's death to D's children; and that D's executor elected to treat that property as qualified terminable interest property on the estate tax return for D's estate. During 1988, S makes a gift of all of S's interest in the property to D's children, at which time the fair market value of the property is $300,000 and the value of S's life interest in the property is $100,000. Pursuant to section 2519, S is treated as making a gift in the amount of $200,000 (which is the fair market value of the qualified terminable interest property less the fair market value of the life interest in such property). In addition, S is treated pursuant to section 2511 as making a gift of $100,000 (which is the fair market value of S's income interest in the property). See §§25.2511-2 and 25.2514-1(b)(2).

Example (2). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (1) except that, during 1988, S sells S's interest in the property to D's children for $100,000. Pursuant to section 2519, S is treated as making a gift in the amount of $200,000. S is not treated as making a gift under section 2511, since the consideration received for S's income interest is equal to the value of the income interest.

Example (3). Assume that the will of a decedent, D, established a trust valued for estate tax purposes at $500,000, all of the income of which is payable annually to D's surviving spouse, S, for life. After S's death, the corpus of the trust is to be distributed to D's children. Assume that only 50 percent of the trust was treated as qualified terminable interest property. During 1984, S makes a gift of all of S's interest in the trust to D's children, at which time the fair market value of the trust is $400,000 and the fair market value of S's life income interest in the trust is $100,000. Pursuant to section 2519, S is treated as making a gift of $150,000 (which is the fair market value of the qualified terminable interest property, 50 percent of $400,000, less the $50,000 income interest in the qualified terminable interest property). S is also treated pursuant to section 2511 as making a gift of $100,000 (which is the fair market value of S's life income interest).

Example (4). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (3) except that S makes a gift of only 40 percent of S's interest in the trust. S is treated pursuant to section 2519 as making a gift of $150,000 (which is the fair market value of the qualified terminable interest property, 50 percent of $400,000, less the $50,000 value of the income interest in the qualified terminable interest property). S is also treated pursuant to section 2511 as making a gift of $40,000 (which is the fair market value of 40 percent of S's life income interest). In addition, under §25.2519-1(d), S's disposition of 40 percent of the income interest is deemed to have been a transfer of a pro rata portion of the property that is qualified terminable interest property. Thus, 30 percent (60 percent of 50 percent) of the trust property will be included in S's gross estate under section 2036.

Example (5). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (4) except that D's will gives the trustee the authority to appoint principal to the surviving spouse and provides that the appointments of principal will be made from the qualified terminable interest share first. Assume that the trustee makes only one appointment of principal to the spouse in the amount of $50,000 during 1983 when the value of the trust was $550,000. Immediately prior to the appointment, the qualified terminable interest portion of the trust was 50 percent ($275,000 of the $550,000). As in example (4), assume that the value of the trust at the time of S's 1984 disposition is $400,000 and the fair market value of S's income interest is $100,000. Provided S can establish to the satisfaction of the district director the above facts, the qualified terminable interest portion of the trust immediately after the appointment became 45 percent ($225,000 divided by $500,000). Thus, when S makes the disposition during 1984, S would be treated pursuant to section 2519 as making a gift of $135,000 (which is the fair market value of the qualified terminable interest property, 45 percent of $400,000, less the value of the income interest in the qualified terminable interest property, $45,000). S is also treated pursuant to section 2511 as making a gift of $40,000 (which is the fair market value of 40 percent of S's income interest). In addition, under §25.2519-1(d), S's disposition of 40 percent of the income interest is deemed to have been a transfer of a pro rata portion of the property that is qualified terminable interest property. Thus, 27 percent (60 percent of 45 percent) of the trust property will be included in S's gross estate under section 2036.

Example (6). D died in 1983. D's will established a trust valued for estate tax purposes at $500,000. The trust instrument required the trustee to pay an annuity to D's surviving spouse, S, of $20,000 a year for life. All of the trust income other than the amounts paid to S as an annuity are to be accumulated in the trust and may not be distributed during S's lifetime to any person other than S. After S's death, the corpus of the trust is to be distributed to D's children. Under §20.2056(b)-7(c)(2), 40 percent of the property, or $200,000 was treated as the deductible interest. During 1988, S makes a gift of the annuity interest to D's children at which time the fair market value of the trust is $800,000, and the fair market value of S's annuity interest in the trust is $100,000. Pursuant to section 2519, S is treated as making a gift of $220,000 (which is the fair market value of the qualified terminable interest property, 40 percent of $800,000, less the $100,000 annuity interest in the qualified terminable interest property). S is also treated pursuant to section 2511 as making a gift of $100,000 (which is the fair market value of S's annuity interest).

Par. 23. A new §25.2522(c)-4 is added immediately following §25.2522(c)-3, to read as set forth below.

§25.2522(c)-4 Disallowance of double deduction in the case of terminable interest property.

No deduction shall be allowed for property under section 2522 if a deduction is taken from the "total amount of gifts" with respect to that property by reason of section 2523(f). See section 2523(h).

Par. 24. Section 25.2523(a)-1 is amended as follows:

(a) The first sentence of paragraph (a) is revised to read as set forth below.

(b) The first sentence of paragraph (b)(3)(ii) is revised to read as set forth below.

(c) Paragraphs (c) and (d) are redesignated as paragraphs (d) and (e), respectively, and a new paragraph (c) is added to read as set forth below.

(d) Paragraph (d) as redesignated by this document is amended by removing the heading thereof and inserting in its place the heading "Examples.", by removing the first three sentences and inserting a new sentence in their place to read as set forth below, and by adding a new example (8), immediately after example (7), to read as set forth below.

(e) Paragraph (e) as redesignated by this document is amended by revising the first sentence to read as set forth below.

zen or resident of the United States at the time the gift was made, may deduct the value of any property interest transferred by gift to a donee who at the time of the gift was the donor's spouse, except as limited by paragraphs (b) and (c) of this section. ***

(b) "Deductible interests" and "nondeductible interests" ***

(3) "Nondeductible interests". ***

(ii) Any property interest transferred by a donor to the donor's spouse is a "nondeductible interest" to the extent it is not required to be included in a gift tax return for a calendar quarter (for gifts made after December 31, 1970, and before January 1, 1982) or calendar year (for gifts made before January 1, 1971, or after December 31, 1981. ***

(c) Computation—(1) In general. The amount of the marital deduction will depend upon when the interspousal gifts are made, whether the gifts are terminable interests, whether the limitations of §25.2523(f)-1A (relating to gifts of community property) are applicable, and whether §25.2523(f)-1 (relating to the election with respect to life estates) is applicable.

(2) Gifts prior to January 1, 1977. Generally, with respect to gifts made during a calendar quarter prior to January 1, 1977, the marital deduction allowable under section 2523 is 50 percent of the aggregate value of the deductible interests. But see section 2524 for an additional limitation on the amount of the deduction which may be taken.

(3) Gifts after December 31, 1976, and before January 1, 1982. Generally, with respect to gifts transferred during a calendar quarter beginning after December 31, 1976, and ending prior to January 1, 1982, the marital deduction allowable under section 2523 is computed as a percentage of the deductible interest in those gifts. If the aggregate amount of deductions for such gifts is $100,000 or less, the deduction is 100 percent. The deduction is zero percent of the next $100,000 of deductible interests in such gifts and 50 percent thereafter. If a donor remarries, the computations in this paragraph (c)(3) shall be made on the basis of aggregate gifts to all persons who at the time of such gifts were the donor's spouse. See section 2524 for an additional limitation on the amount of deduction which may be taken.

(4) Gifts after December 31, 1981. Generally, with respect to gifts transferred during a calendar year beginning after December 31, 1981, the marital deduction allowable under section 2523 shall be 100 percent of the aggregate value of the deductible interests. See section 2524 for an additional limitation on the amount of deductions which may be taken.

(d) Examples. The following examples (in which it is assumed that the donors have previously utilized any specific exemptions provided by section 2521 for gifts prior to January 1, 1977) illustrate the application of paragraph (c) of this section and the interrelationship of sections 2523 and 2503.

* * * * *

Example (8). A donor made a transfer by gift to the donor's spouse of $200,000 cash on January 1, 1982. The donor made no other transfers during 1982. For calendar year 1982, the amount excluded under section 2503(b) is $10,000; the marital deduction is $190,000; and the amount of taxable gifts is zero ($200,000 − $10,000 (annual exclusion) − $190,000 (marital deduction)).

(e) Valuation. If the income from property is made payable to the donor or another individual for life, or for a term of years, with remainder absolutely to the donor's spouse or to the estate of the donor's spouse, the marital deduction shall be computed (pursuant to §25.2523(a)-1(c)) with respect to the present value of the remainder. ***

Par. 25. Section 25.2523(b)-1 is amended as follows:

(a) Paragraph (a)(1) is revised to read as set forth below.

(b) Paragraph (b)(3) is amended by substituting "§25.2523(e)-1 or 25.2523(f)-1" for "§25.2523(e)-1" in the first sentence thereof, and by revising the fifth sentence (the sentence immediately before the examples) to read as set forth below.

(c) The second sentence of paragraph (b)(6), which is the sentence immediately prior to the examples, is revised to read as set forth below.

(d) The second sentence of paragraph (c)(2), which is the sentence immediately prior to the example, is revised to read as set forth below.

§25.2523(b)-1 Life estate or other terminable interest.

(a) In general.—(1) The provisions of section 2523(b) generally prevent the allowance of the marital deduction with respect to certain property interests (referred to generally as "terminable interests" and defined in paragraph (a)(3) of this section) transferred to the donee spouse under the circumstances described in paragraph (a)(2) of this section, unless the transfer comes within one of the exceptions set forth in §25.2523(d)-1, relating to certain joint interests; §25.2523(e)-1, relating to certain life estates with powers of appointment; §25.2523(f)-1, relating to certain qualified terminable interest property; or §25.2523(g)-1, relating to certain qualified charitable remainder trusts.

* * * * *

(b) Interest in property which another donee may possess or enjoy. ***

(3)  The following examples, in which it is assumed that the donor did not make an election under sections 2523(f)(2)(C) and (f)(4), illustrate the application of the provisions of this paragraph (b)(3).

* * * * *

(6)  In each example it is assumed that the donor made no election under sections 2523(f)(2)(c) and (f)(4) and that the property interest which the donor transferred to a person other than the donee spouse was not transferred for an adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth:

* * * * *

(c) Interest in property which the donor may possess or enjoy. ***

(2)  The application of this paragraph may be further illustrated by the following example, in which it is assumed that the donor made no election under sections 2523(f)(2)(C) and (f)(4).

Par. 26. The first sentence of paragraph (c) of §25.2523(c)-1 is removed and three new sentences are inserted in its place, to read as set forth below.

§25.2523(c)-1 Interest in unidentified assets.

* * * * *

(c) If both the circumstances in paragraph (b) of this section exist, only a portion of the property interest passing to the spouse is a deductible interest. The portion qualifying as a deductible interest is an amount equal to the excess, if any, of the value of the property interest passing to the spouse over the aggregate value of the asset (or assets) which if transferred to the spouse would not qualify for the marital deduction. See paragraph (c) of §25.2523(a)-1 to determine the percentage of the deductible interest allowable as a marital deduction. ***

Par. 27. The third sentence of §25.2523(d)-1 is revised to read as set forth below.

§25.2523(d)-1 Joint interests.

 Thus, if the donor purchased real property in the name of the donor and the donor's spouse as tenants by the entirety, or as joint tenants with rights of survivorship and, pursuant to the provisions of section 2515(c), elected to treat such transaction as a completed gift, a marital deduction is allowable with respect to the value of the interest of the donee spouse in such property (subject to the limitations set forth in §25.2523(a)-1). ***

Par. 28. Paragraph (c) of §25.2523(e)-1 is revised to read as set forth below.

§25.2523(e)-1 Marital deduction; life estate with power of appointment in donee spouse.

(c) Meaning of "specific portion"—(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (c)(2) and (c)(3) of this section, a partial interest in property is not treated as a specific portion of the entire interest. In addition, any specific portion of an entire interest in property is nondeductible to the extent such specific portion is subject to invasion for the benefit of any person other than the donee spouse, except in the case of a deduction allowable under section 2523(e), relating to invasions by the donee spouse in the exercise of a general power of appointment.

(2) A partial interest in property is treated as a specific portion of the entire interest if the rights of the donee spouse in income and the required rights as to the power described in §25.2523(e)-1(a) constitute a fractional or percentile share of a property interest so that such interest or share in the donee spouse reflects its proportionate share of the increment or decline in the whole of the property interest to which the income rights and the power relate. Thus, if the right of the spouse to income and the power extend to a specified fraction or percentage of the property, or the equivalent, the interest is considered as a specific portion.

(3) A specific sum payable annually or at more frequent intervals out of the property and its income that is not limited by the income of the property will be treated as a right to the income of a specific portion of the property. However, no deduction will be allowable under section 2523(e) except to the extent the donee spouse has the required power of appointment over a fractional or percentile share of the property. The deductible interest, for purposes of §25.2523(a)-1(b)(2), is the specific portion of property that, assuming the interest rate generally applicable for the valuation of annuities at the time of the transfer to the donee spouse, would produce income equal to such specific annual payment. However, such specific sum payable to a donee spouse will not be treated as a right to the income of a specific portion of the property for purposes of this paragraph (c)(3), if any person other than the donee spouse may receive, during the donee spouse's lifetime, any distribution of the property or its income out of which the donee spouse's payments are made. To determine the applicable interest rate, see section 2031 and the regulations under that section.

(4) A partial interest in property is treated as a specific portion of the entire interest if it is shown that the donee spouse has rights under local law which are identical to those he or she would have acquired had the size of the share been expressed in terms satisfying the requirements of either paragraph (c)(2) or paragraph (c)(3) of this section.

(5) The following examples illustrate the application of paragraphs (a) through (c)(4) of this section.

Example (1). The donor, D, transferred to a trustee 500 identical shares of X company stock. D provided that during the lifetime of D's spouse, S, the trustee should pay S annually one-half of the trust income or $6,000, whichever is the larger. All of the trust income other than amounts paid to S are to be accumulated in the trust and may not be distributed during S's lifetime to any person other than S. S was also given a general power of appointment exercisable by S's last will over all the trust corpus. For purposes of paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section, S shall be considered as receiving the greater of (i) all the income from one-half of the entire interest in the stock or (ii) the specific portion of the stock which under §25.2523(e)-1(c)(3) is determined to be the portion required to produce annual income equal to $6,000.

Example (2). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (1) except that S's testamentary general power of appointment is exercisable over only one-fourth of the trust corpus and D does not elect to treat the trust property as qualified terminable interest property under §25.2523(f)-1(b). Consequently, the marital deduction is only allowed for one-fourth of the trust (the lesser of the portion determined in example (1) or one-fourth of the trust).

Example (3). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (1) except that S's testamentary general power of appointment is exercisable over the sum of $160,000 and D does not elect to treat the trust property as qualified terminable interest property under §25.2523(f)-1(b). Inasmuch as there is no certainty as to what portion of the stock will be valued at $160,000 on S's death, the power of appointment over $160,000 is not considered a power of appointment over a specific portion of the entire interest. Thus, no marital deduction is allowed.

Example (4). The donor, D, transferred by gift to a trustee an office building and 250 identical shares of Y company stock. D provided that during the lifetime of D's spouse, S, the trustee should pay S annually three-fourths of the trust income. S was given a general power of appointment exercisable by will over the office building and 100 shares of stock. By the terms of D's gift, S is given all the income from a definite fraction of the entire interest in the office building and in the stock. However, since the amount of property represented by a single share of stock would be altered if the corporation split its stock, issued stock dividends, made a distribution of capital, etc., a power to appoint 100 shares at the time of S's death is not the same necessarily as a power to appoint 100/250 of the entire interest which the 250 shares represented on the date of D's gift. If it is shown in this case that under local law S has a general power to appoint not only the 100 shares designated by D, but also 100/250 of any shares or amounts that are distributed by the corporation and included in the corpus, the requirements of paragraph (c)(2) of this section will be satisfied and S will be considered as having a general power to appoint 100/250 of the entire interest in the 250 shares.

Par. 29. Section 25.2523(f)-1 is redesignated as §25.2523(f)-1A and amended as follows:

(a) The heading of the redesignated section is revised to read as set forth below.

(b) The first sentence of paragraph (a) is revised to read as set forth below.

§25.2523(f)-1A Special rule applicable to community property transferred prior to January 1, 1982.

(a) In general. With respect to gifts made prior to January 1, 1982, the marital deduction is allowable with respect to any transfer by a donor to the donor's spouse only to the extent that the transfer can be shown to represent a gift of property which was not, at the time of the gift, held as "community property," as defined in paragraph (b) of this section. ***

* * * * *

Par. 30. New §§25.2523(f)-1 and 25.2523(g)-1 are added immediately following redesignated §25.2523(f)-1A, to read as follows:

§25.2523(f)-1 Election with respect to life estate for donee spouse.

(a) In general. With respect to gifts made after December 31, 1981, section 2523(f) provides that a marital deduction is allowed under section 2523(a) for "qualified terminable interest property," subject to the condition set forth in section 2523(b)(2). That is, if the donor retains a power described in section 2523(b)(2) to appoint an interest in qualified terminable interest property, a deduction shall not be allowed under section 2523(a) for such qualified terminable interest property. All of the property for which a deduction is allowed under this paragraph (a) shall be treated as passing to the donee spouse (for purposes of §25.2523(a)-1) and no part of such property shall be treated as passing to any person other than the donee spouse (for purposes of §25.2523(b)-1(b)).

(b) Qualified terminable interest property defined. For purposes of this section, the term "qualified terminable interest property" means property—

(1) Which is transferred by the donor spouse,

(2) In which the donee spouse has a "qualifying income interest for life" as defined in paragraph (c) of this section, and

(3) Which the donor spouse elects to treat as qualified terminable interest property.

For purposes of this section, the term "property" generally means an "entire interest in property" (within the meaning of §25.2523(e)-1(d)) or a "specific portion of the entire interest" (within the meaning of §25.2523(e)-1(c)). To have a valid election under paragraph (b)(3) of this section, the election shall be made on the return of tax imposed by section 2501 for the calendar year in which the interest was transferred and shall be made no later than the first April 15th following the calendar year during which the interest was transferred. For purposes of this paragraph (b), the term "return of tax imposed by section 2501" means the last gift tax return filed on or before the due date of the return. The election, once made, is irrevocable. The election may relate to all or any part of property that meets the requirements of paragraphs (b)(1) and (2) of this section, provided that any partial election shall relate to a fractional or percentage share of the property so that the elective part will reflect its proportionate share of the increment or decline in the whole of the property for purposes of applying sections 2044 or 2519. Thus, if the interest of the donee spouse in a trust (or other property in which the spouse has a life estate) meets the requirements of paragraphs (b)(1) and (2) of this section, the election may be made under paragraph (b)(3) with respect to a part of the trust (or other property) only if the election relates to a defined fraction or percentage of the entire trust (or other property) or specific portion thereof within the meaning of §20.2056(b)-5(c). The fraction or percentage may be defined by means of a formula. If the interest of the donee spouse in a trust meets the requirements of paragraphs (b)(1) and (2) of this section, the trust may be divided into separate trusts to reflect a partial election that has been made or is to be made. If a trust is severed, it must be clear, by virtue of the duties imposed on the fiduciary either by applicable state law or by the express or implied provisions of the instrument governing the trust, that the fiduciary must divide the trust according to the fair market value of the assets of the trust at the time of the division.

(c) Qualifying income interest for life defined.—(1) In general. For purposes of this section, the term "qualifying income interest for life" means—

(i) The donee spouse is entitled for life to all the income from the property, payable annually or at more frequent intervals, and

(ii) No person (including the donee spouse) has a power, other than a power the exercise of which takes effect only at or after the donee spouse's death, to appoint any part of the property to any person other than the donee spouse.

In general, the principles outlined in §25.2523(e)-1(f), relating to whether the spouse is entitled for life to all of the income from the entire interest or a specific portion of the entire interest, are applicable in determining whether the donee spouse is entitled for life to all the income from the property, regardless of whether the interest passing to the donee spouse is in trust. An income interest granted for a term of years, or a life estate subject to termination upon the occurrence of a specified event (e.g., divorce), is not a qualifying income interest for life. On the other hand, an income interest will not fail to constitute a qualifying income interest for life solely because income for the period between the last distribution date and the date of the donee spouse's death is not required to be distributed to the donee spouse's estate. See §20.2044-1 relating to the inclusion of such undistributed income in the donee spouse's gross estate. The fact that property (income or corpus) distributed to a spouse may be transferred by such spouse to another person does not result in a failure to satisfy the requirement of paragraph (c)(1)(ii) of this section.

However, if the governing instrument requires the donee spouse to transfer the distributed property to another person without full and adequate consideration in money or money's worth, the requirement of paragraph (c)(1)(ii) of this section is not satisfied.

(2) Annuities. In general, a donee spouse's lifetime annuity interest shall be treated as a qualifying income interest for life for purposes of section 2523(f)(3). The deductible interest, for purposes of §25.2523(a)-1(c)(4), is the specific portion of the property (including an annuity contract) that, assuming the interest rate generally applicable for the valuation of annuities at the time of the transfer creating the annuity interest, would produce income equal to the minimum amount payable annually to the donee spouse for life. In no case may the value of the deductible interest exceed the value of the property out of which the annuity is paid. If the annual payment may increase, the annuity interest will not be disqualified, but the increased amount shall not be taken into account in valuing the deductible interest. However, an annuity interest will not be treated as a qualifying income interest for life for purposes of section 2523(f)(3), if any person other than the donee spouse may receive, during the donee spouse's lifetime, any distribution of the property or its income (including any distribution under an annuity contract) out of which the annuity is payable. To determine the applicable interest rate for valuing annuities, see section 2031 and regulations under that section. If, assuming such interest rate, the entire property from which the annuity may be satisfied is insufficient to produce income equal to the minimum annual payment, the value of the deductible interest is the entire value of such property.

(d) Treatment of interest retained by the donor spouse—(1) In general. In the case of any retained interest in qualified terminable interest property, such property shall not be includable in the gross estate of the donor spouse, and any subsequent transfer by the donor spouse of an interest in such property shall not be treated as a transfer for gift tax purposes.

(2) Exception. Paragraph (d)(1) of this section shall not apply with respect to any property after the donee spouse is treated as having transferred such property under section 2519, or after such property is includable in the donee spouse's gross estate under section 2044.

(e) Application of local law. The provisions of local law shall be taken into account in determining whether or not the conditions of paragraphs (b) and (c) of this section are satisfied. For example, silence of a trust instrument as to the frequency of payment will not be regarded as a failure to satisfy the condition in paragraph (c) of this section that the income must be payable to the donee spouse annually or more frequently, unless the applicable law permits payment to the made less frequently than annually.

(f) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of paragraphs (a) through (c) of this section.

Example (1). A owns a personal residence valued at $250,000 for gift tax purposes. On January 1, 1982, A transfers the residence by gift to A's spouse, S, and A's children. The exclusive and unrestricted right to use such property (including the right to continue to occupy the property as a personal residence or rent such property and receive the income) is transferred to A's spouse, S, for life. After S's death the property is to pass to A's children. If A elects to treat all of such property as qualified terminable interest property, the deductible interest is the value of such property for gift tax purposes, $250,000.

Example (2). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (1) except that the property is a recently planted tree farm which is not expected to be income producing for 20 years. In addition, assume that S is 70 years old at the time of the transfer, and that applicable local law does not require or permit S to require the conversion of the property into a productive asset within a reasonable time after the transfer. S does not have a qualifying income interest for life because the gift does not give S that degree of beneficial enjoyment during S's life which the principles of the law of trusts accord to a person who is unqualifiedly designated as the life beneficiary of a trust. See §25.2523(e)-1(f). Therefore, no deduction for the bequest is allowable under section 2523(f).

Example (3). Assume that A establishes a trust which is funded on January 1, 1982, with property valued at $500,000 for gift tax purposes. The assets used to fund the trust include both income producing assets and nonproductive assets. A's spouse, S, is given the right exercisable annually to require distribution of all the trust income to S. There is no power to distribute trust property during S's lifetime to any person other than S. Applicable State law permits S to require that the trustee either make the trust property productive or sell the property and reinvest in productive property within a reasonable time. If A elects to treat all of the trust as qualified terminable interest property, the deductible interest is $500,000. If A elects to treat only 20 percent of the trust as qualified terminable interest property, the deductible interest is only $100,000, that is, $500,000 multiplied by 20 percent.

Example (4). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (3) except that S is given the right exercisable annually to require distribution to herself or himself of only 50 percent of the trust income for life. The other 50 percent of the trust income is to be distributed among S and A's children in the trustee's discretion or accumulated. If A elects to treat the entire portion of the trust in which S has a qualifying income interest as qualified terminable interest property, the deductible interest is $250,000, which is the value of the trust for gift tax purposes ($500,000) multiplied by the spouse's percentile share of the trust income (50 percent). If A elects to treat only 20 percent of the portion of the trust in which S has a qualifying income interest as qualified terminable interest property, the deductible interest is only $50,000, that is, $250,000 multiplied by 20 percent.

Example (5). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (3) except that the trustee is given the power to use annually $5,000 from the trust for the maintenance and support of X. S does not have a qualifying income interest for life in any portion of the trust because the gift fails to satisfy the condition set forth in §25.2523(f)-1(c)(1)(ii), which is the condition that no person have a power, other than a power the exercise of which takes effect only at or after S's death, to appoint any part of the property to any person other than S. The trust would also be nondeductible under section 2523(f) if S, rather than the trustee, were given the power to appoint a portion of the corpus to X.

Example (6). Assume that the facts are the same as in example (3) except that, upon divorce, S's interest in the trust will pass to X. The trust is not deductible under section 2523(f). S's income interest is not a "qualifying income interest for life" because it is not for life, but rather is terminable upon S's divorce.

Example (7). Assume that B establishes a trust which is funded on January 1, 1984, with income producing property valued at $800,000 for gift tax purposes. The trustee is required by the trust instrument to pay $40,000 a year to B's wife, S, for life. The rest of the income from the trust is to be accumulated in the trust and may not be distributed during S's lifetime to any person other than S. S's lifetime annuity interest is treated as a qualifying income interest for life. If B elects to treat the entire portion of the trust in which S has a qualifying income interest as qualified terminable interest property, the value of the deductible interest is $400,000, since such amount would yield an income to S of $40,000 a year (assuming a 10 percent interest rate applies in valuing annuities).

Example (8). Assume the same facts as in example (7), except that the trustee is required to pay S $100,000 a year for life. If B elects to treat the entire portion of the trust in which S has a qualifying income interest for life as qualified terminable interest property, the value of the deductible interest is $800,000, which is the lesser of the entire value of the property ($800,000), or the amount of property that (assuming a 10 percent interest rate) would yield an income to S of $100,000 a year ($1,000,000).

Example (9). Assume that A transfers $200,000 on January 1, 1982, to a pooled income fund, within the meaning of section 642(c)(5), designating his wife as the income beneficiary for her life. If A elects to treat the entire $200,000 as qualified terminable interest property, the deductible interest is $200,000.

§25.2523(g)-1 Special rule for charitable remainder trusts.

With respect to gifts made after December 31, 1981, section 2523(g) provides that if the spouse of the donor is the only noncharitable beneficiary (other than the donor) of a charitable remainder annuity trust or charitable remainder unitrust described in section 664 (qualified charitable remainder trust), section 2523(b) shall not apply to any interest in such trust which is transferred to the donee spouse. Thus, the donor will receive a charitable deduction under section 2522 for the value of the remainder interest and a marital deduction under section 2523(g) for the value of the annuity or unitrust interest. A marital deduction for the value of the donee spouse's annuity or unitrust interest in a qualified charitable remainder trust is allowable only under section 2523(g). No marital deduction is allowable for any portion of a qualified charitable remainder trust under section 2523(f). The donee spouse's interest need not be an interest for life. For purposes of this section, the term "noncharitable beneficiary" means any beneficiary of the qualified charitable remainder trust other than an organization described in section 170(c). A deduction will not be denied under this section by reason of the transfer to the donee spouse being conditioned on the payment of state taxes, if any, attributable to the qualified charitable remainder trust.

Par. 31. Section 25.6019-1 is amended as follows:

(a) The first 7 sentences of paragraph (a) are removed and four new sentences are added in their place, to read as set forth below.

(b) The last sentence of paragraph (a) is removed.

(c) Paragraphs (b)(1) through (b)(3) are removed.

(d) Paragraphs (c) and (d) are redesignated as paragraphs (b) and (c), respectively.

§25.6019-1 Persons required to file returns.

(a) In general. Any individual citizen or resident of the United States who in any calendar year beginning after December 31, 1981, makes any transfer by gift other than—

(1) A transfer which under section 2503(b) or (e) (relating, respectively, to certain gifts of $10,000 per donee and the exclusion for educational and medical expenses) is not to be included in the total amount of gifts for such year, or

(2) A transfer of an interest with respect to which a marital deduction is allowed for the value of the entire interest under section 2523 (other than a marital deduction allowed by reason of section 2523(f) regarding qualified terminable interest property), shall file a gift tax return on Form 709 for such year. Any individual citizen or resident of the United States who makes a transfer by gift within any calendar year beginning after December 31, 1976, and before January 1, 1982, must file a gift tax return on Form 709 for any calendar quarter in which the sum of the taxable gifts made during such calendar quarter plus all other taxable gifts made during the year (for which a return has not yet been required to be filed) exceeds $25,000. For all transfers made in a calendar year after 1976, and before 1982, which are subject to the gift tax filing requirements but when aggregated do not exceed $25,000 in taxable gifts, a return need only be filed by the filing date for gifts made in the fourth quarter of such calendar year. Any individual citizen or resident of the United States who makes a transfer by gift within any calendar year beginning after December 31, 1970, and before January 1, 1977, must file a gift tax return on Form 709 for the calendar quarter in which any portion of the value of the gift or any portion of the sum of the values of the gifts to such donee during that calendar year is not excluded from the total amount of taxable gifts for such year, and for any subsequent quarter within the same taxable year in which any additional gift is made to the same donee. The rules contained in this section also apply to a nonresident not a citizen of the United States provided that under §25.2511-3 the transfer is subject to the gift tax. The return is required even though because of the deduction authorized by section 2522 (charitable, etc., deduction) no tax may be payable. ***

Par. 32. Section 25.6019-2 is revised to read as set forth below.

§25.6019-2 Returns required in case of consent under section 2513.

Except as otherwise provided in this section, the provisions of §25.6019-1 are applicable with respect to the filing of a gift tax return or returns in the case of a husband and wife who consent (see §25.2513-1) to the application of section 2513. In such a case, if both of the consenting spouses are (without regard to the provisions of section 2513) required under the provisions of §25.6019-1 to file returns, returns must be filed by both spouses. If only one of the consenting spouses is (without regard to the provisions of section 2513) required under §25.6019-1 to file a return, a return must be filed by that spouse. In the latter case, if after giving effect to the provisions of section 2513 the other spouse is considered to have made any gift not excluded from the total amount of such other spouse's gifts for the taxable year by section 2503(b) or (e)(relating, respectively, to certain gifts of $10,000 per donee and the exclusion for certain educational or medical expenses), then a return must also be filed by such other spouse. Thus, if during a calendar year beginning after December 31, 1981, the husband made a gift of $18,000 to a son (the gift not being either a future interest in property or an amount excluded under section 2503(e)) and the wife made no gifts, only the husband is required to file a return for such calendar year. However, if the wife had made a gift in excess of $2,000 to the same son during the same calendar year, or if the gift made by the husband had amounted to $21,000, each spouse would be required to file a return if the consent is signified as provided in section 2513.

Par. 33. Section 25.6019-3 is amended as follows:

(a) The first sentence in paragraph (a) is revised to read as set forth below.

(b) The second sentence in paragraph (b) is revised to read as set forth below.

§25.6019-3 Contents of return.

(a) In general. The return shall set forth: (1) each gift made during the calendar year (or calendar quarter with respect to gifts made after December 31, 1970 and before January 1, 1982) which under sections 2511 through 2515 is to be included in computing taxable gifts; (2) the deductions claimed and allowable under sections 2521 through 2524; and (3) the taxable gifts made for each of the preceding calendar years (and calendar quarters with respect to gifts made after December 31, 1970, and before January 1, 1982). ***

(b) Disclosure of transfers coming within provisions of sections 2516. ***

In any case where a husband and wife enter into a written agreement of the type contemplated by section 2516, and the final decree of divorce is not granted on or before the due date for the filing of a gift tax return for the calendar year (or calendar quarter with respect to periods beginning after December 31, 1970, and ending before January 1, 1982) in which the agreement became effective (see §25.6075-1), then except to the extent §25.6019-1 provides otherwise, the transfer shall be disclosed by the transferor upon a gift tax return filed for the calendar year (or calendar quarter) in which the agreement became effect and a copy of the agreement shall be attached to the return. ***

Par. 34. The first sentence of §25.6019-4 is revised to read as set forth below.

§25.6019-4 Description of property listed in return.

The properties comprising the gifts made during the calendar year (or calendar quarter with respect to gifts made after December 31, 1970, and before January 1, 1982) shall be listed on the return and shall be described in such a manner that they may be readily identified. ***

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Taxation of DISC Income to Shareholders

LR-246-76

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations relating to the taxation of DISC income to shareholders. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1] and the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 [Pub. L. 97-248, 1982-2 C.B. 462]. In addition, amendments would also be made under section 993, one relating to the treatment of accrued interest on a producer's loan as a qualified export asset and another defining the term "trade receivables." A further amendment would be made under section 994 allowing treatment of a prior DISC dividend as an additional payment of transfer price or repayment of a commission by the DISC. The regulations would provide the public with the guidance needed to comply with these Acts and would affect all corporations which have elected to be treated as a DISC and their shareholders.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by March 9, 1984. The regulations are proposed to apply for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1975, except that the regulations under the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act apply for taxable years of DISCs beginning after February 31, 1982.

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR-246-76), Washington, D.C. 20224.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 995 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. These amendments are proposed to conform the regulations to section 1101 of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 1655) [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 131] and a portion of section 204(a) of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (96 Stat. 423) [Pub. L. 97-248, 1982-2 C.B. 462, 471], and are to be issued under the authority contained in sections 995(e)(7), (8) and (10), 995(g) and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (90 Stat. 1655; 90 Stat. 1659; 68A Stat. 917, respectively). Amendments would also be made under section 993, one relating to the treatment of accrued interest on a producer's loan and another defining trade receivables. An amendment would also be made under section 994 allowing treatment of a prior DISC dividend as an additional payment of transfer price or repayment of a commission by the DISC. An amendment would also be made to the regulations under section 996 to conform to changes made by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982.

DISCUSSION

GENERAL EXPLANATION OF CHANGES

The tax law provides for a system of tax deferral for certain income earned by corporations known as domestic international sales corporations or "DISCs" and their shareholders. Under this system the profits of a DISC are not taxed to the DISC but are taxed to the shareholders of the DISC when distributed to them. However, each year a DISC is deemed to have distributed income representing at least 50 percent of its profits. The income deemed distributed is subject to current taxation to the shareholder of the DISC. Prior to the effective date of Tax Reform Act of 1976, there were, in addition to the deemed distribution of 50 percent of the DISC's profits, deemed distributions for the gross interest derived from producer's loans and certain gains from sales or exchanges. The Tax Reform Act added four additional deemed distributions. Two of these deemed distributions relate to participation in any international boycott and payment of foreign bribes or kickbacks and are the subject of other regulations projects. In addition, this regulations project covers a provision of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act which increased deemed distributions under section 995(b)(1)(F)(i) to corporate shareholders of DISCs from 50 percent to 57½ percent.

TAXABLE INCOME ATTRIBUTABLE TO MILITARY PROPERTY

New §1.995-6 provides rules with respect to taxable income attributable to military property described in section 995(b)(3). Under section 995(b)(1)(D) a DISC is deemed to distribute 50 percent of its taxable income for the taxable year attributable to military property. A DISC's taxable income from military sales is its gross income from the sales of military property reduced by the deductions properly allocable to that income. Military property is defined as arms, ammunition, or implements of war designated in the munitions list published pursuant to section 38 of the International Security Assistance and Arms Export Control Act of 1976 (22 U.S.C. 2778 which superseded 22 U.S.C. 1934) and the regulations thereunder (26 CFR 121.01). The deemed distribution of the DISC income from military sales is made prior to the deemed distribution of taxable income attributable to base period export gross receipts and the regular deemed distribution. In computing the taxable income attributable to base period export gross receipts, only half of the military sales are included in the ratio of the average export gross receipts for the base period to the export gross receipts for the taxable year.

TAXABLE INCOME ATTRIBUTABLE TO BASE PERIOD EXPORT GROSS RECEIPTS

Section 995(b)(1)(E) provides for a deemed distribution with respect to taxable income attributable to base period export gross receipts (hereinafter referred to as nonincremental distribution) computed under rules contained in section 995(e). Section 1.995-7 of the proposed regulations provides rules for determining the amount of the deemed distribution. The general rule, stated in paragraph (b)(1), is that the nonincremental distribution is computed by multiplying the adjusted taxable income of a DISC for the current year by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the adjusted base period export gross receipts. The denominator of the fraction is the export gross receipts of the DISC for the current taxable year. Adjusted taxable income, as defined in paragraph (b)(2), is taxable income of the DISC in the current year reduced by the deemed distributions under section 995(b)(1)(A), (B), (C), and (D) (i.e., gross interest derived from producer's loans, gain on the sale of certain property and 50 percent of the taxable income of the DISC for the taxable year attributable to military property).

The term "adjusted base period export gross receipts", defined in paragraph (b)(4), means 67 percent of the average of the export gross receipts of the DISC for taxable years during the base period. Export gross receipts include those receipts which are received in the ordinary course of the export trade or business of the DISC. It is narrower than the term "qualified export receipts" (defined in section 993(a)) in that the term "export gross receipts" includes only income from the sale, exchange, lease or rental (including related subsidiary services) of export property for use outside the United States; engineering and architectural services for projects outside the United States; and managerial services for a DISC which relate to the sale, exchange, rental or other disposition of export property. The term "export gross receipts" does not include gross receipts from the sale of qualified export assets other than export property; dividends and deemed distributions from a related foreign export corporation; and interest on any obligation (such as Export-Import Bank obligations) which is a qualified export asset.

The base period for taxable years beginning in 1976, 1977, 1978, and 1979 is composed of the DISC's taxable years beginning in 1972, 1973, 1974, and 1975. For taxable years beginning in 1980 and later years, the base period becomes a 4-year moving base period which moves forward 1 year for each year beyond 1979. Thus, the base period years for any year after 1979 will be the taxable years beginning in the 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th calendar years preceding such calendar year.

In general, the average export gross receipts for the base period is the sum of the export gross receipts for the 4 base period years divided by 4. If the taxpayer did not have a DISC in any year which would be included in the base period for the current year, the base period export gross receipts are computed by attributing a zero amount of export gross receipts to that base period year. However, base period export gross receipts do not include gross receipts from property which would not qualify during the taxable year as export property by reason of section 993(c)(2). Therefore, since coal is treated as excluded property under section 993(c)(2)(C), gross receipts from the sale of coal during base period years are not to be included in computing base period export gross receipts. Such export gross receipts from the sale of—excluded property would not be excluded from base period export gross receipts to the extent they are included in export gross receipts from the current year under the binding contract exception to excluded property. In addition, for taxable years of the DISC ending before November 15, 1982, base period export gross receipts do not include receipts attributable to property sold or leased to a WHTC or receipts which arose in the absence of a written supplier's agreement unless the receipts were treated as qualified export receipts by the taxpayer.

Paragraphs (c)(1), (c)(2), and (c)(3) of §1.995-7 provide rules to compute average base period export gross receipts which take into account the different lengths of base periods. Under paragraph (b)(3) a special rule is also used with respect to computing current export gross receipts when the current year is a short taxable year.

Paragraph (d) provides rules where more than one member of a controlled group (as defined in section 993(a)(3)) qualifies as a DISC. In such cases, the adjusted base period export gross receipts and the current export gross receipts are aggregated to determine the fraction described in paragraph (b)(1). The adjusted taxable income of each member DISC is then multiplied by the fraction to determine its nonincremental distribution. A special rule is provided where member DISCs have different annual accounting periods including a provision enabling a DISC to change its annual accounting period without the approval of the Secretary.

Paragraph (e) provides rules for the separation of a DISC and the underlying trade or business which gives rise to the export gross receipts of the DISC. The effect of this provision is to provide a double attribution since the base period export gross receipts follow the trade or business and also remain with the DISC. Under paragraph (e)(3) a separation is deemed to occur if there is a lease of substantially all of the assets of a trade or business, or the licensing of a patent, trademark or copyright essential to the conduct of the trade or business. The disqualification of a DISC is treated under paragraph (e)(3) as a separation and the export gross receipts produced prior to disqualification are attributed to the separated trade or business. Therefore, a requalified DISC is treated as having additional gross receipts attributable to the separated trade or business.

Paragraph (f) provides rules with respect to DISC benefits attributed through 5 percent shareholders.

Paragraph (g) of §1.995-7 provides rules with respect to the small DISC exception to the incremental rules. DISCs with adjusted taxable income of $100,000 or less are exempted from the incremental rules. The exemption is phased out on a 2-for-1 basis so that DISCs with taxable income of $150,000 or more receive no exemption. In computing adjusted taxable income for purposes of the small DISC exception to the incremental rules, if more than one member of a controlled group qualifies as a DISC, the small DISC exemption is computed by aggregating the adjusted taxable income of each DISC which is a member of that group.

Paragraph (h) relates to situations where the DISC's export gross receipts are derived from one or more trades or businesses and the taxpayer wants to sell a part of or a complete trade or business along with its related DISC assets in order to avoid double attribution under the separation rules of section 995(e)(9). Paragraph (h) liberalizes the reorganization rules to permit the transfer of the related DISC assets in a non-taxable transaction.

AMENDMENTS UNDER SECTIONS 993, 994 and 996

Paragraph (f) of §1.993-2 would be amended to treat accrued interest on a producer's loan as a qualified export asset if the interest is paid within 60 days after the close of the taxable year of accrual. This amendment is necessitated by the present uncertainty as to the treatment of accrued interest on a producer's loan. Although accrued interest on a producer's loan is clearly a qualified export receipt under section 993(a)(1)(F), the statute and legislative history are both silent as to whether the accrued interest on a producer's loan is to be treated as a qualified export asset. If the accrued interest is not treated as a qualified export asset, then the taxpayer might fail the 95 percent test under section 992(a)(1)(B). It is, therefore, proposed to treat accrued interest on a producer's loan as a qualified export asset if it is paid within 60 days after the close of the taxable year of accrual. The 60-day period is proposed since this is the same period applying under §1.994-1(e)(3) with respect to the actual payment of the transfer price charged by a related supplier to a DISC and with respect to payment of sales commissions. In addition, a 60-day limitation would allow an accrual basis taxpayer to be paid the interest in the normal course of business. A limitation was considered necessary since permitting accrued interest between related parties to qualify as a qualified export asset without any limitation might result in abuse since the interest might be accrued and never paid.

An amendment would also be made to paragraph (d)(1) of §1.993-2 defining trade receivables. The amendment would add a definition of the term "trade receivables" to a section which had previously been reserved.

An additional amendment would be made to paragraph (e)(5) of §1.994-1 with respect to a redetermination of the transfer price or repayment of a commission. Where a redetermination results in an additional amount owed by the DISC to its related supplier, the related supplier and DISC may treat all or part of any distribution from previously taxed income which was received from the DISC with respect to the year to which the redetermination relates as an additional payment of transfer price or repayment of a commission and not as a distribution.

Section 1.996-3 of the regulations would also be amended to conform to changes in the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 which increased the deemed distribution for corporate shareholders of a DISC to 57½ percent while leaving the deemed distribution with respect to noncorporate shareholders at 50 percent. A new paragraph (g) would be added to deal with the computation of accumulated DISC income and previously taxed income for a DISC owned by corporate and noncorporate taxpayers which is necessitated by the change under TEFRA.

Comments and Requests for a Public Hearing

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably six copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the Federal Register.

Regulatory Flexibility Act and Executive Order 12291

Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking which solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these proposed regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6). The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this proposed rule is not subject to Executive Order 12291.

Proposed Amendments to the Regulations.

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are as follows:

Paragraph 1. Section 1.993-2 is amended by revising paragraphs (d)(1) and (f) as follows:

§1.993-2 Definition of qualified export assets.

* * * * *

(d) Trade receivables—(1) In general. For purposes of this section, trade receivables are accounts receivable and written evidences of indebtedness due the DISC (or, if it acts as an agent, due its principal) and held by the DISC.

* * * * *

(f) Producer's loans. For purposes of this section, a producer's loan is an evidence of indebtedness arising in connection with producer's loans which are made by a DISC and which meet the requirements of §1.993-4. If a producer's loan is a qualified export asset, interest accrued with respect to the producer's loan will also be treated as a qualified export asset provided that payment is made in cash or property (valued at its fair market value on the date of transfer) no later than 60 days following the close of the taxable year of accrual of the interest.

* * * * *

Par. 2. Section 1-994-1(e) is revised as follows:

1. The last sentence of paragraph (e)(4) is revised to read as set forth below.

2. The last sentence of subdivision (i)(a) of paragraph (e)(5) is revised by adding the phrase "due the DISC" after the term "account receivable" the first time such term appears.

3. Subdivision (v) of paragraph (e)(5) is renumbered as subdivision (vi) and a new subdivision (v) is added to read as set forth below.

§1.994-1 Inter-company pricing rules for DISCs.

* * * * *

(e) Methods of applying paragraphs (c) and (d) of this section. ***

(4) Subsequent determination of transfer price or commission.  Such a redetermination would include a redetermination by reason of an adjustment under section 482 and the regulations thereunder or section 861 and §1.861-8 which affects the amounts which entered into the determination of the transfer price or commission.

(5) Procedure for adjustments to transfer price or commission.

* * * * *

(v)(a) In lieu of establishing an account receivable in accordance with subdivision (i) of this subparagraph for all or part of an amount due a related supplier, the related supplier and DISC are permitted to treat all or part of any distribution which was made by the DISC out of its previously taxed income with respect to the year to which the determination or redetermination relates as an additional payment of transfer price or repayment of commission (and not as a distribution) made as of the date the distribution was made.

Any additional amount arising on the determination or redetermination due the related supplier after this treatment shall be represented by an account receivable established under subdivision (i) of this subparagraph. To the extent that a distribution is so treated under this subdivision (v), it shall cease to qualify as a distribution for any Federal income tax purpose, and the DISC's account for previously taxed income shall be adjusted accordingly. If all or part of any distribution made to a shareholder other than the related supplier is recharacterized under this subdivision (v), the related supplier shall establish an account receivable from that shareholder for the amount so recharacterized. Such account receivable shall be paid in the time and manner set forth in this paragraph (e)(5). In order to obtain the relief provided by this subdivision (v), the conditions and procedures prescribed by Revenue Procedure 84-3 must be met.

(b) If, for example, during 1982, a DISC commission from a related supplier with respect to a transaction completed in 1980 was redetermined to be $1,000 less than the commission actually charged by, and paid to, the DISC, the amount of any distribution previously made by the DISC from its 1980 previously taxed income to the related supplier as a shareholder may, to the extent of $1,000, be treated not as a distribution but as a repayment of the commission.

* * * * *

Par. 3. Section 1.995-2 is amended by adding new paragraphs (a)(4) and (a)(5) and revising paragraph (a)(6)(i) as follows:

§1.995-2 Deemed distributions in qualified years.

* * * * *

(a) General rule. ***

(4) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1975, an amount equal to 50 percent of the taxable income of the DISC for the taxable year attributable to military property (as defined in §1.995-6).

(5) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1975, the taxable income for the taxable year attributable to base period export gross receipts (as defined in §1.995-7).

(6) The sum of—

(i)(A) In the case of a corporate shareholder, an amount equal to 57.5 percent of the excess (if any) (one-half for DISCs' taxable years beginning before January 1, 1983) of the taxable income of the DISC for such year (computed as provided in §1.991-1(b)(1)) over the sum of the amounts deemed distributed for the taxable year in accordance with subparagraphs (1), (2), (3), (4) and (5) of this paragraph, or

(B) In the case of a non-corporate shareholder, an amount equal to one-half of the excess (if any) of the taxable income of the DISC for such year (computed as a provided in §1.991-1(b)(1)) over the sum of the amounts deemed distributed for the taxable year in accordance with subparagraphs (1), (2), (3), (4), and (5) of this paragraph.

* * * * *

Par. 4. The following sections are added immediately after §1.995-5:

§1.995-6 Taxable income attributable to military property.

(a) Gross income attributable to military property. For purposes of section 995(b)(3)(A)(i), the term "gross income which is attributable to military property" includes income from the sale, exchange, lease, or rental of military property (as described in paragraph (c) of this section). The term also includes gross income from the performance of services which are related and subsidiary (as defined in § 1.993-1(d)) to any qualified sale, exchange, lease, or rental of military property. Where gross income cannot be determined on an item by item basis, the total gross income shall be apportioned. The apportionment shall be according to the fair market value of the property sold or exchanged, the fair rental value of any leaseholds granted, and the fair market value of any related and subsidiary services performed in connection with such sale or lease.

(b) Deductions. For purposes of section 995(b)(3)(A)(ii), deductions shall be properly allocated and apportioned to gross income, described in paragraph (a) of this section, in accordance with the rules of § 1.861-8. These deductions include all applicable deductions from gross income provided under part VI of subchapter B of chapter 1 of the Code.

(c) Military property. For purposes of this section, the term "military property" means any property which is an arm, ammunition, or implement of war designated in the munitions list published pursuant to section 38 of the International Security Assistance and Arms Export Control Act of 1976 (22 U.S.C. 2778 which superseded 22 U.S.C. 1934) and the regulations thereunder (22 CFR 121.01).

(d) Illustration. The principles of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. X Corporation elects to be a DISC for the first time in 1976. X has taxable income of $50,000, of which $30,000 is attributable to military property and $10,000 to interest on producer's loans. The total deemed distributions with respect to X are as follows:

(1)	Gross interest from producer's loans in 1976	$10,000
(2)	50 percent of the taxable income of the DISC attributable to military property in 1976	$15,000
(3)	One-half of the excess of taxable income for 1976 over the sum of lines (1) and (2) (1/2 of ($50,000 minus $25,000))	$12,500
(4)	Total deemed distribution (sum of total lines (1), (2), and (3))	$37,500

§ 1.995-7 Taxable income attributable to base period export gross receipts.

(a) General rule. This section provides rules for the computation of taxable income attributable to base period export gross receipts. Section 995 (b)(1)(E) treats taxable income attributable to base period export gross receipts as a deemed distribution to a shareholder of a DISC for taxable years of a DISC beginning after December 31, 1975. The amount attributable to base period export gross receipts that must be included in income of a shareholder will be referred to as the nonincremental distribution. The nonincremental distribution must be computed for each taxable year of a DISC. Such year will be referred to as the computation year.

(b) Nonincremental distribution—(1) General rule. The nonincremental distribution for a computation year of a DISC is computed by multiplying the adjusted taxable income of the DISC by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the amount of the adjusted base period export gross receipts and the denominator is the amount of the export gross receipts of the DISC for the computation year.

(2) Adjusted taxable income. The "adjusted taxable income" is the taxable income of a DISC for the computation year reduced by the amounts described under section 995(b)(1)(A) through (D) and the regulations thereunder.

(3) Export gross receipts. The "export gross receipts" is the qualified export gross receipts described in section 993(a)(1)(A), (B), (C), (G), and (H) of a DISC for a taxable year reduced by 50 percent of those receipts which are attributable to military property (as defined under §1.995-6). For purposes of determining the denominator described in this paragraph (b), if the computation year is a short taxable year, the amount of export gross receipts for that year is multiplied by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the number of days which would have been in the taxable year of the taxpayer if there had been a full taxable year and the denominator is the number of days in the short taxable year.

(4) Adjusted base period export gross receipts. The amount of adjusted base export gross receipts is 67 percent of the average of the base period export gross receipts.

(c) Average base period export gross receipts—(1) Base period of 48 months or less. If a DISC has a base period of 48 months or less, the amount of average base period export gross receipts is determined by dividing the base period export gross receipts by the number four (4).

(2) Base period of more than 48 months. If a DISC has a base period of more than 48 months, the amount of average base period export gross receipts is determined by multiplying the base period export gross receipts by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the number 365.25 and the denominator is the total number of days in the base period.

(3) Change of accounting period. Notwithstanding paragraph (c)(1) of this section, if a corporation that is a DISC changes its annual accounting period (other than during the first taxable year of its existence), and the effect of such a change creates a base period of less than 48 months, the average base period export gross receipts are determined under paragraph (c)(2) of this section. This paragraph (c)(3) applies with respect to changes of accounting period permitted under §1.995-7(d)(5).

(4) Base period export gross receipts. "Base period export gross receipts" means the aggregate export gross receipts of a DISC for all taxable years beginning during the base period reduced by the base period export gross receipts attributable to property that is excluded from export gross receipts during the computation year. Excluded property is property described in section 993(c)(2)(C) or (D) without regard to the fixed contract exception under §1.993-3(g)(6). When the fixed contract exception applies, the amount of excluded property is multiplied by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the amount of the gross receipts in the computation year attributable to excluded property less the amount of the export gross receipts by reason of the fixed contract exception under §1.993-3(g)(6). The denominator of the fraction is the total amount of gross receipts in the computation year attributable to excluded property. For taxable years of a DISC ending before November 15, 1982, base period export gross receipts do not include receipts attributable to property sold or leased to a WHTC or receipts which arose in the absence of a written supplier's agreement unless the receipts were treated as qualified export receipts by the taxpayers.

(5) Illustration. The following example illustrates the application of paragraph (c)(4) of this section:

Example. X Corporation, a DISC since 1972, derived $2000 from sales of coal and $3000 from sales of foodstuffs in 1976. In 1975 gross receipts from the sale of agricultural products were $1000 and from the sale of coal were $3000. One thousand dollars of the $3000 was derived from sales prior to March 19, 1975 and $2000 from sales made after March 18, 1975, of which $500 of the latter sales were pursuant to a fixed contract. Assume that all gross receipts are qualified export receipts (and, therefore, export gross receipts as provided in paragraph (b)(3) of §1.995-7) except to the extent that section 993(c)(2)(C) (which treats natural resources such as coal as excluded property) is applicable. Assume further that the gross receipts for 1972, 1973, and 1974 were each $500, all derived entirely from the sale of foodstuffs and all qualifying as export gross receipts. Under these facts the adjusted base period export gross receipts are determined as follows:

(1)	Export gross receipts for 1975
(i)	Export gross receipts—agricultural products		$1000
(ii)	Export gross receipts—coal		$1500
	(a) Sales prior to March 19, 1975	$1000
	(b) Sales subsequent to March 18, 1975	$500
	(1) Fixed contract sales
	(2) Non-fixed contract sales	$1500	$2000

Excluded property receipts ($2000) X (Excluded property receipts ($2000) — Fixed contract receipts ($500)) / Excluded property receipts ($2000)

Total export gross receipts ($1,000 + 1,500) $2500

(2)	Adjusted export gross receipts
	1972 export gross receipts	$500
	1973 export gross receipts	500
	1974 export gross receipts	500
	1975 export gross receipts	2500
	Base period export gross receipts	4000
	Average base period export gross receipts 1972-75	1000
	Adjusted base period export gross receipts (.67 X average for base years	$670

(6) Base years. The base period is a 4-year period attributable to a computation year. For computation years of a DISC beginning before January 1, 1980, the base period calendar years are 1972, 1973, 1974, and 1975. For other computation years, the base period calendar years are the fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh calendar years preceding the calendar year in which the computation year begins. If a DISC has taxable years beginning in every base period calendar year, the base period is the period which begins on the first day of the first taxable year beginning in the earliest base period calendar year and ends on the last day of the last taxable year beginning in the latest base period calendar year. A corporation that revoked its election to be treated as a DISC or failed to satisfy the condition of section 992(a)(1) for a taxable year to a DISC will, for purposes of computing its base period export gross receipts, be treated as a DISC newly established in such subsequent taxable year. However, see paragraph (e)(3) of this section, which treats a disqualification as a separation. This paragraph (c)(6) applies whether or not the DISC qualified (or was treated) as a DISC (within the meaning of section 992(a)(1) and §1.992-1) for all taxable years beginning in the base period calendar years. If a DISC does not have a taxable year beginning in every base period calendar year, the base period is the period which begins on the date during the earliest base period calendar year that corresponds to the date on which the first taxable year of the DISC begins, and ends on the last day of the last taxable year of the DISC beginning in the latest base period calendar year.

(7) Illustrations. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (c):

Example (1). X Corporation, a DISC, was organized on March 1, 1972, and adopted a taxable year beginning on March 1. With respect to the computation year beginning on March 1, 1976, X's base period calendar years are 1972, 1973, 1974, and 1975. The base period is the period which begins on March 1, 1972, and ends on February 29, 1976.

Example (2). Y Corporation, a DISC, was organized on Mrch 15, 1974, and adopted a taxable year beginning on October 1. With respect to the computation year beginning on October 1, 1977, Y's base period is the period which begins on March 15, 1972, and ends on September 30, 1976.

Example (3). Z Corporation, a DISC, was organized on December 10, 1974, and adopted a taxable year beginning on February 1. With respect to the computation year beginning on February 1, 1980. Z's base period calendar years are 1973, 1974, 1975, and 1976. The base period is the period which begins on December 10, 1973, and ends on January 31, 1977.

(d) Controlled group—(1) General rule. Where more than one member of a controlled group of corporations (as defined in section 993(a)(3) and §1.993-1(k)) qualifies or is treated as a DISC, special rules are used to calculate the nonincremental distribution. In such a case, the fraction described in paragraph (d)(2) of this section to compute the nonincremental distribution is the aggregate of the adjusted base period export gross receipts over the aggregate of the computation year export gross receipts for the computation year of every member DISC within the controlled group. This fraction is multiplied by the aggregate adjusted taxable income for each member DISC within the controlled group. The computation of the nonincremental distribution described in this paragraph applies to shareholders of DISC that is a member of a controlled group even though such shareholder is not a related person within the meaning §1.993-1(a)(6).

(2) Aggregate adjusted base period export gross receipts. If any DISC that is a member of the controlled group uses a taxable year that is different from another DISC that is a member of the same controlled group, the aggregate of the adjusted base period export gross receipts consists of the sum of the adjusted base period export gross receipts of each of the following DISCs:

(i) The DISC (primary DISC) with respect to which the nonincremental distribution is being determined; and

(ii) All other DISCs (secondary DISCs) that are members of the same controlled group (as defined in section 993(a)(3)) as the primary DISC and whose computation years end with or within the computation year of the primary DISC.

For purposes of this paragraph (d)(2), the base period calendar years of any secondary DISC is the base period calendar years of the primry DISC.

(3) Aggregate current year export gross receipts. If paragraph (d)(2) of this section applies, the aggregate of the export gross receipts for the computation year consists of the sum of the export gross receipts of the primary DISC and the export gross receipts of all secondary DISCs for thier computation years described in paragraph (d)(2)(ii) of this section.

(4) Illustrations. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (d):

Example (1). P Corporation owns all of the stock of V and X Corporations. V owns all of the stock of Y Corporation, a DISC. X owns all of the stock of Z Corporation, a DISC. P, V, X, Y, and Z are members of the same controlled group for all periods involved. V uses a fiscal year ending June 30 as its taxable year. X uses the calendar year as its taxable year. Y and Z both use the calendar year as their taxable years. For the computation year ending in 1980, Y has adjusted taxable income (as defined under paragraph (b)(2) of this section) of $3,000, adjusted base period export gross receipts (as defined under paragraph (b)(4) of this section) of $2,000, and export gross receipts (as defined under paragraph (b)(3) of this section) of $5,000. For the same year, Z has adjusted taxable income of $4,000, adjusted base period export gross receipts of $6,000 and export gross receipts of $5,000. The numerator of the fraction to determine the nonincremental distribution is $8,000, the aggregate of the adjusted base period export gross receipts of Y and Z. The denominator of the fraction is $10,000, the aggregate of the export gross receipts of Y and Z. The nonincremental distribution under paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to Y is $2,400 ($3,000 × 4/5, and with respect to Z is $3200 ($4,000 × 4/5).

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1) except that Y uses a fiscal year ending January 31 as its taxable year and the computation year ends in 1980. In computing the nonincremental distribution with respect to Z, a calendar year DISC, Z is the primary DISC described in paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section. In computing the adjusted base period export gross receipts of Y, Y's base period is the same as that of Z even though Y's computation year begins in the calendar year 1979. The adjusted taxable income and current year export gross receipts of Z are for the calendar year beginning January 1, 1980, and the current year export gross receipts of Y are for Y's fiscal year ending January 31, 1980.

(5) Change of annual accounting period. Where more than one member of a controlled group of corporations (as defined in section 993(a)(3) and §1.993-1(k)) qualifies or is treated as a DISC and where any two or more of the member DISCs have different annual accounting periods, the annual accounting periods of the member DISCs may be changed without the approval of the Secretary if, and only if

(i) All member DISCs have the same annual accounting period after the change; and

(ii) The period chosen is the annual accounting period of one of the member DISCs.

In the case of an existing controlled group with member DISCs having different annual accounting periods, the change may be made within one year after [the date of adoption of the regulations as a Treasury decision]; and in the case of a newly acquired DISC, the accounting period of such DISC may be changed by adopting the period of any existing DISC within one year after acquisition.

(e) Separation of DISC and trade or business—(1) General rule. If, at any time after the beginning of the base period of a DISC, there has been a separation of the ownership of the stock in that DISC from the ownership of a trade or business tht produced export gross receipts of the DISC, the persons who own the trade or business during the taxable year are treated as having in any DISC in which they have (or acquire) a direct or indirect interest additional export gross receipts attributable to the trade or business for purposes of computing base period export gross receipts. Notwithstanding the separation, the base period export gross receipts remain with the DISC after separation and are taken into account by shareholders of the DISC (whether or not there are new shareholders of the DISC as a result of the separation) in computing the adjusted base period export gross receipts of the DISC for taxable years beginning prior to the year in which the separation occurs.

(2) Ownership. A person will be treated as an owner of a trade or business which produced export gross receipts of a DISC if the person owns stock, directly or indirectly, in a corporation that conducts the trade or business. A person will also be treated as an owner of a trade or business if that person is, for example, a partner in a partnership that either conducts the business or owns stock, directly or indirectly, in a corporation that conducts it, a lessee of substantially all the assets of a trade or business, or a licensee of a patent, copyright, trademark, or similar property essential to the conduct of a trade or business. For purposes of this paragraph (e)(2), a person who owns indirectly less than 5 percent of the entity conducting the trade or business shall not be treated as the owner of the trade or business. For purposes of this paragraph (e)(2), stock owned, directly, or indirectly, by or for a corporation, partnership, trust, or estate shall be considered as being owned proportionately by its shareholders, partners, or beneficiaries. Stock considered to be owned by a person by reason of the application of the preceding sentence may be treated as actually owned by such person.

(3) Separation. A separation occurs if the ratio of a person's percentage ownership interest in a DISC to his percentage ownership in the trade or business which produced export gross receipts of the DISC changes at any time during the year. Thus, if A Corporation owns all the stock of B, C, and D Corporations, and D is a DISC and B and C produced export gross receipts for D, the transfer of the stock of B or C will result in a separation. Similarly, the transfer of the stock of C and the stock of D will result in a separation as will the liquidation of D by A. The disqualification of a DISC by revocation of the election or by failing to satisfy the conditions of section 992(a)(1) for a taxable year shall be treated as a separation, and the export gross receipts produced prior to the disqualification will be attributed to the separated trade or business. A requalified DISC will be treated as having additional export gross receipts attributable to the separated trade or business. For purposes of this paragraph (e)(3), members of the same controlled group (as defined in section 993(a)(3)) will be treated as one person.

(4) Amount of attribution. If a separation described in paragraph (e)(3) of this section occurs, the additional amount referred to in paragraph (e)(1) of this section is the amount of the export gross receipts attributable to the separated trade or business.

(5) Recapture of accumulated DISC income. If a shareholder of a DISC recaptures accumulated DISC income (as defined in section 996(f)(1)) as a result of a disposition (as described in section 995(c)) of stock in a DISC or a disqualification which results in a separation, the base period export gross receipts of the DISC for base period years prior to the disposition are reduced on a pro rata basis to the extent of the recapture in the taxable year. This reduction does not apply for purposes of determining the amount described in paragraph (e)(1) and (4) of this section which is attributable to the owner or a trade or business after the separation.

(6) Illustrations. The principles of this paragraph (e) are illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A Corporation owns all the stock of B, C and D Corporations. D is a DISC and B and C each produced $5,000 of the export gross receipts of D. A sells the stock of B to Z, an unrelated party, which organizes P Corporation, a DISC, for which B produces export gross receipts. Under paragraph (e)(3) of §1.995-7, the sale of the stock of B constitutes a separation and under paragraph (e)(1) and (4), $5,000 of export gross receipts is attributable to P. Under paragraph (e)(1) the export gross receipts of D are $10,000 unchanged by the separation. If D is liquidated by A and F Corporation, a new DISC, is organized, F will have export gross receipts of $5,000. Under paragraph (e)(5), the export gross receipts of D are eliminated. However, paragraph (e)(5) does not apply to amounts attributable to the owner of the trade or business after the separation under paragraph (e)(4). Therefore, $5,000 is attributable to P (by B) and $5,000 is attributable to F (by C).

Example (2). G Corporation owns all the stock of H and I Corporations and H Corporation owns all the stock of J Corporation, a DISC. During the base period H produces all the export gross receipts of J, which amounts to $25,000. The sale of the stock of H to B does not constitute a separation within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3). If J is liquidated, there will be attributed to any future DISC organized with respect to H the export gross receipts attributable to the separate trade or business. Although the liquidation will result in a recapture of accumulated DISC income, paragraph (e)(5) does not apply for purposes of determining the amount attributable to the owner of the trade or business after the separation, and under paragraph (e)(1) such amount is attributed to any future DISC for which H produces exported gross receipts.

Example (3). P Corporation owns several corporations including R Corporation, a DISC, and M Corporation, which has produced export gross receipts for R. P also owns several other DISC's. The stock of M is sold to W Corporation. Assuming that M produced $100,000 of export gross receipts during the base period and that those receipts were the only receipts produced with respect to R, there is a separation under paragraph (e)(3), and under paragraph (e)(1) $100,000 in export gross receipts will be attributable to any DISC that W organizes with respect to M. In addition, under paragraph (e)(1) the export gross receipts of R are unreduced and taken into account in computing base period export gross receipts under the controlled group rules of paragraph (d). If R is liquidated, there will be a recapture of accumulated DISC income and under paragraph (e)(5) a reduction of the export gross receipts of R, but no reduction with respect to any DISC that W organizes with respect to M.

(f) DISC base period attributed through shareholders—(1) In general. If—

(i) Any person owns 5 percent or more of the stock of a DISC (referred to as the "first DISC"), and

(ii) that person at any time during the base period of the first DISC owned 5 percent or more of the stock of a second DISC, and

(iii) Both DISCs derived export gross receipts from the sale of the same or similar property, or from the performance of the same or similar services, then the base period export gross receipts of the first DISC are increased by the shareholder's pro rata portion of the base period export gross receipts of the second DISC.

(2) Exception. Paragraph (f)(1) of this section does not apply to the extent paragraph (d) or (e) of this section apply.

(3) Ownership of stock. For purposes of this paragraph (f), the ownership of stock is determined under section 318.

(4) Recapture of accumulated DISC income. The rules with respect to recapture of accumulated DISC income described in paragraph (e)(5) of this section apply with respect to base period attribution under this paragraph.

(5) Illustration. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph.

Example. A Corporation owns all the stock of B and C Corporations and B owns all the stock of D Corporation, a DISC. B produced $10,000 or export gross receipts of D for the base period 1972-1975. On January 1, 1976, A sells all the stock of C to X Corporation, an unrelated corporation. Subsequently A purchases 50 percent of the stock of F Corporation, another DISC, and B conducts all of its export business through F with B as the related supplier. Neither the sale of C by A nor the purchase of F result in a separation with respect to A under paragraph (e) of this section. In addition, D and F are not members of the same controlled group within the meaning of section 993(a)(3), and paragraph (d) of this section does not apply. However, under paragraph (f)(1) of this section, the base period export gross receipts of F are increased by $10,000.

(g) Small DISC exception—(1) Adjusted taxable income of $100,000 or less. Except as provided in paragraph (g)(4) of this section, if a DISC has adjusted taxable income of $100,000 or less for the taxable year, section 995(b)(1)(E) and this section do not apply for that year.

(2) Partial exception. If, for a taxable year, a DISC has adjusted taxable income of more than $100,000 but less than $150,000, the nonincremental distribution under paragraph (b)(1) of this section is reduced (but not below zero) by an amount equal to twice the excess of $150,000 over the adjusted taxable income.

(3) Short taxable year. In computing a DISC's adjusted taxable income for purposes of this paragraph (g), when the current taxable year is a short taxable year, the adjusted taxable income for the year is multiplied by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the number of days in the full taxable year and the denominator is the number of days in the short taxable year.

(4) Controlled groups. If more than one member of a controlled group (as defined in section 993(a)(3)) qualifies, or is treated, as a DISC for the current taxable year, the adjusted taxable income of each member of the group is aggregated for purposes of determining the application of paragraph (g)(1) or (2) of this section. The adjusted taxable income of any DISC for purposes of this aggregation may not be less than zero. The aggregation is made in the same manner and with respect to those DISCs described in paragraph (d)(2) of this section. If the adjusted taxable income of the member DISCs is more than $100,000 but less than $150,000, the nonincremental distribution under paragraph (b)(1) of this section is determined in accordance with paragraph (d) of this section. The reduction determined under paragraph (g)(2) of this section is apportioned among the DISCs described in paragraph (d)(2) of this section in accordance with the ratio which the adjusted taxable income of each member DISC for the year bears to the total adjusted taxable income of all member DISCs for the year. This paragraph (g)(4) applies to a shareholder of a DISC even though the shareholder is not a related person as defined in §1.993-1(a)(6).

(h) Certain transfer of DISC assets—(1) In general. If—

(i) A corporation owns all the stock of a subsidiary and a DISC,

(ii) The corporation transfers (within the meaning of paragraph (h)(4) of this section) all the stock of the subsidiary,

(iii) The subsidiary has been engaged in the active conduct of a trade or business (within the meaning of section 355(b) and regulations thereunder) throughout the 5-year period ending on the date of the transfer, and continues to be so engaged thereafter,

(iv) During the taxable year of the subsidiary in which its stock is transferred, and its preceding taxable year, the trade or business produced qualified export receipts with respect to the subsidiary and the DISC,

(v) The DISC transfers all of its assets related to the conduct of the trade or business to a new DISC in exchange for all the stock of the new DISC, the DISC distributes the stock in the new DISC to the corporation and the corporation transfers the stock in the new DISC to the subsidiary, and

(vi) The transfers described in paragraph (h)(1)(v) of this section are undertaken for the sole purpose of avoiding the application of section 995(e)(9) and paragraph (e) of this section, and, therefore, preventing double attribution under paragraph (e)(1), then notwithstanding any other rule or regulation to the contrary the transfer described in paragraph (h)(1)(v) will be a reorganization within the meaning of section 368 (a)(1)(D) to which section 355 applies and an exchange of stock of the new DISC by the corporation for stock of the subsidiary to which section 351 applies.

(2) Special rule. If—

(i) A corporation owns, directly or indirectly, all the stock of a subsidiary and a DISC,

(ii) A transfer or transfers described in this paragraph (h)(2) of the stock or assets of the subsidiary and the DISC are for the purpose described in paragraph (h)(1)(vi) of this section, and

(iii) The transfer or transfers occur in a transaction other than one described in paragraph (h)(1)(v) of this section but which satisfies the requirements of paragraph (h)(1)(iii) and (iv) of this section, then the transfer or transfers described in this paragraph (h)(2)(iii) will be a reorganization within the meaning of section 368, a transaction to which section 355 applies, an exchange of stock to which section 351 applies, or a combination of these, as the case may be, provided the transfer or transfers are consistent with the purpose and effect of those described in paragraph (h)(1)(v) of this section.

(3) Ownership. Stock owned, directly or indirectly, by a corporation shall be considered as owned proportionately by its shareholders.

(4) Transfer. The term "transfer" includes a sale, exchange, or other disposition of property.

(5) Illustrations. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (h):

Example (1). P Corporation, which was organized on January 1, 1966, owns all the stock of X and Y Corporations, both also organized on January 1, 1966. X has been engaged in the manufacture of shoes. Y has been engaged in the manufacture of recreational equipment. On January 1, 1972, P organizes Z Corporation, a DISC. X and Y serve as the related suppliers of Z. On January 1, 1977, U Corporation offers to buy the stock of X. As part of an overall plan to avoid the application of section 995(e)(9) of this section, Z transfers all the export assets that relate to the trade or business conducted by X to V Corporation in exchange for all of the stock of V. Z then distributes all the stock of V to P, which transfers all the V stock to X. Immediately after this series of transactions, P sells all of the X stock to U Corporation. Under paragraph (h)(1) of this section, the transfer and distribution by Z constitute a reorganization under section 368 (a)(1)(D) to which section 355 applies, and the exchange by P constitutes an exchange to which section 351 applies. The result would be the same even if P sold less than all of the stock in X.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that Y organizes and owns all the stock of Z. Accordingly, after the transfer by Z, Z distributes the stock of V to Y, which in turn distributes the stock of P. P transfers all the V stock to X. Under paragraph (h)(2) of this section, the transfers by Z to Y, and Y to P constitute a reorganization described in section 368(a)(1)(D) to which section 355 applies. The transfer by P to X constitutes an exchange to which section 351 applies.

* * * * *

Par. 5. Section 1.996-3 is amended by adding a new paragraph (g) as follows:

§1.996-3 Divisions of earnings and profits

* * * * *

(g) DISCs having corporate and noncorporate shareholders. In the case of a DISC having one or more corporate shareholders but less than all of its shareholders subject to the special rules of section 291(a)(4), relating to certain deferred DISC income as a corporate preference item, accumulated DISC income and previously taxed income of the DISC are divided between the corporate shareholders, as a class, and the other shareholders, as a class, in proportion to amounts of DISC income not deemed distributed and amounts deemed distributed to each class. Subsequent taxation of actual and qualifying distributions shall be based upon this division. Thus, if a DISC is owned 50 percent by corporate shareholders and 50 percent by individual shareholders and has undistributed taxable income of $2,000 for its year, the division is made as follows:

Corporate shareholders
Previously taxed income
(57.5% of $2,000 ÷ 2)	$575
Accumulated DISC income
(42.5% of $2,000 ÷ 2)	425
Individual shareholders
Previously taxed income
(50% of $2,000 ÷ 2)	$500
Accumulated DISC income
(50% of $2,000 ÷ 2)	$500

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Investment Credit for Cooperatives

LR-4-78

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations relating to the investment credit for cooperative organizations. Changes to the applicable tax laws were made by the Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol.1) 1]. The regulations would provide the public with the guidance needed to comply with that Act and would affect cooperatives that earn investment credit and the patrons of those cooperatives.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by February 27, 1984. In general, the amendments are proposed to be effective for taxable years of cooperatives ending after January 27, 1984. Cooperatives may elect to have these regulations apply to their taxable years ending after October 31, 1978, and before [31 DAYS AFTER PUBLICATION OF THESE PROPOSED AMENDMENTS AS A FINAL REGULATION]. However, the recapture provisions are generally effective for taxable years ending after October 31, 1978.

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR-4-78) Washington, D.C. 20224.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 46 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. These amendments are proposed to conform the regulations to section 316 of the Revenue Act of 1978 (92 Stat. 2829) and are to be issued under the authority contained in sections 38(b) (76 Stat. 963; 26 U.S.C. 38(b)), 46(h) (92 Stat. 2829; 26 U.S.C. 46(h)), and 7805 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Before the passage of the Revenue Act of 1978, section 46(e) limited the amount of investment credit allowable to a cooperative organization. In addition, unused credit was carried back and over at the cooperative level.

Section 316 of the Revenue Act of 1978 eliminated the special limitation on the investment credit of a cooperative and provided that unused credit must be passed through to the cooperative's patrons. These regulations reflect section 316 of the Act and provide the rules for allocating the credit to patrons of the cooperative.

The proposed regulations provide 2 methods for allocating the unused credit to a cooperative's patrons. Under the first method the cooperative allocates the credit to all its patrons on the basis of business done with the cooperative. As an alternative, the cooperative may elect to use the second method for all taxable years beginning with the year for which the election is first made. Under the second method, the unused credit is allocated first to the various allocation groups within the cooperative that reasonably expect to use the property. Allocation to each group is based on the ratio of credit earned on behalf of the group to credit earned on behalf of all of the groups within the cooperative. Within each group, allocation of credit to a patron is on the basis of business done with the group.

A cooperative may choose either of these methods for allocating the unused credit. The cooperative must use that method for allocating all unused credit earned for any one taxable year.

The proposed regulations provide a procedure for the cooperative to notify both the patrons and the Internal Revenue Service of an investment credit passthrough. This procedure will not substantially increase the reporting requirements for cooperatives. The regulations require the notification to appear on statements and forms (Forms 1096 and 1099-PATR) already required in the absence of special circumstances. An exception to the notification requirements applies for de minimis amounts of credit.

Under the proposed regulations, the recapture of the investment credit as well as other adjustments that affect the amount of tax are made only at the cooperative level.

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably six copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these proposed regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Commissioner has determined that this proposed regulation is not a major regulation for purposes of Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a regulatory impact analysis is not required.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are as follows:

Paragraph 1. Paragraph (a)(3) of §1.46-3 is amended by inserting a new sentence to follow the first sentence to read as set forth below:

§1.46-3 Qualified investment.

(a) In general. ***

(3) However, in the case of a cooperative organization, the reduction is made only for property placed in service in taxable years ending before November 1, 1978.

* * * * *

Par. 2. Paragraph (c) of §1.46-4 is amended by—

(a) redesignating paragraphs (c)(1), (c)(2), and (c)(3) as (c)(2), (c)(3), and (c)(4), respectively,

(b) adding a new paragraph (c)(1), and

(c) removing "(1)(i) and the amount described in subparagraph (1)(11)" from the first sentence of paragraph (c)(3) (as redesignated) and adding instead "(2)(i) (c)(3) (as redesignated) and adding instead "(2)(i) and the amount described in subparagraph (2)(ii)".

The added provision reads as follows:

§1.46-4 Limitations with respect to certain persons.

* * * * *

(c) Cooperatives. (1) This paragraph (c) does not apply to property placed in service in taxable years of cooperatives ending after October 31, 1978. For rules that may be applicable to those taxable years see §1.46-10. For transitional rules see §1.46-10(g).

* * * * *

Paragraph 3. A new §1.46-10 is added immediately after §1.46-9 to read as follows:

§1.46-10 Cooperatives and their patrons.

(a) In general—(1) Scope. This section prescribes rules under section 46(h) of the Code, relating to the investment credit ("credit") of cooperatives and their patrons.

(2) Definition of cooperative. For purposes of this section, a cooperative is any cooperative organization described in section 1381(a).

(3) Definition of patron. For purposes of this section, the term "patron" has the same meaning as in §1.1388-1(e).

(4) Effective date. (i) This section is effective for property placed in service in a taxable year of a cooperative ending after [30 DAYS AFTER PUBLICATION OF THESE PRO-POSED AMENDMENTS AS A FINAL REGULATION].

(ii) This section is also effective for recapture and corrective adjustments (as described in paragraph (f) of this section) that affect a taxable year ending after October 31, 1978. However, §1.46-10(f)(4) is effective for corrective adjustments made after [30 DAYS AFTER PUBLICATION OF THESE PROPOSED AMENDMENTS AS FINAL REGULATIONS].

For property placed in service in a taxable year of a cooperative ending before November 1, 1978, see §1.46-4(c). For property placed in service in a taxable year of a cooperative ending after October 31, 1978, and before [31 DAYS AFTER PUBLICATION OF THESE PROPOSED AMENDMENTS AS A FINAL REGULATION], see paragraph (g)(1) of this section.

(b) Rules applicable at the cooperative level. Except as otherwise provided in this section, the rules of sections 46, 47, and 48 apply at the cooperative level. Thus, under section 46(h), a cooperative determines the amount of credit earned and the limitation based on the amount of tax (such tax determined under sections 1381-1383 and section 11) in the same manner as other corporations. For example, to determine such items as qualified investment, useful lives, and the character of property, the rules apply at the cooperative level. In addition, pursuant to section 46(a)(7), if a cooperative has credit not attributable to energy percentage ("non-energy credit") and credit attributable to the energy percentage ("energy credit") it shall apply the credit earned against its tax liability in the same order as other corporations.

(c) Allocation to patrons of unused credit—(1) Passthrough. The amount of credit that cannot be used at the cooperative level for the credit year (as defined in §1.47-1(a)(1)(ii)(a)) due to the limitation contained in section 46(a)(3) must be passed through to the cooperative's patrons under the rules of this paragraph (c) and is referred to as a "passthrough" in this section. Thus, to the extent a cooperative cannot use an investment credit in the year property is placed in service, the credit may not be carried back or carried forward by the cooperative, but will be allocated to the patrons as set forth below. In determining the amount of the credit earned and the amount of the passthrough, the cooperative must separately determine for the taxable year the amount of each type of passthrough. The types are (A) passthrough not attributable to the energy percentage ("nonenergy credit passthrough") and (B) passthrough attributable to the energy percentage ("energy credit passthrough").

(2) General rules for allocating a passthrough. (i) Unless the election is made under paragraph (c)(3) of this section, the cooperative must allocate the amount of passthrough for a taxable year among its patrons on the basis of quantity or value of business done with or for those patrons. The amount of each type of passthrough (non-energy credit or energy credit) for a taxable year allocated to a particular patron is determined by multiplying the total amount of the passthough of that type by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the quantity or value of business done with or for that patron (or, if paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section applies, the amount distributed to that patron) and the denominator of the fraction is the aggregate of the quantity or value of business done with or for all patrons (or, if paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section applies, the amounts distributed to all the patrons for the same period).

(ii) If a cooperative makes distributions for the taxable year to patrons on the basis of the quantity or value of business done, the cooperative must allocate the passthrough to its patrons on the basis of those distributions. Thus, the cooperative must compute for its taxable year the amount distributed to each patron during the payment period (as defined in section 1382(d)) for that taxable year. The amount distributed is the sum of all of the distributions made to the patron, in any form (including per-unit retain allocations and qualified and nonqualified written notices of allocation as defined in section 1388), on the basis of quantity of value of business done with or for that patron for the taxable year. The amount of each type of passthrough (non-energy credit or energy credit) for a taxable year allocated to a particular patron is then determined by using the fraction set forth in paragraph (c)(2)(i) of this section.

(3) Alternative group method of allocation. (i) A cooperative that has more than one allocation group may elect the alternative group method of allocation as described in this paragraph. Under this method, the cooperative must allocate each type of passthrough first to the allocation group or groups that the cooperative reasonably expects will use the property, and then among the members of the group or groups to which the passthrough was allocated. For the manner of making the election, see paragraph (c)(3)(vi) of this section. For purposes of this section, an allocation group consists of those patrons treated by the cooperative as a group for purposes of computing patronage dividends under section 1388(a)(1).

(ii) The amount of a passthrough allocated to an allocation group is determined by first computing (A) the amount of nonenergy credit earned with respect to property placed in service during the taxable year for the use of the group and (B) the amount of energy credit so earned. To determine the amount of nonenergy credit passthrough allocated to an allocation group, the cooperative multiples the amount of the passthrough by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the amount of nonenergy credit earned by the group (determined under paragraphs (c)(3)(ii)(A) and (c)(3)(iii) of this section) and the denominator is the aggregate of the nonenergy credit earned by all the allocation groups of the cooperative. The same principles apply to determine the amount of energy credit passthrough allocated to an allocation group.

(iii) For purposes of the allocation under paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section, if property is placed in service for the use of 2 or more allocation groups, the cooperative must apportion the credit earned with respect to the property among it allocation groups on the basis of the cooperative's reasonable expectations of the property's use by those groups for the period ending with the recapture period for that property. For example, if the cooperative reasonably expects 75 percent of a property's use to be by or for the egg group and 25 percent to be by or for the wheat group, the egg group is apportioned 75 percent of the credit earned for the property and the wheat group is apportioned 25 percent of the credit earned.

(iv) The amount of each type of passthrough allocated to a particular patron of an allocation group is determined by multiplying the total amount of the allocation group's passthrough of that type by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the quantity or value of business done by or for the patron with that allocation group (or, if paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section applies, the amounts distributed to the patron). The denominator of the fraction is the aggregate of the quantity or value of business done by or for (or, if paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section applies, the amounts distributed to) all patrons with that allocation group.

(v) If the patron is a member of more than one allocation group, that patron's passthrough of each type (energy or nonenergy credit) is the sum of the amounts of that type of passthrough allocated to the patron by the allocation groups in which the paron participates.

(vi) A cooperative elects the alternative group method of allocation by computing the amount of each patron's passthrough using that method for a taxable year and incluing on the notice to patrons under paragraph (c)(4) of this section, a statement that the alternative method was used. The election may not be changed after the due date for the statement required under paragraph (c)(4) of this section. The election applies for the taxable year made and for all succeeding taxable years. An election cannot be revoked for succeeding taxable years unless the cooperative obtains consent from appropriate Tax Rulings Division in the Office of Associate Chief Counsel (Technical). (See §601.201 (Statement of Procedural Rules)). A request for consent must state the reasons why the alternative group method is no longer an equitable method of allocating the passthrough to the patrons. The request must be made no later than 6 months prior to the due date of the first statement required by paragraph (c)(4) of this section that would reflect revocation of the election.

(4) Time and manner of notifying patrons of passthrough. (i) A cooperative must notify each patron and the Internal Revenue Service of the amount and type of passthrough allocated to the patron if the total amount of that patron's passthrough for the credit year is $10 or more. The amount and type of passthrough must be entered on the first statement that is required by section 6044 (Form 1099 PATR) or would be required by that section if (A) the amount of the payment subject to reporting were $10 or more or (B) the cooperative were not a consumer cooperative exempt from the requirements of section 6044. The statement must be furnished to the Internal Revenue Service and to the patron after the end of the payment period for the taxable year in which the credit was earned (or such earlier time as provided under the rules of section 6044 and the regulations thereuner.

(ii) If the total amount of passthrough allocated to a patron by the cooperative for the taxable year is less than $10, then the cooperative may, but is not required to, notify the particular patron of the passthrough. To the extent that notification is not made because the patron's passthrough is less than $10, the credit may not be used by any patron or the cooperative. Additionally, to the extent notification is not made, that amount of the passthrough is not subject to recapture under section 47 or §1.46-10(f).

(iii) The cooperative must enter on or attach to the notification, a statement that the passthrough must be reported on any of the patron's income tax returns described below.

(A) The first income tax return due (without regard to extensions) on or after receipt of the nofification by the patron, or

(B) If the patron has previously filed the income tax return described in paragraph (c)(4)(iii)(A) above, on a return amending such income tax return, or

(C) If the patron has filed the income tax return described in paragraph (c)(4)(iii)(A) above before receipt of the notification and does not file an amended return as permitted by paragraph (c)(4)(iii)(B) above, on the income tax return due for the patron's first taxable year ending on or after receipt of the notification by the patron.

The notice should also state that (1) the patron may not amend any return that was due (without regard to any extensions) prior to the receipt of the notification by the patron and (2) to the extent that any passthrough cannot be used by the patron due to the tax liability limitation of section 46(a)(3) of the Code, the patron may carry back and carry over the amount of unused credit in accordance with the rules of section 46(b) of the Code.

(iv) A cooperative that, without regard to this paragraph, is not required to furnish a statement to a patron, need not furnish the information described in §1.6044-5(b)(1).

(d) Patrons' use of passthrough. A patron notified of a passthrough shall report the passthrough on any one of the patron's income tax returns described in paragraph (c)(4)(iii) of this section. However, the patron may not amend any return that was due (without regard to any extensions) prior to the receipt of the notification by the patron.

To the extent any passthrough cannot be used by the patron due to the tax liability limitation of section 46(a)(3), that patron may carry back and carry over the amount of unused credit in accordance with the rules of section 46(b). The patron's nonenergy credit passthrough is added to, and used with, the patron's nonenergy credit earned in that first taxable year as if it were also nonenergy credit earned by the patron (rather than by the cooperative) during that year. The patron's energy credit passthrough is added to, and used with, the patron's energy credit earned in that taxable year as if it were also energy credit earned by the patron during that year.

