INTRODUCTION

As required by Section 595(c) of Title 28 of the United States Code, the Office of the Independent Counsel (“OIC” or “Office”) hereby submits substantial and credible information that President William Jefferson Clinton committed acts that may constitute grounds for an impeachment.¹

The information reveals that President Clinton:

- lied under oath at a civil deposition while he was a defendant in a sexual harassment lawsuit;
- lied under oath to a grand jury;
- attempted to influence the testimony of a potential witness who had direct knowledge of facts that would reveal the falsity of his deposition testimony;
- attempted to obstruct justice by facilitating a witness’s plan to refuse to comply with a subpoena;
- attempted to obstruct justice by encouraging a witness to file an affidavit that the President knew would be false, and then by making use of that false affidavit at his own deposition;
- lied to potential grand jury witnesses, knowing that they would repeat those lies before the grand jury; and
- engaged in a pattern of conduct that was inconsistent with his constitutional duty to faithfully execute the laws.

The evidence shows that these acts, and others, were part of a pattern that began as an effort to prevent the disclosure of information about the President’s relationship with a former White House intern and employee, Monica S. Lewinsky, and continued as an effort to prevent the information from being disclosed in an ongoing criminal investigation.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

In May 1994, Paula Corbin Jones filed a lawsuit against William Jefferson Clinton in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Arkansas.² Ms. Jones alleged that while he was the Governor of Arkansas, President Clinton sexually harassed her during an incident in a Little Rock hotel room.³ President Clinton ¹Section 595(c) of Title 28 of the United States Code is part of the Ethics in Government Act. The section provides: (c) Information relating to impeachment.—An independent counsel shall advise the House of Representatives of any substantial and credible information which such independent counsel receives, in carrying out the independent counsel’s responsibilities under this chapter, that may constitute grounds for an impeachment. Nothing in this chapter or section 49 of this title [concerning the assignment of judges to the Special Division that appoints an independent counsel] shall prevent the Congress or either House thereof from obtaining information in the course of an impeachment proceeding.

²Ms. Jones also named Arkansas State Trooper Danny Ferguson as a defendant. For a detailed background of the Jones v. Clinton lawsuit, see the accompanying Appendix, Tab C.

denied the allegations. He also challenged the ability of a private litigant to pursue a lawsuit against a sitting President. In May 1997, the Supreme Court unanimously rejected the President's legal argument. The Court concluded that Ms. Jones, "[l]ike every other citizen who properly invokes [the District Court's] jurisdiction * * * has a right to an orderly disposition of her claims," and that therefore Ms. Jones was entitled to pursue her claims while the President was in office.⁴ A few months later, the pretrial discovery process began.⁵

One sharply disputed issue in the Jones litigation was the extent to which the President would be required to disclose information about sexual relationships he may have had with "other women." Ms. Jones's attorneys sought disclosure of this information, arguing that it was relevant to proving that the President had propositioned Ms. Jones. The President resisted the discovery requests, arguing that evidence of relationships with other women (if any) was irrelevant.

In late 1997, the issue was presented to United States District Judge Susan Webber Wright for resolution. Judge Wright's decision was unambiguous. For purposes of pretrial discovery, President Clinton was required to provide certain information about his alleged relationships with other women. In an order dated December 11, 1997, for example, Judge Wright said: "The Court finds, therefore, that the plaintiff is entitled to information regarding any individuals with whom the President had sexual relations or proposed or sought to have sexual relations and who were during the relevant time frame state or federal employees."⁶ Judge Wright left for another day the issue whether any information of this type would be admissible were the case to go to trial. But for purposes of answering the written questions served on the President, and for purposes of answering questions at a deposition, the District Court ruled that the President must respond.

In mid-December 1997, the President answered one of the written discovery questions posed by Ms. Jones on this issue. When asked to identify all women who were state or federal employees and with whom he had had "sexual relations" since 1986,⁷ the President answered under oath: "None."⁸ For purposes of this interrogatory, the term "sexual relations" was not defined.

ferred various job detriments after refusing Governor Clinton's advances. This Referral expresses no view on the factual or legal merit, or lack thereof, of Ms. Jones's claims.

⁸ V002-DC-00000053 (President Clinton's Supplemental Responses to Plaintiff's Second Set of Interrogatories at 2). During discovery in a civil lawsuit, the parties must answer written questions ("interrogatories") that are served on them by their opponent. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33. The answering party must sign a statement under penalty of perjury attesting to the truthfulness of the answers. Id.

On January 17, 1998, President Clinton was questioned under oath about his relationships with other women in the workplace, this time at a deposition. Judge Wright presided over the deposition. The President was asked numerous questions about his relationship with Monica Lewinsky, by then a 24-year-old former White House intern, White House employee, and Pentagon employee. Under oath and in the presence of Judge Wright, the President denied that he had engaged in a "sexual affair," a "sexual relationship," or "sexual relations" with Ms. Lewinsky. The President also stated that he had no specific memory of having been alone with Ms. Lewinsky, that he remembered few details of any gifts they might have exchanged, and indicated that no one except his attorneys had kept him informed of Ms. Lewinsky's status as a potential witness in the Jones case.

THE INVESTIGATION

On January 12, 1998, this Office received information that Monica Lewinsky was attempting to influence the testimony of one of the witnesses in the Jones litigation, and that Ms. Lewinsky herself was prepared to provide false information under oath in that lawsuit. The OIC was also informed that Ms. Lewinsky had spoken to the President and the President's close friend Vernon Jordan about being subpoenaed to testify in the Jones suit, and that Vernon Jordan and others were helping her find a job. The allegations with respect to Mr. Jordan and the job search were similar to ones already under review in the ongoing Whitewater investigation.⁹

After gathering preliminary evidence to test the information's reliability, the OIC presented the evidence to Attorney General Janet Reno. Based on her review of the information, the Attorney General determined that a further investigation by the Independent Counsel was required.

On the following day, Attorney General Reno petitioned the Special Division of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, on an expedited basis, to expand the jurisdiction of Independent Counsel Kenneth W. Starr. On January 16, 1998, in response to the Attorney General's request, the Special Division issued an order that provides in pertinent part:

The Independent Counsel shall have jurisdiction and authority to investigate to the maximum extent authorized by the Independent Counsel Reauthorization Act of 1994 whether Monica Lewinsky or others suborned perjury, obstructed justice, intimidated witnesses, or otherwise violated federal law other than a Class B or C misdemeanor or infraction in dealing with witnesses, potential witnesses, attorneys, or others concerning the civil case Jones v. Clinton.¹⁰

On January 28, 1998, after the allegations about the President's relationship with Ms. Lewinsky became public, the OIC filed a Motion for Limited Intervention and a Stay of Discovery in Jones v. Clinton. The OIC argued that the civil discovery process should be halted because it was having a negative effect on the criminal investigation. The OIC represented to the Court that numerous individuals then under subpoena in Jones, including Monica Lewinsky, were integral to the OIC's investigation, and that courts routinely stayed discovery in such circumstances.¹¹