(e) Examples. The principles of paragraphs (b) through (d) of this section are illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). Cooperative S, a calendar year taxpayer, operates both a sporting good purchasing activity and a cotton marketing activity. S places one asset, a cotton gin, in service during 1983 to be used in the cotton marketing activity. S earns investment tax credit on the cotton gin that it cannot use due to the limitation of section 46(a)(3). S treats the purchasing patrons and the marketing patrons as two separate allocation groups for purposes of computing patronage dividends. S elects to compute its patrons' passthrough under the alternative group method of allocation. S allocates the entire passthrough to the patrons of the purchasing group. Because it is reasonable to expect that the cotton gin will be used only by the cotton marketing group and never by the purchasing group, the cooperative will be required to reallocate the passthrough to the marketing group.

Example (2). (a) Cooperative Q, a calendar year taxpayer, markets wheat and eggs. Q places one asset, an egg sorter, in service during 1983 and earns credit that it cannot use due to the limitation of section 46(a)(3). Q treats its egg patrons and wheat patrons as two separate allocation groups for purposes of computing patronage dividends. Q elects to compute its patrons' passthrough under the alternative group method of allocation. Because the cooperative reasonably expects the property to be used only by the egg group, patrons of the egg group will receive 100 percent of the passthrough for 1983.

(b) For 1984, Q's credit earned is $60,000, consisting of $12,500 for a wheat grinder reasonably expected to be used only by the wheat group, $27,500 for an egg washer reasonably expected to be used only by the egg group, and $20,000 for energy property reasonably expected to be used 75 percent of the time for marketing wheat and 25 percent of the time for marketing eggs. Of the $60,000 credit earned $50,000 is nonenergy and $10,000 (of the $20,000 credit earned for energy property) is energy credit. Q has no unused credit from years prior to 1978. Q's tax liability for 1984 before application of investment credit is $20,000. Under section 46(a)(3), Q's tax liability limitation is $20,000. Thus, $20,000 of credit is used against Q's tax liability and $40,000 of the $60,000 credit is passed through. Since under §1.46-1(m) nonenergy credit is considered used first, $20,000 of the nonenergy credit is used by the cooperative. The nonenergy credit passthrough is $30,000 (i.e., $50,000 minus $20,000) and the energy credit passthrough is $10,000. The credit earned on behalf of each group and passed through to each group is determined as follows:

Credit Earned	Nonenergy	Energy
Wheat	$20,000 (i.e., $12,5000 + (.75 x $10,000))	$7,500 (i.e., .75 x $10,000)
Egg	$30,000 (i.e., $27,500 + (.25 x $10,000))	$2,500 (i.e., .25 x $10,000)
Total	$50,000	$10,000
Allocation—wheat passthrough	$12,000 (i.e., $30,000 x $20,000/$50,000)	$7,500 (i.e., $10,000 x $7,500/$10,000)
egg passthrough	$18,000 (i.e., $30,000 x $30,000/$50,000)	$2,500 (i.e., $10,000 $2,500/$10,000)

(c) For 1984, Q allocates its passthrough to patrons on the basis of distributions. Q's distributions to patrons total $60,000 to the wheat group and $100,000 to the egg group. Q's distributions to patron A, a wheat producer, and patron B, an egg producer, are as follows:

	patron A	patron B
per unit retain allocation in cash	$4,000	$15,000
qualified per unit retain certificate	1,000	2,500
nonqualified per unit retain certificate	2,000	1,500
patronage dividend consisting of cash and qualified and nonqualified written notices of allocation	3,000	1,000
total	$10,000	$20,000

Q's passthrough to patrons A and B is determined as follows:

	NONENERGY	ENERGY
PATRON A	$2,000 (i.e., $12,000 x $10,000/$60,000	$1,250 (i.e., $7,500 x $10,000/$60,000
PATRON B	$3,600 (i.e., $18,000 x $20,000/$100,000	$500 (i.e., $2,500 x $20,000/$100,000)

Example (3). (a) In 1982, cooperative T, a calendar year taxpayer, places in service nonenergy property, and earns an investment credit of $10,000. All of it is unused credit due to the limitation of section 46(a)(3). Under the general rule of paragraph (c)(2) of this section, the cooperative allocates $1,000 of passthrough to A and $2,000 to B on the basis of business done with or for patrons.

(b) On January 15, 1984, T notifies patrons A and B of their share of the passthrough on their forms 1099-PATR for 1983. T reports the information contained in the patrons' notifications to the Internal Revenue Service on forms 1096 and 1099-PATR for 1983. Patrons A and B report the passthrough on the first tax return due after January 15, 1984.

(c) A is an individual and a calendar year taxpayer. In addition to the passed-through credit, A has $200 of nonenergy credit earned in 1983. In computing A's 1983 taxes, A finds that $500 of A's total $1,200 nonenergy credit cannot be used due to the limitation of section 46(a)(3). A carries the unused investment credit back and over in accordance with the rules of section 46(b).

(f) Recapture or adjustments of investment credit—(1) Recapture. If an event, such as a disposition of section 38 property by a cooperative, gives rise to a recapture determination, section 47 and the regulations thereunder apply as if the cooperative had claimed and used the credit against its tax liability in the credit year without regard to the amount of any passthrough. (See, however, §1.46-10(c)(4)(ii) for rules with regard to de minimis amounts of passthrough credit that will not be recaptured.) Thus, the increase in tax under §1.47-1(a)(1)(i) for a cooperative's recapture year is not affected by the amount passed through in the credit year. Nor will such an increase in tax affect the ability of patrons to carry the passedthrough credit back or over. The terms "credit year", "recapture year" and "recapture determination" are defined in §1.47-1(a)(1)(ii).

(2) Increase or decrease in amount of credit earned.

(i) If the amount of credit earned by a cooperative for any credit year is increased or decreased as a result of any determination within the meaning of section 1313(a) of the Code, the rules of paragraphs (f)(2)(ii), (iii), (iv) and (v) of this section apply.

(ii) If the adjustment decreases the amount of the credit earned for the credit year, the adjustment generally will be treated like any other adjustment of the cooperative's tax liability for the credit year. In addition, if the amount of the decrease in credit exceeds the amount of the credit earned that was reported on the cooperative's income tax return as reducing its tax liability, the excess generally will be treated as an additional tax liability at the cooperative level in the credit year. Therefore, the excess will be treated as it the cooperative had claimed and used such excess against its tax liability in the credit year without regard to the amount of any passthrough. This adjustment will not affect the ability of the patrons to claim the credit or to carry the passthrough back or over.

(iii) In the event that (A) the amount of credit earned for any credit year is decreased as a result of a determination within the meaning of section 1313(a) of the Code and the decrease is due to an intentional overstatement by the cooperative, whether direct or indirect, of the amount of unused credit for any credit year, or (B) the cooperative is for any reason unable to satisfy the tax liability resulting from a determinaiton within the meaning of 1313(a) of the Code, that decreases the amount of credit earned for any credit year, the Internal Revenue Service shall have the authority to make an appropriate adjustment to the tax liability of each patron to whom the unused credit was passed by disallowing any passthrough claimed by a patron with respect to the credit that was decreased by the determination. If such an adjustment is made to the tax liability of a patron, the corresponding decrease in the amount of the credit earned for the year will not be treated like an adjustment of the cooperative's tax liability for the credit year.

(iv) The provisions of paragraph (f)(2)(iii) of this section are illustrated by the following example.

Example. Cooperative X earns $100 of credit in 1982, all of which is unused credit that is passed through in equal amounts under the rules of §1.46-10(c), to the cooperative's patrons A,B,C, and D. Assume that patrons A,B, and C each use their share of the passthrough to offset $25 of tax liability, but that patron D has no tax liability against which to offset the passthrough and that patron D does not carry the passthrough back or over under the rules of section 46(b). If, as a result of a determination under section 1313(a), the $100 credit earned by the cooperative is disallowed, but the cooperative is insolvent and unable to satisfy the resulting $100 tax liability, the Internal Revenue Service may disallow the $25 passthrough claimed by patrons A,B, and C. The Internal Revenue Service, however, may not make any adjustment in the case of patron D because patron D did not use the $25 passthrough to offset any tax liability. If an adjustment is in fact made to the tax liability of patrons A,B, and C, their $75 share of the decrease in the credit would not be treated as an adjustment to the tax liability of the cooperative. The $25 of unused credit passed through to patron D, however, could not be used by patron D in any taxable year.

(v) An increase in the amount of credit earned is used at the cooperative level to the extent that the limitation based on amount of tax (contained in section 46(a)(3)) for the credit year exceeds the credit previously used and not recaptured at the cooperative level. To the extent an increase in the amount of credit cannot be used at the cooperative level for the credit year; the increase must be passed through as an additional passthrough, as far as is practicable, to the patrons of that credit year. See paragraph (f)(4)(ii) of this section, relating to de minimis amounts of additional passthrough. See paragraph (f)(4) of this section for rules that apply when a cooperative makes an additional passthrough under this paragraph.

(3) Change in tax liability limitation. (i) If a cooperative's limitation based on amount of tax under section 46(a)(3) is increased or decreased for a credit year as a result of any determination within the meaning of section 1313(a) of the Code, the rules of paragraphs (f)(3)(ii) and (iii) of this section apply.

(ii) If a cooperative's limitation based on the amount of tax under section 46(a)(3) is increased for the credit year, and sufficient credit was earned for the credit year to offset that increase, the credit may be used at the cooperative level only if the cooperative has not yet notified its patrons of a passthrough of the credit or reported the passthrough to the Internal Revenue Service for the credit year. If the cooperative has notified its patrons of a passthrough of the credit or reported the passthrough to the Internal Revenue Service for the credit year, the cooperative's increase in tax liability may not be offset by that credit. However, an increase in the cooperative's limitation based on amount of tax does not affect the ability of patrons to use the full amount of the credit passed through for the credit year.

(iii) If the cooperative's limitation based on amount of tax is decreased for a credit year, the amount of credit that becomes unused credit because of the decrease must be passed through as an additional passthrough, as far as is practicable, to the patrons of the credit year. See paragraphs (f)(4)(ii) of this section, relating to de minimis amounts of additional passthrough. See paragraph (f)(4) of this section for rules that apply when a cooperative makes an additional passthrough under this subdivision (iii).

(4) Additional passthrough. If a cooperative must make an additional passthrough under paragraph (f)(2) or (3)(iii) of this section, the following rules apply:

(i) The cooperative must determine the amount to be passed through to each patron under the principles of paragraph (c)(2) of this section (or paragraph (c)(3) of this section if an election under that paragraph is in effect for the year the credit was earned),

(ii) If the additional amount to be passed through to a patron is less than $10, the cooperative may, but is not required to, notify the patron of the amount. To the extent notification is not made because the patron's passthrough is less than $10, the credit may not be used by any patron or the cooperative. Additionally, to the extent notification is not made, that amount of the passthrough is not subject to recapture under section 47 or paragraph (f)(1) of this section.

(iii) Except as provided in paragraph (f)(4)(ii) of this section, the cooperative must notify its patrons and the Internal Revenue Service of any additional passthrough on a statement that identifies the cooperative making the passthrough, the patron receiving the passthrough, and the amount of each type of passthrough. The notification must state that the passthrough must be reported on any one of the patron's income tax returns described in paragraph (c)(4)(iii) of this section, to the extent the passed through credit does not exceed the section 46(a)(3) tax liability limitation. To the extent any portion of the passed through credit cannot be used by the patron due to the tax liability limitation of section 46(a)(3), the patron may carry back or carry over the amount of the unused credit in accordance with the rules of section 46(b). The notification must be sent to the patrons within the time for sending the patrons the first Form 1099-PATR that is due after the adjustment is made. The cooperative must also send the passthrough information to the Internal Revenue Service within the time for filing the first forms 1096 and 1099-PATR that are due after the adjustment is made.

(iv) Any credit that cannot be allocated in this manner because, for example, a patron cannot be located after reasonable effort, shall increase amounts of additional passthrough of each type (as described in) paragraph (c)(1)(ii) of this section) available for passthrough to those patrons of the credit year who can be located.

(g) Transitional rules—(1) Certain taxable years. (i) Except as provided in (g)(1)(ii) of this section, for taxable years of a cooperative ending after October 31, 1978, and before [31 DAYS AFTER PUBLICATION OF THESE PROPOSED AMENDMENTS AS A FINAL REGULATION], any method of determining the passthrough and allocating the unused credit to patrons that is reasonable in light of the statutory language of section 316 of the Revenue Act of 1978, and the legislative history of that section, will be acceptable.

(ii) For taxable years of a cooperative ending after October 31, 1978, and before [31 DAYS AFTER PUBLICATION OF THESE PROPOSED AMENDMENTS AS A FINAL REGULATION], a cooperative may elect to recompute the allocation of unused credit in accordance with the rules of this section. Except as provided in section 6511, the effect of the election is to make all the rules contained in this section applicable to all taxable years of the cooperative ending after October 31, 1978. The cooperative makes an election under this paragraph by attaching to an amended return (or original return, as the case may be) for each of the years affected a statement that it elects to recompute the allocation of unused credit under §1.46-11(g)(1)(ii). The cooperative must notify the patrons of the adjustments, if any, due to the election under this subdivision (ii). The adjustments must be made under the principles of this section. In no event will the cooperative and its patrons be allowed an aggregate credit for taxable years ending after October 31, 1978 and before [31 DAYS AFTER PUBLICATION OF THESE PROPOSED AMENDMENTS AS A FINAL REGULATION] greater than would have been allowed if the regulations had been applied in the first instance for those taxable years.

(2) Certain carryovers. A cooperative that has credit carryovers deriving from taxable years ending before November 1, 1978, shall continue to carry the credit forward for the time prescribed in section 46(b). The amount of the credit is not recomputed under this section. Credit carried over under this paragraph (g)(2) shall be used by the cooperative prior to credits earned during the current taxable year. Thus, the carryovers may have the effect of increasing the amount of unused credit earned in taxable years ending after October 31, 1978 and available to be passed through to patrons. However, no amount of credit earned in taxable years ending before November 1, 1978, and carried over shall be passed through to patrons.

(3) Patrons' carryback. Patrons that are subject to the carryback provisions of section 46(b) shall carry back unused credit deriving from a cooperative's passthrough to those taxable years allowed by section 46 without regard to the effective date of this section.

Withdrawal of Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Books and Records of Foreign Corporations and Operations

LR-133-78

SUMMARY: This document withdraws the notice of proposed rulemaking relating to books and records of foreign corporations and operations that appeared in the FEDERAL REGISTER on January 23, 1981 (46 FR 7401) [1981-1 C.B. 751]. The notice is being withdrawn because Congress, in the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 [Pub. L. 97-248, 1982-2 C.B. 462], has addressed the problems that were the focus of the proposed regulations.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document withdraws the notice of proposed rulemaking that appeared in the FEDERAL REGISTER on January 23, 1981 (46 FR 7401). The notice proposed amendments to the regulations under sections 482, 964, and 6001 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The principal purpose of the proposed amendments was to aid the Internal Revenue Service in obtaining books and records of foreign corporations and operations. Aware of the problems the Service was experiencing in this area, Congress provided in Subtitle F of Title III of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 a series of compliance provisions pertaining to transactions outside the United States or involving foreign persons. Because of these provisions, the regulations proposed on January 23, 1981, are no longer necessary.

Withdrawal of proposed amendments

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 relating to books and records of foreign corporations and operations and published in the FEDERAL REGISTER on January 23, 1981 (46 FR 7401), are hereby withdrawn.

Work Incentive Program Credit

LR-200-78

SUMMARY: This document withdraws the notice of proposed rulemaking relating to the work incentive program (WIN) credit that was published in the FEDERAL REGISTER on April 30, 1980 (45 FR 28758). The WIN credit was terminated by section 261(b)(2)(B)(i) of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 for wages paid or incurred to an employee in any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1981. As a result of this termination, the Internal Revenue Service has decided to withdraw the notice of proposed rulemaking.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document withdraws the notice of proposed rulemaking that appeared in the FEDERAL REGISTER on April 30, 1980 (45 FR 28758). That notice of proposed rulemaking contained proposed amendments to the regulations relating to the WIN credit. Several comments were received with respect to the proposed regulations, but no public hearing was requested or held.

Section 261(b)(2)(B)(i) of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 added section 50B(a)(5) to the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 which terminated the WIN credit for wages paid or incurred to employees in any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1981. However, section 261 of the Act also added "eligible work incentive employees" as a new targeted group for which a credit under section 44B is available for later taxable years. (See sections 44B and 51(d)(1)(H)).

Withdrawal of Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

The notice of proposed rulemaking containing proposed amendments to 26 C.F.R. Part 1 relating to the WIN credit that was published in the FEDERAL REGISTER (45 FR 28758) on April 30, 1980, is hereby withdrawn.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Minimum Addition to Reserve for Losses on Loans of Mutual Savings Banks

LR-152-79

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations imposing a requirement of a minimum addition of reserve for losses on loans of mutual savings banks and other organizations to which section 593 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 applies. Certain of the proposed regulations reflect changes to the applicable law under the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 [Pub. L. 97-34, 1981-2 C.B. 256]; others are intended to clarify existing regulations provisions. The proposed regulations would provide affected financial institutions with the necessary guidance in complying with the tax laws.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by February 14, 1984. Generally, the amendments are proposed to apply to taxable years beginning more than sixty days after publication of this notice as a final Treasury decision. With respect to certain distributions in redemption, the amendments are proposed to apply to certain distributions made on or after January 1, 1981. The amendments treating certain stock associations as mutual savings banks are proposed to be effective for taxable years ending after August 13, 1983.

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR-152-79), Washington, D.C. 20224.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Susan Thompson Baker or George T. Magnatta of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of the Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224 (Attention: CC:LR:T) (202-566-3459).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to clarify the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 593 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. In addition, these amendments are proposed to conform the regulations to sections 243 and 245 of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (95 Stat. 255) [Pub. L. 97-34, 1981-2 C.B. 256, 301]. These amendments are to be issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

NEW RULES

This notice of proposed rulemaking contains new rules applicable to mutual savings banks, domestic building and loan associations, and cooperative banks without capital stock organized and operated for mutual pruposes and without profit (section 593 organizations). These new rules, which require that section 593 organizations make a minimum addition to their reserves for losses on qualifying real property loans and nonqualifying loans, are proposed in order to achieve consistency with the regulations under section 585, which contain a similar requirement with respect to other banking institutions.

CHANGES MADE BY THE ECONOMIC RECOVERY TAX ACT OF 1981

Section 243 of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (ERTA) [Pub. L. 97-34, 1981-2 C.B. 256, 301] created an exception to the rule of section 593(e) that distributions from excess bad debt reserves of certain section 593 organizations are recaptured as ordinary income. Under the Act, this recapture rule does not apply to distributions to the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation in redemption of an interest in a section 593 organization originally received in exchange for financial assistance.

Additionally, ERTA provided that a bank (1) which has capital stock represented by shares, and (2) which is subject to, and operates under, Federal or State laws relating to mutual savings banks, is an organization that is eligible to compute its bad debt deduction under section 593. However, these organizations must compute their bad debt deduction under the percentage of taxable income method under the same rules applicable to building and loan associations (i.e., 82 percent of their assets must be invested in qualified assets in order to receive the full 40-percent deduction and the reduction will be at three-fourths of one percent). ERTA also requires these stock organizations to recapture excess deductions to the extent required by section 593(e). Finally, ERTA provides that amounts paid to depositors of these organizations are deductible under section 591.

CLARIFYING AND CONFORMING CHANGES

These proposed amendments to the regulations also include clarifying changes to existing regulations. These changes include a renumbering of certain sections of the regulations under section 593 and the deletion of certain of those sections that pertained to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1963, or to taxable years beginning before July 12, 1969. These proposed amendments also clarify that section 593 organizations, like banking institutions subject to section 585, may adjust the amount of their addition to bad debt reserves, and thus change the amount of their bad debt decution, within the applicable period of limitations, subject only to the maximum and minimum requirements set forth in these regulations.

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before the adoption of these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably seven copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the Federal Register.

NON-APPLICATION OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Treasury Department has determined that this proposed regulation is not subject to review under Executive Order 12291 or the Treasury and OMB implementation of the order dated April 29, 1983.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT

Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and no general notice of proposed rulemaking is required by 5 U.S.C. 553(b). Accordingly, no Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is required.

PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

The collection of information requirements contained in this notice of proposed rulemaking have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for review under section 3504(h) of the Paperwork Reduction Act. Comments on these requirements should be sent to the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs of OMB, Attention: Desk Officer for Internal Revenue Service, New Executive Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20503. The Internal Revenue Service requests that persons submitting comments on these requirements to OMB also send copies of those comments to the Service.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal authors of these proposed regulations are Susan Thompson Baker and George T. Magnatta of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are as follows:

Paragraph 1. Paragraph (d)(3) of §1.166-4 is amended by removing "§§1.593-1 through 1.593-11" and inserting "§§1.593-1 through 1.593-8" in lieu thereof.

Par. 2. Section 1.581-2(b) is amended by removing the phrase "See section 593 and §1.593-1" and inserting in its place "See section 593 and §§1.593-1 through 1.593-8".

Par. 3. Section 1.591-1 is amended as follows:

1. Paragraph (a)(2) is amended by inserting "or a mutual savings bank described in section 591(b)" after "domestic building and loan association".

2. Paragraph (c)(2) is removed and paragraph (c)(1) is redesignated as paragraph (c)(2).

3. Paragraph (c)(2) as so redesignated is amended by inserting "and before the first day of the taxpayer's first taxable year ending after August 13, 1981," after "October 16, 1962," and by removing "; and" and inserting a period in lieu thereof.

4. A new paragraph (c)(1) is added which reads as follows:

* * * * *

Par. 4. Section 1.593-1 is removed.

Par. 5. Section 1.593-2 is removed.

Par. 6. Section 1.593-3 is removed.

Par. 7. Section 1.593-4 is redesignated as §1.593-1. Section 1.593-1 as so redesignated is amended to read as follows:

§1.593-1 Organizations to which section 593 applies.

The provisions of section 593 and §§1.593-2 through 1.593-8 (except 1.593-7), for taxable years ending after December 31, 1962, apply to (1) a mutual savings bank (including, for taxable years ending after August 13, 1981, a mutual savings bank described in section 591(b)), (2) a domestic building and loan association, or (3) a cooperative bank without capital stock organized and operated for mutual purposes and without profit. The term "thrift institution", as used in this section and §§1.593-2 through 1.593-8, refers to any such financial institution. For definition of the terms "domestic building and loan association" and "cooperative bank", see paragraphs (19) and (32), respectively, of section 7701(a).

Par. 8. Section 1.593-5 is redesignated as §1.593-2 and is amended to read as follows:

§1.593-2 Addition to reserves for bad debts.

(a) In general. As an alternative to a deduction from gross income under section 166(a) for specific debts which become worthless in whole or in part, a thrift institution is allowed a deduction under section 166(c) for a reasonable addition to a reserve for bad debts provided that the thrift institution adopts or has adopted the reserve method of treating bad debts in accordance with paragraph (b) of §1.166-1. The amount of the reasonable addition shall not exceed a maximum addition computed under §1.593-3(a) and, for taxable years beginning after sixty days after the publication of this notice as a final Treasury decision, shall be an amount at least equal to the amount computed under §1.593-3(b). For each taxable year the thrift institution shall include in its income tax return (or amended return) a computation of the amount of the addition determined under section 593 and the regulations thereunder showing the method used to determine that amount. The use of a particular method in the return for a taxable year is not a binding election by the taxpayer to apply that method either for that taxable year or for subsequent txable years. A thrift institution which adopts the reserve method is not entitled to charge off any bad debts under section 166(a) with respect to a loan (as defined in §1.593-8(a)).

(b) Crediting to reserves. The amount of the reasonable addition to a reserve for bad debts computed under §§1.593-3 and 1.593-4 shall be credited to a reserve for losses on qualifying real property loans or to a reserve for losses on nonqualifying loans, whichever is applicable. The reserves for bad debts of a thrift institution shall be established and maintained in accordance with the rules set forth in §1.593-5.

Par. 9. A new §1.593-3 is added to read as follows:

§1.593-3 Amount of addition to reserves.

(a) Maximum addition. The maximum reasonable addition to the reserve for losses on nonqualifying loans of a thrift institution is an amount computed, with respect to such nonqualifying loans, in the manner provided under section 585(b)(3) and §1.585-2(c). The maximum addition to the reserve for losses on qualifying real property loans is an amount equal to the larger of (i) the amount allowable under section 593(b)(2) and §1.593-4(b) (relating to the percentage of taxable income method); (ii) the amount allowable under section 593(b)(3) and §1.593-4(c) (relating to percentage method); or (iii) the amount allowable under sections 593(b)(4), 585(b)(3) and §1.585-2(c)(1) (relating to the experience method), computed taking into account only qualifying real property loans.

(b) Minimum addition. For taxable years beginning after sixty days from the date of publication of this notice as a final Treasury decision, a thrift institution shall make a minimum addition to the reserve for losses on qualifying real property loans and a minimum addition to the reserve for losses on nonqualifying loans. The minimum addition to the reserve for losses on nonqualifying loans is an amount computed in the manner provided in section 585(b)(3)(A) and §1.585-2(c)(1)(ii). The minimum addition to the reserve for losses on qualifying real property loans is an amount equal to the lesser of (i) the amount allowable under section 593(b)(2) and §1.593-4(b) (relating to the percentage of taxable income method); (ii) the amount allowable under section 593(b)(3) and §1.593-4(c) (relating to the percentage method); or (iii) the amount allowable under section 585(b)(3)(A) and §1.585-2(c)(1)(ii) (relating to the experience method) computed taking into account only qualifying real property loans. In the event that the lesser of the amounts referred to in the preceding sentence is zero, the minimum addition to the reserve for losses on qualifying real property loans is zero.

Par. 10. Section 1.593-6 is removed.

Par. 11. Section 1.593-6A is redesignated as §1.593-4. Section 1.593-4 as so redesignated is amended as follows:

1. Its caption is amended to read "Addition to reserve for losses on qualifying real property loans".

2. Paragraph (b)(3) is amended by inserting "(which is not described in section 593(b))" after "mutual savings bank" in each of the two places where it appears, and by removing "paragraph (a)(1)(i) of §1.593-5" and inserting "§1.593-2(a)" in lieu thereof in each of the two places where it appears.

3. Paragraph (b)(5)(i) is amended by removing "§1.593-10" and inserting "§1.593-7" in lieu thereof.

4. Paragraph (b)(5)(iv) is amended by inserting "(eighteen forty-sixths, for taxable years ending after December 31,1978)" after "three-eighths" in each of the two places where it appears.

5. Paragraph (e) is amended by removing "paragraph (a)(1)(i) of §1.593-5" and inserting §1.593-2(a)" in lieu thereof and by removing the last sentence of paragraph (e).

6. Paragraphs (a) and (b)(2)(i) are amended as set forth below. Paragraph (b)(2)(ii) is amended be redesignating the example therein as "Example (1)", and by adding new examples (2) and (3) immediately following example (1) as so redesignated and by adding new paragraph (f) immediately following paragraph (e). The revised and added provisions read as follows:

§1.593-4 Addition to reserve for losses on qualifying real property loans.

(a) In general—(1) Amount of addition determined for the taxable year. For purposes of paragraph §1.593-2(a), the amount of the addition to the reserve for losses on qualifying real property loans for any taxable year beginning after July 11, 1969, is the amount which the taxpayer determines to constitute a reasonable addition to such reserve for such year. However, the amount so determined for such year shall be determined without regard to any amount charged for any taxable year against the reserve for losses on qualifying real property loans pursuant to §1.593-7 (relating to certain distributions to shareholders by a domestic building and loan association). The addition to the reserve shall be determined under section 593(b)(2), (3), or (4) (relating, respectively, to the percentage of taxable income method, the percentage method, and the experience method). See §1.593-3, for the maximum and minimum additions allowed. For each taxable year the taxpayer must include in its income tax return (or amended return) for such year a computation of the amount of the addition determined under this section. The use of a particular method in the return for a taxable year is not a binding election by the taxpayer to apply such method either for such taxable year or for subsequent taxable years. Thus, for example, in the case of a subsequent adjustment with respect to the income tax return (whether initiated by the taxpayer or by the Commissioner) which has the effect of increasing or decreasing taxable income, the amount of the addition to the reserve for losses on qualifying real property loans may be recomputed (subject to the rule of §1.593-3) under whichever method the taxpayer selects for the purpose of such recomputation, irrespective of the method initially applied for such taxable year.

* * * * *

(b) Percentage of taxable income method. ***

(2) Reduction of applicable percentage in certain cases—(i) General rules. If for the taxable year the percentage of the assets of a thrift institution, which are assets described in section 7701(a)(19)(C) (relating to assets of a domestic building and loan association) is less than—

(a) 82 percent of the total assets in the case of a thrift institution other than a mutual savings bank which is not described in section 591(b), the applicable percentage for such year provided by subparagraph (1) of this paragraph is reduced by three-fourth of 1 percentage point for each 1 percentage point of such difference; or

(b) 72 percent of the total assets in the case of a thrift institution which is a mutual savings bank which is not described in section 591(b), the applicable percentage for such year provided by subparagraph (1) of this paragraph is reduced by 1½ percentage points for each 1 percentage point of such difference.

If such percentage is less than 60 percent (50 percent for a taxable year beginning before 1973 in the case of a mutual savings bank not described in section 591(b)) of the total assets in the case of any thrift institution, section 593(b)(2) and this paragraph are not applicable. The percentage of total assets specified in this subparagraph is computed as of the close of the taxable year or, at the option of the taxpayer, may be computed on the basis of the average assets outstanding during the taxable year. Such average is determined by computing such percentage either as of the close of each month, as of the close of each quarter, or as of the close of each semiannual period during the taxable year and by using the yearly average of the monthly, quarterly, or semiannual percentages. A thrift institution which is a mutual savings bank (as defined in section 591) and which determines the amount of the reasonable addition for the taxable year to the reserve for losses on qualifying real property loans under this paragraph shall file for such taxable year a statement which shall show the amount of assets defined in paragraph (e) of §301.7701-13A as of the close of the taxable year and a brief description and the amount of all other assets, together with a description of the method used in determining such amounts. If the percentage specified in this subparagraph is computed by such thrift institution on the basis of the average assets outstanding during the taxable year, the statement shall also show such information as of the end of each month, each quarter, or each semiannual period and the manner of calculating the average.

(ii) Examples. The provisions of this subparagraph may be illustrated by the following examples: ***

Example (2). N is a mutual savings bank which has capital stock represented by shares (as defined in section 591(b)) to which section 593 applies. For its taxable year beginning in 1983, 80.5 percent of N's assets (computed as of the close of that year) constitute assets described in section 7701(a)(19)(C). N's assets which are assets described in section 7701(a)(19)(C) when computed on semiannual, quarterly, and monthly bases, constitute 79.8, 79.6 and 79.5 percent, respectively, of its total assets computed on the corresponding bases. N's applicable percentage for 1983 is 39.25 percent, determined as follows:

	Percent
Percentage of total assets specified in (a) of subdivision (i) of this subparagraph	82.0
Percentage of total assets constituting assets described in section 7701(a)(19)(C)	80.5
Difference	1.5
Applicable percentage determined under table in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph	40.0
Reduction of applicable percentage required by (a) of subdivision (i) of this subparagraph (¾ of 1 percentage point for each full percentage point of difference)	.75
Applicable percentage	39.25

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (2) except that N is a mutual savings bank other than a mutual savings bank described in section 593(b) and 70.5 percent of N's assets (computed as of the close of that year) constitute assets described in section 7701(a)(19)(C). N's assets which are assets described in section 7701(a)(19)(C), when computed on semiannual, quarterly, and monthly bases, constitute 69.8, 69.6 and 69.5 percent, respectively, of its total assets computed on the corresponding bases. N's applicable percentage for 1983 is 38.5 percent, determined as follows:

	Percent
Percentage of total assets specified in (b) of subdivision (i) of this subparagraph	72.0
Percentage of total assets constituting assets described in section 7701(a)(19)(C)	70.5
Difference	1.5
Applicable percentage determined under table in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph	40.0
Reduction of applicable percentage required by (b) of subdivision (i) of this subparagraph (1½ percentage points for each full percentage point of difference)	1.5
Applicable percentage	38.5

(f) Definitions. For purposes of this section—

(1) Surplus, undivided profits, and reserves. The term "surplus, undivided profits, and reserves" means the amount by which the total assets of the taxpayer exceed its total liabilities. The determination of such total assets and total liabilities shall conform to the method of accounting employed by the taxpayer in determining taxable income and to the rules applicable in determining its earnings and profits. Total deposits or withdrawable accounts (as defined in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph but determined as of the beginning of the taxable year) shall be considered a liability. In the case of a domestic building and loan association or a mutual savings bank described in section 591(b) having permanent nonwithdrawable capital stock represented by shares, the paid-in amount of such stock shall also be considered a liability. However, reserves for contingencies and other reserves which are mere appropriations of surplus are not liabilities for purposes of this section.

(2) Total assets. The term "total assets" means the sum of money (including time or demand deposits with, or withdrawable accounts in, any financial institution), plus the aggregate of the adjusted basis (determined under §1.1011-1) of the property other than money held by the taxpayer. For special rules with respect to adjustments to basis in the case of property acquired by the taxpayer in a transaction described in section 595(a), see section 595.

(3) Total deposits or withdrawable accounts. The term "total deposits or withdrawable accounts" means the total of the amounts placed with the taxpayer for deposit or investment. Such term also includes earnings outstanding on the books of account of the taxpayer at the close of the taxable year which have been credited as dividends or interest upon such deposits or withdrawable accounts prior to the close of such taxable year, and which are withdrawable on demand subject only to customary notice of intention to withdraw. In the case of a domestic building and loan association or a mutual savings bank described in section 591(b), however, such phrase does not include permanent notwithdrawable capital stock represented by shares, or earnings credited thereon.

Par. 12. Section 1.593-7 is redesignated as §1.593-5. Section 1.593-5 as so redesignated is amended as follows:

1. Paragraph (a)(1) is amended by removing "paragraph (b) of §1.593-5" and inserting in its place "§1.593-2".

2. Paragraph (a)(2)(ii) is amended by removing "subparagraph (1) or (2) of §1.593-5(a) (whichever applies) as the addition to such reserve for such year year" and inserting "§1.593-3" in lieu thereof.

3. Paragraph (b)(1)(ii) is amended by removing "(determined under §1.593-1 or §1.593-2)" and inserting "(determined under section 593)" in lieu thereof.

4. Example (1)(i) of paragraph (b)(5) is amended by removing "under §1.593-1 (relating to additions to reserve for bad debts) by reference to §1.593-9 (relating to taxable income for taxable years beginning in 1962 and ending in 1963)".

5. The references "§1.593-4", "§1.593-5", "§1.593-8", and "§1.593-10" are removed and "§1.593-1", "§1.593-2", "§1.593-6", and "§1.593-7", respectively, are inserted in lieu thereof in each place they appear as a reference in §1.593-5 as so redesignated.

Par. 13. Section 1.593-8 is redesignated as §1.593-6. Section 1.593-6 as so redesignated is amended as follows:

1. The references "§1.593-4" and "§1.593-7" are removed and "§1.593-1" and §1.593-5", respectively, are inserted in lieu thereof in each place that they appear as a reference in §1.593-6 as so redesignated.

2. Paragraph (b)(1)(i) is amended by removing the phrase "(under the principles of paragraph (d)(2) of §1.593-1)".

3. Paragraph (c)(1)(ii) is amended by removing the phrase "under the principles of paragraph (d)(2) of §1.593-1".

4. The first sentence of paragraph (d) is removed and the following new sentence is inserted in its place: "Any portion of the taxpayer's pre-1952 surplus which, under paragraph (a) of this section, is deemed to be included in the opening balance of the reserve for losses on qualifying real property loans shall not be treated as a reserve for bad debts for any purpose other than computing for any taxable year the amount determined under the method described in paragraph (b), (c), or (d) of §1.593-4 (relating, respectively, to the percentage of taxable income method, the percentage method, and the experience method)."

Par. 14. Section 1.593-9 is removed.

Par. 15. Section 1.593-10 is redesignated as §1.593-7. Section 1.593-7 as so redesignated is amended as follows:

1. Paragraph (b)(1) and (2) is amended by inserting "or institution" after "association" in both places that "association" appears.

2. Paragraph (b)(3)(i) is amended by removing "§1.593-6 or §1.593-6A (whichever is applicable)" and inserting "§1.593-4" in lieu thereof.

3. Paragraph (b)(3)(ii)(b) is amended by removing "paragraph (d) of §1.593-6 or paragraph (d) of §1.593-6A, whichever is applicable" and inserting "§1.593-4" in lieu thereof.

4. Examples (1)(i), (2)(i), and (3)(i) of paragraph (d) are amended by removing the phrase "described in paragraph (d) of §1.593-6".

5. The references "section 593(f)", "§1.593-7", and "§1.593-8", are removed and "section 593(e)", "§1.593-5", and "§1.593-6", respectively, are inserted in lieu thereof in each place that they appear as a reference or as part of a reference in §1.593-7 as so redesignated.

6. Paragraph (a) is revised to read as follows:

§1.593-7 Certain distributions to shareholders by a domestic building and loan association.

(a) In general. Section 593(e) provides that if a domestic building and loan association (as defined in section 7701(a)(19) and the regulations thereunder) distributes property after December 31, 1962, or an institution that is treated as a mutual savings bank under section 591(b) distributes property during a taxable year ending after August 13, 1981, to a shareholder with respect to its stock and if the amount of such distribution is not allowable to the association as a deduction under section 591 (relating to deduction for dividends paid on deposits), then, notwithstanding any other provision of the Code, the distribution shall be treated as provided in paragraphs (b) and (c) of this section. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term "distribution" includes any distribution in redemption of stock to which section 302(a) or 303 applies, or in partial or complete liquidation of the association or institution, as well as any other distribution which the association or institution may make to a shareholder with respect to its stock. For definition of the term "property", see section 317(a). For determination of the amount of a distribution, see section 301(b). For taxable years beginning after July 11, 1969, this paragraph is not applicable to any transaction to which section 381 (relating to carryovers in certain corporate acquisitions) and the regulations thereunder apply. This paragraph also does not apply to any distribution made on or after January 1, 1981, to the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation in redemption of an interest in an association, if the interest was originally received by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation in exchange for financial assistance under section 406(f) of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. §1729(f)).

* * * * *

Par. 16. Section 1.593-11 is redesignated as §1.593-8. In paragraph (b)(1) of §1.593-8 as so redesignated, the phrase "For purposes of §§1.593-4 through 1.593-10," is removed and the phrase "For purposes of §§1.593-1 through 1.593-7," is inserted in its place. In paragraph (c) of §1.593-8 as so redesignated, the phrase "For purposes of §§1.593-4 through 1.593-9," is removed and the phrase "For purposes of §§1.593-1 through 1.593-6," is inserted in its place.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Property Transferred in Connection With the Performance of Services

LR-16-80

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed amendments to the existing regulations under section 83 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, relating to property transferred in connection with the performance of services. The proposed regulations reflect the changes made to the applicable law by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 [Pub. L. 97-34, 1981-2 C.B. 256], and clarify certain provisions of the existing regulations. The regulation would provide the public with the guidance needed to comply with section 83 and would affect certain taxpayers who participate in the transfer of property in connection with the performance of services.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by January 16, 1984. The amendments to §§1.83-3(e) and -6(a)(2) are proposed to be effective for property transferred after June 30, 1969. The additions of paragraphs (j) and (k) to §1.83-3 are proposed to be effective for property transferred after December 31, 1981.

ADDRESS: Send comments and a request for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR::T [LR-16-80], 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Bruce Jurist, of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224 (Attention: CC:LR:T), 202-566-3238, not a toll free call.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 83 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. These amendments are proposed to conform the regulations to section 252 of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (95 Stat. 260, 26 U.S.C. 83(c)) and to make certain corrective and clarifying changes to the existing regulations under section 83. They are to be issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A State. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Section 83 deals with transactions in which property is transferred in connection with the performance of services. Section 1.83-3(e) defines "property" for purposes of section 83 and excludes from that term an "unfunded and unsecured promise to pay money in the future." These proposed regulations expand this exclusion so as to exclude from the definition of "property" an unfunded and unsecured promise to pay property other than money in the future.

Section 83(c)(3), as added by section 252(a) of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, provides that so long as the sale of property at a profit could subject a person to suit under section 16(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, such person's rights in the property will be considered to be subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture and not transferable. The proposed addition of §1.83-3(j) to the regulations provides that for purposes of section 83 and the regulations thereunder, the section 16(b) restriction will be considered to have lapsed after its initial six-month period, notwithstanding any extension of such restriction under the rules of section 16(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

Section 252(b) of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 provides that property is subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture and is not transferable so long as such property is subject to a restriction on transfer to comply with the "Pooling-of-Interests Accounting" rules set forth in Accounting Series Release Numbered 130((10/5/72) 37 FR 20937; 17 CFR 211.120) and Accounting Series Release Numbered 135 ((1/18/73) 38 FR 1734; 17 CFR 211.135). The proposed addition of §1.83-3(k) to the regulations reflects the above-cited statute.

Section 1.83-6(a)(2) contains a special rule relating to the allowance of a deduction by an employer for property transferred to an employee in connection with the employee's performance of services. The regulation provides that the employer is entitled to a deduction for the taxable year in which the amount is includible in the employee's income, but only if the employer deducts and withholds upon such amount in accordance with section 3402 of the Code. The proposed amendment provides exceptions to the deduct and withhold requirement in cases where the employer either has no obligation to withhold under that section, or the employer is unable to withhold but includes the compensation on a Form W-2 or on an information return filed with the Service.

COMMENTS AND REQUEST FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably seven copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this proposed rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required. Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply because the rules proposed are interpretative. Accordingly, a Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is not required.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations is Philip R. Bosco of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, other personnel in the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations on matters of both substance and style.

Proposed Amendments to the Regulations

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are as follows:

Paragraph 1. Section 1.83-3 is amended by revising paragraph (e) and adding new paragraphs (j) and (k). The amended section reads as follows:

§1.83-3 Meaning and use of certain terms.

* * * * *

(e) Property. For purposes of section 83 and the regulations thereunder, the term "property" includes real and personal property other than either money or an unfunded and unsecured promise to pay money or property in the future. The term also includes a beneficial interest in assets (including money) which are transferred or set aside from the claims of creditors of the transferor, for example, in a trust or escrow account. See, however, §1.83-8(a) with respect to employee trusts and annuity plans subject to section 402(b) and section 403(c). In the case of a transfer of a life insurance contract, retirement income contract, endowment contract, or other contract providing life insurance protection, only the cash surrender value of the contract is considered to be property. Where rights in a contract providing life insurance protection are substantially nonvested, see §1.83-1(a)(2) for rules relating to taxation of the cost of life insurance protection.

* * * * *

(j) Sales which may give rise to suit under section 16(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934—(1) In general. For purposes of section 83 and the regulations thereunder, if the sale of property at a profit within six months after the purchase of the property could subject a person to suit under section 16(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, such person's rights in such property are treated as subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture and as not transferable until the expiration of such period.

(2) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On January 1, 1983, X corporation sells to P, a principal officer of X, in connection with P's performance of services, 100 shares of X corporation stock at $10 per share. At the time of such sale the fair market value of the corporation stock is $100 per share. P, as a principal officer of X, is liable to suit under section 16(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 for recovery of any profit from any sale and purchase or purchase and sale of X corporation stock within a six-month period. Because the section 16(b) restriction is applicable to P, P's rights in the 100 shares of stock purchased on January 1, 1983, are treated as subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture and as not transferable through June 29, 1983. P does not include any amount with respect to the stock purchase in gross income as compensation on the date of purchase. On June 30, 1983, the fair market value of X corporation stock is $250 per share. P must include $24,000 (100 shares of X corporation stock x $240 ($250 fair market value per share less $10 price paid by P for each share)) in gross income as compensation on that date.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that on June 1, 1983, X corporation sells to P an additional 100 shares of X corporation stock at $20 per share. At the time of such sale the fair market value of the X corporation stock is $150 per share. On June 30, 1983, P must include $24,000 in gross income as compensation with respect to the January 1, 1983 purchase. On November 30, 1983, the fair market value of X corporation stock is $200 per share. Accordingly, on that date P must include $18,000 (100 shares of X corporation stock x $180 ($200 fair market value per share less $20 price paid by P for each share)) in gross income as compensation with respect to the June 1, 1983 purchase.

(3) Effective date. Paragraph (j) of this section shall apply to property transferred after December 31, 1981.

(k) Special rule for certain accounting rules. (1) For purposes of section 83 and the regulations thereunder, property is subject to substantial risk of forfeiture and is not transferable so long as such property is subject to a restriction on transfer to comply with the "Pooling-of-Interests Accounting" rules set forth in Accounting Series Release Numbered 130 ((10/5/72) 37 FR 20937; 17 CFR 211.130) and Accounting Series Release Numbered 135 ((1/18/73) 38 FR 1734; 17 CFR 211.135).

(2) Effective date. Paragraph (k) of this section shall apply to property transferred after December 31, 1981.

Par. 2. Section 1.83-6 is amended by revising paragraph (a). The amended section reads as follows:

§1.83-6 Deduction by employer.

(a) Allowance of deduction—

(2) Special rule. If the service provider is an employee of the person for whom services were performed, such deduction is allowed for the taxable year of the employer in which or with which ends the taxable year of the employee in which such amount is includible as compensation, but only if the employer deducts and withholds upon such amount in accordance with section 3402. A deduction will not be disallowed under the preceding sentence if the employer does not deduct and withhold because—

(i) A person other than the employer is required to deduct and withhold upon such compensation and such other person deducts and withholds on such amount but does not claim the deduction;

(ii) The employee's wages do not exceed the amount exempt from withholding;

(iii) The amount is excluded from the employee's gross income under a provision such as section 79, section 101(b) or subchapter N; or

(iv) The employer is unable to deduct and withhold and the employer includes the amount of such compensation on a Form W-2 or on an information return filed with the Internal Revenue Service in the case where the compensation is not "wages" as defined in section 3401(a).

The employer or other person will be considered to deduct and withhold if such person deducts and withholds by the day on which the last withholding payment for such person's taxable year is due. For taxable years of employees ending before July 21, 1978, such deduction is allowed for the taxable year of the employer in which or with which ends the taxable year of the employee in which such amount is includible as compensation, if either the employer deducts and withholds upon such amount in accordance with section 3402 or the employee includes such amount in gross income as compensation for such taxable year of the employee.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Allocation of the 1,000 barrel amount within a related group under the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980

LR-66-80

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations relating to the allocation within a related group of the 1,000 barrel amount for independent producers subject to a reduced rate of windfall profit tax on domestic crude oil, imposed by title I of the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 [Pub. L. 96-223, 1980-3 C.B. 1,2]. The regulations would provide the public with guidance needed to comply with the Act.

DATES: These proposed regulations would apply and be effective with respect to all crude oil removed (or deemed removed) from the premises after February 29, 1980. Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by March 12, 1984.

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR-66-80), Washington, D.C. 20224.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains amendments to the proposed Excise Tax Regulations under the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 (26 CFR Part 51) under section 4992(e) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The proposed regulations are required to implement section 4992(e) as added by section 101(a)(1) of the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 [Pub. L. 96-223, 1980-3 C.B. 1,2], and are to be issued under the authority contained in sections 4992(e), 4997(b), and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (94 Stat. 236, 26 U.S.C. 4992(e); 94 Stat. 249, 26 U.S.C. 4997(b); 68A Stat. 917, 26 U.S.C. 7805).

IN GENERAL

The windfall profit tax is a temporary excise tax imposed upon the windfall profit from domestically produced taxable crude oil removed from the premises during each taxable period (generally a calendar quarter). Generally, the rate of tax on tier 1 and tier 2 oil is 70 percent and 60 percent, respectively. However, certain tier 1 and tier 2 oil produced by independent producers is subject to a 50 percent and 30 percent rate of tax, respectively. This oil subject to the reduced rate of tax is "independent producer oil."

"Independent producer oil" is that portion of an independent producer's qualified production for the quarter that does not exceed such person's independent producer amount for the quarter. A person's independent producer amount for any quarter is the product of 1,000 barrels multiplied by the number of days in the quarter. However, this 1,000 barrel amount must be allocated among independent producers who are members of the same related group at any time during the calendar quarter. If an independent producer is a member of the same related group for only a portion of the quarter, the 1,000 barrel amount is subject to allocation for those days on which the independent producer is a member of that related group. The Service considered a rule that would allocate on a quarterly basis among those who were group members at any time during a quarter. That is, a group member's independent producer amount for a quarter would be a share of one independent producer amount for the quarter (1,000 barrels times the number of days in the quarter), regardless of on how many days during the quarter the independent producer was a group member. The share would be proportionate to that independent producer's production for that quarter. This rule would have the effect of depriving an independent producer of the full 1,000 barrel per day amount even on those days when the independent producer was not a member of the related group. Such a rule is supportable under the language of section 4992(e)(1). Nevertheless, this rule was rejected in favor of the rule that only reduced the independent producer amount for those days on which the independent producer was a member of a related group.

MEMBERS OF A RELATED GROUP

An independent producer is treated as a member of a related group if the independent producer is a member of: (i) a family; (ii) a controlled group of corporations; (iii) a group of entities under common control; or (iv) if 50 percent or more of the beneficial interest in one or more of the corporations, trusts, or estates is owned by one or more members of the same family, all these entities and the family. A group of entities under common control means any group of entities that is either a parent-subsidiary group under common control, a brother-sister group under common control, or a combined group under common control. For purposes of determining whether 50 percent or more of the beneficial interest in one or more corporations, trusts, or estates is owned by one or more members of the same family, an interest owned by or for a corporation, partnership, trust or estate is considered as owned directly by the entity and proportionately by its stockholders, partners, or beneficiaries, as the case may be.

If, under these rules, an independent producer is a member of more than one related group for any concurrent period during the calendar quarter, the allocation of the 1,000 barrel amount to the independent producer is made by reference to that related group that results in the smallest allocation for that independent producer. Once an independent producer's allocation has been made by reference to that related group that results in the smallest allocation, the independent producer still is treated as a member of the other related group or groups for allocation purposes.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue had determined that the proposed rule is not subject to review under Executive Order 12291 or the Treasury—OMB implementation of that Order, dated April 29, 1983. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analyses is not required. Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these proposed regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably 7 copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations is Beverly A. Baughman of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of style and substance.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

Section 51.4992-1 is proposed to be amended by deleting paragraph (e) and a new §51.4992-2 is proposed to be added immediately thereafter. This proposed new section reads as follows:

§ 51.4992-2 Allocation within related group of 1,000 barrel amount.

(a) General rule—(1) In general. The 1,000 barrel amount described in section 4992(c)(1)(A) must be allocated among independent producers who are members of the same related group at any time during the calendar quarter. For the definition of the term "related group", see paragraph (b) of this section.

(2) Method of allocation—(i) Members of the same related group for the entire quarter. If an independent producer is a member of the same related group (one whose members do not vary) for the entire quarter, the independent producer's allocable share of the 1,000 barrel amount shall be equal to that amount which bears the same ratio to 1,000 barrels as that independent producer's qualified production of crude oil (as defined in section 4992(d)) for the quarter bears to the total qualified production of crude oil for the quarter of all the independent producers of that related group.

(ii) Members of the same related group for part of the quarter—(A) If an independent producer is a member of the same related group for less than the entire quarter, the 1,000 barrel amount prescribed in paragraph (a)(1) of this section shall be allocated for those days during the quarter on which the independent producer is a member of the related group. For each day that an independent producer is a member of the related group, the independent producer's allocable share of the 1,000 barrel amount shall be equal to that amount which bears the same ratio to 1,000 barrels as that independent producer's qualified production of crude oil (as defined on section 4992(d)) for that day bears to the total qualified production of crude oil for that day of all the independent producers of that related group. This calculation must be performed for each day that an independent producer is a member of a related group, unless the independent producer is a member of that related group for the entire quarter (see paragraph (a)(2)(i) of this section).

(B) On those days during the quarter that the independent producer described in paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(A) of the section is not a member of a related group, the independent producer is not required to allocate the 1,000 barrel amount pursuant to paragraph (a)(1) of this section.

(C) The independent producer amount for an independent producer described in paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(A) of this section for the quarter shall be equal to the sum of—

(1) The independent producer's daily amounts computed under paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(A) of this section, and

(2) The product of 1,000 barrels multiplied by the number of days in the quarter that the independent producer is not a member of any related group.

The 1,000 barrel amount prescribed in paragraph (a)(1) of this section is first allocated under this section before any further allocation is made under section 4992(c)(2) between tiers 1 and 2 and within any tier.

(3) Examples. The allocation described in paragraph (a)(1) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On April 1, 1980, A, B, and C, all independent producers, were members of the same related group. A and B continued to be members of the related group during the entire second quarter of 1980 (April through June), but C was a member of the related group only for the month of April. C did not become a member of any other related group during the quarter. C continued the production of oil. For the period from April 1, 1980 through April 30, 1980, A, B, and C each day had qualified production of 500 barrels, 400 barrels and 300 barrels, respectfully. For the period from May 1, 1980 through June 30, 1980, A, B, and C each day had qualified production of 1,000 barrels, 800 barrels, and 600 barrels, respectively, Because A, B, and C were all members of the same related group during part of the second quarter, the 1,000 barrel amount must be allocated among A, B, and C. However, only C's production during the time period that C was a member of the related group is counted for determining the allocation. Thus, for the period from April 1, 1980 through April 30, 1980, A's 1000 barrel amount is reduced to 417 barrels, B's 1,000 barrel amount is reduced to 333 barrels, and C's 1,000 barrel amount is reduced to 250 barrels, determined as follows:

Member A. $1{,}000 \times \frac{500}{1{,}200} = 417$ barrels

Member B. $1{,}000 \times \frac{400}{1{,}200} = 333$ barrels

Member C. $1{,}000 \times \frac{300}{1{,}200} = 250$ barrels

For the period from May 1, 1980 through June 30, 1980, A's 1,000 barrel amount is reduced to 556 barrels, and B's 1,000 barrel amount is reduced to 444 barrels determined as follows: (C's production is not counted because C was not a member of the related group during the period).

Member A. $1{,}000 \times \frac{1{,}000}{1{,}800} = 556$ barrels

Member B. $1{,}000 \times \frac{800}{1{,}800} = 444$ barrels

Member C. = 1,000 barrels (C is entitled to the entire 1,000 barrel amount for that part of the second quarter (May 1, 1980 through June 30, 1980) during which C is not a member of any related group).

Accordingly, for the second quarter of 1980, the independent producer amount for the members are as follows:

Member A	12,510 barrels	(417 × 30 days)
	33,916 barrels	(556 × 61 days)
	46,426
Member B	10,000 barrels	(333.33 × 30 days)
	27,084 barrels	(444 × 61 days)
	37,084 barrels
Member C	7,000 barrels	(250 × 30 days)
	61,000 barrels	(1,000 × 61 days)
	68,500 barrels

Example (2). Assume the facts are the same as in example (1) except that B is not an independent producer and, therefore, does not have any qualified production. Thus, B is not entitled to any independent producer amount. The 1,000 barrel amount for A and C is not reduced by allocating a part of it to B.

(b) Related group. For purposes of this section, a related group is any one of the following groups:

(1) Members of the same family;

(2) A controlled group of corporations;

(3) A group of entities under common control; or

(4) If 50 percent or more of the beneficial interest in one or more corporations, trusts, or estates is owned by one or more members of the same family, all these entities and the family.

(5) The provisions of this paragraph (b)(4) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A, an independent producer, is unmarried and has no minor children. A owns 50 percent in value of the stock in each of nine corporations. These corporations are not members of a controlled group of corporations or members of a group of entities under common control. A and the nine corporations are treated as members of the same related group described in paragraph (b)(4) of this section because A owns 50 percent of the beneficial interest in each of these nine corporations.

(c) Definitions. For purposes of this section, the following terms have the following meanings:

(1) Family. The term "family" means an individual and the spouse and all minor children of the individual. For example, two minor children who are independent producers would be treated as members of the same family even though neither parent was an independent producer or neither parent had qualified production of oil during the calendar quarter. For this purpose, the status of a child as a minor shall be determined under state law.

(2) Controlled group of corporations. The term "controlled group of corporations" has the meaning given to this term by section 1563(a) (including other provisions of section 1563 and the regulations thereunder necessary in the application of section 1563(a)), except that section 1563(b)(2) shall not apply and except that the phrase "more than 50 percent" shall be substituted for the phrase "at least 80 percent" each place it appears in section 1563(a).

(3) Group of entities under common control. The term "group of entities under common control" means any group of entities that is either a "parent-subsidiary group under common control" as defined in paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section, a "brother-sister group under common control" as defined in paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section, or a "combined group under common control" as defined in paragraph (c)(3)(iii) of this section. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(3), the term "organization" means a corporation, estate, or trust. If, for a calendar quarter, an organization is a member of more than one group of entities under common control, see paragraph (e) of this section for the rule that the organization's allocation is determined by reference to that group which results in the smallest allocation for that organization. For purposes of paragraph (c)(3) of this section, the following terms have the following meanings:

(i) Parent-subsidiary group under common control. The term "parent-subsidiary group under common control" means one or more chains of organizations that are connected through ownership of a controlling interest with a common parent organization if—

(A) A controlling interest in each of the organizations, except the common parent organization, is owned singly or in combination by one or more of the other organizations in the chain or chains; and

(B) The common parent organization owns a controlling interest in at least one of the other organizations, excluding, in computing this controlling interest, an interest owned directly in the organization by the other organizations.

(ii) Brother-sister group under common control. The term "brother-sister group under common control" means two or more organizations if the same five or fewer persons who are individuals, estates, or trusts own, singly or in combination, a controlling interest in each organization taking into account the ownership of each person only to the extent that the person's ownership is identical with respect to each organization.

(iii) Combined group under common control. The term "combined group under common control" means a group of three or more organizations if each organization is a member of either a parent-subsidiary group under common control, or a brother-sister group under common control, and at least one organization is the common parent organization of the parent-subsidiary group under common control and also is a member of the brother-sister group under common control.

(iv) Controlling interest. The term "controlling interest" means:

(A) In the case of an organization which is a corporation, ownership of stock possessing more than 50 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or more than 50 percent of the total value of the shares of all classes of stock of the corporation, and

(B) In the case of an organization which is an estate or trust, ownership of an actuarial interest (determined under (c)(3)(v) of this section) of more than 50 percent of the estate or trust.

The principles of the rules contained in §1.1563-2 shall apply for purposes of determining whether certain interests in an estate or trust or stock in a corporation are included in determining control, and the principles of the rules contained in §1.1563-3 shall apply for purposes of determining the ownership of stock in a corporation or the ownership of an interest in an estate or trust.

(v) Actuarial interest. For purposes of this paragraph (c), the actuarial interest of each beneficiary of an estate or trust is determined by assuming the maximum exercise of discretion by the fiduciary in favor of the beneficiary. The factors and methods prescribed in §20.2031-10 for use in ascertaining the value of an interest in property for estate tax purposes shall be used to determine a beneficiary's actuarial interest.

(4) Fifty percent or more of the beneficial interest. The term "50 percent or more of the beneficial interest" means—

(i) With respect to any corporation, 50 percent or more in value of the outstanding stock (excluding Treasury stock) of such corporation, and

(ii) With respect to an estate or trust, an actuarial interest of 50 percent or more of the estate or trust (determined under paragraph (c)(3)(v) of this section).

The determination of the family's beneficial interest in an estate or trust shall be based on all of the property owned by the estate or trust and shall not be based on interests solely relating to oil production owned by the estate or trust.

(d) Constructive ownership—(1) In general. For purpose of determining, under paragraph (b)(4) of this section, whether 50 percent or more of the beneficial interest in one or more corporations, trusts, or estates is owned by one or more members of the same family, an interest owned by or for a corporation, partnership, trust, or estate is considered as owned directly by the entity and proportionately by its stockholders, partners, or beneficiaries in accordance with the attribution rules described in paragraph (d)(2) of this section.

(2) Attribution rules—(i) Corporation. An interest owned, directly or indirectly, by or for a corporation shall be considered as owned by each shareholder in that proportion which the value of the stock which such shareholder so owns bears to the value of all the stock in such corporation.

(ii) Estates and trusts. An interest owned, directly or indirectly, by or for an estate or trust (other than an employees' trust described in section 401(a) which is exempt from tax under section 501(a)) shall be considered as owned by its beneficiaries in porportion to the actuarial interest of such beneficiaries in such estate or trust.

(iii) Partnership. An interest owned, directly or indirectly, by or for a partnership shall be considered as owned proportionately by its partners.

(iv) Example. The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. B and C are married and have two minor children, D and E. Each person is an independent producer. B is the sole beneficiary of Trust F, an independent producer that is a partner with an 80 percent capital and profits interest in the XYZ partnership. XYZ owns 75 percent in value of the stock of corporation M, an independent producer. F is treated as owning 80 percent of the property owned (or treated as owned) by XYZ. Thus, F is treated as owning 60 percent in value (80 percent of 75 percent) of the stock of M, and B is treated as owning the interest in M that is treated as owned by F. Accordingly, because B is treated as owning 50 percent of more of the beneficial interest in M, B, C, D, E, Trust F, and Corporation M are treated as members of the same related group described in paragraph (b)(4).

(e) Members of more than one related group—(1) In general. If, under this section, an independent producer is a member of more than one related group concurrently for the entire quarter (or for any concurrent period during the calendar quarter), the determination of the independent producer's allocation of the 1,000 barrel amount under paragraph (a)(1) of this section for that quarter (or concurrent period) shall be made by reference to the allocation of the related group that results in the smallest allocation for that person. However, for purposes of making the allocation under paragraph (a)(1) of this section with respect to any other related group, an independent producer whose allocation is made by reference to the allocation of the related group which results in the smallest allocation for the independent producer nevertheless shall be treated as a member of the other related group for purposes of determining the other members' allocable share of the 1,000 barrel amount.

(2) Examples. The rules of paragraph (e) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Assume the facts are the same as in example (1) of paragraph (a)(3) of this section except that on May 1, 1980, C becomes a member of a related group with D and E, both independent producers, after ceasing to be a member of the related group with A and B. C remains a member with D and E through June 30, 1980. For the period from May 1, 1980 through June 30, 1980, C had qualified production of 600 barrels daily. For the period from May 1, 1980 through June 30, 1980, D and E each had qualified production of 1,200 barrels daily. Because C is not concurrently a member of more than one related group during the calendar quarter (April through June), C's allocation of the 1,000 barrel amount is not made by reference to the allocation of the related group that results in the smallest allocation to C. Instead C's allocation is determined separately for the period from April 1, 1980 through April 30, 1980, when C was a member of a related group with A and B and for the period from May 1, 1980 through June 30, 1980, when C was a member of a related group with D and E. Therefore, for the period from April 1, 1980 through April 30, 1980, C's allocation of the 1,000 barrel amount and C's independent producer amount are the same as in example (1) of paragraph (a)(3) of this section. For the period from May 1, 1980 through June 30, 1980, C's 1,000 barrel amount is reduced to 200 barrels, D's 1,000 barrel amount is reduced to 400 barrels and E's 1,000 barrel amount is reduced to 400 barrels determined as follows:

$$\text{Member C.}\quad 1{,}000 \times \frac{600}{3{,}000} = 200$$

$$\text{Member D.}\quad 1{,}000 \times \frac{1{,}200}{3{,}000} = 400$$

$$\text{Member E.}\quad 1{,}000 \times \frac{1{,}200}{3{,}000} = 400$$

Accordingly, for the period for May 1, 1980 through June 30, 1980, the independent producer amounts for C, D, and E are as follows:

Member C. 122,000 barrels (200 × 61 days)
Member D. 244,000 barrels (400 × 61 days)
Member E. 244,000 barrels (400 × 61 days)

Example (2). From January 1, 1982 through March 31, 1982, F and H, both independent producers, were members of related group FH. For the period from January 1, 1982 through January 30, 1982, H is also a member of a related group with I and J, both independent producers. For the period from January 31, 1982 through March 31, 1982, I and J are members of related group IJ. Each day of the quarter F, H, I, and J produce the following quantities of crude oil:

F = 1,200 barrels
H = 800 barrels
I = 1,600 barrels
J = 1,600 barrels

Because H is a member of more than one related group for a concurrent period (January 1, 1982 through January 30, 1982) during the calendar quarter (January through March), H's allocation for that concurrent period of the 1,000 barrel amount must be made by reference to the allocation of the related group that results in the smallest allocation to H. H's 1,000 barrel amount is reduced to 400 barrels for the period from January 1, 1982, through January 30, 1982, as a member of group FH and to 200 barrels as a member of group HIJ determined as follows:

$$1{,}000 \times \frac{800 \text{ (H's daily production)}}{2{,}000 \text{ (F\&H's daily production)}} = 400 \text{ barrels}$$

$$1{,}000 \times \frac{800 \text{ (H's daily production)}}{4{,}000 \text{ (H, I\&J's daily production)}} = 200 \text{ barrels}$$

Therefore, H's allocation as a member of a related group with I and J is smaller than H's allocation as a member of a related group with F. Thus, H is treated as a member of a related group with I and J for the period from January 1, 1982 through January 30, 1982. However, the amount of the reduction of F's 1,000 barrel amount for that period still will be determined with regard to H because H still is treated as a member of the related group with F for purposes of determining F's allocation.

Thus, for the period from January 1, 1982 through January 30, 1982, and for the period from January 31, 1982 through March 31, 1982, F's 1,000 barrel amount is reduced to 600 barrels determined as follow:

$$1{,}000 \times \frac{1{,}200 \text{ (F's daily production)}}{2{,}000 \text{ F\&H's daily production)}} = 600 \text{ barrels}$$

Accordingly, for the first quarter of 1982, the independent producer amount for F is 54,000 barrels determined as follows:

18,000 barrels (600 × 30 days)
36,000 barrels (600 × 60 days)
54,000 barrels

For the period from January 31, 1982 through March 31, 1982, H's 1,000 barrel amount is reduced to 400 barrels determined as follows:

$$1{,}000 \times \frac{800 \text{ H's daily production)}}{2{,}000 \text{ (F \& H's daily production)}} = 400 \text{ barrels}$$

Accordingly, for the first quarter of 1982, the independent producer amount for H is 30,000 barrels determined as follows:

6,000 barrels (30 days × 200 (H's allocation with reference to related group H, I&J)
24,000 barrels (60 days × 400)
30,000 barrels

For the period from January 1, 1982 through January 30, 1982, I's 1,000 barrel amount is reduced to 400 barrels determined as follows:

$$1{,}000 \times \frac{1{,}600 \text{ (I's daily production)}}{4{,}000 \text{ (H, I and J's daily production)}} = 400 \text{ barrels}$$

For the period from January 31, 1982 through March 30, 1982, I's 1,000 barrel amount is reduced to 500 barrels determined as follows:

$$1{,}000 \times \frac{1{,}600 \text{ (I's daily production)}}{3{,}200 \text{ (I and J's production}} = 500 \text{ barrels}$$

Accordingly, for the first quarter of 1982, the independent producer amount for I is 42,000 barrels determined as follows:

12,000 barrels (30 days × 400 barrels)
30,000 barrels (60 days × 500 barrels)
42,000 barrels

The reduction of the 1,000 barrel amount and the independent producer amount for the first quarter of 1982 for J is the same as for I.

Example (3). G and H are married and have a minor child J. G, H, and J are independent producers. For the entire second calendar quarter of 1982, G owns 50 percent in value of the stock in corporations N and O, and 45 percent in value of the stock in corporation P. N, O, and P are independent producers. K and L, independent producers, are unmarried and have no minor children. K and L are unrelated to G, H, and J, and unrelated to each other. For the entire second calendar quarter of 1982, K owns 30 percent in value of the stock in N, O, and P. For the entire second calendar quarter of 1982, L owns 20 percent in value of the stock in N and O, and 25 percent in value of the stock in P. Accordingly, corporations N, O, and P qualify as members of a brother-sister controlled group because G, K, and L in combination directly own more than 50 percent of the total value of the stock of each corporation, taking into account the stock ownership of each person only to the extent his stock ownership is identical with respect to each such corporation. However, N and O also qualify concurrently as members of a related group with G, H, and J because G owns 50 percent of the beneficial interest in N and O, and G, H, and J are a family. Assuming that each independent producer produces the same amount of oil per day, N and O, must be treated as members of the related group composed of G, H, J, N, and O since this group will result in the smallest allocations of the 1,000 barrel amounts to N and O. However, the amount of the reduction of P's 1,000 barrel amount shall be determined with regard to N and O because N and O still are treated as members of the related group with P for purposes of determining P's allocation. K and L are not treated as member of a related group.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Installment Obligations Received From Liquidating Corporations

LR-184-80

SUMMARY: This document provides proposed regulations relating to reporting on the installment method gain attributable to the receipt of certain installment obligations by a shareholder from a liquidating corporation. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980 [Pub. L. 96-471, 1980-2 C.B. 489]. These regulations would affect all taxpayers who receive installment obligations as liquidating distributions and would provide them with the guidance to comply with the law.

DATES: Written comments or requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by March 12, 1984. The regulations provided by this document are proposed to apply to installment obligations distributed by a liquidating corporation after March 31, 1980.

ADDRESS: Send comments and a request for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR-184-80), Washington, DC 20224.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed rules for reporting installment obligations received by a shareholder from a liquidating corporation under section 453(h) of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended by the Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980, 94 Stat. 2247 [Pub. L. 96-471, 1980-2 C.B. 489]. This document does not contain regulations relating to the general rules for reporting installment sales and the rules relating to contingent payment installment sales. Temporary regulations relating to those rules were published in the Federal Register, February 4, 1981 [T.D. 7768, 1981-1 C.B. 296]. This document does not contain regulations relating to installment obligations received in certain exchanges in which gain or loss is generally not recognized, nor regulations relating to installment sales between related parties, nor regulations relating to private annuity transactions. Proposed regulations relating to those subjects will be contained in later documents, as will proposed regulations relating to installment sales under sections 453A, 453B, 691, 1038 and 1239. These regulations are issued under the authority contained in sections 453(j) and 7805 of the Code (94 Stat. 2247, 68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 453(j), 7805).

Under prior law, a shareholder who realized gain on receipt of installment obligations from a liquidating corporation was not permitted to report such gain on the installment method. Instead all the gain had to be recognized in the taxable year in which the obligations were received.

The Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980 provides that, unless a taxpayer elects otherwise, gain attributable to the receipt of an installment obligation in certain liquidations is to be reported on the installment method. To the greatest extent practicable, this regulation conforms the treatment of a shareholder receiving installment obligations from a liquidating corporation to the treatment of a shareholder selling the stock of the corporation in an installment sale.

The new rules under section 453(h) apply generally to obligations acquired by the distributing corporation in a sale of property during a complete liquidation to which section 337 applies and timely distributed to shareholders whose tax treatment is governed by section 331(a). However, obligations acquired in a sale or exchange of inventory property which was not sold or exchanged in bulk do not qualify. If a corporation has more than one trade or business, an installment obligation received in a bulk sale of the inventory of any one trade or business will qualify for installment method reporting whether or not the inventory of any other trade of business is sold in bulk.

Installment obligations received by shareholders of a corporation in a liquidation under sections other than section 331(a), e.g. in a partial liquidation that is not a step in a complete liquidation, do not qualify for installment method reporting under this provision.

The scope of the nonrecognition treatment provided under section 337(a) is limited. By statutory definition, nonrecognition treatment is denied to nonbulk sales of inventory, installment obligations received in respect of such sales of inventory, and installment obligations received in respect of sales and exchanges which took place before adoption of the plan of complete liquidation. Nonrecognition treatment is also denied to the extent of recapturable depreciation in the asset sold. In the liquidation of a collapsible corporation, nonrecognition treatment is not available for sales of depreciable property to a more than 20% (actual or constructive) shareholder, even when nonrecognition treatment is otherwise available under section 341(e)(4). In liquidations to which (prior to TEFRA) section 337(c)(2)(B) applied, nonrecognition treatment was limited to the appreciation in the value of the subsidiary's assets prior to the parent's acquisition of the stock of the subsidiary.

The regulations provide special rules for determining the method of reporting installment obligations distributed to shareholders in those liquidations in which the nonrecognition treatment provided in section 337(a) is limited. Installment obligations (or any portion thereof) received in respect of a nonbulk sale of inventory are not reported on the installment method, but any other installment obligations (or portions thereof) distributed in the liquidation are reported on the installment method. Thus, even though the liquidating corporation may recognize gain or loss on certain sales under exceptions to section 337(a) (e.g. sections 341(e)(4), 1245 or 1250) any installment obligation distributed to a qualifying shareholder is reportable on the installment method.

The regulations also provide a special rule for installment obligations received in liquidations to which section 337(c)(2) (formerly section 337(c)(2)(A)) applies. Section 337(a) does not apply to such liquidations but section 337(d) provides a special adjustment which provides minority shareholders with what amounts to a credit for the tax on the gain recognized by the liquidating corporation. Here, as in liquidations to which "old" section 337(c)(2)(B) applied, minority shareholders report on the installment method (unless the shareholder elects not so to report) installment obligations received as liquidation distributions without regard to any gain recognized by the corporation.

Generally, a shareholder who receives liquidating distributions in more than one taxable year recovers basis completely before recognizing any gain. This general rule is inconsistent with installment method reporting which requires that basis be ratably apportioned. Therefore, if a taxpayer receives distributions in more than one year, basis must be reallocated in the subsequent year among all the assets distributed in all years. If the reallocation in the later year indicates that the taxpayer did not recognize the appropriate amount of gain in the earlier year, the taxpayer must file an amended return for the first year. If the taxpayer has made a tax-free transfer to a corporation or partnership of an installment obligation which has an initial basis different from the basis it would have after all liquidating distributions are made, these regulations require that the person who has acquired the installment obligation appropriately readjust basis and file an amended return when necessary.

Section 1.453-2, which relates to special rules applicable to dealers in personal property, will be redesignated upon adoption of this document as a Treasury decision. Regulations relating to special rules applicable to dealers in personal property will be published in the future under section 453A. Until those regulations are issued, the material presently contained in §1.453-2 will remain in effect for dealers in personal property except to the extent that material conflicts with section 453A.

SPECIAL ANALYSIS

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue had determined that this proposed rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required. This document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comment and the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do apply because the rules proposed are legislative. Accordingly, a Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is required.

INITIAL REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ANALYSIS

These proposed regulations are necessary to implement the provisions of section 453(h) of the Internal Revenue Code as amended by the Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980.

The objective of these regulations is to provide taxpayers with the guidance necessary to comply with the provisions of section 453(h) as amended by the Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980, relating to the treatment of installment obligations received by a shareholder from a liquidating corporation. These regulations are promulgated under sections 453(j) and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

These proposed regulations, if adopted, will affect small businesses but not other small entities, such as local government or tax-exempt organizations, which do not pay taxes.

These proposed regulations, if adopted, will affect any corporation that is a small business if upon liquidation of the corporation a qualifying installment obligation is distributed to shareholders. It is anticipated that a significant number of small businesses will be affected. These regulations do not impose substantial reporting requirements beyond those already imposed by the tax laws generally nor record keeping requirements beyond those necessary to account for any complete liquidation. The professional competence necessary to comply with these regulations is no greater than that already necessary to arrange the complete liquidation of a corporation.

These regulations do not overlap with, conflict with or duplicate any existing federal regulations.

None of the significant alternatives considered in drafting these regulations would have significantly altered the economic impact of these regulations on small entities.

COMMENTS AND REQUEST FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably 7 copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

Proposed amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, it is proposed to amend 26 CFR Part 1 by revising §1.453-2 to read as follows:

§1.453-2 Installment obligations received from a liquidating corporation.

(a) In general.—(1) Generally. Except as provided in proposed §1.453-3(i) (relating to installment sales of depreciable property to certain closely related persons), a qualifying shareholder who receives a qualifying installment obligation (as defined in paragraph (c) of this section) in connection with a liquidation to which section 337 applies (as defined in paragraph (d) of this section) will treat payments received in respect of the obligation, rather than the obligation, as payment for the shareholder's stock. The shareholder will report the payments received on the installment method unless the shareholder elects otherwise in accordance with the rules set forth in §1.453-1A(e) of these regulations.

(2) Liquidating distributions treated as selling price. All amounts distributed or treated as distributed to the qualifying shareholder incident to the liquidation, including, in addition to qualifying installment obligations, cash, other property, and obligations that are not qualifying installment obligations, will be considered as having been received by the shareholder as the selling price (as defined in §1.453-1A(b)(2)(ii)) for the shareholder's stock in the liquidating corporation. For the proper method of reporting liquidating distributions received in more than one taxable year of a shareholder, see paragraph (e) of this section. An election not to report on the installment method an installment obligation received as a liquidating distribution will apply to all distributions received in the liquidation.

(3) Assumption of corporate liability by shareholders—(i) In general. If in the course of the liquidation a shareholder assumes or takes subject to secured or unsecured indebtedness, the amount of the indebtedness is added to the shareholder's basis in the stock of the liquidating corporation. Such additions to basis will not affect the taxpayer's holding period in the stock. Liabilities assumed by or taken subject to by the shareholder do not reduce the amounts received in computing the selling price.

(ii) Example. The following example illustrates the provision of paragraph (a)(3):

Example (i). A owns all of the stock of T corporation at a basis of $100,000. T, which is not a collapsible corporation, owns Blackacre, unimproved real property, at a basis of $700,000. Blackacre is subject to a mortgage ("underlying mortgage") of $1,100,000. A is not personally and primarily liable on the underlying mortgage and the T shares held by A are not encumbered by the underlying mortgage. The other assets of T consist of cash of $400,000 and accounts receivable having a total face amount (and value) of $600,000. The unsecured liabilities of T total $900,000. On February 1, 1983, T adopts a plan of complete liquidation comporting with section 337, and promptly sells Blackacre to unrelated B corporation for a mortgage note (bearing adequate stated interest) in the face amount of $4 million (the B note). Under the agreement between T and B corporations, T (or its successor) is to continue to service (make principal and interest payments on) the underlying mortgage. Immediately thereafter, T completes its liquidation by distributing to Mr. A its cash of $400,000, accounts receivable of $600,000, and the $4 million B note. A assumes T's $900,000 of unsecured liabilities and receives the distributed property subject to the obligation to continue to service the $1,100,000 underlying mortgage. In 1983 A receives no payments from B corporation on the B note.

(ii) Provided A does not elect out of installment treatment, the transaction will be reported by A on the installment method. Selling price is $5 million (cash of $400,000, accounts receivable of $600,000, and B note of $4 million). Total contract price also is $5 million. A's basis in the T shares, initially $100,000, is increased by the $900,000 of unsecured T liabilities assumed by Mr. A and by the obligation (to which A takes subject) to service the $1,100,000 underlying mortgage, to an aggregate basis of $2,100,000. Accordingly, gross profit is $2,900,000 (selling price $5 million less aggregate basis of $2,100,000). Gross profit ratio is 58% (gross profit $2,900,000 divided by total contract price of $5 million). 1983 payments to A are $1 million ($400,000 cash plus $600,000 receivables) and A will recognize gain in 1983 of $580,000 ($1 million times 58%).

(iii) In 1984 A receives payment from B corporation on the B note of $1 million (exclusive of interest). A's gain recognized in 1984 is $580,000 ($1 million times 58%).

(b) Qualifying shareholder. The term "qualifying shareholder" means a shareholder to which, with respect to the liquidating distribution, section 331 applies. Thus, a creditor who receives a distribution from a liquidating corporation in exchange for the creditor's claim is not a qualifying shareholder whether or not the liquidation is described in section 337(g).

(c) Qualifying installment obligations—(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(4) of this section (relating to certain inventory sales), the term "qualifying installment obligation" means an installment obligation (as defined in §1.453.1A(c)(2)(i)) acquired in a sale or exchange of corporate assets by the liquidating corporation during the 12-month period set forth in section 337(a). In the case of a liquidation described in section 337(g), the period described in section 337(g)(2) shall be treated as the 12-month period set forth in section 337(a).

(2) Corporate assets. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(4) of this section (relating to certain sales of inventory), the nature of the assets sold by and the tax consequences to the selling corporation do not determine whether an installment obligation is a qualifying installment obligation. Thus, for example, the fact that the fair market value of an asset is less than the adjusted basis of that asset in the hands of the corporation, or that the sale of an asset will subject the corporation to depreciation recapture (e.g., section 1245 and 1250), or that the assets of a trade or business sold by the corporation for an installment obligation include section 179 property, accounts receivable, installment obligations, or cash will not disqualify installment obligations received in exchange for those assets as qualifying installment obligations. However, a debt obligation received by the corporation in exchange for cash, as an investment functionally unrelated to a sale or exchange of noncash assets by the corporation, will not be treated as a qualifying installment obligation.

(3) Installment obligations distributed in liquidations to which section 337(c)(3) applies—(i) In general. In the case of a liquidation to which section 337(c)(3) (relating to certain liquidating subsidiary corporations) applies, a qualifying installment obligation acquired in respect of a sale or exchange by the liquidating subsidiary corporation will be treated as a qualifying installment obligation if distributed to a qualifying shareholder of a distributee corporation (as defined in section 337(c)(3)(B)).

(ii) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (c)(3) of this section are illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, an individual, owns all of the stock of T corporation. T has an operating division and three wholly-owned subsidiaries, X, Y, and Z. Neither T nor any of its subsidiaries is a collapsible corporation (as defined in section 341(b)). On February 1, 1981, T, Y, and Z all adopt plans of complete liquidation. The following sales promptly are made to unrelated purchasers: T sells its operating division to B for cash and an installment obligation. T sells the stock of X to C for an installment obligation. Y sells all of its assets to D for an installment obligation. Z sells all of its assets to E for cash. In June 1981, Y and Z completely liquidate, distributing their respective assets (installment obligations and cash) to T. In July 1981, T completely liquidates, distributing to A cash and the installment obligations respectively issued by B, C, and D. The liquidation of T is a liquidation to which section 337 applies and the liquidations of Y and Z are liquidations to which section 337(c)(3) applies. A is a qualifying shareholder and the installment obligations issued by B, C, and D are qualifying installment obligations. Unless A elects otherwise, A reports the transaction on the installment method as if the cash and installment obligations had been received in an installment sale of the stock of T corporation.

Example (2). A, a cash method individual taxpayer, owns all of the stock of P corporation. P owns 20% of the stock of S corporation. The balance of the S stock is owned by unrelated individuals. On February 1, 1981, P adopts a plan of complete liquidation and sells all of its property, other than its S stock, to B, an unrelated purchaser for cash and an installment obligation. On March 1, 1981, S adopts a plan of complete liquidation, then sells all of its property to unrelated C for cash and installment obligations, and immediately distributes the cash and installment obligations to its shareholders in completion of the liquidation. Promptly thereafter, P liquidates, distributing to A cash, the B installment obligation, and a C installment obligation that P received in the liquidation of S. In the hands of A, the B installment obligation is a qualifying installment obligation. In the hands of P, the C installment obligation was a qualifying installment obligation. However, in the hands of A, the C installment obligation will not be treated as a qualifying installment obligation because P only owns a 20% stock interest in S. Because P does not own at least 80% of the stock of S, the liquidation of S is not a case to which section 337(c)(3) applies. Thus, in the hands of A, the C obligation is considered to be a third party note (not a purchaser's evidence of indebtedness) and therefore is treated as a payment to A in the year of distribution. Accordingly, in 1981 A will report as payment the cash and the fair market value of the C obligation distributed to A in the liquidation of P.

(4) Installment obligations attributable to certain sales of inventory—(i) In general. An installment obligation acquired by a corporation, in a liquidation to which section 337 applies, in respect of a sale or exchange of a broken lot of inventory (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(4)(ii)(B) of this section) is not a qualifying installment obligation. In the event that the installment obligation is received in respect of a broken lot of inventory and other assets, only the portion of the installment obligation received in respect of the broken lot of inventory is not a qualifying installment obligation. The portion of the installment obligation attributable to other assets is a qualifying installment obligation. See paragraph (c)(4)(iii) of this section for rules for determining what portion of an installment obligation is nonqualifying.

(ii) Definitions. For purposes of this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(A) Inventory property. The term "inventory property" means property described in section 337(b)(1)(A).

(B) Broken lot of inventory. The term "broken lot of inventory" means inventory property sold or exchanged in a manner which does not meet the description contained in section 337(b)(2).

(iii) Rules for determining nonqualifying installment obligation. If a broken lot of inventory is sold to a purchaser together with other corporate assets and the consideration received includes cash (or other property) the assumption of (or taking subject to) corporate liabilities, or both, as well as an installment obligation, the following rules will apply solely for the purpose of determining the portion of the installment obligation (if any) that is attributable to the broken lot of inventory. First, the buyer's assumption of unsecured liabilities and the buyer's assumption of or taking subject to liabilities encumbering the broken lot of inventory are deemed consideration received for the broken lot of inventory, up to the fair market value thereof (liabilities encumbering only assets other than the broken lot of inventory are not deemed to be consideration received for the broken lot of inventory). Second, the sum of any cash and the fair market value of other property (other than the installment obligation) received is deemed consideration for the broken lot of inventory up to the amount (if any) by which the fair market value of the broken lot of inventory exceeds the previously described liabilities. Accordingly, an installment obligation will be deemed to have been received in respect of a broken lot of inventory only to the extent that the fair market value of the broken lot of inventory exceeds the sum of the cash and fair market value of other property received, and the unsecured liabilities and secured liabilities encumbering the broken lot of inventory assumed or taken subject to by the purchaser.

(iv) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph are illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). (i) P corporation has three operating divisions, X, Y, and Z, each engaged in a separate trade or business, and a minor amount of investment assets. P is not a collapsible corporation (as defined in section 341(b)). On July 1, 1981, P adopts a plan of complete liquidation comporting with section 337. The following sales are promptly made to purchasers unrelated to P: P sells all of the assets of the X division (including all of the inventory property) to B for cash of $30,000 plus an amount to be retained by P to meet certain liabilities, and installment obligations totalling $200,000. P sells substantially all of the inventory property of the Y division (worth $100,000) to C for an installment obligation, and sells all of the other assets of the Y division (excluding cash but including installment receivables previously acquired in the ordinary conduct of the business of the Y division) to D for a $170,000 installment obligation. P sells ⅓ of the inventory property of the Z division to E for $100,000 cash, ⅓ of the inventory property of the Z division to F for a $100,000 installment obligation, and all of the other assets of the Z division (including ⅓ of the inventory property worth $100,000) to G for $60,000 cash, a $240,000 installment obligation, and the assumption by G of the liabilities of the Z division. P promptly completes its liquidation, distributing the cash and installment obligations to A, an individual cash method taxpayer who is its sole shareholder. In the hands of A, the installment obligations issued by B, C, and D are qualifying installment obligations. The installment obligation issued by F is not a qualifying installment obligation. A portion of the installment obligation issued by G is a qualifying installment obligation and a portion is not a qualifying installment obligation, determined as follows: G purchased part of the inventory property and all of the other assets of the Z division by paying cash ($60,000), issuing an installment obligation ($240,000), and assuming the liabilities of the Z division. Liabilities encumbering assets other than inventory property are ignored in the calculation. Assume the unsecured liabilities and any liabilities encumbering the inventory property aggregated $30,000 and thus that the total purchase price paid by G was $330,000 (exclusive of any liabilities encumbering solely noninventory property). Of this aggregate amount, $100,000 was paid for inventory property of the Z division. The payment made by G by assumption of liabilities ($30,000) and in cash ($60,000) will be attributed first to the inventory property. Therefore, only $10,000 of the $240,000 installment obligation will be attributed to inventory property. Accordingly, in the hands of A $10,000 of the installment obligation issued by G is not a qualifying installment obligation and the balance of $230,000 is a qualifying installment obligation.

(ii) In the 1981 liquidation of P, A receives a liquidating distribution as follows (assume all installment obligations bear stated interest equal to or above the section 483 test rate and that all nonqualifying installment obligations have a fair market value equal to their face amount):

Item	Qualifying Installment Obligations	Cash and Other Property
cash		$190,000
B note	$200,000
C note	$100,000
D note	$170,000
F note		$100,000
G note*	$230,000	$ 10,000
Total	$700,000	$300,000

*face amount $240,000.

Assume that A's basis in the stock of P was $100,000. Under the installment method, A's selling price and contract price are both $1 million, gross profit is $900,000, and the gross profit ratio is ⁹⁰⁄₁₀₀. Accordingly, in 1981 A must report gain of $270,000 (90% of $300,000 payment in cash and other property). A will hold the installment obligations that are entirely qualifying installment obligations at a basis equal to 10% of the face amount. A will hold the F note, a nonqualifying installment obligation, at a basis equal to its $100,000 value when received by A. A will hold the G note, a mixed obligation, at a basis of $33,000 (10% of the $230,000 qualifying installment obligation portion of the note, pluse $10,000 nonqualifying portion of the note).

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that in acquiring assets of the Z division (⅓ of the inventory property and all of the other assets of the Z division), G issues two installment obligations (bearing adequate stated interest). One is a $230,000 installment obligation and the other is a $10,000 installment obligation worth its face amount. The agreement between P and G states that the $10,000 installment obligation is issued as consideration for inventory property acquired by G from P. In example (1), in which G issued a single $240,000 installment obligation, it was determined that only $230,000 of this installment obligation would constitute a qualifying installment obligation. However, when separate installment obligations are issued and one such obligation is designated as consideration for inventory property acquired, that designation ordinarily will be given effect by the Internal Revenue Service for the purpose of attributing consideration paid (in excess of the sum of liabilities assumed, cash paid, and other property received for inventory property first to the designated installment obligation. Accordingly, on the facts stated, the entire $10,000 installment obligation is not a qualifying installment obligation and the entire $230,000 installment obligation is a qualifying installment obligation. Thus A will hold the $10,000 G note, a nonqualifying installment obligation, with a basis equal to its $10,000 value when received by A. A will hold the $230,000 G note, a qualifying installment obligation, with a basis of $23,000 (10% of $230,000).

(d) Liquidation to which section 337 applies—(1) In general. The term "a liquidation to which section 337 applies" means a complete liquidation to which section 337(a) applies, after taking into account section 337(c), (e), and (g), but without regard to section 337(b), and (f). The liquidation of a collapsible corporation (as defined in section 341(b)) is not a liquidation to which section 337 applies, within the meaning of this paragraph, unless section 337(a) applies by reason of section 341(e)(4). Except as provided in the preceding sentence and paragraph (c)(4) of this section (relating to certain sales of inventory), any installment obligation received in respect of a sale by the corporation during a liquidation described in section 337(a) will be a qualifying installment obligation. Thus, even though the liquidating corporation may recognize gain or loss on certain sales under certain exceptions to section 337(a) (e.g. sections 337(c)(2)(B), 341(e)(4), 1245 or 1250), the entire obligation distributed to a qualifying shareholder is reportable on the installment method.

(2) Special rule for liquidations to which section 337(c)(2) applies. With respect to a shareholder (other than a corporation which meets the 80% stock ownership requirement specified in section 332(b)(1)) who is a qualifying shareholder, for purposes of this section, a liquidation to which section 337(c)(2) applies is a liquidation to which section 337 applies. An amount equal to the increase described in section 337(d)(1) is deemed to be a cash distribution in liquidation to the shareholder in the first taxable year in which the shareholder actually receives a distribution in liquidation from the corporation.

(e) Liquidating distributions received in more than one taxable year—(1) In general. If the taxpayer is a shareholder who receives, in a liquidation to which section 337 applies, distributions in more than one taxable year of the taxpayer, then, on completion of the liquidation, basis in the taxpayer's shares previously allocated to property (including qualifying installment obligations) received in an earlier taxable year shall be appropriately reallocated among all property (including qualifying installment obligations) received as a distribution in the liquidation in any taxable year of the taxpayer unless the taxpayer elected out of installment method reporting. If by reason of this basis reallocation it is determined that the taxpayer, or any substituted person (as defined in paragraph (e)(2) of this section), has not fully recognized gain in an earlier taxable year, whichever party did not fully recognize gain shall file an amended return for that earlier year which properly reflects the gain attributable to the distribution received in the earlier year.

(2) Substituted person. The term "substituted person" means a person to whom the taxpayer has transferred (directly or indirectly) an installment obligation received by the taxpayer as a liquidating distribution, if, for the purpose of determining gain or loss from a sale or exchange, the substituted person's basis in such installment obligation is determined in whole or in part by reference to the basis of such installment obligation in the hands of the taxpayer. In addition, if during the 12 month period set forth in section 337(a) a shareholder dies, and a liquidating distribution was received by the decedent and a liquidating distribution is thereafter received by the shareholder's estate or other successor to the shares, for purposes of this paragraph the estate or other successor to the shares shall be treated as the taxpayer and the decedent (and any person who is a substituted person with respect to the decedent) shall be treated as a substituted person with respect to the estate or other successor to the shares.

(3) Examples. The following examples illustrate the provisions of this paragraph. Assume in each example that the taxpayer receiving the liquidating distribution is a calendar year taxpayer.

Example (1). A, an individual, owns all of the stock of T corporation with a basis of $100,000. A's taxable year is the calendar year. T is not a collapsible corporation (as defined in section 341(b)). On February 1, 1980, T adopts a plan of complete liquidation and sells all of its assets to a single purchaser in a single transaction. In January 1981, T distributes $200,000 cash and a $300,000 qualifying installment obligation to A, thereby completing its liquidation to which section 337 applies. The January 1981 distribution is the only liquidating distribution made by T. For purposes of reporting the liquidating distributions, the selling price is $500,000 ($200,000 cash + $300,000 qualifying obligation), the gross profit is $400,000 ($500,000 − $100,000 basis), and the gross profit ratio is ⅘ ($400,000/$500,000). If before the close of 1981 A receives a $50,000 payment on the installment obligation, $40,000 (⅘ of $50,000) will be reportable under the installment method as gain. In total, A will report gain in 1981 of $200,000, $160,000 (⅘ of $200,000) attributable to the $200,000 cash received in the liquidation and $40,000 (⅘ of $50,000) attributable to $50,000 payment on the installment obligation.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1) except that T distributes $200,000 cash in December 1980, and the $300,000 qualifying installment obligation in January 1981. For purposes of reporting the 1980 distribution, 1981 distributions initially are disregarded. Therefore, in 1980 A recovers A's entire $100,000 basis against the $200,000 cash distribution, and will recognize $100,000 as gain. When A receives the $300,000 installment obligation in 1981, A is required to reallocate A's $100,000 basis in the T shares among all property received in both taxable years. The reallocation will produce the results shown in example (1): a selling price of $500,000, a gross profit of $400,000 and a gross profit ratio of ⅘. If A has filed a tax return for 1980 reporting only $100,000 gain in that year, A is required to file an amended return reporting an additional $60,000 of recognized gain in 1980 (($200,000 × ⅘) − $100,000).

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that T distributes the $300,000 qualifying installment obligation to A in June 1980, and distributes the $200,000 cash to A in January 1981. Assume further that in November 1980, A receives a payment of $60,000 on the installment obligation (in addition to the receipt of substantial interest). Because the 1981 distributions initially are disregarded for purposes of reporting in 1980, in 1980 A would allocate the entire $100,000 basis in the T shares to the $300,000 installment obligation. The gross profit ratio thus would be ⅓ ($300,000 − $100,000) ÷ $300,000). A would treat $40,000 (⅔ × $60,000) of the 1980 installment obligation payment as recognized gain in 1980. Upon completion of the liquidation in 1981, A is required to reallocate basis to conform with the results in example (1). The recomputed selling price is $500,000, the recomputed gross profit is $400,000 and the recomputed gross profit ratio is ⅘. Therefore, A should have reported $48,000 (⅘ of $60,000) of the $60,000 payment received in 1980 as gain. Since A reported only $40,000 as gain in that year, if A has filed a return for 1980 A must file an amended return reporting the additional gain of $8,000 ($48,000 − $40,000). Of the $200,000 cash distribution received by A in 1981, $40,000 is return of basis and $160,000 ($200,000 × ⅘) is gain.

Example (4). The facts are the same as in example (3), except that in 1980, before receiving any payment on the installment obligation, A transfers the installment obligation to P partnership in exchange for a partnership interest in P. Under sections 721 and 453B, gain is not recognized on the transfer and P holds the installment obligation at the same basis the obligation had in the hands of A. P is therefore a substituted person with respect to A. Accordingly, the basis recomputation rule applies to P and its partners. If P has filed a return for its taxable year in which it reported $40,000 gain with respect to the $60,000 payment on the installment obligation it must file an amended return reporting an additional $8,000 ($48,000 − $40,000) of gain recognized on that payment. Further, each partner of P who has filed a return for the partner's taxable year in which or with which P's taxable year ends, must file an amended return reporting the partner's distributive share of the additional gain.

Example (5). The facts are the same as in example (3) except that, in addition, A dies December 1, 1980, and the installment obligation passes by bequest to A's child, D, who receives a $60,000 payment in respect of the obligation in December as well as the cash distribution in January 1981. Because an installment obligation is a right to receive income in respect of a decedent, D reports the installment obligation as A would have. Therefore, in 1980, D would recognize gain of $40,000 (⅔ × $60,000) in 1980. Upon completion of the liquidation in 1981, if D has filed a return reporting only $40,000 gain, an amended return must be filed reporting an additional gain of $8,000 ($48,000 − $40,000). In addition, if A had filed a return reporting only $40,000 gain as amended return must be filed reporting an additional $8,000 ($48,000 − $40,000). In addition, of the $200,000 cash distribution received by D in 1981 $40,000 will be return of basis and $160,000 ($200,000 × ⅘ will be gain.

Example (6). The facts are the same as in example (2), except that on December 31, 1980, after receiving the $200,000 cash distribution but before receiving the $300,000 qualifying installment obligation distribution, A donates all the T shares to Z corporation, a section 501 (c)(3) organization. A midstream carryover basis transfer of shares in a corporation engaged in a section 337 liquidation is an invalid assignment of income. Accordingly, A will be required to reallocate basis and report gain in the manner described in example (2).

Example (7). B owns all of the stock of X corporation with an adjusted basis of $100,000. X is not a collapsible corporation (as defined in section 341(b)). X conducts two separate businesses, the J division worth $100,000 and the K division worth $900,000. On December 1, 1980 X adopts a plan of complete liquidation. On December 15, 1980 X sells the J division to M and receives in exchange a $100,000 qualifying installment obligation which X immediately transfers to B as a first liquidating distribution. On January 15, 1981, X merges with and into unrelated N corporation. Under the plan of merger, N is the surviving corporation, all of the assets of the K division are acquired by N, and N assumes or takes subject to all of the liabilities of the K division, the shares of X are cancelled, and in exchange B receives directly from N a $900,000 installment obligation issued by N. The transaction is a liquidation to which section 337 applies since X, within the 12-month period beginning on December 1, 1980 (the date on which X adopted a plan of complete liquidation), has distributed all of its assets (consisting of the $100,000 M note and the $900,000 N note). Accordingly, B is a qualifying and shareholder and both the M note and the N note are qualifying installment obligations in the hands of B. Since B received no payment in 1980, no amended return is required to be filed by B. However, B must allocate B's total $100,000 basis $10,000 to the M note and $90,000 to the N note.

(f) Coordination with other provisions—(1) In general. Except as specifically provided in section 453 (h)(1)(C) and proposed §1.453(i) (relating to installment sales of depreciable property to certain closely related persons), whenever it shall be relevant to any determination under any provision of the Internal Revenue Code, a qualifying installment obligation distributed to a qualifying shareholder in a liquidation to which section 337 applies (as defined in paragraph (d) of this section) shall be treated as if the obligation had been received by the shareholder in an installment sale of shares directly to the person issuing the installment obligation.

(2) Examples. The following examples illustrate the provision of this paragraph (in each case, it is assumed that the liquidating corporation is not a collapsible corporation (as defined in section 341(b)):

Example (1). A owns all of the stock of T corporation. Substantially all of the assets of T are inventory property. T adopts a plan of complete liquidation, promptly sells all of its assets to B corporation in exchange for a $1 million qualifying installment obligation, and distributes the qualifying installment obligation to A in completion of its liquidation. The installment obligation bears stated interest at less than the test rate prescribed in section 483 and the regulations thereunder. In the hands of T section 483 would have no application to the installment obligation since it was issued in exchange for T's inventory. See section 483(f)(3). However, since in the hands of A the installment obligation will be treated as if received by A on a sale of A's T shares directly to B, section 483 will apply to the installment obligation in A's hands.

Example (2). C owns all of the stock of Y corporation. A substantial part of the assets of Y consists of stocks and securities traded on an established securities market. Y adopts a plan of complete liquidation, sells all of its stock and securities holdings to B corporation (which is closely held) in exchange for a $1 million installment obligation (bearing adequate stated interest), sells all of its other assets to another purchaser for cash, and distributes the cash and qualifying installment obligation to C in completion of its liquidation to which section 337 applies. In the hands of Y, the B installment obligation may carry original issue discount (as defined in section 1232(b)(1)) since the obligation was issued for stock and securities traded on an established securities market. However, in the hands of C the installment obligation is not an original issue discount obligation since it is treated as having been received by C in a direct sale to B corporation of the shares of Y and neither the Y shares nor the B installment obligation is traded on an established securities market.

Example (3). The shares of Q corporation are traded on an established securities market. D owns more than 5% of the shares of Q. The assets of Q consist of normal business properties. Q adopts a plan of complete liquidation and sells all of its assets to L corporation in exchange for cash and qualifying installment obligations that are not readily tradable. Q corporation promptly distributes solely cash to the shareholders of Q holding 5% or less of the outstanding shares of Q, and distributes cash and the L qualifying installment obligations to the shareholders who own more than 5% of the outstanding shares of Q, including D, thereby completing its liquidation to which section 337 applies. In the hands of Q, the L installment obligations would not be original issue discount obligations since they were not part of an issue a portion of which is traded on an established securities market nor issued to Q for stock or securities traded on an established securities market. However, in the hands of D, the L installment obligation may qualify as an original issue discount obligation since the shares of Q were traded on an established securities market and D is treated as having received the L installment obligation in a direct sale of Q shares to L.

(g) Effective dates—(1) In general. The provisions of this section (§1.453-2) shall apply to distributions of qualifying installment obligations made after March 31, 1980. The date of the distribution of the installment notes, not the date the corporation adopts the plan of complete liquidation, is controlling.

(2) Examples. The effective date provisions of section 453(h) are illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On December 1, 1979 X corporation adopts a plan of complete liquidation and promptly sells all of its assets to unrelated Z for $400,000 cash and a $600,000 long-term installment note bearing adequate stated interest. On June 1, 1980 X distributes the cash and the note to A, its sole shareholder, completing the liquidation to which section 337 applies. Assume X is not a collapsible corporation. A may elect to report the installment note on the installment method and report gain when payments are received. A must elect installment method reporting because prior to October 20, 1980 installment method reporting was available only to taxpayers who affirmatively elected it. Had X distributed the installment note after October 19, 1980, A would have been required to report the note on the installment method unless A had elected otherwise.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that the long-term installment note does not call for fixed payments aggregating $600,000 (plus interest). Instead, the note calls for annual payments equal to a stated percentage of the income of X for a specified number of years, and $600,000 is the stated maximum amount (exclusive of interest) payable on the note. A may not elect to report the note on the installment method because contingent installment obligations were not eligible for installment method reporting prior to October 20, 1980. Had X distributed the contingent installment obligation after October 19, 1980, however, A would be required to report the note on the installment method unless A had elected otherwise.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Installment Obligations Received in Certain Nonrecognition Exchanges

LR-186-80

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations relating to installment obligations received in certain nonrecognition transactions. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980 [Pub. L. 96-471, 1980-2 C.B. 489]. These regulations would provide guidance to those taxpayers receiving installment obligations in certain nonrecognition exchanges and to personnel of the Internal Revenue Service who administer the installment sale provisions.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by July 2, 1984. Except as otherwise provided in this document, the amendments are proposed to apply to certain nonrecognition exchanges occurring after October 19, 1980.

ADDRESS: Send comments and a request for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR-186-80), Washington, DC 20224.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Linda M. Kroening of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20224. (Attention: CC:LR:T) (202-566-3288).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 453(f)(6) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 relating to installment obligations received in certain nonrecognition exchanges. These amendments are proposed to reflect the amendment of section 453 by section 2 of the Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980 (94 Stat. 2247). The amendments are to be issued under the authority contained in sections 453(j) and 7805 of the Code (94 Stat. 2247, 68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 453(j), 7805).

Under prior law, except as otherwise required by the 30-percent initial payment limitation, an installment obligation received as boot in an exchange of like-kind property described in section 1031 qualified for installment method reporting. The value of the like-kind property received by the seller was considered a payment in the year of the exchange and was taken into account in determining both the selling price and the contract price. The Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980 reverses this rule. The value of the like-kind property received is no longer considered a payment in the year of sale nor is it taken into account in determining either the selling price or the contract price. This change in the treatment of the receipt of like-kind property does not change the amount of gain which a taxpayer will recognize on the sale but does defer the time when the taxpayer reports the gain. Under prior law, a taxpayer reported gain upon receipt of the like-kind property. Under the new law, the taxpayer does not report gain with respect to an installment obligation until he receives payment on or disposes of the installment obligation.

Under the Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980, the total contract price in a like-kind exchange in which an installment obligation is received as boot (property received in addition to the like-kind property) is the sum of cash received, the fair market value of other property (i.e., property other than like-kind property) received, and the face amount (less any discount required under section 483) of the installment obligation.

The basis of the like-kind property received (determined under section 1031(d)) will be determined as if the obligation had been satisfied at its face value less any discount for unstated interest. The taxpayer's basis in the transferred property is allocated first to the like-kind property received (but not in excess of its fair market value) and any remaining basis is used to determine the gross profit ratio.

The Act also provides that, under a plan of corporate reorganization, exchanges described in section 356(a) shall be treated similarly to section 1031(b) exchanges if the installment boot is not treated as a dividend. The Act excludes from installment method reporting any installment obligation which is treated as a dividend or would be treated as a dividend if the corporation had had sufficient earnings and profits to distribute a dividend.

These regulations also permit installment method reporting in certain nonrecognition exchanges (for example, section 351(b) exchanges) which are not explicitly dealt with in the Act. For these nonrecognition exchanges, the same basic rules apply: basis in the transferred property is first allocated to the nonrecognition property received, but not in excess of the fair market value of that property. Any excess basis is allocated to the installment note and any nonqualifying property.

Section 1.453-1 contains material relating to installment sales by dealers in personal property. It is intended that eventually all of the regulations relating to installment sales will be amended to reflect the amendments to section 453 made by the Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980. Until those amendments are adopted, provisions in §1.453-1 which relate to matters not covered in this document or other proposed regulations relating to installment method reporting will remain in effect.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this proposed rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required.

Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, no Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is required by chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code.

COMMENTS AND REQUEST FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably seven copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is Phoebe A. Mix of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, on matters of both substance and style.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, the following amendments are proposed to be made to 26 CFR Part 1:

Paragraph. Section 1.453-1 is amended by revising paragraph (f) to read as follows:

§1.453-1 Installment method reporting for sales or real property and casual sales of personal property.

* * * * *

(f) Installment obligations received in certain nonrecognition exchanges—(1) Exchanges described in section 1031(b)—(i) In general. The provisions of paragraph (f)(1) of this section apply to exchanges described in section 1031(b) ("section 1031(b) exchanges") in which the taxpayer receives as boot (property which is "other property" under section 1031 (b)) an installment obligation issued by the other party to the exchange, as well as property with respect to which no gain or loss is recognized ("permitted property" for purposes of paragraph (f)(1) of this section). However, an exchange otherwise described in section 1036 in which the receipt of an installment obligation is treated as a dividend (or would be treated as a dividend if the issuing corporation had adequate earnings and profits) is not a section 1031(b) exchange for purposes of this section.

(ii) Exclusion from payment. Receipt of permitted property will not be considered payment for purposes of paragraph (c) of this section.

(iii) Installment method determinations. In a section 1031(b) exchange, the taxpayer's basis in the property transferred by the taxpayer, including nondeductible expenses of the exchange, will first be allocated to the permitted property received by the taxpayer up to, but not in excess of, the fair market value of such property. If the taxpayer's basis exceeds the fair market value of the permitted property, that excess amount of basis is "excess basis." In making all required installment method determinations, the exchange is treated as if the taxpayer had made an installment sale of appreciated property (with a basis equal to the amount of excess basis) in which the consideration received was the installment obligation and any other boot. In a section 1031(b) exchange, only net qualifying indebtedness is taken into account in determining the amount of qualifying indebtedness (as defined in §1.453-1A(b)(2)(iv)). For this purpose, net qualifying indebtedness is the excess of—

(A) Liabilities of the taxpayer (or liabilities encumbering the property) assumed or taken subject to by the other party to the exchange as part of the consideration to the taxpayer, over

(B) The sum of any net cash paid (cash paid less any cash received) by the taxpayer in the exchange and any liability assumed or taken subject to by the taxpayer in the exchange.

Therefore, for purposes of installment method determinations, the selling price is the sum of the face value of the installment obligation (reduced by any portion of the obligation characterized as interest by section 483 or 1232), any net qualifying indebtedness, any cash received (in excess of any cash paid) by the taxpayer, and the fair market value of any other boot. The basis is the excess basis. The total contract price is the selling price less any net qualifying indebtedness that does not exceed the excess basis. Finally, payment in the year of exchange includes any net qualifying indebtedness that exceeds the excess basis.

(iv) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (f)(1) of this section are illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). In 1981, A makes a section 1031(b) exchange of real property held for investment (basis $400,000) for permitted property worth $200,000, and an $800,000 installment obligation issued by the other party to the exchange bearing adequate stated interest. Neither the property transferred by A nor the property received in the exchange is mortgaged property. A's basis of $400,000 is allocated first to the permitted property received, up to the fair market value of $200,000. A's excess basis is $200,000 ($400,000—$200,000). Since the installment obligation is the only boot received by A in the exchange, A's entire excess basis of $200,000 is allocable to it. Under the installment method, the selling price is $800,000 (the face amount of the installment obligation), and the contract price is also $800,000 (selling price less qualifying indebtedness, $800,000—0). The gross profit is $600,000 (selling price less excess basis allocated to the installment obligation, $800,000—$200,000), and the gross profit ratio is 75% ($600,000/$800,000). A recognizes no gain until payments are received on the installment obligation. As A receives payments (exclusive of interest) on the installment obligation, 75% of each payment will be gain attributable to the exchange and 25% of each payment will be recovery of basis. A will hold the permitted property received in the exchange with a basis of $200,000.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that in the exchange A receives permitted property worth $200,000, a $600,000 installment obligations, and $200,000 in cash. A is treated as having sold appreciated property (basis equal to the $200,000 excess basis) for $200,000 cash and a $600,000 installment obligation. As in example (1), the contract price and the selling price are $800,000, the gross profit is $600,000, and the gross profit ratio is 75%. Accordingly, A will recognize gain of $150,000 on receipt of the cash (75% of the $200,000 payment). A holds the permitted property with a basis of $200,000.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (2), except that A does not receive $200,000 in cash. Instead, the property transferred by A in the exchange was subject to a mortgage (meeting the definition of qualifying indebtedness) of $200,000 to which the other party to the exchange took subject. The permitted property received by A in the exchange was not subject to a mortgage. A is treated as having sold appreciated property (basis equal to $200,000 excess basis) for $600,000 cash and $200,000 net relief of mortgage liability. The mortgage liability of which A is deemed relieved ($200,000), reduced by any cash paid by

A and any mortgage liability encumbering the like-kind property received by A in the simultaneous exchange ($0), is treated as qualifying indebtedness. Since the qualifying indebtedness ($200,000) does not exceed A's excess basis ($200,000), B's taking subject to such indebtedness does not constitute payment to A in the year of exchange. Under the installment method, the selling price is $800,000 and the total contract price is $600,000 (selling price of $800,000 less $200,000 of qualifying indebtedness that does not exceed A's excess basis). Gross profit is also $600,000 ($800,000 selling price less $200,000 excess basis), and the gross profit ratio is 1 ($600,000/$600,000). A recognizes no gain until payments are received on the installment obligation. As A receives payment (exclusive of interest) on the $600,000 installment obligation, the full amount received will be gain attributable to the exchange. A holds the permitted property with a basis of $200,000.

Example (4). The facts are the same as in example (2), except that A's basis in the property transferred by A was only $160,000. Since A's basis first must be allocated to permitted property received in the exchange up to the fair market value ($200,000) of that permitted property, there is no excess basis. Accordingly, A will recognize gain equal to the full amount of cash received ($200,000), and will hold the installment obligation at a basis of zero. A will hold the permitted property at a basis of $160,00.

(2) Certain exchanges described in section 356(a)—(i) In general. The provisions of paragraph (f)(2) of this section apply to exchanges described in section 356(a)(1) ("section 356(a)(1) exchanges") in which the taxpayer receives as boot (property which is "other property" under section 356(a)(1)(B)) an installment obligation issued by a qualifying corporation which is not treated as a dividend to the taxpayer. For purposes of section 453(f)(6) and paragraph (f)(2) of this section, any such section 356(a)(1) exchange shall be treated as a disposition of property by the taxpayer to the qualifying corporation and an acquisition of such property by the qualifying corporation from the taxpayer. If section 354 would apply to the exchange but for the receipt of boot, the term "qualifying corporation" means a corporation the stock of which could be received by the taxpayer in the exchange without recognition of gain or loss. If section 355 would apply to the exchange but for the receipt of boot, the term "qualifying corporation" means the distributing corporation (referred to in section 355(a)(1)(A)). Receipt of an installment obligation is treated as a dividend if section 356(a)(2) applies (determined without regard to the presence of absence of accumulated earnings and profits), or if section 356(e) (relating to certain exchanges for section 306 stock) applies to the taxpayer's receipt of the installment obligation.

(ii) Exclusion from payment. Receipt of permitted property shall not be considered payment for purposes of paragraph (c) of this section. For purposes of paragraph (f)(1) of this section, "permitted property" means property, the receipt of which does not result in recognition of gain under section 356(a)(1) (i.e., stock of a qualifying corporation).

(iii) Installment method determinations. Installment method determinations with respect to an installment obligation received in an exchange to which paragraph (f)(2) of this section applies shall be made in accordance with the rules prescribed in paragraph (f)(1)(iii) of this section. In applying such rules, a section 356(a)(1) exchange shall be treated as a section 1031(b) exchange and permitted property shall mean permitted property described in prargraph (f)(2) of this section.

(iv) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (f)(2) of this section are illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). T corporation and P corporation are unrelated closely held corporations. A owns 10% of the stock of T. A is not related to any other T stockholder or to any P stockholder. S corporation is a wholly-owned subsidiary of P. Pursuant to a plan of reorganization, T merges with and into S. In the merger, the T shares held by A are exchanged for shares of P worth $100,000 and a $300,000 installment obligation (bearing adequate interest) issued by P. In the merger the other stockholders of T exchange their T shares solely for P shares worth, in the aggregate, $3,600,000. The merger is a reorganization desribed in sections 368(a)(1)(A) and (a)(2)(D), and T, S, and P each is a party to the reorganization under section 368(b). P is a qualifying corporation and A is party to a section 356(a)(1) exchange in which receipt by A of the installment obligation will not be treated as a dividend to A. Because, for purposes of section 453(f)(6), this transaction is treated as a direct exchange between P and A, no gain or loss is recognized by S with respect to the P obligation. Assume A's basis in the T shares exchanged by A was $150,000. A's basis is allocated first to the permitted property (P shares) received, up to the fair market value of $100,000. A's excess basis is $50,000 ($150,000—$100,000). Since the installment obligation is the only boot received by A in the exchange, the entire excess basis of $50,000 is allocable to it. Under the installment method, the contract price is $300,000 (face amount of the installment obligation), the gross profit is $250,000 (contract price less $50,000 excess basis allocated to the installment obligation), and the gross profit ratio is ⅚ ($250,000/$300,000). A recognizes no gain until payments are received on the installment obligation. As A receives payments (exclusive of interests) on the installment obligation, ⅚ths of each payment will be gain attributable to the exchange and ⅙th of each payment will be recovery of basis. A will hold the permitted property (P stock) received in the exchange at a basis of $100,000.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1). B, who also owns 10% of the stock of T directly and owns no other stock of T by attribution within the meaning of 318(a), exchanges the T shares in the merger for a $400,000 installment obligation issued by P (bearing adequate interest). Although section 356(a)(1) will not apply to this exchange because B receives no P stock in the transaction and the character of the gain is determined under section 302(a), for purposes of section 453 and paragraph (a) of this section, B is treated as having sold the T shares to P in exchange for P's installment obligation. B will report the installment sale on the installment method unless B elects under paragraph (e) of this section not to report the transaction on the installment method. If, by reason of constructive ownership of T shares under section 318(a) and failure to meet the requirements of section 302(c)(2), the character of the transaction as to B were determined under section 302(d), section 453 would not apply to the exchange by B.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in examples (1) and (2), except that the P stock is voting stock and S merges into T in a reorganization described in section 368(a)(2)(E). The results are the same as in examples (1) and (2).

Example (4)(i). T Corporation and larger P Corporation are unrelated public corporations the stock of each of which is widely held. A is a stockholder of T. S Corporation is a wholly owned subsidiary of P. On December 31, 1981, pursuant to a plan of reorganization which provides for a "note option" election, T merges with and into S. In the merger, A exercises the note option and the T shares held by A are exchanged for a $30,000 installment obligation (bearing adequate interest) issued by P, 1,000 P shares (worth $10 per share on the date of merger), and a non-negotiable certificate evidencing a right to receive (within 5 years from the date of merger) up to 1,000 additional P shares (plus adequate interest) if certain earnings conditions are satisfied. Neither the installment obligation nor the certificate evidencing the right to receive additional P shares is readily tradable within the meaning of §1.453-1A(c)(4)(iv)(C). There is a valid business reason for not issuing all of the P shares immediately. Certain of the other T shareholders exercise the note option and exchange their T shares for a similar package. Other T shareholders do not exercise the note option and receive in the merger P shares plus a non-negotiable right to receive up to an equal number of additional P shares (plus adequate interest) within 5 years. In the aggregate, the total outstanding T shares are exchanged for 20% P installment obligations, 40% P shares, and rights to receive an equal number of additional P shares within 5 years. The merger of T into S qualifies as a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(A) and (a)(2)(D). P is a qualifying corporation, the P shares received and which may subsequently be received by A are permitted property, and the exchange to which A is a party is a section 356(a)(1) exchange.

(ii) Assume A's basis in the T shares exchanged by A was $25,000. A's basis is allocated first to permitted property (P shares) up to fair market value. In the exchange A has received 1,000 P shares (worth $10,000) and may receive up to an additional 1,000 P shares in the future. In allocating A's basis, it is assumed that all contingencies contemplated by the merger agreement will be met or otherwise resolved in a manner that will maximize the consideration A will receive. It is further assumed that each P share, when received, will have a fair market value equal to the fair market value ($10) of a P share at the date of merger. Accordingly, since A may receive a maximum of 2,000 P shares, $20,000 (2,000 × $10) of A's basis will be allocated to the 1,000 P shares A has received ($10 per share) and to A's right to receive up to an additional 1,000 P shares (at $10 per share). A's excess basis of $5,000 ($25,000 − $20,000) is allocated to the $30,000 P installment obligation.

(iii) In 1983 the earnings condition is fully satisfied and A receives an additional 1,000 P shares (plus adequate interest). Each P share held by A has a basis of $10.

(iv) Assume instead that the earnings condition is only partly satisfied and, by the close of 1986, A has received only an additional 600 P shares and is not entitled to receive any further P shares. Initially, each P share received by A was assigned a basis of $10. Of A's $25,000 basis in the T shares exchanged, $4,000 ($20,000 initially allocated to P shares received and to be received less $16,000 (1,600 P shares × $10)) now must be accounted for. The $4,000 of remaining basis will be assigned to the P shares then held by A. Thus, if A continues to hold all 1,600 P shares, A's basis in each P share will be increased by $2.50 ($4,000 divided by 1,600 P shares). If A previously sold 800 P shares and retains only 800 P shares, A's basis in each retained P share will be increased by $5 ($4,000 divided by 800 P shares). If A retains no P shares, and if all of the additional 600 P shares were issued to A and sold by A before the final year of the five year earn-out term (i.e., by the end of 1985), A's remaining basis of $4,000 will be added to the basis at which A holds the unpaid portion of the P installment obligation (up to but not in excess of the maximum amount remaining payable under that obligation less A's remaining basis in the installment obligation determined immediately before the addition to basis). If A has previously disposed of the P installment obligation, so that A holds neither P shares nor the P installment obligation to which the remaining $4,000 of A's basis can be allocated, A will be allowed a $4,000 loss in 1986. Similarly, if A continues to hold the P installment obligation but the facts are such that the maximum amount thereafter payable under the obligation is only $3,000 in excess of A's basis in the obligation determined immediately before assignment of A's remaining $4,000 basis, $3,000 of that remaining basis would be assigned to the installment obligation and P would be allowed a $1,000 loss in 1986.

Example (5). Pursuant to a plan to acquire all the stock of T corporation, P purchases 90% of the T stock for cash. To acquire the remaining 10% of T stock P creates S corporation and transfers P stock and P's newly issued installment notes to S in exchange for all of S's stock. The P notes are not readily tradable. Thereafter S merges into T, the P stock and P's installment notes are distributed to the T minority shareholders, and the S stock held by P is automatically converted into T stock. Assume that for federal tax purposes the existence of S is disregarded and the transaction is treated as a sale of T stock to P in exchange for P stock and P's installment notes. The minority shareholders will report the gain realized on the receipt of the P installment notes on the installment method unless they elect otherwise. The receipt of P stock will be treated as a payment in the year of sale.

Example (6). The facts are the same as example (5) except P transferred only P's installment notes to S and only these notes were distributed to T minority shareholders. As in example (5) the transaction is treated as a sale of T stock to P in exchange for P's installment notes. Each minority shareholder realizing gain on the receipt of the installment notes will report the gain on the installment method unless electing otherwise.

(3) Other partial recognition exchanges—(i) In general. The provisions of paragraph (f)(3) of this section apply to exchanges not described in paragraph (f)(1) or (2) of this section in which a taxpayer, in exchange for appreciated property, receives both permitted property (i.e., property with respect to which no gain or loss would be recognized but which, in the hands of the taxpayer, would have as basis for determining gain or loss the same basis in whole or in part as the property exchanged) and boot that includes an installment obligation issued by the other party to the exchange. Ordinarily, the installment method rules set forth in paragraph (f)(1)(ii) and (iii) of this section will apply to an exchange described in paragraph (f)(3) of this section subject to such variations, if any, as may be required under the applicable provisions of the Code.

(ii) Exchanges to which section 351 applies. If a taxpayer receives, in an exchange to which section 351(b) applies (a "section 351(b) exchange"), an installment obligation that is not a security within the meaning of section 351(a), the installment obligation is boot and the stock and securities (within the meaning of section 351(a)) are permitted property (within the meaning of paragraph (f)(1)(ii) of this section). The taxpayer will report the installment obligation on the installment method and any other boot received will be treated as a payment made in the year of the exchange. In applying the rules of paragraph (f)(1)(iii) of this section to a section 351(b) exchange the excess basis is the amount, if any, by which the taxpayer's basis in the property transferred (plus any cash transferred) by the taxpayer exceeds the sum of the transferred liabilities which are not treated as money received under section 357 plus the fair market value of permitted property received by the taxpayer. In determining selling price and total contract price, transferred liabilities which are not treated as money received under section 357 shall be disregarded. For purposes of paragraph (f)(3)(ii) of this section, transferred liabilities are liabilities described in section 357(a)(2). Solely for the purpose of applying section 358(a)(1), the taxpayer shall be treated as if the taxpayer elected not to report receipt of the installment obligation on the installment method. Under section 362(a)(1) the corporation's basis in the property received from the taxpayer is the taxpayer's basis in the property increased by the gain recognized by the taxpayer at the time of the exchange. As the taxpayer recognizes gain on the installment method, the corporation will increase its basis in the property by an amount equal to the amount of gain recognized by the taxpayer.

(iii) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (f)(3) of this section are illustrated by the following examples. In each example, assume that adequate stated interest means both a reasonable rate of interest within the meaning of any applicable regulation promulgated under section 385 and a rate of interest not less than the test rate prescribed in the regulations under section 483, and that the debt to equity ratio of the issuing corporation is a permissible ratio under any applicable regulation promulgated under section 385.

Example (1). A owns Blackacre, unimproved real property, with a basis of $300,000. The fair market value of Blackacre is $700,000. Blackacre is encumbered by a longstanding mortgage of $200,000. A transfers Blackacre, subject to the mortgage, to newly organized X corporation. A receives in exchange all of the stock of X, worth $400,000, and a $100,000 installment obligation (bearing adequate stated interest) issued by X. A realizes $400,000 of gain on the exchange. The installment obligation calls for a single payment of the full $100,000 face amount three years following the date of issue. The installment obligation is not a "security" within the meaning of section 351(a), and thus the exchange by A is a transaction described in section 351(b). The installment obligation is boot received by A in the exchange and the X stock is permitted property received by A in exchange. In applying the provisions of paragraph (f)(1)(ii) and (iii) of this section to a section 351(b) exchange, reference is required to section 357(a) under which the $200,000 mortgage liability is not treated as money or other property received by A in the exchange, and to section 358(a)(1) under which the basis of the X stock in the hands of A will be determined. These rules apply as follows: Neither receipt of the X stock nor relief of the mortgage encumbrance is treated as payment to A and thus A will recognize no gain in the year of the exchange. A's basis of $300,000 in Blackacre is reduced by the $200,000 mortgage from which A is deemed relieved in the exchange. The remaining basis of $100,000 is allocated to the X stock (but not in excess of the fair market value of the X stock); since the fair market value of the X stock is $400,000, the basis of the X stock in the hands of A is $100,000. Accordingly, in A's hands the installment obligation has a basis of zero. In the hands of X, the initial basis of Blackacre, determined under section 362(a), is $300,000 (the basis of the property in the hands of A), increased by the amount of gain recognized by A at the time of the transfer ($0)). As A receives payments on the installment obligation and recognizes gain, X's basis in Blackacre will be increased, at that time, in an amount equal to the gain recognized by A. Thus, if the $100,000 installment obligation is paid in full on the third anniversary date, A will recognize gain of $100,000 (because of A's basis in the installment obligation is zero) and X at that time will increase the basis at which it holds Blackacre by $100,000. If in the third year X had sold the property for cash before making payment on the installment obligation, X would recognize a loss of $100,000 when X paid the obligation in that amount to A on the third anniversary date.

Example (2). B owns Whiteacre, unencumbered, unimproved real property, with a basis of $250,000. The fair market value of Whiteacre is $300,000. A transfers Whiteacre to newly organized Y corporation in exchange for all of the stock of Y corporation (worth $200,000) and a $100,000 installment obligation (bearing adequate interest). The installment obligation is payable in full on the second anniversary of the date of issue. The installment obligation is not a "security" within the meaning of section 351(a), and thus the transaction is a section 351(b) exchange. Applying the rules summarized in example (1) to the facts of this case, receipt of the installment obligation is not treated as payment to A, $200,000 of A's basis of $250,000 in Whiteacre is allocated to the Y stock (equal to the fair market value of the Y stock), and the excess basis of $50,000 is allocated to the installment obligation. In the hands of Y, the basis of Whiteacre initially is $250,000, and will be increased by $50,000 when the installment obligation is paid and A recognizes gain of $50,000.

Example (3). D owns a machine which is unemcumbered 5-year recovery property with an adjusted basis of $500,000. The recomputed basis (as defined in section 1245(a)(2)) of the machine in the hands of D is $1 million. The fair market value of the machine also is $1 million. D transfers the machine to newly organzied X Corporation, and E, an unrelated individual, simultaneously transfers property worth $1 million to X Corporation. D receives in exchange 400 shares of X common stock worth $400,000, a $400,000 15-year debenture issued by X (worth its face amount), and a $200,000 installment obligation (bearing adequate interest) issued by X. The installment obligation calls for a single payment of the full $200,000 face amount two years following the date of issue. E receives in the exchange 1,000 shares of X common stock worth $1 million. D and E are in control (as defined in section 368(c)) of X immediately after the exchange. The debenture received by D is a "security" within the meaning of section 351(a), but the installment obligation received by D is not a "security" within the meaning of that section and thus the exchange by D is a transaction described in section 351(b). The installment obligation is boot received by D in the exchange and the X stock and X debenture are permitted property received by D in the exchange. Since the aggregate fair market value ($800,000) of the X stock ($400,000) and the X debenture ($400,000) received by D exceeds D's $500,000 adjusted basis in the machine, all of that basis is allocated proportionately among the items of permitted property. Thus, D will hold the X stock with a basis of $250,000 and the X debenture with a basis of $250,000. Since there is no excess basis, in the hands of D the installment obligation has a basis of zero. In the hands of X, the adjusted basis of the machine remains $500,000. When D receives payment from X on the $200,000 installment obligation, D will recognize gain of $200,000, all of which gain will be treated as ordinary income. See sections 1245(a)(1) and 453B(a). At that time, X's adjusted basis in the machine will be increased in an amount equal to the $200,000 gain recognized by D.

Example (4). In 1976 H and W purchased Blackacre as their principal residence for $50,000. In 1981 H and W, both of whom are less than 55 years of age, sold Blackacre to A for $90,000: $15,000 cash, A's assumption of the $40,000 mortgage, and A's promise to pay H and W $7,000 (with adequate stated interest) in each of the next 5 years. Within 2 years of the sale of Blackacre, H and W acquire Whiteacre, an unencumbered property, which will be their principal residence, for $80,000. Of the $40,000 gain that H and W realized upon the sale of Whiteacre, $30,000 will not be recognized pursuant to the provisions of section 1034. Unless H and W elect not to report the transaction on the installment method, they will treat the $10,000 gain to be recognized as the gross profit for purposes of calculating the gross profit ratio. Accordingly the gross profit ratio is ⅓ ($10,000 gross profit/$50,000 contract price) and H and W will report as gain $3,000 (⅓ × $15,000) in the year of the sale and $1,400 (⅓ × $7,000) in each of the next five years.

(4) Installment obligations received as distributions in redemptions of stock pursuant to section 302(a). If a corporation redeems its stock and the redemption is treated as a distribution in part or full payment in exchange for the stock under section 302(a), then an installment obligation which meets the requirements of section 453 and is distributed in the redemption shall be reported on the installment method unless the taxpayer elects otherwise.

Example. A owns 10% of the stock of X corporation and is not considered as owning (under section 318(a)) any other shares of X corporation. X redeems all of A's X shares and distributes its installment obligation to A in full payment. The reduction is treated as a sale of the X shares by A under section 302(b)(3). A will report any gain realized in the redemption on the installment method unless A elects otherwise.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Accelerated Cost Recovery System

LR-185-81

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations relating to the Accelerated Cost Recovery System (hereinafter referred to as ACRS) for recovering capital costs of eligible property. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 [Pub. L. 97-34, 1981-2 C.B. 256] (hereinafter referred to as ERTA), the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 [Pub. L. 97-248, 1982-2 C.B. 462] (hereinafter referred to as TEFRA) and the Technical Corrections Act of 1982 [Pub. L. 97-448, 1983-1 C.B. 451]. Prior law allowed as a depreciation deduction a reasonable allowance for exhaustion, wear and tear, or obsolescence of eligible property. ERTA replaced this prior law depreciation system with ACRS. Generally, under ACRS cost recovery deductions are determined by the use of tables which reflect the use of accelerated methods of cost recovery over predetermined recovery periods. These recovery periods are generally unrelated to, and shorter than, prior law "useful lives." TEFRA repealed the more accelerated tables for personal property which were to be effective for property placed in service after 1984. These regulations would provide taxpayers with the guidance needed to comply with the Acts.

DATES: Written comments must be delivered or mailed by May 16, 1984. In general, these regulations apply to eligible property placed in service after December 31, 1980.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under sections 167, 168, 178, and 1016 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. These amendments are proposed to conform the regulations to sections 201 and 203 of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981(Pub. L. 97-34; 95 Stat. 203, 221) [1981-2 C.B. 256, 275, 283], sections 205 and 206 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (Pub. L. 97-248; 96 Stat. 427, 431) [1982-2 C.B. 462, 474, 476], and section 102 of the Technical Corrections Act of 1982 (Pub. L. 97-448; 96 Stat. 2367) [1983-1 C.B. 451, 452]. These amendments are to be issued under the authority contained in section 168 (95 Stat. 203; 26 U.S.C. 168) and section 7805 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

ACCELERATED COST RECOVERY SYSTEM

Section 168, as added by ERTA, is a replacement for the prior law depreciation system for recovering the capital costs of trade or business assets or investment assets. Generally, this new Accelerated Cost Recovery System (ACRS), added by section 168, provides for the recovery of capital costs of eligible property by the use of tables, which reflects the use of accelerated methods of cost recovery over predetermined recovery periods. These recovery periods are generally unrelated to, and shorter than, those under prior law. Unlike prior law, ACRS does not make any distinction between new and used property. This new capital cost recovery system is mandatory for all eligible property, hereinafter referred to as "recovery property." Recovery property includes both real and personal property. Generally, to be eligible for ACRS property must be (1) tangible property of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation, (2) used in a trade or business or held for the production of income, and (3) placed in service by the taxpayer after December 31, 1980. Recovery property does not include (1) tangible depreciable property the taxpayer properly elects to depreciate under a method not expressed in terms of years, (2) public utility property where the taxpayer does not use a normalization method of accounting, and (3) certain pre-1981 property involved in post-1980 "churning" transactions to obtain the benefits of ACRS.

In addition, recovery property does not include intangible property. The Internal Revenue Service is continuing to examine the extent to which certain types of property, such as computer software and master motion picture negatives, may constitute intangible property that is ineligible for ACRS. The Internal Revenue Service is also examining the manner in which other provisions of the Code (such as section 48(k)) may apply if such property is considered eligible for ACRS. Accordingly, these issues have been reserved in these proposed regulations and are the subject of a recently opened project, under which regulations will be issued as soon as possible. In the meantime, the Service will continue to administer the area in accordance with its current position. Comments on these questions from interested persons are welcome.

The allowable ACRS deduction is generally determined by multiplying the unadjusted basis of the property by the applicable percentage contained in the relevant ACRS tables. The prior law concept of salvage value is abolished in determining deductions under this new system. Thus, the entire cost or other basis of the property is recovered under ACRS. The proposed regulations provide rules for determining the allowable deduction when the basis of the property is redetermined (e.g., where there is a readjustment of the purchase price).

Under ACRS, the cost of personal property must be recovered over a 3-year, 5-year, 10-year, or 15-year recovery period (unless the taxpayer elects a longer recovery period under rules described below).

Real property is recovered over a 15-year recovery period (unless a longer period is elected). With respect to personal property, a full year's recovery deduction is allowed in the first recovery year regardless of when the asset is placed in service during that taxable year. No recovery deduction is allowed in the taxable year in which personal property is disposed of. The proposed regulations provide rules for computing the allowable deduction where the taxpayer has a taxable year of less than 12 months. In addition, for real property, the recovery for the year the asset is placed in service or is disposed of is based on the number of months the property is in service during the year, regardless of whether the taxpayer has a normal or short taxable year.

Taxpayers may elect to recover the cost of eligible property using the straight line method over the applicable recovery period or over a longer optional recovery period. For example, taxpayers may recover the capital costs of 5-year recovery property over a 5-year, 12-year, or 25-year period or the cost of real property over a 15-year, 35-year, or 45-year period, using the straight line method. Except for real property, the election applies to all recovery property of the particular class placed in service in the same taxable year. Generally, this election is irrevocable. The proposed regulations provide tables containing the applicable percentages when an optional straight line election is made.

Taxpayers may, under certain conditions, elect to recover the capital costs of certain recovery property in a mass asset account. If the election is made, mass assets which have the same asset depreciation range (ADR) midpoint life as of January 1, 1981, and which are placed in service in the same taxable year, will be accounted for in a single account. As a consequence of the election, upon the disposition of an asset from that account, the taxpayer will generally include an income the full amount realized on the disposition. The unadjusted basis of the asset disposed of will continue to be included in determining the recovery deduction for the account. The proposed regulations define mass assets, provide rules for determining when dispositions occur for purposes of investment tax credit recapture, and provide rules for recovering any increase in basis resulting from such recapture. The proposed regulations also provide rules relating to the recognition of gain or loss on the disposition of recovery property other than from a mass asset account.

Under ACRS, component cost recovery is not permitted. Thus, the same recovery period and method generally must be used for a building and all structural components. The recovery period for a component generally begins at the later of the time the component or the building is placed in service.

Under the proposed regulations, a building is considered placed in service when a significant portion is made available for use in a finished condition. The taxpayer at that time begins recovery of so much of the capitalized costs as are properly allocable to the portion of the building in service. Similarly, as portions of the building are later made available, recovery of the properly allocable costs will commence.

Capitalized expenditures, which are section 1250 property, paid or incurred after the building is completed are recovered under the same period and method as are used for the building, recovery beginning when the improvement is placed in service. However, if a capitalized expenditure qualifies as a "substantial improvement," a new recovery period and method are permitted, recovery beginning when the improvement is placed in service.

Similarly, with respect to personal property, amounts paid or incurred after the property is placed in service, which are properly chargeable to capital account, are treated as newly-purchased property for ACRS purposes. That property is assigned to the same recovery class as the property to which the expenditure relates. Any applicable recovery period and method may be selected for such improvement, recovery beginning when the improvement is placed in service.

Rules are also provided clarifying the results when a lessee makes improvements on leased property.

The proposed regulations clarify the rules which prevent taxpayers from converting pre-1981 property into post-1980 recovery property. Under those rules, if the taxpayer enters into certain "churning" transactions, the methods of cost recovery provided under ACRS are not available with respect to the property.

ACRS contains special rules for property which is used predominantly outside the United States. The proposed regulations define this type of property and also provide guidance for property which ceases or begins to be used predominantly outside the United States after having been placed in service in a prior taxable year.

Similarly, the proposed regulations provide rules for determining the deductions for other property which changes status under ACRS (e.g., property which ceases to be used in connection with research and experimentation, property converted from personal to business use). Additionally, the proposed regulations provide rules for determining the deductions for property which is used both for personal and business purposes.

ACRS provides special rules for recovery property which is involved in certain nonrecognition and other transactions (section 168(f)(7), (10)). Generally, in these transactions the transferee is bound by the transferor's recovery period and method with respect to so much of the basis of the property in the hands of the transferee as does not exceed its basis in the hands of the transferor. The proposed regulations clarify the class of transactions subject to the rules and the manner of computing the deductions available to the transferor and transferee.

The proposed regulations also clarify the rules with respect to property involved in a transaction to which section 1031 or 1033 applies (section 168(f)(7)). Additionally, the proposed regulations clarify the deductions available with respect to property transferred by gift or bequest and with respect to partnership property to which basis adjustments are made.

The proposed regulations also provide the guidance necessary for making the various elections under section 168.

Since Congress made no change to certain provisions of the Code which require (or allow) a taxpayer to compute depreciation by use of the straight line method over the property's useful life (e.g., section 163(d)(3)(C), 1016(a)(3)), the proposed regulations contain no special rules in that regard. As a result, the rules under prior law continue to apply.

Section 203(b) of ERTA terminated the class life asset depreciation range (ADR) system, authorized by section 167(m) of the Code, for recovery property placed in service after 1980. Additionally, section 201(c) of ERTA repealed the asset guideline class repair allowance, authorized by section 263(e), effective for property placed in service after December 31, 1980. The proposed regulations implement these statutory changes by amending §1.167(a)-11(a)(1) and (d)(2) and by making other conforming amendments. The proposed regulations also clarify that the repair allowance is continued in effect for expenditures made after December 31, 1980, for the repair, maintenance, rehabilitation, or improvement of property placed in service before January 1, 1981.

The proposed regulations provide that the taxpayer may elect the repair allowance for a taxable year by (a) making the election to apply ADR for the taxable year (even if all the property placed in service during the taxable year is recovery property to which the ADR system does not apply), and (b) making an election to apply the asset guideline class repair allowance for the taxable year.

For periods after December 31, 1980, the proposed regulations provide that expenditures that are property improvements or excluded additions under the repair allowance rules shall generally be treated as separate items of recovery property, as described above.

These regulations concerning ACRS are effective for property placed in service after December 31, 1980. A taxpayer who has filed a return and who either did not claim allowable ACRS deductions, or did not claim the full amount allowable (e.g., because the taxpayer used a different rule for years following a short taxable year than is provided in these regulations), should file an amended return.

Par. 2. New §§1.168-1 through 1.168-6 are added. The new sections read as follows:

§1.168-1 Accelerated Cost Recovery System; in general.

(a) Cost recovery deduction allowed. Section 168 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 provides a system for determining cost recovery deductions for recovery property, the Accelerated Cost Recovery System ("ACRS"). The deduction allowable under section 168 is deemed to constitute the reasonable allowance for depreciation allowed as a deduction under section 167(a). Operating rules regarding determination of the allowable cost recovery deduction are provided in §1.168-2. The definition of recovery property and the classification of recovery property into recovery categories of 3, 5, 10, and 15 years are provided in §1.168-3. ACRS must be applied with respect to recovery property placed in service after December 31, 1980, except for certain property which does not qualify under section 168 or which may be excluded from ACRS; §1.168-4 provides rules regarding such exclusions and nonqualifications. Special rules regarding ACRS are provided in §1.168-5. Rules relating to the recognition of gain or loss on dispositions are provided in §1.168-6.

(b) Cross references. See §1.167(a)-(11)(d)(2) regarding the election after 1980 of the repair allowance for certain property. See §1.178-1 regarding the availability of ACRS deductions for, or the amortization of, improvements on leased property. See §1.1016-3(a)(3) regarding the basic adjustment for the amount allowable where no ACRS deduction is claimed.

§1.168-2 Amount of deduction for recovery property.

(a) Computation of recovery allowance—(1) General rule. Except as otherwise provided in section 168 and the regulations thereunder, the recovery allowance for any taxable year equals the aggregate amount determined by multiplying the unadjusted basis (as defined in §1.168-2(d)) of recovery property (as defined in §1.168-3) by the appropriate applicable percentage provided in paragraph (b) of this section. For purposes of determining the recovery allowance, salvage value shall be disregarded.

(2) No allowance in year of disposition. Except for 15-year real property and except as otherwise provided in §1.168-5, no recovery allowance shall be allowed in the year of disposition of recovery property.

(3) Proration of allowance in year of disposition of 15-year real property. In the taxable year in which 15-year real property is disposed of, the recovery allowance shall be determined by multiplying the allowance (determined without regard to this subparagraph) by a fraction, the numerator of which equals the number of months in the taxable year that the property is in service in the taxpayer's trade or business or for the production of income and the denominator of which is 12. In the case of 15-year real property that is disposed of in the first recovery year, the denominator shall equal the number of months in the taxpayer's taxable year after the recovery property was placed in service by the taxpayer (including the month the property was placed in service). If the recovery allowance for the taxable year is limited by reason of the short taxable year rules of section 168(f)(5) and paragraph (f) of this section (e.g., if the taxpayer dies, or if the taxpayer is a corporation which becomes a member, or ceases being a member, of an affiliated group of corporations filing a consolidated return), then the denominator shall equal the number of months in the taxpayer's taxable year. For purposes of this subparagraph, 15-year real property shall be treated as disposed of as of the last day of the month preceding the month in which it is withdrawn from service.

(b) Applicable percentage—(1) Property other than 15-year real property. The applicable percentage for recovery property, other than 15-year real property, is as follows:

If the recovery year is:	And the class of property is
	3-year	5-year	10-year	15-year Public Utility

(iii) For purposes of this section, the term "low income housing" means property described in clause (i), (ii), (iii), or (iv) of section 1250(a)(1)(B).

(iv) For purposes of this subparagraph (2), 15-year real property placed in service on or after the first day of a month shall be treated as placed in service in that month.

(c) Election of optional recovery percentage—

(1) Straight line method. Except as provided by section 168(f)(2) and §1.168-2(g) (relating to property used predominantly outside the United States), in lieu of using the applicable percentages prescribed in section 168(b)(1) and (2) and §1.168-2(b), the taxpayer may elect (in acordance with §1.168-5(e)), for recovery property placed in service during the taxable year, to determine the recovery allowance by using the straight line method over one of the recovery periods elected by the taxpayer and set forth in the following table:

Class of property	Recovery periods
3-year property	3, 5, or 12 years
5-year property	5, 12, or 25 years
10-year property	10, 25, or 35 years
15-year real property	15, 35, or 45 years
15-year public utility property	15, 35, 45 years

Such election is irrevocable without the consent of the Commissioner. See subparagraph (4) of this paragraph for tables containing the appliable percentages to be used in computing the recovery allowance.

(2) Election for property other than 15-year real property. Except in the case of 15-year real property, a single recovery period must be elected under this paragraph for all recovery property which is in the same recovery class and which is placed in service in the same taxable year. A different recovery period may be elected (or the tables provided in section 168 (b)(1) and §1.168-2(b)(1)may be used) for recovery property in different recovery classes placed in service during the same taxable year, or for recovery property placed in service in different taxable years, whether or not in the same recovery class.

(3) Election for 15-year real property. In the case of 15-year real property, the election provided in paragraph (c)(1) may be made separately with respect to each property.

(4) Applicable percentage. (i) For property other than 15-year real property—

(iii) For purposes of this paragraph, 15-year real property that is placed in service on or after the first day of a month shall be treated as placed in service in that month.

(5) Property financed with the proceeds of industrial development bonds. If, in accordance with section 168(f)(12) and §1.168-2(m), the recovery allowance for property financed with the proceeds of an industrial development bond (as described in section 103(b)) is determined using the straight line method, then an election as provided in section 168(b)(3) and this paragraph shall be deemed to have been made with respect to such property.

(d) Unadjusted basis—(1) Computation. Except as provided in paragraph (j)(6)(ii) of this section (relating to change of status), the unadjusted basis of recovery property is equal to the difference between—

(i) The basis of the property for purposes of determining gain under sections 1011 through 1024 but without regard to any adjustments to basis described in section 1016(a)(2) and (3), and

(iii) Any portion of the basis for which the taxpayer properly elects amortization in lieu of cost recovery (e.g., under section 167 (k)) or treatment as an expense under section 179. The unadjusted basis of recovery property shall be first taken into account under this section for the taxable year in which the property is placed in service (as defined in paragraph (l)(2) of this §1.168-2) as recovery property.

(2) Reductions in basis. (i) If an investment tax credit is determined under section 46(a)(2) with respect to recovery property, then, unless the taxpayer makes an election provided under section 48(q)(4), for purposes of this section the unadjusted basis shall be reduced by 50 percent of the amount of the credit so determined. In the case of a credit determined under section 46(a)(2) for any qualified rehabilitation expenditure made in connection with a qualified rehabilitated building (other than a certified historic structure), the unadjusted basis shall be reduced by 100 percent of the amount of the credit so determined. See section 48(q) and the regulations thereunder. For rules relating to the treatment of such basis adjustment upon the disposition of an asset from a mass asset account, see §1.168-2(h)(4).

(ii) Subject to the rules of other applicable provisions of the Code (e.g., section 280A), for recovery property which is used in the taxpayer's trade or business (or for the production of income) as well as in a personal or tax-exempt activity throughout a taxable year, the unadjusted basis shall be determined by multiplying the unadjusted basis (determined without regard to this subdivision) by a fraction, the numerator of which equals the taxpayer's use of the property during the taxable year in his trade or business (or for the production of income) and the denominator of which equals the taxpayer's total use of the property during the taxable year. For property converted from personal or tax-exempt use to use in the taxpayer's trade or business (or for the production of income), or for property devoted to increased use in the taxpayer's trade or business (or for the production of income), see §1.168-2(j).

(iii) The provisions of subdivision (ii) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. In 1981, A, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases a car for $10,000 to be used in his business as well as for his personal enjoyment. During 1981, A drives the car a total of 20,000 miles of which 8,000 miles (i.e., 40 percent) is in the course of A's business. During 1982, A drives the car a total of 30,000 miles of which 21,000 miles (i.e., 70 percent) is in the course of A's business. During 1983, A drives the car a total of 10,000 miles of which 3,000 miles (i.e., 30 percent) is the course of A's business. The optional straight line method provided under §1.168-2(c) is not elected. Thus, A's recovery allowance in 1981 equals $1,000 (i.e., ($10,000 × .40) × .25), in 1982 equals $2,660 (i.e., $10,000 × .70) × .38) and in 1983 equals $1,110 (i.e., ($10,000 × .30) × .37). If A continues to use the car in his business after 1983, additional recovery may be allowed. See §1.168-2(j).

(3) Redeterminations. (i) For the taxable year (and subsequent taxable years) in which the unadjusted basis of recovery property is redetermined (e.g., due to contingent purchase price or discharge of indebtedness), the recovery allowance shall be the amount determined by multiplying the redetermined adjusted basis by the redetermined applicable percentage. For purposes of this subparagraph, the redetermined adjusted basis is the unadjusted basis reduced by the recovery allowance previously allowed or allowable to the taxpayer with respect to the property and adjusted to reflect the redetermination. The redetermined applicable percentage is the percentage otherwise provided in subparagraph (b), (c), (g), or (m) of §1.168-2 for the recovery year divided by an amount equal to the unrecovered percentage (i.e., 100 percent minus the applicable percentage for recovery years prior to the year in which the basis is redetermined). Thus, the increase or decrease in basis shall be accounted for over the remaining recovery years beginning with the recovery year in which the basis is redetermined.

(ii) The following examples illustrate the provisions of this subparagraph (3):

Example (1). On July 15, 1984, A places in service 5-year recovery property with an unadjusted basis of $100,000. In order to purchase the property, A borrowed $80,000 from B. On December 1, 1984, B forgives $10,000 of the indebtedness. A makes the election provided in section 108(d)(4). The recovery allowance for the property in 1984 is $15,000. Under section 1017(a), as of January 1, 1985, the adjusted basis of the property is $75,000. In 1985 the recovery allowance is $19,411.77 (i.e., .22/(1.00 − .15) × ($100,000 − ($10,000 + $15,000))). In 1986, 1987, and 1988 the recovery allowance is $18,529.41 in each year (i.e., .21/(1.00 − .15) × ($100,000 − ($10,000 + $15,000))).

Example (2). On July 15, 1984, C purchases and places in service 5-year recovery property with an unadjusted basis of $100,000. In addition to the $100,000, C agrees to pay the seller 25 percent of the gross profits from the operation of the property in the first year. On July 15, 1985, C pays to the seller an additional $10,000. The recovery allowance for the property in 1984 is $15,000. In 1985 the recovery allowance is $24,588.23 (i.e., .22/(1.00 − .15) × ($100,000 + ($10,000 − $15,000))). In 1986, 1987, and 1988 the recovery allowance is $23,470.59 in each year (i.e., .21/(1.00 − .15) × ($100,000 + ($10,000 − $15,000))).

(e) Components and improvements—(1) Component cost recovery not permitted. In general, the unadjusted basis of structural components (as defined in §1.48-1(e)(2)) of a building must be recovered as a whole. Thus, the same recovery period and method must be used for all structural components, and such components must be recovered as constituent parts of the building of which they are a part. The recovery period for a component begins on the later of the first day of the month in which the component is placed in service as recovery property or the first day of the month in which the building of which the component is a part is placed in service as recovery property. See subparagraph (3) of this paragraph for the treatment of components of a building which is made available in stages.

(2) Treatment of amounts added to capital account. (i) Sections 162, 212, and 263 provide rules for the treatment of certain expenditures for the repair, maintenance, rehabilitation, or improvement of property. An expenditure which is treated as a capital expenditure under such sections (after application of the repair allowance rules of §1.167(a)-11(d)(2)) is treated as the purchase of recovery property if the improvement for which the expenditure is made is placed in service after December 31, 1980. The recovery of such expenditure shall begin when the improvement is placed in service. See subparagraph (3) of this paragraph for the treatment of a building which is made available in stages.

(ii) For capital expenditures (which are section 1250 class property) made with respect to an improvement of a building which is recovery property, the taxpayer must use the same recovery period and method as are used with respect to the building, unless the improvement qualifies as a substantial improvement. See subparagraph (4) of this paragraph. If capital expenditures (which are section 1250 class property) are made with respect to improvements of a building which is not recovery property under section 168(e) and §1.168-4, then the taxpayer may select any applicable recovery period and method for the recovery of the first of such expenditures. The recovery period and method so selected shall apply to each subsequent expenditure (unless the improvement qualifies as a substantial improvement).

(iii) A capital expenditure made with respect to the improvement of property, other than a building, is assigned to the same recovery class (as defined in §1.168-3(b)) as the property of which the improvement is a part. For such an expenditure, the taxpayer need not use the same recovery period and method as are used with respect to the property of which the improvement is a part.

(3) Recovery for a building which is made available in stages. This subparagraph (3) (and not subparagraphs (1) and (2) of this paragraph) applies to a building which is made available in stages. For purposes of this section, a building shall be considered placed in service (and, therefore, recovery will begin) only when a significant portion is made available for use in a finished condition (e.g., when a certificate of occupancy is issued with respect to such portion). If less than the entire building is made available, then the unadjusted basis which is taken into account under this section shall be that amount of the unadjusted basis of the building (including capital expenditures for any components) as is properly allocable to the portion made available. If another portion of the building is subsequently made available, then that amount of the unadjusted basis (including capital expenditures for any components) as is properly allocable to the ensuing portion shall be taken into account under this section when such portion becomes available. The taxpayer must use the same recovery period and method for all portions of the building.

(4) Substantial improvements. (i) A substantial improvement to a building shall be treated as a separate building. Thus, the taxpayer may use a different period and method for computing the recovery allowance for the substantial improvement than are used for computing the allowance for the building.

(ii) An improvement is a substantial improvement if—

(A) Over 24 consecutive months the aggregate expenditures properly chargeable to the capital account for a building equal at least 25 percent of the adjusted basis of the building (disregarding adjustments provided in section 1016(a)(2) and (3)) as of the day on which the first expenditure is made, and

(B) All expenditures for the improvement are made 3 or more years after the building is placed in service by the taxpayer.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, a building acquired in a transaction to which section 1031 or 1033 applies is considered placed in service when the building that was replaced was placed in service. Similarly, a building acquired in a transaction to which section 168(f)(10)(A) applies is deemed placed in service by the transferee when such building was placed in service by the transferor. An expenditure which is allocated to a 24-month period shall not be allocated to another 24-month period. For example, an expenditure may not be part of one substantial improvement when considered together with an expenditure incurred 15 months earlier and also be part of another substantial improvement when combined with an expenditure incurred 10 months later.

(iii) It is possible that an improvement will not be part of a substantial improvement in the taxable year in which the improvement is placed in service but will become part of a substantial improvement in a subsequent taxable year. In such case, if the taxpayer uses a different method and recovery period with respect to the substantial improvement, then the tax return filed for the taxable year in which the first improvement is placed in service shall be amended accordingly.

(5) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). In 1985, A spends $10,000 to improve machinery used in his trade or business. The $10,000 is added to capital account under the principles of sections 162, 212, and 263. The machinery would be 5-year property if placed in service after 1980. The $10,000 expenditure is treated as the purchase of 5-year recovery property, placed in service in 1985. Any election made by A with respect to the underlying machinery will not affect the recovery allowance for the improvement.

Example (2). B, a calendar year taxpayer, begins constructing a 10-story office building in 1982. All floors will have approximately the same amount of usable floor space. By 1983, B has paid or incurred $10 million for the building's shell (and other items not directly related to any specific portion of the building), $4 million for work with respect to the first three floors, and $5 million for work directly related to other floors (including installation of components). In March 1983, B receives a certificate of occupancy for the first three floors and begins offering the floors for rental to tenants. The building is considered placed in service in March 1983. No deduction is allowable under this section with respect to the building for 1982. No election is made under §1.168-2(c) to use the optional recovery percentages. B's recovery for 1983 is the properly allocable unadjusted basis times the applicable percentage (10 percent). The properly allocable unadjusted basis is $7 million, consisting of the amount of unadjusted basis directly related to the portion of the building which is made available for use ($4 million), plus that amount of the unadjusted basis which is not directly related to any specific portion of the building ($10 million) properly allocable to the portion which is made available for use (i.e., 3 floors/10 floors equals 30 percent of $3 million). No deduction is allowable in 1983 for the $5 million paid or incurred for work directly related to portions of the building not made available for use. B will recover the $7 million unadjusted basis over the 15-year recovery period, beginning in March 1983.

Example (3). The facts are the same in example (2) except that, in January 1984, B receives a certificate of occupancy for the remaining seven floors and begins offering them for rental to tenants. B has spent an additional $7 million to complete the building as of the date on which the remaining seven floors are offered for rental. In January 1984, B takes into account as unadjusted basis the $12 million not previously taken into account, plus the $7 million of later expenditures. B will recover the $19 million unadjusted basis over a 15-year recovery period beginning in January 1984. B may not use a different recovery period and method for such amount than were used for the amount taken into account in March 1983.

Example (4). The facts are the same as in examples (2) and (3) except that in 1990 B spends $1 million, which is added to capital account to rehabilitate certain portions of the building. The $1 million is treated as the purchase by B of 15-year real property in 1990. B must use the same recovery period and method with respect to that improvement as were used for the underlying building. The improvement has a 15-year recovery period, and the recovery begins when the improvement is placed in service.

Example (5). In 1983 C spends $1 million, which is added to capital account, to rehabilitate certain portions of a building placed in service by C in 1975. The $1 million is treated as the purchase by C of 15-year real property in 1983. C may use any applicable recovery period and method with respect to such expenditure, and the recovery begins when the improvement is placed in service. The recovery period and method selected with respect to such expenditure, however, will apply to all ensuing capital expenditures made by C with respect to the building, unless an expenditure qualifies as part of a substantial improvement. The result in this example would be the same if the building were placed in service by C after 1980, but did not qualify as recovery property by reason of the provisions of section 168(e)(4) and §1.168-4(d).

(f) Short taxable years—(1) General rule. For any recovery year in which there are less than 12 months (hereinafter in this section referred to as a "short taxable year"), the recovery allowance shall be determined by multiplying the deduction which would have been allowable if the recovery year were not a short taxable year by a fraction the numerator of which equals the number of months and part-months in the short taxable year and the denominator of which is 12. This paragraph shall not apply to 15-year real property for the year the property is placed in service or disposed of.

(2) Subsequent years' allowance. Recovery allowances for years in a recovery period following a short taxable year shall be determined in accordance with paragraph (a)(c), (g), or (m) of this section without reference to the short taxable year.

(3) Unrecovered allowance. In the taxable year following the last year in the recovery period, a recovery allowance is permitted to the extent of any unrecovered allowance. If the optional recovery percentages are elected under §1.168-2(c) or (g)(3) and the short taxable year is the last recovery year, then the unrecovered allowance shall be allowed in the year following the short taxable year. The term "unrecovered allowance" means the difference between—

(i) The recovery allowance properly allowed for the short taxable year, and

(ii) The recovery allowance which would have been allowable if such year were not a short taxable year.

In no event shall the recovery allowance for any taxable year following the last year in the recovery period be greater than what the recovery allowance would be for the last year in the recovery period assuming that such year consists of 12 months. Any amount in excess of such recovery allowance for the last year in the recovery period shall be taken into account in the following taxable year or years in the same manner as provided in this subparagraph (3).

(4) When a taxable year begins. For purposes of this section, a taxable year of a person placing property in service does not include any month prior to the month in which the person begins engaging in a trade or business or holding recovery or depreciable property for the production of income. For purposes of applying the preceding sentence to an employee, an employee is not considered engaged in a trade or business by virtue of his employment except that, for purposes of applying this section to recovery property used for purposes of employment, the taxable year includes any month during which a person is engaged in trade or business as an employee. In addition, if a person engages in a small amount of trade or business activity for the purpose of obtaining a disproportionately large recovery allowance for assets for the taxable year in which they are placed in service, and if placing those assets in service represents a substantial increase in the person's level of business activity, then for purposes of the recovery allowance for such assets the person will not be treated as beginning a trade or business until the increased amount of business activity begins. For property held for the production of income, the principle of the preceding sentence also applies.

(5) Successive short taxable years. In applying the rule of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, no month shall be taken into account more than once. Thus, if a taxpayer has successive short taxable years, with one taxable year ending and the following taxable year beginning in the same calendar month, then the recovery year which is ending shall not include the month in which the taxable year terminates.

(6) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph:

Example (1). On October 10, 1983, A and B enter into an agreement to form a partnership (P), for the purpose of leasing sailboats. The partnership adopts a calendar year as its taxable year pursuant to §1.706-1(b)(1). On November 5, 1983, P purchases four sailboats for a total of $20,000 and places the sailboats in service immediately. For purposes of section 168, P's taxable year begins on November 5, 1983. Sailboats are 5-year recovery property as defined in section 168(c)(2). No straight line election is made under §1.168-2(c). The recovery allowance for the sailboats in 1983, a short taxable year, is $500 (i.e., .15 × $20,000 × 2/12). In 1984, the recovery allowance is $4,400 (.22 × $20,000). In 1985, 1986, and 1987, the recovery allowance is $4,200 annually (.21 × $20,000). In 1988, the taxable year following the last year in the recovery period, the unrecovered allowance equal to $2,500 may be deducted by A and B.

Example (2). In November 1984, Corporation L is incorporated and places in service two race horses which it acquired for a total of $18,500. The corporation adopts a calendar year as its taxable year. For purposes of section 168, the race horses are 3-year recovery property. No straight line election is made under §1.168-2(c). In 1984, the recovery allowance permitted to L for the race horses is $770.83 (i.e., (.25 × $18,500) × 2/12). At the close of business on June 30, 1985, all of the stock of L is acquired by Corporation M. M elects in accordance with section 1501 to file a consolidated return with respect to M and L. M's taxable year begins on July 1. By reason of becoming included in the consolidated return, under §1.1502-76 L's second taxable year ending June 30, 1985, is also a short taxable year containing 6 months. In the second taxable year, L is permitted a recovery allowance equal of $3,515 (i.e., .38 × $18,500 × 6/12). In the third taxable year ending June 30, 1986, L is entitled to a recovery allowance of $6,845 (i.e., .37 × $18,500). Thus, the unrecovered allowance as of July 1, 1986, equals $7,369.17. Since the unrecovered allowance exceeds the recovery allowance for the third recovery year (the last year in the recovery period), the recovery allowance for the taxable year ending June 30, 1987, equals the allowance for such year, $6,845. The recovery allowance in the taxable year ending June 30, 1988, equals $524.17, the remaining unrecovered allowance.

Example (3). On August 1, 1984, Partnership M is formed and places in service a warehouse which will be leased to an unrelated person. M acquires the warehouse for $250,000. M adopts a calendar year as its taxable year pursuant to §1.706-1(b)(1). In 1984, M has a short taxable year within the meaning of §1.168-2(f)(1). Since the property is 15-year real property, however, the recovery allowance is computed as though 1984 were a full taxable year. Because the recovery property would have been placed in service in the eighth month of M's normal taxable year, the recovery property is deemed placed in service in the eighth month of the first recovery year. The recovery allowance in 1984 is $12,500 (i.e., .05 × $250,000).

Example (4). In July 1983, D, who has been an employee of Corporation N since 1982, purchases an automobile for use in the performance of his employment for N. On June 5, 1984, D purchases a truck for use in another business. D begins the new business on June 5, 1984. In 1984, D holds no other depreciable or recovery property for the production of income. D does not have a short taxable year for the automobile purchased in 1983 since the automobile is used by D in his trade or business as an employee. Since an employee is not considered engaged in a trade or business by virtue of employment, however, for purposes of determining when a taxable year begins with respect to property not used in the trade or business of employment, D has a short taxable year in 1984 for the truck purchased in that year. The recovery allowance permitted D in 1984 with respect to the truck must be adjusted in accordance with the provisions of §1.168-2(f).

Example (5). A has been actively engaged in the trade or business of selling used cars since 1981. On July 1, 1983, A accepts employment with Corporation M and on that same date purchases a truck for $10,000 for use in the performance of his employment for M. A does not have a short taxable year for the truck because the taxable year of a person placing property in service includes all months during which that person is engaged in a trade or business.

Example (6). In 1983, C graduates from college and on July 1, 1983, is employed by N. On that same day, C purchases an automobile for $10,000 for use in the performance of his employment for N. C has a short taxable year for the automobile purchased in 1983. Although, for recovery property used for purposes of employment, the taxable year includes any month during which a person is an employee, C does not begin that trade or business until July. In addition, C is engaged in no other trade or business (and does not hold any depreciable or recovery property for the production of income) during the taxable year. The recovery allowance permitted C in 1983 with respect to the automobile must be adjusted in accordance with the provisions of §1.168-2(f).

Example (7). Corporation X, a calendar year taxpayer, has been in the trade or business of selling household appliances since 1979. On July 1, 1983, X purchases a restaurant. On that same day, X purchases restaurant equipment for use in its new business. X does not have a short taxable year for the restaurant equipment because the taxable year of a person placing property in service includes all months during which that person is engaged in a trade or business.

(g) Special rules for property used predominantly outside the United States. (1) General rule. (i) In lieu of the deduction allowed under paragraphs (a) and (c) of this §1.168-2, except as provided in subparagraphs (3) and (4) of this paragraph, and except as otherwise provided in section 168 and the regulations thereunder, the recovery allowance for recovery property used predominantly outside the United States (as described in §1.168-2(g)(5)) during the taxable year equals the aggregate amount determined by multiplying the unadjusted basis (as defined in §1.168-2(d)) of such recovery property by the applicable percentage provided in paragraph (g)(2) of this section. For purposes of determining the recovery allowance, salvage value shall be disregarded.

(ii) The recovery period for recovery property used predominantly outside the United States, other than 15-year real property, shall be the present class life. For recovery property (other than 15-year property) which is not assigned a present class life, the recovery period shall be 12 years. For 15-year real property used predominantly outside the United States, the recovery period shall be 35 years.

(iii) Except for 15-year real property and except as otherwise provided in §1.168-5, no recovery allowance shall be allowed in the year of disposition of recovery property described in this paragraph.

(iv) For purposes of this paragraph, rules similar to the rules of paragraph (e) of this section shall apply.

(2) Applicable percentages. (i) For property other than 15-year real property—

(3) Election of optional recovery percentage method. (i) In lieu of the applicable percentage provided by subparagraphs (1) and (2), the taxpayer may elect (in accordance with §1.168-5(e)), for recovery property used predominantly outside the United States that is placed in service during the taxable year, to determine the recovery allowance by using the straight line method over one of the recovery periods elected by the taxpayer and set forth in the following table:

CLASS OF PROPERTY	RECOVERY PERIOD
3-year property	5 or 12 years or present class life
5-year property	12 or 25 years or present class life
10-year property	25 or 35 years or present class life
15-year real property	35 or 45 years
15-year public utility property	35 or 45 years or present class life

Such election is irrevocable without the consent of the Commissioner. See subdivision (iv) of this subparagraph for tables containing the applicable percentages to be used in computing the recovery allowance.

(ii) Except in the case of 15-year real property, a single recovery period must be elected under this subparagraph for all recovery property placed in service in the same taxable year which is in the same recovery class and which has the same present class life. For property other than 15-year real property the recovery period elected may not be shorter than the present class life (or, if none, 12 years). A different recovery period may be elected (or the tables provided in subparagraph (2) may be used) for recovery property in different recovery classes, or with different present class lives, placed in service during the taxable year, or for recovery property placed in service in a different taxable year, whether or not in the same recovery class or with the same present class life.

(iii) In the case of 15-year real property, the election provided by this subparagraph may be made separately with respect to each property.

(4) Rules for year of disposition and placement in service of 15-year real property. (i) In the taxable year in which 15-year real property is disposed of, the recovery allowance shall be determined by multiplying the allowance (determined without regard to this subdivision) by a fraction, the numerator of which equals the number of months in the taxable year that the property is in service in the taxpayer's trade or business or for the production of income and the denominator of which is 12. In the case of 15-year real property that is disposed of during the first recovery year, the denominator shall equal the number of months in the taxpayer's taxable year after the property was placed in service by the taxpayer (including the month the property was placed in service). If the recovery allowance for the taxable year is limited by reason of the short taxable year rules of section 168(f)(5) and paragraph (f) of this section (e.g., if the taxpayer dies, or if the taxpayer is a corporation which becomes a member, or ceases being a member, of an affiliated group of corporations filing a consolidated return), then the denominator shall equal the number of months in the taxpayer's taxable year.

(ii) For purposes of this paragraph—

(A) 15-year real property that is placed in service on or after the first day of a month shall be treated as placed in service in that month; and

(B) 15-year real property that is disposed of during the recovery year shall be treated as disposed of as of the last day of the month proceding the month in which it is withdrawn from service.

(5) Determination of whether property is used predominantly outside the United States. (i) The determination of whether property is used predominantly outside the United States (as defined in section 7701(a)(9)) during the taxable year shall be made by comparing the period in such year during which the property is physically located outside of the United States with the period during which the property is physically located within the United States. If the property is physically located outside the United States during more than 50 percent of the taxable year, such property shall be considered used predominantly outside the United States during the year. If property is placed in service after the first day of the taxable year, the determination of whether such property is physically located outside the United States during more than 50 percent of the taxable year shall be made with respect to the period beginning on the date on which the property is placed in service and ending on the last day of such taxable year.

(ii) This paragraph applies whether recovery property is used predominantly outside the United States by the owner or by the lessee of the property. For recovery property which is leased, the determination of whether such property is physically located outside the United States during the taxable year shall be made with respect to the taxable year of the lessor.

(iii) For purposes of this §1.168-2(g), the following property is not "property used predominantly outside the United States":

(A) Any aircraft which is registered by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Agency, and which (1) is operated, whether on a scheduled or nonscheduled basis, to and from the United States, or (2) is operated under contract with the United States, provided that the use of the aircraft under the contract constitutes its principal use outside the United States during the taxable year. The term "to and from the United States" shall not exclude an aircraft which makes flights from one point in a foreign country to another such point, as long as such aircraft returns to the United States with some degree of frequency;

(B) Rolling stock which is used within and without the United States and which is (1) of a domestic railroad corporation subject to part I of the Interstate Commerce Act or (2) of a United States person (other than a corporation subject to part I of the Interstate Commerce Act) but only if the rolling stock is not leased to one or more foreign persons for periods totaling more than 12 months in any 24-month period. For purposes of this subdivision (iii)(B), the term "rolling stock" means locomotives, freight and passenger train cars, floating equipment, and miscellaneous transportation equipment on wheels, the expenditures for which are of the type chargeable to the equipment investment accounts in the uniform system of accounts for railroad companies prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission;

(C) Any vessel documented under the laws of the United States which is operated in the foreign or domestic commerce of the United States. A vessel is documented under the laws of the United States if it is registered, enrolled, or licensed under the laws of the United States by the Commandant, United States Coast Guard. Vessels operated in the foreign or domestic commerce of the United States include those documented for use in foreign trade, coast-wise trade, or fisheries;

(D) Any motor vehicle of a United States person (as defined is section 7701(a)(30)) which is operated to and from the United States with some degree of frequency;

(E) Any container of a United States person which is used in the transportation of property to and from the United States;

(F) Any property (other than a vessel or an aircraft) of a United States person which is used for the purpose of exploring for, developing, removing, or transporting resources from the outer Continental Shelf (within the meaning of section 2 of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act, as amended and supplemented, 43 U.S.C. section 1331), e.g., offshore drilling equipment;

(G) Any property which (1) is owned by a domestic corporation (other than a corporation which has an election in effect under section 936 or which is entitled to the benefits of section 934(b)), by a United States citizen (other than a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 931, 932, 933, or 934(c)), or by a domestic partnership, all of whose partners are domestic corporations (none of which has an election in effect under section

936 or is entitled to the benefits of section 934(b)) or United States citizens (none of whom is entitled to the benefits of section 931, 932, 933, or 934(c)) and (2) which is used predominantly in a possession of the United States during the taxable year by such a corporation, citizen, or partnership, or by a corporation created or organized in, or under the law of, a possession of the United States. The determination of whether property is used predominantly in a possession of the United States during the taxable year shall be made under principles similar to those described in subdivision (i) of this subparagraph. For example, if a machine is placed in service in a possession of the United States on July 1, 1981, by a calendar year taxpayer and if it is physically located in such a possession during more than 50 percent of the period beginning on July 1, 1981, and ending on December 31, 1981, then such machine shall be considered used predominantly in a possession of the United States during the taxable year 1981;

(H) Any communications satellite (as defined in section 103(3) of the Communications Satellite Act of 1962, 47 U.S.C. section 702(3)), or any interest therein, of a United States person;

(I) Any cable, or any interest therein, of a domestic corporation engaged in furnishing telephone service to which section 46(c)(3)(B)(iii) applies (or of a wholly owned domestic subsidiary of such corporation), if such cable is part of a submarine cable system which constitutes part of a communications link exclusively between the United States and one or more foreign countries;

(J) Any property (other than a vessel or an aircraft) of a United States person which is used in international or territorial waters within the northern portion of the Western Hemisphere for the purpose of exploring for, developing, removing, or transporting resources from ocean waters or deposits under such waters. The term "northern portion of the Western Hemisphere" means the area lying west of the 30th meridian west of Greenwich, east of the international dateline, and north of the Equator, but not including any foreign country which is a country of South America; and

(K) Any property described in section 48(l)(3)(A)(ix) which is owned by a United States person and which is used in international or territorial waters to generate energy for use in the United States.

(h) Mass asset accounts. (1) In general. In accordance with the provisions of §1.168-5(e), a taxpayer may elect to account for mass assets (as defined in §1.168-2(h)(2)) in the same mass asset account, as though such assets were a single asset. If such treatment is elected, the taxpayer, upon disposition of an asset in the account, shall include as ordinary income (as defined in section 64) all proceeds realized to the extent of the unadjusted basis in this account (as defined in paragraph (d) of this section), less any amounts previously so included, and shall include as capital gain any excess, unless gain on such disposition is not recognized under another provision of the Code. With respect to the recovery allowance, the account shall be treated as though the asset were not disposed of.

(2) Definition. For purposes of this section, the term "mass assets" means a mass or group of individual items of recovery property (i) not necessarily homogenous, (ii) each of which is minor in value relative to the total value of such mass or group, (iii) numerous in quantity, (iv) usually accounted for only on a total dollar or quantity basis, (v) with respect to which separate identification is impracticable, (vi) with the same present class life, and (vii) placed in service in the same taxable year.

(3) Election. The election under this paragraph shall be made for the taxable year in which the assets in the account are placed in service. The election shall apply, with respect to the account, throughout the applicable recovery period and for all subsequent taxable years. The taxpayer is not bound by such election with respect to assets placed in service in other taxable years, or with respect to other assets placed in service in the same taxable year, which may properly be included in another mass asset account (e.g., assets with a different present class life).

(4) Recovery of an increase in basis. To the extent that §1.168-2(d)(2)(i) (relating to reductions in basis) applies, if as a result of early disposition of an asset in a mass asset account (determined in accordance with the provision of subparagraph (5) of this paragraph), the investment tax credit is recaptured (in accordance with section 47 and the regulations thereunder), then the basis of the account shall be increased by an amount equal to one-half of the amount of the recapture. Such increase shall be treated in a manner similar to §1.168-2(d)(3), relating to redeterminations. For purposes of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, such increase will be taken into account as unadjusted basis in determining the inclusion of proceeds as ordinary income.

(5) Identification of dispositions for purposes of basis increase. For purposes of subparagraph (4) of this paragraph, disposition of assets from a mass asset account shall be determined by the use of an appropriate mortality dispersion table. If the taxpayer adopts recordkeeping practices consistent with his prior practices and consonant with good accounting and engineering practices, and supplies such reasonable information as may be required by the Commissioner, the mortality dispersion table may be based upon an acceptable sampling of the taxpayer's actual experience or other acceptable statistical or engineering techniques. Alternatively, the taxpayer may use the following standard mortality dispersion table:

For purposes of applying the standard mortality dispersion table, all assets in a mass asset account placed in service during a taxable year are considered to be placed in service on the same day. If the taxpayer uses the standard mortality dispersion table for a taxable year, such table must be used for all subsequent taxable years unless the taxpayer obtains the consent of the Commissioner.

(6) Transitional rule. Unless the taxpayer establishes to the contrary (by statistical methods or otherwise), all proceeds realized upon the disposition of assets from one or more mass asset accounts shall be considered realized with respect to accounts placed in service by the taxpayer after December 31, 1980.

(i) [RESERVED]

(j) Changes in use—(1) Conversion from personal use or use in tax-exempt activity. If property which was previously used by the taxpayer for personal purposes or in a tax-exempt activity is converted to use in a trade or business or for the production of income during the taxable year, then the recovery allowance for the taxable year (and subsequent taxable years) shall be determined as though the property were placed in service by the taxpayer as recovery property on the date on which the conversion occurs. Thus, the recovery allowance shall be determined by multiplying the unadjusted basis (as provided in subparagraph (6)(ii) of this paragraph) by the applicable percentage.

(2) Increased business use of property. If a taxpayer uses property in a trade or business (or for the production of income) and for personal (or tax-exempt) purposes during a recovery period, and increases the business (or income-producing) use of such property after the recovery for that period is completed, then a recovery allowance shall continue to be allowed with respect to such property. The amount of the allowance shall be determined as though, to the extent of the increase in business (or income-producing) use, the property were placed in service by the taxpayer as recovery property at the beginning of the taxable year in which such increased use occurs. Thus, the recovery allowance for the taxable year shall be determined first by multiplying the unadjusted basis (as provided in subparagraph (6)(ii) of this paragraph) by the applicable percentage, and then by the excess of the percentage of the business (or income-producing) use during the taxable year over the average of such use during the prior recovery period (or periods). The combined recovery under this subparagraph and subparagraph (1) shall not exceed the original cost of the property. See Example (2) of subparagraph (7) of this paragraph.