The next day Judge Wright responded to the OIC's motion. The Court ruled that discovery would be permitted to continue, except to the extent that it sought information about Monica Lewinsky. The Court acknowledged that "evidence concerning Monica Lewinsky might be relevant to the issues in [the Jones] case."¹² It concluded, however, that this evidence was not "essential to the core issues in this case," and that some of that evidence "might even be inadmissible."¹³ The Court found that the potential value of this evidence was outweighed by the potential delay to the Jones case in continuing to seek discovery about Ms. Lewinsky.¹⁴ The Court also was concerned that the OIC's investigation "could be impaired and prejudiced were the Court to permit inquiry into the Lewinsky matter by the parties in this civil case."¹⁵

On March 9, 1998, Judge Wright denied Ms. Jones's motion for reconsideration of the decision regarding Monica Lewinsky. The order states:

The Court readily acknowledges that evidence of the Lewinsky matter might have been relevant to plaintiff's case and, as she argues, that such evidence might possibly have helped her establish, among other things, intent, absence of mistake, motive, and habit on the part of the President.* * * Nevertheless, whatever relevance such evidence may otherwise have * * * it simply is not essential to the core issues in this case * * *.¹⁶

On April 1, 1998, Judge Wright granted President Clinton's motion for summary judgment, concluding that even if the facts alleged by Paula Jones were true, her claims failed as a matter of law.¹⁷ Ms. Jones has filed an appeal, and as of the date of this Referral, the matter remains under consideration by the United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

After the dismissal of Ms. Jones's lawsuit, the criminal investigation continued. It was (and is) the view of this Office that any attempt to obstruct the proper functioning of the judicial system, regardless of the perceived merits of the underlying case, is a serious matter that warrants further inquiry. After careful consideration of all the evidence, the OIC has concluded that the evidence of wrongdoing is substantial and credible, and that the wrongdoing is of sufficient gravity that it warrants referral to Congress.¹⁸

¹¹ Jones v. Clinton, Motion of the United States for Limited Intervention and a Stay of Discovery, at 6. The overlap in the proceedings was significant. Witnesses called before the grand jury in the criminal investigation had been subpoenaed by both parties to the civil case; defendant's counsel had subpoenaed information from the OIC; and the plaintiff's attorneys had subpoenaed documents directly related to the criminal matter.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE EVIDENCE OF WRONGDOING

It is not the role of this Office to determine whether the President's actions warrant impeachment by the House and removal by the Senate; those judgments are, of course, constitutionally entrusted to the legislative branch.¹⁹ This Office is authorized, rather, to conduct criminal investigations and to seek criminal prosecutions for matters within its jurisdiction.²⁰ In carrying out its investigation, however, this Office also has a statutory duty to disclose to Congress information that "may constitute grounds for an impeachment," a task that inevitably requires judgment about the seriousness of the acts revealed by the evidence.

From the beginning, this phase of the OIC's investigation has been criticized as an improper inquiry into the President's personal behavior; indeed, the President himself suggested that specific inquiries into his conduct were part of an effort to "criminalize my private life."²¹ The regrettable fact that the investigation has often required witnesses to discuss sensitive personal matters has fueled this perception.

All Americans, including the President, are entitled to enjoy a private family life, free from public or governmental scrutiny. But the privacy concerns raised in this case are subject to limits, three of which we briefly set forth here.

First. The first limit was imposed when the President was sued in federal court for alleged sexual harassment. The evidence in such litigation is often personal. At times, that evidence is highly embarrassing for both plaintiff and defendant. As Judge Wright noted at the President's January 1998 deposition, "I have never had a sexual harassment case where there was not some embarrassment."²² Nevertheless, Congress and the Supreme Court have hibited by Rule 6(e) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure from disclosing grand jury material, unless it obtains permission from a court or is otherwise authorized by law to do so. This Office concluded that the statutory obligation of disclosure imposed on an Independent Counsel by 28 U.S.C. § 595(c) grants such authority. Nevertheless, out of an abundance of caution, the OIC obtained permission from the Special Division to disclose grand jury material as appropriate in carrying out its statutory duty. A copy of the disclosure order entered by the Special Division is set forth in the Appendix, Tab B. We also advised Chief Judge Norma Holloway Johnson, who supervises the principal grand jury in this matter, of our determination on that issue.

Others have argued that alleged "lies about sex" have nothing to do with the President's performance in office, and thus, are inconsequential. Former White House Counsel Jack Quinn articulated this view:

This is a matter of sex between consenting adults, and the question of whether or not one or the other was truthful about it. . . . This doesn't go to the question of his conduct in office. And, in that sense, it's trivial.

John F. Harris, "In Political Washington, A Confession Consensus," Washington Post, Aug. 4, 1998, at A1 (quoting Quinn's statement on CBS's "Face the Nation").

The President echoed this theme in his address to the Nation on August 17, 1998, following his grand jury testimony:

. . . I intend to reclaim my family life for my family. It's nobody's business but ours. Even Presidents have private lives. It is time to stop the pursuit of personal destruction and the prying into private lives and get on with our national life.

concluded that embarrassment-related concerns must give way to the greater interest in allowing aggrieved parties to pursue their claims. Courts have long recognized the difficulties of proving sexual harassment in the workplace, inasmuch as improper or unlawful behavior often takes place in private.²³ To excuse a party who lied or concealed evidence on the ground that the evidence covered only “personal” or “private” behavior would frustrate the goals that Congress and the courts have sought to achieve in enacting and interpreting the Nation’s sexual harassment laws. That is particularly true when the conduct that is being concealed—sexual relations in the workplace between a high official and a young subordinate employee—itself conflicts with those goals.

Second. The second limit was imposed when Judge Wright required disclosure of the precise information that is in part the subject of this Referral. A federal judge specifically ordered the President, on more than one occasion, to provide the requested information about relationships with other women, including Monica Lewinsky. The fact that Judge Wright later determined that the evidence would not be admissible at trial, and still later granted judgment in the President’s favor, does not change the President’s legal duty at the time he testified. Like every litigant, the President was entitled to object to the discovery questions, and to seek guidance from the court if he thought those questions were improper. But having failed to convince the court that his objections were well founded, the President was duty bound to testify truthfully and fully. Perjury and attempts to obstruct the gathering of evidence can never be an acceptable response to a court order, regardless of the eventual course or outcome of the litigation.

The Supreme Court has spoken forcefully about perjury and other forms of obstruction of justice:

In this constitutional process of securing a witness’ testimony, perjury simply has no place whatever. Perjured testimony is an obvious and flagrant affront to the basic concepts of judicial proceedings. Effective restraints against this type of egregious offense are therefore imperative.²⁴

The insidious effects of perjury occur whether the case is civil or criminal. Only a few years ago, the Supreme Court considered a false statement made in a civil administrative proceeding: “False testimony in a formal proceeding is intolerable. We must neither reward nor condone such a ‘flagrant affront’ to the truth-seeking asser, courts likely will freely entertain motions to limit the availability of such information to the parties and their counsel and to prohibit general dissemination of such sensitive data to third parties.” See Barbara Lindeman & David D. Kadue, Sexual Harassment in Employment Law 563 (1992).

function of adversary proceedings. . . . Perjury should be severely sanctioned in appropriate cases.”²⁵ Stated more simply, “[p]erjury is an obstruction of justice.”²⁶

Third. The third limit is unique to the President. “The Presidency is more than an executive responsibility. It is the inspiring symbol of all that is highest in American purpose and ideals.”²⁷ When he took the Oath of Office in 1993 and again in 1997, President Clinton swore that he would “faithfully execute the Office of President.”²⁸ As the head of the Executive Branch, the President has the constitutional duty to “take Care that the Laws be faithfully executed.”²⁹ The President gave his testimony in the Jones case under oath and in the presence of a federal judge, a member of a co-equal branch of government; he then testified before a federal grand jury, a body of citizens who had themselves taken an oath to seek the truth. In view of the enormous trust and responsibility attendant to his high Office, the President has a manifest duty to ensure that his conduct at all times complies with the law of the land.

In sum, perjury and acts that obstruct justice by any citizen—whether in a criminal case, a grand jury investigation, a congressional hearing, a civil trial, or civil discovery—are profoundly serious matters. When such acts are committed by the President of the United States, we believe those acts “may constitute grounds for an impeachment.”

THE SCOPE OF THE REFERRAL

1. Background of the Investigation.—The link between the OIC’s jurisdiction—as it existed at the end of 1997—and the matters set forth in this Referral is complex but direct. In January 1998, Linda Tripp, a witness in three ongoing OIC investigations, came forward with allegations that: (i) Monica Lewinsky was planning to commit perjury in Jones v. Clinton, and (ii) she had asked Ms. Tripp to do the same. Ms. Tripp also stated that: (i) Vernon Jordan had counseled Ms. Lewinsky and helped her obtain legal representation in the Jones case, and (ii) at the same time, Mr. Jordan was helping Ms. Lewinsky obtain employment in the private sector.

OIC investigators and prosecutors recognized parallels between Mr. Jordan’s relationship with Ms. Lewinsky and his earlier relationship with a pivotal Whitewater-Madison figure, Webster L. Hubbell. Prior to January 1998, the OIC possessed evidence that

²⁹ U.S. Const., art. II, § 3; see also George Washington, Second Inaugural Address, March 4, 1793:

Previous to the execution of any official act of the President the Constitution requires an oath of office. This oath I am now about to take, and in your presence: That if it shall be found during my administration of the Government I have in any instance violated willingly or knowingly the injunctions thereof, I may (besides incurring constitutional punishment) be subject to the upbraidings of all who are now witnesses of the present solemn ceremony.

Inaugural Addresses of the Presidents of the United States, H.R. Doc. No. 82–540, at 4 (1954).

Vernon Jordan—along with other high-level associates of the President and First Lady—helped Mr. Hubbell obtain lucrative consulting contracts while he was a potential witness and/or subject in the OIC’s ongoing investigation. This assistance took place, moreover, while Mr. Hubbell was a target of a separate criminal investigation into his own conduct. The OIC also possessed evidence that the President and the First Lady knew and approved of the Hubbell-focused assistance.

Specifically, in the wake of his April 1994 resignation from the Justice Department, Mr. Hubbell launched a private consulting practice in Washington, D.C. In the startup process, Mr. Hubbell received substantial aid from important public and private figures. On the day prior to Mr. Hubbell announcing his resignation, White House Chief of Staff Thomas “Mack” McLarty attended a meeting at the White House with the President, First Lady, and others, where Mr. Hubbell’s resignation was a topic of discussion.

At some point after the White House meeting, Mr. McLarty spoke with Vernon Jordan about Mr. Jordan’s assistance to Mr. Hubbell. Mr. Jordan introduced Mr. Hubbell to senior executives at New York-based MacAndrews & Forbes Holding Co. Mr. Jordan is a director of Revlon, Inc., a company controlled by MacAndrews & Forbes. The introduction was successful; MacAndrews & Forbes retained Mr. Hubbell at a rate of $25,000 per quarter. Vernon Jordan informed President Clinton that he was helping Mr. Hubbell.³⁰

By late 1997, this Office was investigating whether a relationship existed between consulting payments to Mr. Hubbell and his lack of cooperation (specifically, his incomplete testimony) with the OIC’s investigation.³¹ In particular, the OIC was investigating whether Mr. Hubbell concealed information about certain core Arkansas matters, namely, the much-publicized Castle Grande real estate project and related legal work by the Rose Law Firm, including the First Lady.

Against this background, the OIC considered the January 1998 allegations that: (i) Ms. Lewinsky was prepared to lie in order to benefit the President, and (ii) Vernon Jordan was assisting Ms. Lewinsky in the Jones litigation, while simultaneously helping her apply for a private-sector job with, among others, Revlon, Inc.

Based in part on these similarities, the OIC undertook a preliminary investigation. On January 15, 1998, this Office informed the Justice Department of the results of our inquiry. The Attorney General immediately applied to the Special Division of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit for an expansion of the OIC’s jurisdiction. The Special Division granted this request and authorized the OIC to determine whether Monica Lewinsky or others had violated federal law in connection with the Jones v. Clinton case.

2. Current Status of the Investigation.—When the OIC’s jurisdiction was expanded to cover the Lewinsky matter in January 1998, several matters remained under active investigation by this Office. Evidence was being gathered and evaluated on, among other things, events related to the Rose Law Firm's representation of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association; events related to the firings in the White House Travel Office; and events related to the use of FBI files. Since the current phase of the investigation began, additional events arising from the Lewinsky matter have also come under scrutiny, including possible perjury and obstruction of justice related to former White House volunteer Kathleen Willey, and the possible misuse of the personnel records of Pentagon employee Linda Tripp.

From the outset, it was our strong desire to complete all phases of the investigation before deciding whether to submit to Congress information—if any—that may constitute grounds for an impeachment. But events and the statutory command of Section 595(c) have dictated otherwise. As the investigation into the President's actions with respect to Ms. Lewinsky and the Jones litigation progressed, it became apparent that there was a significant body of substantial and credible information that met the Section 595(c) threshold. As that phase of the investigation neared completion, it also became apparent that a delay of this Referral until the evidence from all phases of the investigation had been evaluated would be unwise. Although Section 595(c) does not specify when information must be submitted, its text strongly suggests that information of this type belongs in the hands of Congress as soon as the Independent Counsel determines that the information is reliable and substantially complete.

All phases of the investigation are now nearing completion. This Office will soon make final decisions about what steps to take, if any, with respect to the other information it has gathered. Those decisions will be made at the earliest practical time, consistent with our statutory and ethical obligations.

THE CONTENTS OF THE REFERRAL

The Referral consists of several parts. Part One is a Narrative. It begins with an overview of the information relevant to this investigation, then sets forth that information in chronological sequence. A large part of the Narrative is devoted to a description of the President's relationship with Monica Lewinsky. The nature of the relationship was the subject of many of the President's false statements, and his desire to keep the relationship secret provides a motive for many of his actions that apparently were designed to obstruct justice.