(3) Domestic property changing recovery classes. (i) When the class of recovery property not used predominantly outside the United States changes during the taxable year, and the property continues to be used as recovery property by the taxpayer (e.g., when property ceases to be used predominantly in connection with research and experimentation) the following rules apply:

(A) If the change results in the property's being assigned to a class with a shorter recovery period, then the recovery allowance for the taxable year in which the change occurs (and subsequent taxable years) shall be determined as though the property were placed in service as recovery property in the year of the change. Thus, the recovery allowance shall be determined by multiplying the unadjusted basis (as provided in subparagraph (6)(ii) of this paragraph) by the applicable percentage. Alternatively, the taxpayer may continue to treat the property as though the change had not occurred.

(B) If the change results in the property's being assigned to a class with a longer recovery period, then the recovery allowance for the taxable year of the change (and subsequent taxable years) shall be determined as though the property had originally been assigned to that longer recovery class. Proper adjustment shall be made under the principles of §1.168-2(d)(3) (relating to redeterminations) to account for the deductions allowable to the taxpayer with respect to the property prior to the year of the change in excess of those which would have been allowable had the taxpayer used the applicable percentages for the longer recovery class for those years.

(4) Foreign property. (i) If recovery property ceases being used predominantly outside the United States during a taxable year, and the property continues to be used as recovery property by the taxpayer, then the recovery allowance for the taxable year (and subsequent taxable years) shall be determined as though the property were placed in service as recovery property in the year of the cessation. Thus, the recovery allowance shall be determined by multiplying the unadjusted basis (as provided in subparagraph (6)(ii) of this paragraph) by the applicable percentage. Alternatively, the taxpayer may continue to treat the property as though the cessation had not occurred. See §§1.168-5(e)(5) and 1.1016-3(a)(3)(iii) and (iv).

(ii) If the recovery property begins to be used by the taxpayer predominantly outside the United States during a taxable year after having been used otherwise by the taxpayer as recovery property in the previous taxable year, then the recovery allowance for the taxable year in which the change occurs (and subsequent years) shall be determined as though the property had originally been placed in service by the taxpayer as recovery property used predominantly outside the United States. Proper adjustment shall be made under the principles of §1.168-2(d)(3) to account for the difference between the deductions allowable with respect to the property prior to the year of the change and those which would have been allowable had the taxpayer used the applicable percentages for property used predominantly outside the United States for those years.

(5) Low income housing. If 15-year real property begins or ceases to be low income housing (as defined in §1.168-2(b)(2)(iii)) during a taxable year, then the recovery allowance for the taxable year in which the change occurs (and subsequent taxable years) shall be determined under the principles of paragraph (j)(3)(i)(B) and (4)(ii) of this section.

(6) Special rules. (i) For purposes of this paragraph, if, prior to a change in status, the taxpayer used the optional applicable percentages (under paragraph (c) or (g)(3) of this section) with respect to recovery property, then similar optional percentages shall be used with respect to the property after the change.

(ii) For purposes of subparagraphs (1) and (2) of this paragraph, the unadjusted basis shall be the lesser of the fair market value or the adjusted basis of the property (taking into account the adjustments described in section 1016(a)(3)) at the time of conversion to use in the taxpayer's trade or business (or for the production of income), or at the beginning of the taxable year in which the increase in business (or income-producing) use occurs, as the case may be. For purposes of subparagraphs (3)(i)(A) and (4)(i) of this paragraph, the unadjusted basis shall be the adjusted basis of the property (taking into account the adjustments described in section 1016(a) (2) and (3)) at the beginning of the year in which the change or cessation occurs.

(7) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph.

Example (1). A, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases a house in 1981 which he occupies as his principal residence. In June 1985, A ceases to occupy the house and converts it to rental property. Under paragraph (j)(1) of this section, for purposes of determining the recovery allowance, A is deemed to have placed the house in service as recovery property in June 1985. A does not elect to compute the recovery allowance by use of the optional recovery method provided in §1.168-2(c). Thus, A's recovery allowance under section 168 for 1985 is determined by multiplying the unadjusted basis of the property by .07. Under paragraph (j)(6)(ii) of this section, the unadjusted basis is the lesser of the property's basis or its fair market value in June 1985. See also section 280A and the regulations thereunder.

Example (2). In 1981, B (a calendar year taxpayer) purchases an automobile for $10,000. In taxable years 1981 through 1983, B's business use of the automobile is 60 percent of his total use. B does not elect use of the optional percentages provided in §1.168-2(c). The fair market value of the automobile at the beginning of 1984 is $7,500. In 1984, B's business use of the automobile is 70 percent of the total. B's allowable deduction for 1984 is $187.50, computed as follows: $7,500 (lesser of basis or fair market value) × .25 (applicable percentage) × .10 (increase in the percentage business use in 1984 (70 percent) over the average business use during 1981-1983 (60 percent)). In 1985, B's business use of the automobile is 50 percent of the total. B is entitled to no recovery allowance with respect to the automobile for 1985 since B's business use of the automobile in that year does not exceed the average business use during 1981-1983 (60 percent). In 1986, B's business use of the automobile is 75 percent of the total. B's allowable deduction for 1986 is $416.25 computed as follows: $7,500 (lesser of basis or fair market value in 1984) × .37 (applicable percentage) × .15 (increase in the percentage business use in 1986 (75 percent) over the average business use during 1981-1983 (60 percent)).

Example (3). In 1981 C, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $20,000 and places in service section 1245 class property used predominantly in connection with research and experimentation. C does not elect to compute the recovery allowance by use of the optional method as provided in §1.168-2(c). In 1981 C's allowable deduction is $5,000 (i.e., .25 × $20,000). In 1982 C continues to use the property as recovery property, but not predominantly in connection with research and experimentation. As a result, in 1982 the property is treated as 5-year property. C's recovery allowance for 1982 (and subsequent taxable years) is determined as though C had placed the property in service in 1981 as 5-year property. The excess recovery allowance allowed in 1981 is accounted for in accordance with §1.168-2(d)(3). Thus, the difference between the recovery allowance which would have been allowed had the applicable percentage for 5-year property been used (i.e., .15 × $20,000 = $3,000) and the recovery allowance allowed in 1981 (i.e., .25 × $20,000 = $5,000) equals $2,000 and is accounted for as follows:

Unadjusted basis × applicable percentage for second recovery year ($20,000.00 × .22)	$4,400.00
Excess allowance × applicable percentage for second recovery year ÷ the sum of the remaining unused applicable percentages (($2,000.00 × .22)/.85)	− 517.65
Difference—allowable deduction for 1982	$3,882.35

Example (4). In 1981 D, a calendar year taxpayer, places in service 5-year recovery property with an unadjusted basis of $100,000 and a present class life of 8 years. D uses the property predominantly outside the United States in 1981, 1982, and 1983. D does not elect to compute the recovery allowance by use of the optional method as proivded in §1.168-2(g)(3). In 1984 D uses the property as recovery property but not predominantly outside the United States. D's allowable deduction for 1984 (and subsequent taxable years) is determined as though D placed the property in service in 1984 as recovery property not used predominantly outside the United States. The basis of the property is deemed to be the adjusted basis in 1984. Thus, D's allowable deduction for 1984 is $7,350 (i.e., .15 × $49,000 (basis)) and for 1985 is $10,780 (i.e., .22 × 49,000 (basis)). If D elected to use the optional method based on the present class life, D would use the optional percentages based on a 5-year recovery period. Alternatively, D may continue to treat the property as though it continued to be used predominantly outside the United States. If so treated D's allowable deductions for 1984 and 1985 would be $12,000 (i.e., .12 × $100,000) and $9,000 (.09 × $100,000), respectively.

Example (5). The facts are the same as in example (4) except that the recovery property is not used predominantly outside the United States for 1981 through 1983. In 1984, however, D begins using the property predominantly outside the United States. D's allowable deduction for 1984 is determined as though D placed the property in service in 1981 as property used predominantly outside the United States. Additionally, D accounts for the difference between the recovery allowance for 1981 through 1983 ($58,000) and the allowance which would have been allowable for those years had the applicable percentages for property used predominantly outside the United States been used ($51,000) in accordance with §1.168-2(d)(3). Thus, the recovery allowance in 1984 is $10,285.71, determined as follows:

Unadjusted basis × applicable percentage for 4th recovery year for property with an 8-year present class life ($100,000.00 × .12)	$12,000.00
Excess recovery from 1981 through 1983 × applicable percentage for 4th recovery year ÷ the sum of the remaining unused applicable percentages (($7,000.00 × .12)/.49)	− 1,714.29
Difference	$10,285.71

If, for 1981 through 1983, D elected to use the optional method based on a 5-year recovery period, then the allowable deduction for 1984 and subsequent taxable years would be determined using the optional percentages over the 8-year present class life.

(k) Ratable inclusion rule—(1) General rule. In general, the recovery allowance provided by section 168 and this section shall be considered as accruing ratably over the taxable year. Thus, for example, the distributive share of the recovery allowance for each partner in a partnership in which a partner's partnership interest varies so as to be subject to section 706(c)(2)(B) shall be determined by allocating to each partner a pro rata share of such allowance for the entire taxable year of the partnership. This paragraph does not apply, however, in determining the recovery allowance for the taxable year in which 15-year real property is placed in service or disposed of.

(2) Example. The provisions of this subparagraph are illustrated by the following example:

Example. In 1978 A and B each acquire 50 percent interests in partnership P which is in the business of renting and managaing beach resort property. On December 1, 1983, C and D each acquire from the partnership 25 percent interests in the partnership. On December 15, 1983, the partnership acquires for rental and places in service two sailboats (5-year recovery property) for $10,000 each. No election is made to use the optional recovery percentages provided by §1.168-2(c). The recovery allowance for P for the sailboats in 1983 equals $3,000 (i.e., .15 × $20,000). The recovery allowance, however, must be allocated pro rata over the taxable year. As such, the distributive share of the recovery allowance for A and B is $1,437.50 each. The distributive share of the recovery allowance for C and D is $62.50 each.

(l) Definitions. For purposes of section 168 and §§1.168-1 through 1.168-6—

(1) Disposition. The term "disposition" means the permanent withdrawal of property from use in the taxpayer's trade or business or use for the production of income. Withdrawal may be made in several ways, including sale, exchange, retirement, abandonment, or destruction. A disposition does not include a transfer of property by gift or by reason of the death of the taxpayer. See §1.168-5(f)(3) and (4). A disposition also does not include the retirement of a structural component of 15-year real property. The manner of of disposition (e.g., ordinary retirement, abnormal retirement) is not a consideration. For rules relating to nonrecognition transactions see section 168(f)(7) and (10) and the regulations thereunder. For rules relating to the recognition of gain or loss on dispositions, see §1.168-6.

(2) Placed in service. The term "placed in service" means the time that property is first placed by the taxpayer in a condition or state of readiness and availability for a specifically assigned function, whether for use in a trade or business, for the production of income, in a tax-exempt activity, or in a personal activity. In the case of a building which is intended to house machinery and equipment, such readiness and availability shall be determined without regard to whether the machinery or equipment which the building houses, or is intended to house, has been placed in service. However, in an appropriate case, as, for example, where the building is essentially an item of machinery or equipment, or the use of the building is so closely related to the use of the machinery or equipment that it clearly can be expected to be replaced or retired when the property it initially houses is replaced or retired, the determination of readiness or availability of the building shall be made by taking into account the readiness and availability of such machinery or equipment. For a building which becomes available for use in separate stages, see paragraph (e) (3) of this section.

(3) Recovery year. The term "recovery year" means the taxable year during which recovery property is placed in service by the taxpayer and each subsequent taxable year for which a deduction is allowable to the taxpayer under this section with respect to such property.

(4) Recovery period. The term "recovery period" means the actual period of years assigned, or elected by the taxpayer, for the computation under this section of the recovery allowance with respect to the unadjusted basis of the recovery property (e.g., 3 years, 5 years, 12 years, present class life). The recovery period does not include any year after the end of the period assigned or elected, even though under paragraph (c), (g)(3), or (m) of this section a year following the recovery period may be a recovery year (as defined in subparagraph (3)).

(m) Limitation on property financed with proceeds of industrial development bonds. [RESERVED]

(n) Application to adjustment to basis of partnership property under sections 734(b) and 743(b)—(1) Increases in basis. (i) If, under section 734(b) (relating to the optional adjustment to the basis of undistributed partnership property) or section 743(b) (relating to the optional adjustment to the basis of partnership property), the basis of a partnership's recovery property is increased as a result of the distribution of property to a partner or the transfer of a partnership interest (as the case may be), then the increased portion of the basis shall be taken into account under this section as if it were newly-purchased recovery property placed in service when the distribution or transfer occurs. Any applicable recovery period and method may be used to determine the recovery allowance with respect to the increased portion of the basis. No change shall be made for purposes of determining the recovery allowance under this section for the portion of the basis for which there is no increase.

(2) Decreases in basis. If, under section 734(b) or section 743(b), the basis of a partnership's recovery property is decreased as a result of the distribution of property to a partner or the transfer of a partnership interest (as the case may be), then such decrease shall be taken into account under the principles of paragraph (d)(3) of this section (relating to redeterminations). See also §1.755-1.

(3) Example. The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. On January 1, 1984, A, a partner who owns a 20 percent interest in partnership X, sells his entire interest to B for $400,000. Partnership X has one asset, a building which is recovery property, placed in service by X after 1980. A's adjusted basis in his partnership interest, allocable entirely to the building, is $100,000. A valid election under section 754 is in effect with respect to the sale of the partnership interest. Accordingly, partnership X makes an adjustment, pursuant to section 743(b), to increase the basis of the building with respect to B from $100,000 to $400,000. The amount of the basis adjustment with respect to partner B ($300,000) is taken into account under this section as if it were newly-purchased recovery property placed in service on January 1, 1984. Any applicable period and method may be used with respect to such portion of the basis. Accordingly, if the optional applicable percentages provided under §1.168-2 (c) are not used, the recovery with respect to the basis adjustment for 1984 is $36,000 (i.e., $300,000 × .12). Such portion of the basis will have a 15-year recovery period, beginning January 1, 1984. No change is made with respect to the calculation of the recovery allowance for the portion of the basis of the partnership property (i.e., $100,000) not affected by the basis adjustment under section 743.

§1.168-3 Recovery property.

(a) Recovery property—(1) In general. Except as provided in §1.168-4, "recovery property" to which ACRS applies means tangible property of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation which is—

(i) Used in a trade or business, or

(ii) Held for the production of income.

Property is considered recovery property only if such property would have been depreciable under section 167. Thus, ACRS applies only to that part of the property which is subject to wear and tear, to decay or decline from natural causes, to exhaustion, and to obsolescence. ACRS does not apply to inventories or stock in trade, works of art, or to land apart from the improvements or physical development added to it. ACRS does not apply to natural resources which are subject to the allowance for depletion provided in section 611. No deduction shall be allowed under ACRS for automobiles or other vehicles used solely for pleasure, for a building used by the taxpayer solely as his residence, or for furniture or furnishings therein, personal effects, or clothing; but properties and costumes used exclusively in a business, such as a theatrical business, may be recovery property. For rules regarding the recovery allowance for property which is used partly for business and partly for personal purposes, or which is converted from personal to business use, see §§1.168-2(d)(2)(ii) and 1.168-2(j)(1) and (2).

(2) Intangible property. [RESERVED]

(3) Boilers fueled by oil or gas. The term "recovery property" includes property described in section 167(p), relating to boilers fueled by oil or gas, if such property otherwise qualifies as "recovery property" under section 168 and subparagraph (l) of this paragraph.

(b) Classes of recovery property. Each item of recovery property shall be assigned to one of the following classes of property:

(1) 3-year property,

(2) 5-year property,

(3) 10-year property,

(4) 15-year real property, or

(5) 15-year public utility property.

Any property which is treated as included in a class of property by reason of paragraph (c)(1), (2), (3), (4), or (5) of this §1.168-3 shall not be treated as property included in any other class.

(c) 3-, 5-, 10-, and 15-year recovery property; definitions—(1) 3-year property. The following recovery property is included in the 3-year class:

(i) Section 1245 class property (as defined in paragraph (c)(6) of this §1.168-3) with a present class life (as defined in paragraph (c)(8)) of 4 years or less,

(ii) Section 1245 class property predominantly used in connection with research and experimentation (as described in section 174 and §1.174-2(a)). Property is used in connection with research and experimentation if the property is used (A) by its owner to conduct research and experimentation in its owner's trade or business, (B) by its owner to conduct research and experimentation for another person, (C) by a lessee to conduct research and experimentation in its trade or business, or (D) by the lessee to conduct research and experimentation for another person, and

(iii) Any race horse which is more than 2 years old at the time the horse is placed in service and any other horse which is more than 12 years old at the time the horse is placed in service. A horse is more than 2 (or 12) years old after 24 (or 144) months after its actual birthdate.

Examples of 3-year recovery property are automobiles and light-duty trucks.

(2) 5-year property. The following recovery property is included in the 5-year class: Section 1245 class property which is not 3-year property (as defined in paragraph (c)(1)), or 10-year property (as defined in paragraph (c)(3)), or 15-year public utility property (as defined in paragraph (c)(5) and (10)). Included in the 5-year recovery property class are horses which are not included in the 3-year recovery property class, property which, prior to January 1, 1981, may have been depreciated under the retirement-replacement-betterment method (subject to the provisions of §1.168-5(a)), single-purpose agricultural and horticultural structures, and storage facilities (other than buildings and their structural components) used in connection with the distribution of petroleum or any of its primary products. Primary products of petroleum are products described in §1.993-3(g)(3)(i).

(3) 10-year property. The following recovery property is included in the 10-year class:

(i) Public utility property with a present class life of more than 18 years but not more than 25 years, other than section 1250 class property (as defined in paragraph (c)(7)) or 3-year property,

(ii) Section 1250 class property with a present class life of 12.5 years or less,

(iii) Railroad tank cars,

(iv) Manufactured homes (as defined in 42 U.S.C. section 5402(6)) which are section 1250 class property used as dwelling units, and

(v) Qualified coal utilization property (as defined in paragraph (c)(9)) which would otherwise be 15-year public utility property.

A building (and its structural components, if any) is not treated as having a present class life of 12.5 years or less if, in its original use (as defined in paragraph (c)(11) of this §1.168-3), the building (and its structural components, if any) does not have a present class life of 12.5 years or less. Thus, for example, a theme park structure is considered 10-year property only if the orignal use of such structure is as a theme park structure.

(4) 15-year real property. Fifteen-year real property is section 1250 class property which does not have a present class life of 12.5 years or less (including section 1250 class property which does not have a present class life). Examples of 15-year real property are office buildings and elevators and escalators.

(5) 15-year public utility property. Fifteen-year public utility property is public utility property, other than section 1250 class property or 3-year property, with a present class life of more than 25 years. Examples of 15-year public utility property are: most property in electric utility steam production plants, gas utility manufactured gas production plants, water utility property, and telephone distribution plants.

(6) Section 1245 class property defined. For purposes of section 168 and §§1.168-1 through 1.168-6, section 1245 class property is tangible property described in section 1245(a)(3) (other than subparagraphs (C) and (D)). See §1.168-4 for exclusion of certain "section 1245 class property" from recovery property.

(7) Section 1250 class property defined. For purposes of section 168 and §§1.168-1 through 1.168-6, section 1250 class property is property described in section 1250(c) and property described in section 1245 (a)(3)(C). See §1.168-4 for exclusion of certain "section 1250 class property" from recovery property.

(8) Present class life defined. (i) For purposes of section 168 and §§1.168-1 through 1.168-6, present class life is the asset depreciation range (ADR) class life ("midpoint" or "asset guideline period") (if any) applicable with respect to the property as of January 1, 1981, published in Rev. Proc. 83-35 [1983-1 C.B. 745]. No changes will be made to the classes or class lives which are set forth in Rev. Proc. 83-35.

(ii) The application of subdivision (i) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. X purchases a light-duty truck to be used in his trade or business. The ADR midpoint life of this asset as of January 1, 1981, determined under Rev. Proc. 83-35 is 4 years. Since this truck is section 1245 class property with a present class life of 4 years or less, it is 3-year recovery property under section 168.

(9) Qualified coal utilization property. See section 168(g)(8) for the definition of "qualified coal utilization property."

(10) Public utility property. (i) For purposes of section 168 and §§1.168-1 through 1.168-6, the term "public utility property" means property used predominantly in the trade or business of the furnishing or sale of—

(A) Electrical energy, water, or sewage disposla services,

(B) Gas or steam through a local distribution system,

(C) Telephone services, or other communication services if furnished or sold by Communications Satellite Corporation for purposes authorized by the Communications Satellite Act of 1962 (47 U.S.C. section 701), or

(D) Transportation of gas or steam by pipeline, if the rates for such furnishing or sale, as the case may be, are regulated, i.e., are established or approved by a State (including the District of Columbia) or political subdivision thereof, by any agency or instrumentality of the United States, or by a public service or public utility commission or other similar body of any State or political subdivision thereof. A taxpayer's rates are "regulated" if they are established or approved on a rate-of-return basis. Rates regulated on a rate-of-return basis are an authorization to collect revenues that cover the taxpayer's cost of providing goods or services, including a fair return on the taxpayer's investment in providing such goods or services, where the taxpayer's costs and investment are determined by use of a uniform system of accounts prescribed by the regulatory body. A taxpayer's rates are not "regulated" if they are established or approved on the basis of maintaining competition within an industry, insuring adequate service to customers of an industry, insuring adequate security for loans, or charging "reasonable" rates within an industry since the taxpayer is not authorized to collect revenues based on the taxpayer's cost of providing goods or services. Rates are considered to be "established or approved" if a schedule of rates is filed with a regulatory body that has the power to approve such rates, even though the regulatory body takes no action on the filed schedule or generally leaves undisturbed rates filed by the taxpayer.

(ii) Public utility property includes property which is leased to others by a taxpayer, where the leasing of such property is part of the lessor's public utility activity, as described in subdivision (i). Public utility property also includes property leased to a person who uses such property predominately in a public utility activity, as described in subdivision (i).

(11) "Original use". The term "original use" means the first use to which the property is put, whether or not such use corresponds to other use of such property by the taxpayer.

§1.168-4 Exclusions from ACRS.

(a) Property placed in service by the taxpayer before January 1, 1981. ACRS does not apply with respect to property placed in service by the taxpayer before January 1, 1981. See §1.168-2(l)(2) for when property is placed in service. As provided in paragraph (d) of this section, ACRS does not apply with respect to property placed in service before January 1, 1981, which is transferred in certain "churning" transactions. If property is excluded from ACRS, the provisions of section 167 (and related provisions) apply in determining the allowable depreciation deduction with respect to such property.

(b) Property amortized or depreciated other than in term of years—(1) Depreciation. If—

(i) Property can property be depreciated under a method not expressed in a term of years (such as unit-of-production) which, before January 1, 1981, was a recognized method within the particular industry for the type of property in question, and

(ii) The taxpayer properly elects such treatment for such property in accordance with section 168(f)(4) and §1.168-5(e) for the first taxable year for which an ACRS deduction would (but for this election) be allowable with respect to such property in the hands of the taxpayer, then such property shall be entirely excluded from ACRS so long as it remains in the hands of such taxpayer. A taxpayer may elect to apply a depreciation method not expressed in a term of years (and thereby exclude the property from ACRS) with respect to some or all property within the same recovery class and placed in service in the same taxable year.

(2) Amortization. If—

(i) The basis of a recovery property may be amortized, in lieu of being depreciated, under any section of the Code (such as section 167(k), relating to expenditures to rehabilitate low-income rental housing, or section 169, relating to pollution control facilities), and

(ii) The taxpayer properly elects to amortize such property in accordance with the relevant amortization provision, then the amount subject to such amortization shall be excluded from the property's unadjusted basis as defined in section 168(d)(1)(A) and §1.168-2(d). A taxpayer may elect amortization with respect to one property (or a portion thereof) and apply ACRS with respect to other property (or the remaining portion) within the same recovery class and placed in service in the same taxable year.

(c) Special rule for public utility property. [Reserved]

(d) Anti-churning rules for certain transactions in property placed in service before 1981—(1) In general. To be eligible for ACRS, property must be placed in service by the taxpayer after 1980. The anti-churning rules of section 168(e)(4) and this paragraph (d) are designed generally to deny ACRS to property in service before 1981 in the absence of a significant change in ownership or use.

(2) Section 1245 class property—(i) In general. Section 1245 class property, as defined in section 168(g)(3) and §1.168-3(c)(6), acquired by the taxpayer after December 31, 1980, will not qualify for ACRS if—

(A) The property was owned or used at any time during 1980 by the taxpayer or a related person,

(B) The property is acquired from a person who owned such property at any time during 1980, and, as part of the transaction, the user of the property does not change,

(C) The property is leased by the taxpayer for more than 3 months to a person (or a person related to such person) who owned or used such property at any time during 1980, or

(D) The property is acquired in a transaction in which the user of such property does not change, and the property does not qualify for ACRS in the hands of the person from whom the property is so acquired due to subdivisions (B) and (C) of this paragraph (d)(2)(i).

See section 168(e)(4)(D) and subparagraph (6) of this paragraph (d) for definition of the term "related person". See subparagraph (3) of this paragraph (d) for the treatment of the acquisition of section 1245 class property acquired incidental to the acquisition of section 1250 class property. See subparagraph (4) of this paragraph (d) for other special rules.

(ii) Change in user. For purposes of subdivision (i) of this paragraph (d)(2), the user of a section 1245 class property shall not be considered to have changed as part of a transaction if the property is physically used, for more than 3 months after its transfer, by the same person (or a related person) who used such property before the transfer, or if such person, pursuant to a plan, resumes use of the property after the transfer. If the former owner (or a related person) continues to operate section 1245 class property through an arrangement such as a management contract for more than 3 months after the transfer, then all facts and circumstances will be taken into account in determining whether the user of the property has changed as part of such transaction for purposes of section

168(e)(4)(A) and subdivision (i) of this paragraph (d)(2). Among the factors which would indicate that the user of section 1245 property has changed in such case are—

(A) The arrangement in question is a customary commercial practice,

(B) The transaction in question has been arranged at arm's length, and

(C) The new owner has assumed all benefits and burdens of ownership. For purposes of this subdivision (ii)(C), the former owner will not be considered to have retained any benefits and burdens of ownership solely by reason of receiving contingent payments if such payments—

(1) Represent the real value of services rendered,

(2) Are reasonable in amount, and

(3) Are ordinary and customary in both nature and amount within the industry and region for the transaction in question.

(3) Section 1250 class property. A section 1250 class property, as defined in section 168(g)(4) and §1.168-3(c)(7), acquired by the taxpayer after December 31, 1980, will not qualify for ACRS if—

(i) The property was owned at any time during 1980 by the taxpayer or a related person,

(ii) The property is leased by the taxpayer for more than 3 months to a person (or a person related to such person) who owned such property at any time during 1980, or

(iii) The property is acquired in an exchange described in section 1031 (relating to exchange of property held for productive use or investment), section 1033 (relating to involuntary conversions), section 1038 (relating to certain reacquisitions of real property), or section 1039 (relating to certain sales of low-income housing projects), to the extent that the basis of such property includes an amount representing the adjusted basis of other property owned by the taxpayer or a related person at any time during 1980. The excess of the basis of the property acquired over the adjusted basis of such other property, eligible for ACRS, provided that the exchange is not otherwise treated as a "churning" transaction under section 168(e)(4) and this paragraph. Property which does not qualify for ACRS under this subdivision shall be considered, for purposes of this section, as owned by the taxpayer during 1980.

See section 168(e)(4)(D) and subparagraph (6) of this paragraph (d) for definition of the term "related person". If, in a transaction, section 1245 class property is acquired incidental to the acquisition of section 1250 class property, then the rules of section 168(e)(4)(B) and this subparagraph shall apply with respect to the section 1245 property acquired in such transaction instead of the rules of section 168(e)(4)(A) and paragraph (d)(2) of this section. The preceding sentence will not apply in transactions where section 1245 property constitutes a significant portion of the property acquired.

(4) Special rules. (i) Property under construction during 1980. For purposes of paragraph (d)(2) and (3) of this section, a taxpayer shall not be deemed to own property under construction during 1980 until it is placed in service, as described in §1.168-2(l)(2).

(ii) Entire property excluded. Except as provided in paragraph (d)(3)(iii) of this section (relating to excess basis in substituted basis transactions), subdivision (iii) of this paragraph (d)(4) (relating to the lease of a portion of section 1250 class property), and paragraph (d)(6)(ii)(C) of this section (relating to transactions between persons related by reason of the application of §1.267(b)-1(b)), if property is acquired in a transaction described in paragraph (d)(2) or (3) of this section, the entire property shall be excluded from ACRS.

(iii) Lease of portion of section 1250 class property. Paragraph (d)(3)(ii) of this section (relating to the lease of section 1250 class property) shall apply only with respect to that portion of the property (determined on a fair market value basis) that is leased to the person (or to a person related to such person) who owned the property during 1980. The portion of the property excluded from ACRS shall not exceed the portion of the property which was owned by the lessee (or a person related to the lessee) during 1980.

(iv) Undivided interests. Subject to the provisions of paragraph (d)(7) of this section (relating to avoidance), if an undivided interest in property is acquired, and the resulting arrangement is not a partnership for tax purposes, then such interest shall be treated as a separate item of property for purposes of paragraph (d)(2) and (3) of this section.

(v) Acquisition by or lease to 1980 owner or user. If recovery property is acquired by, or leased to, its 1980 owner (or, in the case of section 1245 class property, its 1980 owner or user), or a related person, then the property shall cease to qualify for ACRS.

(vi) Sale-leaseback of disqualified property. If property which does not qualify for ACRS under this section becomes the subject of a sale-leaseback transaction, then the property shall not become ACRS property by virtue of that transaction.

(5) Certain nonrecognition transactions—(i) In general. With respect to property placed in service by the transferor or distributor before January 1, 1981, and which is acquired by the taxpayer after December 31, 1980, in a nonrecognition transaction described in section 168(e)(4)(C) and in subdivision (ii) of this paragraph (d)(5), ACRS shall not apply to the extent that the property's basis in the hands of the taxpayer is determined by reference to its basis in the hands of the transferor or distributor. In such a transaction, the taxpayer shall be treated as the transferor or distributor for purposes of computing the depreciation allowance under section 167 with respect to so much of the basis of the acquired property in the hands of the taxpayer as does not exceed its adjusted basis in the hands of the transferor or distributor. However, the taxpayer shall treat the portion of the basis of the acquired property which exceeds the adjusted basis in the hands of the transferor or distributor as a separate item of property, eligible for ACRS, provided that sale or exchange of such property by the transferor or distributor to the taxpayer would not be treated as a "churning" transaction under section 168(e)(4) and this paragraph.

(ii) Nonrecognition transactions affected. Subdivision (i) of this paragraph (d)(5) applies to transactions described in any of the following provisions:

(A) Section 332 (relating to distributions in complete liquidation of an 80 percent or more controlled subsidiary corporation) except where the basis of the assets distributed is determined under section 334(b)(2) (as in effect on August 31, 1982);

(B) Section 351 (relating to transfer to a corporation controlled by transferor);

(C) Section 361 (relating to exchanges pursuant to certain corporate reorganizations);

(D) Section 371(a) (relating to exchanges pursuant to certain receivership and bankruptcy proceedings);

(E) Section 374(a) (relating to exchanges pursuant to certain railroad reorganizations);

(F) Section 721 (relating to transfers to a partnership in exchange for a partnership interest); and

(G) Section 731 (relating to distributions by a partnership to a partner).

A distribution of property by a partnership to a partner in liquidation of the partner's interest in the partnership (where the basis of the distributed property to the partner is determined under section 732(b)) is not a transaction described in section 168(e)(4)(C) and this subdivision (ii) since, in such case, the basis of the property is determined by reference to the partner's adjusted basis in his interest in the partnership and not by reference to the basis of the property in the hands of the partnership. However, such distribution may be described in paragraph (d)(2) or (3) of this section.

(iii) Successive application. Property which does not qualify for ACRS by reason of its acquisition in a nonrecognition transaction will not qualify for ACRS if it is subsequently transferred in another nonrecognition transaction. The preceding sentence shall apply to the extent that the basis of the property in the hands of the transferee does not exceed the basis that does not qualify for ACRS in the hands of the transferor.

(6) Related person defined—(i) In general. For purposes of this paragraph (d) except as provided in section 168(e)(4)(E) and in subparagraph (11) of this paragraph (d), persons are related if—

(A) They bear a relationship specified in section 267(b) or section 707(b)(1) and the regulations thereunder, or

(B) They are engaged in trades or businesses under common control (as defined by subsections (a) and (b) of section 52 and the regulations thereunder).

For purposes of applying section 267(b) and 707(b)(1) with respect to this paragraph (d)(6), "10 percent" shall be substituted for "50 percent".

(ii) Special rules. (A) In general, persons are related if they are related either immediately before or immediately after the taxpayer's acquisition of the property in question. When a partnership's acquisition of property results from the termination of another partnership under section 708(b)(1)(B), whether the acquiring partnership is related to such other partnership shall be determined by comparing the ownership of the acquiring partnership immediately after the acquisition with that of the terminated partnership as it existed immediately before the event resulting in such termination occurs. Similarly, when the acquisition of property by a partner results from the termination of a partnership under section 708(b)(1)(A), whether the acquiring person is related to the partnership shall be determined immediately before the event resulting in such termination occurs.

(B) If a person would be related to a corporation, partnership, or trust which owned (or, in the case of section 1245 class property, owned or used) property during 1980 but for the fact that such corporation, partnership, or trust is no longer in existence when the taxpayer acquires such property, then, for purposes of this subparagraph (6), such corporation, partnership, or trust is deemed to be in existence when the taxpayer acquires such property. Similarly, when a taxpayer leases property to a newly-created corporation, partnership, or trust, and a person who owned (or, in the case of section 1245 class property, owned or used) such property during 1980 would be related to the lessee but for the fact that such corporation, partnership, or trust is not in existence when the taxpayer acquires such property, then, for purposes of this subparagraph (6), such corporation, partnership, or trust is deemed to be in existence when the taxpayer acquires such property.

(C) If persons are related by reason of the application of §1.267(b)-1(b), then only a portion of the property shall be excluded from ACRS, consistent with the principles of §1.267(b)-1(b). See, however, paragraph (d)(7) of this section (relating to avoidance).

(D) If persons are not considered to be engaged in trades or businesses under common control (as defined by subsections (a) and (b) of section 52 and the regulations thereunder), but are considered to be related persons by substituting "10 percent" for "50 percent" within the provisions of section 267(b) or 707(b)(1), then such persons are considered to be related persons for purposes of this subparagraph (6).

(7) Avoidance purpose indicated. Property acquired by the taxpayer after December 31, 1980, does not qualify for ACRS if it is acquired in a transaction one of whose principal purposes is to avoid the operation of the effective date rule of section 168(e)(1) and the "anti-churning" rules of section 168(e)(4), and the rules of this section. A transaction will be presumed to have a principal purpose of avoidance if it does not effect a significant change in ownership or use of property in service before 1981 commensurate with that otherwise required for ACRS to apply. Among the circumstances in which a principal avoidance purpose may be indicated, and in which the property involved in the transfer may therefore be ineligible for ACRS, are—

(i) The same person owns (other than as a nominee), directly or indirectly, more than a 10 percent interest in the taxpayer (or the taxpayer's lessee) and in a person who owned (or, in the case of section 1245 class property, owned or used) the property during 1980;

(ii) There is a mere change in form of the ownership of property owned by a person during 1980 (such as from a partnership to undivided interests);

(iii) The taxpayer (or the taxpayer's lessee) and a person who owned (or, in the case of section 1245 class property, owned or used) the property during 1980 are engaged in trade or businesses under common control within the meaning of section 52(a) and (b) and the regulations thereunder, substituting a 25 percent test for the 50 percent tests of §1.52-1, or there is a similar 25 percent common ownership in the property (or in a leasehold of the property) and in a person who owned (or, in the case of section 1245 class property, owned or used) the property during 1980;

(iv) The taxpayer (or the taxpayer's lessee) is related during 1980 to the person who owned (or, in the case of section 1245 class property, owned or used) the property during 1980;

(v) Section 1250 class property is operated by a person who owned such property during 1980 (or by a related person) under a management contract and, had such property been section 1245 class property instead of section 1250 class property, the user would be considered not to have changed as part of the transaction (see §1.168-4(d)(2)(ii));

(vi) The taxpayer leases section 1250 class property to a person and, through one or more subleases, the property is leased to a person who owned such property during 1980 (or to a related person); or

(vii) Section 1245 class property is acquired in an exchange described in section 1031, relating to exchange of property held for productive use or investment, to the extent that the basis of such property includes an amount representing the adjusted basis of other property owned by the taxpayer or a related person at any time during 1980. In the case of property which does not qualify for ACRS under this subdivision, rules similar to those of paragraph (d)(3)(iii) of this section shall apply. In general, the avoidance intent indicated in subdivisions (i) through (vii) may be rebutted by evidence of an overriding business purpose (or purposes) for the transaction. However, even if the taxpayer demonstrates an overriding business purpose (or purposes) for the transaction, the property will not qualify for ACRS if the Internal Revenue Service establishes that one of the principal purposes of the transaction is to avoid the operation of the effective date rule of section 168(e)(1) and the "anti-churning" rules of section 168(e)(4), and the rules of this section.

(8) Adjustment to basis of partnership property. ACRS shall not apply with respect to any adjustment to the basis of partnership property made under section 734(b) (relating to the optional adjustment to the basis of undistributed partnership property) or section 743(b) (relating to the optional adjustment to the basis of partnership property) if the partnership property itself does not qualify for ACRS because of section 168(e) and this section. If a partnership has property which qualifies for ACRS, see §1.168-2(n) for the application of ACRS to the adjustments, pursuant to section 734(b) or 743(b), to the basis of such property.

(9) Acquisitions by reason of death. Property acquired by the taxpayer after December 31, 1980, by reason of death, for which the basis is determined under section 1014(a), is eligible for ACRS.

(10) Reduction in unadjusted basis. The unadjusted basis of property for purposes of section 168(d)(1) and §1.168-2(d) shall be reduced to the extent that such property does not qualify for ACRS due to the application of this paragraph (d). The basis not taken into account for ACRS purposes pursuant to the preceding sentence shall be taken into account by the taxpayer for purposes of other provisions of the Code.

(11) Certain corporate transactions. For purposes of section 168(e)(4) and §1.168-4(d)(6), a corporation is not related to a distributee (or, in the case of a transaction described in section 338, the new target corporation) if—

(i) Such corporation is a distributing corporation in a transaction to which section 334(b)(2)(B) (as in effect on August 31, 1982) applies, or is a target corporation for which an election under section 338 is made, and at least 80 percent of the stock of such corporation (as described in section 334(b)(2)(B) or 338(d)(3)) is acquired by purchase after December 31, 1980, or

(ii) Such corporation is a distributing corporation in a complete liquidation to which section 331(a) applies, or a partial liquidation to which section 331(a) (as in effect on August 31, 1982) applies, or to which section 302(b)(4) applies, and the distributee (or a related person) by himself or together with one or more persons acquires the amount of stock specified in subdivision (i) of this paragraph (d)(11) by purchase after December 31, 1980.

(e) Examples. The application of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). In 1978 A buys a house which he uses as his family residence. In 1983, A's family moves out, and A converts the house into rental property. A may not use ACRS with respect to the property because he placed it in service before 1981. A must depreciate the property in accordance with section 167 and the regulations thereunder, subject to the other applicable provisions of the Code.

Example (2). In 1982 X Corp. purchases and places in service two major pieces of manufacturing equipment. One is newly constructed, while the other is a used machine expected to produce only 5,000 additional units. X elects to depreciate the used machine under the unit-of-production method. Such method was properly used within X's industry before 1981. Assuming that X has met the requirements of section 168(f)(4) and §1.168-5(e), the used machine will not be recovery property as defined in section 168(c)(1) and §1.168-3(a). X will apply ACRS with respect to the new machine even though it properly elected to apply the unit-of-production method with respect to the used machine.

Example (3). On November 15, 1984, B, a calendar year taxpayer, places in service a 10-unit apartment building for individuals and families of low income under section 8 of the United States Housing Act of 1937. B acquired the building for $100,000 and has incurred an additional $100,000 of expenditures for its rehabilitation, which B elects to amortize under section 167(k). In 1984, B is entitled to an allowance under ACRS of $2,000 (i.e., .02 × $100,000). The $100,000 which B amortizes under section 167(k) is not included in the unadjusted basis and therefore is not recovered under the provisions of ACRS.

Example (4). C is an individual engaged in the trucking business. On February 1, 1983, C purchases a new truck from a dealer. As is his normal business practice, C financed the transaction partly by trading in a truck C had used in his business for the previous 3 years. Although this transaction is described in section 1031, it does not have as one of its principal purposes avoidance of the rules of section 168(e)(1) and (4). C therefore will use ACRS with respect to the entire unadjusted basis of the truck purchased in 1983, including cash paid, indebtedness incurred, and the amount attributable to the adjusted basis of the used truck traded in.

Example (5). On June 1, 1983, in a transaction described in section 1031, Corporation M exchanges a corporate jet, acquired before 1981, for a very similar corporate jet owned and also acquired before 1981 by unrelated Corporation N. There is no significant difference to M or N in the use of the jet acquired from that of the jet exchanged, and the operations of each corporation do not change significantly as a result of the transaction. These facts and circumstances indicate that one of the principal purposes of this transaction is to avoid the principles of paragraphs (1) and (4) of section 168(e). Thus, absent evidence of an overriding business purpose (or purposes) for the transaction, neither of the jets will be treated as recovery property. Further, even if an overriding business purpose (or purposes) for the transaction is (or are) demonstrated, the property will not be eligible for ACRS if the Internal Revenue Service establishes that one of the principal purposes of the transaction is to avoid the principles of paragraphs (1) and (4) of section 168(e). The result in this example would be the same if, after the exchange, M or N sold the acquired property and leased it back, or sold the property to a related person.

Example (6). Z Corp., owner and largest occupant of the Z Building since 1965, sells this building to an institutional investor, M Corp., on May 1, 1983. After this sale, 25 percent of the Z building is leased to Z until May 1, 1985. Because 25 percent of the Z building is leased for more than 3 months by Z, which owned the building during 1980, M may not take ACRS deductions with respect to this 25 percent portion. Such portion must be depreciated in accordance with section 167. However, ACRS will apply with respect to the portion of the Z Building which is not leased by Z for more than 3 months after the above-described sale. If Z had leased the building only until July 31, 1983, then M Corp. would apply ACRS with respect to the entire building.

Example (7). During 1980 O Corp. undertakes construction of a department store which becomes available for its assigned business function on April 1, 1981. For purposes of section 168(e)(4)(B), O is not treated as owning the department store building under construction until it placed it in service on April 1, 1981. Accordingly, ACRS will apply with respect to the building, beginning on the day it is placed in service.

Example (8). On June 1, 1983, P Corp. sells an undivided 70 percent interest in a building it has owned since March 1, 1980, to Q Corp. which is not related to P. R Corp., which is not related to P, has occupied the building as a tenant since June 1980 and will continue to occupy it after this sale. P and Q will own the building as tenants-in-common. Q, but not P, will take ACRS deductions with respect to its portion of the building. The fact that the user of the building did not change will not affect this result. However, if P and Q had formed a partnership which owned the building after the sale, no portion of the building would qualify for ACRS because the taxpayer acquiring the property after 1980 (the partnership) would be related under section 168(e)(4)(D) to a person (P) which owned the building in 1980.

Example (9). On January 1, 1984, D, a 20 percent partner in Partnership W, sells his entire partnership interest to E for $400,000. Partnership W has one asset, a building it placed in service before 1981. D's adjusted basis in his partnership interest, allocable entirely to the building, is $200,000 when it is sold. A valid election under section 754 is in effect with respect to the sale of the partnership interest. Accordingly, Partnership W makes an adjustment pursuant to section 743(b) to increase the basis of the building with respect to E from $200,000 to $400,000. Under the provisions of §1.168-4(d)(8) no portion of the increase in the basis of the partnership property with respect to E is eligible for ACRS because the partnership property itself does not qualify for ACRS due to the provisions of section 168(e)(1) and §1.168-4(a).

Example (10). In 1983, F, an individual, sells a piece of business equipment he placed in service in 1980 to X, a partnership in which F owns a 20 percent interest. No portion of such equipment will qualify for ACRS since it was acquired after 1980 by the taxpayer (Partnership X) and was owned during 1980 by a related person (partner B). The result in this example would not be changed if F owned no interest in X in 1980.

Example (11). G, an individual, has owned an apartment building containing furnished apartments since 1979. On June 1, 1983, G sells the building and its furnishings to unrelated Partnership Y. The furniture was purchased by G before 1981. Most of these apartments will continue to be occupied by the same tenants who occupied them before the sale. For purposes of section 168(e)(4)(I) and §1.168-4(d)(3), the furniture is acquired incidental to the acquisition of the building. Therefore, ACRS will apply with respect to the furniture, notwithstanding that many of the tenants who used the furniture do not change as part of the transaction.

Example (12). On June 1, 1983, Partnership Z purchases a factory which has been leased by Corporation S, an unrelated person, since 1979. Corporation S continues to use this factory for more than 3 months after the sale. The pre-1981 section 1245 class property transferred in this transaction, such as machinery and equipment, represents a significant portion of the unadjusted basis of the property purchased by Z. Since the unadjusted basis of such section 1245 class property is significant in relation to the factory's unadjusted basis, for purposes of section 168(e)(4)(I) and §1.168-4(d)(3), the machinery and equipment are not acquired incidental to the acquisition of the factory. Since the user of such machinery and equipment does not change as part of the transaction, Partnership Z may not use ACRS with respect to such section 1245 class property. However, Z will use ACRS with respect to the factory and the other section 1250 class property acquired.

Example (13). Partnership W, in which Partner E holds a 25 percent interest, has as its sole asset an office building it placed in service in 1980. On May 1, 1983, E dies, and his partnership interest, whose basis is determined under section 1014, passes to his daughter, D. ACRS is not available with respect to any increase in the basis of the partnership property with respect to D, because the partnership property itself does not qualify for ACRS due to the provisions of section 168(e)(1) and §1.168-4(a).

Example (14). On July 1, 1983, Corporation X sells a building it had owned in 1980 to Corporation Y, an unrelated person. X retains an option to repurchase this building within 5 years. This building qualifies as recovery property in Y's hands, and Y will take ACRS deductions under section 168 with respect to it. On July 1, 1985, X exercises its option and repurchases the building. When X repurchases the building, it ceases to be recovery property because the taxpayer (X) owned the building during 1980. X may not take ACRS deductions with respect to the repurchased building. Instead, X must depreciate it under section 167 and the regulations thereunder.

Example (15). F, an individual, sells his business (including section 1245 class property owned in 1980) to G, on August 1, 1983. Under their arrangement, F continues to manage the business for G, using the same equipment he had previously used. F receives as compensation for managing the business a fixed salary plus 5 percent of the gross profits. The arrangement follows customary commercial practice and was negotiated by F and G at arm's length. In addition, the amounts received (including the 5 percent of gross profits) represent the real value of the services rendered by F and are reasonable in amount. Further, receipt of 5 percent of gross profits under these circumstances is an ordinary and customary feature in the sale of a business in the industry and region in question. This arrangement results in a sufficient change in the ownership and use of the equipment that G will recover the cost of such equipment under ACRS.

Example (16). Individuals J and K each own a 50 percent interest in Partnership X, whose only asset is a building placed in service before 1981. On August 1, 1983, H, an individual, purchases a 25 percent interest each from J and K. Partnership X is deemed under section 708(b)(1)(B) to have terminated when H purchases the 50 percent interest. The building is not eligible for ACRS because the taxpayer acquiring the property after 1980 (the new partnership formed by H, J, and K) is related to the person who owned the property during 1980 (the old partnership), since J and K own more than a 10 percent interest in each of the two partnerships.

Example (17). In 1980, individual A owns all of the stock of Corporation T, which in turn owns depreciable property. In 1982, A sells the stock of T to unrelated Corporation V. Shortly thereafter, T sells some of the depreciable property it owned in 1980 to A. Under section 168(e)(4)(D), the property is not owned during 1980 by a person related to the taxpayer (A) since A is not related to the 1980 owner (T) when A acquires the property. However, an avoidance purpose is indicated under §1.168-4(d)(7)(iv) since A was related in 1980 to the 1980 owner (T). Also, A broke the relationship with T shortly before acquiring the property. Accordingly, A may not use ACRS with respect to the property acquired, unless he can demonstrate an overriding business purpose (or purposes) for the transaction. Further, even if an overriding business purpose (or purposes) for the transaction is (or are) demonstrated, the property will not be eligible for ACRS if the Internal Revenue Service establishes that one of the principal purposes of the transaction is to avoid the principles of paragraphs (1) and (4) of section 168(e).

Example (18). In 1980, individual B owns all of the stock of Corporations X and Y. In 1980, X owns depreciable property. In 1981, X liquidates. In 1982, B sells to Y property owned by X in 1980. Y may not use ACRS with respect to the acquired property. Since the taxpayer (Y) would be related to the 1980 owner (X) but for the fact that X is no longer in existence when Y acquires the property, then, under §1.168-4(d)(6)(ii)(B), X is considered to be in existence for purposes of determining whether the property was owned (or used) by a related person during 1980.

Example (19). In 1980, individual C owns all of the stock of Corporation M, which in turn owns all of the stock of Corporation N. In 1980, N owns depreciable property. In 1981, N distributes such 1980 property to M. In 1982, M sells the N stock to an unrelated person. In 1983, M distributes to C the property it received from N. Under section 168(e)(4)(D), the property is not owned during 1980 by a person related to the taxpayer (C), since C is not related to the 1980 owner (N) when C acquires the property. However, under §1.168-4(d)(7)(iv) an avoidance purpose is indicated since the taxpayer (C) is related in 1980 to the 1980 owner (N). Also, upon acquisition, C is related to the person from whom the property is acquired (M). Therefore, C may not use ACRS with respect to the property unless he demonstrates an overriding business purpose (or purposes) for the transaction. Further, even if an overriding business purpose (or purposes) for the transaction is (or are) demonstrated, the property will not be eligible for ACRS if the Internal Revenue Service establishes that one of the principal purposes of the transaction is to avoid the principles of paragraphs (1) and (4) of section 168(e).

Example (20). D owns 20 percent of Corporation X and a 20 percent interest in Partnership P. X owns depreciable property in 1980. In 1981, X sells the property to P. Under §1.267(b)-1(b), the sale is considered as occurring between X and the members of the partnership (including D) separately. Accordingly, under the principles of §1.267(b)-1(b), 20 percent of the unadjusted basis of the property is excluded from ACRS. In addition, under §1.168-4(d)(7)(i) an avoidance purpose is indicated since D owns more than a 10 percent interest in the taxpayer (P) and the person who owned the property during 1980 (X). Therefore, ACRS is not available with respect to the remainder of the unadjusted basis of the property unless an overriding business purpose (or purposes) for the transaction is (or are) demonstrated. Further, even if an overriding business purpose (or purposes) for the transaction is (or are) demonstrated, the property will not be eligible for ACRS if the Internal Revenue Service establishes that one of the principal purposes of the transaction is to avoid the principles of paragraphs (1) and (4) of section 168(e).

Example (21). In 1980, E leases section 1245 class property to F. In 1982, at the termination of the lease, F purchases the property from E and continues to use it for more than 3 months after the sale. F is not entitled to use ACRS with respect to the property since, as part of the transaction, the user of the property did not change. The result in this example would be the same if, instead of selling the property to F, E sold the property to G, subject to F's lease, with F's use continuing for more than 3 months after the sale.

Example (22). In 1980, H and I each own section 1245 class property which they use in their respective businesses. In 1981, H and I swap titles to the property, with the parties continuing to use the same property as before the exchange. Neither H nor I is entitled to use ACRS with respect to the acquired property, since the user of the property does not change as part of the transaction.

Example (23). A owns section 1250 class property in 1980. In 1981, A sells the property to B who leases it back to A. B later sells the property to C, subject to A's lease. ACRS is not available with respect to the property in the hands of C since the taxpayer (C) leases the property to a person who owned it during 1980 (A).

Example (24). D owns section 1250 class property in 1980. In 1981, D transfers the property to E (an unrelated person) in exchange for property of a like kind in a transaction described in section 1031. Subsequently, D sells to and leases back from F the property acquired from E. Under §1.168-4(d)(3)(iii), the property acquired from E is considered to have been owned by D in 1980. Therefore, ACRS is not available with respect to such property in the hands of F since the taxpayer (F) leases the property to a person who owned it during 1980 (D). The result in this example would be the same if, instead of selling the property to F, D sold it to G (regardless of whether G leased it back to D), a person related to D under section 168(e)(4)(D) and §1.168-4(d)(6).

Example (25). In 1980, Corporation X places in service section 1245 class property. In 1981, X merges into Corporation Y in a transaction described in section 368(a)(1)(A). Subsequently, Y sells to and leases back from Z the 1980 section 1245 class property acquired from X in the merger. Under §1.168-4(d)(4)(vi), ACRS is not available with respect to the property in the hands of Z.

§1.168-5 Special rules.

(a) Retirement-replacement-betterment (RRB) property—(1) RRB replacement property placed in service before January 1, 1985. (i) Except as provided in subdivision (ii), the recovery deduction for the taxable year for retirement-replacement-betterment (RRB) replacement property (as defined in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph (a)) placed in service before January 1, 1985, shall be (in lieu of the amount determined under section 168(b)) an amount determined by applying to the unadjusted basis (as defined in §1.168-2(d)) of such property the applicable percentage determined in accordance with the following table:

If the recovery year is:	And the year the property is placed in service is:
	1981	1982	1983	1984
	The applicable percentage is:
1	100	50	33	25
2	50	45	38
3	22	25
4	12

(ii) The provisions of subparagraph (1)(i) do not apply to any taxpayer who did not use the RRB method of depreciation under section 167 as of December 31, 1980. In such case, RRB replacement property placed in service by the taxpayer after December 31, 1980, shall be treated as other 5-year recovery property under section 168.

(2) RRB replacement property placed in service after December 31, 1984. RRB replacement property placed in service after December 31, 1984, is treated as other 5-year recovery property under section 168.

(3) RRB replacement property defined. RRB replacement property, for purposes of section 168, means replacement track material (including rail, ties, other track material, and ballast) installed by a railroad (including a railroad switching or terminal company) if—

(i) The replacement is made pursuant to a scheduled program for replacement.

(ii) The replacement is made pursuant to observations by maintenance-of-way personnel of specific track material needing replacement,

(iii) The replacement is made pursuant to the detection by a rail-test car of specific track material needing replacement, or

(iv) The replacement is made as a result of a casualty.

Replacements made as a result of a casualty shall be RRB replacement property only to the extent that, in the case of each casualty, the replacement cost with respect to the replacement track material exceeds $50,000.

(4) Recovery of adjusted basis of RRB property as of December 31, 1980. The taxpayer shall recover the adjusted basis of RRB property (as defined in section 168(g)(6)) as of December 31, 1980, over a period of not less than 5 years and not more than 50 years, using a rate of recovery consistent with any method described in section 167(b), including the method described in section 167(b)(2), switching to the method described in section 167(b)(3) at a time to maximize the deduction. For purposes of determining the recovery allowance under this subparagraph, salvage value shall be disregarded. Upon disposition of such RRB property, the usual rules of §§1.168-2(a)(2) and 1.168-6 or, at the taxpayer's election, the rules of §1.168-2(h)(1) (relating to mass assets) will apply. The election to use the rules of §1.168-2(h)(1) shall be made in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (e) of this section, except that the election shall be made on the taxpayer's income tax return for the first taxable year in which a disposition affected by the election occurs. If such return is filed on or before May 16, 1984 the election may be made on a return, as amended, filed within the time prescribed by law (including extensions) for filing the return for such taxable year, or on an amended return for such taxable year. An election under §1.168-2(h)(1) with respect to RRB property shall apply throughout the applicable period of recovery and for all subsequent taxable years.

(5) RRB property (which is not RRB replacement property) placed in service after December 31, 1980. Property placed in service by the taxpayer after December 31, 1980, which is not RRB replacement property and which, under the taxpayer's method of depreciation as of December 31, 1980, would have been depreciated by the taxpayer under the RRB method, is treated as other property under section 168.

(b) Transferee bound by transferor's period and method in certain transactions—(1) In general. In the case of recovery property which is transferred in a transaction described in section 168(f)(10)(B) and subparagraph (2) of this §1.168-5(b), the transferee shall be treated as the transferor for purposes of computing the recovery allowance under section 168(a) and §1.168-2 with respect to so much of the basis of such property in the hands of the transferee as does not exceed its adjusted basis (determined before the application of the section 48(q)(2) adjustment, if any) in the hands of the transferor immediately before the transfer.

(2) Transactions covered. The provisions of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph (b) apply to the following transactions:

(i) A transaction described in—

(A) Section 332 (relating to distributions in complete liquidation of an 80 percent or more controlled subsidiary corporation) except where the basis of the assets distributed is determined under section 334(b)(2) (as in effect on August 31, 1982);

(B) Section 351 (relating to transfer to a corporation controlled by transferor);

(C) Section 361 (relating to exchanges pursuant to certain corporate reorganizations);

(D) Section 371(a) (relating to exchanges pursuant to certain receivership and bankruptcy proceedings);

(E) Section 374(a) (relating to exchanges pursuant to certain railroad reorganizations);

(F) Section 721 (relating to transfers to a partnership in exchange for a partnership interest); and

(G) Section 731 (relating to distributions by a partnership to a partner);

(ii) An acquisition (other than one described in subdivision (i) of this paragraph (2)) from a related person (as defined in section 168(e)(4)(D) and §1.168-4(d)(6)). Property acquired from a decedent is not property acquired in a transaction included in this subdivision (ii); and

(iii) An acquisition followed by a leaseback to the person from whom the property is acquired. A leaseback does not exist for purposes of this subdivision (iii) if the former owner in turn subleases the property to another person.

(3) Transactions excluded. The provisions of section 168(f)(10)(A) and paragraph (b)(1) of this section do not apply—

(i) To recovery property which is transferred within 12 months after the property is placed in service by the transferor. The exception of this subdivision (i) shall not apply in the case of a transaction also described in section 168(f)(7) (i.e., a transaction in which gain or loss is not recognized in whole or in part); or

(ii) To any transaction described in section 168(e)(4) and §1.168-4(d).

(4) Allowable deduction when transferor and transferee are calendar year taxpayers or have the same fiscal year. When the transferor and transferee are calendar year taxpayers or when both the transferee and transferor have the same fiscal year—

(i) Allowable deduction in year of transfer. The allowable deduction for the recovery year in which the property is transferred shall be prorated between the transferor and the transferee on a monthly basis. For property other than 15-year real property, the transferor's deduction for such year is the deduction allowable to the transferor (determined without regard to this subdivision) multiplied by a fraction, the numerator of which is the number of months in the transferor's taxable year before the month in which the transfer occurs, and the denominator of which is the total number of months in the transferor's taxable year. The remaining portion of the transferor's allowable deduction for the taxable year of the transfer (determined without regard to this subdivision) shall be allocated to the transferee. For property transferred in a transaction described in section 332, 361, 371(a), 374(a), or 731, the two preceding sentences shall be applied by disregarding that the taxable year of the transferor may end on the date of the transfer. In the case of 15-year real property, the transferor's deduction for the year of the transfer is the deduction allowable to the transferor under the disposition rules of §1.168-2(a)(3) or (g)(4) (as the case may be). The remaining portion of the transferor's allowable deduction for the taxable year of the transfer (determined as if the transfer had not occurred) shall be allocated to the transferee. See subdivision (ii) of this paragraph (4) for a special rule applicable to certain nonrecognition transactions.

(ii) Special rule for certain nonrecognition transactions occurring as of the close of business on the last day of any calendar month. For purposes of this paragraph (b), in the case of a transaction described in section 168 (f)(10)(B)(i) and paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section, if the transfer occurs as of the close of business on the last day of any calendar month, such transfer is deemed to occur on the first day of the next calendar month.

(iii) Transferee's allowable deduction for a taxable year subsequent to the year of transfer. The allowable deduction to the transferee for taxable years subsequent to the year of transfer shall be determined as if the cost of the property were being recovered in the transferor's hands (i.e., by multiplying the transferor's applicable recovery percentage for the current recovery year by the transferor's unadjusted basis in the transferred property).

Thus, for example, A, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $30,000 and places in service 15-year real property (other than low income housing) on February 15, 1981, and transfers the property to partnership B, a calendar year partnership, on March 15, 1981, in a transaction described in section 721. A does not elect to use the optional recovery percentages provided in §1.168-2(c). For 1981, A's allowable deduction is $300 (i.e., $30,000 × .11 × 1/11). B's allowable deductions for 1981 and 1982 are $3,000 (i.e., $3,300 − $300) and $3,000 (i.e., .10 × $30,000), respectively.

(5) Allowable deduction when transferor and transferee have different taxable years. When the transferor and the transferee have different taxable years—

(i) Transferor's allowable deduction. The allowable deduction to the transferor for any taxable year in which the property is transferred shall be determined as under paragraph (b)(4)(i) and (ii) of this section.

(ii) Transferee's allowable deduction. In computing the transferee's allowable deduction for the year of transfer and for subsequent taxable years, the property shall similarly be treated as if its cost were being recovered by the transferor. However, the allowable deduction for any taxable year shall be allocated to the transferee based on the transferee's taxable year.

Thus, for example, B, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $30,000 and places in service 15-year real property (other than low income housing) on February 15, 1981. B's allowable deduction for 1981 is $3,300 (i.e., .11 × $30,000). B transfers the property to C on March 15, 1982. C's taxable year is a fiscal year ending June 30. For 1982, B's allowable deduction is $500 (i.e., $30,000 × .10 × 1/12). For fiscal year 1982, C's allowable deduction is $1,000 (i.e., the remainder of B's 1982 deduction ($2,500), allocated to the period March 1 through June 30, 1982 (4 months/10 months)). For fiscal year 1983, C's allowable deduction is $2,850 (i.e., the remainder of B's allowable 1982 deduction ($1,500), plus $1,350 which is B's allowable 1983 deduction of $2,700 ($30,000 × .09) allocated to the period January 1 through June 30, 1983 (i.e., $2,700 × 6 months/12 months).

(6) Transferee's basis lower than transferor's. If the adjusted basis of the property in the hands of the transferee is lower than the adjusted basis of the property in the hands of the transferor immediately before the transfer, see §1.168-2(d)(3) for rules relating to redeterminations of basis.

(7) Portion of basis in hands of transferee which exceeds transferor's adjusted basis. The transferee shall treat as newly purchased ACRS property that portion of the basis of the property in the hands of the transferee that exceeds the adjusted basis (determined before the application of the section 48(q)(2) adjustment, if any) of the property in the hands of the transferor immediately before the transfer. Thus, such excess shall be treated as recovery property placed in service by the transferee in the year of the transfer. The transferee may choose any applicable recovery period and recovery method with respect to such excess and need not use the transferor's recovery period and recovery method.

(8) Examples. The application of this paragraph (b) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). In 1981, A, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $12,000 and places in service 3-year recovery property. Under section 168(b)(1) and §1.168-2(b)(1), the recovery allowances for the first and second recovery years are $3,000 (i.e., .25 × $12,000) and $4,560 (i.e., .38 × $12,000), respectively. On February 15, 1983, A transfers the property to M Corporation, a calendar year taxpayer, in exchange for M's stock and $2,000 cash in a transaction described in section 351. A's recovery allowance for 1983 is $370 (i.e., (1/2 × .37) × $12,000). A's adjusted basis immediately before the exchange is $4,070 (i.e., $12,000 − $7,930). Assume A recognizes gain of $2,000 on the transaction. The basis attributable to the property under section 362 is determined to be $6,070 in the hands of M Corporation. Under the provisions of section 168(f)(10)(A) and this paragraph (b), M, the transferee, is treated the same as A, the transferor, with respect to $4,070, which is so much of M's basis as does not exceed A's adjusted basis. However, in computing the deduction allowable with respect to such basis, A's unadjusted basis ($12,000) is used. Thus, in the third recovery year, M may deduct $4,070 (i.e., 1/2 × .37) × $12,000) under section 168(f)(10)(A) and §1.168-5(b)(1) and (4). The remaining $2,000 of basis in the property is treated as newly purchased ACRS property placed in service in 1983. M may choose any applicable recovery period and recovery method with respect to such $2,000 and need not use A's recovery period and recovery method.

Example (2). In 1983, B, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $12,000 and places in service 5-year recovery property. Under section 46, B's investment tax credit for such property is $1,200. Under section 48(q)(1) and §1.168-2(d)(2), B reduces his basis by $600 (i.e., .50 × $1,200). Therefore, B's unadjusted basis for purposes of section 168 is $11,400 (i.e., $12,000 − $600). Under section 168(b)(1) and §1.168-2(b)(1), the recovery allowances for the first and second recovery years are $1,710 (i.e., .15 × $11,400) and $2,508 (i.e., .22 × $11,400), respectively. On February 15, 1985, B sells the property for $13,000 to C, a related party (as defined in section 168(e)(4)(D) and §1.168-4(d)(6)) who is a calendar year taxpayer. B's recovery allowance for 1985 is $199.50 (i.e., (1/2 × .21) × $11,400). B's adjusted basis (determined without regard to the section 48(q)(2) adjustment), immediately before the sale is $6,982.50 (i.e., $11,400 − $4,417.50). The basis of the property under section 1012 is $13,000 in C's hands. Under the provisions of section 168(f)(10)(A) and this paragraph (b), C, the transferee, is treated the same as B, the transferor, with respect to $6,982.50, which is so much of C's basis as does not exceed B's adjusted basis. However, in computing the deduction allowable with respect to such basis, B's unadjusted basis ($11,400) is used. Thus, in the third recovery year, C may deduct $2,194.50 (i.e., (1/2 × .21) × $11,400) under section 168(f)(10)(A) and §1.168-5(b)(1) and (4). In the fourth and fifth recovery years, C may deduct $2,394 (i.e., .21 × $11,400) each year. The remaining basis of $6,017.50 (i.e., $13,000 − $6,982.50) in the property is treated as newly purchased ACRS property placed in service in 1985. C may choose any applicable period and recovery method with respect to such amount and need not use B's recovery period and recovery method.

Example (3). In 1981, D, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $12,000 and places in service 5-year recovery property. Under section 168(b)(1) and §1.168-2(b)(1), the recovery allowances for the first and second recovery years are $1,800 (i.e., .15 × $12,000) and $2,640 (i.e., .22 × $12,000), respectively. On March 15, 1983, D transfers the property to N Corporation, a taxpayer having a fiscal year ending June 30, in exchange for N's stock and $2,000 cash in a transaction described in section 351. D's recovery allowance for 1983 is $420 (i.e., (½ × .21) × $12,000). D's adjusted basis in the property immediately before the exchange is $7,140 (i.e., $12,000 − $4,860). Assume D recognizes gain of $2,000 on the transaction. The basis attributable to the property under section 362 is determined to be $9,140 in the hands of N Corporation. Under the provisions of section 168(f)(10)(A) and this paragraph (b), N, the transferee, is treated the same as D, the transferor, with respect to $7,140, which is so much of N's basis as does not exceed D's adjusted basis. However, in computing the deduction allowable with respect to such basis, D's unadjusted basis ($12,000) is used. Thus, for fiscal year 1983, N Corporation's allowable deduction with respect to the carryover basis is $840 (i.e., (½ × .21) × $12,000). For fiscal years 1984 and 1985, N Corporation's allowable deduction is $2,520 (i.e., [(½ × .21) + (½ × .21)] × $12,000). For fiscal year 1986, N Corporation's allowable deduction is $1,260 (i.e., (½ × .21) × $12,000). The remaining $2,000 of basis in the property is treated as newly purchased ACRS property. N may choose any applicable recovery period and recovery method with respect to such basis and need not use D's recovery period and recovery method. N elects to use the optional recovery percentage based on a 5-year recovery period with respect to the $2,000 of basis which is treated as newly purchased ACRS property. For fiscal years 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986, 1987, and 1988, N's recovery allowances with respect to such $2,000 basis are $200, $400, $400, $400, $400, and $200, respectively. If N's fiscal year ending June 30, 1983, were a short taxable year, the provisions of §1.168-2(f) would apply with respect to the $2,000 considered newly purchased ACRS property, but not with respect to N's basis carried over from D.

Example (4). On May 1, 1981, E, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $100,000 and places in service 5-year recovery property. On April 1, 1982, E sells the property for $100,000 to F who leases it back to E. Under the provisions of paragraph (b)(3), section 168(f)(10)(A) and §1.168-5(b)(1) do not apply. Thus, F may choose any applicable recovery period and recovery method with respect to its unadjusted basis of $100,000, with recovery beginning in 1982.

Example (5). Assume the same facts as in example (4), except that the property is sold to F and leased back to E on June 15, 1982. Assume further that F's fiscal year ends on July 31, 1982. For 1981, E's allowable deduction is $15,000 (i.e., .15 × $100,000), and for 1982 is $9,166.67 (i.e., $100,000 × .22 × ½). E's adjusted basis in the property immediately before the transfer is $75,833.33 (i.e., $100,000 − $24,166.67). Under the provisions of section 168(f)(10)(A) and this paragraph (b), F, the transferee, is treated the same as E, the transferor, with respect to $75,833.33 which is so much of F's basis as does not exceed E's adjusted basis. However, in computing the deduction allowable with respect to such basis, E's unadjusted basis ($100,000) is used. Thus, for the fiscal year ending July 31, 1982, F's allowable deduction with respect to the carryover basis is $3,666.66 (i.e., ½ × .22 × $100,000)). For fiscal year 1983, F's allowable deduction is $21,416.67 (i.e., ½ × .22 × $100,000) + (½ × .21 × $100,000)). For fiscal years 1984 and 1985, F's allowable deductions are $21,000 (i.e., (.21 × ½ × $100,000) + (.21 × ½ × $100,000)). For the fiscal year ending July 31, 1986, F's allowable deduction is $8,750 (i.e., ½ × .21 × $100,000). The remaining $24,166.67 of basis is treated as newly-purchased property, placed in service by F in 1981. F may choose any applicable recovery period and method for such amount and need not use E's recovery period and method.

Example (6). On January 1, 1981, G, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $1 million and places in service 15-year real property (other than low income housing). On July 15, 1988, G sells the property to H for $1.5 million, who leases it back to G. H's taxable year is a fiscal year ending September 30. G does not elect use of the optional percentages provided by §1.168-2(c). For 1988, G's allowable deduction is $30,000 (i.e., .06 × $1,000,000 × ½). H is treated the same as G with respect to $390,000, which is so much of the basis of the property in the hands of H as does not exceed its adjusted basis to G immediately before the transfer (i.e., $1,000,000 $610,000). H's allowable deduction for its fiscal year ending September 30, 1988, with respect to such basis is $15,000 (i.e., the remainder of G's allowable deduction for 1988 ($30,000) allocated to the period July 1 through September 30, 1988 (3 months/6 months)). For H's fiscal year ending September 30, 1989, H's allowable deduction is $60,000 (i.e., the remainder of G's allowable 1988 deduction ($15,000) plus G's allowable 1989 deduction ($60,000) allocated to the period January 1 through September 30, 1989 (9 months/12 months) or $45,000). For H's fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, H's allowable deduction is $52,500 (i.e., the remainder of G's allowable deduction for 1989 ($15,000), plus G's allowable deduction for 1990 ($50,000), allocated to the period January 1 through September 30, 1990 (9 months/12 months), or $37,500). For H's fiscal year ending September 30, 1996, H is entitled to G's allowable deduction for 1995 ($50,000), allocated to the period October 1 through December 31, 1995 (3 months/12 months), or $12,500. The amount of H's basis in excess of G's adjusted basis (i.e., $1,500,000 less $390,000, or $1,110,000) is treated as newly purchased ACRS property placed in service by H on July 15, 1988. H may use any applicable recovery period and method with respect to such basis. Thus, assuming H does not elect the optional percentages provided by §1.168-2(c), H has an additional allowable deduction for its year ending September 30, 1988, of $33,300 (i.e., .03 × $1,110,000). For its fiscal year ending September 30, 1989, H's allowable deduction with respect to such basis is $122,100 (i.e., .11 × $1,110,000).

Example (7). On January 1, 1981, partnership P, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $1,000,000 and places in service 15-year real property (other than low income housing) which is the only asset of the partnership. At no time does the partnership have an election under section 754 in effect. P is owned equally by partners A, B, and C. On April 18, 1985, individual D purchases the interests on B and C for $1,500,000, thereby terminating the partnership under section 708(b)(1)(B). The deduction allowable with respect to the property for 1985 prior to the termination if $17,500 (i.e., $1,000,000 × .07 × ½). The partnership's adjusted basis in the property immediately before the termination is $592,500 (i.e., $1,000,000 - $407,500). Under the provisions of section 168(f)(10)(A) and §.168-5(b)(1), the new partnership which is created by A and D is treated the same as the old partnership with respect to $592,500, which is so much of the adjusted basis of the property to the new partnership as does not exceed its adjusted basis to the old partnership. However, in computing the allowable deduction with respect to such basis the old partnership's unadjusted basis ($1,000,000) is used. Thus, for 1985, the deduction allowable to the new partnership with respect to such basis is $52,500 (i.e., $1,000,000 × .07 × ½) and for 1986 is $60,000 (i.e., $1,000,000 × .06). This result would be the same if D purchased a 95 percent interest in the partnership. Recovery of such basis will be completed in 1995. The new partnership's basis in the property in excess of that of the old partnership is taken into account under ACRS as if it were newly-purchased recovery proerty placed in service in 1985. Any applicable period and method may be used with respect to such basis.

Example (8). In 1981, Corporation X, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $100,000 and places in service 5-year recovery property. Under section 1.168(b)(1) and §1.168-2(b)(1), X's recovery allowance for 1981 is $15,000. On March 15, 1982, X merges into Corporation Y in a transaction described in section 368(a)(1)(A) solely in exchange for Y stock. Y's taxable year is a fiscal year ending August 31. X's recovery allowance for 1982 is $3,666.66 (i.e., ½ × .22 × $100,000). Under section 362, Y's basis in the property is the same as the property's adjusted basis in the hands of X immediately before the transfer. Therefore, for fiscal year 1982, Y's allowable deduction is $11,000 which is the remainder of X's allowable deduction for 1982, $18,333.34 (i.e., $22,000 $3,666.66) allocated to the period March 1, 1982, through August 31, 1982 (i.e., 6 months/10 months). For fiscal year 1983, Y's allowable deduction is $21,333.34 which is the remainder of X's allowable deduction for 1982 ($7,333.34) plus the deduction which would be allowable to X in 1983 (i.e., $100,000 × .21, or $21,000) allocated to the period January 1 through August 31, 1983 (i.e., $21,000 × 8 months/12 months or $14,000). In computing the deductions allowable to X and Y, the fact that X's taxable year ends on the date of the merger is disregarded.

(c) Recovery property reacquired by the taxpayer—(1) In general. Recovery property which is disposed of and then reacquired by the taxpayer shall be treated (for purposes of computing the allowable deduction under section 168(a) and §1.168-2) as if such property had not been disposed of by the taxpayer. This paragraph (c)(1) generally applies only to such much of the taxpayer's adjusted basis in the reacquired property as does not exceed his adjusted basis at the time he disposed of the property.

(2) Taxpayers to whom provisions apply. The provisions of section 168(f)(10)(C) and paragraph (c)(1) of this section apply only to a taxpayer who, at the time of the disposition of the property, anticipates a reacquisition of the same property.

(3) Exceptions. Section 168(f)(10)(C) and paragraph (c)(1) of this section shall not apply—

(i) To recovery property which is disposed of during the same taxable year that the property is placed in service by the taxpayer, or

(ii) To any transaction described in section 168(e)(4) and §1.168-4(d).

(4) Taxpayer resumes prior recovery. For purposes of paragraph (c)(1) of this §1.168-5, the reacquiring taxpayer shall resume the recovery under §1.168-2 applicable at the time of the disposition. For example, if the taxpayer originally uses a 3-year recovery period and the applicable percentages prescribed in section 168 (b)(1) and §1.168-2(b)(1), in the year of reacquisition the recovery allowance is computed by applying the applicable percentage for the year of disposition to the original unadjusted basis (i.e., the unadjusted basis at the time the taxpayer originally placed the recovery property in service).

(5) Portion of unadjusted basis in reacquired property which exceeds taxpayer's adjusted basis at the time of disposition. That part of the unadjusted basis in the reacquired property which exceeds the taxpayer's adjusted basis in the property at the time of disposition shall be treated generally as newly purchased ACRS property. For property other than a building, any appropriate recovery period and method may be used with respect to such excess. For a building, the taxpayer must use the same recovery period and method with respect to such excess as are used for the building, unless such excess would qualify as a substantial improvement under §1.168-2(e)(4) if paid or incurred by the taxpayer for an improvement if he had continued to own the building.

(6) Unadjusted basis in reacquired property lower than taxpayer's adjusted basis at time of disposition. If the unadjusted basis in the reacquired property is lower than the taxpayer's adjusted basis in the property at the time of disposition, see §1.168-2(d)(3) for rules relating to redetermination of basis.

(7) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). In 1981 A, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $6,000 and places in service 3-year recovery property. A does not elect an optional recovery percentage under §1.168-2(c). Under section 168(b)(1) and §1.168-2(b)(1), A's recovery allowance for 1981 is $1,500 (i.e., .25 × $6,000). A wants to change his method of cost recovery from the use of the accelerated percentages to the use of the optional straight line percentages. To effectuate this change, A sells the property to B in 1982 for $7,000 anticipating that B will sell the property back to A. B does not elect to use an optional recovery percentage. B's recovery deduction for 1982 is $1,750 (i.e., .25 × $7,000). In 1983 A reacquires the property from B for $9,000. With respect to that portion of A's unadjusted basis in the reacquired property which does not exceed the adjusted basis at the time of disposition (i.e., $4,500), A's recovery allowance for 1983 is determined as if A had not disposed of the property, that is, by applying the percentage (38 percent) applicable for the second recovery year (i.e., 1982, the year of disposition) to the original unadjusted basis ($6,000). Thus, A's allowable deduction is $2,280 (i.e., .38 × $6,000). That portion of the unadjusted basis in the reacquired property which exceeds A's adjusted basis at the time of disposition (i.e., $4,500) is treated as newly purchased ACRS property placed in service in 1983. A may use any appropriate recovery period and method for such excess. Thus, if A uses the tables under §1.168-2(b)(1), A's recovery allowance for 1983 also includes $1,125 (i.e., .25 × $4,500). A's recovery allowances for 1984 are $2,220 (i.e., .37 × $6,000) plus $1,710 (i.e., .38 × $4,500). A's recovery allowance for 1985 is $1,665 (i.e., .37 × $4,500).

Example (2). In 1981 C, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $15,000 and places in service 3-year recovery property and elects under §1.168-2(c) the optional 5-year recovery period using the straight line method. Under §1.168-2(c)(4), C's recovery allowance for 1981 is $1,500 (i.e., .10 × $15,000). C wants to change his method of cost recovery from the use of the optional straight line percentages to the use of the accelerated percentages. Consent to change is not granted to C under section 168(f)(4). Therefore, C tries to effectuate this change by selling the property to D in 1982 for $16,000 anticipating that D will sell the property back to C. D does not to elect to use the optional recovery percentages. D's recovery allowance for 1982 is $4,000 (i.e., .25 × $16,000). In 1983, C reacquires the property from D for $17,000. With respect to that portion of C's unadjusted basis in the reacquired property that does not exceed the adjusted basis at the time of disposition (i.e., $13,500), C must use the optional recovery percentages originally elected. C's recovery allowances for 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986, and 1987 are determined as if C had not disposed of the property, that is, by applying the applicable percentages beginning in the second recovery year to the original unadjusted basis ($15,000). Thus, C's allowable deductions are $3,000, $3,000, $3,000, $3,000, and $1,500, respectively. With respect to that portion of the unadjusted basis in the reacquired property which exceeds C's adjusted basis at the time of disposition (i.e., $3,500), C may use any appropriate recovery period and method. Cost recovery for this portion of the reacquired property begins in 1983 as if C placed the property in service in that year.

Example (3). On February 15, 1981, E, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $30,000 and places in service 15-year real property (other than low income housing) and does not elect the optional straight line percentages under §1.168-2(c). Under §1.168-2(b)(2), E's recovery allowance for 1981 is $3,300 (i.e., .11 × $30,000). E wants to change his method of cost recovery from the use of the accelerated percentages to the use of the optional straight line percentages. To effectuate this change, E sells the property to F on February 15, 1983, anticipating that F will sell the property back to E. E's recovery allowance for 1982 is $3,000 (i.e., .10 × $30,000) and for 1983 is $225 (i.e., .09 × ½ × $30,000). In 1984 E reacquires the property from F for $28,000. With respect to that portion of E's unadjusted basis in the reacquired property which does not exceed the adjusted basis at the time of disposition (i.e., $23,475) E's recovery allowance for 1985 is determined as if E had not disposed of the property, that is, by applying the percentage (9 percent) applicable for the third recovery year to the original unadjusted basis ($30,000). The recovery for the year of reacquisition must be adjusted to reflect the number of months the property is used by the taxpayer in that year as recovery property. Thus, if E reacquired the property in July, E's recovery allowance for 1985 would be $1,350 (i.e., .09 × ½ × $30,000). The unrecovered allowance for the third recovery year, $1,125 ($30,000 × .09 × ½), must be recovered in the year following the last recovery year. With respect to that portion of the unadjusted basis in the reacquired property which exceeds E's adjusted basis at the time of disposition (i.e., $4,525), E may not elect an optional recovery period. Cost recovery for this portion of the reacquired property will begin in 1985. Thus, if the reacquisition occurred in July, E's allowable deduction for 1985 with respect to this portion would be $271.50 (i.e., .06 × $4,525).

(d) Treatment of leasehold improvements—(1) In general. Capital expenditures made by a lessee for the erection of buildings or the construction of other permanent improvements on leased property are recoverable through ACRS deductions or amortization deductions. If the recovery period of such improvements in the hands of the taxpayer is equal to or shorter than the remaining period of the lease, the allowances shall take the form of ACRS deductions under section 168. If, on the other hand, the recovery period of such property in the hands of the taxpayer would be longer than the remaining period of such lease, the allowances shall take the form of annual deductions from gross income in an amount equal to the unrecovered cost of such capital expenditures divided by the number of years remaining on the term of the lease. Such deductions shall be in lieu of ACRS deductions. See section 162 and the regulations thereunder.

(2) Determination of recovery period. For purposes of determining whether the recovery period is longer than the lease term, an election of an optional recovery period under section 168(b)(3) or (f)(2)(C) shall be taken into account.

(3) Determination of the effect given to lease renewal options; related lessee and lessor. Section 178 governs the effect to be given renewal options in determining whether the recovery period of the improvements exceeds the remaining period of the lease. Section 178 also provides rules for determining the period of a lease when the lessee and lessor are related. In making any determination under section 178, the "recovery period" of the improvement shall be taken into account in lieu of its useful life. See §1.178-1.

(4) Improvements made by lessor. If a lessor makes an improvement to the leased property, the cost of the improvement must be recovered under the general provisions of section 168. The provisions of 168(f)(6) and this paragraph (d) do not apply to improvements made by the lessor.

(5) Example. The application of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. In 1981, A leases B's land for a term of 99 years. The lease provisions do not include any options to renew the lease. In 2034, A places in service 15-year real property which he built on the leased premises. Since the remaining term of the lease (46) years is longer than any recovery period which A could select under section 168 (i.e., 15, 35, or 45 years), A must recover the costs of the improvement under section 168.

(e) Manner and time for making election—(1) Elections to which this paragraph applies. The rules in this paragraph apply to the following elections provided under section 168:

(i) Section 168(b)(3)(A) and (B)(i) and §1.168-2(c)(1) and (2), relating to election of optional recovery percentage with respect to property in the same recovery class (i.e., all 3-year recovery property);

(ii) Section 168(b)(3)(A) and (B)(ii) and §1.168-2(c)(1) and (3), relating to election of optional recovery percentage on a property-by-property basis for 15-year real property;

(iii) Section 168(d)(2)(A) and §1.168-2(h), relating to election to account for mass assets in the same mass asset account and to include in income all proceeds realized on disposition;

(iv) Section 168(e)(2) and §1.168-4(b), relating to election to exclude property from ACRS by use of a method of depreciation not expressed in a term of years;

(v) Section 168(f)(2)(C)(i) and (ii)(I) and §1.168-2(g)(3)(i) and (ii), relating to election of optional recovery percentage for property used predominantly outside the United States in the same recovery class and with the same present class life (e.g., 3-year recovery property with a present class life of 4 years); and

(vi) Section 168(f)(2)(C)(i) and (ii)(II) and §1.168-2(g)(3)(i) and (iii), relating to election of optional recovery percentage on a property-by-property basis for 15-year real property used predominantly outside the United States.

Use by a taxpayer of a method of cost recovery described in section 168 (b)(1) and (2) and §1.168-2(b)(1) and (2) or section 168(f)(2)(A) and (B) and §1.168-2(g)(1) and (2) (relating to the use of the accelerated percentages) is not an election for purposes of section 168 and this paragraph (e). Thus, no consent will be granted to change from such a method to another method described in section 168. The provisions of section 168(f)(4) and this paragraph (e) do not apply to elections which must be made under another section of the Code. Thus, for example, if a taxpayer wants to amortize property under section 167(k), the rules under section 167(k) apply with respect to such election and the revocation of such election.

(2) Time for making elections. Except as provided in subparagraph (4) or (5), the elections specified in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph (e) shall be made on the taxpayer's income tax return filed for the taxable year in which the property is placed in service as recovery property (as defined in §1.168-3(a)) by the taxpayer. If the taxpayer does not file a timely return (taking into account extensions of the time for filing) for such taxable year, the election shall be made at the time the taxpayer files his first return for such year. The election may be made on a return, as amended, filed within the time prescribed by law (including extensions) for filing the return for such taxable year. A separate election may be made for each corporation which is a member of an affiliated group (as defined in section 1504) and which joins in the making of a consolidated return in accordance with section 1502 and the regulations thereunder. See §1.1502-77.

(3) Manner of making elections. Except as provided in subparagraph (5), Form 4562 is provided for making an election under this paragraph and for submitting the information required. The taxpayer must specify in the election—

(i) The name of the taxpayer;

(ii) The taxpayer's identification number;

(iii) The year the recovery property was placed in service (or, in the case of 15-year real property, the month the property was placed in service);

(iv) The unadjusted basis of the recovery property; and

(v) Such other information as may be required.

An election will not be rendered invalid so long as there is substantial compliance, in good faith, with the requirements of this subparagraph (3).

(4) Special rule for qualified rehabilitated buildings. In the case of any qualified rehabilitated building (as defined in section 48(g)(1)), an election under section 168(b)(3) and §1.168-2(c) (relating to election of optional recovery percentage) may be made at any time before the date 3 years after the building was placed in service by the taxpayer.

(5) Special rule for foreign taxpayers—(i) Foreign corporations subject to section 964. In the case of a foreign corporation whose earnings and profits are determined under section 964, the elections specified in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph (e) shall be made at the time and in the manner provided in §1.964-1(c). Except as provided in the regulations under section 952 and section 1248, any election made under this subdivision (i) shall apply with respect to the recovery property affected by the election from the taxable year in which such property is placed in service. Such election may be revoked only as provided in §1.964-1(c)(7) and subparagraph (9) of this paragraph.

(ii) Foreign taxpayers other than corporations subject to section 964. In the case of a foreign taxpayer other than a corporation described in subdivision (i) of this subparagraph (5), the elections specified in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph (e) shall be made at the time and in the manner provided in subparagraphs (2) and (3) of this paragraph, except that the election shall be made on the taxpayer's income tax return for the later of the taxable year in which the property is placed in service as recovery property by the taxpayer or the first taxable year in which the taxpayer is subject to United States tax. Any election made under this subdivision (ii) shall apply with respect to the recovery property affected by the election from the taxable year in which such property is placed in service. Such election may be revoked only as provided in subparagraph (9) of this paragraph. No election may be made under this subdivision (ii) by a taxpayer who was required to, but did not make the election at the time and in the manner prescribed under subdivision (i). For purposes of this subdivision (ii)—

(A) "Foreign taxpayer" means a taxpayer that is not a United States person as defined in section 7701 (a)(30), and

(B) "United States tax" means tax under subtitle A of the Code (relating to income taxes) other than sections 871(a)(1) and 881 thereof.

(6) Failure to elect optional recovery percentages. If a taxpayer does not elect to use the optional recovery percentages within the time and in the manner prescribed in subparagraphs (2), (3), (4), and (5) (or is not considered to have elected under §1.168-2(c)(5)), the amount allowable under section 168 must be determined under section 168(b)(1) or (2) (or under section 168(f)(2)(A) or (B), where applicable) for the year in which the recovery property is placed in service and for all subsequent recovery years. Thus, no election to use such optional percentages may be made by the taxpayer in any other manner (e.g., through a request under section 446(e) to change the taxpayer's method of accounting).

(7) Individuals, partnerships, trusts, estates, and corporations. Except as provided in subparagraph (8) of this paragraph with respect to transactions to which section 168 (f)(10)(A) and (B) applies, and subject to other applicable provisions of the Code and regulations, if recovery property is placed in service by an individual, trust, estate, partnership, or corporation, an election under this paragraph shall be made by the individual, trust, estate, partnership, or corporation placing such property in service.

(8) Transactions to which section 168(f)(10)(A) and (B) applies. In a transaction to which section 168(f)(10)(A) and (B) and paragraph (b) of this §1.168-5 apply, the transferee is bound by the transferor's election (or nonelection) under this paragraph with respect to the property so acquired. The rule of the preceding sentence shall apply only with respect to so much of the basis of the property in the hands of the transferee as does not exceed the adjusted basis of the property in the hands of the transferor immediately before the transfer.

(9) Revocation of election. An election under this paragraph, once made, may be revoked only with the consent of the Commissioner. Such consent will be granted only in extraordinary circumstances. Requests for consent must be filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D.C. 20224.

(f) Treatment of certain nonrecognition transactions—(1) Section 1033 transactions—(i) Allowable deduction for section 1033 converted property. For any taxable year in which a transaction described in section 1033 occurs, the full year's allowable deduction shall be prorated on a monthly basis under the principles of paragraph (b)(4)(i) of this section. Thus, for example, on March 3, 1981, A, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $25,000 and places in service 3-year recovery property. On August 14, 1981, the property is converted. A's 1981 allowable deduction for the converted property is $3,645.83 (i.e., $25,000 × .25 × 7/12). If the property were 15-year real property (other than low income housing) A's 1981 allowable deduction for the converted property would be $1,250 (i.e., $25,000 × .10 × 5/10).

(ii) Allowable deduction for section 1033 replacement property in year of replacement and subsequent taxable years. (A) Replacement property acquired in a transaction to which section 1033 applies, which qualifies as recovery property, shall be treated the same as the converted property. Thus, the replacement property shall be recovered over the remaining recovery period using the same recovery method as the converted property. The preceding sentence applies only with respect to so much of the basis (as determined under section 1033(b)) in the replacement property as does not exceed the adjusted basis in the converted property. Any excess of the unadjusted basis of the replacement property over the adjusted basis of the converted property shall be treated as newly purchased ACRS property. Any excess of the adjusted basis of the converted property over the unadjusted basis of the replacement property shall be recovered under the principles of §1.168-2(d)(3) (relating to redeterminations).

(B) The allowable deduction for the replacement property in the year of replacement (whether such replacement year is the same as the year of conversion or a later year) shall be based on the number of months the replacement property is in service as recovery property during the replacement year.

(1) If the number of months in the conversion year after the property is converted (including the month of conversion) is greater than or equal to the number of months the replacement property is in service during the replacement year, the allowable deduction for the replacement year shall equal—

$$(a/b \times c) \times d$$

where

a = number of months replacement property is in service as recovery property during replacement year, b = 12 or, in the case of 15-year real property converted in the first recovery year, the number of months in the taxpayer's taxable year after the converted property was placed in service by the taxpayer (including the month the property was placed in service),

c = applicable recovery percentage for converted property in year of conversion, and d = unadjusted basis of converted property.

An allowance is permitted to the extent of any unrecovered allowance in the taxable year following the final recovery year. The term "unrecovered allowance" means the difference between—

(i) The sum of recovery allowances for the year of the conversion and the year of the replacement, and

(ii) The recovery allowance which would have been allowable in the year of conversion had such conversion not occurred.

In a year following the year of replacement, the allowable deduction shall be computed by multiplying the applicable recovery percentage for the next recovery year to the unadjusted basis of the converted property.

(2) If the number of months in the conversion year after the property is converted (including the month of conversion) is less than the number of months the replacement property is in service during the replacement year, the allowable deduction for the replacement year shall equal—

$$[(a/b \times c) + (d/12 \times e)] \times f$$

where a = number of months in conversion year after the property is converted (including the month of conversion),
b = 12 or, in the case of 15-year real property converted in the first recovery year, the number of months in the taxpayer's taxable year after the converted property was placed in service by the taxpayer (including the month the property was placed in service), c = applicable recovery percentage for converted property in year of conversion, d = number of months replacement property is in service as recovery property during replacement year minus a, e = applicable recovery percentage for the next recovery year, and f = unadjusted basis of converted property.

An allowance is permitted to the extent of any unrecovered allowance in the taxable year following the final recovery year. The term "unrecovered allowance" means the difference between—

(i) The sum of the recovery allowances for the year of conversion and the year of replacement, and

(ii) The sum of the recovery allowances which would have been allowable in the year of conversion and the next recovery year had such conversion not occurred.

In a year following the year of replacement, the allowable deduction shall be computed by multiplying the unadjusted basis of the converted property by the applicable recovery percentage for the second recovery year after the year of conversion.

(iii) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (f)(1)(i) and (ii) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On January 1, 1981, A, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $40,000 and places in service recovery property which is 15-year real property (other than low income housing). Under section 168(b)(2) and §1.168-2(b)(2), the allowable deductions for the first and second recovery years are $4,800 (i.e., .12 × $40,000) and $4,000 (i.e., .10 × $40,000). On March 3, 1983, A's property is involuntarily converted. Under the provisions of subdivision (i), A's 1983 allowable deduction for the converted property is $600 (i.e., 1/2 × .09 × $40,000). On May 15, 1984, A acquires replacement property. A's unadjusted basis in the replacement property is the same as his adjusted basis in the converted property (i.e., $30,600). Under the provisions of subdivision (ii), the replacement property is treated the same as the converted property with respect to such $30,600 of basis. However, in computing the allowable deduction with respect to such basis, A's unadjusted basis in the converted property ($40,000) is used. Thus, A's allowable deduction for 1984 is $2,400 (i.e., 1/2 × .09 × $40,000). Under the provisions of subdivision (ii)(B)(1), the unrecovered allowance is $600 (i.e., $3,600 − $3,000), and it must be recovered in the taxable year following the fifteenth recovery year. A's allowable deduction for 1985 is $3,200 (i.e., .08 × $40,000).

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that A acquires the replacement property on January 1, 1984. A's allowable deduction for 1984 is $3,533.33 (i.e., [11/12 × .09) + (1/12 × .08)] × $4,000). Under the provisions of subdivision (ii)(B)(2), the unrecovered allowance is $2,666.67 (i.e., $6,800 − $4,133.33) and it must be recovered in the taxable year following the final recovery year, that is, in the taxable year following the fifteenth recovery year. A's allowable deduction for 1985 is $2,800 (i.e., .07 × $40,000).

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that A acquires the replacement property on the same day as the conversion (March 3, 1983). A's allowable deduction for 1983 for the converted property is $600 (i.e., (1/12 × .09) × $40,000). A's allowable deduction for 1983 for the replacement property is $3,000 (i.e., (11/12 × .09) × $40,000). A's allowable deduction for 1984 is $3,200 (i.e., $40,000 × .08).

Example (4). On February 3, 1981, B, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $100,000 and places in service recovery property which is 15-year real property (other than low income housing). On June 25, 1981, B's property is involuntarily converted. On that same day B acquires replacement property with the same basis as the converted property. B's allowable deduction for 1981 for the converted property is $4,000 (i.e., 1/11 × .11 × $100,000). B's allowable deduction for 1981 for the replacement property is $7,000 (i.e., 7/11 × .11 × $100,000). B's allowable deduction for 1982 is $10,000 (i.e., $100,000 × .10).

(2) Section 1031 transactions—(i) Allowable deductions. In a transaction to which section 1031 applies, the allowable deduction for the exchanged and acquired properties shall be determined under the principles of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph. Similarly, any excess of the unadjusted basis of the acquired property over the adjusted basis of the exchanged property shall be treated as newly purchased ACRS property, and any excess of the adjusted basis of the exchanged property over the unadjusted basis of the acquired property shall be recovered under the principles of §1.168-2(d)(3) (relating to redeterminations).

(ii) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (f)(2)(i) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). In 1981 A, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $12,000 and places in service recovery property which is 3-year recovery property. Under section 168(b)(1) and §1.168-2(b)(1), the allowable deductions for the first and second recovery years are $3,000 (i.e., .25 × $12,000) and $4,560 (i.e., .38 × $12,000), respectively. On March 3, 1983, A exchanges this property and $1,000 cash for property of a "like kind." A's 1983 allowable deduction for the exchanged property is $740 (i.e., 1/2 × .37 × $12,000). A's basis in the acquired property is $4,700. The acquired property is treated the same as the exchanged property with respect to $3,700, which is so much of the basis in the acquired property as does not exceed the adjusted basis in the exchanged property. However, in computing the allowable deduction with respect to such basis, A's unadjusted basis in the exchanged property ($12,000) is used. Therefore, A's 1983 allowable deduction for the acquired property with respect to the substituted basis is $3,700 (i.e., 11/12 × .37 × $12,000). The remaining $1,000 of basis in the acquired property is treated as newly purchased ACRS property placed in service in 1983. A may choose any applicable recovery period and recovery method for such basis and need not use the same recovery period and recovery method used for the exchanged property. If A uses the tables provided in section 168(b)(1) and §1.168-2(b)(1), for 1983, 1984, and 1985, A is entitled to additional allowable deductions of $250, $380, and $370, respectively.

Example (2). On February 8, 1981, B, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $80,000 and places in service 15-year real property (other than low income housing). Under the provisions of section 168(b)(2) and §1.168-2(b)(2), the allowable deduction for 1981 is $8,800 (i.e., .11 × $80,000). On March 3, 1982, B exchanges this property and $20,000 cash for property of a "like kind." B's 1982 allowable deduction for the exchanged property is $1,333.33 (i.e., (7/12 × .10 × $80,000). B's basis in the acquired property is $89,866.67. The acquired property is treated the same as the exchanged property with respect to $69,866.67, which is so much of the basis in the acquired property as does not exceed the adjusted basis in the exchanged property. However, in computing the allowable deduction with respect to such basis, B's unadjusted basis in the exchanged property ($80,000) is used. Therefore, B's 1982 and 1983 allowable deductions for the acquired property with respect to the substituted basis are $6,666.66 (i.e., 1 7/12 × .10 × $80,000) and $7,200 (i.e., .09 × $80,000), respectively. The remaining $20,000 of basis in the acquired property is treated as newly purchased ACRS property placed in service in March 1982. B may choose any applicable recovery period and recovery method for this basis and need not use the same period and method used for the exchanged property. If B uses the tables prescribed in §1.168-2(b)(2), B's 1982 allowable deduction for this basis is $2,000 (i.e., $20,000 × .10).

(3) Transfers of property by gift—(i) Allowable deductions. With respect to recovery property which is transferred by gift (where the donee's basis is determined under section 1015), the allowable deduction for the taxable year of the gift shall be apportioned between the donor and donee under the principles of paragraphs (b) (including paragraph (b)(4)(ii)) and (f)(1) of this section, and the donee shall be treated as the donor for subsequent taxable years to the extent that the donee's basis is carried over from the donor. That portion of the donee's basis (as determined under section 1015) in the property that exceeds the donor's adjusted basis immediately preceding the gift shall be treated as newly purchased ACRS property. The donee may choose any applicable recovery period and recovery method with respect to such excess and need not use the donor's recovery period and recovery method.

(ii) Example. The provisions of paragraph (f)(3)(i) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. In 1981 A, a calendar year taxpayer, purchases for $12,000 and places in service 5-year recovery property. Under section 168(b)(1) and §1.168-2(b)(1), the allowable deduction for 1981 is $1,800 (i.e., .15 × $12,000). On March 15, 1982, A transfers the property by gift to B (another calendar year taxpayer) who continues to use it as recovery property. A's 1982 allowable deduction is $440 (i.e., 7/12 × .22 × $12,000). Under section 1015, B's basis in the property is determined to be $11,000. In the hands of B, the donee, the property is treated the same as in the hands of the donor with respect to $9,760, which is so much of the carryover basis as does not exceed the donor's adjusted basis in the property immediately preceding the gift. However, in computing the allowable deduction with respect to such basis, the donor's unadjusted basis ($12,000) is used. Therefore, B's 1982 allowable deduction with respect to such basis is $2,200 (i.e., 1 7/12 × .22 × $12,000). The remaining $1,240 (i.e., $11,000 − $9,760) of basis is treated as newly purchased ACRS property. B may choose any applicable recovery period and recovery method for such basis and need not use the donor's recovery period and recovery method.

(4) Transfers of property by reason of death. Where recovery property is transferred by reason of the death of the taxpayer, the allowable deduction for the taxpayer's taxable year which ends upon his death shall be governed by the rules applicable to short taxable years. See §1.168-2(f).

§1.168-6 Gain or loss on dispositions.

(a) General rule. Except as provided in §1.168-2(h) (relating to mass assets), where recovery property is disposed of during a taxable year, the following rules shall apply:

(1) If the asset is disposed of by sale or exchange, gain or loss shall be recognized as provided under the applicable provisions of the Code.

(2) If the asset is disposed of by physical abandonment, loss shall be recognized in the amount of the adjusted basis of the asset at the time of the abandonment. For a loss to qualify for recognition under this subparagraph (2), the taxpayer must intend to discard the asset irrevocably so that he will neither use the asset again, nor retrieve it for sale, exchange, or other disposition.

(3) If the asset is disposed of other than by sale or exchange or physical abandonment (as, for example, where the asset is transferred to a supplies or scrap account), gain shall not be recognized. Loss shall be recognized in the amount of the excess of the adjusted basis of the asset over its fair market value at the time of the disposition. No loss shall be recognized upon the conversion of property to personal use.

(b) Definitions. (1) See §1.168-2(l)(1) for the definition of "disposition," which excludes the retirement of a structural component of 15-year real property. Thus, no loss shall be recognized on such retirement, and the unadjusted basis of the property under §1.168-2(d) shall not be reduced. For example, if a taxpayer replaces the roof on 15-year real property, no loss is recognized upon the retirement of the replaced roof, and the unadjusted basis of the property continues to be recovered over the remaining period. For determination of the deductions allowable under section 168 with respect to the expenditures paid or incurred to replace the roof, see §1.168-2(e).

(2) The adjusted basis of an asset at the time of its disposition is its unadjusted basis, as provided in §1.168-2, adjusted as prescribed in §1.1011-1.

Par. 3. Section 1.178-1 is amended as follows:

1. Paragraph (a) is amended by removing the term "section 167 or 611" and inserting "section 167, 168, or 611" in its place.

2. Paragraph (b)(1)(i) and (3) is amended by removing the term "estimated useful life" in each of the three places it appears and removing the term "section 167" in the one place it appears and by inserting "estimated useful life or, in the case of recovery property (as defined in section 168), the recovery period (including, where applicable, any optional recovery period under section 168(b)(3) or (f)(2)(C))" and by inserting "section 167 or 168", respectively, in its place.

3. Paragraph (b)(2) is amended by removing the term "(or depreciation)" and by inserting "(or depreciation under section 167 or accelerated cost recovery under section 168)" in lieu thereof.

4. Paragraph (d)(1)(i) is amended by removing the term "remaining estimated useful life" and by inserting "remaining estimated useful life or, in the case of recovery property (as defined in section 168), the recovery period (including, where applicable, any optional recovery period under section 168(b)(3) or (f)(2)(C)) in its place.

5. Paragraph (b)(6) is amended by adding two examples immediately after example (5), which read as follows:

§1.178-1 Depreciation or amortization of improvements on leased property and cost of acquiring a lease.

* * * * *

(b) Determination of amount of deduction.

(6) ***

Example (6). Lessee C, a calendar year taxpayer, constructs a building on land leased from lessor D. The construction is completed and the building is placed in service on January 1, 1984, at which time C has 8 years remaining on the lease with no options to renew. On January 1, 1988, D grants C an option to renew the lease for a 10-year period. As of January 1, 1988, the date the renewal option is granted, section 178(a) and paragraph (b)(1) of this section become applicable, since the portion of the term of the lease remaining upon completion of the building (8 years) is less than 60 percent of any recovery period applicable to the building (60 percent of the shortest recovery period (15 years) is 9 years). As of January 1, 1988, the term of the lease shall be treated as including the remaining portion of the original lease (4 years) and the 10-year renewal, or 14 years, unless C can establish that, as of the close of 1988, it is more probable that the lease will not be renewed than that it will be. In such case, since the term of the lease as of January 1, 1988 (14 years), is less than the ACRS recovery period, a deduction is not allowed under section 168 with respect to such building.

Example (7). The facts are the same as in example (6), except that the option to renew is for 15 years. If, as of the close of 1988, C cannot establish that it is more probable that the lease will not be renewed than that it will be, the term of the lease as of January 1, 1988, will be 19 years. Since the term of the lease would be longer than the ACRS recovery period (unless a 35- or 45-year optional recovery period were desired), the provisions of section 168 will be applicable with respect to this building. For purposes of section 168, C is considered as having placed the building in service on January 1, 1988, with a 15-year recovery period extending from that time. C's unadjusted basis for purposes of section 168 is the adjusted basis in the building as of January 1, 1988.

Par. 4. Paragraph (a)(3) of §1.1016-3 is redesignated as (a)(4), and a new paragraph (a)(3) is added to read as follows:

§1.1016-3 Exhaustion, wear and tear, obsolescence, amortization, and depletion for periods since February 28, 1913.

(a) In general.

(3) Adjustment for amount allowable where no cost recovery deduction claimed under section 168. (i) Except as provided in subdivision (iii) of this subparagraph (3), if the taxpayer has not taken a deduction under section 168 (hereinafter referred to as ACRS deduction) either in the taxable year or for any prior taxable year, the adjustments to basis of the property for the ACRS deduction allowable shall be determined by using the recovery method described in section 168(b)(1) or (2) or, where applicable, section 168(f)(2)(A) or (B).

(ii) If the taxpayer with respect to any recovery property has properly taken an ACRS deduction under one of the methods provided in section 168 for one or more years but has omitted the deduction in other years, the adjustment to basis for the ACRS deduction allowable in such a case will be the deduction under the method which was used by the taxpayer with respect to that property. Thus, for example, A acquired property in 1981 for which he properly elected to compute his ACRS deduction by use of one of the optional straight line percentages described in section 168(b)(3) for the first recovery year but did not take a deduction in the second and third years of the asset's recovery period. The adjustment to basis for the ACRS deduction allowable for the second and third recovery years will be computed using the optional straight line percentages which were elected.

(iii) If the taxpayer has made an election under §1.168-5(e)(5) (relating to special election rules for foreign taxpayers) to use an optional straight line percentage with respect to recovery property, the adjustments to basis of the property for the ACRS deduction allowable shall be determined pursuant to that election.

(iv) The provisions of subdivision (iii) of this subparagraph (3) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. In 1981, Corporation F (a calendar year taxpayer) purchases for $100,000 and places in service in a foreign country 5-year recovery property which has a present class life of 7.5 years. F is not subject to United States income tax, other than under section 881, and is not required to compute earnings and profits under section 964. On January 1, 1983, F begins engaging in a trade or business in the United States (making it subject to tax under section 882), and uses the property in the United States in connection with that trade or business. Under §1.168-5(e)(5)(ii), F may elect to use the optional recovery percentages with respect to the property placed in service in 1981 by submitting the requisite information on its income tax return for the taxable year beginning in 1983. That election will apply with respect to such property from the taxable year in which it is placed in service. Thus, if F elects the optional recovery percentages based on a 12-year recovery period under §1.168-2(g)(3), the allowable ACRS deductions for 1981 and 1982 would be $4,000 (i.e., .04 × $100,000) and $9,000 (i.e., .09 × $100,000), respectively, and F's adjusted basis in the property on January 1, 1983, would be $87,000 (i.e., $100,000 − $13,000). For the deduction allowable to F with respect to the property in 1983, see §1.168-2(j)(4)(i) and (j)(6) (relating to change in status).

* * * * *

Par. 5. Section 1.1016-4 is amended by adding a new sentence at the end of paragraph (b) thereof, to read as follows:

§1.1016-4 Exhaustion, wear and tear, obsolescence, amortization, and depletion; periods during which income was not subject to tax.

* * * * *

(b) ***

For purposes of this section, the amount that would have been allowable as a deduction shall be determined without reference to section 168.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Transitional Rule for the Increased Annual Gift Tax Exclusion and the Unlimited Exclusion for Certain Transfers

LR-211-81

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations relating to the annual gift tax exclusion and the unlimited exclusion for certain medical and educational transfers. Changes to the applicable law were made by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 [Pub. L. 97-34, 1981-2 C.B. 256]. The regulations would provide the public with the guidance needed to comply with that Act.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by March 6, 1984. The amendments are proposed to be effective for gifts made after December 31, 1981.

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Attention: CC:LR:T (LR-211-81) Washington, D.C. 20224.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Gift Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 25) under section 2503 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (Code). These amendments are proposed to conform the regulations to section 441 of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (P.L. 97-34, 95 Stat. 319) [1981-2 C.B. 256, 333] and are to be issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Code (68A Stat. 917, 26 U.S.C. 7805).

In General

Section 441(a) of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 [Pub. L. 97-34, 1981-2 C.B. 256, 333] increased the annual gift tax exclusion to $10,000 per donee for gifts made during calendar year 1982 and subsequent years. See §25.2503-2(a) and 48 FR 40373 [T.D. 7910, 1983-2 C.B. 161].

Although the increased exclusion generally applies to transfers made after 1981, many existing instruments provide powers of appointment specifically defined in terms of the section 2503(b) annual gift tax exclusion. To ensure that grantors who did not wish to provide powers in excess of $3,000 will not be providing powers subject to the increased exclusion because of the reference to section 2503(b), the proposed regulations include a transitional rule which provides that the increased exclusion does not apply to powers granted under certain instruments created before September 12, 1981.

Finally, section 441(b) of the Act added section 2503(e) to the Code, which generally provides that amounts paid on behalf of any individual as tuition to certain educational organizations or as payment for medical care to any person who provides medical care with respect to that individual will not be considered transfers subject to the gift tax. This exclusion is permitted without regard to the relationship between the donor and donee. Enactment of the new exclusion did not change the rule of prior law that there is no gift if the person paying tuition or medical expenses is discharging a legal obligation of support imposed under applicable local law.

Tuition Payment

Under the proposed regulations, the tuition payment must be made directly to the qualifying educational organization. A payment made directly to the individual for tuition expenses does not qualify for the unlimited exclusion from the gift tax.

Medical Payments

New section 2503(e) exempts from the gift tax amounts paid directly to a medical care provider for qualifying medical expenses on behalf of another individual. However, amounts that are reimbursed by the donee's insurance company are not excluded from the gift tax. Thus, if a donor pays the qualifying medical care expenses of a donee, the unlimited exclusion from the gift tax applies only to that part of the payment which is not reimbursed by the donee's insurance company. To the extent of the reimbursement by the donee's insurance company, the gift is treated as having been made on the date the reimbursement is received by the donee.

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably seven copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commisisoner of Internal Revenue has determined that this proposed rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required. The Internal Revenue Service has concluded that although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comment, the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, no Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is required for this rule.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations is Ada S. Rousso of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations both on matters of substance and style.

Proposed amendments to the regulations.

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Part 25 are as follows:

Paragraph 1. Section 25.2503-2 is amended by adding paragraphs (d) and (e), immediately after paragraph (c), to read as set forth below.

§25.2503-2 Exclusions from gifts.

* * * * *

(d) Transitional rule. The increased annual gift tax exclusion as defined in section 2503(b) shall not apply to any gift subject to a power of appointment granted under an instrument executed before September 12, 1981, and not amended on or after that date, provided that (1) the power is exercisable after December 31, 1981, (2) the power is expressly defined in terms of, or by reference to, the amount of the gift tax exclusion under section 2503(b) (or the corresponding provision of prior law), and

(3) there is not enacted a State law applicable to such instrument which construes the power of appointment as referring to the increased annual gift tax exclusion provided by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981.

(e) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (d) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A executed an instrument to create a trust for the benefit of B on July 2, 1981. The trust granted to B the power, for a period of 90 days after any transfer of cash to the trust, to withdraw from the trust the lesser of the amount of the transferred cash or the amount equal to the section 2503(b) annual gift tax exclusion. The trust was not amended on or after September 12, 1981. No state statute has been enacted which construes the power of appointment as referring to the increased annual gift tax exclusion provided by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981. Accordingly, the maximum annual gift tax exclusion applicable to any gift subject to the exercise of the power of appointment is $3,000.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that the power of appointment granted in the trust refers to section 2503(b) as amended at any time. The maximum annual gift tax exclusion applicable to any gift subject to the exercise of the power of appointment is $10,000.

Par. 2. Section 25.2503-6 is added immediately after §25.2503-5 to read as follows:

§25.2503-6 Exclusion for certain qualified transfers for tuition or medical expenses.

(a) In general. Section 2503(e) provides that any qualified transfer after December 31, 1981, shall not be treated as a transfer of property by gift for purposes of chapter 12 of subtitle B of the Code. Thus, a qualified transfer on behalf of any individual is excluded in determining the total amount of gifts in calendar year 1982 and subsequent years. This exclusion is available in addition to the $10,000 annual gift tax exclusion. Furthermore, an exclusion for a qualified transfer is permitted without regard to the relationship between the donor and the donee.

(b) Qualified transfers—(1) Definition. For purposes of this paragraph, the term "qualified transfer" means any amount paid on behalf of an individual—

(i) As tuition to a qualifying educational organization for the education or training of that individual, or

(iii) To any person who provides medical care with respect to that individual as payment for the qualifying medical expenses arising from such medical care.

(2) Tuition expenses. For purposes of paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section, a qualifying educational organization is one which normally maintains a regular faculty and curriculum and normally has a regularly enrolled body of pupils or students in attendance at the place where its educational activities are regularly carried on. See section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) and the regulations thereunder. The unlimited exclusion is permitted for tuition expenses of full or part-time students paid directly to the qualifying educational organization providing the education. No exclusion is permitted for amounts paid for books, supplies, dormitary fees, board, or other similar expenses which do not constitute direct tuition costs.

(3) Medical expenses. For purposes of paragraph (b)(1)(ii) of this section, qualifying medical expenses are limited to those expenses listed in section 213(d)(1) (section 213(e)(1) prior to January 1, 1984) and include expenses incurred essentially for the diagnosis, cure, mitigation, treatment or prevention of disease, or for the purpose of affecting any structure or function of the body. In addition, the unlimited exclusion from the gift tax includes amounts paid for medical insurance on behalf of any individual. The unlimited exclusion from the gift tax does not apply to amounts paid for medical care that are reimbursed by the donee's insurance. Thus, if payment for a medical expense is reimbursed by the donee's insurance company, the donor's payment for that expense, to the extent of the reimbursed amount, is not eligible for the unlimited exclusion from the gift tax and the gift is treated as having been made on the date the reimbursement is received by the donee.

(c) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (b) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). In 1982, A made a tuition payment directly to a foreign university on behalf of B. A had no legal obligation to make this payment. The foreign university is described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) of the Code. A's tuition payment is exempt from the gift tax under section 2503(e) of the Code.

Example (2). C was seriously injured in an automobile accident in 1982. D, who is unrelated to C, paid C's various medical expenses by checks made payable to the physician. D also paid the hospital for C's hospital bills. These medical and hospital expenses were types described in section 213 of the Code and were not reimbursed by insurance or otherwise. Because the medical and hospital bills paid in 1982 for C were medical expenses within the meaning of section 213 of the Code, and since they were paid directly by D to the person rendering the medical care, they are not treated as transfers subject to the gift tax.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (2) except that instead of making the payments directly to the medical service provider, D reimbursed C for the medical expenses which C had previously paid. The payments made by D to C do not qualify for the exclusion under section 2503(e) of the Code and are subject to the gift tax to the extent they exceed the $10,000 annual exclusion provided in section 2503(b).

Credit for Employment of Certain New Employees

LR-218-81

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations relating to the credit for employment of individuals qualifying as members of a targeted group. L. 96-222, 1980-1 C.B. 499], the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 [Pub. L. 97-34, 1981-2 C.B. 256], the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 [Pub. SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under sections 51 and 381 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. This document also contains proposed amendments to the Temporary Income Tax Regulations under the Revenue Act of 1978 (26 CFR Part 5) under section 51 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. Generally these amendments are proposed to conform the regulations to section 321 of the Revenue Act of 1978 (92 Stat. 2830) [1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 64], section 103(a)(6) of the Technical Corrections Act of 1979 (94 Stat. 209) [1980-1 C.B. 499, 507], section 261 of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (95 Stat. 260), section 233 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (96 Stat. 501) [1982-2 C.B. 462, 510], and section 102(l) of the Technical Corrections Act of 1982 (96 Stat. 2374) [1983-1 C.B. 451, 456] and are to be issued under the authority contained in section 44B, 381, and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (91 Stat. 141, 26 U.S.C. 44B; 91 Stat. 148, 26 U.S.C. 381(c)(26); 68A Stat. 917, 26 U.S.C. 7805).

IN GENERAL

Section 321 of the Revenue Act of 1978 provides a targeted jobs credit for the employment of individuals qualifying as members of a targeted group. The targeted jobs credit replaces the new jobs credit allowable under section 44B (as in effect prior to enactment of the Revenue Act of 1978). In general, a taxpayer may elect to claim a credit under section 44B for amounts paid or incurred after December 31, 1978, for taxable years ending after that date, to members of a targeted group. Generally, to qualify for the credit, the amounts must be paid or incurred to members of a targeted group first hired after September 26, 1978. However, amounts paid or incurred after December 31, 1978, to a vocational rehabilitation referral hired before September 27, 1978, may qualify for the credit if a credit under section 44B (as in effect prior to enactment of the Revenue Act of 1978) was claimed for the individual by the taxpayer for a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1979.

AMOUNT OF CREDIT

Except in the case of a qualified summer youth employee, the amount of the credit allowable by section 44B for the taxable year is 50 percent of the qualified first-year wages plus 25 percent of the qualified second-year wages. Generally, qualified first-year wages are the first $6,000 of wages paid or incurred by the employer during the taxable year to an individual who is a member of a targeted group for services rendered during the 1-year period beginning with the day the individual begins work for the employer. Qualified second-year wages are the first $6,000 of wages paid or incurred by the employer during the taxable year to an individual who is a member of a targeted group for services rendered during the 1-year period beginning on the day after the last day of the qualified first-year wages period. For taxable years of the employer beginning before January 1, 1982, qualified first-year wages are further limited to 30 percent of the aggregate unemployment insurance wages paid by the employer during the calendar year ending in such taxable year.

Special rules apply to wages that are paid to employees who are qualified summer youths. In general, an employer is entitled to a credit equal to 85 percent of not more than $3,000 of wages paid to a qualified summer youth employee during a 90 day period between May 1 and September 15.

MEMBERS OF A TARGETED GROUP

An individual is a member of a targeted group if the individual is certified as a qualified summer youth employee, a vocational rehabilitation referral, an economically disadvantaged youth, an economically disadvantaged Vietnam-era veteran, an SSI recipient, a general assistance recipient, a youth participating in a cooperative education program, an economically disadvantaged ex-convict, an eligible work incentive employee, or an involuntarily terminated CETA employee. The first category was added by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982. The last two categories were added by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981. The Economic Recovery Tax Act also amended the definition of a youth participating in a cooperative education program to require the individual to be also a member of an economically disadvantaged family.

The proposed regulations provide rules and definitions relating to the eligibility requirements for several of the targeted groups. In the case of youths participating in a cooperative education program, the proposed regulations define the term "program of vocational education" (a component in the definition of qualified cooperative education program) in accordance with the definition of that term in the Vocational Education Act of 1963 and the Department of Education regulations thereunder because the legislative history of the Revenue Act of 1978 indicates that the term "qualified cooperative education program" in section 51(d)(8) is similar to that term as used in the Vocational Education Act.

The proposed regulations also provide guidance on the issue of second certifications with respect to employees who continue to work for the same employer after the employee no longer meets the requirements for membership in the targeted group for which the employee was originally certified. For example, a qualified summer youth employee may continue to work for the same employer after the end of the ninety day period described in section 51(d)(12)(B)(iii) and may then qualify as an economically disadvantaged youth. Similarly, a youth certified as participating in a qualified cooperative education program may no longer be actively participating in the program, but may then qualify as an economically disadvantaged youth. The proposed regulations provide that the timely certification rules do not apply to the second certification if the first certification was timely. The proposed regulations also provide that for purposes of eligibility requirements, the "hiring date" will be defined as the day the individual is certified for the second targeted group. Thus, whether an individual meets an age requirement for the second targeted group will be determined as of the date of certification rather than the original hiring date. In addition, in the case of a qualified summer youth employee, the proposed regulations clarify that a second economic eligibility determination must be made on the basis of the six months immediately preceding the month in which the second certification is made. In the case of a recertification of an individual who was originally certified as a member of any targeted group, other than a qualified summer youth employee, however, the proposed regulations provide that no second economic eligibility determination need be made.

In general, the State employment security agency is the agency responsible for certifying an individual as a member of a targeted group. In the case of youths participating in a qualified cooperative education program, the school offering the program must certify the individual as a member of that target group. A school may satisfy the certification requirement by using Form 6199. In either case, a certificate may be revoked if it is discovered that the information supplied by the individual for purposes of issuing the certificate was incorrect or false.

Furthermore, the amendments made by the Economic Recovery Tax Act have the effect of making so-called retroactive certifications invalid unless the employer has requested in writing a certification before the employee began work. Therefore, an individual will not be treated as a member of a targeted group unless, before the day the individual begins work for the employer, the employer receives a certification from the designated local agency or school, or has requested in writing a certification. However, the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 amended this rule with respect to individuals who begin work for the employer after May 11, 1982 so that certifications will be valid if requested or received on or before the day the individual begins work for the employer. Transitional rules apply with respect to certain employees.

COMMENTS AND PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably six copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held. Notice of the time and place for the public hearing is published in this issue of the Federal Register.

The collection of information requirements contained in this notice of proposed rulemaking have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for review under section 3504(h) of the Paperwork Reduction Act. Comments on these requirements should be sent to the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs of OMB, Attention: Desk Officer of Internal Revenue Service, New Executive Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20503. The Internal Revenue Service requests that persons submitting comments on these requirements to OMB also send copies of those comments to the Service.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT AND EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this proposed rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required. Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these proposed regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations is John G. Schmalz of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

The proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) and the Temporary Income Tax Regulations under the Revenue Act of 1978 (26 CFR Part 5) are as follows:

Paragraph 1. There is inserted immediately after §1.50B-1 the following new section:

§1.51-1 Amount of credit.

(a) Determination of amount—(1) General rule. Except as provided in paragraph (a)(2) of this section, the amount of the targeted jobs credit allowable by section 44B for the taxable year equals 50 percent of the qualified first-year wages (minus any qualified first-year wages paid to individuals while such individuals are qualified summer youth employees) plus 25 percent of the qualified second-year wages.

(2) Special rule for employment of qualified summer youth employees. In the case of an employer who pays or incurs qualified wages after April 30, 1983, to a qualified summer youth employee beginning work for the employer after such date, the amount of the targeted jobs credit allowed by section 44B for the taxable year is equal to the amount determined under paragraph (a)(1) of this section plus an amount equal to 85 percent of the first $3,000 of qualified wages paid to each qualified summer youth employee during the taxable year. Such wages must be attributable to services rendered by the qualified summer youth employee during any 90 day period between May 1 and September 15.

(3) Limitation. See section 53 and the regulations thereunder for rules limiting the amount of the credit to a percentage of the amount of the tax imposed by chapter 1 of the Code.

(b) Definitions—(1) Qualified wages. The term "qualified wages" means wages (as defined in paragraph (b)(4)) paid or incurred by the employer during the taxable year to individuals who are members of a targeted group (within the meaning of section 51(d)).

(2) Qualified first-year wages—(i) General rule. Except in the case of qualified summer youth employees, the term "qualified first-year wages" means the first $6,000 of wages (as defined in paragraph (b)(4)) attributable to services rendered by a member of a targeted group during the 1-year period beginning with the day the individual first begins work for the employer. In the case of a vocational rehabilitation referral, as defined in section 51(d)(2), the one year period begins with the day the individual begins work for the employer on or after the beginning of such individual's rehabilitation plan. However, with the exception of vocational rehabilitation referrals for whom the employer claimed a credit under section 44B (as in effect prior to enactment of the Revenue Act of 1978) for a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1979, members of a targeted group who are first hired after September 26, 1978, and before January 1, 1979, will be treated as if they first began work for the employer on January 1, 1979. The date on which the wages are paid does not determine whether the wages are first-year wages; rather, the wages must be attributed to the period during which the work was performed. See paragraph (f)(1) of this section for an additional limitation on the term qualified first-year wages. (See examples (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), and (6) in paragraph (g) of this section for examples illustrating the application of the rules in this paragraph (b)(2)).

(ii) Special rule for qualified summer youth employees. In the case of a qualified summer youth employee, qualified first-year wages for the purposes of the 85 percent credit referred to in paragraph (a)(2) of this section include only wages attributable to services rendered by a qualified summer youth employee during any 90-day period between May 1 and September 15. If the individual is retained by the employer after the 90-day period and recertified as a member of another targeted group, the term "qualified first-year wages" for the purposes of the 50 percent credit described by section 51(a)(1) has the meaning given that term in paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section except that the $6,000 limitation for qualified first-year wages shall be reduced by wages up to, but not more than, $3,000 attributable to services rendered during the 90-day period.

(3) Qualified second-year wages. The term "qualified second-year wages" means the first $6,000 of wages attributable to services rendered by a member of a targeted group, other than a qualified summer youth employee, during the 1-year period beginning on the day after the last day of the period for qualified first-year wages. The date on which the wages are paid does not determine whether the wages are second-year wages; rather, the wages must be attributed to the period during which the work was performed.

(4) Wages—(i) General rule. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b)(4)(ii) and (iii) of this section, the term "wages" shall only include amounts paid or incurred after December 31, 1978, for taxable years ending after December 31, 1978. For purposes of this section, the term "wages" has the meaning given to such term by section 3306(b) (determined without regard to any dollar limitation contained in such subsection).

(ii) Special rules. In the case of agricultural labor or railway labor, the term "wages" means unemployment insurance wages within the meaning of subparagraph (A) or (B) of section 51(h)(1). The term "wages" shall not include any amounts paid or incurred by an employer for any pay period to any individual for whom the employer receives federally funded payments for on-the-job training for such individual for such pay period. (See example (7) in paragraph (g) of this section.) In addition, the term "wages" shall not include any amount paid or incurred by the employer in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1982, to an individual with respect to whom the employer claims a credit under section 40 (relating to expenses of work incentive programs). For youths participating in a qualified cooperative education program:

(A) Section 3306(c)(10)(C) (relating to the definition of employment for certain students) does not apply in determining wages under this section; and

(B) The term "wages" shall include only those amounts paid or incurred by the employer that are attributable to services rendered by the individual while he or she meets the conditions specified in section 51(d)(8)(A). for purposes of the preceding sentence, an employee who met the requirement in section 51(d)(8)(A)(iv), dealing with economically disadvantages status, when hired, shall be deemed to continuously meet the requirement in section 51(d)(8)(A)(iv) during the time the employee is in the cooperative education program. See also paragraph (e) of this section for rules relating to the exclusion of wages paid to certain individuals.

(iii) Termination. The term "wages" shall not include any amount paid or incurred to an individual who begins work for the employer after December 31, 1984.

(5) Special rule for eligible work incentive employees. In the case of an eligible work incentive employee (as defined in §1.51-1(c)(4)), this paragraph (b) shall be applied for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1981, as if such employee had been a member of a targeted group for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1982. (see example (B) in paragraph (g) of this section.)

(c) Members of targeted groups—(1) In general. An individual is a member of a targeted group if the individual is certified as (i) a vocational rehabilitation referral, (ii) an economically disadvantaged youth, (iii) an economically disadvantaged Vietnam-era veteran, (iv) an SSI recipient, (v) a general assistance recipient, (vi) a youth participating in a cooperative education program, (vii) an economically disadvantaged ex-convict, (viii) an eligible work incentive employee, (ix) a qualified summer youth employee, or (x) an involuntarily terminated CETA employee. Except as provided below, see section 51(d) for a definition of these groups. See paragraph (d) of this section for rules concerning the certification of individuals as members of one of these targeted groups.

(2) Youths participating in a qualified cooperative education program—(i) Student requirements. For an individual to qualify as a youth participating in a qualified cooperative education program, the individual must meet each of the following conditions (A) through (D)—

(A) The youth must have attained the age of 16 but not 20. (An individual reaching 19 will be treated as a youth participating in a qualified cooperative education program only for wages paid or incurred after November 26, 1979.)

(B) The youth must not have graduated from a high school or vocational school.

(C) The youth must be enrolled in and actively pursuing a qualified cooperative education program (as defined in paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section).

(D) With respect to wages paid or incurred after December 31, 1981, the youth must be a member of an economically disadvantaged family when initially hired.

(ii) Economically disadvantaged family. See section 51(d)(11) for the rules relating to the determination of whether an individual is a member of an economically disadvantaged family.

(iii) Qualified cooperative education program. The term "qualified cooperative education program" means a program of vocational education for individuals who (through written cooperative arrangements between a qualified school and one or more employers) receive instruction (including required academic instruction by alternation of study in school with a job in any occupational field (but only if these two experiences are planned by the school and employer so that each contributes to the student's education and employability). See section 51(d)(8)(C) for a definition of a "qualified school." For purposes of this paragraph, the term "program of vocational education" means an organized educational program which is directy related to the preparation of individuals for employment, or for additional preparation for a career requiring other than a baccalaureate or advanced degree. An "organized educational program" means only instruction related to the occupation or occupations for which the students are in training or instruction necessary for students to benefit from such training. The student's employment contributes to his education and employability only if it is related to the occupation for which the student is in training in school. However, the student's employment need not be directly related to or in the same technical field as the training the student receives in school. For example, a student studying carpentry does not have to work as a carpenter for the program to constitute a "qualified cooperative education program." The program will qualify if, for example, the student works at a hardware store because the student's work would familiarize the student with the materials and tools used by carpenters. The program would not qualify, however, if the student works at a restaurant and generally performs tasks in such employment not related to carpentry.

(3) General assistance recipients. In order for an individual to qualify as a general assistance recipient, the individual must receive assistance for a period of not less than 30 days ending within the preemployment period (as defined in section 51(d)(13)) from a qualified general assistance program. A qualified general assistance program is a program of a State or a political subdivision of a State that the Secretary has designated as providing general assistance (or similar assistance) which is based on need and consists of money payments or voucher or scrip. For purposes of the preceding sentences, a program qualifying as a general assistance program by reason of non-cash assistance (i.e., voucher or scrip) shall be so treated only with respect to amounts paid or incurred after July 1, 1982, to individuals beginning work for the employer after such date. For purposes of this subparagraph, the term "money" means cash or an instrument convertible into cash (e.g., a check).

(4) Eligible work incentive employees. An eligible work incentive employee means an individual who has been certified by the designated local agency (as defined in paragraph (d)(10) of this section) as—

(i) being eligible for financial assistance under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act and as having continuously received such financial assistance during the 90-day period which immediately precedes the date on which such individual is hired by the employer, or

(ii) having been placed in employment under a work incentive program established under section 432(b)(1) or 445 of the Social Security Act.

The provisions of this paragraph (c)(4) are effective with respect to taxable years of the employer beginning after December 31, 1981. (See paragraph (b)(5) of this section for a special rule relating eligible work incentive employees.)

(5) Involuntarily terminated CETA employees—(i) In general. An involuntarily terminated CETA employee is an individual who first began work for an employer after August 13, 1981, in taxable years of the employer ending after August 13, 1981, and is certified by the designated local agency (as defined in paragraph (d)(10) of this section) as having been involuntarily terminated after December 31, 1980, from employment financed in whole, or in part, under a program under part D of title II or title VI of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.

(ii) Termination. Section 51(d)(10) and this paragraph (c)(5) shall not apply to any individual who begins work for the employer after December 31, 1982.

(d) Certification—(1) General rule. Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, an individual shall not be treated as a member of a targeted group unless, on or before the day on which such individual begins work for the employer, the employer has received, or has requested in writing, a certification that the individual is a member of a targeted group from the designated local agency (as defined in paragraph (d)(10) of this section). In addition, the employer must receive a certification before the credit under section 44B can be claimed. However, with respect to individuals who began work for the employer on or before May 11, 1982, the certification will be timely only if requested or received before the day the individual began work for the employer. In the case of a request in writing mailed via the United States Postal Service, the request shall be deemed to be made on the date of the postmark stamped on the cover in which such request was mailed to the designated local agency provided the request is mailed in accordance with the mailing requirements in §301.7502-1(c) and delivered in accordance with the delivery requirements in §301.7502-1(d). In the case of an employee who begins work on a Saturday, Sunday, or a legal holiday, the deadline for making a timely request in writing for a certification or receiving a timely certification shall be the next succeeding day which is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday. (See section 7503 for a definition of "legal holiday.") See paragraph (d)(2) of this section for transitional rules applicable to certain employees who began work for the employer before September 26, 1981. See paragraph (d)(3) of this section for special rules applicable to cooperative education students, and paragraph (d)(4) of this section for special rules applicable to eligible work incentive employees.

(2) Transitional rules for certain employees who began work for the employer on or before September 26, 1981. In the case of an individual, other than a cooperative education student, who began work for the employer before June 29, 1981, the employer must either receive, or request in writing, a certification before July 23, 1981. In the case of an individual, other than a cooperative education student, who began work for the employer after June 28, 1981, and on or before September 26, 1981, the employer must either receive, or request in writing, a certification before September 26, 1981.

(3) Cooperative education students. In the case of cooperative education students, the school administering the cooperative education program must issue the certification. Form 6199 is provided for this purpose. If the student begins work for the employer after September 26, 1981, see the general rule in §1.51-1(d)(1) for the date when this certification must be received or requested. If the student begins work for the employer on or before September 26, 1981, the employer must receive the certification or request it in writing before September 26, 1981. In order for an employer to claim a credit on wages paid or incurred to a cooperative education student after December 31, 1981, the employer must receive or request in writing a determination that the student is a member of an economically disadvantaged family. A request for economic eligibility determination for a cooperative education student must be made in writing by the employer to the participating school. If the student begins work for the employer on or before September 26, 1981, the employer must receive or request in writing such determination at any time before September 26, 1981. However, a request in writing on or after August 13, 1981, to a participating school for certification will be deemed to include a request for an economic eligibility determination. In addition, any certification issued by a school after August 13, 1981, will be deemed to be issued in response to a request for certification which includes a request for an economic eligibility determination. The rule in the preceding sentence does not eliminate the requirement that the employer receive a certification that includes an economic eligibility determination in order to claim a credit for wages paid or incurred after December 31, 1981. If a certification issued by a school after August 13, 1981, does not contain an economic eligibility determination and the employer wishes to claim a credit for wages paid or incurred after December 31, 1981, the employer must receive a completed certification before the date on which the credit is claimed.

(4) Eligible work incentive employees. In the case of eligible work incentive employees, the employer must either receive, or request in writing, a certification within the time requirements of paragraph (d)(1) or (2) of this section, whichever is applicable. Before October 12, 1981 (the date the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 codified the State employment security agency as the designated local agency for certifying targeted groups), a certificate may be received or requested in writing from either the designated local agency (as defined in paragraph (d)(10) of this section) or the office or agency that properly issued certifications under section 50B(h)(1) relating to the work incentive credit.

(5) Certifications that are not timely. Any certification that is not timely received or requested by the employer in accordance with the rules of this paragraph will be treated as invalid. Thus, the employer will not be allowed to claim a credit under section 51 with respect to any wages paid or incurred to an employee whose certification or request for certification is not timely. A timely request for certification does not eliminate the need for the employer to receive a certification before claiming the credit.

(6) Incorrect certification. If an individual has been certified as a member of a targeted group, and such certification is incorrect because it was based on false information provided by such individual, the certification shall be revoked and wages paid by the employer after the date on which notice of revocation is received by the employer shall not be treated as qualified wages. For purposes of this paragraph, a certification will be considered to be incorrect only if the individual would not have been certified had correct information been provided to the issuer of the certification. Thus, false information that is not material to the issue of an individual's eligibility as a member of a targeted group will not invalidate an otherwise valid certification.

(7) Certifications issued to certain rehires. This paragraph (d)(7) applies in the case of an employee who first began work for the employer before October 13, 1981, and was dismissed and rehired by the employer. A certification received or requested by an employer with respect to such an employee will be considered timely only if there was a valid business reason, unrelated to the availability of the credit, for the dismissal and rehire and if the employer did not dismiss and then rehire the employee in order to meet the timing requirement with respect to certification. An individual who is dismissed and then rehired for the purpose described in the preceding sentence will be considered for purposes of section 51(d)(16) and this paragraph to have been continuously employed by the employer during the time between the dismissal and the rehire. Whether the employer was motivated by reason of the certification rules in section 51(d)(16) and this paragraph to dismiss and then rehire an employee is a question of fact to be determined from all the circumstances surrounding the dismissal and rehire. (See paragraph (e)(2) of this section for a separate rule disallowing the credit in the case of nonqualifying rehires).

(8) Individuals who continue to be employed by the same employer but as a member of another targeted group—(i) In general. This paragraph (d)(8) applies in the case of an employee who continues to be employed by the same employer but no longer qualifies as a member of the targeted group for which such employee was first certified (e.g., the employee was originally certified as a qualified summer youth employee with respect to a ninety-day period between May 1 and September 15, but such ninety-day period has ended). In such case, the employer may request a certification that the employee is a member of another targeted group, and if any wages paid to such individual are qualified first-year wages or are qualified second-year wages, the employer may be entitled to a credit under section 44B with respect to such wages. The second certification will not be invalid merely because it was requested or received after the individual began work for the employer; only the first certification (for example, the certification with respect to an individual hired first as a qualified summer youth employee) must meet the requirement of section 51(d)(16) that a certification must be requested or received by an employer on or before the day on which the individual begins work for the employer.

(ii) Qualified summer youth employees. In the case of a former qualified summer youth employee, the term "hiring date" means not the day the individual is hired by the employer but means the day the individual is certified as a member of the new targeted group. Accordingly, the age requirements of section 51(d)(3)(B) shall be applied as of the day the individual is certified as a member of the second targeted group. In addition, if a second economic eligibility determination is required because the 45-day period referred to in section 51(d)(11) has lapsed, section 51(d)(11) shall be applied by taking into consideration the income during the 6 months immediately preceding the month in which the second determination occurs.

(iii) Other employees. In the case of an individual originally certified as a member of a targeted group (other than a qualified summer youth employee) such as a youth participating in a qualified cooperative education program, who is sought to be recertified as a member of another targeted group, the eligibility requirements for the recertification shall generally be applied with reference to the date of recertification, rather than the hiring date. However, this rule will not alter the determination described in section 51(d)(11), which is to be made with reference to the hiring date. Accordingly, if the individual was determined to be a member of an economically disadvantaged family when certified for the first targeted group, no second determination of this status need be made.

(9) Certification where a trade or business has been transferred to a new employer. In the case of the transfer of a trade or business in which an individual who is a member of a targeted group is retained as an employee in the trade or business, the certification obtained for such employee by the transferor-employer will apply with respect to the transferee-employer. For purposes of determining the amount of the credit allowable to the transferee-employer, the 1-year period referred to in §1.51-1(b)(2)(i) will be considered to begin with the day the employee first began work for the transferor-employer, and the amount of qualified first-year wages and qualified second-year wages paid or incurred to the employee must be reduced by the amount of any such wages paid or incurred by the transferor-employer. See examples (10) and (11) in paragraph (g) of this section.

(10) Designated local agency—(i) In general. For the period before October 12, 1981, the term "designated local agency" means the agency for any locality designated jointly by the Secretary and the Secretary of Labor to perform certifications of employees for employers in that locality. On or after October 12, 1981, the term "designated local agency" means a State employment security agency established in accordance with the Act of June 6, 1933, as amended (29 U.S.C. 49-49n).

(ii) Jurisdiction. The designated local agency is the agency that has, pursuant to its charter, jurisdiction over the individual that is sought to be certified. Thus, any certification that is issued with respect to an individual who is not within the jurisdiction of the designated local agency that issued the certification will be invalid. Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, a request in writing for certification to the appropriate designated local agency that is made before January 23, 1984 will be considered to be timely if it is made after an otherwise timely request in writing for certification was made to a designated local agency that does not have jurisdiction over the individual sought to be certified.

(e) Certain ineligible individuals—(1) Related individuals. For the purpose of section 51(a), "qualified wages" does not include any amounts paid or incurred by a taxpayer to any of the following individuals:

(i) An individual who is related (within the meaning of any of paragraphs (1) through (8) of section 152(a)) to the taxpayer;

(ii) An individual who is a dependent (within the meaning of section 152(a)(9)) of the taxpayer;

(iii) An individual who is related (within the meaning of any of paragraphs (1) through (8) of section 152(a)) to a shareholder who owns (within the meaning of section 267(c)) more than 50 percent in value of the outstanding stock of the taxpayer, if the taxpayer is a corporation;

(iv) An individual who is a dependent (within the meaning of section 152(a)(9)) of a shareholder described in paragraph (e)(1)(iii) of this section;

(v) An individual who is a grantor, beneficiary or fiduciary of the taxpayer, if the taxpayer is an estate or trust;

(vi) An individual who is a dependent (within the meaning of section 152(a)(9)) of an individual described in paragraph (e)(1)(v) of this section; or

(vii) An individual who is related (within the meaning of any of paragraphs (1) through (8) of section 152(a)) to an individual described in paragraph (e)(1)(v) of this section.

(2) Nonqualifying rehires. For purposes of section 51(a), "qualified wages" does not include wages paid to an employee who had been employed by the employer prior to the current hiring date of the employee if at any time during such prior employment the employee was not a member of a targeted group. The preceding sentence shall not apply to an employee who was previously timely certified as a member of a targeted group with respect to the same employer. An employee shall be treated as not having been a member of a targeted group if the certification requirements of section 51(d)(16) were not met. (See example (8) in paragraph (g) of this section).

(3) Effective date. The provision of this paragraph (e) are effective with respect to employees first beginning work for an employer after October 12, 1981.

(f) Limitations—(1) Limitation on qualified first-year wages. With respect to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1982, the amount of the qualified first-year wages which may be taken into account for purposes of the targeted jobs credit for any taxable year shall not exceed 30 percent of the aggregate unemployment insurance wages paid by the employer during the calendar year ending in such taxable year. In the case of a group of trades or businesses under common control (as defined in §1.52-1(b)), the qualified first-year wages cannot exceed 30 percent of the aggregate unemployment insurance wages paid to all employees of that group of trades or businesses under common control during the calendar year ending in such taxable year. For this purpose, the term "unemployment insurance wages" has the same meaning given to the term "wages" as defined in §1.51-1(b)(4). In the case of agricultural or railway labor, see section 51(h)(1) for the applicable definition of unemployment insurance wages. (See examples (13) and (14) in paragraph (g) of this section.)

(2) Remuneration must be for trade or business employment. Remuneration paid by an employer to an employee during any taxable year shall be taken into account only if more than one half of the remuneration paid by the employer to an employee is for services in a trade or business of the employer. This determination shall be made by each employer without regard to section 52(a) or (b). Accordingly, employees of corporations that are members of a controlled group or all employees of partnerships, proprietorships, and other trades or businesses (whether or not incorporated) which are under common control will be treated as being employed by each separate employer for this purpose. For this purpose, the term "year" means the taxable year of the employer. (See example (15) in paragraph (g) of this section.)

(g) Examples. The application of this section may be illustrated by the following examples which, except as otherwise stated, assume that the limitations imposed by §§1.51-1(f)(2) and 1.53-3 are inapplicable:

Example (1). Corporation M is a calendar year, cash receipts and disbursements method taxpayer. A, an economically disadvantaged youth, first began work for Corporation M on October 1, 1978. Qualified first-year wages with respect to A are wages attributable to the period beginning on January 1, 1979 (since A was first hired after September 26, 1978, he is treated as having begun work on January 1, 1979) and ending on December 31, 1979. In the 1979 taxable year, Corporation M pays A $5,000 of qualified first-year wages attributable to services performed in 1979. Corporation M's allowable credit is equal to $2,500 (50 percent of $5,000).

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1), except that in 1980 Corporation M pays to A $100 in wages attributable to services rendered in 1979. These wages will still be considered as qualified first-year wages, but the credit may not be claimed until the 1980 taxable year.

Example (3). Corporation O is a calendar year, cash receipts and disbursements method taxpayer. C, a vocational rehabilitation referral, first began work for Corporation O on July 1, 1978. Corporation O claimed a credit under section 44B (as in effect prior to enactment of the Revenue Act of 1978) for $3,000 of wages paid to C in the 1978 taxable year. Corporation O paid C $6,000 for services performed from January 1, 1979, to June 30, 1979. The period during which qualified first-year wages are determined begins on July 1, 1978, and ends on June 30, 1979. Amounts paid before January 1, 1979, however, are not taken into consideration in determining the amount of qualified first-year wages. Accordingly, only the wages attributable to services performed from January 1, 1979, through June 30, 1979, are considered as qualified first-year wages. Corporation O's allowable credit is equal to $3,000 (50 percent of $6,000).

Example (4). I first began work for Corporation Q, a cash receipts and disbursements method taxpayer, on January 1, 1981, and was not a member of a targeted group. On March 1, 1981, I was convicted of a felony and sentenced to prison. I quit working for Corporation Q, and served the prison sentence. On November 1, 1981, I again was hired by Corporation Q and began work on that date. On the November 1, 1981, hiring date, I was an economically disadvantaged ex-convict for whom Corporation Q received a certificate. Corporation Q paid I $500 of wages for services performed from November 1, 1981, to December 31, 1981, and $6,000 of wages for services performed during 1982. The $500 of wages paid for services performed from November 1, 1981, to December 31, 1981, would be qualified first-year wages because these qualified wages were paid for services performed during the 1-year period beginning on the date I first began work for Corporation Q (January 1, 1981). The $6,000 of wages paid for services performed during 1982 would be qualified second-year wages because these qualified wages were paid for services performed during the 1-year period beginning on the day after the first 1-year period. Accordingly, Corporation Q has an allowable credit of $250 attributable to qualified first-year wages and $1,500 attributable to qualified second-year wages.

Example (5). Assume the same facts as in example (4), except that all dates are 1 year later. Thus, I first began work for Corporation Q on January 1, 1982, was convicted on March 1, 1982, and was rehired on November 1, 1982. Under these facts, Q is not entitled to take a targeted jobs credit with respect to I's wages because I is a nonqualifying rehire.

Example (6). J, an economically disadvantaged youth, first began work for Corporation R, a calendar year cash receipts and disbursements method taxpayer, on December 1, 1979. On July 1, 1980, J was laid off by Corporation R and began work for Corporation S, which is unrelated to Corporation R, on July 2, 1980. On November 1, 1980, J again began work for Corporation R and continued working for Corporation R until January 1, 1982. At the time J first began work for Corporation S, J no longer met the qualifications of an economically disadvantaged youth. Corporation S may not claim a credit for wages paid to J because J was not a member of a targeted group at the time he began work for Corporation S. Corporation R, however, may claim a credit for wages paid to J because J was a member of a targeted group when he was hired by Corporation R. Corporation R's qualified first-year wages paid to J are the wages paid for services performed by J from December 1, 1979, to July 1, 1980, and from November 1, 1980, to November 30, 1980. Corporation R's qualified second-year wages paid to J are the wages paid for services performed by J from December 1, 1980, to November 30, 1981. Corporation R may not claim a credit for wages paid for services performed by J after November 30, 1981.

Example (7). K, a member of a targeted group, first began work for Corporation T on January 1, 1979. For the pay periods from January 1, 1979, to March 31, 1979, Corporation T received federally funded payments for on-the-job training for K and paid wages of $2,000 to K. During the remainder of 1979 Corporation T paid wages of $7,000 to K. Corporation T may claim a credit on $6,000 of qualified first-year wages. Amounts paid to K by Corporation T during the pay periods for which Corporation T received federally funded payments for on-the-job training for K are not considered wages for purposes of the credit. However, corporation T may consider $6,000 of the total $7,000 of wages paid after March 31, 1979, as qualified first-year wages.

Example (8). P first began work for Corporation X on January 1, 1981, as an individual who was certified to be an eligible employee for purposes of the WIN credit provided in section 40. Corporation X paid P $6,000 of wages during its taxable year beginning on January 1, 1981, and $6,000 of wages during its taxable year beginning on January 1, 1982. X can claim a credit under section 44B for the wages paid in 1982 if the requirements of section 51 are met. For purposes of section 51(a), P's qualified first-year wages are the wages paid from January 1, 1981, to December 31, 1981, and P's qualified second-year wages are the wages paid from January 1, 1982, to December 31, 1982. Thus, Corporation X is only entitled to claim a credit under section 44B based on P's qualified second-year wages.

Example (9). (i) L, 15 years of age, first began work for Corporation U on August 1, 1979. On September 3, 1979, L began her junior year in high school and enrolled in a qualified cooperative education program that was to run for her junior and senior years. On October 1, 1979, when L turned 16, she met all the requirements of §1.51-1(c)(2)(i) and qualified as a youth participating in a qualified cooperative education program. Corporation U is entitled to claim a credit on wages paid or incurred for services performed by L after September 30, 1979, so long as L meets the requisite requirements. L's summer vacation began on June 1, 1980. The cooperative education program L was enrolled in did not continue during the summer vacation. Thus, during her summer vacation, L did not meet the requirement of actively pursuing a qualified cooperative education program. Accordingly, Corporation U may not claim a credit on wages paid for services performed by L during L's summer vacation. On September 2, 1980, L began her senior year, and again met all the requirements of §1.51-1(c)(2)(i). She continued to meet these requirements until June 5, 1981, when she graduated from high school. Accordingly, Corporation U may claim a credit on wages paid for services performed after September 1, 1980, and before June 5, 1981.

(ii) Assume the same facts as in (i), above, except that all dates are 3 years later. Under these facts, V is not entitled to claim a targeted jobs credit with respect to L's wages because L has not been timely certified under section 51(d)(16) and §1.51-1(d)(3).

Example (10). D began work for a drugstore owned by E as a sole proprietor on January 1, 1979, and was certified as a member of a targeted group with respect to E. On June 1, 1979, E sold the drugstore where D worked to F, who continued to operate the drugstore with D as an employee. D's qualification as a member of a targeted group is not required to be redetermined in order for F to qualify for the targeted jobs credit. F will take into account the certification of D's eligibility that was provided to E. F will have qualified first-year wages consisting of the first $6,000 of wages paid or incurred to D by E and F from January 1, 1979, to December 31, 1979 (reduced by any qualified wages paid or incurred by E to D from January 1, 1979, to May 31, 1979). F's qualified second-year wages will consist of the first $6,000 of wages paid or incurred to D by F from January 1, 1980, to December 31, 1980.

Example (11). G began work in a machine shop owned by H as a sole proprietor on January 1, 1979, and was certified as a member of a targeted group with respect to H. On June 1, 1980, H transferred all the assets of the machine shop to newly formed Corporation P. Corporation P retained G as an employee in the machine shop. G's qualification as a member of a targeted group is not required to be redetermined in order for P to qualify for the targeted jobs credit. H has qualified first-year wages in the amount of the first $6,000 of wages paid or incurred to G by H from January 1, 1979, to December 31, 1979. Corporation P has qualified second-year wages in the amount of the first $6,000 of wages paid or incurred to G by H and Corporation P from January 1, 1980, to December 31, 1980 (reduced by any qualified second-year wages paid by H to G).

Example (12). W operates a retail store as a sole proprietor. On June 1, 1982, W hires S after receiving a written determination from a local community organization that S meets the requirements as an economically disadvantaged youth. W does not request a certification from the State employment security agency as to S's eligibility. W is not entitled to claim a credit with respect to wages paid to S because W did not receive, or request in writing, a certification from the State employment security agency as to S's eligibility on or before the day on which S began work for W.

Example (13). Corporation V is a cash receipts and disbursements method taxpayer with a July 1 through June 30 taxable year. In the taxable year ending June 30, 1980, the aggregate unemployment insurance wages paid by V were $150,000. In calendar year 1979 the aggregate unemployment insurance wages paid by Corporation V were $110,000. Corporation V's qualified first-year wages are limited to 30 percent of the aggregate unemployment insurance wages paid by it in calendar year 1979 or $33,000 (30 percent of $110,000), even though the aggregate unemployment insurance wages paid by it in the taxable year ending June 30, 1980, were $150,000.

Example (14). Assume the same facts as in example (13), except that all dates are 3 years later. Since the limitation on qualified first-year wages does not apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1981, Corporation V's qualified first-year wages are $150,000.

Example (15). M operates a retail store as a sole proprietor. N and O, both members of a targeted group, first began work for M on January 1, 1979. M paid N total qualified first-year wages of $6,000 in 1979. Three thousand one hundred dollars of those wages were for services in M's retail store, and $2,900 of those wages were for services as M's maid. M paid O total qualified first-year wages of $6,000 in 1979. Three thousand dollars of those wages were for services in M's store, and $3,000 of those wages were for services as M's chauffeur. M has an allowable credit of $3,000 in 1979 on all $6,000 of qualified first-year wages paid to N because more than one-half of the remuneration paid by M to N was for services in M's trade or business. M may not take into account the wages paid to O because not more than one-half of the remuneration paid by M to O was for services in M's trade or business. Accordingly, M may not claim a credit on wages paid to O.

Par. 2. Section 1.381(c)(26)-1 is amended to read as set forth below:

§1.381(c)(26)-1 Credit for employment of certain new employees.

(a) Carryovers and carrybacks. The computation of carryovers and carrybacks of unused targeted jobs credit (new jobs credit in the case of wages paid before 1979) under section 44B in a transaction to which section 381(a) applies shall be made under the principles of §1.381(c)(23)-1 (relating to the computation of carryovers and carrybacks of unused investment credit), except that the provisions of paragraph (c)(4) and paragraph (e)(6), (7), and (8) of such section shall not apply.

(b) Other items. See §1.51-1(d)(9) for a rule that applies to certain transfers of a trade or business in which members of a targeted group are employed.

Par. 3. Section 5.51-1 is deleted.

JAMES I. OWENS,
Acting Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Incentive Stock Options

LR-279-81

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations relating to incentive stock options. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981. [Pub. L. 97-34, 1971-2 C.B. 256]. The regulations would affect certain taxpayers who participate in the transfer of stock pursuant to the exercise of incentive stock options and provide them with guidance to comply with the law.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by April 9, 1984. The amendments are proposed to be effective on the date they are published in the FEDERAL REGISTER as final regulations. In general, they apply to options granted after August 12, 1981, but they also provide transitional rules applicable to certain options granted after December 31, 1975, and before August 13, 1981.

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T [LR-279-81], 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Bruce H. Jurist of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224 (Attention: CC:LR:T), 202-566-3238, not a toll-free call.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

Prior to August 13, 1981, the tax treatment of employee stock options generally was governed by section 83 of the Code and the regulations thereunder. Under those rules, the value of a stock option constituted ordinary income to the employee when granted only if the option itself had a readily ascertainable fair market value at that time. If the option did not have a readily ascertainable value when granted, it did not constitute ordinary income until exercised. At the time of exercise, the difference between the value of the stock received and the option price constituted ordinary income to the employee. An employer who granted a stock option generally was allowed a business expense deduction equal to the amount includable in the employee's income in its corresponding taxable year.

Changes to the applicable tax law were made by section 251 of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (95 Stat. 172) (ERTA) [Pub. L. 97-34, 1981-2 C.B. 256, 301], which added new section 422A to the Code entitled "Incentive Stock Options," and provided a set of transitional rules for the conversion of certain options granted prior to the August 13, 1981 date of enactment. Related technical changes to section 251 of ERTA were made by section 102(j) of the Technical Corrections Act of 1982 (P. L. 97-448) [1983-1 C.B. 451]. Finally, section 201(b)(1)(C) of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (96 Stat. 324) (TEFRA) [Pub. L. 97-248, 1982-2 C.B. 462, 468], amended section 57(a) of the Code to include as an item of tax preference the spread (i.e., the amount by which the fair market value of the stock at the time of exercise exceeds the option price) at the time an incentive stock option is exercised. Section 201(b)(1)(C) of TEFRA is effective for taxble years beginning after December 31, 1982.

Section 422A provides for a new statutory stock option under which, pursuant to section 421, there will be no tax consequences when such an option is either granted or exercised (except for potential minimum tax consequences), and the employee will be taxed at capital gain rates when and if the stock received on exercise of the option is sold. Similarly, no business expense deduction will be allowed to the employer with respect to such an option.

On December 21, 1981, the Internal Revenue Service published §14a.422A-1, temporary regulations relating to the transitional rules provided by section 251(c) of ERTA (46 FR 61839) [T.D. 7799, 1982-1 C.B. 67]. The temporary regulations provided guidance to taxpayers who wanted to convert certain existing stock options into incentive stock options. The regulations were drafted in a question and answer format so as to both facilitate their timely publication and limit their scope to the transitional period issues.

The proposed regulations contained in this document represent the complete set of regulations to be promulgated under section 422A. Accordingly, the information contained in the previously published temporary regulations has been incorporated into these proposed regulations. The proposed regulations are to be issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

REQUIREMENTS TO RECEIVE SPECIAL TAX TREATMENT

Section 1.422A-1 of the proposed regulations provides that an individual, in order to receive the special tax treatment available to incentive stock options under section 421(a), must meet the following two conditions:

(1) The individual must not dispose of the stock acquired pursuant to the exercise of an incentive stock option within two years after the option is granted and must hold the stock itself for at least one year. An exception to the above holding period requirements is provided with respect to certain transfers by insolvent individuals.

(2) For the entire time from the date of granting the option until three months (one year if employment ceased because the individual is disabled within the meaning of either section 105(d)(4) or section 37(e)(3)) before the date of exercise, the individual must be an employee either of the corporation granting the option, a parent or subsidiary of that corporation, or a corporation (or parent or subsidiary of that corporation) which has assumed the option of another corporation as a result of a corporate reorganization, liquidation, etc.

In the case of the death of the individual, both the holding period requirements and the employment requirement are waived.

If all requirements other than the above holding period requirements are met, tax is deferred until disposition of the stock, but gain (to the extent the value of the stock at exercise of the option exceeds the option price) is treated as ordinary income rather than capital gain, and the employer is allowed a deduction for that amount. In the case of certain dispositions where the amount realized on disposition is less than the stock's value at exercise, the amount of ordinary income, and the amount of the employer's deduction, are limited to the difference between the amount realized on the sale and the option price.

INCENTIVE STOCK OPTION DEFINED

Section 1.422A-2 of the proposed regulations provides that for an option to qualify as an incentive stock option, the following conditions must be met:

(1) The option must be granted under a plan specifying the aggregate number of shares of stock which may be issued and the employees or class of employees eligible to receive the options. This plan must be approved by the stockholders of the granting corporation within 12 months before or after the plan is adopted.

(2) The option must be granted within ten years from the date the plan is adopted or the date the plan is approved by the stockholders, whichever is earlier.

(3) The option must by its terms be exercisable only within ten years of the date it is granted.

(4) The option price must equal or exceed the fair market value of the stock at the time the option is granted. This requirement will be deemed satisfied if there has been a good faith attempt to value the stock accurately, even if the option price is less than the stock value.

(5) The option by its terms must be nontransferable other than at death and, during the employee's lifetime, must not be exercisable by any other person.

(6) The employee must not, at the time the option is granted, own stock representing more than ten percent of the voting power of all classes of stock of the employer corporation or its parent or subsidiary. However, the stock ownership limitation will not apply if the option price is at least 110 percent of the fair market value (at the time the option is granted) of the stock subject to the option and the option by its terms is not exercisable more than five years from the date it is granted.

(7) The option by its terms is not exercisable while there is outstanding any incentive stock option which was granted to the employee at an earlier time. For this purpose, an option which has not been exercised in full is outstanding until the expiration of the period during which it could have been exercised under its initial terms. Thus, the cancellation of an earlier option will not enable a subsequent option to be exercised any sooner.

(8) In the case of options granted after 1980, the terms of the plan must limit the aggregate fair market value of the stock (determined at the time of the grant of the option) for which any employee may be granted incentive stock options in any calendar year to not more than $100,000 plus a carryover amount. The carryover amount for an employee from any year after 1980 is one-half of the amount by which $100,000 exceeds the value at time of grant of the stock for which incentive stock options were granted in such prior year. Amounts may be carried over three years. Options granted in any year use up the $100,000 current year limitation first and then the carryover amount from the earliest year. Amounts may be carried over from calendar years after 1980 whether or not the corporation had an incentive stock option plan in effect for the earlier year provided the individual was employed by the corporation (or subsidiary, parent, or predecessor corporation) for some part of the earlier year.

PERMISSIBLE PROVISIONS

Section 1.422A-2 of the proposed regulations also provides that an option will qualify as an incentive stock option even if any of the following provisions are present:

(1) Stock acquired on exercise of an incentive stock option may be paid for with stock of the corporation granting the option.

(2) The employee has the right to receive additional compensation (in cash or other property) at the time of exercise of the option so long as the additional amount is includible in income under the provisions of sections 61 and 83. Thus, the enployer corporation may pay the employee additional amounts (whether or not the amount of additional compensation is determined by reference to the price of the stock and/or the option price) when the employee exercises the option.

(3) The option is subject to a condition not inconsistent with the qualification requirements of section 422A(b). For example, an employee's right to receive a taxable payment of cash or other property (including employer stock) in an amount equal to the difference between the then fair market value of the stock and the option price in exchange for the cancellation or surrender of the option (at a time when it is otherwise exercisable) does not disqualify the option. This applies where the exercise of this alternative right has the same economic and tax consequences as the exercise of the option followed by an immediate sale of the stock to the employer (which would be taxed as ordinary income under section 421(b)). However, an option that includes an alternative right is not an incentive stock option if the requirements of section 422A(b) may be avoided by exercise of the alternative right. For example, an alternative right extending the option term beyond ten years, setting a price below fair market value, permitting transferability, or allowing nonsequential exercise, will prevent an option from qualifying as an incentive stock option.

INCENTIVE STOCK OPTION TRANSITIONAL RULES

Section 1.422A-3 of the proposed regulations provides special rules relating to the conversion of certain existing options into incentive stock options. Pursuant to section 251(c) of ERTA, the proposed regulation provides the following guidelines for the conversion of options:

(1) Only options originally granted after December 31, 1975, will be eligible for conversion into incentive stock options.

(2) Options granted during the years 1976 through 1980 will be eligible for conversion only if the option was outstanding on January 1, 1981, and the granting corporation elects to convert the option. The aggregate value (determined at the time of grant) of stock the options for which may be converted into incentive stock options by such an election may not exceed $50,000 per calendar year and $200,000 in the aggregate for the five-year period 1976-1980. The election may be made with respect to those options (or portions of options) which the granting corporation selects. The taxation of options with respect to which no election is made will not be affected.

(3) In the case of an option granted after December 31, 1975, and outstanding on August 13, 1981, the option terms (or the terms of the plan under which the option was granted) may be changed, or shareholder approval obtained, to conform to the incentive stock option rules, by August 13, 1982, without the change giving rise to a new option requiring the setting of an option price based on the valuation of the stock on the date of change. All such changes relate back to the time of grant of the original option.

(4) Generally, an exercised option must have met the incentive stock option qualification requirements of section 422A(b), at the time it was exercised, to be eligible for conversion into an incentive stock option.

(5) For incentive stock options exercised prior to 1983, the difference between the option price and the value of the stock on the date of exercise is not an item of tax preference. However, for incentive stock options exercised after 1982 (which are not later subject to a disqualifying disposition), such difference is an item of tax preference subject to the alternative minimum tax under section 55 of the Code.

TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

Finally, because new section 422A interacts directly with other sections of the Code, the proposed regulations provide technical and conforming amendments to a number of existing regulations under sections 421, 425, and 6039.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that these proposed rules are not major rules as defined in either Executive Order 12291 or the Treasury and OMB implementation of that order dated April 29, 1983. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required. Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply because the rules proposed are interpretative. Accordingly, these proposed regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

COMMENTS AND REQUEST FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably seven copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

The collection of information requirements contained in this notice of proposed rulemaking have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for review under section 3504(h) of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. Comments on these requirements should be sent to the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs of OMB, Attention: Desk Office for Internal Revenue Service, New Executive Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20503. The Internal Revenue Service requests that persons submitting comments on these requirements to OMB also send copies of those comments to the Service.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations is Philip R. Bosco of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, other personnel in the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations on matters of both substance and style.

Proposed amendments to the Regulations

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are as follows:

Paragraph 1. Section 1.422A-1 is added to read as follows:

§1.422A-1 Incentive stock options—general rules.

(a) Applicability of section 421 (a)(1)(i) Section 421(a) applies with respect to the transfer of a share of stock to an individual pursuant to the exercise of an incentive stock option if the following conditions are satisfied—

(A) The individual makes no disposition of such share before the later of the expiration of the 2-year period beginning on the day of the grant of the option pursuant to which such share was transferred, or the expiration of the 1-year period beginning on the day of the transfer of such share, and

(B) At all times during the period beginning on the day of the grant of the option and ending on the day 3 months before the date of such exercise, the individual was an employee of either the corporation granting the option, a related corporation of such corporation, or a corporation (or a related corporation of such corporation) issuing or assuming a stock option in a transaction to which section 425(a) applies.

(ii) For rules relating to the disposition of shares of stock, see paragraph (c) of §1.425-1. For rules relating to the requisite employment relationship, see paragraph (h) of §1.421-7.

(2)(i) The holding period requirement of section 422A(a)(1), set forth in paragraph (a)(1)(i)(A) of this section, does not apply to certain transfers by insolvent individuals. If an insolvent individual holds a share of stock acquired pursuant to the exercise of an incentive stock option, and if such share is transferred to a trustee, receiver, or other similar fiduciary in any proceeding under the Bankruptcy Act or any other similar insolvency proceeding, neither such transfer, nor any other transfer of such share for the benefit of the insolvent individual's creditors in such proceeding shall constitute a disposition of such share for the purpose of section 422A(a)(1). For the purpose of this paragraph (a)(2) an individual is an insolvent only if his liabilities exceed his assets, or if the individual is unable to satisfy his liabilities as they become due.

(ii) A transfer by the trustee or other fiduciary that is not treated as a disposition for the purpose of section 422A(a)(1) may be a sale or exchange for purposes of recognizing capital gain or loss with respect to the share transferred. For example, if the trustee transfers the share to a creditor in the insolvency proceeding in complete or partial satisfaction of such creditor's claim against the insolvent individual, capital gain or loss must be recognized by the insolvent individual to the extent of the difference between the amount realized from such transfer and the adjusted basis of such share. To the extent any transfer by the trustee or other fiduciary (other than a transfer back to the insolvent individual) is not for the exclusive benefit of the creditors in the insolvency proceeding, such transfer will be treated as a disposition for purposes of section 422A(a)(1). Similarly, if the trustee or other fiduciary transfers the share back to the insolvent individual, any subsequent disposition of the share which is not made in respect of the insolvency proceeding and for the exclusive benefit of the creditors in such proceeding will be treated as a disposition for purposes of section 422A(a)(1).

(3) If the employee exercising an option ceased employment because of permanent and total disability within the meaning of either section 37(e)(3) or section 105(d)(4), 1 year is substituted for 3 months in the employment period requirement of section 422A(a)(2) and paragraph (a)(1)(i)(B) of this section.

(b) Failure to satisfy holding period requirement. (1) A disqualifying disposition of a share of stock acquired by the exercise of an incentive stock option (i.e., a disposition before the expiration of the holding periods as determined under section 422A(a)(1) and paragraph (a)(1)(i)(A) of this section) makes section 421(a) inapplicable to the transfer of such share. Pursuant to section 421(b), the income attributable to such transfer shall be treated by the individual as income received in the taxable year in which such disqualifying disposition occurs. Similarly, a deduction under section 162 attributable to the transfer of the share of stock pursuant to the exercise of the option shall be allowable for the taxable year in which such disqualifying disposition occurs to the employer corporation (or to a corporation issuing or assuming the option in a transaction to which section 425(a) applies). In such cases, no amount shall be treated as income, and no amount shall be allowed as a deduction, for any taxable year other than the taxable year in which the disqualifying disposition occurs. Except as provided by section 421(b) and paragraph (b) of this section, the effects of a disqualifying disposition shall be determined pursuant to section 83 and the regulations thereunder.

(2) If an individual makes a disqualifying disposition of a share of stock acquired by the exercise of an incentive stock option, and if such disposition is a sale or exchange with respect to which a loss (if sustained) would be recognized to the individual, then, under section 422A(c)(2), the amount includible in the gross income of such individual, and deductible from the income of the employer corporation (or of a corporation issuing or assuming the option in a transaction to which section 425(a) applies) as compensation attributable to the exercise of such option, shall not exceed the excess (if any) of the amount realized on such sale or exchange over the adjusted basis of such share. Thus, the limitation does not apply when the disqualifying disposition is a sale described in section 1091 (relating to loss from wash sales of stock or securities), a gift, or a sale described in section 267(a)(1) (relating to sales between related persons), since a loss sustained in any such transaction would not be recognized. Subject to the limitation provided by section 422A(c)(2) and this paragraph (b)(2), the amount of compensation attributable to the exercise of the option is determined under §1.83-7.

(3) The application of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On June 1, 1982, X Corporation grants an incentive stock option to A, an employee of X Corporation, entitling A to purchase one share of X Corporation stock. On August 1, 1982, A exercises the option and the share of X Corporation stock is transferred to A on that date. In order to meet the holding period requirements of section 422A(a)(1), A must not dispose of the share acquired by exercise of the incentive stock option before June 1, 1984.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that A exercises the option on June 1, 1983, and the share of X Corporation stock is transferred to A on June 10, 1983. In order to meet the holding period requirements of section 422A(a)(1), A must not dispose of the share acquired by exercise of the incentive stock option before June 10, 1984.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (1) and assume further that the option price was $100, the fair market value of X Corporation stock on June 1, 1982, and that the fair market value of X Corporation stock was $200 on August 1, 1982, the date of exercise. Assume further that the share of X Corporation stock transferred to A was transferable and not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture. A makes a disqualifying disposition by selling the share on June 1, 1983, for $250. Under section 83(a) and paragraph (a) of §1.83-7 (relating to options to which section 421 does not apply) the amount of compensation attributable to A's exercise is $100 (the difference between the fair market value of the share at the date of exercise, $200, and the amount paid for the share, $100). Because the amount realized, $250, is greater than the value of the stock at exercise, section 422A(c)(2) does not apply and thus does not affect the amount includible as compensation in A's gross income and deductible by X. A must include in gross income for the taxable year in which the sale occurred $100 as compensation and $50 as capital gain ($250, the amount realized from the sale, less A's basis of $200 (the $100 paid for the share plus the $100 increase in basis resulting from the inclusion of that amount in A's gross income as compensation attributable to the exercise of the option)). For its taxable year in which the disqualifying disposition occurs, X Corporation is allowed a deduction of $100 for compensation attributable to A's exercise of the incentive stock option provided the withholding requirements of §1.83-6 are met.

Example (4). Assume the same facts as in example (3), except that A sells the share for $150. Under section 422A(c)(2), A must include only $50 (the excess of the amount realized on such sale, $150, over the adjusted basis of the share, $100) in gross income as compensation attributable to the exercise of the incentive stock option instead of the $100 which otherwise would have been includible as compensation under section 83(a). A realizes no capital gain or loss as a result of the sale, since A's basis for the share is $150 (the $100 which A paid for the share, plus the $50 increase in basis resulting from the inclusion of that amount in A's gross income as compensation attributable to the exercise of the option). For its taxable year in which the disqualifying disposition occurs, X Corporation is allowed a deduction of $50 for compensation attributable to A's exercise of the incentive stock option provided the withholding requirements of §1.83-6 are met.

Example (5). Assume the same facts as in example (3), except that A sells the share for $50. The limitation of section 422A(c)(2) applies and A is not required to include any amount in gross income as compensation attributable to the exercise of the incentive stock option. A is allowed a capital loss of $50 (the difference between the amount realized on the sale, $50, and the adjusted basis of the share, $100). X Corporation is not allowed any deduction for compensation attributable to A's exercise of the incentive stock option and disqualifying disposition.

Example (6). Assume the same facts as in example (4) except that A sells the share to A's son for $150. Under section 267, a loss sustained in such a sale would not be recognized. Therefore, the limitation of section 422A(c)(2) does not apply. Accordingly, under section 83(a), A must include $100 (the difference between the fair market value of the share at date of exercise, $200, and the amount paid for the share, $100) in gross income as compensation attributable to the exercise of the incentive stock option in the taxable year in which the disqualifying disposition occurred. A will recognize no capital gain or loss on the transaction. X Corporation will be allowed a $100 deduction for compensation paid to A in its taxable year in which the disqualifying disposition occurred provided the withholding requirements of §1.83-6 are met.

Example (7). Assume the same facts as in example (4), except assume that, as a result of the failure of a good-faith attempt to set the option price at the fair market value of X Corporation stock on the date of grant, the option price was set at $90 instead of $100. The requirement that the option price be not less than the fair market value of the stock at the time such option is granted, shall be considered to have been met pursuant to section 422A(c)(1). Upon sale of the share, A will include $60 (the excess of the amount realized on such sale, $150, over the adjusted basis of the share, $90) in gross income as compensation attributable to the exercise of the incentive stock option, in the taxable year in which the disqualifying disposition occurs. A will have no capital gain or loss as a result of such sale. Under section 422A(c)(2), X Corporation will be allowed a deduction of $60 as compensation attributable to A's exercise, in the taxable year of A's disqualifying disposition, provided the withholding requirements of §1.83-6 are met.

Example (8). Assume the same facts as in example (3), except that the share of X Corporation stock transferred to A is subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture and not transferable for a period of six months after such transfer. Assume further that the fair market value of X Corporation stock was $225 on February 1, 1983, the date the six-month restriction lapsed. Under section 83(a) and paragraph (a) of §1.83-7, the amount of compensation attributable to A's exercise of the option and subsequent disqualifying disposition is $125 (the difference between the fair market value of the share on the date the restriction lapsed, $225, and the amount paid for the share, $100). A must include in gross income for the taxable year in which the sale occurred $125 as compensation and $25 as capital gain ($250, the amount realized from the sale, less A's basis of $225 (the $100 paid for the share plus the $125 increase in basis resulting from the inclusion of that amount in A's gross income as compensation attributable to the exercise of the option)). For its taxable year in which the disqualifying disposition occurs, X Corporation is allowed a deduction of $125 for compensation attributable to A's exercise of the option provided the withholding requirements of §1.83-6 are met.

(c) Failure to satisfy employment requirement. Section 421 does not apply to the transfer of a share of stock acquired by the exercise of an incentive stock option if the employment requirement as determined under section 422A(a)(2) and paragraph (a)(1)(i)(B) of this section is not met at the time of transfer. Consequently, the effects of such a transfer shall be determined pursuant to section 83 and the regulations thereunder.

Par. 2. Section 1.422A-2 is added after §1.422A-1 to read as follows:

§1.422A-2 Incentive stock options defined.

(a) Incentive stock option defined. (1)(i) In general, the term "incentive stock option" means an option that meets the requirements of section 422A(b) and this section at the time of grant and that is granted to an individual after August 13, 1981. In addition, certain stock options granted to an individual after December 31, 1975, that were not incentive stock options at the time of grant, may be converted into incentive stock options. See §1.422A-3 for special rules relating to such options. Section 422A(b)(1) requires that an incentive stock option be granted pursuant to a plan which meets certain requirements. See paragraph (b) of this section. Section 422A(b)(2) provides that in order for an option to be an incentive stock option it must be granted within 10 years of the adoption of the plan or the date of stockholder approval, whichever is earlier. See paragraph (c) of this section. In order to grant incentive stock options after the expiration of such 10-year period, a new plan must be adopted and approved. Such new plan may retain all of the terms of the old plan or may include new terms. Paragraphs (3), (4), (5), and (7) of section 422A(b) establish certain requirements which must be met by the terms of an incentive stock option. An option which, when granted, does not by its terms meet these requirements cannot be an incentive stock option. See paragraphs (d), (e), (f), and (g) of this section. However, an amendment of the terms of an option at any time to permit such option to meet the requirement of section 422A(b)(5) will be given retroactive effect. See section 425(h)(3)(B) and paragraph (e)(5)(iii) of §1.425-1. Section 422A(b)(6) generally bars the grant of an incentive stock option to any employee whose stock ownership exceeds the limits provided by such section. An option granted to an employee whose stock ownership exceeds such limits cannot be an incentive stock option unless the special rule of section 422A(c)(8) applies. See paragraph (h) of this section. Section 422A(b)(8) bars the grant of an incentive stock option to any employee whose annual grants of incentive stock options exceed the limits provided by such section. An option granted to an employee whose annual grants exceed such limits cannot be an incentive stock option. See paragraph (b)(4) of this section. Section 422A(c)(5) provides that an incentive stock option may contain a number of permissible provisions that will not affect the option's status as an incentive stock option. See paragraph (i) of this section.