The Narrative is lengthy and detailed. It is the view of this Office that the details are crucial to an informed evaluation of the testimony, the credibility of witnesses, and the reliability of other evidence. Many of the details reveal highly personal information; many are sexually explicit. This is unfortunate, but it is essential. The President's defense to many of the allegations is based on a close parsing of the definitions that were used to describe his conduct. We have, after careful review, identified no manner of providing the information that reveals the falsity of the President's statements other than to describe his conduct with precision.

Part Two of the Referral is entitled "Information that May Constitute Grounds for An Impeachment." This "Grounds" portion of the Referral summarizes the specific evidence that the President lied under oath and attempted to obstruct justice. This Part is designed to be understandable if read without the Narrative, although the full context in which the potential grounds for impeachment arise can best be understood if considered against the backdrop of information set forth in Part One.

Several volumes accompany the Referral. The Appendix contains relevant court orders, tables, a discussion of legal and evidentiary issues, background information on the Jones litigation, a diagram of the Oval Office, and other reference material. We next set forth a series of "Document Supplements," which attempt to provide some of the most important support material in an accessible format. Document Supplement A contains transcripts of the President's deposition testimony and grand jury testimony; Document Supplement B contains transcripts of Monica Lewinsky's testimony and interview statements. Document Supplements C, D, and E set forth the full text of the documents cited in the Referral. Although every effort has been made to provide full and accurate quotations of witnesses in their proper context, we urge review of the full transcripts of the testimony cited below.

I. NATURE OF PRESIDENT CLINTON'S RELATIONSHIP WITH MONICA LEWINSKY

A. INTRODUCTION

This Referral presents substantial and credible information that President Clinton criminally obstructed the judicial process, first in a sexual harassment lawsuit in which he was the defendant and then in a grand jury investigation. The opening section of the Narrative provides an overview of the object of the President's cover-up, the sexual relationship between the President and Ms. Lewinsky. Subsequent sections recount the evolution of the relationship chronologically, including the sexual contacts, the President's efforts to get Ms. Lewinsky a job, Ms. Lewinsky's subpoena in Jones v. Clinton, the role of Vernon Jordan, the President's discussions with Ms. Lewinsky about her affidavit and deposition, the President's deposition testimony in Jones, the President's attempts to coach a potential witness in the harassment case, the President's false and misleading statements to aides and to the American public after the Lewinsky story became public, and, finally, the President's testimony before a federal grand jury.

B. EVIDENCE ESTABLISHING NATURE OF RELATIONSHIP

1. Physical Evidence

Physical evidence conclusively establishes that the President and Ms. Lewinsky had a sexual relationship. After reaching an immunity and cooperation agreement with the Office of the Independent Counsel on July 28, 1998, Ms. Lewinsky turned over a navy blue dress that she said she had worn during a sexual encounter with the President on February 28, 1997. According to Ms. Lewinsky, she noticed stains on the garment the next time she took it from her closet. From their location, she surmised that the stains were the President's semen.¹

Initial tests revealed that the stains are in fact semen.² Based on that result, the OIC asked the President for a blood sample.³ After requesting and being given assurances that the OIC had an evidentiary basis for making the request, the President agreed.⁴ In the White House Map Room on August 3, 1998, the White House Physician drew a vial of blood from the President in the presence of an FBI agent and an OIC attorney.⁵ By conducting the two standard DNA comparison tests, the FBI Laboratory concluded that the President was the source of the DNA obtained from the dress.⁶ According to the more sensitive RFLP test, the genetic markers on the semen, which match the President's DNA, are characteristic of one out of 7.87 trillion Caucasians.⁷

In addition to the dress, Ms. Lewinsky provided what she said were answering machine tapes containing brief messages from the President, as well as several gifts that the President had given her.

2. Ms. Lewinsky's Statements

Ms. Lewinsky was extensively debriefed about her relationship with the President. For the initial evaluation of her credibility, she submitted to a detailed "proffer" interview on July 27, 1998.⁸ After entering into a cooperation agreement, she was questioned over the course of approximately 15 days. She also provided testimony under oath on three occasions: twice before the grand jury, and, because of the personal and sensitive nature of particular topics, once in a deposition. In addition, Ms. Lewinsky worked with prosecutors and investigators to create an 11-page chart that chronologically lists her contacts with President Clinton, including meetings, phone calls, gifts, and messages.⁹ Ms. Lewinsky twice verified the accuracy of the chart under oath.¹⁰

In the evaluation of experienced prosecutors and investigators, Ms. Lewinsky has provided truthful information. She has not falsely inculpated the President. Harming him, she has testified, is "the last thing in the world I want to do."¹¹

Moreover, the OIC's immunity and cooperation agreement with Ms. Lewinsky includes safeguards crafted to ensure that she tells the truth. Court-ordered immunity and written immunity agreements often provide that the witness can be prosecuted only for false statements made during the period of cooperation, and not for the underlying offense. The OIC's agreement goes further, providing that Ms. Lewinsky will lose her immunity altogether if the government can prove to a federal district judge—by a preponderance of the evidence, not the higher standard of beyond a reasonable doubt—that she lied. Moreover, the agreement provides that, in the course of such a prosecution, the United States could introduce into evidence the statements made by Ms. Lewinsky during her cooperation. Since Ms. Lewinsky acknowledged in her proffer interview and in debriefings that she violated the law, she has a strong incentive to tell the truth: If she did not, it would be relatively straightforward to void the immunity agreement and prosecute her, using her own admissions against her.

The negotiations in January and February 1998 (which produced the written proffer) did not result in a cooperation agreement because Ms. Lewinsky declined to submit to a face-to-face proffer interview, which the OIC deemed essential because of her perjurious Jones affidavit, her efforts to persuade Linda Tripp to commit perjury, her assertion in a recorded conversation that she had been brought up to regard lying as necessary, and her forgery of a letter while in college. In July 1998, Ms. Lewinsky agreed to submit to a face-to-face interview, and the parties were able to reach an agreement.

3. Ms. Lewinsky's Confidants

Between 1995 and 1998, Ms. Lewinsky confided in 11 people about her relationship with the President. All have been questioned by the OIC, most before a federal grand jury: Andrew Bleiler, Catherine Allday Davis, Neysa Erbland, Kathleen Estep, Deborah Finerman, Dr. Irene Kassorla, Marcia Lewis, Ashley Raines, Linda Tripp, Natalie Ungvari, and Dale Young.¹² Ms. Lewinsky told most of these confidants about events in her relationship with the President as they occurred, sometimes in considerable detail.

Some of Ms. Lewinsky's statements about the relationship were contemporaneously memorialized. These include deleted email recovered from her home computer and her Pentagon computer, email messages retained by two of the recipients, tape recordings of some of Ms. Lewinsky's conversations with Ms. Tripp, and notes taken by Ms. Tripp during some of their conversations. The Tripp notes, which have been extensively corroborated, refer specifically to places, dates, and times of physical contacts between the President and Ms. Lewinsky.¹³

Everyone in whom Ms. Lewinsky confided in detail believed she was telling the truth about her relationship with the President. Ms. Lewinsky told her psychologist, Dr. Irene Kassorla, about the affair shortly after it began. Thereafter, she related details of sexual encounters soon after they occurred (sometimes calling from her White House office).¹⁴ Ms. Lewinsky showed no indications of delusional thinking, according to Dr. Kassorla, and Dr. Kassorla had no doubts whatsoever about the truth of what Ms. Lewinsky told her.¹⁵ Ms. Lewinsky's friend Catherine Allday Davis testified that she believed Ms. Lewinsky's accounts of the sexual relationship with the President because "I trusted in the way she had confided in me on other things in her life I just trusted the relationship, so I trusted her."¹⁶ Dale Young, a friend in whom Ms. Lewinsky confided starting in mid-1996, testified:

[I]f she was going to lie to me, she would have said to me, "Oh, he calls me all the time. He does wonderful things. He can't wait to see me." * * * [S]he would have embellished the story. You know, she wouldn't be telling me, "He told me he'd call me, I waited home all weekend and I didn't do anything and he didn't call and then he didn't call for two weeks."¹⁷

4. Documents

In addition to her remarks and email to friends, Ms. Lewinsky wrote a number of documents, including letters and draft letters to the President. Among these documents are (i) papers found in a consensual search of her apartment; (ii) papers that Ms. Lewinsky turned over pursuant to her cooperation agreement, including a calendar with dates circled when she met or talked by telephone with the President in 1996 and 1997; and (iii) files recovered from Ms. Lewinsky's computers at home and at the Pentagon.

5. Consistency and Corroboration

The details of Ms. Lewinsky's many statements have been checked, cross-checked, and corroborated. When negotiations with Ms. Lewinsky in January and February 1998 did not culminate in an agreement, the OIC proceeded with a comprehensive investigation, which generated a great deal of probative evidence.

In July and August 1998, circumstances brought more direct and compelling evidence to the investigation. After the courts rejected a novel privilege claim, Secret Service officers and agents testified about their observations of the President and Ms. Lewinsky in the White House. Ms. Lewinsky agreed to submit to a proffer interview (previous negotiations had deadlocked over her refusal to do so), and, after assessing her credibility in that session, the OIC entered into a cooperation agreement with her. Pursuant to the cooperation agreement, Ms. Lewinsky turned over the dress that proved to bear traces of the President's semen. And the President, who had spurned six invitations to testify, finally agreed to provide his account to the grand jury. In that sworn testimony, he acknowledged "inappropriate intimate contact" with Ms. Lewinsky.

Because of the fashion in which the investigation had unfolded, in sum, a massive quantity of evidence was available to test and verify Ms. Lewinsky's statements during her proffer interview and her later cooperation. Consequently, Ms. Lewinsky's statements have been corroborated to a remarkable degree. Her detailed statements to the grand jury and the OIC in 1998 are consistent with statements to her confidants dating back to 1995, documents that she created, and physical evidence.¹⁸ Moreover, her accounts generally match the testimony of White House staff members; the testimony of Secret Service agents and officers; and White House records showing Ms. Lewinsky's entries and exits, the President's whereabouts, and the President's telephone calls.

C. SEXUAL CONTACTS

1. *The President's Accounts*a. Jones Testimony

In the Jones deposition on January 17, 1998, the President denied having had “a sexual affair,” “sexual relations,” or “a sexual relationship” with Ms. Lewinsky.¹⁹ He noted that “[t]here are no curtains on the Oval Office, there are no curtains on my private office, there are no curtains or blinds that can close [on] the windows in my private dining room,” and added: “I have done everything I could to avoid the kind of questions you are asking me here today * * *.”²⁰

During the deposition, the President’s attorney, Robert Bennett, sought to limit questioning about Ms. Lewinsky. Mr. Bennett told Judge Susan Webber Wright that Ms. Lewinsky had executed “an affidavit which [Ms. Jones’s lawyers] are in possession of saying that there is absolutely no sex of any kind in any manner, shape or form, with President Clinton.” In a subsequent colloquy with Judge Wright, Mr. Bennett declared that as a result of “preparation of [President Clinton] for this deposition, the witness is fully aware of Ms. Lewinsky’s affidavit.”²¹ The President did not dispute his legal representative’s assertion that the President and Ms. Lewinsky had had “absolutely no sex of any kind in any manner, shape or form,” nor did he dispute the implication that Ms. Lewinsky’s affidavit, in denying “a sexual relationship,” meant that there was “absolutely no sex of any kind in any manner, shape or form.” In subsequent questioning by his attorney, President Clinton testified under oath that Ms. Lewinsky’s affidavit was “absolutely true.”²²

b. Grand Jury Testimony

Testifying before the grand jury on August 17, 1998, seven months after his Jones deposition, the President acknowledged “inappropriate intimate contact” with Ms. Lewinsky but maintained that his January deposition testimony was accurate.²³ In his account, “what began as a friendship [with Ms. Lewinsky] came to include this conduct.”²⁴ He said he remembered “meeting her, or having my first real conversation with her during the government shutdown in November of '95." According to the President, the inappropriate contact occurred later (after Ms. Lewinsky's internship had ended), "in early 1996 and once in early 1997."²⁵

The President refused to answer questions about the precise nature of his intimate contacts with Ms. Lewinsky, but he did explain his earlier denials.²⁶ As to his denial in the Jones deposition that he and Ms. Lewinsky had had a "sexual relationship," the President maintained that there can be no sexual relationship without sexual intercourse, regardless of what other sexual activities may transpire. He stated that "most ordinary Americans" would embrace this distinction.²⁷

The President also maintained that none of his sexual contacts with Ms. Lewinsky constituted "sexual relations" within a specific definition used in the Jones deposition.²⁸ Under that definition:

[A] person engages in "sexual relations" when the person knowingly engages in or causes—(1) contact with the genitalia, anus, groin, breast, inner thigh, or buttocks of any person with an intent to arouse or gratify the sexual desire of any person * * *. "Contact" means intentional touching, either directly or through clothing.²⁹

According to what the President testified was his understanding, this definition "covers contact by the person being deposed with the enumerated areas, if the contact is done with an intent to arouse or gratify," but it does not cover oral sex performed on the person being deposed.³⁰ He testified:

[I]f the deponent is the person who has oral sex performed on him, then the contact is with—not with anything on that list, but with the lips of another person. It seems to be self-evident that that's what it is * * *. Let me remind you, sir, I read this carefully.³¹

In the President's view, "any person, reasonable person" would recognize that oral sex performed on the deponent falls outside the definition.³²

If Ms. Lewinsky performed oral sex on the President, then—under this interpretation—she engaged in sexual relations but he did not. The President refused to answer whether Ms. Lewinsky in fact had performed oral sex on him.³³ He did testify that direct contact with Ms. Lewinsky's breasts or genitalia would fall within the definition, and he denied having had any such contact.³⁴

2. Ms. Lewinsky's Account

In his grand jury testimony, the President relied heavily on a particular interpretation of “sexual relations” as defined in the Jones deposition. Beyond insisting that his conduct did not fall within the Jones definition, he refused to answer questions about the nature of his physical contact with Ms. Lewinsky, thus placing the grand jury in the position of having to accept his conclusion without being able to explore the underlying facts. This strategy—evidently an effort to account for possible traces of the President's semen on Ms. Lewinsky's clothing without undermining his position that he did not lie in the Jones deposition—mandates that this Referral set forth evidence of an explicit nature that otherwise would be omitted.