(ii) Whether a particular option is an incentive stock option is determined at the time such option is granted. Accordingly, except as otherwise specifically provided by sections 421 through 425 and the regulations thereunder, events subsequent to the grant of an option cannot affect the status of the option. For example, an option which is granted at a fair market value option price to an employee whose stock ownership exceeds the limitation provided by section 422A(b)(6) is not an incentive stock option when granted and can never become an incentive stock option, even if the individual's stock ownership is within the limitation at the time such option is exercised.

(iii) Except as otherwise specifically provided by sections 421 through 425 and the regulations thereunder, an incentive stock option must meet the requirements of section 422A(b) and this section at all times during the period beginning on the date of the granting of the option and ending on the date of the exercise or expiration of the option. Accordingly, such requirements must be met even during periods when section 421(a) would not apply to the transfer of stock on exercise of the option. For example, an option which provides that the sequential exercise restriction of section 422A(b)(7) will cease to have effect 3 months and a day after an optionee terminates employment is not an incentive stock option when granted and can never become an incentive stock option.

(iv) An option granted after April 9, 1984 which meets the requirements of section 422A(b) and this section at the time of grant is an incentive stock option irrespective of any option or plan labeling to the contrary.

(2) Section 422A and this section do not apply to an option which is a restricted or qualified stock option.

(b) Option plan. (1) An incentive stock option must be granted pursuant to a written plan which meets the requirements of section 422A(b) and this paragraph (b). The authority to grant other stock options or rights pursuant to the plan, where the exercise of such other options or rights does not affect the exercise of incentive stock options granted pursuant to the plan, will not disqualify such incentive stock options.

(2) The plan required by section 422A must be approved by the stockholders of the granting corporation within 12 months before or after the date such plan is adopted. Ordinarily, a plan is adopted when approved by the board of directors and the date of such board action will be the reference point for determining whether stockholder approval occurs within the 12-month period. However, if the board's action is subject to a condition, such as stockholder approval, or the happening of a particular event, the plan is adopted on the date the condition is met or the event occurs, unless the board's resolution fixes the date of approval as the date of the board's action. The approval of stockholders must comply with all applicable provisions of the corporate charter, bylaws and applicable State law prescribing the method and degree of stockholder approval required for the granting of incentive stock options. Absent any such prescribed method and degree of stockholder approval, an incentive stock option plan must be approved by a simple majority vote of stockholders, voting either in person or by proxy, at a duly held stockholders' meeting.

(3)(i) The plan required by section 422A must designate the aggregate number of shares which may be issued under the plan and the employees or class of employees eligible to receive options under the plan. Unless otherwise specified, the terms designated shall apply to all options that may be granted under the plan, including options other than incentive stock options. If options other than incentive stock options may be granted, the plan may separately designate terms for each type of option. If individuals other than employees may be granted options, the plan must separately designate the employees or class of employees eligible to receive incentive stock options.

(ii) A plan which merely provides that the number of shares which may be issued under options shall not exceed a stated percentage of the shares outstanding at the time of each offering or grant under the plan will not satisfy the requirement that the plan state the aggregate number of shares which may be issued under the plan. However, the maximum number of shares which may be issued under the plan may be stated in terms of a percentage of either the authorized, issued or outstanding shares at the date of the adoption of the plan.

(iii) The requirement that the plan as adopted and approved must indicate the class of employees (or the employees) eligible to receive options will be considered satisfied by a general designation of the class of employees eligible to receive options under the plan. Thus, such designations as "key employees of the grantor corporation," "all salaried employees of the grantor corporation and its subsidiaries, including subsidiaries which become such after adoption of the plan" or "all employees of the corporation" will meet this requirement. Moreover, this requirement will be considered satisfied although the board of directors or another group is given authority to select the particular employees who are to receive options from a described class and to determine the number of shares to be optioned to each such employee.

(iv) The provisions relating to the aggregate number of shares to be issued under the plan and the class of employees (or the employees) eligible to receive options under the plan are the only provisions of a stock option plan which require stockholder approval for purposes of section 422A(b)(1). Any increase in the aggregate number of shares which may be issued under the plan (other than an increase merely reflecting a change in capitalization such as a stock dividend or stock split), or change in the designation of the employees or class of employees eligible to receive options under the plan will be considered as the adoption of a new plan requiring stockholder approval within the prescribed 12-month period. Any other changes in the terms of an incentive stock option plan are not considered the adoption of a new plan. An option intended by the grantor corporation to be an incentive stock option will be treated as having been granted pursuant to a plan notwithstanding that the terms of the option conflict with terms of the plan unless such option is granted to an employee not eligible to receive options under the plan or options have been granted on stock in excess of the aggregate number of shares which may be issued under the plan.

(4)(i) The plan required by section 422A must, by its terms, provide that the aggregate fair market value (determined at the time of grant of the option) of stock for which an employee may be granted incentive stock options in any calendar year after 1980, under all such plans of the employer corporation (or its parent or subsidiary corporations, or a predecessor corporation (as defined in paragraph (f)(2) of this section) of any such corporation), shall not exceed $100,000 plus any unused limit carryover to such year.

(ii) The unused limit carryover is an amount determined for a calendar year after 1980 equal to one-half of the amount by which $100,000 exceeds the aggregate fair market value (determined at the time of grant of the option) of stock for which an employee was granted incentive stock options in such calendar year. The unused limit carryover for a calendar year may be applied to each of the 3 succeeding calendar years, reduced each calendar year by the amount of such carryover which was used in a prior calendar year. For purposes of this paragraph, the amount of incentive stock options granted during any calendar year shall be treated as first using up the $100,000 limit for such calendar year, and then any unused limit carryover to such calendar year in the order in which the carryovers arose.

(iii) Amounts may be carried over from calendar years after 1980 whether or not the granting corporation had an incentive stock option plan in effect for the year of the unused limit carryover, provided that the individual was employed by such corporation (or its parent or subsidiary corporations, or a predecessor corporation (as defined in paragraph (f)(2) of this section) of any such corporation) for some part of such year.

(iv) If an option intended to be an incentive stock option is granted to an employee, but such option gives the employee the right to buy stock in excess of the amount permitted by this paragraph (b)(4), no portion of such option is an incentive stock option. However, if the amount permitted has been exceeded because there was a failure of an attempt, made in good faith, to meet the option price requirements of section 422A (b)(4) and paragraph (e)(1) of this section, the requirements of this paragraph (b)(4) shall be considered to have been met. To determine whether there was a good-faith attempt to meet the option price requirements of section 422A(b)(4) and paragraph (e)(1) of this section, see paragraph (e)(2)(ii) of this section.

(c) Duration of option grants under the plan. An incentive stock option must be granted within 10 years from the date the plan required by section 422A is adopted, or the date such plan is approved by the stockholders, whichever is earlier.

(d) Period for exercising options. An incentive stock option by its terms must not be exercisable after the expiration of 10 years from the date the option is granted. An option which does not contain such a provision when granted cannot be an incentive stock option.

(e) Option price. (1) Except as provided by section 422A(c)(1) and paragraph (e)(2) of this section, the option price of an incentive stock option must not be less than the fair market value of the stock subject to the option at the time the option is granted. For general rules relating to the option price, see paragraph (e) of §1.421-7. For rules relating to the determination of when an option is granted, see paragraph (c) of §1.421.7. The option price may be determined in any manner so long as the minimum price possible under the terms of the option cannot be less than the fair market value of the stock at the date of grant.

(2)(i) Under section 422A(c)(1), if a share of stock is transferred to an individual pursuant to the exercise of an option which would fail to qualify as an incentive stock option because there was a failure of an attempt, made in good faith, to meet the requirements of section 422A(b)(4) and paragraph (e)(1) of this section, the requirements of such section and paragraph shall be considered to have been met.

(ii) Whether there was a good-faith attempt to set the option price at not less than the fair market value of the stock subject to the option at the time the option was granted depends on the facts and circumstances surrounding the case. For example, in the case of a publicly held stock that was actively traded in an established market at the time the option was granted, determining the fair market value of such stock by any reasonable method using market quotations would establish that a good-faith attempt to meet the requirements of section 422A (b)(4) and this paragraph was made. On the other hand, in the case of a stock which is not publicly traded, if it is shown, for example, that the fair market value of the stock at the date of grant was based upon an average of the fair market values as of such date set forth in the opinions of completely independent and well-qualified experts, such a showing will establish that there was a good-faith attempt to meet the requirements of section 422A(b)(4) and this paragraph. However, amounts treated as unstated interest under section 483 and the regulations thereunder, and amounts paid as interest under a deferred payment arrangement are not includible as part of the "option price." See paragraph (e)(1) of §1.421-7. An attempt to set the option price at not less than fair market value will not be regarded as made in good faith where an adjustment of the option price to allow for the application of section 483 results in the option price being lower than the fair market value on which the option price was based.

(f) Prior outstanding options. (1)(i) Section 422A(b)(7) provides that an incentive stock option must, by its terms, not be exercisable while there is outstanding any incentive stock option which was granted, before the granting of the new incentive stock option, to the individual to purchase stock in the employer corporation, or in a corporation which, at the time of the granting of the new incentive stock option, is a parent or subsidiary corporation of the employer corporation, or a predecessor corporation of any of such corporations. Thus, in general, under section 422A(b)(7), an incentive stock option must not be exercisable until all incentive stock options which were previously granted to the individual by the grantor corporation, or by related or predecessor corporations, have been exercised in full or have expired solely by reason of the lapse of time. The limitation of section 422A(b)(7) applies irrespective of whether the transfer of stock pursuant to such prior outstanding incentive stock options can qualify for the special tax treatment of section 421. The exercisability of an incentive stock option is not affected by options which are not incentive stock options.

(ii) The restriction imposed by section 422A(b)(7) must be set forth in the terms of the option unless the individual in fact has no prior outstanding incentive stock options to purchase stock of the grantor corporation, a related corporation, or a predecessor corporation of any of such corporations at the time the new incentive stock option is granted. An option which incorporates by reference the provision of a plan containing the restrictions required by section 422A(b)(7) will be treated as an option which by its terms sets forth such restrictions. Except as provided by this paragraph (f)(2)(ii), an option which does not contain the restriction imposed by section 422A(b)(7), either expressly or incorporated by references, cannot be an incentive stock option, irrespective of whether such restriction is in fact complied with at the time the option is exercised and irrespective of whether the plan under which the option is granted contains the restriction required by section 422A(b)(7).

(iii) For purposes of section 422A(b)(7) and this paragraph (f), options granted or exercised on the same day are considered simultaneously granted or exercised.

(2) For purposes of section 422A(b)(7) and this paragraph (f), the term "predecessor corporation" means a corporation which was a party to a transaction described in section 425(a) (or which would be so described if a substitution or assumption under such section had been effected) with the grantor corporation, or a corporation which, at the time the new incentive stock option is granted, is a related corporation of the grantor corporation, or a predecessor corporation of any of such corporations.

(3) Except as is otherwise provided by this paragraph (f)(3), for purposes of section 422A(b)(7), an incentive stock option is treated as outstanding according to its original terms until such option is exercised in full or expires by reason of the lapse of time. Thus, for example, if an option outstanding according to its terms for 10 years is revised to shorten to 1 year the period during which it may be exercised, such option is treated as outstanding for 10 years from the original date of grant for purposes of section 422A(b)(7), notwithstanding the revision. If any portion of such an option is not exercised, such portion will be treated as outstanding until the expiration of the maximum period during which such portion, according to the terms of the option when granted, could have been exercised under any circumstances. An incentive stock option previously held by an individual and replaced in a transaction to which section 425(a) applies will not thereafter be treated as outstanding. However, if an incentive stock option is modified and under section 425(h) such modification is considered as the granting of a new option (even though for other purposes only one option is regarded as being in existence), the original incentive stock option continues for the purposes of section 422A(b)(7) to be outstanding, and may prevent an exercise of the new incentive stock option until the original option has, by its original terms, expired.

(4) The application of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). S Corporation is a subsidiary of P Corporation. In 1982 E was an employee of S Corporation and was granted an incentive stock option by S to buy S stock. In June of 1983 E left S and became an employee of X Corporation, where he was granted an incentive stock option to purchase X stock. X Corporation is neither a related nor predecessor corporation of P or S. On June 1, 1984, E leaves X to become an employee of P Corporation, and on such date E is granted an incentive stock option by P to purchase P stock. Both E's incentive stock option on S stock and his incentive stock option on X stock are outstanding on June 1, 1984. In order to meet the requirements of section 422A(b)(7), E's incentive stock option on P stock must, by its terms, not be exercisable until E's incentive stock option on S stock is exercised in full or expires solely by reason of the lapse of time. This requirement must be met even though at the time E's incentive stock option on P stock is granted, E's incentive stock option on S stock no longer qualifies for the special tax treatment of section 421.

Example (2). E is an employee of P Corporation. E holds an incentive stock option granted June 1, 1982, and an incentive stock option granted June 1, 1983. Both options were granted to him by P to purchase P stock. E has been granted no other incentive stock options by P, a related corporation, or a predecessor corporation of any of such corporations. On November 30, 1984, P cancels E's 1982 incentive stock option and in exchange therefor issues a new incentive stock option to E. Assume that each incentive stock option runs 10 years from grant. The 1982 incentive stock option, according to its terms when granted, would have expired solely by reason of the lapse of time at the close of business on May 31, 1992. Under section 422A(b)(7) and (c)(7), E's 1982 incentive stock option is treated as outstanding according to its original terms when granted, and E cannot exercise any of his incentive stock options until June 1, 1992 (the first day after the expiration of the original period for which E's 1982 incentive stock option was granted). On June 1, 1992, E's 1983 incentive stock option will be fully exercisable. E's 1984 incentive stock option will not be exercisable until after the full exercise or expiration of E's 1983 incentive stock option.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (2). On June 1, 1986, P Corporation sells all of its assets to M Corporation, and on such date E becomes an employee of M Corporation. Assume further that M Corporation substitutes new options to purchase M stock for those options held by E in a transaction to which section 425(a) applies. For purposes of section 422A(b)(7), each M Corporation option received by E in substitution for a P Corporation option will be treated as outstanding to the same extent and in the same manner as the P option which it replaces. Thus, none of the M options received by E in substitution for his P options may be exercisable before June 1, 1992, and the M option issued in substitution for E's 1984 P option may be exercisable only after the full exercise or expiration of the M option issued in substitution for E's 1983 P option. If, in 1987, E is granted another incentive stock option by M Corporation, such option may be exercisable only after the full exercise or expiration of the incentive stock options granted by M to E in 1986 in substitution for E's options to purchase P stock. The options to purchase P stock which were replaced by M in the transaction to which section 425(a) applied will not be treated as outstanding for any purposes under section 422A(b)(7).

Example (4). Assume the same facts as in example (3) except assume that M does not effect a substitution or assumption of E's P Corporation incentive stock options under section 425(a). Although P is neither a parent nor subsidiary of M, for purposes of section 422A(b)(7), P is a predecessor corporation of M Corporation. Accordingly, any incentive stock options granted to E by M (or its parent or subsidiary corporations, or a predecessor corporation of any of such corporations) must, by their terms, not be exercisable until the expiration of the option periods for all of E's incentive stock options granted to E by P Corporation.

Example (5). F is an employee of N Corporation. On January 1, 1982, N granted an incentive stock option to F to purchase 100 shares of N Corporation stock at a price of $100 per share. The option is exercisable in installments as follows: 20 shares on or after June 1, 1983; another 40 shares on or after June 1, 1984; and the last 40 shares on or after June 1, 1985. Under section 422A(b)(7), the entire option is treated as being outstanding as of the January 1, 1982 date of grant. Thus, under the facts given, any incentive stock options granted to F after January 1, 1982, may not be exercised until the full exercise or expiration of all installments of F's January 1, 1982 incentive stock option.

Example (6). F is an employee of N Corporation. On January 1, 1982, N grants F an incentive stock option to purchase 100 shares on N Corporation stock at a price of $100 a share at any time prior to January 1, 1992. The stock is then selling at $100 a share. On January 1, 1983, when the stock was selling at $95 a share, N modified the option to permit F to purchase 100 shares of N Corporation stock at a price of $95 a share and to exercise the option at any time prior to January 1, 1993. Under section 425(h) N's modification is treated as the granting of a new option to F. Although for other purposes F, after the modification, has one option to purchase 100 shares of N Corporation stock at a price of $95 a share at any time prior to January 1, 1993, for purposes of section 422A(b)(7), F is regarded as having two options. Thus, F may not exercise the modified option until January 1, 1992, because until that date the original option is regarded as outstanding. If the option period had not been extended, F would never have been able to exercise the modified option because of the limitation of section 422A(b)(7) and the existence, for the purposes of that section, of a prior outstanding option having the same expiration date as the new option.

(g) Restriction on transferability. An incentive stock option, by its terms, must not be transferable by the individual to whom it is granted otherwise than by will or the laws of descent and distribution, and, during the lifetime of such individual, must not be exercisable by any other person. For general rules relating to the restriction on transferability required by section 422A(b)(5), see paragraph (b)(2) of §1.421-7 and paragraph (c) of §1.421-8. For a limited exception to the requirement of section 422A(b)(5), see section 425(h)(3).

(h) Options granted to certain shareholders. (i)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (h)(2) of this section, an option is not an incentive stock option if, immediately before such option is granted, the optionee owns stock possessing more than 10 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock either of the employer corporation or of its parent or subsidiary corporation. In applying the limitations of section 422A(b)(6), the rules of section 425(d) (relating to attribution of stock ownership) shall apply in determining the stock ownership of the individual, and stock that the individual may purchase under outstanding options shall not be treated as stock owned by the individual.

(ii) The determination of the percentage of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock of the employer corporation (or of its parent or subsidiary corporations) that is owned by the individual is made with respect to each such corporation in the related group by comparing the voting power of the shares owned (or treated as owned) by the individual to the aggregate voting power of all shares actually issued and outstanding immediately before the grant of the option to such individual. The aggregate voting power of all shares actually issued and outstanding immediately before the grant of the option does not include the voting power of treasury shares or shares authorized for issue under outstanding options held by the individual or any other person.

(2) Paragraph (h)(1) of this section does not apply to an option if at the time such option is granted the option price is at least 110 percent of the fair market value at such time of the stock subject to the option and such option by its terms is not exercisable after the expiration of 5 years from the date such option is granted. The rules of paragraph (e)(2) of this section relating to option price shall not apply to the determination of the minimum option price for purposes of this paragraph (h)(2).

(3) The application of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). E, an employee of M Corporation, owns 15,000 shares of the common stock of M Corporation, the only class of M stock outstanding. M has 100,000 shares of its common stock outstanding. Since E owns stock comprising more than 10 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of M Corporation stock, M cannot grant an incentive stock option to E unless such option is granted at an option price of at least 110 percent of the fair market value of the stock subject to the option and such option would expire no later than 5 years from its date of grant. An option is granted to E which purports to be an incentive stock option but which fails to meet the above option-price and term requirements. Such option is not an incentive stock option and is, therefore, subject to section 83(a). If E's father and brother each owned 7,500 shares of M Corporation stock, and E owned no M stock in E's own name, the result in this case would be the same, since under section 425(d) a person is treated as owning stock held by parents and siblings.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) and assume further that M is a subsidiary corporation of P Corporation. Irrespective of whether E owns any P stock and irrespective of the number of P shares outstanding, an option granted to E by P Corporation which purports to be an inventive stock option, but which fails to meet the 110-percent-option-price and 5-year-term requirements, is not an incentive stock option. This results from E's ownership of more than 10 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock of a subsidiary of P Corporation (i.e., M Corporation). Thus, an individual who owns (or is treated as owning) stock in excess of the limitation of section 422A(b)(6), in any corporation in a group of corporations consisting of the employer corporation and its parent and subsidiary corporations, cannot receive an incentive stock option from any corporation in the group unless such option meets the 110-percent-option-price and 5-year-term requirements of section 422A(b)(6).

Example (3). F is an employee of R Corporation. R has only one class of stock, of which 100,000 shares are issued and outstanding. F owns no stock in R Corporation or in any parent or subsidiary of R Corporation for purposes of section 422A(b)(6). On January 1, 1983, R grants a 10-year incentive stock option to F to purchase 50,000 shares of R stock at $1 per share, the fair market value of R stock on the date of grant of the option. On April 1, 1983, F exercises half of the January option and receives 25,000 shares of R stock. On July 1, 1983, R grants a second 50,000 share option to F which purports to be an incentive stock option. All of the terms of the July option are identical to the terms of the January option, including an option price of $1 per share, the fair market value of R stock on the date of grant of the second option. Pursuant to section 422A(b)(6), the July option is not an incentive stock option because on the date such option was granted F owned 20 percent (25,000 shares owned by F divided by 125,000 shares of R stock issued and outstanding) of the total combined voting power of all classes of R Corporation stock. The unexercised portion of the January option, because it was an incentive stock option on the date it was granted, remains an incentive stock option regardless of changes in the employee's percentage of stock ownership after grant of the option.

Example (4). Assume the same facts as in example (3) except that the partial exercise of the January incentive stock option on April 1, 1983, was for only 10,000 shares. Under these circumstances, the July option is an incentive stock option because on the date such option was granted, F did not own more than 10 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of R Corporation stock.

(i) Permissible provisions. (1)(i) Pursuant to section 422A(c)(5)(A), an option which otherwise meets the requirements of section 422A(b) and this section will be an incentive stock option even if the employee has the right to exercise the option with previously acquired stock of the corporation which granted the option. For special rules relating to the transfer of statutory option stock as payment in connection with the exercise of an incentive stock option, see section 425(c) and the regulations thereunder.

(ii) All stock transferred pursuant to the exercise of an incentive stock option is subject to the holding period requirements of section 422A(a)(1) and paragraph (a) of §1.422A-1, and the disqualifying disposition rules of section 421(b) and paragraph (b) of §1.422A-1, regardless of whether such option is exercised with previously acquired stock of the corporation which granted the option. If an incentive stock option is exercised with previously acquired stock of the corporation which granted the option, and such exercise results in the basis allocation described in paragraph (i)(1)(iii) of this section, a disqualifying disposition of stock transferred pursuant to such exercise will be a disqualifying disposition of the stock with the lowest basis.

(iii) If the exercise of an incentive stock option with previously acquired stock of the corporation which granted the option is comprised in part of an exchange to which section 1036 (and so much of section 1031 as relates to section 1036) applies, then—

(A) The employee's basis in the incentive stock option stock transferred pursuant to the section 1036 exchange shall be the same as the employee's basis in the stock exchanged increased, if applicable, by any amount included in gross income as compensation pursuant to either sections 421 through 425 or section 83. Except for purposes of section 422A(a)(1) and paragraph (a) of §1.422A-1, the holding period of the stock shall be determined pursuant to section 1223. For purposes of section 421(b), paragraph (b) of §1.422A-1, and section 83 and the regulations thereunder, the amount paid for the stock shall be the fair market value of such stock on the date of the exchange.

(B) The employee's basis in the incentive stock option stock not transferred pursuant to the section 1036 exchange shall be zero. For all purposes, the holding period of the stock shall begin as of the date such stock is transferred. For purposes of section 421(b), paragraph (b) of §1.422A-1, and section 83 and the regulations thereunder, the amount paid for the stock shall be zero.

(2) Pursuant to section 422A(c)(5)(B), an option which otherwise meets the requirements of section 422A(b) and this section will be an incentive stock option even if the employee has the right to receive additional compensation, whether in cash or other property, at the time the option is exercised, provided such additional compensation is includible in income under the provisions of sections 61 and 83. The additional compensation may be determined in any manner including by reference to the fair market value of the stock at the time of exercise, or by reference to the option price.

(3)(i) Pursuant to section 422A(c)(5)(C), an option which otherwise meets the requirements of section 422A(b) and this section will be an incentive stock option even if the option is subject to a condition, or grants a right, not inconsistent with the requirements of section 422A(b) and this section.

(ii) An option that includes an alternative right is not an incentive stock option is the requirements of section 422A(b) and this section may be avoided by exercise of the alternative right. For example, an alternative right extending the option term beyond ten years, setting a price below fair market value, permitting transferability, or allowing nonsequential exercise, will prevent an option from qualifying as an incentive stock option. If either of two options can be exercised, but not both, each such option is a disqualifying alternative right with respect to the other even though one or both options would individually satisfy the requirements of section 422A(b) and this section.

(iii) An alternative right to receive a taxable payment of cash and/or other property in exchange for the cancellation or surrender of the option does not disqualify the option as an incentive stock option if the right is exercisable, the right is transferable only when the then fair market value of the stock exceeds the exercise price of the option and the option is otherwise exercisable only when the option is otherwise transferable, and the exercise of the right has the same economic and tax consequences as the exercise of the option followed by an immediate sale of the stock. For this purpose, the exercise of the alternative right does not have the same economic and tax consequences if the payment exceeds the difference between the then fair market value of the stock and the exercise price of the option. If the above conditions have been met, the exercise of the alternative right will be considered to be the exercise of the option for purposes of the sequencing provisions of section 422A(b)(7).

(iv) Section 425(h)(1) shall not apply to the amendment of an alternative right described in paragraph (i)(3)(iii) of this section in order to conform the terms of the alternative right to the technical requirements of such paragraph. This paragraph (iv) shall apply only to options granted after August 13, 1981, and before January 21, 1982, that are amended before [INSERT DATE 60 DAYS AFTER THIS DOCUMENT IS PUBLISHED IN THE FEDERAL REGISTER AS FINAL REGULATIONS].

(4) The application of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On June 1, 1984, X Corporation grants an incentive stock option to A, an employee of X Corporation, entitling A to purchase 100 shares of X Corporation common stock at $10 per share. The option provides that A may exercise the option with previously acquired X Corporation common stock. X Corporation has only one class of common stock outstanding. The stock transferable to A pursuant to the exercise of the incentive stock option is transferable and not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture. On June 1, 1985, when the fair market value of X Corporation stock is $25 per share, A exercises the option and the 100 shares are transferred to A on that date. To exercise the option, A transferred to X Corporation 40 shares of X Corporation common stock that A had purchased on the open market on June 1, 1982, for $5 per share. After exercising the option, A owns 100 shares of incentive stock option stock. Pursuant to section 1036 (and so much of section 1031 as relates to section 1036), 40 shares have a $200 carryover basis and a three-year holding period, and 60 shares have a zero basis and a holding period beginning June 1, 1985.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) and assume further that A sells 75 shares of the incentive stock option stock on September 1, 1985, for $30 per share. On that date, A has made a disqualifying disposition of the 75 shares of stock. Pursuant to paragraph (i)(l)(ii) of ths section, A has sold all 60 of the non-section-1036 shares and 15 of the 40 section-1036 shares. Therefore, pursuant to paragraph (i)(l)(iii) of this section and section 83(a), the amount of compensation attributable to A's exercise of the option and subsequent disqualifying disposition of 75 shares is $1500 (the difference between the fair market value of the stock on the date of exercise, $1875 (75 shares at $25 per share), and the amount paid for the stock, $375 (60 shares at $0 per share plus 15 shares at $25 per share)). In addition, A must recognize a long-term capital gain of $375 ($450, the amount realized from the sale of 15 shares, less A's basis of $75), and a short-term capital gain of $300 ($1800, the amount realized from the sale of 60 shares, less A's basis of $1500 resulting from the inclusion of that amount in income as compensation). Accordingly, A must include in gross income for the taxable year in which the sale occurs $1500 as compensation, $375 as long-term capital gain, and $300 as short-term capital gain. For its taxable year in which the disqualifying disposition occurs, X Corporation is allowed a deduction of $1500 for compensation paid to A provided the withholding requirements of §1.83-6 are met.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (2), except that instead of selling the 75 shares of incentive stock option stock on September 1, 1985, A uses those shares to exercise a second incentive stock option. The second option was granted to A by X Corporation on January 1, 1985, entitling A to purchase 100 shares of X Corporation common stock at $22.50 per share. As in example (2), A has made a disqualifying disposition of the 75 shares of stock. Pursuant to paragraph (i)(l)(ii) of this section, A has disposed of all 60 of the non-section-1036 shares and 15 of the 40 section-1036 shares. Therefore, pursuant to paragraph (i)(l)(iii) of this section and section 83(a), the amount of compensation attributable to A's exercise of the first option and subsequent disqualifying disposition of 75 shares is $1500 (the difference between the fair market value of the stock on the date of exercise, $1875 (75 shares at $25 per share), and the amount paid for the stock, $375 (60 shares at $0 per share plus 15 shares at $25 per share)). Unlike example (2), A does not recognize any capital gain as a result of exercising the second option because, for all purposes other than the determination of whether the exercise is a disposition pursuant to section 425(c), such exercise is an exchange to which section 1036 applies. Accordingly, A must include in gross income for the taxable year in which the disqualifying disposition occurs $1500 as compensation. For its taxable year in which the disqualifying disposition occurs, X Corporation is allowed a deduction of $1500 for compensation paid to A provided the withholding requirements of §1.83-6 are met. After exercising the second option, A owns a total of 125 shares of incentive stock option stock. Pursuant to section 1036 (and so much of section 1031 as relates to section 1036), the 100 "new" shares of incentive stock option stock have the following bases and holding periods: 15 shares have a $75 carryover basis and a three-year-and-three-month holding period, 60 shares have a $1500 basis resulting from the inclusion of that amount in income as compensation and a three-month holding period, and 25 shares have a zero basis and a holding period beginning September 1, 1985.

Example (4). Assume the same facts as in example (2), except that instead of selling the 75 shares of incentive stock option stock on September 1, 1985, A uses those shares to exercise a non-statutory stock option. The non-statutory stock option was granted to A by X Corporation on January 1, 1985, entitling A to purchase 100 shares of X Corporation common stock at $22.50 per share. Unlike example (3), A has not made a disqualifying disposition of the 75 shares of stock. After exercising the non-statutory stock option, A owns a total of 100 shares of incentive stock option stock and 25 shares of non-statutory stock option stock. Pursuant to section 1036 (and so much of section 1031 as relates to section 1036), the 75 "new" shares of incentive stock option stock have the same basis and holding period as the 75 "old" shares used to exercise the non-statutory stock option. The additional 25 shares of stock received upon exercise of the non-statutory stock option are compensation for services pursuant to section 83(a). Accordingly, A must include in gross income for the taxable year in which the transfer of such shares occurs $750 (25 shares at $30 per share) as compensation. A's basis in such shares is the same as the amount included in gross income. For its taxable year in which the transfer occurs, X Corporation is allowed a deduction of $750 for compensation paid to A provided the withholding requirements of §1.83-6 are met.

Example (5). Assume the same facts in example (1), except that the stock transferred pursuant to the exercise of the incentive stock option is subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture and not transferable for a period of six months after such transfer. Assume further that the shares that A uses to exercise the incentive stock option are similarly restricted. Such shares were transferred to A on January 1, 1985, pursuant to the exercise of a non-statutory stock option granted to A on January 1, 1984. A paid $5 per share for the stock when its fair market value was $22.50 per share. A did not file a section 83(b) election to include the $700 spread (the difference between the option price and the fair market value of the stock on date of exercise of the option) in gross income as compensation. After exercising the incentive stock option with the 40 shares of restricted stock, A owns 100 shares of restricted incentive stock option stock. Section 1036 (and so much of section 1031 as relates to section 1036) applies to the 40 shares exchanged in exercise of the incentive stock option. However, pursuant to section 83(g), the stock received in such exchange, because it is incentive stock option stock, is not subject to restrictions and conditions substantially similar to those to which the stock was given in such exchange was subject. For purposes of section 83(a) and §1.83-1(b)(1), therefore, A has disposed of the 40 shares of restricted stock on June 1, 1985, and must include in gross income as compensation $800 (the difference between the amount realized upon such disposition, $1000, and the amount paid for the stock, $200). Accordingly, 40 shares of the incentive stock option stock have a $1000 basis (the $200 original basis plus the $800 included in income as compensation) and 60 shares of the incentive stock option stock have a zero basis. For its taxable year in which the disposition of the restricted stock occurs, X Corporation is allowed a deduction of $800 for compensation paid to A provided the withholding requirements of §1.83-6 are met.

Par. 3. Section 1.422A-3 is added after §1.422A-2 to read as follows:

§1.422A-3 Incentive stock option transitional rules.

(a) In general. (1) This section provides special rules pursuant to section 251(c) of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (95 Stat. 172 (Pub. L. 97-34, 1981-2 C.B. 256, 301) for converting stock options into incentive stock options. These special rules apply to stock options granted after December 31, 1975, and either exercised on or after January 1, 1981, or outstanding on such date, if such stock options—

(i) Were granted prior to January 1, 1981;

(ii) Were exercised before January 21, 1982 and did not meet the requirements of section 422(b) and §1.422A-2 at the time of exercise;

(iii) Did not meet the requirements of section 422A(b) and §1.422A-2 when granted and were outstanding on August 13, 1981; or

(iv) Were granted after December 31, 1980, and before August 14, 1981, and otherwise met the requirements of section 422A(b) and §1.422A-2 when granted.

(2) Stock options granted before January 1, 1981, may be converted into incentive stock options, but only if the corporation that granted such options makes an election under paragraph (b) of this section. The aggregate fair market value of stock the options for which may be converted into incentive stock options by such an election is subject to an annual and a cumulative restriction. Such aggregate fair market value (determined as of the time the options were granted) may be not exceed $50,000 per employee for options granted in any calendar year and $200,000 per employee for all options granted in the 5-year period ending December 31, 1980.

(3) Stock options that were exercised before January 21, 1982, and that did not meet certain requirements of section 422A(b) and §1.422A-2 at the time of exercise may be converted into incentive stock options if the requirements of paragraph (c)(3) of this section are met.

(4) Stock options that did not meet the requirements of section 422A(b) and §1.422-2 when granted and that were outstanding on August 13, 1981, may be converted into incentive stock options in accordance with paragraph (d) of this section. Section 425(h)(l) (relating to the modification of statutory stock options) shall not apply to any change in the terms of an option (or the terms of the plan under which the option was granted) or shareholder approval of such change required to convert such option into an incentive stock option if such change or shareholder approval occurs on or before August 13, 1982.

(5) Stock options that were granted after December 31, 1980, and before August 14, 1981, are incentive stock options if they otherwise met the requirements of section 442A(b) and §1.422A-2 when granted. No election is necessary to convert such options into incentive stock options.

(b) Election procedure and requirements. (1) A corporation may make only one election to convert stock options granted before 1981 into incentive stock options and such election must include all options granted by the corporation before 1981 that are to be converted into incentive stock options. Thus, a corporation that makes an election with respect to certain options granted before 1981 may not make any subsequent election with respect to other options granted before 1981. An election shall be made by attaching an election statement to the granting corporation's income tax return either for the first taxable year during which an incentive stock option (including an option treated as an incentive stock option by reason of the election or the other provisions of this section) is exercised, or for any prior taxable year. An election shall be made no later than the due date (taking extensions into account) of the income tax return. If such due date occurs before August 14, 1982, the granting corporation will be permitted to make the election at any time prior to August 14, 1982, on an election statement attached to an amended return. In any event, no election will be permitted after the due date (taking extensions into account) of the income tax return for the taxable year including December 31, 1982. The election statement must—

(i) Contain the name, address, and taxpayer identification number of the corporation;

(ii) Identify the election as an election under section 251(c)(1)(B) of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981; and

(iii) Specify, by employee, the options to which the election applies and state, for each such option, the date of original grant (and, if applicable, date of most recent modification) and total exercise price (i.e., the total number of shares subject to the option multiplied by the price per share).

All options to which the election applies must meet the section 422A qualification requirements (other than the requirement of securing stockholder approval) at the time the election statement is filed.

(2) In its election under this paragraph, a corporation may generally select any eligible option (or portion of such option). The selection is, however, subject to the $50,000 annual and $200,000 cumulative limits applicable to each employee, and also subject to any existing plan requirements relating to who must be benefited under such plan as among different classes of employees. Eligible options (or portions of such options) may be selected on an option-by-option basis and/or an employee-by-employee basis. If only a portion of an option is selected and such portion is not exercised prior to January 21, 1982, the option must be amended prior to the exercise of such portion so as to clearly identify it as an incentive stock option. Whenever such a dual option is exercised, separate stock certificates must be issued (or reissued). See §1.422A-3(c)(3)(iv) for the deadlines for amending options.

(c) Eligibility issues: pre-enactment modifications, dollar limitations. (1) An option is not eligible for incentive stock option conversion unless it was originally granted after December 31, 1975. A modification, extension, or renewal on or after January 1, 1976, of an option originally granted prior to that date, will not make such option eligible for conversion into an incentive stock option, regardless of whether the option as so modified, extended, or renewed would be treated as newly granted within the meaning of section 425(h).

(2) An amendment to an otherwise eligible option (or plan) prior to August 13, 1981, will be subject to the rules of section 425(h). If, pursuant to section 425(h), the amendment is a modification, extension, or renewal of the option, such amendment shall be considered as the grant of a new option. Such an option is not eligible for conversion into an incentive stock option unless the option (and plan) comply with the section 422A qualification requirements. Since the option will be considered to have been granted on the date it was amended, the option price cannot be less than the fair market value of the stock on that date. If the option price is less than the fair market value of the stock on the date the option was amended, the corporation may qualify the option by adjusting the option price, so long as such adjustment occurs prior to the earliest of the exercise of the option, the date of the election under paragraph (b) of this section (if applicable), or August 14, 1982. If the corporation wishes to retain the original grant price (and grant date) of the option, the corporation may do so by rescinding the amendment, so long as such rescission occurs prior to the earliest of the exercise of the option, the date of the election under paragraph (b) of this section (if applicable), or August 14, 1982. If only a portion of an option is to become an incentive stock option, the adjustment of the option price or the rescission of the amendment need apply only to that portion. If an amendment is rescinded as to only a portion of an option so as to restore the original date of grant for that portion, the balance of the option is not eligible for conversion into an incentive stock option. For example, in the case of a $100,000 option granted in 1978 and amended in 1980, the corporation could not rescind the modification as to only half of the option, and then elect to convert into incentive stock options both the $50,000 portion of the option treated as granted in 1978 and the $50,000 portion of the option treated as granted in 1980.

(3)(i) Except as provided in this paragraph (c)(3), an option is eligible for incentive stock option conversion only if, at the time of exercise, such option (and its plan) conform to all of the section 422A qualification requirements and the transitional rule limitations. It is not possible to amend an exercised option retroactively to correct nonconforming or missing terms, or to rescind an improper exercise.

(ii) An option exercised prior to January 21, 1982, may be converted into an incentive stock option even if the option does not contain the sequential exercise restriction required by section 422A(b)(7). Incentive stock option conversion will be available, however, only if the employee in fact had no prior outstanding incentive stock options at the time the option in question was exercised. An option exercised on or after January 21, 1982, without containing the sequential exercise restriction may not be converted into an incentive stock option unless the employee in fact had no prior outstanding incentive stock options at the time the option in question was granted. In order to identify prior outstanding incentive stock options it will be necessary to take into account all options elected or amended to become incentive stock options and all options granted as incentive stock options.

(iii) An option granted after 1980 and exercised prior to January 21, 1982, may be converted into an incentive stock option even if the plan does not contain at the time of exercise the $100,000 annual plus carryover limit required by section 422A(b)(8). Incentive stock option conversion will be available, however, only for exercised amounts that do not exceed such limit. Where the limit has been exceeded, separate stock certificates must be issued (or reissued) no later than March 15, 1982. An option exercised on or after January 21, 1982, and before the plan has been amended to include the $100,000 annual plus carryover limit, may not be converted into an incentive stock option. Incentive stock option conversion is not available for such an option regardless of whether the limit is exceeded. An option exercised on or after January 21, 1982, and after the plan has been amended to include the $100,000 annual plus carryover limit, may not be converted into an incentive stock option where such limit has been exceeded. An option in excess of the limit must be amended, before it is exercised, so as clearly to identify that portion of the option intended to become an incentive stock option. Upon exercise of the option, separate stock certificates must be issued. An amended option that was required by its original terms to be exercised in full, must still be required to be exercised in full after it is amended.

(iv) An option granted before 1981 and exercised prior to January 21, 1982, may be converted into an incentive stock option even if the $50,000 annual limit or the $200,000 cumulative limit of paragraph (a)(2) of this section was exceeded. Incentive stock option conversion will be available, however, only for exercised amounts that do not exceed such limits. If either limit has been exceeded, separate stock certificates must be issued (or re-issued) no later than March 15, 1982. An option exercised on or after January 21, 1982, where either the $50,000 annual limit or the $200,000 cumulative limit was exceeded, may not be converted into an incentive stock option. An option in excess of such limits must be amended, before it is exercised, so as clearly to identify that portion of the option intended to become an incentive stock option. Upon exercise of the option, separate stock certificates must be issued. An amended option that was required by its original terms to be exercised in full, must still be required to be exercised in full after it is amended.

(4) The $50,000 annual and the $200,000 cumulative limits apply only to options granted prior to 1981 that are converted into incentive stock options by reason of an election under paragraph (b) of this section. Additionally, the limits relate only to the year of grant of an option, not to the year in which an option vests (as in the case of an installment option) or the year of exercise. Unlike the $100,000 annual limit for options granted after 1980, the $50,000 annual limit does not incorporate an unused limit carryover from prior years. Both the $50,000 and the $200,000 limits apply to the fair market value of the stock at the time the options are granted, not to the option price of the options granted. Thus, in the case of an employee who is a 10 percent stockholder, an election would be permitted with respect to an option to purchase $50,000 worth of stock at an option price of $55,000. The requirement that options for which the election is made not exceed the $50,000 annual limit and the $200,000 cumulative limit will be deemed to have been satisfied if, at the time of grant, there was a good-faith attempt to value the stock accurately even if such valuation should subsequently prove to be in error.

(d) Required option and plan amendments. (1) The transitional rule waives the applicability of section 425(h) with respect to amendments of an option or a plan that are necessary to meet the minimum qualification requirements of section 422A. An amendment to add, modify, or delete a permissible term that is not necessary to meet such minimum qualification requirements does not fall within the waiver of section 425(h).

(2) The transitional rule waives the applicability of section 425(h) with respect to option and plan amendments only with respect to options outstanding on August 13, 1981. An option granted after August 13, 1981, and amended prior to exercise so as to qualify it as an incentive stock option, does not fall within the waiver of section 425(h). Such an option, therefore, will be treated as having been granted on the date it was amended. Consequently, the option price cannot be less than the fair market value of the stock as of the date of amendment. The option as originally granted, since it was not an incentive stock option at that time, will not be treated as still outstanding for purposes of the sequential exercise restriction of section 422A(b)(7).

(3) Amendments to an option plan, so as to meet the qualification requirements of section 422A, will apply to previously granted and outstanding options only if such amendments, by their terms, are clearly intended to have retroactive effect. Even if such amendments are intended to have retroactive effect, they need not apply to all previously granted options.

(4) The grant of an incentive stock option in exchange for the cancellation of an outstanding nonincentive stock option will not violate either the qualification requirements of section 422A or the transitional rules, provided the outstanding option is cancelled prior to the grant of the incentive stock option. The cancelled option will not be treated as still outstanding for purposes of the sequential exercise restriction of section 422A(b)(7).

(e) Stockholder approval issues. (1) If an option plan received stockholder approval within 12 months before or after the date such plan was originally adopted and it is amended so as to qualify it as an incentive stock option plan, new stockholder approval will be required only if the original plan either did not specify the aggregate number of shares which may be issued under the plan or did not identify the employees or class of employees eligible to receive options under the plan, or if either of such terms is modified. The amendment of an option plan to add the $100,000 annual plus carryover limit, applicable to incentive stock options granted after 1980, will not require new stockholder approval.

(2) If a plan never received stockholder approval, or did not receive such approval within 12 months before or after such plan was adopted, the plan will qualify as an incentive stock option plan if stockholder approval is obtained prior to August 14, 1982, but only if an option granted pursuant to the plan was outstanding on August 13, 1981, and such option is to become an incentive stock option. If no option granted pursuant to the plan was outstanding on August 13, 1981, or no option outstanding on August 13, 1981, is to become an incentive stock option, the plan must be re-adopted by the granting corporation and, if necessary, amended to meet the qualification requirements of section 422A. Stockholder approval must be obtained with 12 months before or after the plan is re-adopted. Consequently, any option granted after August 13, 1981, and before the date the plan is re-adopted, that is to become an incentive stock option will be treated as having been granted on the date of re-adoption of the plan. The option price of such an option, therefore, cannot be less than the fair market value of the stock as of the date of re-adoption of the plan. The option as originally granted, since it was not an incentive stock option at that time, will not be treated as still outstanding for purposes of the sequential exercise restriction of section 422A(b)(7).

(3) If an option was granted pursuant to no plan at all and such option was outstanding on August 13, 1981, a plan may be adopted and stockholder approval obtained in order to qualify the option as an incentive stock option. The adoption of an incentive stock option plan and the obtaining of stockholder approval will be treated as amendments permitted under the transitional rules if they occur prior to August 14, 1982.

(4) Options granted under a plan that must be approved by stockholders to qualify as an incentive stock option plan and outstanding on August 13, 1981, are eligible to become incentive stock options even if they are exercised prior to the obtaining of stockholder approval provided stockholder approval is obtained before August 14, 1982.

(5) If, pursuant to paragraph (e) of this section, new stockholder approval is required in order to qualify a plan as an incentive stock option plan, see paragraph (b)(2) of §1.422A-2 for the prescribed method and degree of stockholder approval.

(f) Sequential exercise issues. (1) The original grant dates (or later grant dates for options with pre-enactment modifications) of options that are converted into incentive stock options will determine the sequencing order for purposes of the sequential exercise restriction of section 422A(b)(7). For example, in the case of options granted in 1977, 1978, and 1979, assume that in 1980 the 1978 option was amended to add a term beneficial to the employee. Such an amendment would be a modification under the rules of section 425(h) and would cause the option to be treated as newly granted in 1980. If the 1977, 1978 (as modified), and 1979 options are converted into incentive stock options, the sequencing order would be as follows: the 1977 option must be exercised first, the 1979 option second, and the 1978 option (as modified) third.

(2) Options granted prior to 1981 that are converted into incentive stock options must be exercised prior to the exercise of any incentive stock options granted after 1980. For example, assume that an option granted and exercised during January of 1982 automatically qualifies, by its terms, as an incentive stock option. During February of 1982, the employer elected to convert an option granted to the employee during 1978 into an incentive stock option. For purposes of this section only, such an election will retroactively disqualify the 1982 option as an incentive stock option. If the 1982 option is to qualify as an incentive stock option, it cannot be exercised prior to the exercise or expiration of all incentive stock options previously granted and outstanding on the date the 1982 option was granted. When the 1982 option was granted during January of 1982, the 1978 option was already granted and outstanding for purposes of the sequential exercise restriction of section 422A(b)(7).

(3) The existence (or exercise) of stock options that are not converted into incentive stock options will not prevent the exercise of an incentive stock option because of the sequential exercise restriction of section 422A(b)(7). However, if an option that is converted into an incentive stock option contains other sequencing restrictions, the option will continue to be burdened by such restrictions. The deletion of such sequencing restrictions is not an amendment necessary in order to qualify the option as an incentive stock option. Consequently, the rules of section 425(h) would apply to such an amendment.

Par. 4. Section 1.421-7 is amended by revising paragraphs (b)(1), (b)(2), (d), (e)(1), (e)(2), and (h)(2) to read as follows:

§1.421-7 Meaning and use of certain terms.

* * * * *

(b) Statutory options. (1) The term "statutory option", used for purposes of convenience hereinafter in this section and in §§1.421-8 through 1.425-1, means a qualified stock option, as defined by section 422(b) and §1.422-2; an incentive stock option, as defined by section 422A(b) and §1.422A-2; an option granted under an employee stock purchase plan, as defined by section 423(b) and §1.423-2; and a restricted stock option, as defined in section 424(b) and §1.424-2.

(2) An option may qualify as a statutory option only if the option is not transferable (other than by will or by the laws of descent and distribution) by the individual to whom it is granted, and is exercisable, during the lifetime of such individual, only by him. See sections 422(b)(6), 422A(b)(5), 423(b)(9), and 424(b)(2). Accordingly, an option which is transferable by the individual to whom it is granted during his lifetime, or is exercisable during such individual's lifetime by another person, is not a statutory option. However, in case the option or the plan under which the option was granted contains a provision permitting the individual to whom the option was granted to designate the person who may exercise the option after his death, either such provision, nor a designation pursuant to such provision, disqualifies the option as a statutory option.

* * * * *

(d) Stock and voting stock. For purposes of sections 421 through 425, the term "stock" means capital stock of any class, including voting or nonvoting common or preferred stock. Except as otherwise provided, the term includes both treasury stock and stock of original issue. Special classes of stock authorized to be issued to and held by employees are within the scope of the term "stock" as used in such sections, provided such stock otherwise possesses the rights and characteristics of capital stock. For purposes of determining what constitutes voting stock in ascertaining whether a plan has been approved by stockholders or whether the limitations pertaining to voting power contained in sections 422(b)(7), 422A(b)(6), 423(b)(3) and 424(b)(3) and the regulations thereunder have been met, stock which does not have voting rights until the happening of an event, such as the default in the payment of dividends on preferred stock, is not voting stock until the happening of the specified event. Moreover, stock which does not possess a general voting power, and may vote only on particular questions, is not voting stock. However, if such stock is entitled to vote on whether a stock option plan is to be adopted, it is voting stock for the purpose of ascertaining whether the plan has been approved by the shareholders.

(e) Option price. (1) For purposes of sections 421 through 425, the term "option price" or "price paid under the option" means the consideration if money or other property which, pursuant to the terms of the option, is the price at which the stock subject to the option is purchases. The term "option price" does not include amounts paid as interest under a deferred payment arrangement or treated as unstated interest under section 483 and the regulations thereunder. Thus, for example, section 483 is applicable in determining whether the pricing requirements of section 422(b)(4), 422A(b)(4) and (c)(8), 423(b)(6), 424(b)(1), or 424(c) are met and is applicable in determining the basis of any stock acquired pursuant to the exercise of a statutory option. However, with respect to statutory options granted prior to January 1, 1965, the determination of whether the applicable pricing requirements are met shall be made without regard to section 483, but section 483 shall be taken into consideration in determining basis for purposes of determining gain or loss.

(2) In the case of a statutory option, any reasonable valuation method may be used for the purpose of determining whether at the time the option is granted the option price satisfies the pricing requirements of section 442(b)(4) (relating to qualified stock options), section 422A(b)(4) and (c)(8) (relating to incentive stock options), section 423(b)(6) (relating to employee stock purchase plans), or section 424(b)(1) (relating to restricted stock options), whichever is applicable, with respect to the stock subject to the option. Such methods include the valuation methods described in §20.2031-2 of this chapter (Estate Tax Regulations).

(h) Employment relationships.

(2) In order to qualify for the special tax treatment of section 421, in addition to meeting the requirements of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, an individual exercising a qualified stock option, an incentive stock option, or an option granted under an employee stock purchase plan must, at all times during the period beginning with the date of the granting of such option and ending at the time of such exercise or on the day 3 months before the date of such exercise, be an employee of either the corporation granting such option, a related corporation of such corporation, or a corporation or a related corporation of such corporation issuing or assuming a stock option in a transaction to which section 425(a) applies. For this purpose, the employment relationship in respect of an option granted in accordance with the requirements of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph will be treated as continuing intact while the individual is on military, sick leave or other bona fide leave of absence (such as temporary employment by the Government) if the period of such leave does not exceed 90 days, or if longer, so long as the individual's right to reemployment with the corporation granting the option (or a related corporation of such corporation, or a corporation, or a related corporation of such corporation issuing or assuming a stock option in a transaction to which section 425(a) applies) is guaranteed either by statute or by contract. Where the period of leave exceeds 90 days and where the individual's right to reemployment is not guaranteed either by statute or by contract, the employment relationship will be deemed to have terminated on the 91st day of such leave.

* * * * *

Par. 5. Section 1.421-8 is amended by revising paragraphs (a)(1), (b)(1), and (b)(2), adding new paragraph (b)(4), and revising paragraphs (c)(1) and (d) to read as follows:

§1.421-8 General rules.

(a) Effect of qualifying transfer. (1) If a share of stock is transferred to an individual pursuant to his exercise of a statutory option, and if the requirements of section 422(a) (relating to qualified stock options), section 422A(a) (relating to incentive stock options) section 423(a) (relating to employee stock purchase plans), or section 424(a) (relating to restricted stock option), whichever is applicable, are met, then—

(i) Except as provided in section 422(c)(1) (relating to exercise of option when price is less than value of stock), and paragraph (e)(2) of §1.422-2, no income shall result at the time of the transfer of such share to the individual upon his exercise of the option with respect to such share;

(ii) No deduction under section 162 or the regulations thereunder (relating to trade or business expenses) shall be allowable at any time to the employer corporation, a related corporation of such corporation, or a corporation issuing or assuming a stock option in a transaction to which section 425(a) and paragraph (a) of §1.425-1 (relating to corporate reorganizations, liquidations, etc.) applies, with respect to the share so transferred; and

(iii) No amount other than the price paid under the option shall be considered as received by any of such corporations for the share so transferred.

* * * * *

(b) Effect of disqualifying disposition. (1) The disposition of a share of stock, acquired by the exercise of a statutory option before the expiration of the applicable holding period as determined under section 422(a)(1), 422A(a)(1), 423(a)(1), or 424(a)(1), makes section 421 inapplicable to the transfer of such share. The income attributable to such transfer shall be treated by the individual as income received in the taxable year in which such disposition occurs. Similarly, a deduction under section 162 attributable to the transfer of the share of stock pursuant to the exercise of the option shall be allowable for the taxable year in which such disposition occurs to the employer corporation, its parent or subsidiary corporation or a corporation issuing or assuming a stock option in a transaction to which section 425(a) applies. In such cases, no amount shall be treated as income, and no amount shall be allowed as a deduction, for any taxable year other than the taxable year in which the disposition occurs. If the stock was transferred pursuant to the exercise of the option in a taxable year other than the taxable year of the disposition, the amount of the deduction shall be determined as if the employee had been paid compensation at the time provided in paragraph (d) of §1.421-6.

(2) Section 421 is not made inapplicable by a transfer before the expiration of the applicable holding period as determined under section 422(a)(1), 422A(a)(1), 423(a)(1), or 424(a)(1), if such transfer is not a disposition of the stock as defined in section 425(c) and paragraph (c) of §1.425-1, for example, a transfer from the decendent to his estate or a transfer by bequest or inheritance. Similarly, a disposition by the executor, administrator, heir, or legatee is not a disposition by the decedent. In case a statutory option is exercised by the estate of the individual to whom the option was granted, or by a person who acquired the option by bequest or inheritance or by reason of the death of such individual, see paragraph (c) of this section.

(4) For special rules relating to a disqualifying disposition of a share of stock acquired by exercise of an incentive stock option, see paragraph (b) of §1.422A-1.

(c) Exercise by estate. (1) If a statutory option is exercised by the estate of the individual to whom the option was granted, or by any person who acquired such option by bequest or inheritance or by reason of the death of such individual, section 421(a) applies to such exercise in the same manner as if such option had been exercised by such deceased individual. Consequently, except as provided by section 422(c)(1) and paragraph (e)(2) of §1.422-2, neither the estate nor such person is required to include any amount in gross income as a result of a transfer of stock pursuant to such exercise of the option. Nor does section 421(a) become inapplicable if such executor, administrator, or person disposes of the stock so acquired before the expiration of the applicable holding period as determined under section 422 (a)(1), 422A(a)(1), 423(a)(1), or 424(a)(1). This special rule does not affect the applicability of section 1222, relating to what constitutes a short-term and long-term capital gain or loss. The executor, administrator, or such person need not exercise the option within three months after the death of the individual to whom the option was granted for section 421(a) to be applicable. However, the exercise of the option must be pursuant to the terms of the option, and any change in the terms of the option is subject to the rules of paragraph (e) of §1.425-1, relating to the modification, extension, or renewal of the option. Section 421(a) is applicable even though such executor, administrator, or person is not employed by the corporation granting the option, or a related oorporation, either when the option is exercised or at any time. However, section 421(a) is not applicable to an exercise of the option by the estate or by such person, unless the individual to whom the option was granted met the employment requirements of section 422(a)(2), 422A (a)(2), 423(a)(2), or 424(a)(2), whichever is applicable, either at the time of his death or within three months before such time. If the option is exercised by a person other than the executor or administrator, or other than a person who acquired the option by bequest or inheritance or by reason of the death of such deceased individual, section 421(a) is not applicable to the exercise. For example, if the option is sold by the estate, section 421(a) does not apply to an exercise of the option by such buyer; but if the option is distributed by the administrator to an heir as part of the estate, section 421(a) is applicable to an exercise of the option by such heir.

* * * * *

(d) Exercise by deceased employee during lifetime. If a statutory option is exercised by an individual to whom the option was granted and the individual dies before the expiration of the applicable holding period as determined under section 422(a)(1), 422A(a)(1), 423(a)(1), or 424(a)(1), section 421(a) does not become inapplicable if the executor or administrator of the estate of such individual, or any person who acquired such stock by bequest or inheritance or by reason of the death of such individual, disposes of such stock before the expiration of such applicable holding period. This rule does not affect the applicability of section 1222, relating to what constitutes a short-term and long-term capital gain or loss.

* * * * *

Par. 6. Section 1.425-1 is amended by revising paragraph (a)(6), redesignating paragraph (c)(3) as paragraph (c)(4) and revising paragraph (c)(4), adding new paragraph (c)(3), and revising paragraphs (d), (e)(1), (e)(5) and (e)(6) to read as follows:

§1.425-1 Definitions and special rules applicable to statutory options.

(a) Corporate reorganizations, liquidations, etc.

(6) In order to have a substitution of an option under section 425(a) the optionee must, in connection with the corporate transaction, lose his rights under the old option. There cannot be a substitution of a new option for an old option within the meaning of section 425(a) if it is contemplated that the optionee may exercise both the old option and the new option. It is not necessary, however, to have a complete substitution of a new option for the old option. However, if the old option was a qualified, incentive, or restricted stock option, any portion of such option which is not substituted or assumed in a transaction to which section 425(a) applies will be treated as an outstanding option to purchase stock of a predecessor corporation of the new employer or grantor corporation. See section 422 (b)(5) and (c)(2) and paragraph (f) of §1.422-2 and section 422A(b)(7) and (c)(7) and paragraph (f) of §1422A-2. For example, assume that X Corporation forms a new corporation, Y Corporation, by a transfer of certain assets and distributes the stock of Y Corporation to the shareholders of X Corporation. Assume further that E, an employee of X Corporation, is thereafter an employee of both X Corporation and Y Corporation. Y Corporation wishes to substitute an option to purchase some of its tock for the statutory option which E has, entitling him to purchase 100 shares of the stock of X Corporation. The option to purchase the stock of X Corporation, at $50 a share, was granted when the stock had a fair market value of $50 a share, and the stock was worth $100 a share just before the distribution of the new corporation's stock to the shareholders of X Corporation. The stock of X Corporation and of Y Corporation is worth $50 a share just after such distribution, which also is the time of the substitution. On these facts an option to purchase 200 shares of stock of Y Corporation at $25 a share could be given to the employee in complete substitution for the old option. It would also be permissible to give the employee an option to purchase 100 shares of stock of Y Corporation at $25 a share in substitution for his right to purchase 50 of the shares covered by the old option. However, if the option to purchase X stock was a qualified, incentive, or restricted stock option, then to the extent the old option is not assumed or a new option issued in substitution therefor in a transaction to which section 425(a) applies, such old option will be treated as an outstanding option under either section 422(c)(2) for purposes of section 422(b)(5), or section 422A(c)(7) for purposes of section 422A(b)(7). See paragraph (f) of §1.422-2 and paragraph (f) of §1.422A-2.

* * * * *

(c) Disposition of stock.

(3)(i) If there is a transfer of statutory option stock in connection with the exercise of any incentive stock option, and the applicable holding period requirements (under section 422(a)(1), 422A(a)(1), 423(a)(1), or 424(a)(1)) are not met before such transfer, then no section referred to in paragraph (c) (1)(ii) of this section shall apply to such transfer for purposes of determining whether there has been a disposition of such stock.

(ii) For purposes of this paragraph (c)(3), the term "statutory option stock" means any stock acquired through the exercise of a qualified stock option, an incentive stock option, an option granted under an employee stock purchase plan, or a restricted stock option.

(iii) This paragraph (c)(3) applies only with respect to transfers of statutory option stock in connection with the exercise of an incentive stock option occurring after March 15, 1982.

(4) ***

Example (7). On January 1, 1982, the X Corporation grants to E, an employee, an incentive stock option to purchase 100 shares of X Corporation stock at $100 per share, the fair market value of X Corporation stock on that date. According to the terms of the option, E can exercise the option by using previously acquired X Corporation stock. On January 1, 1983, while employed by X Corporation, E exercises part of the option and pays X Corporation $5,000 in cash. On that day, X Corporation transfers to E 50 shares of its stock having a fair market value of $6,000. Before January 1, 1984, E makes no disposition of the 50 shares so purchased. E realizes no income with respect to the transfer of the 50 shares of X Corporation stock on January 1, 1983. X Corporation is not entitled to any deduction at any time with respect to its transfer to E of the stock. E's basis for such 50 shares is $5,000.

Example (8). Assume the same facts as in example (7), except assume that on December 1, 1983, one year and 11 months after the grant of the incentive stock option and 11 months after the transfer of the 50 shares, E transfers 25 of the shares, having a fair market value of $5,000, to X Corporation as payment for the balance of the incentive stock option still outstanding. On that day, X Corporation transfers to E 50 shares of its stock having a fair market value of $10,000. The special rules of section 421(a) are not applicable to the transfer of 25 of the shares transferred on January 1, 1983, because disposition of such shares was made by E within two years of grant of the option and one year of exercise of the option.

(d) Attribution of stock ownership. Section 425(d) provides that in determining the amount of stock owned by an individual for purposes of applying the percentage limitations of secton 422(b)(7), 422A(b)(6), 423(b)(3), and 424(b)(3), stock of the employer corporation or of a related corporation which is owned (directly or indirectly) by or for such individual's brothers and sisters (whether by the whole or half blood), spouse, ancestors, and lineal descendants, shall be considered as owned by such individual. Also, for such purpose, if a domestic or foreign corporation, partnership, estate, or trust owns (directly or indirectly) stock of the employer corporation or of its parent or subsidiary, such stock shall be considered as being owned proportionately by or for the shareholders, partners, or beneficiaries of the corporation, partnership, estate, or trust.

(e) Modification, extension, or renewal of option. (1) Section 425(h) provides the rules for determining whether a share of stock transferred to an individual upon his exercise of an option, after the terms thereof have been modified, extended, or renewed, is transferred pursuant to the exercise of a statutory option. Such rules and the rules of this section are applicable to modifications, extensions, or renewals (or to changes which are not treated as modifications) of an option in any taxable year of the optionee which begins after December 31, 1963, except that section 425(h)(1) and this paragraph shall not apply to any change made before January 1, 1965, in the terms of an option granted after December 31, 1963, to permit such option to meet the requirements of section 422(b)(3), (4), or (5), and the regulations thereunder. See paragraphs (d), (e), and (f), of §1.422-2, relating to period for exercising options, option price, and prior outstanding options, respectively, in the case of qualified stock options.

In addition, section 425(h)(1) and this paragraph shall not apply to any change made after August 13, 1981, and before August 14, 1982, in the terms of an option granted after December 31, 1975, and outstanding on August 13, 1981, necessary to permit such option to meet the requirements of section 422A and the regulations thereunder. See §1.422A-3 for special rules relating to the conversion of existing options into incentive options.

* * * * *

(5)(i) The time or date when an option is modified, extended, or renewed shall be determined, insofar as applicable, in accordance with the rules governing determination of the time or date of granting an option provided in paragraph (c) of §1.421-7. For purposes of sections 421 through 425, the term "modification" means any change in the terms of the option (or change in the terms of the plan pursuant to which the option was granted) which gives the optionee additional benefits under the option regardless of whether the optionee in fact benefits from the change in the terms. For example, a change in the terms of the option, which shortens the period during which the option is exercisable, is not a modification. However, any one of the following changes is a modification: a change which provides more favorable terms for payment for the stock purchased under the option, such as the right to tender previously acquired stock; a change which provides an extension of the period during which an option may be exercised, such as after termination of employment; a change which provides an additional benefit upon exercise of the option, such as the payment of a cash bonus; and a change which provides an alternative to the exercise of the option, such as a stock appreciation right. Finally, a change which provides, either by its terms or in substance, that the optionee may receive an additional benefit under the option at the future discretion of the grantor, is a modification both at the time the option is changed and at the time the benefit is actually granted. Where an option is amended solely to increase the number of shares subject to the option, such increase shall not be considered as a modification of the option, but shall be treated as the grant of a new option for the additional shares.

* * * * *

(iii) Any change in the terms of an option for the purpose of qualifying the option as a statutory option grants additional benefits and, therefore, is a modification. However, if the terms of an option are changed to provide that the optionee cannot transfer the option except by will or by the laws of descent and distribution in order to meet the requirements of section 422(b)(6), 422A(b)(5), 423(b)(9), or 424(b)(2), such change is not a modification, provided that in any case where the purpose of the change is to meet the requirements of section 424(b)(2) the option is at the same time changed so that it is not exercisable after the expiration of ten years from the date the option was granted. Where an option is not immediately exercisable in full, a change in the terms of such option to accelerate the time at which the option (or any portion thereof) may be exercised is not a modification for purposes of section 425(h) and this section. A modification results where an option is revised to insert the language required by section 422(c)(6)(B).

* * * * *

(6) A statutory option may, as a result of a modification, extension, or renewal, thereafter cease to be a statutory option, or any option may, by modification, extension, or renewal, thereafter become a statutory option. Moreover, a qualified option after a modification may not be exercisable in accordance with its terms because of the requirements of section 422(b)(5) and section 422(c)(6). See paragraph (f)(3)(i) of §1.422-2 and examples (8) and (9) of paragraph (f)(4) of §1.422-2.

Similarly, an incentive stock option after a modification may not be exercisable in accordance with its terms because of section 422A(b)(7). See paragraph (f)(3) of §1.422-2 and example (6) of paragraph (f)(4) of §1.422A-2.

* * * * *

Par. 7. Section 1.6039-1 is amended by revising that part of paragraph (a) preceding paragraph (a)(1), and by revising that part of paragraph (b)(1) preceding paragraph (b)(1)(i) to read as follows:

§1.6039-1 Information returns required of corporations with respect to certain stock option transactions occurring on or after January 1, 1964.

(a) Requirement of return under section 6039(a)(1). Every corporation which transfers stock to any person before January 1, 1980, pursuant to such person's exercise on or after January 1, 1964, of a qualified stock option described in section 422(b), or a restricted stock option described in section 424(b), shall make, for each calendar year in which such a transfer occurs, an information return on Form 3921 with respect to each transfer made during such year. The return shall include the following information:

* * * * *

(b) Requirement of return under section 6039(a)(2). (1) Every corporation which records, or has by its agent recorded, before January 1, 1980, a transfer of the title to stock acquired by the transferor pursuant to his exercise on or after January 1, 1964, of—

* * * * *

Par. 8. Section 1.6039-2 is amended by revising paragraph (a), redesignating paragraphs (b) and (c) as paragraphs (c) and (e), respectively, and adding new paragraphs (b) and (d) to read as follows:

§1.6039-2 Statements to persons with respect to whom information is furnished.

(a) Requirement of statement under section 6039(a)(1). Every corporation which transfers stock to any person after December 31, 1979, pursuant to such person's exercise of a qualified stock option described in section 422(b), and incentive stock option described in section 422A(b), or a restricted stock option described in section 424(b), shall furnish to such transferee, for each calendar year in which such a transfer occurs, a written statement with respect to the transfer or transfers made during such year. This statement shall include the following information:

(1) The name, address, and employer identification number of the corporation transferring the stock;

(2) The name, address, and identifying number of the person to whom the share or shares of stock were transferred;

(3) The name and address of the corporation the stock of which is the subject of the option (if other than the corporation transferring the stock);

(4) The date the option was granted;

(5) The date the shares were transferred to the person exercising the option;

(6) The fair market value of the stock at the time the option was exercised;

(7) The number of shares of stock transferred pursuant to the option;

(8) The type of option under which the transferred shares were acquired; and

(9) The total cost of all the shares.

(b) Requirement of statement under section 6039(a)(2). (1) Every corporation which records, or has by its agent recorded, a transfer after December 31, 1979, of the title to stock acquired by the transferor pursuant to the transferor's exercise on or after January 1, 1964, of—

(i) An option granted under an employee stock purchase plan which meets the requirements of section 423(b), and with respect to which the special rule of section 423(c) applied, or

(ii) A restricted stock option which meets the requirements of section 424(b) and with respect to which the special rule of section 424(c)(1) applies, shall furnish to such transferor, for each calendar year in which such a recorded transfer of title to such stock occurs, a written statement with respect to the transfer or transfers containing the information required by paragraph (b)(2) of this section.

(2) The statement required by paragraph (b)(1) of this section shall contain the following information:

(i) The name and address of the corporation whose stock is being transferred;

(ii) The name, address and identifying number of the transferor;

(iii) The date such stock was transferred to the transferor;

(iv) The number of shares to which title is being transferred; and

(v) The type of option under which the transferred shares were acquired.

(3) If the statement required by this paragraph is made by the authorized "transfer agent" of the corporation, it shall be deemed to have been made by the corporation. The term "transfer agent," as used in this paragraph means any designee authorized to keep the stock ownership records of a corporation and to record a transfer of title of the stock of such corporation on behalf of such corporation.

(4) A statement is required by reason of a transfer described in section 6039(a)(2) of a share only with respect to the first transfer of such share by the person who exercised the option. Thus, for example, if the owner has record title to a share or shares of stock transferred to a recognized broker or financial institution and the stock is subsequently sold by such broker or institution (on behalf of the owner) the corporation is only required to furnish a written statement to the owner relating to the transfer of record title to the broker or financial institution. Similarly, a written statement is required when a share of stock is transferred by the optionee to himself and another person (or persons) as joint tenants, tenants by the entireties or tenants in common. However, when stock is originally issued to the optionee and another person (or persons) as joint tenants, or as tenants by the entirety, the written statement required by this paragraph shall be furnished (at such time and in such manner as is provided by this section) with respect to the first transfer of the title to such stock by the optionee.

(c) Time for furnishing statements—(1) In general. Each statement required by this section to be furnished to any person for a calendar year shall be furnished to such person on or before January 31, of the year following the year for which the statement is required.

(2) Extension of time. For good cause shown upon written application of the corporation required to furnish statements under this section, the district director may grant an extension of time not exceeding 30 days in which to furnish such statements. The application shall be addressed to the district director with whom the income tax returns of the applicant-corporation are filed and shall contain a full recital of the reasons for requesting the extension to aid the district director in determining the period of the extension, if any, which will be granted. Such a request in the form of a letter to the district director signed by the applicant (or its agent) will suffice as an application. The application shall be filed on or before the date prescribed in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph for furnishing the statements required by this section.

(3) Last day for furnishing statement. For provisions relating to the time for performance of an act when the last day prescribed for performance falls on Saturday, Sunday, or a legal holiday, see §301.7503-1 of this chapter (Regulations on Procedures and Administration).

(d) Statements furnished by mail. For purposes of this section, a statement shall be considered to be furnished to a person if it is mailed to such person's last known address.

(e) Penalty. For provisions relating to the penalty provided for failure to furnish a statement under this section, see §301.6678-1 of this chapter (Regulations on Procedures and Administration).

JAMES I. OWENS,
Acting Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Possessions tax credit: definition of product, significant business presence test, and cost sharing and profit split elections.

LR-194-82

SUMMARY: These proposed regulations are being issued to conform to changes made by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 [Pub. L. 97-248, 1982-2 C.B. 462] involving possessions corporations. The regulations provide rules for determining whether a possessions corporation has a significant business presence in a possession with respect to a product. These regulations also provide rules which implement the cost sharing and profit split elections with respect to the possessions tax credit.

DATES: Written comments must be delivered or mailed by March 12, 1984. The regulations generally would be effective for taxable years of possessions corporations beginning on or after January 1, 1983.

ADDRESS: Send comments to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR-194-82), Washington, D.C. 20224.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Jacob Feldman of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR-194-82), 202-566-3289, concerning intangible property income in the absence of an election under section 936(h)(5), the cost sharing and profit split elections, and covered intangibles (§§1.936-4, 1.936-6, and 1.936-7); or Carol T. Doran of the same office concerning the definition of product, the significant business presence test, and contract manufacturing (§1.936-5).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 936(h) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. These amendments are proposed to conform the regulations to changes made to the Internal Revenue Code by section 213 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (the Act) (Pub. L. 97-248, 96 Stat. 452) [1982-2 C.B. 462, 486] and are to be issued under the authority contained in section 936(h) (96 Stat. 452) and section 7805 of the Code (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805). These regulations apply to taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1983. Therefore, in particular, the rules concerning the definition of a product, the significant business presence test, and the attribution of income to a possessions corporation have no application for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1983.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Section 936(h) of the Code provides that the intangible property income of a possessions corporation generally is treated as income of the corporation's U.S. shareholders, with proration of income on the basis of shareholdings. If a shareholder is a foreign person or is not subject to U.S. tax on such income, the possessions corporation is taxable on that shareholder's pro rata amount of the intangible property income. Income attributable to intangible assets is defined in section 936(h)(3).

However, the taxpayer may elect out of the general rule and treat certain income attributable to intangible property as income of the possessions corporation eligible for the possessions tax credit if the possessions corporation has a significant business presence in a possession with respect to a product or type of service. The election out may be made under one of two options: the cost sharing option or the profit split option.

Section 936 provides that a possessions corporation has a significant business presence in a possession if it satisfies either the value added test or the direct labor test. The value added test is satisfied if total production costs incurred in a possession with respect to a product in a taxable year are not less than 25 percent of the difference between gross receipts from sales of the product by members of the affiliated group to third parties, and the direct material costs of the affiliated group for materials purchased for that product from third parties. The direct labor test is satisfied if no less than 65 percent of the direct labor costs of the affiliated group for units of the product produced or services rendered during the taxable year in whole or in part by the possessions corporation is incurred by the possessions corporation and is compensation for services performed in the possession.

The proposed regulations would provide an additional significant business presence test. A possessions corporation would satisfy this test if 50 percent of the direct labor costs of the affiliated group for units of the product produced, in whole or in part, during the taxable year by the possessions corporation is incurred by the possessions corporation as compensation for services performed in the possession; and if the sum of the direct labor costs incurred in the possession plus the base period construction costs incurred in the possession is no less than 70 percent of the sum of base period construction costs incurred in the possession and the direct labor costs of the affiliated group.

The proposed regulations would define the term "product." A product is any item of property which is the result of a manufacturing process. The term includes a component product, an integrated product, or an end-product form. A component product is a product which is subject to further transformation before sale to unrelated parties. An integrated product is a product which is not subject to further transformation before sale to unrelated parties and which includes all component products from which it is manufactured. An end-product form is a product which is not subject to further transformation before sale to unrelated parties, which includes component products, but which is treated as not including certain of its component products for all purposes of section 936(h)(5).

The term "product" will have the same meaning for all purposes of section 936(h). Once the specific product is identified and the significant business presence test is satisfied with respect thereto, then it is that item with respect to which the possessions corporation will compute its return, if it uses the cost sharing option, or combined taxable income, if it uses the profit split option. Products whose manufacturing processes are similar may be grouped, provided that any grouping which materially distorts a taxpayer's income or the application of the significant business presence test may be disallowed.

Under the cost sharing option, the possessions corporation is required to make a cost sharing payment with respect to manufacturing intangibles equal to a fraction of the current year's worldwide direct and indirect product area research expenditures of the affiliated group. The fraction is equal to the ratio of third party sales of units of the product produced or services rendered in whole or in part in the possession, to third party sales of all products produced or services rendered in the product area by the possessions corporation and all its U.S. and foreign affiliates. The cost sharing payment determined under the formula will reduce the amount of deductions otherwise allowable to the U.S. affiliates. The possessions corporation will be treated as the owner of manufacturing intangibles related to the units of the product produced or services rendered, in whole or in part, in the possession by the possession corporation. Section 482 will be used for purposes of intercompany pricing.

If the profit split option is elected, 50 percent of the combined taxable income of the possessions corporation and its U.S. affiliates derived from units of the product produced or services rendered in whole or in part in the possession and sold to foreign affiliates or unrelated third parties will be allocated to the possessions corporation, and the remainder will be allocated to the U.S. affiliates. This method avoids section 482 uncertainties and permits the possessions corporation to obtain a return on both manufacturing and marketing intangibles.

Section 936(h) provides that an election to use the cost sharing or profit split method must cover all products within a broad product area, except that a different election may be made for export sales than domestic sales. Under this provision, a taxpayer may thus elect the cost sharing option for export sales even if it elects the profit split option for domestic sales. Export sales are defined as sales of a product or type of service for ultimate use or consumption outside the United States.

The proposed regulations are being issued in the form of questions and answers.

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted [preferably seven copies] to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held on  [April 3, 1984]. Notwithstanding these proposed regulations, we invite additional submissions for our consideration with respect to possible inclusion in subsequent regulations; see 48 FR 34569 [Notice 83-14, 1983-2 C.B. 413].

The collection of information requirements contained in this notice of proposed rulemaking have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for review under section 3504(h) of the Paperwork Reduction Act. Comments on these requirements should be sent to the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs of OMB, Attention: Desk Officer for Internal Revenue Service, New Executive Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20503. The Internal Revenue Service requests that persons submitting comments on these requirements to OMB also send copies of those comments to the Service.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT AND EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking which solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these proposed regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6), and a Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is not required. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this proposed rule is not a major regulation as defined in Executive Order 12291, and therefore a regulatory impact analysis is not required.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal authors of these proposed regulations are Jacob Feldman and Carol T. Doran of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Proposed amendments to the regulations.

26 CFR Part 1 is proposed to be amended by addition of the following new sections immediately after §1.936-1.

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS

§1.936-4 Intangible property income in the absence of an election out.

The rules in this section apply for purposes of section 936(h) and also for purposes of section 934(e), where applicable.

QUESTION 1: If a possessions corporation and its affiliates do not make an election under either the cost sharing or 50/50 profit split option, what rules will govern the treatment of income attributable to intangible property owned or leased by the possessions corporation?

ANSWER 1: Intangible property income will be allocated to the possessions corporation's U.S. shareholders with the proration of income based on shareholdings. If a shareholder of the possessions corporation is a foreign person or a tax-exempt person, the possessions corporation will be taxable on that shareholder's pro rata amount of the intangible property income. For these purposes, a United States shareholder includes any shareholder who is a United States person as described under section 7701 (a)(30). The term "intangible property income" means the gross income of a possessions corporation attributable to any intangible property other than intangible property which has been licensed to such corporation since prior to 1948 and which was in use by such corporation on September 3, 1982.

QUESTION 2: What is the source of the intangible property income described in question 1?

ANSWER 2: The intangible property income is U.S. source, whether taxed to U.S. shareholders or taxed to the possessions corporation. Such intangible property income, if treated as income of the possessions corporation, does not enter into the calculation of the 80-percent possession source test or the 65-percent active trade or business test of section 936(a)(2)(A) and (B).

QUESTION 3: How will the amount of income attributable to intangible property be measured?

ANSWER 3: Income attributable to intangible property includes the amount received by a possessions corporation from the sale, exchange, or other disposition of any product or from the rendering of a service which is in excess of the reasonable costs it incurs in manufacturing the product or rendering the service (other than costs incurred in connection with intangibles) plus a reasonable profit margin. A reasonable profit margin shall be computed with respect to direct and indirect costs other than (i) costs incurred in connection with intangibles, (ii) interest expense, and (iii) the cost of materials which are subject to processing or which are components in a product manufactured by the possessions corporation. Notwithstanding the above, certain taxpayers who have been permitted by the Internal Revenue Service in taxable years beginning before January 1, 1983, to use the cost-plus method of pricing without reflecting a return from intangibles, but including the cost of materials in the cost base, will not be precluded from doing so. (Sec. 3.02(3), Rev. Proc. 63-10, 1963-1 C.B. 490.) Thus, the Internal Revenue Service may continue in appropriate cases to permit such taxpayers to continue to report their income as they have been under existing procedures described in the previous sentence if it is appropriate under all the facts and circumstances and does not distort the income of the taxpayer.

QUESTION 4: If there is no intangible property related to a product produced in whole or in part by a possessions corporation, what method may the possessions corporation use to compute its income?

ANSWER 4: The taxpayer may use the method described in this section or may elect the cost sharing or profit split method. No other method will be permitted.

§1.936-5 Intangible property income when an election out is made: Product, business presence, and contract manufacturing.

The rules in this section apply for purposes of section 936(h) and also for purposes of section 934(e), where applicable.

(a) Definition of product.

QUESTION 1: What does the term "product" mean?

ANSWER 1: The term "product" means an item of property which is the result of a manufacturing process. The term "product" includes component products, integrated products, and end-product forms. A component product is a product which is subject to further transformation before sale to an unrelated party. A component product may be manufactured from other items of property, and if it is so manufactured, may be treated as including or not including

(at the choice of the possessions corporation) such other items of property for all purposes of section 936(h)(5). An integrated product is a product which is not subject to any further transformation before sale to an unrelated party and which includes all component products from which it is manufactured. An end-product form is a product which—

(1) Is not subject to any further transformation before sale to an unrelated party;

(2) Is manufactured from a component product or products; and

(3) Is treated as not including certain component products for all purposes of section 936(h)(5).

QUESTION 2: If a possessions corporation manufactures both a component product and an integrated product (which by definition includes the end-product form), may the possessions corporation use the options under section 936(h)(5) to compute its income with respect to either the component product, the integrated product or the end-product form?

ANSWER 2: Yes. The possessions corporation may choose to treat the component product, the integrated product, or the end-product form as the product for purposes of determining whether the possessions corporation satisfies the significant business presence test. The possessions corporation must specify its choice on a statement attached to its return (Schedule P of Form 5735). Once a possessions corporation has determined which item of property it will treat as its product (the possession product) for purposes of the significant business presence test, then the possessions corporation must treat that item of property as its product for all purposes of section 936(h)(5) for that taxable year, including the possessions sales calculation under section 936(h)(5)(C)(i)(I), the determination of income under section 936(h)(5)(C)(i)(II), and the combined taxable income computations under section 936(h)(5)(C)(ii). Although the possessions corporation must treat the same item of property as its product for all purposes of section 936(h)(5) in a particular taxable year, its choice of the component product, integrated product or end-product form may be different from year to year.

Example (1). A possessions corporation, S, manufactures a bulk pharmaceutical in a possession. S transfers the bulk pharmaceutical to its U.S. parent, P, for encapsulation and sale by P to customers. S satisfies the significant business presence test with respect to the bulk pharmaceutical (the component product), and the combination of the bulk pharmaceutical and the capsule (the integrated product). S may use the cost sharing or profit split method to compute its income with respect to either the component product or the integrated product.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1) except that S does not satisfy the significant business presence test with respect to the integrated product. S may use the cost sharing or profit split method to compute its income only with respect to the component product. However, if in a later taxable year S satisfies the significant business presence test with respect to the integrated product, then S may use the cost sharing or profit split method to compute its income with respect to that integrated product for that later taxable year.

Example (3). P, a domestic corporation, produces in bulk form in the United States the active ingredient for a pharmaceutical product. P transfers the bulk form to S, a wholly owned possessions corporation. S uses the bulk form to produce in Puerto Rico the finished dosage form drug. S transfers the drug in finished dosage form to P, which sells the drug to unrelated customers in the U.S. The direct labor costs incurred in Puerto Rico by S during its taxable year in formulating, filling and finishing the dosage form are at least 65 percent of the total direct labor costs incurred by the affiliated group in producing the bulk and finished forms during that period. S manufactures (within the meaning of section 954(d)(1)(A)) the finished dosage form. S has elected out under section 936(h)(5) under the profit split option for the drug product area (SIC 283). P and S may treat the bulk and finished dosage forms as parts of an integrated product. Since S satisfies the significant business presence requirement with respect to the integrated product, it is entitled to 50 percent of the combined taxable income on the integrated product.

Example (4). A possessions corporation, S, produces the keyboard of an electric typewriter and incorporates the keyboard with components acquired from a related corporation into finished typewriters. S does not satisfy the significant business presence test with respect to the typewriters (the integrated product). Therefore, S may use the cost sharing or profit split method to compute its income only with respect to a component product or end-product form. For taxable year 1983, S specifies on a statement attached to its return (Schedule P of Form 5735) that the possession product is the end-product form. The statement identifies the components—for example, the keyboard structure and frame—which are included in the possession product. S's definition of the possession product will apply to all units of the electric typewriters which S produces in whole or in part in the possession and which are sold in 1983. Thus, all units of a given component incorporated into such typewriters will be treated in the same way. For example, all keyboards and all frames will be included in the possession product, and all electric drive mechanisms and rollers will be excluded from the possession product.

QUESTION 3: May an affiliated group establish groupings of items of property and treat the groupings as single products?

ANSWER 3: An affiliated group may establish reasonable groupings of items of property based on similarities in the manufacturing processes of such items. Any grouping which materially distorts a taxpayer's income or the application of the significant business presence test may be disallowed by the Commissioner. In addition, the Commissioner may require grouping of items of property based on similarities in the manufacturing processes when necessary to prevent a material distortion of the taxpayer's income or the application of the significant business presence test. The mere fact that a grouping, or a failure to group, results in an increased allocation of income to the possessions corporation does not, of itself, necessarily create a material distortion of income. The implementation of the above rules is illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). The following are examples of items of property the processes of manufacture of which are sufficiently similar that they may be grouped and treated as a single product:

(A) Beverage bases or concentrates for different soft drinks or soft drink syrups, regardless of whether some include sweeteners and some do not;

(B) Different styles of clothing;

(C) Different styles of shoes;

(D) Equipment which relies on gravity to deliver solutions to patients intravenously;

(E) Equipment which relies on machines to deliver solutions to patients intravenously;

(F) Video game cartridges, even though the concept and design of each game title is, in part, protected against infringement by separate copyrights;

(G) All integrated circuits;

(H) All printed circuit boards; and

(I) Hardware and software, if software is sold only with the hardware and a purchaser of the hardware ordinarily will not purchase alternative software. In all other cases, hardware and software may not be grouped and treated as a single product.

Groupings (D) and (E) do not include any solutions which are delivered through the equipment described therein.

Example (2). A possessions corporation produces in Puerto Rico non-programmable, interactive cathode ray tube computer terminals that vary in price. These terminals all interact with a computer or controller to perform their functions of data entry, graphics word processing, and program development. The terminals can be purchased with options that include a built-in printer, different language keyboards, specialized cathode ray tubes, and different power supply features. All terminals are produced in one integrated process requiring the same skills and operations. The differıces in the production of the terminals include ifferences in the number of printed circuit oards incorporated in each terminal, the use f unique keyboards, and the installation and sting of the built-in printer. Some difference ı direct labor time to manufacture the termials occurs, primarily due to the differing numer and complexity of printed circuit boards inorporated into each terminal. Different model umbers are assigned to various computer terinals. A grouping by the taxpayer of all of the rminals as one product will be respected by ıe Service, unless the Service establishes that a ıbstantial distortion results. This grouping is roper because the processes of producing each f the terminals are similar.

Example (3). A possessions corporation, S, nd its U.S. affiliate produce several models of rial matrix impact printers and teleprinters. hese products have differing performance andards based on such factors as speed (in ıaracters per second), numbers of columns, nd cost. The manufacturing process perormed by S and its U.S. affiliate for all types f printers involves production of three basic ements: electronic circuitry, the printing ead, and the mechanical parts. The process of ıanufacturing all the printers is similar. Thus, ll printers could be grouped and treated as a single product. S purchases electronic circuitry and mechanical parts from its U.S. affiliate. S performs manufacturing functions relative to the printing head and assembles and tests the finished printers. S does not satisfy the significant business presence test with respect to the integrated products. S therefore specifies on a statement attached to its return (Schedule P of Form 5735) that the possession product for both the serial matrix printers and the teleprinters is the end-product form. The statement identifies the components which are included in each possession product. S may group and treat as a single product the serial matrix printers and the teleprinters if both end-product forms include and exclude the same components. Thus, if the end-product form for both the serial matrix printers and the teleprinters includes the mechanical parts and excludes the electronic circuitry, then S may group and treat as a single product the two end-product forms. If, however, the end-product forms for the two items of property contain different components and as a result of this definition of the end-product forms the manufacturing processes involved in producing the two end-product forms are not similar, then S may not group the end-product forms.