In light of the President's testimony, Ms. Lewinsky's accounts of their sexual encounters are indispensable for two reasons. First, the detail and consistency of these accounts tend to bolster Ms. Lewinsky's credibility. Second, and particularly important, Ms. Lewinsky contradicts the President on a key issue. According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President touched her breasts and genitalia—which means that his conduct met the Jones definition of sexual relations even under his theory. On these matters, the evidence of the President's perjury cannot be presented without specific, explicit, and possibly offensive descriptions of sexual encounters.

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President had ten sexual encounters, eight while she worked at the White House and two thereafter.³⁵ The sexual encounters generally occurred in or near the private study off the Oval Office—most often in the windowless hallway outside the study.³⁶ During many of their sexual encounters, the President stood leaning against the doorway of the bathroom across from the study, which, he told Ms. Lewinsky, eased his sore back.³⁷

Ms. Lewinsky testified that her physical relationship with the President included oral sex but not sexual intercourse.³⁸ According to Ms. Lewinsky, she performed oral sex on the President; he never performed oral sex on her.³⁹ Initially, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the President would not let her perform oral sex to completion. ³⁵ Lewinsky 8/6/98 GJ at 27–28 & Ex. ML–7. These numbers include occasions when one or both of them had direct contact with the other's genitals, but not occasions when they merely kissed. On the timing of some of their sexual encounters, Ms. Lewinsky's testimony is at odds with the President's. According to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President had three sexual encounters in 1995 (the President said he recalled none) and two sexual encounters in 1997 (not one, as the President testified). Lewinsky 8/6/98 GJ at 27–28 & Ex. ML–7; Lewinsky 8/26/98 Depo. at 6; Clinton 8/17/98 GJ at 9–10. The President's account omits the two 1995 encounters when Ms. Lewinsky was an intern (as well as one 1995 encounter when she worked on the White House staff), and it treats the 1997 encounter that produced the semen-stained dress as a single aberration.

Ms. Lewinsky's understanding, his refusal was related to "trust and not knowing me well enough."⁴⁰ During their last two sexual encounters, both in 1997, he did ejaculate.⁴¹

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she performed oral sex on the President on nine occasions. On all nine of those occasions, the President fondled and kissed her bare breasts. He touched her genitals, both through her underwear and directly, bringing her to orgasm on two occasions. On one occasion, the President inserted a cigar into her vagina. On another occasion, she and the President had brief genital-to-genital contact.⁴²

Whereas the President testified that "what began as a friendship came to include [intimate contact]," Ms. Lewinsky explained that the relationship moved in the opposite direction: "[T]he emotional and friendship aspects * * * developed after the beginning of our sexual relationship."⁴³

D. EMOTIONAL ATTACHMENT

As the relationship developed over time, Ms. Lewinsky grew emotionally attached to President Clinton. She testified: "I never expected to fall in love with the President. I was surprised that I did."⁴⁴ Ms. Lewinsky told him of her feelings.⁴⁵ At times, she believed that he loved her too.⁴⁶ They were physically affectionate: "A lot of hugging, holding hands sometimes. He always used to push the hair out of my face."⁴⁷ She called him "Handsome"; on occasion, he called her "Sweetie," "Baby," or sometimes "Dear."⁴⁸ He told her that he enjoyed talking to her—she recalled his saying that the two of them were "emotive and full of fire," and she made him feel young.⁴⁹ He said he wished he could spend more time with her.⁵⁰

Ms. Lewinsky told confidants of the emotional underpinnings of the relationship as it evolved. According to her mother, Marcia Lewis, the President once told Ms. Lewinsky that she "had been hurt a lot or something by different men and that he would be her friend or he would help her, not hurt her.”⁵¹ According to Ms. Lewinsky’s friend Neysa Erbland, President Clinton once confided in Ms. Lewinsky that he was uncertain whether he would remain married after he left the White House. He said in essence, “[W]ho knows what will happen four years from now when I am out of office?” Ms. Lewinsky thought, according to Ms. Erbland, that “maybe she will be his wife.”⁵²

E. CONVERSATIONS AND PHONE MESSAGES

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she and the President “enjoyed talking to each other and being with each other.” In her recollection, “We would tell jokes. We would talk about our childhoods. Talk about current events. I was always giving him my stupid ideas about what I thought should be done in the administration or different views on things.”⁵³ One of Ms. Lewinsky’s friends testified that, in her understanding, “[The President] would talk about his childhood and growing up, and [Ms. Lewinsky] would relay stories about her childhood and growing up. I guess normal conversations that you would have with someone that you’re getting to know.”⁵⁴

The longer conversations often occurred after their sexual contact. Ms. Lewinsky testified: “[W]hen I was working there [at the White House] * * * we’d start in the back [in or near the private study] and we’d talk and that was where we were physically intimate, and we’d usually end up, kind of the pillow talk of it, I guess, * * * sitting in the Oval Office * * *.”⁵⁵ During several meetings when they were not sexually intimate, they talked in the Oval Office or in the area of the study.⁵⁶

Along with face-to-face meetings, according to Ms. Lewinsky, she spoke on the telephone with the President approximately 50 times, often after 10 p.m. and sometimes well after midnight.⁵⁷ The President placed the calls himself or, during working hours, had his secretary, Betty Currie, do so; Ms. Lewinsky could not telephone him directly, though she sometimes reached him through Ms. Currie.⁵⁸ Ms. Lewinsky testified: “[W]e spent hours on the phone talking.”⁵⁹ Their telephone conversations were “[s]imilar to what we discussed in person, just how we were doing. A lot of discussions about my job, when I was trying to come back to the White House and then once I decided to move to New York * * *. We talked about everything under the sun.”⁶⁰ On 10 to 15 occasions, she and the President had phone sex.⁶¹ After phone sex late one night, the President fell asleep mid-conversation.⁶²

On four occasions, the President left very brief messages on Ms. Lewinsky's answering machine, though he told her that he did not like doing so because (in her recollection) he "felt it was a little unsafe."⁶³ She saved his messages and played the tapes for several confidants, who said they believed that the voice was the President's.⁶⁴

By phone and in person, according to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President sometimes had arguments. On a number of occasions in 1997, she complained that he had not brought her back from the Pentagon to work in the White House, as he had promised to do after the election.⁶⁵ In a face-to-face meeting on July 4, 1997, the President reprimanded her for a letter she had sent him that obliquely threatened to disclose their relationship.⁶⁶ During an argument on December 6, 1997, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the President said that "he had never been treated as poorly by anyone else as I treated him," and added that "he spent more time with me than anyone else in the world, aside from his family, friends and staff, which I don't know exactly which category that put me in."⁶⁷

Testifying before the grand jury, the President confirmed that he and Ms. Lewinsky had had personal conversations, and he acknowledged that their telephone conversations sometimes included "inappropriate sexual banter."⁶⁸ The President said that Ms. Lewinsky told him about "her personal life," "her upbringing," and "her job ambitions."⁶⁹ After terminating their intimate relationship in 1997, he said, he tried "to be a friend to Ms. Lewinsky, to be a counselor to her, to give her good advice, and to help her."⁷⁰

F. GIFTS

Ms. Lewinsky and the President exchanged numerous gifts. By her estimate, she gave him about 30 items, and he gave her about 18.⁷¹ Ms. Lewinsky's first gift to him was a matted poem given by her and other White House interns to commemorate "National Boss Day," October 24, 1995.⁷² This was the only item reflected in White House records that Ms. Lewinsky gave the President before (in her account) the sexual relationship began, and the only item that he sent to the archives instead of keeping.⁷³ On November 20—five days after the intimate relationship began, according to Ms. Lewinsky—she gave him a necktie, which he chose to keep rather than send to the archives.⁷⁴ According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President telephoned the night she gave him the tie, then sent her a photo of himself wearing it.⁷⁵ The tie was logged pursuant to White House procedures for gifts to the President.⁷⁶

In a draft note to the President in December 1997, Ms. Lewinsky wrote that she was “very particular about presents and could never give them to anyone else—they were all bought with you in mind.”⁷⁷ Many of the 30 or so gifts that she gave the President reflected his interests in history, antiques, cigars, and frogs. Ms. Lewinsky gave him, among other things, six neckties, an antique paperweight showing the White House, a silver tabletop holder for cigars or cigarettes, a pair of sunglasses, a casual shirt, a mug emblazoned “Santa Monica,” a frog figurine, a letter opener depicting a frog, several novels, a humorous book of quotations, and several antique books.⁷⁸ He gave her, among other things, a hat pin, two brooches, a blanket, a marble bear figurine, and a special edition of Walt Whitman’s Leaves of Grass.⁷⁹

Ms. Lewinsky construed it as a sign of affection when the President wore a necktie or other item of clothing she had given him. She testified: “I used to say to him that ‘I like it when you wear my ties because then I know I’m close to your heart.’ So—literally and figuratively.”⁸⁰ The President was aware of her reaction, according to Ms. Lewinsky, and he would sometimes wear one of the items to reassure her—occasionally on the day they were scheduled to meet or the day after they had met in person or talked by telephone.⁸¹ The President would sometimes say to her, “Did you see I wore your tie the other day?”⁸²

G. MESSAGES

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she sent the President a number of cards and letters. In some, she expressed anger that he was “not paying enough attention to me”; in others, she said she missed him; in still others, she just sent “a funny card that I saw.”⁸⁴ In early January 1998, she sent him, along with an antique book about American presidents, “[a]n embarrassing mushy note.”⁸⁵ She testified that the President never sent her any cards or notes other than formal thank-you letters.⁸⁶

Testifying before the grand jury, the President acknowledged having received cards and notes from Ms. Lewinsky that were “somewhat intimate” and “quite affectionate,” even after the intimate relationship ended.⁸⁷

H. SECRECY

1. Mutual Understanding

Both Ms. Lewinsky and the President testified that they took steps to maintain the secrecy of the relationship. According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President from the outset stressed the importance of keeping the relationship secret. In her handwritten statement to this Office, Ms. Lewinsky wrote that “the President told Ms. L to deny a relationship, if ever asked about it. He also said something to the effect of if the two people who are involved say it didn’t happen—it didn’t happen.”⁸⁸ According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President sometimes asked if she had told anyone about their sexual relationship or about the gifts they had exchanged; she (falsely) assured him that she had not.⁸⁹ She told him that “I would always deny it, I would always protect him,” and he responded approvingly.⁹⁰ The two of them had, in her words, “a mutual understanding” that they would “keep this private, so that meant deny it and * * * take whatever appropriate steps needed to be taken.”⁹¹ When she and the President both were subpoenaed to testify in the Jones case, Ms. Lewinsky anticipated that “as we had on every other occasion and every other instance of this relationship, we would deny it.”⁹²

He testified: “No. Sometimes, you know, just either small talk or happy birthday or sometimes, you know, a suggestion about how to get more young people involved in some project I was working on. Nothing remarkable. I don’t remember anything particular about it.” Clinton 1/17/98 Depo. at 62.

In his grand jury testimony, the President confirmed his efforts to keep their liaisons secret.⁹³ He said he did not want the facts of their relationship to be disclosed “in any context,” and added: “I certainly didn’t want this to come out, if I could help it. And I was concerned about that. I was embarrassed about it. I knew it was wrong.”⁹⁴ Asked if he wanted to avoid having the facts come out through Ms. Lewinsky’s testimony in Jones, he said: “Well, I did not want her to have to testify and go through that. And, of course, I didn’t want her to do that, of course not.”⁹⁵

2. COVER STORIES

For her visits to see the President, according to Ms. Lewinsky, “[T]here was always some sort of a cover.”⁹⁶ When visiting the President while she worked at the White House, she generally planned to tell anyone who asked (including Secret Service officers and agents) that she was delivering papers to the President.⁹⁷ Ms. Lewinsky explained that this artifice may have originated when “I got there kind of saying, ‘Oh, gee, here are your letters,’ wink, wink, and him saying, ‘Okay, that’s good.’”⁹⁸ To back up her stories, she generally carried a folder on these visits.⁹⁹ (In truth, according to Ms. Lewinsky, her job never required her to deliver papers to the President.¹⁰⁰) On a few occasions during her White House employment, Ms. Lewinsky and the President arranged to bump into each other in the hallway; he then would invite her to accompany him to the Oval Office.¹⁰¹ Later, after she left the White House and started working at the Pentagon, Ms. Lewinsky relied on Ms. Currie to arrange times when she could see the President. The cover story for those visits was that Ms. Lewinsky was coming to see Ms. Currie, not the President.¹⁰²

While the President did not expressly instruct her to lie, according to Ms. Lewinsky, he did suggest misleading cover stories.¹⁰³ And, when she assured him that she planned to lie about the relationship, he responded approvingly. On the frequent occasions when Ms. Lewinsky promised that she would “always deny” the relationship and “always protect him,” for example, the President responded, in her recollection, “‘That’s good,’ or—something affirmative. * * * [N]ot—‘Don’t deny it.’”¹⁰⁴

Once she was named as a possible witness in the Jones case, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the President reminded her of the cover stories. After telling her that she was a potential witness, the President suggested that, if she were subpoenaed, she could file an affidavit to avoid being deposed. He also told her she could say that, when working at the White House, she had sometimes delivered letters to him, and, after leaving her White House job, she had sometimes returned to visit Ms. Currie.¹⁰⁵ (The President's own testimony in the Jones case mirrors the recommendations he made to Ms. Lewinsky for her testimony. In his deposition, the President testified that he saw Ms. Lewinsky "on two or three occasions" during the November 1995 government furlough, "one or two other times when she brought some documents to me," and "sometime before Christmas" when Ms. Lewinsky "came by to see Betty."¹⁰⁶)

In his grand jury testimony, the President acknowledged that he and Ms. Lewinsky "might have talked about what to do in a nonlegal context" to hide their relationship, and that he "might well have said" that Ms. Lewinsky should tell people that she was bringing letters to him or coming to visit Ms. Currie.¹⁰⁷ But he also stated that "I never asked Ms. Lewinsky to lie."¹⁰⁸