QUESTION 4: What factors should be disregarded in determining whether a particular grouping of similar items of property is reasonable?

ANSWER 4: In general, differences in the following factors will be disregarded in determining whether a particular grouping of items of property is reasonable:

(1) Differences in testing requirements (e.g., some products sold for military use may require more extensive or different testing than products sold for commercial use);

(2) Differences in the product specifications that are designed to accommodate the product to its area of use or for conditions under which used (e.g., electrical products designed for ultimate use in the United States differ from electrical products designed for ultimate use in Europe);

(3) Differences in packaging or labeling (e.g., differences in the number of units of the items shipped in one package); and

(4) Minor differences in the operations of the items of property.

QUESTION 5: Is an affiliated group permitted to group and treat as a single product drugs or medicinal preparations based on the active ingredient contained in the drug or based on both the active ingredient contained in the drug and the delivery form of the drug?

ANSWER 5: An affiliated group is permitted to group and treat as a single product drugs and medicinal preparations which contain the same active ingredient or ingredients. Alternatively, the affiliated group is permitted to group and treat as a single product drugs and medicinal preparations containing the same active ingredient or ingredients which are delivered in the same form if the manufacturing processes are similar. For purposes of the preceding sentence, each of the following groups of items shall be considered to be delivered in the same form:

(1) Capsules, tablets, and pills;

(2) Liquids, ointments, and creams; and

(3) Preparations for delivery through injection or intravenous equipment.

No distinctions should be based on packaging, list numbers, or size of dosage.

QUESTION 6: Will the fact that a manufacturer of a drug must submit a New Drug Application ("NDA") or a supplemental NDA to the Food and Drug Administration have any effect on the definition or grouping of a product?

ANSWER 6: No.

Example (1). Company S manufactures pharmaceutical X in tablet form in Puerto Rico. The FDA has approved the tablet form of X. S subsequently plans to manufacture X in Puerto Rico in an injectable form. This will require an NDA. If S has elected to distinguish drugs on the basis of both the delivery form and the active ingredient, then the injectable form will be a separate product. If S has elected to distinguish drugs only on the basis of their containing the same active ingredient or ingredients, then the injectable form will not be a separate product. The fact that S must obtain an NDA for the injectable form is not relevant to the determination of whether the injectable constitutes a separate product.

Example (2). A possessions corporation, S, manufactures two active bulk chemicals, X and Y, and produces X in tablet and ointment form and Y in tablet and ointment form. S. subsequently plans to manufacture X and Y separately in injectable form. This will require NDAs. If S has elected to distinguish separate products on the basis of both the delivery from of the end-product and the active ingredient, then the injectable forms of X and Y will each be separate products. If S has instead elected to distinguish separate products only on the basis of their containing the same active ingredient or ingredients, then the injectable forms of X and Y will not be separate products.

QUESTION 7: A possessions corporation which produced a product or rendered a type of service in a possession on or before September 3, 1982, is not required to meet the significant business presence test in a possession with respect to such product or type of service for its taxable years beginning before January 1, 1986 (the interim period). During such interim period, how will the term "product" be defined for purposes of allocating income under the cost sharing or profit split methods?

ANSWER 7: During the interim period the product will be determined based on the activities performed by the possessions corporation within a possession on September 3, 1982. During the interim period the possessions corporation may compute its income under the cost sharing or profit split method only with respect to the product that is produced or manufactured within the meaning of section 954(d)(1)(A) within the possession. If the product is manufactured from a component or components produced by an affiliated corporation or a contract manufacturer, then the product will not be treated as including such component or components for purposes of the computation of income under the cost sharing or profit split methods. Thus, the possessions corporation is not entitled to any return on the intangibles associated with the component or components. Notwithstanding the preceding sentences, for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1986, a possessions corporation may compute its income under the cost sharing or profit split method with respect to a product which includes a component or components produced by an affiliated corporation or contract manufacturer if the possessions corporation satisfies with respect to such product the significant business presence test described in section 936(h)(5)(B)(ii) and the regulations thereunder.

Example (1). A possessions corporation, S, was manufacturing (within the meaning of section 954(d)(1)(A)) integrated circuits in a possession on September 3, 1982. S transferred those integrated circuits to related corporation P. P incorporated the integrated circuits into central processing units (CPUs) in the United States and sold the CPUs to unrelated parties. S continued to manufacture integrated circuits in the possession through January 1, 1986. For taxable years beginning before January 1, 1986, S may compute its income under the cost sharing or profit split method with respect to the integrated circuits regardless of whether S satisfies the significant business presence test. However, unless S satisfies the significant business presence test with respect to the central processing units, S may not compute its income under the cost sharing or profit split methods with respect to the CPUs, and thus, S is not entitled to any return on manufacturing intangibles associated with CPUs to the extent that they are not related to the integrated circuits produced by S, nor (except as provided in the profit split method) to any return on marketing intangibles.

Example (2). A possessions corporation, S, was engaged on September 3, 1982, in the manufacture (within the meaning of section 954(d)(1)(A)) of a bulk pharmaceutical in Puerto Rico from raw materials. S sold the bulk pharmaceutical to its U.S. parent, P, for encapsulation and sale by P to customers as the product X. Because S was not engaged in the encapsulation of X, S is not considered to have manufactured the integrated product, X, in Puerto Rico. During the interim period, S may compute its income under the cost sharing or profit split methods with respect to the integrated product, X, only if S satisfies the significant business presence test with respect to X. S may compute its income under the cost sharing or profit split methods with respect to the component product (the bulk pharmaceutical).

Example (3). P is a domestic corporation that is not a possessions corporation. P manufactures a bulk pharmaceutical in the United States. P transfers the bulk pharmaceutical to its wholly owned subsidiary, S, a possessions corporation. On September 3, 1982, S was engaged in the encapsulation of the bulk pharmaceutical in Puerto Rico in a manner which satisfies the test of section 954(d)(1)(A). For taxable years beginning before January 1, 1986, S may compute its income under the cost sharing or profit split methods with respect to the end-product form (the encapsulated drug) regardless of whether S meets the significant business presence test. However, unless S satisfies the significant business presence test with respect to the integrated product, S may not compute its income under the cost sharing or profit split methods with respect to the integrated product, and thus, S is not entitled to any return on the intangibles associated with the bulk pharmaceutical.

QUESTION 8: On September 3, 1982, a possessions corporation, S, was engaged in the manufacture (within the meaning of section 954(d)(1)(A)) of X in a possession. During the interim period, after September 3, 1982, but before January 1, 1986, S produced Y, which differs from X in terms of minor design features. S did not produce Y in a possession on September 3, 1982. Will S be considered to have commenced production of a new product after September 3, 1982, for purposes of the application of the significant business presence test for the interim period?

ANSWER 8: No. X and Y will be considered to be a single product, and therefore S will not be required to satisfy the business presence test with respect to Y during the interim period. In all cases in which the items of property produced on or before September 3, 1982 and the items of property produced after that date could have been grouped together under the guidelines provided in §1.936-5(a) questions and answers 3 through 5, the possessions corporation will not be considered to manufacture a new product after September 3, 1982.

QUESTION 9: May the term "product" be defined differently for export sales than for domestic sales?

ANSWER 9: No.

(b) Requirement of significant business presence.

QUESTION 1: In general, a possessions corporation may compute its income under the cost sharing or profit split methods with respect to a product or type of service only if the possessions corporation has a significant business presence in a possession with respect to such product or service. For purposes of the cost sharing method, the significant business presence test is met if the possessions corporation satisfies either a value added test or a direct labor test. For purposes of the profit split method, the possessions corporation must satisfy either a value added test or a direct labor test, and must manufacture the product in a possession within the meaning of section 954(d)(1)(A). To determine whether a possessions corporation satisfies the value added or direct labor test, the corporation must compute its total production costs, direct material costs, and direct labor costs with respect to the product. How are these terms defined?

ANSWER 1: The terms "total production costs," "direct material costs," and "direct labor costs" are defined in §1.471-11, inventories of manufacturers. Total production costs include direct production costs and fixed and variable indirect production costs. Direct material costs include the cost of those materials which become an integral part of the specific product and those materials which are consumed in the ordinary course of manufacturing and can be identified or associated with particular units or groups of units of that product. See §1.471-3 for the elements of direct material costs. Direct labor costs, as defined in §1.471-11(b)(2)(i), include the cost of labor which can be identified or associated with particular units or groups of units of a specific product. The elements of direct labor costs include such items as basic compensation, overtime pay, vacation and holiday pay, sick leave pay (other than payments pursuant to a wage continuation plan under section 105(d)), shift differential, payroll taxes, and payments to a supplemental unemployment benefit plan paid or incurred on behalf of employees engaged in direct labor. The possessions corporation must file a separate Schedule P for each product to which the cost sharing or profit split method is applied. The taxpayer must attach to such schedule detailed computations indicating how the significant business presence test is satisfied with respect to the possession product.

QUESTION 2: For purposes of determining whether a possessions corporation satisfies the significant business presence test, how shall the possessions corporation treat the cost of components transferred to the possessions corporation by a member of the affiliated group?

ANSWER 2: The treatment of the cost of components transferred from an affiliate depends on whether the possession product is treated as including the component for purposes of section 936(h). If it is, then for purposes of the value added test, the production costs associated with the component shall be treated as production costs of the affiliated group that are not incurred by the possessions corporation. Production costs shall not be treated as a cost of materials. For purposes of the direct labor test, the direct labor costs associated with such component shall be treated as direct labor costs of the affiliated group that are not incurred by the possessions corporation. If the possession product is treated as not including such component for purposes of section 936(h), then for purposes of the value added test, the cost of the component shall be treated as a cost of materials. For purposes of the direct labor test, the direct labor costs associated with such component shall not be treated as direct labor costs of the affiliated group. If the possession product is treated as not including such component, then the possessions corporation shall not be entitled to any return on the intangibles associated with the manufacturing or marketing of the component.

QUESTION 3: May the members of the affiliated group include as direct labor costs the labor element in indirect production costs?

ANSWER 3: No. The labor element of indirect production costs may not be considered as part of direct labor costs. In determining whether a possessions corporation satisfies the value added test, however, all production costs, direct and indirect, incurred in a possession shall be taken into account.

QUESTION 4: When is the quality control and inspection of a product considered to be part of the manufacturing activity for that product?

ANSWER 4: Quality control and inspection of a manufactured product before its sale or other disposition by the manufacturer, or before its incorporation into other products, are considered to be part of the indirect manufacturing activity for that initial product. Subsequent testing of a product to ensure that the product is compatible with other products is not a part of the manufacturing activity for the initial product. When a component is incorporated into an end-product form and the end-product form is then tested, the latter testing will be considered to be a part of the indirect manufacturing activity for the end-product form and will not be considered to be a part of the manufacturing activity for the component.

QUESTION 5: For purposes of the significant business presence test, do direct labor costs of the possessions corporation include only the costs which were actually incurred or do they take into account, in addition, any labor savings which result because the activities were performed in a possession rather than in the United States?

ANSWER 5: Direct labor costs include only the costs which were actually incurred.

QUESTION 6: For purposes of the significant business presence test and the allocation of income to a possessions corporation, what is the treatment of the cost of installation of a product that is manufactured by a possessions corporation, sold or otherwise transferred to an affiliated corporation, and installed by the affiliated corporation for the customer?

ANSWER 6: For the purposes of the significant business presence test and the allocation of income to a possessions corporation, product installation costs that are incurred after the product is transferred to an affiliated corporation need not be taken into account as costs incurred in the manufacture of that product, provided that the taxpayer keeps such permanent books of account or records as are suffcient to establish the fair market price of the uninstalled product. In such a case, the cost of installation materials, the cost of the labor for installation, and a reasonable profit for installation will not be included in the costs and income associated with the product.

QUESTION 7: What is the test for determining, within the meaning of section 954(d)(1)(A), whether a product is manufactured or produced by a possessions corporation in a possession?

ANSWER 7: A product is considered to have been manufactured or produced by a possessions corporation in a possession within the meaning of section 954(d)(1)(A) and §1.954-3(a)(4) if—

(1) The property has been substantially transformed by the possessions corporation in the possession;

(2) The operations conducted by the possessions corporation in the possession in connection with the property are substantial in nature and are generally considered to constitute the manufacture or production of property; or

(3) The conversion costs sustained by the possessions corporation in the possession, including direct labor, factory burden, testing of components before incorporation into an end product or testing of the manufactured product before sales account for 20 percent or more of the total cost of goods sold by the possessions corporation.

In no event, however, will packaging, repackaging, labeling, or minor assembly operations constitute manufacture or production of property. See particularly examples (2) and (3) of §1.954-3(a)(4)(iii).

QUESTION 8: Does the requirement that a possession product be produced or manufactured in a possession within the meaning of section 954(d)(1)(A) apply to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1986?

ANSWER 8: A possessions corporation must satisfy this requirement if the possessions corporation makes a separate election under section 936(h)(6)(F)(iv)(II) with respect to export sales. In addition, for taxable yers beginning before January 1, 1986, the possession product is defined with reference to the product produced within the meaning of section 954(d)(1)(A), unless the possessions corporation satisfied the significant business presence test (see §1.936-5(a) question and answer (7). In the latter case, if the possessions corporation computes its income under the profit split method with respect to a product, the section 954(d)(1)(A) requirement must be satisfied.

QUESTION 9: With respect to products not produced (and types of services not rendered) in the possession on or before September 3, 1982, when must a possessions corporation first satisfy the 25 percent value added test or the 65 percent direct labor test?

ANSWER 9: A transitional period is established such that a possessions corporation engaged in start-up operations with respect to a product or service need not satisfy the 25 percent value added test or the 65 percent labor test until the third taxable year following the taxable year in which such product or service is first sold by the possessions corporation. During the transitional period, the applicable percentages for these tests will be as follows:

Year	1	2	3
Value Added Test	10	15	20
Labor Test	35	45	55

A possessions corporation is engaged in start-up operations if it begins operations in a possession with respect to a product or type of service after September 3, 1982. A possessions corporation will be considered to begin operations with respect to a product only if, under the rules of §1.936-5 (a) questions and answers 3 through 6, such product could not be grouped with any other item of property manufactured in whole or in part in the possessions by any member of the affiliated group in any preceding taxable year. If any member of an affiliated group actually groups two or more items of property then, solely for the purposes of determining whether any item of property in that group is a new product, that grouping shall be respected. However, the fact that an affiliated group does not actually group two or more items of property shall be disregarded in determining whether any item of property is a new product. Any improvement or other change in a possession product which does not substantially change the production process would not be deemed to create a new product. A change in the division of manufacturing activity between the possessions corporation and its affiliates with respect to an item of property will not give rise to a new product. Notwithstanding the above, if a possessions corporation is producing a possession product in one possession and such corporation or a member of its affiliated group begins operations in a different possession, regardless of whether the items of property could be grouped, the affiliated group may treat the units of the item of property produced at the new site of operations as a new product.

QUESTION 10: Will the Secretary adopt a significant business presence test other than those set forth in section 936(h)(5)(ii)?

ANSWER 10: Yes. The following significant business presence test is adopted both for the transitional period and thereafter. A possessions corporation will have a significant business presence in a possession for a taxable year with respect to a product or type of service if—

(1) No less than 50 percent of the direct labor costs of the affiliated group for units of the product produced, in whole or in part, during the taxable year by the possessions corporation or for the type of service rendered by the possessions corporation during the taxable year, is incurred by the possessions corporation as compensation for services performed in the possession; and

(2) The direct labor costs of the possessions corporation for units of the product produced or the type of service rendered plus the base period construction costs are no less than 70 percent of the sum of such base period construction costs and the direct labor costs of the affiliated group for such units of the product produced or the type of service rendered.

Notwithstanding satisfaction of the above test, for purposes of determining whether a possessions corporation may compute its income under the profit split method, a possessions corporation will not be treated as having a significant business presence in a possession with respect to a product unless the possessions corporation manufactures the product in the possession within the meaning of section 954(d)(1)(A).

QUESTION 11: For purposes of the preceding question and answer, how is the term "base period construction costs" defined?

ANSWER 11: The term "base period construction costs" means the average construction costs incurred by or on behalf of the possessions corporation for services in the possession during the taxable year and the preceding four taxable years for section 1250 property (as defined in section 1250(c) and the regulations thereunder) that is used for the production of the product or the rendering of the service in the possession, and which represents the original use of the section 1250 property. For purposes of the preceding sentence, if the possessions corporation was not in existence during one or more of the four preceding taxable years, its construction costs for that year or years shall be deemed to be zero. Construction costs include architects' and engineers' fees, labor costs, and overhead and profit (if the construction is performed by a person that is not a member of the affiliated group).

QUESTION 12: Must the significant business presence test be met with respect to all units of the product produced during the taxable year by the affiliated group?

ANSWER 12: No. The significant business presence test must be met with respect to only those units of the product produced during the taxable year in whole or in part by the possessions corporation in a possession.

(c) Definition and treatment of contract manufacturing.

QUESTION 1: For purposes of determining whether a possessions corporation satisfies the significant business presence test with respect to a product, the costs incurred by the possessions corporation or by any of its affiliates in connection with contract manufacturing which is related to that product and is performed outside the possession shall be treated as direct labor costs of the affiliated group and shall not be treated as production costs of the possessions corporation or as material costs. How is the term "contract manufacturing" to be defined?

ANSWER 1: The term "contract manufacturing" includes any arrangement between a possessions corporation (or another member of the affiliated group) and an unrelated person if the unrelated person:

(1) Performs work on inventory owned by a member of the affiliated group for a fee without the passage of title;

(2) Performs manufacturing activities under the direct supervision and control of a member of the affiliated group;

(3) Does not undertake any significant risks in manufacturing its product (e.g., it is paid by the hour); or

(4) Uses intangibles which are related to its product, and such intangibles are owned or licensed by a member of the affiliated group.

QUESTION 2: For purposes of the significant business presence test, how shall a possessions corporation treat the cost of contract manufacturing performed within a possession?

ANSWER 2: If the possessions corporation uses the value added test, it will be permitted to treat the cost of the contract manufacturing performed in a possession, not including material costs, as a production cost of the possessions corporation. If it uses the direct labor test, it is permitted to treat the direct labor costs of the contract manufacturer associated with such contract manufacturing as a cost of direct labor of the possessions corporation (see question and answer 3, below).

QUESTION 3: How are the amounts paid by a possessions corporation to a contract manufacturer for services rendered in a possession to be treated by the possessions corporation in computing the direct labor cost of the product to which such contract manufacturing relates?

ANSWER 3: If the possessions corporation can establish the contract manufacturer's direct labor cost which was incurred in the possession, such cost will be treated as incurred by the possessions corporation as compensation for services performed in the possession. If the possessions corporation cannot establish such cost, then 50 percent of the amount paid to such contract manufacturer may be treated as incurred by the possessions corporation as compensation for services performed in the possession; provided, that not more than 50 percent of the fair market value of the product manufactured by the contract manufacturer is attributable to articles shipped into the possession, and the possessions corporation receives a statement from the contract manufacturer that this test has been satisfied. If this fair market test is not satisfied, then the cost of contract manufacturing performed within a possession shall not be treated as a production cost or as a direct labor cost of either the possessions corporation or the affiliated group.

QUESTION 4: A possessions corporation, S, purchases raw materials and components from an unrelated corporation which conducts business outside of a possession. The unrelated corporation is not a contract manufacturer. What is the treatment of such raw materials and components for purposes of the significant business presence test?

ANSWER 4: Where Company S purchases raw materials or components from an unrelated corporation which is not a contract manufacturer, the raw materials and components are treated as materials, and the costs (including direct labor costs) related thereto are treated as a cost of materials.

QUESTION 5: For purposes of the significant business presence test, what is the treatment of costs which are incurred by a member of the affiliated group for contract manufacturing performed outside of the possession with respect to an item of property which is a component of the possession product?

ANSWER 5: If the possession product is treated as including such component, then the cost of the contract manufacturing shall be treated as a direct labor cost of the affiliated group and shall not be treated as a direct labor cost incurred by the possessions corporation (see §1.936-5(b) question and answer (2)). If the possession product is treated as not including such component, then the cost of the contract manufacturing shall be treated as a cost of materials of the affiliated group (see §1.936-5(b) question and answer (2)).

§1.936-6 Intangible property income when an election out is made: cost sharing and profit split options; covered intangibles.

The rules in this section apply for purposes of section 936(h) and also for purposes of section 934(e), where applicable.

(a) Cost sharing option.—(1) Product area research.

QUESTION 1: Cost sharing payments are based on research undertaken by the affiliated group in the "product area" which includes the possession product. The term "product area" is defined by reference to the three-digit classification under the Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) code. Which governmental agency has jurisdiction to decide the proper SIC category for any specific product?

ANSWER 1: Solely for the purpose of determining the tax consequences of operating in a possession, the Secretary or his delegate has exclusive jurisdiction to decide the proper SIC category under which a product is classified. For this purpose, the product area under which a product is classified will be determined according to the 1972 edition of the SIC code. From time to time and in appropriate cases, the Secretary may prescribe regulations or issue rulings determining the proper SIC category under which a particular product is to be classified, and may prescribe regulations for aggregating two or more three-digit classifications of the SIC code and for classifying product areas according to a system other than under the SIC code.

QUESTION 2: How is the term "affiliated group" defined for purposes of the cost sharing option?

ANSWER 2: For purposes of the cost sharing option, the term "affiliated group" means the possessions corporation and all other organizations, trades or businesses (whether or not incorporated, whether or not organized in the United States, and whether or not affiliated) owned or controlled directly or indirectly by the same interests, within the meaning of section 482.

QUESTION 3: Are research and development expenditures that are included in product area research limited to research and development expenditures that are deductible under section 174 or that are incurred by U.S. affiliates?

ANSWER 3: No, product area research is not limited to product area research expenditures deductible under section 174 or to expenses incurred by U.S. affiliates. Product area research also includes deductions permitted under section 168 with respect to research property which are not deductible under section 174; qualified research expenses within the meaning of section 44(F)(b); payments (such as royalties) for the use of, or right to use, a patent, invention, formula, process, design, pattern or know-how; and a proper allowance for amounts incurred in the acquisition of intangible property. In the case of an acquisition of depreciable or amortizable intangible property, the annual amount of product area research shall be equal to the allowable depreciation on the intangible property for the taxable year. In the case of an acquisition of nondepreciable or nonamortizable intangible property, the amount expended for the acquisition shall be included in product area research in the year of the acquisition.

QUESTION 4: Does royalty income from a person outside the affiliated group with respect to manufacturing intangibles within a product area reduce the product area research pool within the same product area?

ANSWER 4: Yes.

QUESTION 5: What is the treatment of product area research expenses attributable to a component where the component and the integrated product fall within different product areas?

ANSWER 5: For purposes of the computation of product area research and total sales in the product area by the affiliated group, the product area in which the component falls is aggregated with the product area in which the integrated product falls.

(2) Possession sales and total sales.

QUESTION 1: The cost sharing payment is the same proportion of the total cost of product area research which the amount of "possession sales" of the affiliated group bears to the "total sales" of the affiliated group within the product area. How are "possession sales" defined for purposes of the cost sharing fraction?

ANSWER 1: The term "possession sales" means the aggregate sales or other dispositions of the possession product, less returns and allowances and less indirect taxes imposed on the production of the product, for the taxable year to persons who are not members of the affiliated group. The sales price to be used is the sales price received by the affiliated group from persons who are not members of the affiliated group.

QUESTION 2: For purposes of the numerator of the cost sharing fraction, how are possession sales computed where the possession product is a component product or an end-product form?

ANSWER 2: The sales price of the component product or end-product form is determined as follows. An independent sales price from comparable uncontrolled transactions must be used if such price can be determined in accordance with §1.482-2(e)(2). If an independent sales price from comparable uncontrolled transactions cannot be determined, then the sales price for the component product or end-product form will be the same proportion of the sales price for the integrated product which the production costs attributable to the component product or end-product form bears to the total production costs for the integrated product. Production costs will be the sum of direct and indirect production costs as defined for inventory accounting purposes under section 1.471-11(b), (c), and (d), except that such costs will not include costs of materials.

Example. The production costs for a component produced by a possessions corporation and its affiliated corporations are $600. The total production costs of the integrated product are $900. The sales price for the integrated product is $1500. The sales price for the component product would be $1000 ($600/$900 × $1500).

QUESTION 3: For purposes of determining possessions sales in the numerator of the cost sharing fraction, will the replacement part price of the product be treated as a price from comparable uncontrolled transactions?

ANSWER 3: Prices for replacement parts are generally higher than prices for equipment sold as part of an original system. Thus, prices for replacement parts cannot generally be used directly as prices for comparable uncontrolled transactions. However, replacement part prices may be used for estimating comparable uncontrolled prices where the price differential can be reasonably determined and taken into account under §1.482-2(e)(2).

QUESTION 4: For purposes of determining possession sales in the cost sharing fraction, what is the treatment of components that are purchased by one possessions corporation from a second possessions corporation and which are incorporated into a possession product?

ANSWER 4: When one possessions corporation purchases components from a second possessions corporation, the purchase price of the components paid to the second possessions corporation is subtracted from the sales proceeds of the product produced in the possession by the first possessions corporation, and only the remainder is included in the numerator of the cost sharing formula for the first corporation. For example, assume that N corporation manufactures a component for sale to O corporation for $100 (a price which reflects prices in comparable uncontrolled transactions). Both N and O are possessions corporations. O then incorporates that product into a second product which is sold to customers for $300. N and O must make separate cost sharing payments. The cost sharing payment of N corporation is determined by including $100 as possession sales, and the payment of O is determined by subtracting that $100 purchase price from the $300 received from customers. Thus, the possessions sales amount of O is $200. This rule is intended to prevent the double counting of the sales of a component produced by one possessions corporation and incorporated into another product by an affiliated possessions corporation.

QUESTION 5: How are "possession sales" determined under the cost sharing formula if members of the affiliated group (other than the possessions corporation) include purchases of the possession product, X, in a dollar-value LIFO inventory pool (as provided under §1.472-8)?

ANSWER 5: With respect to each affiliate, "possession sales" are determined by multiplying total sales of X by the affiliate (regardless of where the units of X were obtained) during the taxable year by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the dollar-value amount of units of X or components of X purchased from the possessions corporation by the affiliate during the taxable year. The dollar-value amount will be determined on the basis of the possessions corporation's cost for its inventory purposes, plus any production costs (as defined in section 1.471-11(b), (c), and (d) but not including costs of materials) incurred by the affiliate during the same period. The denominator of the fraction is the dollar-value amount of units of X purchased by the affiliate in the same period from all sources, with purchases of units of X and any value added by the affiliate in production during the same period, valued as described above.

QUESTION 6: How are "total sales" defined for purposes of the cost sharing fraction?

ANSWER 6: The term "total sales" means aggregate sales or other dispositions of products in the same product area as the possession product, less returns and allowances and less indirect taxes imposed on the production of the product, for the taxable year to persons who are not members of the affiliated group. The sales price to be used is the sales price received by the affiliated group from persons who are not members of the affiliated group.

QUESTION 7: In computing the cost sharing payment, how are "total sales" computed if the dollar-value LIFO inventory pool includes some products which are not included in the product area (determined under the 3-digit SIC code) on which the denominator of the cost sharing fraction is based?

ANSWER 7: In such case, the amount of the total sales within the product area to persons who are not members of the affiliated group by persons who are members of the affiliated group is determined by multiplying the total sales of the products within the dollar-value LIFO inventory pool by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction includes the dollar-value of purchases by members of the affiliated group (including the possessions corporation) of products within the product area made during the year, plus any added production costs (as defined in §1.471-11(b), (c), and (d) but not including the costs of materials) incurred by the affiliates during the same period. The denominator of the fraction includes the dollar-value of purchases by members of the affiliated group (including the possessions corporation) of products within the dollar-value LIFO inventory pool made during the same period (including any production costs, as described above, incurred by the affiliate during the same period). For these purposes, purchases of a possession product are determined on the basis of the possessions corporation's cost for its inventory purposes.

(3) Credits against cost sharing payments.

QUESTION 1: Is the cost of product area research paid or accrued by the possessions corporation in a taxable year creditable against the cost sharing payment?

ANSWER 1: Yes, if the cost of the product area research is paid or accrued solely by the possessions corporation. Thus, payments by the possessions corporation under cost sharing arrangements with, or royalties paid to, unrelated persons are so creditable. However, amounts (such as royalties) paid directly or indirectly to, or on behalf of, related persons and amounts paid under any cost sharing agreements with related persons are not creditable against the cost sharing payment.

QUESTION 2: Do royalties or other payments made by an affiliate of the possessions corporation to another member of the affiliated group reduce the cost sharing payment if such royalties or other payments are based, in part, on activity of the possessions corporation?

ANSWER 2: No. Payments made between affiliated corporations do not reduce the cost sharing payment. Thus, for example, if a possessions corporation sells a component to a foreign affiliate for incorporation by the foreign affiliate into an integrated product sold to unrelated persons, and the foreign affiliate pays a royalty to the U.S. parent of the possessions corporation based on the total value of the integrated product, the cost sharing payment of the possessions corporation is not reduced.

(4) Computation of cost sharing payment.

QUESTION 1: S is a possessions corporation engaged in the manufacture and sale of four products (A, B, C, and D) all of which are classified under the same three-digit SIC code. S sells its production to a U.S. affiliate, P, which resells it to unrelated parties in the United States. P's third party sales of each of these products produced in whole or in part by S (computed as provided under paragraph (a)(2) of §1.936-6) are $1 million; P's other sales of products in the same SIC code are $3,000,000; and the defined worldwide product area research of the affiliated group is $350,000. How should S compute the cost sharing amount for products A, B, C, and D?

ANSWER 1: The cost sharing amount is computed separately for each product on Schedule P of Form 5735. S should use the following formula for each of the products A, B, C, and D:

$$\frac{\text{Sales to Unrelated Persons of Possession Product}}{\text{Total Sales of Products in SIC code}} \times \text{Worldwide Product Area Research}$$

$$\frac{$1,000,000}{$7,000,000} \times $350,000 = $50,000$$

QUESTION 2: The facts are the same as in question 1 except that S manufactures product D under a license from an unrelated person. S pays the unrelated party an annual license fee of $20,000. Thus, the worldwide product area research expense of the affiliated group is $370,000. How should the cost sharing payment be adjusted?

ANSWER 2: The cost sharing fee should be reduced by the $20,000 license fee made as a direct annual payment to a third party on account of product D. The cost sharing payment with respect to product D in this example will be adjusted as follows:

$$\frac{\text{Sales to Unrelated Persons of Possession Product}}{\text{Total Sales of Products in SIC code}} \times \text{Worldwide Product Area Research} - \text{Amount paid by the possessions corporation to an unrelated party}$$

$$\frac{($1,000,000}{($7,000,000} \times $370,000) - $20,000 = $32,857$$

QUESTION 3: The facts are the same as in question 1 except that S also manufactures and exports product E to a foreign affiliate, which resells it to unrelated persons for $1 milion. S makes a separate election for its export sales. How should S compute the cost sharing amount for product E?

ANSWER 3: The numerator of the cost sharing fraction is the aggregate sales or other dispositions by members of the affiliated group of the units of product E produced in whole or in part in the possession to persons who are not members of the affiliated group. The cost sharing amount for product E would be computed as follows:

or

$$\frac{$1,000,000}{($7,000,000 + $1,000,000)} \times $350,000 = $43,750$$

QUESTION 4: The facts are the same as in question 1, except that S also receives $10,000 in royalty income from unrelated persons for the licensing of certain manufacturing intangible property rights. What is the amount of the product area research that must be allocated in determining the cost sharing amount?

ANSWER 4: If the affiliated group receives royalty income from unrelated persons with respect to manufacturing intangibles in the same product area, then the product area research to be considered shall be first reduced by such royalty income. In this case, the amount of product area research to be used in determining S's cost sharing payment should be reduced by the $10,000 royalty payment received to $340,00.

(5) Effect of election under the cost sharing method.

QUESTION 1: What is the effect of the cost sharing method?

ANSWER 1: The cost sharing payment reduces the amount of deductions (and the amount of reductions in earnings and profits) otherwise allowable to the U.S. affilitates (other than tax-exempt affiliates) within the affiliated group as determined under section 936(h)(5)(C)(i)(I)(b) which have incurred research expenditures (as defined in §1.936-6(a)(1), question and answer 3) in the same product area for which the cost sharing option is elected, during the taxable year in which the cost sharing payment accrues. If there are no such U.S. affiliates, the reductions with respect to deductions and earnings and profits, as the case may be, are made with respect to foreign affiliates within the same affiliated group which have incurred product research expenditures in such product area attributable to a U.S. trade or business. If there are no affiliates which have incurred research expenditures in such product area, the reductions are then made with respect to any other U.S. affiliate and, if there is no such U.S. affiliate, then to any other foreign affiliate. The allocations of these reductions in each case shall be made in proportion to the gross income of the affiliates. In the case of foreign affiliates, the allocation shall be made in proportion to gross income attributable to the U.S. trade or business or worldwide gross income, as the case may be. With respect to each group above, the reduction of deductions shall be applied first to deductions under section 174, then to deductions under section 162, and finally to any other deductions on a pro rata basis.

QUESTION 2: For purposes of estimated tax payments, when is the cost sharing amount deemed to accrue?

ANSWER 2: The cost sharing amount is deemed to accrue to the appropriate affiliated corporations on the last day of the taxable year of each such corporation.

QUESTION 3: If the cost sharing method is elected and the year of accrual of the cost sharing payment to the appropriate affiliated corporations (described in question and answer 1 of this paragraph (a)(5)) differs from the year of actual payment by the possessions corporation, in what year are the deductions of the recipients reduced?

ANSWER 3: In the year the cost sharing payment has accrued.

QUESTION 4: What is the treatment of income from intangibles under the cost sharing method?

ANSWER 4: Under the cost sharing method, a possessions corporation is treated as the owner, for purposes of obtaining a return thereon, of manufacturing intangibles related to a possession product. The term "manufacturing intangible" means any patent, invention, formula, process, design, pattern, or know-how. The possessions corporation will not be treated as the owner, for purposes of obtaining a return thereon, of any manufacturing intangibles related to a component product produced by an affiliated corporation and transferred to the possessions corporation for incorporation into the possession product, except in the case that the possession product is treated as including such component product for all purposes of section 936(h)(5). Further, the possessions corporation will not be treated as the owner, for purposes of obtaining a return thereon, of any marketing intangibles except "covered intangibles." (See §1.936-6(c).)

QUESTION 5: If the cost sharing option is elected, is it necessary for the possessions corporation to be the legal owner of the manufacturing intangibles related to the possession product in order for the possessions corporation to receive a full return with respect to such intangibles?

ANSWER 5: No. There is no requirement that manufacturing intangibles be owned by the possessions corporation.

QUESTION 6: How is income attributable to marketing intangibles treated under the cost sharing method?

ANSWER 6: Except in the case of "covered intangibles" (see section 1.936-6(c)), the possessions corporation is not treated as the owner of any marketing intangibles, and income attributable to marketing intangibles will be allocated to the possessions corporation's U.S. shareholders with the proration of income based on shareholdings. If a shareholder of the possessions corporation is a foreign person or is otherwise tax-exempt, the possessions corporation is taxable on that shareholder's pro rata amount of the intangible property income.

QUESTION 7: What is the source of the intangible property income described in question and answer 6?

ANSWER 7: The intangible property income is U.S. source whether taxed to the U.S. shareholder or taxed to the possessions corporation. Such intangible property income, if treated as income of the possessions corporation, does not enter into the calculation of the 80-percent possession source test or the 65-percent active trade or business test.

QUESTION 8: May marketing intangible income, if any, be allocated to the possessions corporation with respect to custom-made products?

ANSWER 8: No. If the cost sharing option is elected, then income attributable to marketing intangibles (other than "covered intangibles" described in §1.936-6(c)) will be taxed as discussed in questions and answers 6 and 7 of this subparagraph (a)(5). It is immaterial whether the product is custom-made.

QUESTION 9: In order to sell a pharmaceutical product in the United States, a New Drug Application ("NDA") for the product must be approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. Is an NDA considered a manufacturing or marketing intangible for purposes of the allocation of income under the cost sharing method?

ANSWER 9: A manufacturing intangible.

QUESTION 10: Can a copyright be, in whole or in part, a manufacturing intangible for purposes of the allocation of income under the cost sharing method?

ANSWER 10: In general, a copyright is a marketing intangible. See §936(h)(3)(B)(ii). However, copyrights may be treated either as manufacturing intangibles or nonmanufacturing intangibles (or as partly each) depending upon the function or the use of the copyright. If the copyright is used in manufacturing, it will be treated as a manufacturing intangible; but if it is used in marketing, even if it is also classified as know-how, it will be treated as a marketing intangile.

QUESTION 11: If the cost sharing option is elected and a patent is related to the product produced by the possessions corporation, does the return to the possessions corporation with respect to the manufacturing intangible include the make, use, and sell elements of the patent?

ANSWER 11: Yes. A patent confers an exclusive right for 17 years to sell a product covered by the patent. During this period, the return to the possessions corporation includes the make, use, and sell elements of the patent.

QUESTION 12: For purposes of the cost sharing option, may a safe haven rule be applied to determine the amount of marketing intangible income?

ANSWER 12: No. The amount of marketing intangible income is determined on the basis of all relevant facts and circumstances. The section 482 regulations will continue to apply except to the extent modified by the election. Rev. Proc. 63-10 and Rev. Proc. 68-22 do not apply for this purpose.

QUESTION 13: If a product covered by the cost sharing election is sold by a possessions corporation to an affiliated corporation for resale to an unrelated party, may the resale price method be used to determine the intercompany price of the possessions corporation?

ANSWER 13: In general, the resale price method may be used if (a) no comparable uncontrolled price for the product exists, and (b) the affiliated corporation does not add a substantial amount of value to the product by manufacturing or by the provision of services which are reflected in the sales price of the product to the customer. The possessions corporation will not be denied use of the resale price method for purposes of such intercompany pricing merely because the reseller adds more than an insubstantial amount to the value of the product by the use of intangible property.

QUESTION 14: If a possessions corporation makes the cost sharing election and uses the cost-plus method under section 482 to determine the arm's-length price of a possession product, will the cost base include the cost of materials which are subject to processing or which are components in the possession product?

ANSWER 14: A taxpayer may include the cost of materials in the cost base if it is appropriate under the regulations under §1.482-2(e)(4).

QUESTION 15: If the possessions corporation computes its income with respect to a product under the cost sharing method, and the price of the product is determined under the cost-plus method under section 482, does the cost base used in computing cost-plus under section 482 include the amount of the cost sharing payment?

ANSWER 15: No.

QUESTION 16: If a member of the affiliated group transfers to a possessions corporation a component which is incorporated into a possession product, how will the transfer price for the component be determined?

ANSWER 16: The transfer price for the component will be determined under section 482, and as follows. If the possession product is treated as not including such component for purposes of section 936(h)(5), the transfer price paid for the component will include a return on all intangibles related to the component product. If the possession product is treated as including such component for purposes of section 936(h)(5), then the transfer price paid for the component by the possessions corporation will not include a return on any manufacturing intangible related to the component product, and the possessions corporation will obtain the return on the manufacturing intangibles associated with the component.

(b) Profit split option—(1) Computation of combined taxable income.

QUESTION 1: In determining combined taxable income from sales of a possession product, how are the allocations and apportionments of expenses, losses, and other deductions to be determined?

ANSWER 1: Expenses, losses, and other deductions are to be allocated and apportioned on a "fully-loaded" basis under §1.861-8 on a separate company basis to combined gross income of the possessions corporation and other members of the affiliated group (other than foreign affiliates). The amount of research, development, and experimental expenses allocated and apportioned to combined gross income is to be determined under §1.861-8(e)(3), but shall in no event be less than the amount of the cost sharing payment that would have been required under the rules set forth in section 936(h)(5)(C)(ii)(II) and paragraph (a) of this section if the cost sharing option had been elected. Other expenses which are the subject to §1.861-8(e) are to be allocated and apportioned in accordance with that section. For example, interest expense (including payments made with respect to bonds issued by the Puerto Rico Industrial, Medical and Environmental Control Facilities Authority (AFICA)) is to be allocated and apportioned under §1.861-8(e)(2). The class of gross income to which marketing and distribution expenses relate and shall be allocated is generally to be defined by the same "product area" as is determined for the relevant research, development, and experimental expenses (i.e., the appropriate 3-digit SIC code) but shall include only gross income generated or reasonably expected to be generated from the geographic area or areas to which the expenses relate. Marketing and distribution expenses shall be apportioned on a fully-loaded basis which reflects, to a reasonably close extent, the factual relationship between these deductions and the statutory and residual groupings of gross income. Apportionment methods based upon comparisons of amounts incurred before ultimate sale of a product (including apportionment on a basis of comparison of costs of goods sold, other expenses incurred, or other comparisons set forth in §1.861-8(c)(1)(v), such as time spent) are not on a fully-loaded basis and do not reflect this required factual relationship. A comparison of units sold may be used only where the units are of the same or similar value and are, thus, in fact comparable. These deductions shall be apportioned on a basis of comparison of the amount of gross sales or receipts or another method which similarly reflects the required factual relationship.

The rules for allocation and apportionment of marketing and distribution expenses may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Assume that possessions corporation A manufactures pharmaceutical product #1 for resale by B, its U.S. parent corporation, in the United States, that B manufactures pharmaceutical products #2 and #3 in the United States for sale there, that all three products are within the same product area, and that marketing and distribution expenses are internally divided by B among the three products on the basis of time spent by sales persons of B on marketing of the three products, as follows:

Product #1	50x
Product #2	80x
Product #3	110x
TOTAL	240x

These expenses of 240x are allocated to gross income generated by all three products and shall be apportioned on the basis of gross sales or receipts of product #1 as compared to products #2 and #3 or another method which similarly reflects the factual relationship between these expenses and gross income derived from product #1 and products #2 and #3. Thus, if a sales method were used and sales of product #1 accounted for one-third of sales receipts from the three products, 80x (240 ÷ 3) of marketing and distribution expenses would be apportioned to the combined gross income from product #1.

The allocation of the remaining expenses, definitely related to a class of gross income, shall be made to the class of gross income to which they are definitely related. These expenses are apportioned on the basis of any reasonable method, as described §1.861-8(b)(3) and (c)(1). Examples of such methods may include, but are not limited to, those specified in §1.861-8(c)(1)(i) through (vi).

QUESTION 2: How may the allocation and apportionment of expenses to combined gross income be verified?

ANSWER 2: Substantiation of the allocation and apportionment of expenses will be required upon audit of the possessions corporation and affiliates. Detailed substantiation may be necessary, particularly where the entities are engaged in multiple lines of business involving distinct product areas. Sources of substantiation may include certified financial reports, Form 10-K's, annual reports, internal production reports, product line assembly work papers, and other relevant materials. In this regard, see §1.861-8(f)(5).

QUESTION 3: Does section 936(h) override the moratorium provided by section 223 of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 [Pub. L. 97-34, 1981-2 C.B. 256, 297]?

ANSWER 3: Yes. Thus, the allocation and apportionment of product area research described in question and answer 1 must be made without regard to the moratorium QUESTION 4: If a possessions corporation uses the profit split method to determine its taxable income from sales of a product, how does it determine its gross income for purposes of the 80-percent possession source test and the 65-percent active trade or business test of section 936(a)(2)?

ANSWER 4: One-half of the deductions of the affiliated group (other than foreign affiliates) which are used in determining the combined taxable income from sales of the product are added to the portion of the combined taxable income allocated to the possessions corporation in order to determine the possessions corporation's gross income from sales of such product.

QUESTION 5: How will income from intangibles related to a possession product be treated under the profit split method?

ANSWER 5: Combined taxable income of the possessions corporation and affiliated corporations from the sale of the possession product will include income attributable to all intangibles, including both manufacturing and marketing intangibles, associated with the product.

QUESTION 6: Can a possessions corporation apply the profit split option to a possession product if no U.S. affiliates derive income from the sale of the possession product?

ANSWER 6: Yes.

QUESTION 7: With respect to the factual situation discussed in question and answer 6, how is combined taxable income computed?

ANSWER 7: The profit split option is applied to the taxable income of the possessions corporation from sales of the possession product to foreign affiliates and unrelated persons. Fifty percent of that income is allocated to the possessions corporation, and the remainder is allocated to the appropriate affiliates as described in question and answer 11 of this paragraph (b)(1).

QUESTION 8: Does combined taxable income under the profit split option include amounts received from the sale of a possession product to other members of the affiliated group (other than foreign affiliates) if the possession product is not resold to a foreign affiliate or unrelated person?

ANSWER 8: No. Combined taxable income is computed only with respect to sales by members of the affiliated group (other than foreign affiliates) to persons who are not members of the affiliated group or to foreign affiliates. See section 936(h)(5)(C)(ii)(IV).

QUESTION 9: If the possession product is a component product, how is combined taxable income for such product to be determined?

ANSWER 9: The combined taxable income for the component product may be determined by actual prices from comparable uncontrolled transactions under §1.482-2(e)(2). If no comparable uncontrolled price for the possession product exists, then the gross receipts from sales of the possession product will be deemed to be the same proportion of the gross receipts from sales of the integrated product which the production costs for the possession product bear to the total production costs for the integrated product. The possessions corporation will determine its costs (other than costs incurred for materials purchased from a U.S. affiliate) attributable to the possession product and its expenses allocable and apportionable to the possession product under §1.861-8, as described in question and answer 1 of this paragraph (b)(1). Each member of the affiliated group that is a United States person, other than the possessions corporation, shall determine its costs (other than costs incurred for materials purchased from a U.S. affiliate) attributable to the possession product, and its expenses allocable and apportionable to the integrated product under §1.861-8, as described in question and answer 1 of this paragraph (b)(1). Each such United States person (other than the possessions corporation) shall apportion to the possession product, on the basis of the ratio of the production costs for the possession product to the total production costs for the integrated product, the expenses that such affiliate allocated and apportioned to the integrated product. Production costs will be the sum of direct and indirect production costs as defined for inventory accounting purposes under section 1.471-11(b), (c), and (d), except that they will not include the costs of materials.

Example. A possessions corporation, S, is engaged in the manufacture of microprocessors. S obtains a component from a U.S. affiliate, O. S sells its production to another U.S. affiliate, P, which incorporates the microprocessors into central processing units (CPUs). P transfers the CPUs to a U.S. affiliate, Q, which incorporates them into computers for sale to unrelated customers. S chooses to define the possession product as the CPUs. The combined taxable income for the CPUs is computed below on the basis of the given production, sales, and cost data:

Production costs (excluding costs of materials)
1. O's costs for the component	75
2. S's costs for the microprocessors	400
3. P's costs for the CPUs	125

QUESTION 10: If the possession product is an end-product form, how is the combined taxable income from the product determined?

ANSWER 10: Assume that the possessions corporation purchases components from a U.S. affiliate and incorporates them into a product X which is sold without further transformation to unrelated customers and foreign affiliates. The combined taxable income for the end-product form shall be determined by subtracting from the third party sales price or comparable uncontrolled sales price of X the following amounts: (1) the comparable uncontrolled sales price of the components and (2) all other costs allocable or apportionable to the end-product form. If no comparable uncontrolled prices for the components exist, then the combined taxable income for the possession product will be computed under the rules described in question and answer 9 of this §1.936-5(b)(1).

QUESTION 11: If the profit split option is elected, how is the portion of combined taxable income not allocated to the possessions corporation to be treated?

ANSWER 11: The income shall be allocated (1) to U.S. affiliates (other than tax-exempt affiliates) within the group (as determined under section 482) which derive income from the active conduct of a trade or business in the same product area as the possession product; or (2) if there are no such affiliates, to other U.S. affiliates (other than tax-exempt affiliates); or (3) if there are no U.S. affiliates (other than tax-exempt affiliates), to foreign affiliates which derive income from the active conduct of a trade or business in the same product area as the possession product (or, if the foreign members are resident in a country with which the U.S. has an income tax convention, then to those foreign members which have a permanent establishment in the U.S. which derives income in the same product area as the possession product); or (4) if there are no affiliates described in (1) through (3) above, then to all other affiliates. The allocations made under (1) and (3) above shall be made on the basis of the relative gross income derived by each such affiliate from the active conduct of the trade or business in the same product area, and allocations made under (2) and (4) above shall be made on the basis of the relative total gross income of each such affiliate. Income allocated to foreign affiliates shall be treated as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States. For purposes of determining a corporation's estimated tax liability with respect to income thus allocated, the general rules applicable to estimated tax payments shall apply.

QUESTION 12: How is the profit split option to be applied to properly account for costs incurred in a year with respect to products which are sold by the possessions corporation to a U.S. affiliate during such year, but are not resold by the U.S. affiliate to persons who are not members of the affiliated group or to foreign affiliates until a later year?

ANSWER 12: The rules under §1.994-1(c)(5) are to be applied. Incomplete transactions will not be taken into consideration in computing combined taxable income. Thus, for example, if in 1983, A, a possessions corporation, sells units of a product with a cost to A of $5000 to B corporation, its U.S. affiliate, which uses the dollar-value LIFO method of costing inventory, and B sells units with a cost of $4000 (representing A's cost) to C corporation, a foreign affiliate, only $4000 of such costs shall be taken into consideration in computing the combined taxable income of the possessions corporation and U.S. affiliates for 1983. If a specific goods LIFO inventory method is used by B, the determination of whether A's goods remain in B's inventory shall be based on whether B's specific goods LIFO grouping has experienced an increment or decrement for the year on the specific LIFO cost of such units, rather than on an average unit cost of such units. If the FIFO method of costing inventory is used by B, transfers may be based on the cost of the specific units transferred or on the average unit production cost of the units transferred, but in each case a FIFO flow assumption shall be used to identify the units transferred. For a determination of which goods are sold by taxpayers using the LIFO method, see question and answer 15.

QUESTION 13: If a possessions corporation purchases materials from an affiliate and computes combined taxable income for the possession product including such materials, how are those materials to be valued in the possessions corporation's inventory?

ANSWER 13: The cost of those materials is considered to be equal to the affiliate's FIFO cost, regardless of its inventory method.

QUESTION 14: If the possessions corporation uses the FIFO method of costing inventory and the U.S. affiliate uses the LIFO method of costing inventory, or vice versa, what method of costing inventory should be used in computing combined taxable income?

ANSWER 14: The possessions corporation's method of costing inventory determines the cost of the inventory for purposes of computing combined taxable income. However, the affiliate's method of costing determines when the possession product purchased by such affiliate is sold to a foreign affiliate or unrelated person. Thus, if the possessions corporation uses the dollar-value LIFO method, the cost of its inventory for purposes of computing combined taxable income will depend on whether its LIFO pool or pools experienced an increment or decrement in the year in which sales of its products are made to its U.S. affiliate. Appropriate ratios must be used in years where the sales of the possessions corporation come out of both current year's production and LIFO layers built up in prior years.

QUESTION 15: How are sales of a possession product by a U.S. affiliate determined for purposes of the profit split option if the U.S. affiliate includes purchases of the possession product in a dollar-value LIFO inventory pool (as provided under §1.472-8))?

ANSWER 15: The determination of whether the product acquired from the possessions corporation is sold by the U.S. affiliate is based on the U.S. affiliate's dollar-value LIFO pool. Thus, if there is no change in the level of the U.S. affiliate's pool which includes the possession product, or if any layers of the U.S. affiliate's pool are liquidated, then all units of the product acquired from the possessions corporation during that taxable year, as well as units of the product acquired from the possessions corporation in prior years based on any layers of the U.S. affiliate that are liquidated, are presumed to have been sold by the U.S. affiliate. If the inventory pool of the U.S. affiliate has an increment, the increment attributable to the possession product is determined by multiplying the increment by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction includes the purchases of the product made by the U.S. affiliate during the taxable year from the possessions corporation (determined on the basis of the possessions corporation's cost for its inventory purposes) plus any production costs (as defined in §1.471-11(b), (c), and (d), but not including costs of materials) incurred by the U.S. affiliate during the same period. The denominator of the fraction is the total purchases of the product made by the U.S. affiliate for the same period from all sources, with purchases of units of the possession product and any value added by the affiliate in production during the same period, valued as described above. Sales of a possession product are then determined by multiplying the total sales of the product by the U.S. affiliate by a fraction, the numerator of which is the increment in the U.S. affiliate's pool attributable to the possession product and the denominator of which is the increment in the U.S. affiliate's pool attributable to purchases from all sources.

(2) Pre-TEFRA inventory.

QUESTION 1: How is pre-TEFRA inventory to be determined if the profit split option is elected and the FIFO method of costing inventory is used by the U.S. affiliate?

ANSWER 1: Pre-TEFRA inventory is inventory which was produced by the possessions corporation and transferred to a U.S. affiliate prior to the possessions corporation's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1982. Pre-TEFRA inventory will not be included for purposes of the profit split option. If the U.S. affiliate uses the FIFO method of costing inventory, the pre-TEFRA inventory will be treated as the first inventory sold by the U.S. affiliate during the first year in which section 936(h) applies and will not be included in the computation of combined taxable income for purposes of the profit split option. The treatment of pre-TEFRA inventory when FIFO costing is used by both the U.S. affiliate and the possessions corporation is illustrated by the following example in which FIFO unit costing is used:

Example. Assume the following:

	X Possessions corporation		Y U.S. affiliate
	No. of Units	Cost per Unit	No. of Units	Cost per Unit
Beginning inventory	500	$150	200	$225
Units produced during 1983	1000	$200	—	—
Ending inventory	400	$200	300	—

In 1983, the beginning inventory of X, a possessions corporation, is 500 units with a unit cost of $150 and the beginning inventory of Y, the U.S. affiliate, is 200 units with a unit cost of $225 which represents the section 482 price paid by Y. Y's beginning inventory in 1983 represents purchases made in 1982 of products produced by X in that year. Y sells all the units it purchases from X to Z, a foreign affiliate. In 1983, X produces 1000 units at a unit cost of $200 and sells 1100 units to Y (the difference between 1500 units representing X's 1983 beginning inventory (500) and the units produced by X in 1983 (1000) less X's ending inventory of 400 units). Of the 1100 units sold by X to Y in 1983, only 800 units (and not 1000 units) which were sold by Y to Z are taken into consideration in computing combined taxable income for 1983. Since FIFO costing by the possessions corporation is used, the cost is $150 per unit for the first 500 units and $200 per unit for the remaining 300 units. The 200 units sold by X to Y in 1982 are pre-TEFRA inventory and are not included in the computation of combined taxable income for 1983. They are also treated as the first units sold by Y to Z in 1983. This inventory has a unit cost of $225, which reflects the section 482 transfer price from X to Y in 1982. Y's 1983 ending inventory of 300 units will not be taken into consideration in computing the combined taxable income of X and Y for 1983 because the units have not been sold to a foreign affiliate or to persons who are not members of the affiliated group. In a subsequent year when the units are sold to Z, the cost to X and selling price to Z of these units will enter into the computation of combined taxable income for that year.

QUESTION 2: How is pre-TEFRA inventory to be determined if the profit split option is elected and the LIFO method of costing inventory is used by the U.S. affiliate?

ANSWER 2: Pre-TEFRA inventory will not be included for purposes of the profit split option. If the U.S. affiliate uses the LIFO method (either dollar-value or specific goods LIFO), pre-TEFRA inventory will be treated as inventory sold by the U.S. affiliate in the year in which the U.S. affiliate's LIFO layer containing pre-TEFRA LIFO inventory is liquidated, and shall not be included in the computation of combined taxable income for such years for purposes of the profit split option. The treatment of pre-TEFRA inventory where the dollar-value LIFO method is used by both the U.S. affiliate and the possessions corporation is illustrated by the following example:

Example. Assume the following for 1983:

	X Possessions Corporation Dollar-Value LIFO Cost of Inventory	Y U.S. Affiliate Dollar-Value LIFO Cost of Inventory
Beginning inventory	$ 5,000*	$ 4,000*
Dollar-value LIFO cost of inventory produced during 1983	$20,000	$ 5,000
Ending inventory	$ 4,000	$ 3,000

At the beginning of 1983, X, a possessions corporation, has a dollar-value LIFO pool containing a possession product with a single base layer of $5000. The beginning inventory of Y, its U.S. affiliate, in the preceding year consists of a single pool containing such possession product in a single base layer in the amount of $4000, which represents the section 482 price paid by Y. Y sells all its purchases of the possession product to Z, a foreign affiliate. In 1983, X produces additional inventory of the product with a cost of $20,000 and sells inventory with a dollar-value LIFO cost of $21,000 to Y. X's inventory at the end of 1983 has a dollar-value LIFO cost of $4000. In 1983, Y incurs $5000 of production costs and sells inventory with a dollar-value LIFO cost of $27,000 to Z, of which $26,000 of inventory is taken into consideration in computing combined taxable income. $1000 of inventory represents pre-TEFRA inventory resulting from the liquidation of a LIFO layer and is not included in the computation of combined taxable income for 1983. Instead, any income associated with the sale of the pre-TEFRA inventory is taxed to the U.S. affiliate in the year of sale (in this case, 1983).

(c) Covered Intangibles.

QUESTION 1: What are "covered intangibles" under section 936(h)(5)(C)(i)(II)?

ANSWER 1: The term "covered intangibles" means (1) intangible property developed in a possession solely by the possessions corporation and owned by it (2) manufacturing intangible property (described in section 936(h)(3)(B)(i)) which is acquired by the possessions corporation from unrelated persons, and (3) any other intangible property (described in section 936(h)(3)(B)(ii) through (v), to the extent not described in section 936(h)(3)(B)(i)) which relates to sales of products or services to unrelated persons for ultimate consumption or use in the possession in which the possessions corporation conducts its business. The possessions corporation is treated as the owner of covered intangibles for purposes of obtaining a return thereon.

QUESTION 2: Do covered intangibles include manufacturing intangible property which is acquired by a U.S. affiliate and subsequently transferred to the possessions corporation?

ANSWER 2: No. In order for a manufacturing intangible to be treated as a covered intangible, the intangible property must be acquired directly by the possessions corporation from an unrelated person.

QUESTION 3: If a possessions corporation licenses a manufacturing intangible from an unrelated party, will the licensed intangible be treated as a covered intangible?

ANSWER 3: No.

QUESTION 4: How is ultimate consumption or use determined for purposes of the definition of covered intangibles?

ANSWER 4: A product will be treated as having its ultimate use or consumption in a possession if it is sold by the possessions corporation to an unrelated person in a possession and is not resold or used or consumed outside of the possession within one year after the date of the sale.

QUESTION 5: Are sales of products that relate to covered intangibles excluded from the cost sharing fraction?

ANSWER 5: If no intangibles other than covered intangibles are associated with the possession product, then sales of such product will be excluded from the cost sharing fraction. If both covered and non-covered intangibles are associated with the possession product, then sales of such product will be included in the cost sharing fraction.

QUESTION 6: If the cost sharing option is elected, is it necessary for the possessions corporation to be the legal owner of covered intangibles described in section 936(h)(5)(C)(i)(II)(c) related to the product in order for the possessions corporation to receive a full return with respect to such intangibles?

ANSWER 6: No. For purposes of section 936(h), it is immaterial whether such covered intangibles are owned by the possessions corporation or by another member of the affiliated group. Moreover, if the legal owner of such covered intangibles which are subject to section 936(h)(5) is an affiliate of the possessions corporation, such person will not be required to charge an arm's-length royalty under section 482 to its possessions corporation.

§1.936-7 Manner of making election under section 936(h)(5); special election for export sales; revocation of election under section 936(a).

The rules in this section apply for purposes of section 936(h) and also for purposes of section 934(e), where applicable.

(a) Manner of making election.

QUESTION 1: How does a possessions corporation make an election to use the cost sharing method or profit split method?

ANSWER 1: A possessions corporation makes an election to use the cost sharing or profit split method by filing Form 5712-A and attaching it to its tax return. Form 5712-A must be filed on or before the due date (including extensions) of the tax return of the possessions corporation for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1982. The electing corporation must set forth on the form the name and the taxpayer identification number or address of all members of the affiliated group (including foreign affiliates not required to file a U.S. tax return). All members of the affiliated group must consent to the election. An authorized officer of the electing corporation must sign the statement of election and must declare that he has received a signed statement of consent from an authorized officer of each member of the affiliated group. The election is not valid unless all affiliates consent, and unless an amended Form 5712-A is filed and attached to the timely filed possessions corporation's income tax return (including extensions) to reflect any changes in the names or number of corporations in the affiliated group.

*Assume that there is no layer of increment and that this represents the base layer.

QUESTION 2: May the "election out" under section 936(h)(5) be made on a product-by-product basis, or must it be made on a wider basis?

ANSWER 2: An electing corporation is required to treat products in the same product area in the same manner. Similarly, all possessions corporations in the same affiliated group that produce any products or render any services in the same product area must make the same election for all products that fall within the same product area. However, §1.936-7(b) provides that the electing corporation may make a different election for export sales than for domestic sales. The electing corporation or corporations may also make different elections for products that fall within different product areas.

QUESTION 3: May the possessions corporation elect to define product area more narrowly than the 3-digit SIC code?

ANSWER 3: No. Certain alternatives, such as the 4-digit SIC code, would not be permitted under the statute. However, other methods for defining product area may be considered by the Commissioner in the future.

QUESTION 4: May a possessions corporation make an election out under the cost sharing method with respect to a product area if the affiliated group incurs no research, development or experimental costs in that product area?

ANSWER 4: Yes. In that case the cost sharing payment will be zero.

QUESTION 5: If the significant business presence test is not satisfied for a product or type of service within the product area covered by the election, what rules will apply with respect to that product?

ANSWER 5: If a cost sharing election has been made with respect to the product area, the cost sharing payment will not be reduced. However, with respect to the product which does not satisfy the significant business presence test, the provisions of section 936(h)(1) through (h)(4) will apply to the allocation of income.

QUESTION 6: Is a taxpayer permitted to make a change of election on a prospective basis with respect to the cost sharing and profit split methods?

ANSWER 6: In general, once the election is properly made, it is binding (including upon any later created affiliates), and revocation is only permitted with the consent of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. However, a taxpayer will be permitted to change its election once from the cost sharing method to the profit split method, or vice versa, without consent of the Commissioner if the change is made before January 1, 1986, or within 90 days after [the date of publication of final regulations under section 936(h)(5)(C)(i) and (ii)], whichever is later. A change of election will be treated as an election subject to the procedures set forth above and to section 481 of the Internal Revenue Code.

QUESTION 7: If the Commissioner determines that a possessions corporation does not meet the 80-percent possession source test or the 65-percent active trade or business test (the "qualification tests") for any taxable year beginning after 1982, under what circumstances is the possessions corporation permitted to make a distribution of property after the close of its taxable year to meet the qualification tests?

ANSWER 7: A possessions corporation may make a pro rate distribution of property to its shareholders after the close of the taxable year if the Commissioner determines that the possessions corporation does not satisfy the qualification tests (a) by reason of the exclusion from gross income of intangible income under section 936(h)(1)(B) or section 936(h)(5)(C)(i)(II) or (b) by reason of the allocation to the shareholders of the possessions corporation of income under section 936(h)(5)(C)(ii)(III); provided, however, that the determination of the Commissioner does not contain a finding that the failure of such corporation to satisfy the qualification tests was due, in whole or in part, to fraud with intent to evade tax or willful neglect on the part of the possessions corporation. The possessions corporation must designate the distribution at the time the distribution is made as a distribution to meet qualification requirements, and it will be subject to the provisions of section 936(h)(4). Such distributions will not qualify for the dividends received deduction.

(b) Separate election for export sales.

QUESTION 1: What methods of computing income can a possessions corporation use under the separate election for export sales?

ANSWER 1: The only two methods which are available under the separate election for export sales are the cost sharing method and the profit split method.

QUESTION 2: What is the definition of export sales for purposes of the separate election for export sales?

ANSWER 2: The determination of export sales is based upon the destination of the product, i.e., where it is to be used or consumed. If the product is sold to a U.S. affiliate, it will be treated as an export sale only if resold or otherwise transferred abroad to a foreign person (including a foreign affiliate or foreign branch of a U.S. affiliate) within one year from the date of sale to the U.S. affiliate for ultimate use or consumption outside the United States as provided under §1.954-3(a)(3)(ii).

QUESTION 3: Assume that a possessions corporation sells a product to both foreign affiliates and foreign branches of U.S. affiliates. In addition, it sells the product to its U.S. parent for resale in the U.S. The possessions corporation makes a profit split election for domestic sales and a cost sharing election for export sales. Will the sales to foreign branches of U.S. affiliates be treated as exports subject to the cost sharing method or as domestic sales subject the profit split method?

ANSWER 3: The sales to a foreign branch of a U.S. corporation are exports if for ultimate use or consumption outside of the United States as provided under §1.954-3(a)(3)(ii).

QUESTION 4: Under what circumstances may a possessions corporation make the separate election under section 936(h)(5)(F)(iv)(II) for computing its income from products exported to a foreign person when the income derived by such foreign person on the resale of such products is included in foreign base company income under section 954(a)?

ANSWER 4: If the income derived by a foreign person on the resale of products manufactured, in whole or in part, by a possessions corporation is included in foreign base company income under section 954(a), then the possessions corporation may make the separate export election under section 936(h)(5)(F)(iv)(II) for computing its income from such products only if such foreign person has been formed or is availed of for substantial business reasons that are unrelated to an affiliated corporation's U.S. tax liability. For purposes of the preceding sentence, a foreign person will be considered to be formed or availed of for such substantial business reasons if the foreign person in the normal course of business purchases substantial quantities of products from both the possessions corporation and its affiliates for resale, and, in addition, provides support services for affiliated companies such as centralized testing, marketing of products, management of local currency exposures, or other similar services. However, a foreign person that purchases and resells products only from a possessions corporation is presumed to be formed or availed of for other than such substantial business reasons, even if the foreign person provides additional services.

QUESTION 5: When will the "manufacturing" test set forth in subsection (d)(1)(A) of section 954 be applicable to the export sales of a product of a possessions corporation which makes a separate election for export sales?

ANSWER 5: An electing corporation will be required to meet the "manufacturing" test set forth in subsection (d)(1)(A) of section 954 with respect to export sales of its product in each taxable year in which the separate election for export sales is in effect.

(c) Revocation of election under section 936(a).

QUESTION 1: When may an election under section 936(a) be revoked?

ANSWER 1: An election under section 936(a) may be revoked during the first ten years of section 936 status only with the consent of the Commissioner, and without the Commissioner's consent after that time. The Commissioner hereby consents to all requests for revocation that are made with respect to the taxpayer's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1982 provided that the section 936(a) election was in effect for the corporation's last taxable year beginning before January 1, 1983, if the taxpayer agrees not to re-elect section 936(a) prior to its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1988. A taxpayer that wishes to revoke a section 936(a) election under the terms of the blanket revocation must attach a "Statement of Revocation—Section 936" to the taxpayer's timely filed return (including extensions) and must state that in revoking the election the taxpayer agrees not to re-elect section 936(a) prior to its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1988. Other requests to revoke not covered by the Commissioner's blanket consent should be addressed to the District Director having jurisdiction over the taxpayer's tax return.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Information Returns Required of Certain Foreign-owned Corporations and Information Returns Required of United States Persons With Respect to Certain Foreign Corporations

LR-201-82

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations relating to information returns required of United States persons with respect to certain foreign corporations, and information returns required of certain foreign-owned corporations with respect to transactions with related corporations, under sections 6038 and 6038A, respectively, of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. These proposed regulations set forth the requirements for who must report, the information required to be reported, the time and manner for filing the information returns, and penalties for failure to report information. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 [Pub. L. 97-248, 1982-2 C.B. 462]. These regulations would provide the public with the guidance needed to comply with that Act.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by February 17, 1984. The amendments under section 6038 with respect to penalties are proposed to be effective for information required with respect to annual accounting periods of the foreign corporations ending after September 3, 1982. The remaining amendments under section 6038 are proposed to be effective for taxable years beginning after the date that is 30 days after publication of final regulations pursuant to this notice of proposed rulemaking. The amendments under section 6038A are proposed to be effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under sections 6038 and 6038A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. These amendments are proposed to conform the regulations to sections 338 and 339 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (96 Stat. 631) [1982-2 C.B. 462, 576, 577] and are to be issued under the authority contained in sections 6038 (74 Stat. 1010, 26 U.S.C. §6038), 6038A (96 Stat. 631, 26 U.S.C. §6038A), and 7805 (68A Stat. 917, 26 U.S.C. §7805) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

DESCRIPTION OF PROPOSED REGULATIONS

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO REGULATION §1.6038-2

Section 6038 requires that certain information be reported by every United States person with respect to any foreign corporation which such person controls. Current regulations under section 6038 describe the taxpayers that must report, the information to be reported, the time and manner for filing returns, and a penalty of reduction of creditable foreign taxes for failure to furnish required information. The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 added a dollar amount penalty to section 6038 of the Code, in addition to the existing foreign tax credit penalty, because the existing penalty is complicated and was perceived as being unduly harsh or potentially ineffective depending on the circumstances. The new penalty can be more uniformly applied to various taxpayers, while the other penalty is retained as an alternative for its potentially significant effect. If creditable taxes are reduced under the foreign tax credit penalty, the amount of the reduction is decreased by the amount of the dollar amount penalty which is imposed.

The proposed amendments incorporate the new penalty provision into the regulation and also update the regulation to reflect other changes in the relevant tax law and tax forms. Changes have also been made to clarify the descriptions of the information that should be reported concerning sales and purchases of stock in trade and other tangible property and concerning loan transactions.

PROPOSED REGULATION §1.6038A-1

Section 6038A requires that certain information be reported by every corporation that is controlled by a foreign person and is either a domestic corporation or is a foreign corporation engaged in a trade or business within the United States (reporting corporations). Section 6038A gives the Secretary authority to prescribe by regulations: (1) the information which is required to be reported with respect to identification of related corporations (domestic or foreign) with which the reporting corporation has had transactions, and with respect to transactions between the reporting corporation and related foreign corporations, and (2) the time and manner for reporting such information. The purpose of this requirement is to facilitate determinations by the Internal Revenue Service as to whether income is being accurately reported and whether adjustments under section 482 are needed to prevent evasion of taxes or clearly to reflect the income of certain corporations.

The proposed regulation requires every reporting corporation to make a separate annual information return for each related corporation with which the reporting corporation has had a transaction during the taxable year. The proposed regulation describes reporting corporations and related corporations, and requires reporting of information about the reporting corporation and the related corporation. It also requires reporting of information about transactions between the reporting corporation and each related corporation that is a foreign corporation. The information to be reported includes the location of the related corporation's books and records, the relationship between the reporting corporation and related corporation, a summary of the monetary consideration paid and monetary consideration received for transactions between the reporting corporation and related foreign corporations, and a description of any transactions between the reporting corporation and related foreign corporations which involved non-monetary consideration or no consideration. An exception is provided for transactions which would not affect any United States income tax liability.

The proposed regulation prescribes that the required returns are to be filed with the reporting corporation's income tax return. The proposed regulation also sets forth the penalties for failure to timely provide information required under section 6038A, and describes how those penalties may be avoided or reduced by showing reasonable cause for failure to comply with this reporting requirement. The regulation is proposed to be effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982.

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting as final regulations the proposed regulations referred to in this document, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably seven copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the Federal Register.

The collection of information requirements contained in this notice of proposed rulemaking have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for review under section 3504(h) of the Paperwork Reduction Act. Comments on these requirements should be sent to the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs of OMB, Attention: Desk Officer for Internal Revenue Service, New Executive Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20503. The Internal Revenue Service requests that persons submtting comments on these requirements to OMB also send copies of those comments to the Service.

CERTIFICATION OF NONAPPLICABILITY OF REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT OF 1980 AND EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Secretary of the Treasury has certified that these regulations will not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities and are, therefore, not subject to the requirements of the Regulatory Flexibility Act of 1980 (5 U.S.C. chapter 6). These regulations will generally only affect United States persons that have significant holdings in foreign corporations and certain foreign-owned corporations that have transactions with related corporations. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that these proposed rules are not major regulations subject to Executive Order 12291.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations is David J. Dean of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of the Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, on matters of both substance and style.

Proposed amendments to the regulations.

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are as follows:

Paragraph 1. Section 1.6038-2 is revised to read as follows:

§1.6038-2 Information returns required of United States persons with respect to annual accounting periods of certain foreign corporations beginning after December 31, 1962.

(a) Requirement of return. Every U.S. person shall make a separate annual information return with respect to each annual accounting period (described in paragraph (e) of this section) beginning after December 31, 1962, of each foreign corporation which that person controls (as defined in paragraph (b) of this section) for an uninterrupted period of 30 days or more during such annual accounting period. Such information shall not be required to be furnished, however, with respect to a corporation defined in section 1504(d) of the Code which makes a consolidated return for the taxable year. The return shall be made, with respect to annual accounting periods ending with or within the United States person's taxable year, on—

(1) Form 2952 if such taxable year ends before December 31, 1982,

(2) Form 5471 if such taxable year ends on or after December 31, 1983, or

(3) Either Form 5471 or Form 2952 if such taxable year ends on or after December 31, 1982 and before December 31, 1983.

(b) Control. A person shall be deemed to be in control of a foreign corporation if at any time during that person's taxable year it owns stock possessing more than 50 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote, or more than 50 percent of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of the foreign corporation. A person in control of a corporation which, in turn, owns more than 50 percent of the combined voting power, or of the value, of all classes of stock of another corporation is also treated as being in control of such other corporation. The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Corporation A owns 51 percent of the voting stock in Corporation B. Corporation B owns 51 percent of the voting stock in Corporation C. Corporation C in turn owns 51 percent of the voting stock in Corporation D. Corporation D is controlled by Corporation A.

(c) Attribution rules. For the purpose of determining control of domestic or foreign corporations the constructive ownership rules of section 318(a) shall apply, except that:

(1) Stock owned by or for a partner or a beneficiary of an estate or trust shall not be considered owned by the partnership, estate, or trust when the effect is to consider a United States person as owning stock owned by a person who is not a United States person;

(2) A corporation will not be considered as owning stock owned by or for a 50 percent or more shareholder, when the effect is to consider a United States person as owning stock owned by a person who is not a United States person; and

(3) If 10 percent or more in value of the stock in a corporation is owned, directly or indirectly by or for any person, section 318(a)(2)(C) shall apply.

The constructive ownership rules of section 318(a) apply only for purposes of determining control as defined in paragraph (b) of this section.

(d) U.S. person. For purposes of section 6038 and this section, the term "United States person" has the meaning assigned to it by section 7701(a)(30) of the Code, except that—

(1) With respect to a corporation organized under the laws of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, such term does not include an individual who is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico, if a dividend received by such individual during the taxable year from such corporation would be excluded from gross income under section 933(1),

(2) With respect to a corporation organized under the laws of the Virgin Islands, such term does not include an individual who is a bona fide resident of the Virgin Islands and whose income tax obligation under subtitle A (relating to income taxes) of the Code for the taxable year is satisfied pursuant to section 28(a) of the Revised Organic Act of the Virgin Islands, approved July 22, 1954 (48 U.S.C. 1642), by paying tax on income derived from all sources both within and outside the Virgin Islands into the treasury of the Virgin Islands,

(3) With respect to a corporation organized under the laws of Guam or the Northern Mariana Islands, such term does not include an individual who is a bona fide resident of Guam or the Northern Mariana Islands, respectively, and who is relieved of liability for income tax to the United States under section 935(c)(3) of the Code or section 601 of the Covenant to Establish a Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands in Political Union with the United States of America (P.L. 94-241), respectively, for such individual's taxable year referred to in paragraph (e) of this section, and

(4) With respect to a corporation organized under the laws of any possession of the United States (other than Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, or the Virgin Islands), such term does not include an individual who is a bona fide resident of such possession for the entire taxable year and whose income derived from sources within any possession of the United States is not, by reason of section 931(a), includible in gross income under subtitle A (relating to income taxes) of the Code for the taxable year.

An individual for whom an election under section 6013(g) or (h) is in effect shall, subject to the exceptions contained in this paragraph (d), be considered a United States person for purposes of section 6038 and this section.

(e) Period covered by return. The information required under paragraphs (f) and (g) of this section with respect to a foreign corporation shall be furnished for the annual accounting period of the foreign corporation ending with or within the United States person's taxable year. For purposes of this section, the annual accounting period of a foreign corporation is the annual period on the basis of which that corporation regularly computes its income in keeping its books. The term "annual accounting period" may refer to a period of less than one year, where, for example, the foreign income, war profits, and excess profits taxes are determined on the basis of an accounting period of less than one year as described in section 902(c)(2). If more than one annual accounting period ends with or within the United States person's taxable year, separate annual information returns shall be submitted for each annual accounting period.

(f) Contents of return. The return on Form 2952 or Form 5471 shall contain the following information with respect to each foreign corporation:

(1) The name, address, and employer identification number, if any, of the corporation;

(2) The principal place of business of the corporation;

(3) The date of incorporation and the country under whose laws incorporated;

(4) The name and address of the foreign corporation's statutory or resident agent in the country of incorporation;

(5) The name, address, and identifying number of any branch office or agent of the foreign corporation located in the United States;

(6) The name and address of the person (or persons) having custody of the books of account and records of the foreign corporation, and the location of such books and records if different from such address;

(7) The nature of the corporation's business and the principal places where conducted;

(8) As regards the outstanding stock of the corporation—

(i) A description of each class of the corporation's stock, and

(ii) The number of shares of each class outstanding at the beginning and end of the annual accounting period;

(9) A list showing the name, address, and identifying number of, and the number of shares of each class of the corporation's stock held by, each United States person who is a shareholder owning at any time during the annual accounting period 5 percent or more in value of any class of the corporation's outstanding stock;

(10) For the annual accounting period, the amount of the corporation's:

(i) Current earnings and profits;

(ii) Foreign income, war profits, and excess profits taxes paid or accrued;

(iii) Distributions out of current earnings and profits for the period; and

(iv) Distributions other than those described in paragraph (f)(10)(iii) of this section and the source thereof;

(11) A summary showing the total amount of each of the following types of transactions of the corporation, which took place during the annual accounting period, with the person required to file this return, any other corporation controlled by that person, or any United States person owning at the time of the transaction 10 percent or more in value of any class of stock outstanding of the foreign corporation; or of any corporation controlling that foreign corporation:

(i) Sales and purchases of stock in trade;

(ii) Purchases of tangible property other than stock in trade;

(iii) Sales and purchases of patents, inventions, models, or designs (whether or not patented), copyrights, trademarks, secret formulas or processes, or any other similar property rights;

(iv) Compensation paid and compensation received for the rendition of technical, managerial, engineering, construction, scientific, or like services;

(v) Commissions paid and commissions received;

(vi) Rents and royalties paid and rents and royalties received;

(vii) Amounts loaned and amounts borrowed (except open accounts resulting from sales and purchases reported under other items listed in this paragraph (f)(11) that arise and are collected in full in the ordinary course of business);

(viii) Dividends paid and dividends received;

(ix) Interest paid and interest received; and

(x) Premiums received for insurance or reinsurance; and

(12) Such other information as the form shall prescribe which is similar or related in nature to that specified in paragraph (f)(1) through (f)(11) of this section.

For purposes of paragraph (f)(11) of this section, if the United States person is a bank, as defined in section 581, or is controlled within the meaning of section 368(c) by a bank, the term "transactions" shall not, as to a corporation with respect to which a return is filed, include banking transactions entered into on behalf of customers; in any event, however, deposits in accounts between a foreign corporation, controlled (within the meaning of paragraph (b) of this section) by a United States person, and a person described in paragraph (f)(11) of this section and withdrawals from such accounts shall be summarized by reporting end-of-month balances.

(g) Financial statements. The following information with respect to the foreign corporation shall be attached to and filed as part of the return required by this section:

(1) A statement of the corporation's profit and loss for the annual accounting period;

(2) A balance sheet as of the end of the annual accounting period of the corporation showing—

(i) The corporation's assets,

(ii) The corporation's liabilities,

(iii) The corporation's net worth;

(3) An analysis of changes in the corporation's surplus accounts during the annual accounting period including both opening and closing balances. This information listed in this paragraph (g) shall be prepared in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles, and in such form and detail as is customary for the corporation's accounting records.

(h) Method of reporting. All amounts furnished under paragraphs (f) and (g) of this section shall be expressed in United States currency with a statement of the exchange rates used. All statements submitted on or with the return required under this section shall be rendered in the English language.

(i) Time and place for filing return. Returns on Form 2952 or Form 5471 required under paragraph (a) of this section shall be filed with the United States person's income tax return on or before the date required by law for the filing of that person's income tax return. District directors are authorized to grant reasonable extensions of time for filing returns on Form 2952 or Form 5471 in accordance with the applicable provisions of §1.6081-1 of this chapter. An application for an extension of time for filing a return of income shall also be considered as an application for an extension of time for filing returns on Form 2952 or Form 5471.

(j) Two or more persons required to submit the same information—(1) Return jointly made. If two or more persons are required to furnish information with respect to the same foreign corporation for the same period, such persons may, in lieu of making separate returns, jointly make one return. Such joint return shall be filed with the income tax return of any one of the persons making such joint return.

(2) Persons excepted from furnishing information—(i) Conditions. Any person required to furnish information under this section with respect to a foreign corporation need not furnish that information provided all of the following conditions are met:

(A) Such person does not directly own an interest in the foreign corporation;

(B) Such person is required to furnish the information solely by reason of attribution of stock ownership from a United States person under paragraph (c) of this section; and

(C) The person from whom the stock ownership is attributed furnishes all of the information required under this section of the person to whom the stock ownership is attributed.

(ii) Illustrations. The rule of this paragraph (j)(2) is illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, a U.S. person owns 100 percent of the stock of M, a domestic corporation. A also owns 100 percent of the stock of N, a foreign corporation organized under the laws of foreign country Y. A, in filing the information return required by this section with respect to N Corporation, in fact furnishes all of the information required of M Corporation with respect to N Corporation. M Corporation need not file the information.

Example (2). X, a domestic corporation, owns 100 percent of the stock of Y, a domestic corporation. Y Corporation owns 100 percent of the stock of Z, a foreign corporation. X Corporation is not excused by this paragraph (j)(2) from filing information with respect to Z Corporation because X Corporation is deemed to control Z Corporation under the provisions of paragraph (b) of this section without recourse to the attribution rules in paragraph (c) of this section.

(3) Statement required. Any United States person required to furnish information under this section with his return who does not do so by reason of the provisions of paragraph (j)(1) or (j)(2) of this section shall file a statement with his return indicating that such liability has been (or, in the case of a joint return made under paragraph (j)(1) of this section, will be) satisfied and identifying the return with which the information was or will be filed and the place of filing.

(k) Failure to furnish information—

(1) Dollar amount penalty—(i) In general. If any person required to file Form 2952 or Form 5471 under section 6038 and this section fails to furnish any information described in paragraphs (f) and (g) of this section within the time prescribed by paragraph (i) of this section, such person shall pay a penalty of $1,000 for each annual accounting period of each foreign corporation with respect to which such failure occurs.

(ii) Increase in penalty for continued failure after notification. If a failure described in paragraph (k)(1)(i) of this section continues for more than 90 days after the date on which the district director mails notice of such failure to the person required to file Form 2952 or Form 5471, such person shall pay a penalty of $1,000, in addition to the penalty imposed by section 6038(b)(1) and paragraph (k)(1)(i) of this section, for each 30-day period (or fraction thereof) during which such failure continues after such 90-day period has expired. The additional penalty imposed by section 6038(b)(2) and this paragraph (k)(1)(ii) shall be limited to a maximum of $24,000 for each failure.

(iii) Effective date. The penalty imposed by section 6038(b) and this paragraph (k)(1) shall apply with respect to information for annual accounting periods ending after September 3, 1982.

(2) Penalty of reducing foreign tax credit—(i) Effect on foreign tax credit. Failure of a United States person to furnish, in accordance with the provisions of this section, any return or any information in any return, required to be filed for a taxable year under authority of section 6038 on or before the date prescribed in paragraph (i) of this section may affect the application of section 901 as provided in paragraph (k)(2)(ii) of this section and may affect the application of sections 902 and 960 as provided in paragraph (k)(2)(iii) of this section. Such failure may affect the application of sections 902 and 960 to any such United States person which is a corporation or to any person who acquires from any other person any portion (but only to the extent of such portion) of the interest of such other person in any such foreign corporation.

(ii) Application of section 901. In the application of section 901 to a United States person referred to in paragraph (k)(2)(i) of this section, the amount of taxes paid or deemed paid by such person for any taxable year, with or within which the annual accounting period of a foreign corporation for which such person failed to furnish information required under this section ended may be reduced by 10 percent. However, no tax reduced under paragraph (k)(2)(iii) of this section or deemed paid under section 904(c) shall be reduced under the provisions of this paragraph (k)(2)(ii).

(iii) Application of sections 902 and 960. In the application of sections 902 and 960 to a United States person referred to in paragraph (k)(2)(i) of this section for any taxable year, the amount of taxes paid or deemed paid by each foreign corporation for the accounting period or periods for which such person was required for the taxable year of the failure to furnish information under this section may be reduced by 10 percent. The 10-percent reduction is not limited to the taxes paid or deemed paid by the foreign corporation with respect to which there is a failure to file information but may apply to the taxes paid or deemed paid by all foreign corporations controlled by that person. In applying subsections (a) and (b) of section 902, and in applying subsection (a) of section 960, the reduction provided by this paragraph (k)(2) shall not apply for purposes of determining the amount of accumulated profits in excess of income, war profits, and, excess profits taxes.

(iv) Reduction for continued failure after notice. (A) If the failure referred to in paragraph (k)(2)(i) of this section continues for more than 90 days after the date on which the district director mails notice of such failure to such United States person, then the amount of the reduction referred to in paragraph (k)(2)(ii) and (iii) of this section may be 10 percent plus an additional 5 percent for each 3-month period, or fraction thereof, during which such failure continues after the expiration of such 90-day period.

(B) No taxes shall be reduced under this paragraph (k)(2) more than once for the same failure. Taxes paid by a foreign corporation when once reduced for a failure shall not be reduced again for the same failure in their status as taxes deemed paid by a corporate shareholder. Where a failure continues, each additional periodic 5-percent reduction, referred to in paragraph (k)(2)(iv)(A) of this section, shall be considered as part of the one reduction.

(v) Limitation on reduction of foreign tax credit. The amount of the reduction under this paragraph (k)(2) for each failure to furnish information with respect to a foreign corporation as required under this section shall not exceed the greater of:

(A) $10,000, or

(B) The income of the foreign corporation for its annual accounting period with respect to which the failure occurs.

For purposes of this section if a person is required to furnish information with respect to more than one foreign corporation, controlled (within the meaning of paragraph (b) of this section) by that person, each failure to submit information for each such corporation constitutes a separate failure.

(vi) Offset for dollar amount penalty imposed. The total amount of the reduction or reductions which, but for this paragraph (k)(2)(vi), may be made under this paragraph (k)(2) with respect to any separate failure, shall not exceed the maximum amount of such reductions which may be imposed, reduced (but not below zero) by the amount of the dollar amount penalty imposed by paragraph (k)(1) of this section with respect to such separate failure.

(3) Reasonable cause—(i) For purposes of section 6038(b) and (c) and this section, the time prescribed for furnishing information under paragraph (i) of this section, and the beginning of the 90-day period after mailing of notice by the district director under paragraph (k)(1)(ii) and (k)(2)(iv)(A) of this section, shall be treated as being not earlier than the last day on which reasonable cause existed for failure to furnish the information.

(ii) To show that reasonable cause existed for failure to furnish information as required by section 6038 and this section, the person required to report such information must make an affirmative showing of all facts alleged as reasonable cause for such failure in a written statement containing a declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury. The statement must be filed with the district director for the district or the director of the service center where the return is required to be filed. The district director or the director of the service center shall determine whether the failure to furnish information was due to reasonable cause, and if so, the period of time for which such reasonable cause existed.

(4) Other penalties. The information required by section 6038 and this section must be furnished even though there are no foreign taxes which would be reduced under the provisions of this section, and even though the information required may not affect the amount of any tax due under the Internal Revenue Code.

For criminal penalties for failure to file a return and filing a false or fraudulent return, see sections 7203, 7206, and 7207 of the Code.

(5) Illustrations. The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). M, a domestic corporation, owns 100 percent of the stock of N, a foreign corporation. Both M and N use the calendar year as a taxable year and annual accounting period, and all of the following events occur in or with respect to the 1980 taxable year. The dividend from N is the only dividend from a foreign corporation received by M during the taxable year, and the foreign taxes listed are the only foreign taxes paid or deemed paid by M and N for the taxable year. On March 15, 1981, M filed its income tax return and paid its income tax, but M did not file Form 2952 with respect to N's 1980 annual accounting period. On June 1, 1981, the district director mailed notice to M of M's failure to file Form 2952 with respect to N. On November 30, 1981, M filed a complete Form 2952 with respect to N's 1980 annual accounting period.

(a) Gains, profits, and income of N	$100,000
(b) Foreign tax paid by N with respect to such gains, profits, and income	40,000
(c) Reduction of foreign tax paid by N (for purposes of M's section 902 deemed paid credit) resulting from M's failure to file information with respect to N as required under section 6038(a) and this section: failure to file within the time prescribed in paragraph (i) of this section, 10-percent reduction; continued failure for one additional 3-month period after 90-day period after notice mailed, 5-percent reduction; total reduction, 15 percent ($40,000 times 15 percent)	6,000
(d) Foreign tax paid by N after section 6038(c)(1)(B) reduction	34,000
(e) Dividend paid by N to M	45,000
(f) Accumulated profits of N as defined in section 902(c)(1) (determined without regard to the section 6038(c)(1)(B) reduction)	100,000
(g) Accumulated profits of N as described in section 902(a) (determined without regard to the section 6038(c)(1)(B) reduction)	60,000
(h) For purposes of the section 902 credit, M is deemed to have paid the same proportion of foreign taxes paid (reduced as provided under section 603(c)) with respect to the accumulated profits described in section 902(a) (determined without regard to the reduction provided under section 6038(c)) as the amount of the dividend (determined without regard to section 78) bears to such amount of accumulated profits	25,500

(45,000 ÷ 60,000) × 34,000

M must include $25,500 in gross income as a dividend under the provisions of section 78 of the Code. This example illustrates that the reductions in foreign taxes paid by the foreign corporation provided under section 6038(c) are taken into account in determining the amount included in gross income of the domestic corporation under section 78 of the Code as foreign taxes deemed paid, but such reductions are not taken into account in computing accumulated profits for purposes of determining the portion of foreign taxes deemed paid with respect to a particular dividend. The dollar amount penalty imposed by section 6038(b) and paragraph (k)(1) of this section does ot apply with respect to information for annual accounting periods ending before September 4, 1982, and therefore does not apply to M with respect to M's failure to file Form 2952 in this example.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1) except that all of the events occur in or with respect to the 1982 taxable year. On March 15, 1983, M filed its income tax return and paid its income tax, but M did not file Form 2952 or Form 5471 with respect to N's 1982 annual accounting period. On June 1, 1983, the district director mailed notice to M of M's failure to file Form 2952 or Form 5471 with respect to N. On November 30, 1983, M filed a complete Form 5471 with respect to N's 1982 annual accounting period. Under paragraph (k)(1)(i) of this section, M is subject to a penalty of $1,000. Under paragraph (k)(1)(ii) of this section, that penalty is increased by $4,000 because the failure continued for 92 days (three full 30-day periods and a fraction of a fourth 30-day period) after the end of the 90-day period following mailing of the notice by the district director, bringing M's dollar amount penalty under paragraph (k)(1) of this section to $5,000. For purposes of determining the foreign tax credit available to M, there may be imposed a reduction of foreign tax paid by N of $6,000, which would be the total of reductions under paragraph (k)(2) of this section with respect to M's failure to file under section 6038 for N's 1982 annual accounting period, before application of paragraph (k)(2)(vi) of this section. Under said paragraph (k)(2)(vi), the amount of the foreign tax reduction imposed is reduced by the amount of the dollar amount penalty, leaving a foreign tax reduction penalty of $1,000 which may be imposed in addition to the $5,000 dollar amount penalty. If imposed, the $1,000 tax reduction would then be applied in the calculation of taxes deemed paid by M under section 902, as in example (1), items (c), (d), and (h).

Par. 2. There is added after §1.6038-2 the following new section.

§1.6038A-1 Information returns required of certain foreign-owned corporations.

(a) Requirement of return. Every corporation which at any time during its taxable year is a reporting corporation (described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section) shall make a separate annual information return on Form 5472 with respect to each related corporation (described in paragraph (b)(4) of this section) with which such reporting corporation has had any transaction described in paragraph (c)(2) of this section during such taxable year.

(b) Definitions—(1) Reporting corporation. For purposes of section 6038A and this section, a corporation is a reporting corporation if—

(i) It is a domestic corporation or is a foreign corporation engaged in a trade or business within the United States, and

(ii) It is controlled (as defined in paragraph (b)(2) of this section) by a foreign person. Nevertheless, a foreign corporation all of whose income is not subject to United States taxation is not a reporting corporation for purposes of section 6038A and this section.

(2) Control—(i) Generally. A corporation shall be deemed to be controlled by a foreign person if at any time during that corporation's taxable year such foreign person owns stock possessing at least 50 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of outstanding stock of the corporation entitled to vote, or stock possessing at least 50 percent of the total value of outstanding shares of all classes of stock of the corporation. A corporation that is controlled (by this same test) by another corporation, which, in turn, is controlled by a foreign person, is also treated as being controlled by such foreign person. The provisions of this paragraph (b)(2)(i) are illustrated by the following example:

Example. F, a foreign person, owns 50 percent of the voting stock of X, a domestic corporation. X owns 50 percent of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of Y, also a domestic corporation. Y is controlled by F for purposes of section 6038A and this section.

(ii) Attribution rules. For the purpose of determining ownership of stock of domestic or foreign corporations under section 6038A and this section, the constructive ownership rules of section 318(a) shall apply, except that section 318(a)(2)(C) shall be applied by substituting the phrase "10 percent" for the phrase "50 percent".

(3) Foreign person. For purposes of section 6038A and this section, a foreign person is—

(i) Any individual who is not a citizen or resident of the United States, including any individual who is a citizen of any possession of the United States but is not otherwise a citizen of the United States and is not a resident of the United States;

(ii) Any partnership, association, company, or corporation which is not created or organized in the United States or under the law of the United States or any State thereof; or

(iii) Any foreign trust or foreign estate, as defined in section 7701(a)(31).

(4) Related corporation. For purposes of section 6038A and this section, a related corporation is any corporation which is a member of the same controlled group (as defined in paragraph (b)(5) of this section) as the reporting corporation. The term "member" shall include any component member, excluded member, or additional member (as defined in section 1563(b)) of such group.

(5) Controlled group. For purposes of section 6038A and this section, the term "controlled group" has the meaning given to such term by section 1563(a), except that—

(i) Section 1563(a)(1) shall be applied by substituting the term "at least 50 percent" for the term "at least 80 percent" each time it appears;

(ii) Section 1563(a)(2)(B) shall be applied by substituting the term "at least 50 percent" for the term "more than 50 percent" each time it appears; and

(iii) Section 1563(a)(4), (b)(2)(C), and (e)(3)(C) shall not apply.

(c) Contents of return—(1) The related corporation. The return on Form 5472 shall contain such information as the form shall prescribe, with respect to each related corporation with which the reporting corporation has had a transaction required to be reported under paragraph (c)(2) of this section during its taxable year, relating to:

(i) The name, address, and U.S. employer identification number, if any, of the corporation;

(ii) The nature of the corporation's business or businesses and the principal place or places where conducted;

(iii) The country in which the corporation is organized, and each country in which the corporation is resident (as determined under the laws of such country);

(iv) If the corporation is a foreign corporation, the name and address of the corporation's statutory or resident agent in its country of organization and each country of residence, and the name and address of the principal branch office or agent of such corporation located in the United States;

(v) If the corporation is a domestic corporation for which an address in the United States was not provided under paragraph (c)(1)(i) or (ii) of this section, the name and address of such corporation's office or agent in the United States;

(vi) The name and address of the person or persons having custody of the books of account and records of the corporation, and the location of such books and records if different from such address; and

(vii) The relationship of the reporting corporation to the related corporation (such as reporting corporation controls related corporation, reporting corporation is controlled by related corporation, or reporting and related corporations are under common control).

(2) Transactions with related foreign corporations—(i) Transactions for which monetary consideration was paid or received. If the related corporation is a foreign corporation, the return on Form 5472 shall contain, with respect to transactions (other than transactions excepted by paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section) of the reporting corporation with the related corporation, a summary showing the total dollar amount of each of the following types of transactions for which monetary consideration (U.S. currency and/or foreign currency) was the sole consideration paid or received, during the taxable year of the reporting corporation:

(A) Sales and purchases of stock in trade;

(B) Sales and purchases of tangible property other than stock in trade;

(C) Rents and royalties paid and received (other than amounts reported under paragraph (c)(2)(i)(D) of this section);

(D) Sales, purchases, and amounts paid and received as consideration for the use of intangible property such as copyrights, designs, formulas, inventions, models, patents, processes, trademarks, and other similar property rights;

(E) Consideration paid and received for the rendition of accounting, clerical, construction, engineering, managerial, scientific, technical, and other types of services;

(F) Commissions paid and received;

(G) Amounts loaned and borrowed (except open accounts resulting from sales and purchases reported under other items listed in this paragraph (c)(2)(i) that arise and are collected in full in the ordinary course of business;

(H) Interest paid and received;

(I) Premiums paid and received for insurance and reinsurance; and

(J) Such other transactions as the form shall prescribe.

(ii) Transactions involving nonmonetary consideration or no consideration. If the related corporation is a foreign corporation, the return on Form 5472 shall contain descriptions of any transactions of the types listed in paragraph (c)(2)(i) of this section (other than transactions excepted by paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section), of the reporting corporation with the related corporation, for which any consideration paid or received was other than monetary consideration described in paragraph (c)(2)(i) of this section, or for which no consideration was paid or received. A description of a transaction required under this paragraph (c)(2)(ii) shall describe—

(A) All property (including monetary consideration), rights, or obligations transferred from the reporting corporation to the related corporation and from the related corporation to the reporting corporation,

(B) All services performed by the reporting corporation for the related corporation and by the related corporation for the reporting corporation, and

(C) The fair market value of all such property, rights, obligations, and services that are involved in the transaction.

(iii) Exception. This paragraph (c)(2) shall not apply to any transaction if neither party to the transaction is a United States person and the transaction—

(A) Does not give rise to any income or gain which is from sources within the United States or which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States,

(B) Does not give rise to any expense, loss, or other deduction properly allocable or apportionable to such income, and

(C) Does not, in any way, affect any United States income tax obligation of either party to the transaction or any person that controls either party to the transaction in any taxable year.

(iv) Accrued payments and re- ceipts. For purposes of this section, in the case of an accrual basis taxpayer the terms "paid" and "received" shall include accrued payments and receipts, respectively.

(d) Method of reporting. All statements required on or with the return on Form 5472 under this section shall be rendered in the English language. All amounts of consideration or value required to be reported under this section shall be expressed in terms of United States currency, with a statement of any exchange rates used.

(e) Time and place for filing return. Returns on Form 5472 required under this section shall be filed with the reporting corporation's income tax return on or before the date required by law (including extensions of time) for the filing of such income tax return or March 15, 1984, whichever is later.

(f) Penalty for failure to furnish information—(1) In general. If a corporation required to file Form 5472 under section 6038A and this section fails to furnish any information described in paragraph (c) of this section within the time prescribed by paragraph (e) of this section, such corporation shall pay a penalty of $1,000 for each taxable year with respect to which such information is not timely reported.

(2) Increase in penalty for continued failure after notification. If a failure described in paragraph (f)(1) of this section continues for more than 90 days after the date on which the district director mails notice of such failure to the reporting corporation, that corporation shall pay a penalty of $1,000, in addition to the penalty imposed by section 6038A(d)(1) and paragraph (f)(1) of this section, for each 30-day period (or fraction thereof) during which such failure continues after such 90-day period has expired. The additional penalty imposed by section 6038A(d)(2) and this paragraph (f)(2) shall be limited to a maximum of $24,000 for each failure.

(3) Reasonable cause—(i) For purposes of section 6038A(d) and this section, the time prescribed for furnishing information under paragraph (e) of this section, and the beginning of the 90-day period after mailing of notice by the district director under paragraph (f)(2) of this section, shall be treated as being not earlier than the last day on which reasonable causes existed for failure to furnish the information.

(ii) To show that reasonable cause existed for failure to furnish information as required by section 6038A and this section, the reporting corporation must make an affirmative showing of all facts alleged as reasonable cause for such failure in a written statement containing a declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury. The statement must be filed with the district director for the district or the director of the service center where the return is required to be filed. The district director or the director of the service center shall determine whether the failure to furnish information was due to reasonable cause, and if so, the period of time for which such reasonable cause existed.

(4) Other penalties. The information required by section 6038A and this section must be furnished even though it may not affect the amount of any tax due under the Internal Revenue Code. For criminal penalties for failure to file a return and filing a false or fraudulent return, see sections 7203, 7206, and 7207 of the Code.

(g) Effective date. This regulation is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

LR-228-82

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations which provide guidance to corporations with respect to estimated tax requirements. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1980 [Pub. L. 96-499, 1980-2 C.B. 509], the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 [Pub. The regulations would provide corporations with the guidance needed to comply with applicable provisions of these acts.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered by May 25, 1984. Generally, these regulations are proposed to be effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982. The regulations providing guidance to "large corporations" are proposed to be effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1980.

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR-228-82), Washington, D.C. 20224.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under sections 6152, 6164, 6654, and 6655 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 and to the Regulations on Procedure and Administration (26 CFR Part 301) under section 6655 of the Code. These amendments are proposed to conform the regulations to section 1111 of the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1980 (Pub. L. 96-499; 94 Stat. 2681) [1980-2 C.B. 509, 523], section 731 of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (Pub. L. 97-34; 95 Stat. 346) [1981-2 C.B. 256, 347], and section 234 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (Pub. L. 97-248; 96 Stat. 503) [1982-2 C.B. 462, 511] and are to be issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

GENERAL RULES

A corporation is required to make payments of estimated tax if it reasonably expects to have an estimated tax liability for the taxable year of $40 or more (see section 6154). Generally, a corporation is required to pay a percentage of its current year's tax liability in quarterly estimated tax installments. Under section 6655, if a corporation fails to pay its estimated tax installment when due and does not meet any exception to an underpayment, the corporation is subject to a penalty for underpayment of estimated taxes. The amount of the penalty is determined at the rate established under section 6621.

Under prior law, the penalty with respect to any underpayment of any installment was not imposed in any case where the total amount of all payments of estimated tax made on or before the last date prescribed for the payment of such installment equalled or exceeded the amount which would have been due had the estimated tax been based on any of the following: (1) the tax shown on the return for the preceding taxable year, if a return showing a tax liability was filed for the preceding taxable year and such preceding year was a taxable year of 12 months; (2) the tax computed at the rates applicable to the current taxable year but using the facts and law applicable to the preceding taxable year; or (3) 80 percent of the taxes which would have been due if the corporation's taxable income for specified preceding periods of the taxable year were annualized (annualization exception).

Additionally, for taxable years beginning prior to 1983, a corporation could elect under section 6152 to pay only half of its unpaid tax 2½ months after the end of its taxable year and the remaining one-half 3 months later.

The Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1980 amended section 6655 to provide that, in order to come within exception (1) (relating to the preceding year's tax) or (2) (relating to the preceding year's facts and law), described above, a large corporation's estimated tax payments must in no event be less than 60 percent of the current year's tax. The Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 further amended section 6655 to provide that for taxable years beginning in 1984 and thereafter exceptions (1) and (2) are no longer available to large corporations. A transitional rule provides that for taxable years beginning in 1981, 1982, or 1983, a large corporation's estimated tax payments shall in no event be less than 60 percent, 65 percent, and 75 percent, respectively, of the current year's tax in order to come within exception (1) or (2). Exception (3) (relating to the annualization of income) is still available to a large corporation.

For purposes of section 6655, a corporation is considered a large corporation if it (or its predecessor) had taxable income of at least $1 million or more in any of the 3 taxable years immediately preceding the taxable year involved ("testing period").

In determining a corporation's taxable income for any of the taxable years during the testing period, the proposed regulations provide that items which may be carried back under other Code provisions (e.g., those described in sections 172 and 1212) from one of the years in the testing period to another year in the testing period are taken into account. Additionally, if a corporation's taxable income for a year during the testing period is redetermined during that testing period, by reason of an examination by the Internal Revenue Service or otherwise, such redetermination shall be taken into account in determining whether the corporation is "large" for its present taxable year. Any items that are carried forward under other Code provisions are also taken into account in determining a corporation's taxable income during the testing period.

In the case of component members of a controlled group of corporations (as defined in section 1563), the proposed regulations provide that the $1 million amount for any taxable year in the 3-year testing period is divided equally among the component members of such group unless all of such component members consent to an apportionment plan providing for an unequal allocation of such amount. There are special rules for the computation of taxable income for a year in the 3-year testing period where a transaction described in section 381(a) occurs.

For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982, the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA) increases from 80 percent to 90 percent the amount of a corporation's current tax liability that must be paid in installments. If a corporation makes estimated tax payments of at least 80 percent of its tax liability, the penalty for underpayment of estimated taxes is imposed at three-quarters of the full rate on underpayments determined under section 6621.

Similarly, TEFRA increases from 80 percent to 90 percent the amount of taxes that must be paid under the annualization exception.

An additional exception to the underpayment penalty is added by TEFRA. This new exception applies to a corporation with recurring seasonal income. Under this exception, income may be annualized by assuming that income earned in the current year is earned in the same pattern as in the 3 preceding taxable years. Thus, if a corporation pays its estimated tax installments as if taxable income for the taxable year is earned in the same seasonal pattern as in the preceding 3 years, no penalty for underpayment will be imposed. This exception is available to a large corporation.

TEFRA repealed section 6152 as it applies to corporations. The proposed regulations reflect this change.

Finally, the proposed regulations provide guidance with respect to how a corporation must compute its taxable income for a period of less than a full taxable year when using the annualization exceptions to the underpayment penalty.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Parts 1 and 301 are as follows:

PART 1—INCOME TAX REGULATIONS

Paragraph 1. Paragraph (a)(1) of §1.6152-1, relating to privilege of corporation to elect to make installment payments, is amended by removing "ending on or after December 31, 1954," and adding "beginning before January 1, 1983," in lieu thereof.

Par. 2. Paragraph (a) of §1.6164-4 is amended to read as follows:

§1.6164-4 Payment of remainder of tax where extension relates only to part of the tax.

(a) Time for payment. If an extension of time relates only to part of the tax, the time for payment of the remainder of the tax shall be considered to be the date on which payment would have been required if such remainder had been the tax.

* * * * *

Par. 3. Paragraph (a) of §1.6164-8 is amended to read as follows:

§1.6164-8 Payments on termination.

(a) In general. If an extension of time under section 6164 is terminated with respect to any amount either (1) by the filing of a new statement by the taxpayer under section 6164(e) extending the time for payment of a lesser amount than was extended in a prior statement, or (2) by action of the district director under section 6164(f) after making an examination of the statement filed by the corporation, no further extension of time may be made under section 6164 with respect to such amount. The time for payment of such amount shall be the date on which payment would have been required if there had been no extension with respect to such amount.

* * * * *

Par. 4. Paragraph (d)(1)(i) of §1.6654-2 is amended to read as follows:

§1.6654-2 Exceptions to imposition of the addition to the tax in the case of individuals.

* * * * *

(d) Determination of taxable income for portion of taxable year—(1) In general. (i) In determining the applicability of the exceptions described in paragraph (a)(2) and (3) of this section, there must be a reasonably accurate determination of the amount of income and deductions for the calendar months in the calendar year preceding the installment date as of which the determination is made, that is, for the period terminating with the last day of the third, fifth, or eighth month of the taxable year. See paragraph (e) of §1.6655-2 (relating to a similar requirement with respect to corporations) for special rules to be used in computing such income and deductions.

* * * * *

Par. 5. Section 1.6655-1 is amended to read as follows:

§1.6655-1 Addition to the tax in the case of a corporation.

(a) In general. Section 6655 imposes an addition to the tax under chapter 1 of the Code in the case of any underpayment of estimated tax by a corporation (with certain exceptions described in section 6655(d) and (e)). This addition to the tax is in addition to any applicable criminal penalties and is imposed whether or not there was reasonable cause for the underpayment.

(b) Amount of underpayment—(1) Installments for taxable years beginning after January 1, 1983. In the case of an installment for a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1983, the amount of the underpayment for any installment date is the excess of—

(i) 80 percent of the tax shown on the return for the taxable year or, if no return was filed, 80 percent of the tax for such year, multiplied by the percentage of estimated tax required to be paid on or before the installment date, over

(ii) The amount, if any, of the installment paid on or before the last date prescribed for such payment.

(2) Rate of addition and period of underpayment—Installments due for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1983. With respect to an amount of underpayment determined under subparagraph (1), the amount of the addition is determined at the annual rate referred to in the regulations under section 6621 upon the underpayment of any installment of estimated tax for the period from the date such installment is required to be paid until the 15th day of the 3rd month following the close of the taxable year, or the date such underpayment is paid, whichever is earlier. For purposes of determining the period of the underpayment, (i) the date prescribed for payment of any installment of estimated tax shall be determined without regard to any extension of time, and (ii) a payment of estimated tax on any installment date, to the extent that it exceeds the amount of the installment determined under subparagraph (1)(i) of this paragraph for such date, shall be considered a payment of the previous underpayment, if any.

(3) Installments for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982. In the case of an installment for a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1982, the amount of the underpayment for any installment date is the excess of—

(i) 90 percent of the tax shown on the return for the taxable year or, if no return was filed, 90 percent of the tax for such year, multiplied by the percentage of estimated tax required to be paid on or before the installment date, over

(ii) The amount, if any, of the installment paid on or before the last date prescribed for such payment.

(4) Rate of addition and period of underpayment—Installments due for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982. (i) Except as provided in (ii) of this subparagraph, with respect to an amount of underpayment determined under subparagraph (3), the amount of the addition is determined at the annual rate referred to in the regulations under section 6621 upon the underpayment of any installment of estimated tax for the period of the underpayment.

(ii) In any case where there would be no underpayment if "80 percent" in subparagraph (3) were substituted for "90 percent" each place it appears, the addition to tax shall be 75 percent of the amount otherwise determined under section 6621 and subdivision (i).

(iii) The period of the underpayment of any installment shall run from the date the installment was required to be paid until the 15th day of the 3rd month following the close of the taxable year, or the date such underpayment is paid, whichever is earlier. For purposes of determining the period of the underpayment, (A) the date prescribed for payment of any installment of estimated tax shall be determined without regard to any extension of time, and (B) a payment of estimated tax on any installment date, to the extent that it exceeds the amount of the installment determined under subparagraph (3)(i) of this paragraph for such date, shall be considered a payment of the previous underpayment, if any.

(5) Definition of term "tax". The term "tax" as used in subparagraph (1)(i) and (3)(i) of this paragraph means the excess of—

(i) The tax imposed by section 11 or 1201(a), or subchapter L of chapter 1 of the Code, whichever is applicable, over

(ii) The sum of—

(A) The credits against tax provided by part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 of the Code, plus

(B) [reserved].

(6) Special rules for consolidated returns. For special rules relating to the determination of the amount of the underpayment in the case of a corporation whose income is included in a consolidated return, see §1.1502-5(b).

(c) Statement relating to underpayment. If there has been an underpayment of estimated tax as of the installment date prescribed for its payment and the taxpayer believes that one or more of the exceptions described in §1.6655-2 or §1.6655-3 precludes the assertion of the addition to the tax under section 6655, it should attach to its income tax return for the taxable year a Form 2220 showing the applicability of any exception upon which the taxpayer relies.

(d) Examples. The method prescribed in paragraph (b)(3) and (4) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). X, a corporation which reports on a calendar year basis, anticipates that its estimated tax for 1983 will be in the amount of $54,000. It makes payments of $13,500 each on April 15, 1983, June 15, 1983, September 15, 1983, and December 15, 1983. On March 15, 1984, X files its income tax return showing a tax imposed of $70,000, with a total of $5,000 of allowable credits against tax. The addition to tax under section 6655(a) is computed as follows:

(1)	Tax as defined in (b)(5) of this section ($70,000 - $5,000)	$65,000
(2)	90% of item (1)	58,500
(3)	Amount of estimated tax required to be paid on each installment date (25% of $58,500)	14,625
(4)	Deduct amount paid on each installment date	13,500
(5)	Amount of underpayment for each installment date (item (3) minus item (4))	$1,125

(6) Addition to tax, assuming that none of the exceptions provided by section 6655(d) and (e) and §§1.6655-2 and 1.6655-3 are applicable, and assuming the addition is computed at the rate of 11 percent per annum applicable to periods of underpayment under section 6621:

(i)	First installment (period 4-15-83 to 3-15-84)	$113.27
(ii)	Second installment (period 6-15-83 to 3-15-84)	92.64
(iii)	Third installment (period 9-15-83 to 3-15-84)	61.54
(iv)	Fourth installment (period 12-15-83 to 3-15-84)	30.77
(v)	Total of items (i) through (iv)	$298.22

Since X Corporation paid at least 80% of the tax due in equal quarterly installments, the amount of the addition under section 6655(a)(2) is $223.67 (i.e., .75 × $298.22).

Example (2). Y, a corporation which reports on a calendar year basis, anticipates that its estimated tax for 1983 will be in the amount of $70,000. It makes no payments on April 15, 1983, June 15, 1983, and September 15, 1983, but makes a payment of $63,000 on December 15, 1983. On March 15, 1984, Y files its income tax return showing a tax imposed of $70,000. The addition to tax under section 6655(a) is computed as follows:

(1)	Tax as defined in (b)(5) of this section		$70,000
(2)	90% of item (1)		63,000
		First, Second, And Third Installments	Fourth Installment
(3)	Amount of estimated tax required to be paid on each installment date (25% of $63,000)	$15,750	$15,750

(4)	Amount paid on each installment date 0	$63,000
(5)	Amount of underpayment for each date $15,750	0

(6) Addition to tax, assuming that none of the exceptions provided by section 6655(d) and (e) and §§1.6655-2 and 1.6655-3 are applicable, and assuming the addition is computed at the rate of 11 percent per annum applicable to periods of underpayment under section 6621:

(i)	First installment (period 4-15-83 to 12-15-83)	$1,158.16
(ii)	Second installment (period 6-15-83 to 12-15-83)	868.62
(iii)	Third installment (period 9-15-83 to 12-15-83)	431.94
(iv)	Fourth installment	0
(v)	Total of items (i) through (iv)	$2,458.72

Par. 6. Section 1.6655-2 is amended to read as follows:

§1.6655-2 Exceptions to imposition of the addition to the tax in the case of corporations.

(a) In general. The addition to the tax under section 6655 will not be imposed for any underpayment of any installment of estimated tax if, on or before the date prescribed for payment of the installment, the total amount of all payments of estimated tax made equals or exceeds the amount which would have been required to be paid on or before such date if the estimated tax were the least of the following amounts—

(1) The amount of tax shown on the return for the preceding taxable year, provided that the preceding taxable year was a year of 12 months and a return showing a liability for tax was filed for such year;

(2) An amount equal to a tax determined on the basis of the tax rates for the taxable year but otherwise on the basis of the facts shown on the return for the preceding taxable year and the law applicable to such year, in the case of a corporation required to file a return for such preceding taxable year; or

(3) An amount equal to 90 percent (80 percent in the case of a taxable year beginning on or before December 31, 1982) of the tax determined by placing on an annual basis the taxable income for—

(i) The first 3 months of the taxable year, in the case of the installment required to be paid in the 4th month,

(ii) Either the first 3 months or the first 5 months of the taxable year (whichever results in no addition being imposed), in the case of the installment required to be paid in the 6th month,

(iii) Either the first 6 months or the first 8 months of the taxable year (whichever results in no addition being imposed), in the case of the installment required to be paid in the 9th month, and

(iv) Either the first 9 months or the first 11 months of the taxable year (whichever results in no addition being imposed), in the case of the installment required to be paid in the 12th month.

The taxable income so determined shall be placed on an annual basis by first multiplying it by 12, and then dividing the resulting amount by the number of months in the taxable year for which the taxable income was so determined.

(b) Special rules. (1) In the case of a taxpayer whose taxable year consists of 52 or 53 weeks in accordance with section 441(f), the rules prescribed by paragraph (b) of §1.441-2 shall be applicable in determining—

(i) Whether a taxable year was a year of 12 months for purposes of paragraph (a)(1) of this §1.6655-2, and

(ii) When the 3-month period, or the 3- or 5-month period, or the 6- or 8-month period, or the 9- or 11-month period (whichever is applicable) commences for purposes of paragraph (a)(3) of this §1.6655-2.

For example, if a taxable year begins on December 26, 1982, taxable income for the first 6 months of such year, for purposes of paragraph (a)(3) of this §1.6655-2, shall be taxable income for the period beginning on December 26, 1982, and ending on June 30, 1983, since such taxable year is deemed to commence on January 1, 1983, under section 441(f).

(2) If the end of any accounting period employed by the taxpayer (e.g., any of either thirteen 4-week periods or four 13-week periods) does not correspond to the termination date of the applicable 3-month, or 3- or 5-month, or 6- or 8-month, or 9- or 11-month period, taxable income for the applicable period shall equal—

$$(a + (b \times c + d)),$$

a = taxable income from the beginning of the taxable year to the close of the accounting period ending immediately before the termination date of the applicable 3-month, or 3- or 5-month, or 6- or 8-month, or 9- or 11-month period, b = number of days from the close of the accounting period ending immediately before the termination date of the applicable 3-month, or 3- or 5-month, or 6- or 8-month, or 9- or 11-month period to the close of the applicable 3-month, or 3- or 5- month, or 6- or 8-month, or 9- or 11-month period,

c = taxable income from the beginning of the taxable year to the close of the accounting period within which the termination date of the applicable 3-month, or 3- or 5-month, or 6- or 8-month, or 9- or 11-month period falls, minus a, and d = number of days between the termination dates of the accounting period ending immediately before the termination date of the applicable 3-month, or 3- or 5-month, or 6- or 8-month, or 9- or 11-month period and the accounting period within which the termination date of the applicable 3-month, or 3- or 5-month, or 6- or 8-month, or 9- or 11-month period falls.

Thus, for example, a taxpayer whose taxable year consists of 52 or 53 weeks in accordance with section 441(f) has a taxable year beginning on December 26, 1982, and thirteen 4-week accounting periods are employed in determining taxable income. Taxable income from December 26, 1982, to the close of the 4-week accounting period ending on June 11, 1983, is $200,000, and taxable income from December 26, 1982, to the close of the 4-week accounting period ending on July 9, 1983, is $228,000. Under the provisions of this paragraph (b)(2), taxable income for the 6-month period ending on June 30, 1983, is $219,000 (i.e., ($200,000 + (19 x 28,000 + 28)).

(c) Meaning of terms—(1) Meaning of term "tax". For the purpose of the exceptions described in paragraph (a) of this section, the term "tax" means the excess of—

(i) The tax imposed by section 11 or 1201(a), or subchapter L of chapter 1 of the Code, whichever is applicable, over

(ii) The sum of—

(A) The credits against tax provided by part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1, plus

(B) [reserved].

For purposes of paragraph (a)(2) of this section, the amount of tax paid from recomputing a prior year's investment credit under section 47 is a fact shown on the return for the preceding taxable year and is included in computing the prior year's tax. For example, X Corporation timely filed its 1977 income tax return. The return showed no taxable income, but it included an amount of tax from recomputing a prior year's investment credit. For 1978, X had taxable income and a liability for income tax. X was required to pay its tax in installments under section 6154, but made no installment payments. X is subject to the addition to tax for underpayment of estimated tax imposed by section 6655(a), because X failed to pay, on or before the prescribed installment due dates, an amount equal to the tax resulting from the recomputation of the prior year's investment credit.

(2) Credits against tax. The credits against the tax allowed by part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 are—

(i) In the case of the exception described in paragraph (a)(1) of this section, such credits shown on the return for the preceding taxable year,

(ii) In the case of the exception described in paragraph (a)(2) of this section, such credits shown on the return for the preceding taxable year, except that if the amount of any such credits would be affected by any change in rates, the credits shall be determined by reference to the rates applicable to the current taxable year, and

(iii) In the case of the exception described in paragraph (a)(3) of this section, such credits computed under the law and rates applicable to the current taxable year.

The provisions of subparagraph (2)(ii) of this paragraph are illustrated by the following example:

Example. Assume that during a taxable year within which the graduated tax rates in section 11 are lowered, Corporation X has an underpayment of estimated tax. One-fourth of the taxable income of Corporation X for the taxable year preceding that in which such underpayment occurs was from sources within foreign country Y and the remainder of the taxable income was from sources within the United States. The return of Corporation X for such preceding year shows taxable income of $325,000 and a tax, without regard to any credits, of $163,500. For such preceding year, Corporation X paid more taxes to foreign country Y than may be allowed as a credit under section 33 by reason of the limitation of section 904. The credit allowed by section 33 on account of taxes paid to foreign country Y may not, under section 904, exceed one-fourth of the tax without regard to any credits, or $40,875. The tax for the preceding year, computed by using the rates applicable to the year during which the underpayment occurs, would be reduced to $147,250, and the limitation under section 904 on the credit allowed under section 33 for taxes paid to foreign country Y would be reduced to $36,812.50, for purposes of determining the applicability of the exception described in paragraph (a)(2) of this section. Therefore, the exception described in paragraph (a)(2) of this section will be applicable if, on or before the date prescribed for such payment, the total amount paid by Corporation X equals or exceeds the amount which would have been required to be paid by such date if the estimated tax were $110,437.50 ($147,250 less $36,812.50).

(3) Definition of return for the preceding taxable year. For the purpose of the exceptions described in paragraph (a)(1) and (2) of this section, the term "return for the preceding taxable year" means the income tax return for such year which is required by section 6012(a)(2). However, if an amended return has been timely filed, then the term "return for the preceding taxable year" means the income tax return as amended and as timely filed.

(d) Examples. The application of the exceptions to the imposition of the addition to tax is illustrated by examples employing the following statement of facts:

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Y, a corporation which reports on a calendar year basis, expected that it would have an estimated tax liability of $62,000 for its taxable year ending December 31, 1983. Y is not a "large corporation" (see section 6655(i) and §1.6655-4). Y paid four installments of estimated tax, each in the amount of $15,500 (25 percent of $62,000), on April 15, 1983, June 15, 1983, September 15, 1983, and December 15, 1983, respectively. Y reported a tax liability of $88,900 on its return due March 15, 1984, with no credits against tax. There was an underpayment in the amount of $4,502.50 on each of the four installment dates, determined as follows:

(1)	Tax as defined in paragraph (c)(1) of this section	$88,900.00
(2)	90% of item (1)	$80,010.00
(3)	Amount of estimated tax required to be paid on each installment (25% of $80,010)	$20,002.50
(4)	Deduct amount paid on each installment date	$15,500.00
(5)	Amount of underpayment for each installment date	$4,502.50

The application of each exception described in paragraph (a) of this section is determined as follows:

(1) Assume Y reported a liability of $74,900 on its return for the taxable year ending December 31, 1982. If the exception described in paragraph (a)(1) of this section were to apply, the amount which would have been required to be paid on or before each of the four installment dates would be 25 percent of $74,900, or $18,725. Since this amount exceeds the amount actually paid on each installment date, $15,500, the exception does not apply.

(2) Assume that the facts shown on the return for the previous year (1982) showed Y to have a taxable income of $184,167 and no credits against tax. The amount of tax determined under paragraph (a)(2) of this section and the amounts required to be paid on or before each installment date are as follows: the tax liability on the basis of the 1983 rates but on the basis of the calendar year 1982 return is $64,467; the amount which would have been required to be paid on or before each of the four installment dates is 25 percent of $64,467, or $16,116.75. Since this amount exceeds the amount actually paid on each installment date, $15,500, the exception described in paragraph (a)(2) of this section does not apply.

(3) The total amount of all payments of estimated tax actually paid on or before the installment dates of April 15, 1983, June 15, 1983, September 15, 1983, and December 15, 1983, are $15,500, $31,000, $46,500, and $62,000, respectively. Assume Y determined that its taxable income for the first 3, 5, 6, 8, 9, and 11 months was $45,000, $90,000, $105,000, $145,000, $160,000, and $195,000 respectively. The income for each period is annualized as follows:

$ 45,000 x 12 ÷ 3 = $180,000
$ 90,000 x 12 ÷ 5 = $216,000
$105,000 x 12 ÷ 6 = $210,000
$145,000 x 12 ÷ 8 = $217,500
$160,000 x 12 ÷ 9 = $213,333.33
$195,000 x 12 ÷ 11 = $212,727.27

(i) To determine whether the installment payment made on April 15, 1983, equals or exceeds the amount which would have been required to have been paid if the estimated tax were equal to 90 percent of the tax computed on the annualized income for the 3-month period, the following computation is necessary:

		3 months
(1)	Annualized income	$180,000
(2)	Tax on item (1)	$ 62,550
(3)	90% of item (2)	$ 56,295
(4)	25% of item (3)	$ 14,073.75

Since the total amount of estimated tax actually paid on the first installment date (i.e., $15,500) exceeds the amount required to be paid on this date if the estimated tax were 90 percent of the tax determined by placing on an annualized basis the taxable income for the first 3-month period, the exception described in paragraph (a)(3) of this section applies, and no addition to tax will be imposed for the installment paid on April 15, 1983.

(ii) To determine whether the installment payments made on or before June 15, 1982, equal or exceed the amount which would have been required to have been paid if the estimated tax were equal to 90 percent of the tax computed on the annualized income for either the 3- or 5-month period, the following computation is necessary:

		3 months	5 months
(1)	Annualized income	$180,000	$216,000
(2)	Tax on item (1)	$ 62,550	$ 79,110
(3)	90% of item (2)	$ 56,295	$ 71,199
(4)	50% of item (3)	$ 28,147.50	$ 35,599.50

Since the total amount of estimated tax actually paid on the second installment date (i.e., $31,000) exceeds the amount required to be paid on such date if the estimated tax were 90 percent of the tax determined by placing on an annualized basis the taxable income for the first 3- or 5-month period for the taxable year, the exception described in paragraph (a)(3) of this section applies, and no addition to tax will be imposed for the installment paid on June 15, 1983.

(iii) To determine whether the installment payments made on or before September 15, 1983, equal or exceed the amount which would have been required to have been paid if the estimated tax were equal to 90 percent of the tax computed on the annualized income for either the 6- or 8-month period, the following computation is necessary:

		6 months	8 months
(1)	Annualized income	$210,000	$217,500
(2)	Tax on item (1)	$ 76,350	$ 79,800
(3)	90% of item (2)	$ 68,715	$ 71,820
(4)	75% of item (3)	$ 51,536.25	$ 53,865

Since the total amount of estimated tax actually paid on or before the third installment date (i.e., $46,500) does not equal or exceed the amount required to be paid on such date if the estimated tax were 90 percent of the tax determined by placing on an annualized basis the taxable income for the first 6- or 8-month period, the exception described in paragraph (a)(3) of this section does not apply, and an addition to tax will be imposed with respect to the underpayment of the September 15, 1983, installment unless another exception applies to this installment payment.

(iv) To determine whether the installment payments made on or before December 15, 1983, equal or exceed the amount which would have been required to have been paid if the estimated tax were equal to 90 percent of the tax computed on the annualized income for either the 9- or 11-month period, the following computation is necessary:

		9 months	11 months
(1)	Annualized income	$213,333.33	$212,727.27
(2)	Tax on item (1)	$ 77,883.33	$ 77,604.54
(3)	90% of item (2)	$ 70,095	$ 69,844.09
(4)	100% of item (3)	$ 70,095	$ 69,844.09

Since the total amount of estimated tax actually paid on or before the fourth installment date (i.e., $62,000) does not equal or exceed the amount required to be paid on such date if the estimated tax were 90 percent of the tax determined by placing on an annualized basis the taxable income for the first 9- or 11-month period, the exception described in paragraph (a)(3) of this section does not apply, and an addition to tax will be imposed with respect to the underpayment of the December 15, 1983, installment unless another exception applies to this installment payment.

(e) Determination of taxable income for portion of taxable year when using annualization exceptions—(1) In general. In determining the applicability of the exception described in paragraph (a)(3) of this section (relating to the annualization of income) and the exception described in §1.6655-3 (relating to annualization of income for corporations with seasonal income), there must be a reasonably accurate determination of the items of income, gain, loss, deduction, and credit properly includible under the taxpayer's method of accounting for the appropriate period, that is, for the first 3, 5, 6, 8, 9, or 11 months of the taxable year. Generally, deductions which are not properly accruable during an applicable installment period because all the events which fix the fact of a liability have not yet occurred or because the amount of the deduction cannot be estimated with reasonable accuracy are not taken into account in that period for purposes of the annualization exception, even if such amounts are accruable by the end of the taxable year.

(2) Exception for recurring expenditures. (i) When a taxpayer has a history of incurring a specific category of expense, which, while attributable to income earned throughout the year, has not become a fixed liability until the end of the taxable year, the taxpayer may take into account for each installment period the amount of such expense properly allocable to such period provided—

(A) The amount so allocated to a particular installment period is determinable with reasonable accuracy, and

(B) The amount of the item so allocated is properly deductible by the taxpayer during the taxable year under the taxpayer's method of accounting.

(ii) The provisions of subparagraph (2)(i) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Corporation X, a calendar year taxpayer, uses the accrual method of accounting. X has historically adopted a program at the beginning of each taxable year which provides for the distribution of year-end cash bonuses to its employees. The aggregate amount of bonuses to be distributed is determined at the beginning of the taxable year. In accordance with this program, the amount of the bonus payable to each employee is to be determined by the management in December. Under the provisions of subparagraph (2)(i), X may allocate a portion of the total amount of such year-end bonus to each installment period since X can determine that amount with reasonable accuracy and the amount of the bonus is properly deductible during X's taxable year under its method of accounting.

(3) Items that substantially impact taxable income but cannot be determined accurately by the installment due date. In determining the applicability of the annualization exceptions described in paragraph (a)(3) of this section and §1.6655-3, reasonable estimates may be made from existing data for items that substantially impact income when the amount of such items cannot be determined accurately by the installment due date. Examples of these items are the LIFO index for taxpayers using the dollar-value LIFO inventory method, the deferred gross profit for taxpayers with revolving charge accounts, intercompany adjustments for taxpayers that file consolidated returns, and the liquidation of a LIFO layer at the installment date that the taxpayer reasonably believes would be replaced at the end of the year. Thus, for example, reasonable estimates by a taxpayer using the dollar-value LIFO method of accounting would be made by interpolating from an available inflation index for the same months in the previous year to calculate the cost of goods sold in the present period of less than a full taxable year if no reliable inflation index for the present period is available. See also §1.6654-2(d)(1) and (2).

(4) Events arising after installment due date which were not reasonably foreseeable. Events arising subsequent to the installment due date which cause the taxpayer's computation of its taxable income for the short period to be understated will not result in a recomputation of its taxable income for the short period. The preceding sentence applies only if at the time the installment payment is made, based on all the facts and circumstances, it was not reasonably foreseeable that these subsequent events would occur. Thus, for example, assume that Congress enacts retroactively effective legislation which causes the taxable income for the applicable 3-month, or 3- or 5-month, or 6- or 8-month, or 9- or 11-month period to be understated. This event, which occurred after the applicable installment due date, will not result in a recomputation of a corporation's taxable income for the applicable installment period because such an event was unforeseeable.

Par. 7. Section 1.6655-3 is revised to read as follows:

§1.6655-3 Additional exception for corporation with recurring seasonal income.

(a) In general—(1) Additional exception for corporations with recurring seasonal income. Except as provided in paragraph (b)(4) of this section, for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982, notwithstanding section 6655(b) (relating to the general rule for amount of underpayment of estimated tax) and section 6655(d) (relating to the exceptions to the underpayment of estimated tax), the addition to the tax with respect to any underpayment of any installment shall not be imposed if the total amount of all payments of estimated tax made on or before the last date prescribed for the payment of such installment equals or exceeds 90 percent of the applicable amount determined under subparagraph (2) of this paragraph.

(2) Applicable amount. To determine the applicable amount—

(i) Total the taxable income for all months during the taxable year preceding the filing month (as defined in paragraph (b)(3)),

(ii) Divide the amount in subdivision (i) by the base period percentage (as defined in paragraph (b)(1)) for all months during the taxable year preceding the filing month,

(iii) Determine the tax (as defined in §1.6655-2(c)(1)) on the amount determined in subdivision (ii),

(iv) Multiply the amount determined in subdivision (iii) by the base period percentage for the filing month and all months during the taxable year preceding the filing month.

(b) Definition and limitation on application of exception—(1) Base period percentage. The base period percentage for any period of months shall be the average of the three percentages calculated by dividing—

(i) The taxable income for the corresponding months in each of the 3 preceding taxable years, by

(ii) The taxable income for each of the 3 preceding taxable years.

(2) Determination of base period percentage in a year in which there occurs a transaction to which section 381 applies. (i) In a year in which there occurs a transaction to which section 381 applies, the acquiring corporation's taxable income shall be the sum of—

(A) The taxable income of the acquiring corporation for its taxable year, plus

(B) The taxable income of the distributor or transferor corporation (or corporations) for that portion of the acquiring corporation's taxable year up to and including the date of distribution or transfer (as defined in §1.381(b)-1(b)).

(ii) The corresponding monthly taxable income of the acquiring corporation in a year in which there occurs a transaction to which section 381 applies shall be the sum of—

(A) The corresponding monthly taxable income of the acquiring corporation, plus

(B) The corresponding monthly taxable income of the distributor or transferor corporation (or corporations) for those months of the acquiring corporation's taxable year up to and including the date of distribution or transfer (as defined in §1.381(b)-1(b)).

(3) Filing month. The term "filing month" means the month in which the installment is required to be paid. A corporation must make estimated tax payments in installments in accordance with the provisions of section 6154(b). Thus, for example, a corporation which, before the 1st day of the 4th month of its taxable year, reasonably expects its estimated tax for such taxable year to be $40 or more, must make quarterly installments of estimated tax on or before the 15th day of the 4th, 6th, 9th, and 12th months of its taxable year.

(4) Limitation on use of exception for corporations with recurring seasonal income. This section shall apply only if the base period percentage (as defined in subparagraph (1)) for the same 6 consecutive months of the 3 preceding taxable years equals or exceeds 70 percent.

(c) Illustration. The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. (a) Y, a corporation which reports on a calendar year basis, expected that it would have an estimated tax liability of $1,380,000 for its taxable year ending December 31, 1983. Y therefore paid four installments of estimated tax, each in the amount of $345,000 (25 percent of $1,380,000), on April 15, 1983, June 15, 1983, September 15, 1983, and December 15, 1983, respectively. Y reported a tax liability of $1,539,150 on its return due March 15, 1984, with no credits against tax. Under the general provision of section 6655(b), there was an underpayment in the amount of $1,308.75 on each of the four installment dates, determined as follows:

(1)	Tax as defined in section 6655(f)	$1,539,150.00
(2)	90% of item (1)	1,385,235.00
(3)	Amount of estimated tax required to be paid on each installment (25% of $1,385,235.00)	346,308.75
(4)	Deduct amount paid on each installment date under general rule of section 6655(b)	345,000.00
(5)	Amount of underpayment for each installment date under general rule of section 6655(b)	$1,308.75

(b) Y corporation wants to determine if it qualifies under the exception of this section. Y Corporation determines that its monthly taxable income for the preceding 3 taxable years and for the current taxable year 1983 is as follows:

	January	February	March	April	May	June
1980	$100,000	$ 90,000	$ 80,000	$ 70,000	$ 60,000	$ 20,000
1981	$200,000	$170,000	$170,000	$130,000	$125,000	$ 45,000
1982	$410,000	$350,000	$330,000	$270,000	$240,000	$ 80,000
1983	$600,000	$680,000	$650,000	$560,000	$460,000	$170,000

	July	August	September	October	November	December
1980	$ 10,000	$ 10,000	$ 10,000	$ 10,000	$ 10,000	$ 10,000
1981	$ 21,000	$ 19,000	$ 20,000	$ 20,000	$ 20,000	$ 20,000
1982	$ 40,000	$ 40,000	$ 40,000	$ 40,000	$ 40,000	$ 40,000
1983	$ 70,000	$ 60,000	$ 50,000	$ 40,000	$ 30,000	$ 20,000

Y Corporation must initially determine if its base period percentage for the same 6 consecutive months of the 3 preceding taxable years equals or exceeds 70 percent (see section 6655(e)(3)(C) and §1.6655-3(b)(4)). By using its taxable income for the first 6 months of 1980, 1981, and 1982, Y qualifies since its base period percentage is 87.5 percent (which exceeds 70 percent) computed as follows:

(1)	Taxable income for first 6 months of 1980	$420,000
(2)	Total taxable income for 1980	$480,000
(3)	Divide item (1) by item (2)	$.875
(4)	Taxable income for first 6 months of 1981	$840,000
(5)	Total taxable income for 1981	$960,000
(6)	Divide item (4) by item (5)	.875
(7)	Taxable income for first 6 months of 1982	$1,680,000
(8)	Total taxable income for 1982	$1,920,000
(9)	Divide item (7) by item (8)	.875
(10)	Add items (3), (6), and (9)	2.625
(11)	Divide item (10) by 3	.875

(c) To determine whether the installment payment made on April 15, 1983, equals or exceeds 90 percent of the applicable amount (computed under the rules of section 6655(e)(2) and §1.6655-3(a)(2)) for the 3-month period, the following computation is necessary:

(1)	Taxable income for first 3 months of 1983	$1,930,000
(2)	Taxable income for first 3 months of 1980 ($270,000) divided by total taxable income for 1980 ($480,000)	.5625
(3)	Taxable income for first 3 months of 1981 ($540,000) divided by total taxable income for 1981 ($960,000)	.5625
(4)	Taxable income for first 3 months of 1982 ($1,090,000) divided by total taxable income for 1982 ($1,920,000)	.5677
(5)	Add items (2), (3), and (4) and divide by 3	.5642
(6)	Divide item (1) by item (5)	$3,420,772.78
(7)	Determine the tax on item (6)	$1,553,305.48
(8)	Taxable income for first 4 months of 1980 ($340,000) divided by total taxable income for 1980 ($480,000)	.7083
(9)	Taxable income for first 4 months of 1981 ($670,000) divided by total taxable income for 1981 ($960,000)	.6979
(10)	Taxable income for first 4 months of 1982 ($1,360,000) divided by total taxable income for 1982 ($1,920,000)	.7083
(11)	Add items (8), (9), and (10) and divide by 3	.7048
(12)	Multiply item (7) by item (11)	$1,094,769.70
(13)	90% of item (12)	$985,292.73

(d) To determine whether the installment payment made on or before June 15, 1983, equals or exceeds 90 percent of the applicable amount (computed under the rules of section 6655(e)(2) and §1.6655-3(a)(2)) for the 5-month period, the following computation is necessary:

(1)	Taxable income for first 5 months of 1983	$2,950,000
(2)	Taxable income for first 5 months of 1980 ($400,000) divided by total taxable income for 1980 ($480,000)	.8333
(3)	Taxable income for first 5 months of 1981 ($795,000) divided by total taxable income for 1981 ($960,000)	.8281

(1)	Taxable income for first 11 months of 1983	$3,370,000

The total amounts of all payments of estimated tax actually paid on or before the installment dates of April 15, 1983, June 15, 1983, September 15, 1983, and December 15, 1983, are $345,000, $690,000, $1,035,000, and $1,380,000, respectively. Since the total amounts of estimated tax actually paid on the first, second, third, and fourth installment dates does not equal or exceed the amounts required to be paid on such dates if the estimated tax were 90 percent of the applicable amount (computed under the rules of section 6655(e)(2) and §1.6655-3(a)(2)) for the first 3-month period, first 5-month period, first 8-month period, and first 11-month period of the taxable year, the exception described in section 6655(e) and this section does not apply, and the addition to the tax with respect to the underpayment for all installments will be imposed unless another exception (see §6655(d)) applies with respect to these installments.

Par. 8. A new §1.6655-4 is added immediately following §1.6655-3 to read as follows:

§1.6655-4 Estimated tax payments in the case of large corporations.

(a) Elimination of certain exceptions to underpayment penalty for large corporations. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983, section 6655(d)(1) and (2) and §1.6655-2(a)(1) and (2)(relating to exceptions to underpayment of estimated tax) shall not apply to large corporations (as defined in paragraph (e) of this section). However, the exception relating to the annualization of income (see section 6655(d)(3) and §1.6655-2(a)(3)) remains available to large corporations for taxable years beginning after such date. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982, the additional exception for corporations with recurring seasonal income is available to large corporations (see section 6655(e) and §1.6655-3).

(b) Transitional rule; minimum percentage requirement. For taxable years beginning before January 1, 1984, in the case of large corporations, the amount treated as estimated tax for the taxable year under section 6655(d)(1) and (2) shall in no event be less than the minimum estimated tax (as defined in paragraph (c)). Payment by a large corporation of less than the minimum estimated tax is an underpayment of estimated tax to which the addition to tax provided under section 6655(a) applies unless an exception provided under section 6655(d)(3) and §1.6655-2(a)(3) and section 6655(e) and §1.6655-3 (for taxable years beginning after 1982) applies.

(c) Minimum estimated tax defined. For purposes of this section, the term "minimum estimated tax" means—

(1) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1980, and before January 1, 1982, an amount which is not less than 60 percent of the tax shown on its income tax return for such year or, if no return was filed for such year, 60 percent of the tax for such year;

(2) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1981, and before January 1, 1983, an amount which is not less than 65 percent of the tax shown on its income tax return for such year or, if no return was filed for such year, 65 percent of the tax for such year; and

(3) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982, and before January 1, 1984, an amount which is not less than 75 percent of the tax shown on its income tax return for such year or, if no return was filed for such year, 75 percent of the tax for such year.

(d) Payment in installments. Every large corporation required to make payments of minimum estimated tax for a taxable year must make payments in installments in accordance with the provisions of section 6154(b). Thus, for example, a large corporation which, before the 1st day of the 4th month of the taxable year, reasonably expects its estimated tax for such taxable year to be $40 or more, shall make quarterly installments of its minimum estimated tax on or before the 15th day of the 4th, 6th, 9th, and 12th month of its taxable year.

(e) Large corporation—(1) In general. For purposes of this section, a corporation is a large corporation if the corporation (or a predecessor corporation) had taxable income of at least $1 million for any of the 3 taxable years immediately preceding the taxable year involved ("testing period"). For purposes of this section, a predecessor corporation is the distributor or transferor corporation in a transaction to which section 381 (relating to carryovers in certain corporate acquisitions) applies.

(2) Short taxable year. In the case of a corporation (or predecessor corporation) which had a short taxable year for any of the 3 taxable years immediately preceding the taxable year involved, for purposes of determining whether the $1 million amount referred to in subparagraph (1) is equaled or exceeded, the "taxable income" for the short taxable year shall be computed by—

(i) Multiplying by 12 the taxable income for the short taxable year, and

(ii) Dividing the resulting amount by the number of months in the short taxable year.

(3) Component members of controlled group. (i) For purposes of applying subparagraph (1) of this paragraph to any of the 3 taxable years immediately preceding the taxable year involved with respect to corporations that are component members of a controlled group of corporations (as defined in section 1563(a)) for such taxable year, the $1 million amount shall be divided equally among the component members of such group unless all of such component members consent to an apportionment plan providing for an unequal allocation of such amount. The procedure for making and filing this plan shall be the same as the procedure used for making and filing an apportionment plan under section 1561. See section 1561 and the regulations thereunder. The provisions of section 6655(i) and this section shall not apply to component members of a controlled group for any taxable year in which the aggregate taxable income of the component members of the controlled group is less than $1 million.

(ii) In the case of any corporation which was a component member of a controlled group of corporations at any time during the 3 preceding taxable years but is not a member of such group during its current taxable year, taxable income for the 3 preceding taxable years shall be determined as if such corporation were not a member of a group at any time during those years. With respect to the controlled group, the taxable income of its former member shall not be taken into account in determining such group's taxable income for any of the 3 preceding taxable years in making a determination whether such group is a "large corporation" for the current taxable year.

(4) Computation of taxable income in year where there occurs a transaction to which section 381 applies. (i) For purposes of determining whether an acquiring corporation had taxable income of $1 million or more for a year in which there occurs a transaction to which section 381 applies, its taxable income shall be the sum of—

(A) The taxable income of the acquiring corporation for its taxable year, plus

(B) The taxable income of the distributor or transferor for that portion of the acquiring corporation's taxable year up to and including the date of distribution or transfer (as defined in §1.381(b)-1(b)).

(ii) For purposes of determining whether a transferor or distributor corporation had taxable income of $1 million or more for a year in which there occurs a transaction to which section 381 applies, its taxable income shall be reduced by the amount of its taxable income for that portion of its taxable year corresponding to the acquiring corporation's taxable year up to and including the date of distribution or transfer (as defined in §1.381(b)-1(b)).

(5) Consolidated returns. [reserved].

(6) Illustration. The provisions of subparagraphs (1) and (4) of this paragraph (e) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. X Corporation and Y Corporation are calendar year taxpayers. In 1983 Y Corporation acquires all of the assets of X Corporation in a transaction to which section 381 applies. Y Corporation's taxable income for both 1981 and 1982 was less than $1 million. X Corporation's taxable income for 1983 is determined under subparagraph (4) to be $300,000 for that portion of the acquiring corporation's taxable year up to and including the date of transfer. Y Corporation's taxable income for 1983 is $800,000. Under the provisions of subparagraph (4), Y Corporation's 1983 taxable income for purposes of determining whether it is a large corporation for taxable year 1984 is $1,100,000 (i.e., $800,000 + $300,000). If Y Corporation's 1983 taxable income as determined under subparagraph (4) had been less than $1 million but X Corporation's taxable income in 1981 or 1982 had been $1 million or more, then Y Corporation would be a large corporation for taxable year 1984 since X Corporation is a predecessor corporation.

(7) Effect on a corporation's taxable income of items which may be carried back to a prior taxable year. (i) In determining whether a corporation (or predecessor corporation) is a "large corporation" for its present taxable year, that is, whether it had taxable income of $1 million or more during any of the 3 taxable years preceding its present taxable year ("testing period"), items which could be carried back under other Code provisions (e.g., those described in sections 172 and 1212) from one of the years in the testing period to another year in the testing period shall be taken into account. Additionally, if a corporation's taxable income for a year during the testing period is redetermined during that testing period, by reason of an examination by the Internal Revenue Service or otherwise, such redetermination shall be taken into account in determining whether the corporation is a large corporation for its present taxable year. Any items which are carried forward under other Code provisions shall be taken into account in determining a corporation's taxable income.

(ii) The provisions of subparagraph (7)(i) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. X Corporation's taxable income for taxable years 1981 and 1982 was $1 million. Therefore, X was a large corporation for 1982 and 1983. X incurred a net operating loss in 1983 which was carried back under section 172 to taxable years 1981 and 1982. This carryback reduced X's taxable income for both 1981 and 1982 to below $1 million. For taxable year 1984, X is not a large corporationi since the net operating loss sustained during one of the years in the 3-year testing period may be carried back to the other years in the 3-year testing period. However, this net operating loss which is carried back does not affect X's large corporation status for taxable years 1982 and 1983 because the 1983 net operating loss was not sustained during the respective 3-year testing periods for 1982 and 1983.

Par. 9. Section 1.6655-5 is redesignated as §1.6655-6, and a new §1.6655-5 is added to read as follows:

§1.6655-5 Short taxable years in the case of corporations.

(a) In general. The provisions of section 6655, with one exception described in paragraph (b) of this section and with certain modifications relating to the application of subsection (d) and (e) thereof which are explained in paragraphs (c) and (d) of this section, are applicable in the case of a short taxable year for which a payment of estimated tax is required to be made.

(b) Exception to payment of estimated tax. In the case of a short taxable year, no payment of estimated tax is required if the short taxable year is either—

(1) A period of less than 4 months, or

(2) A period of 4 or more months but less than 12 months and the requirements of section 6154(a) are not met before the 1st day of the last month in the short taxable year.

For purposes of this section a taxable year of 52 or 53 weeks shall be deemed a period of 12 months in the case of a corporation which computes its taxable income in accordance with the election permitted by section 441(f).

(c) Rules as to application of section 6655(d). In any case in which the taxable year for which an underpayment of estimated tax exists is a short taxable year due to a change in annual accounting periods, in determining the tax—

(1) Shown on the return for the preceding taxable year (for purposes of section 6655(d)(1));

(2) Based on the current year's rates but otherwise on the basis of the facts shown on the return for the preceding taxable year and the law applicable to such year (for purposes of section 6655(d)(2)); or

(3) Computed by placing taxable income for a portion of the current year on an annual basis under section 6655(d)(3); the tax will be reduced by multiplying it by the number of months in the short taxable year and dividing the resulting amount by 12. The application of the exception provided in section 6655(d)(3) shall be determined as if the estimated tax were 90 percent of the tax so reduced (80 percent of the tax so reduced for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1983).

(d) Rules as to application of section 6655(e). In any case in which the taxable year for which an underpayment of estimated tax exists is a short taxable year due to a change in annual accounting periods, in determining the applicable amount under section 6655(e)(2), this amount will be reduced by multiplying it by the number of months in the short taxable year and dividing the resulting number by 12. The application of the exception provided in section 6655(e) shall be determined as if the estimated tax were 90 percent of the applicable amount so reduced.

(e) Preceding taxable year a short taxable year. If "the preceding taxable year" referred to in section 6655(d)(2) was a short taxable year, the tax computed on the basis of the facts shown on the return for such preceding year, for purposes of determining the applicability of the exception described in section 6655(d)(2), shall be the tax computed on the annual basis in the manner described in section 443(b)(1)(prior to its reduction in the manner described in the last sentence thereof). If the tax rates for the taxable year with respect to which the underpayment occurs differ from the rates applicable to the preceding taxable year, the tax determined in accordance with the preceding sentence shall be recomputed using the rates applicable to the year with respect to which the underpayment occurs.

Par. 10. Paragraph (a)(1) of §1.6655-6 as redesignated is amended by removing "Section 6655(g)" and adding "Section 6655(h)" in lieu thereof. Paragraph (a)(6) of §1.6655-6 as redesignated is amended by removing "§1.6655-1 through §1.6655-3" and adding "§1.6655-1 through §1.6655-5" in lieu thereof.

PART 301—REGULATIONS ON PROCEDURE AND ADMINISTRATION

Par. 11. Section 301.6655-1 is amended to read as follows:

§301.6655-1 Failure by corporation to pay estimated income tax.

For regulations under section 6655, see §§1.6655-1 to 1.6655-6, inclusive of this chapter (Income Tax Regulations).

These amendments are proposed to be issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code (68A Stat. 917, 26 U.S.C. 7805).

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Tax Return Preparers

LR-290-82

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations under sections 6107(b) and the Regulations on Procedure and Administration under section 7216(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The amendment under section 6107(b) relates to the retention of records of income tax returns prepared by a corporation or a partnership as an income tax return preparer. The amendment under section 7216(b) relates to disclosure to grand juries of income tax return information by the preparers of the returns.

EFFECTIVE DATES: The amendments are proposed to be effective [Date which is 30 days after publication of the amendment by Treasury Decision]. Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by January 16, 1984.

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T [290-82], Washington, D.C. 20224.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 6107(b) and the Regulations on Procedure and Administration under section 7216(b) (26 CFR Part 301). The proposed amendment to section 6107(b) designates the person required to retain records of income tax returns when the income tax return preparer is a corporation or partnership which has been dissolved. The proposed amendment to regulations under section 7216(b) clarifies that disclosure of tax return information by an income tax return preparer to a grand jury does not trigger the penalty provision of section 7216(a). These amendments are to be issued under the authority contained in sections 7216(b)(3) (85 Stat. 529, 26 U.S.C. 7216) and 7805 (68A Stat. 917, 26 U.S.C. 7805) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

DISCUSSION

Section 6107(b) provides that an income tax return preparer must retain a copy of each income tax return prepared, or a list of the taxpayers for whom such returns were prepared, available for inspection upon request for a specified 3-year period. When the preparer is a corporation or a partnership which is dissolved before completion of the 3-year period, the question has arisen as to who must retain the above described records for inspection until the 3-year period is completed. This amendment to the regulation would place that duty upon all persons under state law who are responsible for winding up the affairs of the corporation or partnership. If no persons are designated under state law, then the proposed regulations provide that, collectively, the directors of the corporation or the general partners of the partnership shall be required to retain the records for the requisite 3-year period.

Section 7216(b) provides that the penalty provision of section 7216(a) will not apply to the disclosure or use of information by preparers of returns if the disclosure is made pursuant to provisions of the Code or pursuant to an order of a court. Section 7216(b)(3) gives the Secretary regulatory authority to prescribe other exceptions to section 7216(a). This amendment to the regulation would clarify that disclosure of tax return information by an income tax return preparer to a grand jury does not trigger the penalty provision of section 7216(a).

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting as final regulations these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably six copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the Federal Register.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT OF 1980 AND EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Secretary of the Treasury has certified that this proposed amendment to the regulations would not have a significant impact on a substantial number of small entities. Accordingly, these proposed regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act of 1980 (5 U.S.C. chapter 6). The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this proposed rule is not a major regulation subject to Executive Order 12291.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is Mary Frances Pearson of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing these regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

If state law does not specify any person or persons as responsible for winding up, then, collectively, the directors or general partners shall be subject, on behalf of the corporation or partnership, to the record retention requirements of this paragraph (b). BACKGROUND

The temporary regulations  [page 93, this Bulletin] revise §§5f.338.1 and 5f.338-2 of the Temporary Income Tax Regulations under the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA) [Pub. L. 97-248, 1982-2 C.B. 462], as published in the FEDERAL REGISTER on November 22, 1982 (47 F.R. 52433), [T.D. 7855, 1982-2 C.B. 79], and add new §5f.338-3. L. 97-448, 1983-1 C.B. 451,470]) and to provide guidance relating to miscellaneous procedural matters. For the text of the temporary regulations, see T.D. 7942, [page 93, of this Bulletin]. The preamble to the temporary regulations explains the addition to the regulations.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT AND EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these proposed regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6). The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this proposed rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required.

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably six copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER. The Internal Revenue Service requests persons submitting comments to OMB to also send copies of the comments to the Service.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Information Returns of Brokers

LR-201-83

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed amendments to the regulations relating to information returns of brokers. The proposed regulations would clarify the information reporting requirements applicable to sales (including short sales) of commodities and permit the Secretary to exempt from the broker reporting requirements, by notice published in the FEDERAL REGISTER, a minimum gross proceeds amount on sales of commodities. The proposed regulations would affect brokers effecting sales (including short sales) of commodities.

DATES: Written comments and request to speak at the public hearing must be delivered by March 5, 1984. A notice of public hearing on this proposed rule is published simultaneously with this notice in the FEDERAL REGISTER. The amendments are proposed to be effective on the date they are published in the FEDERAL REGISTER as final regulations. In general, the proposed amendments would apply to sales made on or after July 1, 1983, but no report would be required with respect to sales of a commodity (other than lead, palm oil, rapeseed, tea, or tin) that is not deliverable in satisfaction of a regulated futures contract by reason of its form or quality if the sale occurs before the date the amendments are published in the FEDERAL REGISTER as final regulations. The deadline to apply for an undue hardship exemption from magnetic media reporting for a broker or barter exchange in existence on or before July 1, 1983, is extended to February 6, 1984. Application for exemption from magnetic media reporting should be sent to the Internal Revenue Service Center with which the taxpayer normally files a return; no such application will be processed through the National Office in Washington, D.C.

ADDRESS: Send comments and request to speak at the public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR-201-83), Washington, D.C. 20224.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 6045 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, relating to information returns of brokers. These proposed amendments clarify information reporting requirements for brokers effecting sales (including short sales) of commodities. The amendments are to be issued under the authority of sections 6045 and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 747, 917; 26 U.S.C. 6045, 7805).

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

The current regulations under section 6045 generally require brokers to make returns of information on sales (including short sales) of commodities effected for customers. It is unclear under these regulations whether certain forms of personal property are commodities. The proposed regulations provide rules for determining whether personal property (including gold and silver) is a commodity. In general, the term "commodity" is defined as personal property that is deliverable in satisfaction of a regulated futures contract, certain specified personal property, personal property that the Secretary determines is to be treated as a commodity, or any form or quality of or any interest in such personal property. The term "commodity" does not include a security, regulated futures contract, forward contract, or a form of tangible personal property if the gross proceeds from its sale exceed by more than 15 percent its value as a commodity. It should be noted that this rule and the alternative methods of tangible personal property valuation set out in the proposed regulations (the "exact" and "approximate" methods) represent the Service's preliminary attempt to distinguish commodities from other property. The Service encourages public comment on the proposed approach and is particularly interested in suggestions for more precise distinctions between commodities and other property.

The proposed regulations also permit the Secretary to exempt sales of small amounts of a commodity from the broker reporting requirements. The Secretary would permit the exemption by prescribing a minimum gross proceeds reporting amount in a rule-related notice published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

Under these proposed regulations, no report would be required with respect to a sale of a commodity (other than lead, palm oil, rapeseed, tea, or tin) that is not deliverable in satisfaction of a regulated futures contract by reason of its form or quality if the sale occurs before the date the amendments are published in the FEDERAL REGISTER as final regulations.

CFTC APPROVED COMMODITIES

Personal property is deliverable in satisfaction of a regulated futures contract if such property is deliverable in satisfaction of a futures contract that has been approved for trading by the Commodities Futures Trading Commission (CFTC). The CFTC has approved the trading of futures contracts in the following types of property:

COMMENTS AND NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably seven copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A notice of public hearing on this proposed rule is being published simultaneously in the FEDERAL REGISTER with this notice.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this proposed rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required.

Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply because the rules proposed are interpretative and provide an exemption. Accordingly, a Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is not required.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations is Bruce H. Jurist of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, on matters of both substance and style.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are as follows:

Paragraph. Section 1.6045-1 is amended by revising paragraph (a)(5), revising Example (5) of paragraph (b), adding Examples (9) through (17) to paragraph (b), redesignating paragraphs (c)(3)(v)(a), (b), and (c) as (c)(3)(v)(A), (B), and (C), respectively, revising paragraph (c)(3)(vii), adding paragraph (c)(3)(x), adding Examples (4) and (5) to paragraph (c)(4), and revising paragraph (l)(2)(ii). The revised and added provisions read as follows:

§1.6045-1 Returns of information of brokers and barter exchanges.

(a) Meanings of terms. ***

(5)(i) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (a)(5)(ii) of this section, the term "commodity" means—

(A) Any form or quality of personal property that is deliverable (whether or not subject to price adjustment for form or quality) in satisfaction of a regulated futures contract that has been approved for trading by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (whether or not the regulated futures contract is actually traded);

(B) Any form or quality of lead, palm oil, rapeseed, tea, or tin;

(C) Any form or quality of personal property that the Secretary determines is to be treated as a "commodity" under this section, from and after the date specified in a rule-related notice of such determination published in the FEDERAL REGISTER;

(D) Any form or quality of personal property a form or quality of which is described in paragraph (a)(5)(i)(A) of this section; or

(E) Any interest in personal property that is described in paragraph (a)(5)(i)(A), (B), (C), or (D) of this section.

(ii) The term "commodity" does not include—

(A) A security as defined in paragraph (a)(3) of this section;

(B) A regulated futures contract as defined in paragraph (a)(6) of this section;

(C) A forward contract as defined in paragraph (a)(7) of this section;

(D) A form of tangible personal property, or an interest therein, gross proceeds from the sale of which exceed by more than 15 percent the value on the date of sale of the underlying personal property determined, at the election of the broker, by either exact valuation or approximate valuation (as defined in paragraph (a)(5)(iii) of this section); or

(E) A form or quality of tangible personal property or an interest therein if no single type of tangible personal property described in paragraph (a)(5)(i) of this section comprises at least 30 percent of the weight or volume of the underlying personal property and the gross proceeds from the sale of such property are less than three thousand dollars ($3,000).

(iii) For purposes of paragraph (a)(5)(ii)(D) of this section—

(A) The term "exact valuation" means to determine the value of the underlying personal property—

(1) By separately determining the value of each type of tangible personal property described in paragraph (a)(5)(i) of this section of which the underlying personal property is composed at the price at which each such type of tangible personal property is bought and sold in the ordinary course of the buyer's business, or a similarly situated business if such price cannot be determined for the buyer's business; and

(2) Aggregating all such separately determined values; and

(B) The term "approximate valuation" means to determine the value of the underlying personal property—

(1) Solely with reference to its weight or volume;

(2) As if such weight or volume were composed entirely of a single type of tangible personal property described in paragraph (a)(5)(i) of this section identical in kind and quality to the most valuable type of tangible personal property described in paragraph (a)(5)(i) of this section that comprises at least 30 percent of such weight or volume (or if no type of tangible personal property described in paragraph (a)(5)(i) of this section comprises at least 30% of such weight or volume, the most valuable type of tangible personal property described in paragraph (a)(5)(i) of this section that comprises any portion of the underlying personal property);

(3) At the price at which the tangible personal property treated as composing the entire weight or volume is bought and sold in the ordinary course of the buyer's business, or a similarly situated business if such price cannot be determined for the buyer's business.

(iv) For purposes of paragraph (a)(5)(ii)(E) and (iii) of this section,

"type of tangible personal property" means any tangible personal property described in paragraph (a)(5)(i)(A), (B), or (C) of this section and any other tangible personal property that cannot be commercially reduced into two or more elements.

(b) Examples. ***

Example (5). A warehouse receipt is an interest in personal property for purposes of paragraph (a) of this section. Consequently, a warehouse receipt for a quantity of lead is a commodity under paragraph (a)(5)(i)(E) of this section. Similarly, an executory contract that requires delivery of a warehouse receipt for a quantity of lead is a forward contract under paragraph (a)(7)(i) of this section.

* * * * *

Example (9). If the gross proceeds from the sale of a gold coin (such as a Krugerrand, Maple Leaf, 50 Peso coin, or 100 Crown coil) do not exceed by more than 15 percent the bullion value of the gold in the coin, the coin is a commodity under paragraph (a)(5)(i)(D) of this section and is not excluded by paragraph (a)(5)(ii)(D) of this section.

Example (10). U.S. silver dimes, quarters, and half dollars minted before 1965 are personal property deliverable in satisfaction of a regulated futures contract approved by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission. The coins are a commodity under paragraph (a)(5)(i)(A) of this section. If, however, the gross proceeds from the sale of an individual coin exceed by more than 15 percent the bullion value of the silver in the coin, the coin is not a commodity under paragraph (a)(5)(ii)(D) of this section. If the gross proceeds from the sale of coins as a unit do not exceed by more than 15 percent the bullion value of the silver in the entire unit, all the coins in the unit are a commodity under paragraph (a)(5)(i)(A) of this section notwithstanding the possibility that the gross proceeds from the sale of one or more individual coins in the unit might exceed by more than 15 percent the bullion value of the silver in such individual coins.

Example (11). If the gross proceeds from the sale of a U.S. silver dollar minted before 1970 do not exceed by more than 15 percent the bullion value of the silver in the coin, the coin is a commodity under paragraph (a)(5)(i)(D) of this section and not excluded by paragraph (a)(5)(ii)(D) of this section.

Example (12). Customer E sells to jewelry store S, a broker, a gold necklace. The gross proceeds from the sale of the necklace do not exceed by more than 15 percent the value of the gold as bullion. Consequently, the gold necklace is a commodity under paragraph (a)(5)(i)(D) of this section and not excluded under paragraph (a)(5)(ii)(D) of this section.

Example (13). Customer F sells to jewelry store T, a broker, a diamond ring. The diamond ring (composed of a gold band and gem) weighs 0.5 troy ounces. The gold in the ring comprises more than 30 percent of the total weight of the ring, and the gross proceeds from the sale of the diamond ring exceed by more than 15 percent the value of 0.5 troy ounces of gold as bullion. Consequently, the diamond ring is not a commodity under paragraph (a)(5)(i)(D) of this section because of its exclusion under paragraph (a)(5)(ii)(D) of this section.

Example (14). Customer G sells to smelter U, a broker, a gold and silver goblet. More than 30 percent of the weight or volume of the goblet is gold. Assume that the broker chooses to use the "approximate valuation" method described in paragraph (a)(5)(iii)(B) of this section and that the goblet weighs 10 troy ounces. If the gross proceeds from the sale of the goblet do not exceed by more than 15 percent the value of 10 troy ounces of gold as bullion, the goblet is a commodity under paragraph (a)(5)(i)(D) of this section and not excluded under paragraph (a)(5)(ii)(D) of this section.

Example (15). V, a jeweler, generally purchases inventory (that is a commodity under paragraph (a)(5) of this section) from wholesalers and purchases inventory from the general public only when sufficient inventory cannot be secured from wholesalers. V does not accept offers for sale, but seeks out sellers when inventory is needed. Since V does not stand ready to effect sales to be made by others, V is not a broker.

Example (16). W, a coin dealer, regularly advertises that it will purchase gold items for their bullion value. Since W stands ready to effect sales to be made by others, W is a broker.

Example (17). X, a coin dealer, regularly buys gold items when they are offered for sale and this is known to sellers of such items. Since X stands ready to effect sales to be made by others, X is a broker whether or not it advertises.

(c) Reporting by brokers—

(3) Exceptions. ***

(vii) Foreign currency. No return of information is required with respect to a sale of foreign currency unless—

(A) Such sale is pursuant to a regulated futures contract or forward contract that requires or permits delivery of foreign currency; or

(B) Such foreign currency is a form or quality of or interest in gold or silver not described in paragraph (a)(5)(ii)(D) of this section.

* * * * *

(x) Minimum gross proceeds. No return of information is required with respect to a sale of a commodity effected by a broker for a customer if the aggregate gross proceeds from all sales of commodities effected by the broker for the customer on the date of such sale are less than the minimum gross proceeds reporting amount applicable on such date. For this purpose, the minimum gross proceeds reporting amount is the amount prescribed as such by the Secretary in a rule-related notice published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

(4) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of the reporting requirements.

* * * * *

Example (4). X, an individual, exchanges at bank N British pounds, in paper currency form, for U.S. dollars. Even though the exchange is a sale of a commodity under paragraph (a)(5)(i)(A) of this section, such sale is exempt from reporting under paragraph (c)(3)(vii) of this section.

Example (5). Y, an individual, sells goods to Company P, a British corporation. In payment for those goods Company P tenders to Y a check in the amount of 1000 pounds sterling. Y cashes the check at bank M and receives U.S. dollars. Even though the transaction is a sale of a commodity under paragraph (a)(5)(i)(E) of this section, such sale is exempt from reporting under paragraph (c)(3)(vii) of this section.

* * * * *

(1) Use of magnetic media. ***

(2) Exception for undue hardship. ***

(ii) In the case of a person who is a broker or barter exchange on July 1, 1983, an application to file returns of information on Form 1099 must be filed on or before February 6, 1984. In the case of a person who becomes a broker or barter exchange after July 1, 1983, such application must be filed by the later of February 6, 1984 or the end of the second month following the month in which such person becomes a broker or barter exchange.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Regulations on Procedure and Administration (26 CFR Part 301) under section 7701 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The proposed amendments relate to the definition of the term "trust" for federal tax purposes. These amendments to the regulations are proposed to be issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

EXPLANATION OF AMENDMENTS

Existing §301.7701-4(c) of the Regulations on Procedure and Administration provides guidance as to the classification for federal tax purposes of certain "investment" trusts. Under that regulation an entity of the type "commonly known as a fixed investment trust" is classified as a trust or an association (taxable as a corporation), depending upon the existence of a power under the agreement to vary the investment of the certificate holders. The question has been raised whether the rules for fixed investment trusts apply to an investment arrangement under which investors may choose among different classes of ownership with varying investment attributes.

The entities commonly known as fixed investment trusts at the time that the existing regulations were first promulgated in 1945 had only one class of certificates, with each certificate representing an undivided interest in trust property. "The investor [in a fixed trust]. . .has a beneficial undivided interest in specific deposited securities or property. . . .In the fixed trust. . .only one class of security is issued—the certificate of beneficial interest which is, in form, a receipt issued by the trustee for the deposited property." [Investment Trusts and Investment Companies, H.R. Doc. No. 567, 76th Cong., 3d Sess. 8-9 (1940) (footnote omitted).] The purpose of a fixed investment trust was to provide a convenient vehicle to enable investors to acquire undivided beneficial interests in a diversified investment portfolio. Thus, entities with multiple classes of ownership were not commonly known as fixed investment trusts at the time that the regulations were promulgated. *Consequently, the "fixed investment trust" rules were not intended to apply to such entities. In contrast, at the time the regulations were issued, multiple classes of ownership, such as preferred and common stock, often were associated with "management companies." H.R. Doc. No. 567 at 8-9. A "management trust", which is one type of management company, is classified for tax purposes as an association taxable as a corporation. Treas. Reg. §301.7701-4(c).

In recent months new arrangements have been created that are claimed to be fixed investment trusts. In one such arrangement, a mortgage pool was formed to allow various groups of investors with different investment objectives to join together in a financial arrangement in which different rights and risks associated with a pool of mortgages are allocated among three classes of certificates. The first class of certificates provides for a priority in distributions from the pool and represents a short term interest while the second and third classes of certificates represent interests with longer maturities. The owner of a certificate in any of the three classes is not entitled to distributions of principal and interest on any specific mortgage or mortgages, but merely the right to certain distributions from the pool. Because there are multiple classes of ownership, this arrangement is not a fixed investment trust. Moreover, a significant objective of the arrangement is to shift to the first class of certificate holders the risk that mortgages in the pool will be prepaid, so that the holders of the second and third classes of certificates will have "call protection" (freedom from premature termination of their interests on account of prepayments). This arrangement was not intended to protect and conserve property for the beneficiaries. Rather, the certificate holders, through this arrangement, associated together to fulfill their diverse profit-making objectives. The certificate holder must be viewed, therefore, as associates in a joint enterprise for the conduct of business for profit, and the arrangement is classified as an association or a partnership under §301.7701-2 of the regulations.

A second new type of arrangement provides a vehicle for investors to divide the income and appreciation elements inherent in a share of common stock. In this arrangement, a custodian accepts shares of stock in a single corporation and issues to the depositor one certificate for each share deposited. The certificate is perforated and can be separated by the depositor into two parts, with one part representing the right to receive an amount referable to the current value of the share of stock and the right to dividends from the stock, and the other part representing the right to the future appreciation on the share above the amount allocated to holders of the first part. The purpose of the arrangement is to allow investors to separate the certificate, retain the portion that suits their objectives and sell the other portion in the market. Buying one of the two parts enables investors to fulfill their specific profit-making objectives. Although only one type or class of certificate is issued by the custodian, the effect of the arrangement is to create two classes of interests. Thus, the arrangement is not a fixed investment trust. Moreover, as with the type of arrangement described above, the investors have associated together to divide the burdens and benefits inherent in the contributed shares and must be viewed as associates with an objective to carry on a business and divide the gains therefrom. Thus, this arrangement is also classified as an association or a partnership under §301.7701-2 of the regulations.

*In Commissioner v. Chase National Bank, 122 F.2d 540 (2d Cir. 1941), the court held that a trust having certificates with detachable coupons evidencing the bearer's rights to receive semi-annual distributions from the trust paid out of dividends and other income from stocks held by the trust was a fixed investment trust. The court found, however, that the purpose underlying the arrangement was to enable investors to acquire undivided beneficial interests in the stocks held in the arrangement. 122 F.2d at 541. The detachable coupons were a convenience to facilitate distributions and there was no apparent intention for the coupons to be detached and actively traded prior to their maturity. Thus, there was no intention to create a second class of ownership.

In a third type of arrangement, a custodian holds one or more issues of bonds and issues certificates representing the right to specific interest or principal payments on the bonds. Although this arrangement is similar to that described above, it is distinguishable in that the division of the property is only between the bonds and specific interest coupons thereon. In section 1232B of the Code, Congress has provided a method for taxing transactions involving such "stripped bonds" and "stripped coupons." Thus, it would be inconsistent with section 1232B to treat typical "coupon stripping" arrangements in which bonds are held by a custodian and interests in specifically identifiable stripped coupons or bonds are sold as either associations or partnerships.

The proposed amendments to the regulations clarify the meaning of "fixed investment trust" under the regulations. The existing regulations, in focusing on the power of the trustee to vary the investment of the certificate holders, reflect the issue that was of primary concern at the time the regulations were drafted. With the development of multiple-class investment arrangements, however, there is a need for further elaboration on the definition of the term "fixed investment trust" and the essential elements of this type of entity. In providing this definition, the proposed amendments impose a limitation not expressly stated in the existing regulations, and thus it was decided that the amendments should be prospective from April 27, 1984. The proposed rules for classification will apply to investment arrangements, any interests in which are initially issued after April 27, 1984.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this proposed rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required.

Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comments, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, no Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is required by chapter 6 of title 5, United States Code.

COMMENTS AND PUBLIC HEARING

Before adoption of these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably seven copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying.

A public hearing on the proposed regulations will be held on July 31, 1984. For further information about the public hearing, see the notice of hearing that appears elsewhere in this issue of the FEDERAL REGISTER.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations is Paul A. Francis of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, on matters of both substance and style.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, it is proposed to amend 26 CFR Part 301 as follows: Paragraph (c) of §301.7701-4 is revised to read as follows:

§301.7701-4 Trusts.

(c) Certain investment trusts—(1) An "investment" trust of the type commonly known as a management trust is an association, and a trust of the type commonly known as a fixed investment trust is an association if there is power under the trust agreement to vary the investment of the certificate holders. See Commissioner v. North American Bond Trust, 122 F.2d 545 (2d Cir. 1941), cert. denied 314 U.S. 701 (1942). However, if there is no power under the trust agreement to vary the investment of the certificate holders, such fixed investment trust shall be classified as a trust.

(2) A trust commonly known as a fixed investment trust is an arrangement in which legal title to property is conveyed to a trustee for the benefit of a group of investors. Each investor in such a trust has an undivided beneficial interest in the property held in trust, typically represented by certificates of beneficial interest issued to the investor; there is only one class of ownership interest. An arrangement having more than one class of ownership interest is not a fixed investment trust because an investor, rather than having an undivided beneficial interest in each asset of the trust, has a participating interest that differs from the interest held by an investor of another class. Because an arrangement with multiple classes of ownership enables investors to fulfill varying profit-making objectives through the division of rights, and the sharing of risks, in certain assets, the arrangement is considered to have associates and an objective to carry on business and divide the gains therefrom. Such an arrangement, therefore, is classified as an association or a partnership under §301.7701-2.

(3) The requirement that a fixed investment trust have only one class of undivided interests has no application to mere custodial arrangements formed to allow investors to own specifically identifiable stripped coupons or stripped bonds within the meaning of section 1232B.

(4) The provisions of paragraph (c)(2) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A corporation purchases a portfolio of residential mortgages (or participations in residential mortgages) and transfers the mortgages to a bank under a custody agreement. At the same time, the bank as custodian delivers to the corporation certificates evidencing rights to payments from the pooled mortgages; the corporation sells the certificates to the public. The custodian holds legal title to the mortgages in the pool for the benefit of the certificate holders but has no power to reinvest proceeds attributable to the mortgages in the pool or to vary investments in the pool in any other manner. There are two classes of certificates. Holders of class A certificates are entitled to all payments of mortgage principal, both scheduled and prepaid, until their certificates are retired; holders of class B certificates receive payments of principal only after all class A certificates have been retired. This arrangement has two classes of ownerhsip and is, therefore, not a fixed investment trust. Such as arrangement is considered to have associates and an objective to carry on business for profit and divide the gains therefrom. Therefore, it is classified as an association or a partnership under §301.7701-2.

Example (2). A promoter formed a trust in which shareholders of a publicly traded corporation could deposit their stock. For each share of stock deposited with the trust, the participant receives a certificate that can be separated into two parts. One part represents the right to dividends and the value of the underlying stock up to a specified amount, the other part represents the right to appreciation above the specified amount. The two parts are traded separately on the open market. There are two classes of ownership in this arrangement and it is, therefore, not a fixed investment trust. Such an arrangement is considered to have associates and an objective to carry on business for profit and divide the gains therefrom. Therefore, it is classified as an association or a partnership under §301.7701-2.

(Filed by the Office of the Federal Register on April 27, 1984, 4:57 p.m., and published in the issue of the Federal Register for May 2, 1984, 49 F.R. 18741)

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under Section 330, Title 31 of the United States Code (1970 ed.), the Secretary of the Treasury, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, is authorized to suspend or disbar from practice before the Internal Revenue Service any person who has violated the rules and regulations governing the recognition of attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents or enrolled actuaries to practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify such disbarred or suspended practitioners, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been disbarred or suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date of disbarment or period of suspension. This announcement will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletin for five successive weeks for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended or disbarred and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

tioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletin for five consecutive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.