3. Steps to Avoid Being Seen or Heard

After their first two sexual encounters during the November 1995 government shutdown, according to Ms. Lewinsky, her encounters with the President generally occurred on weekends, when fewer people were in the West Wing.¹⁰⁹ Ms. Lewinsky testified:

He had told me * * * that he was usually around on the weekends and that it was okay to come see him on the weekends. So he would call and we would arrange either to bump into each other in the hall or that I would bring papers to the office.¹¹⁰

From some of the President's comments, Ms. Lewinsky gathered that she should try to avoid being seen by several White House employees, including Nancy Hernreich, Deputy Assistant to the President and Director of Oval Office Operations, and Stephen Goodin, the President's personal aide.¹¹¹

Out of concern about being seen, the sexual encounters most often occurred in the windowless hallway outside the study.¹¹² According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President was concerned that the two of them might be spotted through a White House window. When they were in the study together in the evenings, he sometimes turned out the light.¹¹³ Once, when she spotted a gardener outside the study window, they left the room.¹¹⁴ Ms. Lewinsky testified that, on December 28, 1997, “when I was getting my Christmas kiss” in the doorway to the study, the President was “looking out the window with his eyes wide open while he was kissing me and then I got mad because it wasn’t very romantic.” He responded, “Well, I was just looking to see to make sure no one was out there.”¹¹⁵

Fear of discovery constrained their sexual encounters in several respects, according to Ms. Lewinsky. The President ordinarily kept the door between the private hallway and the Oval Office several inches ajar during their encounters, both so that he could hear if anyone approached and so that anyone who did approach would be less likely to suspect impropriety.¹¹⁶ During their sexual encounters, Ms. Lewinsky testified, “[W]e were both aware of the volume and sometimes * * * I bit my hand—so that I wouldn’t make any noise.”¹¹⁷ On one occasion, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the President put his hand over her mouth during a sexual encounter to keep her quiet.¹¹⁸ Concerned that they might be interrupted abruptly, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the two of them never fully undressed.¹¹⁹

While noting that “the door to the hallway was always somewhat open,” the President testified that he did try to keep the intimate relationship secret: “I did what people do when they do the wrong thing. I tried to do it where nobody else was looking at it.”¹²⁰

4. Ms. Lewinsky’s Notes and Letters

The President expressed concern about documents that might hint at an improper relationship between them, according to Ms. Lewinsky. He cautioned her about messages she sent:

There were * * * some occasions when I sent him cards or notes that I wrote things that he deemed too personal to put on paper just in case something ever happened, if it got lost getting there or someone else opened it. So there were several times when he remarked to me, you know, you shouldn’t put that on paper.¹²¹

She said that the President made this point to her in their last conversation, on January 5, 1998, in reference to what she characterized as “[a]n embarrassing mushy note” she had sent him.¹²² In addition, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the President expressed concerns about official records that could establish aspects of their relationship. She said that on two occasions she asked the President if she could go upstairs to the Residence with him. No, he said, because a record is kept of everyone who accompanies him there.¹²³

The President testified before the grand jury: “I remember telling her she should be careful what she wrote, because a lot of it was clearly inappropriate and would be embarrassing if somebody else read it.”¹²⁴

5. Ms. Lewinsky’s Evaluation of Their Secrecy Efforts

In two conversations recorded after she was subpoenaed in the Jones case, Ms. Lewinsky expressed confidence that her relationship with the President would never be discovered.¹²⁵ She believed that no records showed her and the President alone in the area of the study.¹²⁶ Regardless of the evidence, in any event, she would continue denying the relationship. “If someone looked in the study window, it’s not me,” she said.¹²⁷ If someone produced tapes of her telephone calls with the President, she would say they were fakes.¹²⁸

In another recorded conversation, Ms. Lewinsky said she was especially comforted by the fact that the President, like her, would be swearing under oath that “nothing happened.”¹²⁹ She said:

[T]o tell you the truth, I’m not concerned all that much anymore because I know I’m not going to get in trouble. I will not get in trouble because you know what? The story I’ve signed under—under oath is what someone else is saying under oath.¹³⁰

¹²⁵One of these tapes, T30, is a face-to-face conversation between Ms. Tripp and Ms. Lewinsky, recorded under FBI auspices. The other, T22, is a telephone conversation between Ms. Tripp and Ms. Lewinsky, recorded by Ms. Tripp.

From these and other transcripts of recorded conversations, the OIC has redacted various brief, irrelevant, and gratuitous passages, mostly references to Ms. Lewinsky’s family members. Most of these redactions are only a word or two long; others are somewhat longer. The tapes themselves have not been edited by the OIC, and the OIC will provide unredacted transcripts if the House of Representatives so requests.

Ms. Tripp produced to the OIC 27 tapes (four of which proved inaudible or blank) of her telephone conversations with Ms. Lewinsky. Ms. Tripp testified that she turned over the original recordings. She testified that she knew nothing about any duplications of the recordings, though others had access to or control over the tapes at times before they were turned over. According to a preliminary FBI examination, several of the 23 tapes containing audible conversations exhibit signs of duplication, and one tape exhibiting signs of duplication was produced by a recorder that was stopped and restarted during the recording process. These preliminary results raise questions about the reliability and authenticity of at least one recording, which in turn raise questions about the accuracy of Ms. Tripp’s testimony regarding her handling of the tapes. The OIC is continuing to investigate this matter. This Referral does not quote or rely on any tapes that exhibit signs of duplication. For a fuller discussion, see Appendix, Tab I.

II. 1995: INITIAL SEXUAL ENCOUNTERS

Monica Lewinsky began her White House employment as an intern in the Chief of Staff's office in July 1995. At White House functions in the following months, she made eye contact with the President. During the November 1995 government shutdown, the President invited her to his private study, where they kissed. Later that evening, they had a more intimate sexual encounter. They had another sexual encounter two days later, and a third one on New Year's Eve.

A. OVERVIEW OF MONICA LEWINSKY'S WHITE HOUSE EMPLOYMENT

Monica Lewinsky worked at the White House, first as an intern and then as an employee, from July 1995 to April 1996. With the assistance of family friend Walter Kaye, a prominent contributor to political causes, she obtained an internship starting in early July, when she was 21 years old.¹³¹ She was assigned to work on correspondence in the office of Chief of Staff Leon Panetta in the Old Executive Office Building.¹³²

As her internship was winding down, Ms. Lewinsky applied for a paying job on the White House staff. She interviewed with Timothy Keating, Special Assistant to the President and Staff Director for Legislative Affairs.¹³³ Ms. Lewinsky accepted a position dealing with correspondence in the Office of Legislative Affairs on November 13, 1995, but did not start the job (and, thus, continued her internship) until November 26.¹³⁴ She remained a White House employee until April 1996, when—in her view, because of her intimate relationship with the President—she was dismissed from the White House and transferred to the Pentagon.¹³⁵

B. FIRST MEETINGS WITH THE PRESIDENT

The month after her White House internship began, Ms. Lewinsky and the President began what she characterized as “intense flirting.”¹³⁶ At departure ceremonies and other events, she made eye contact with him, shook hands, and introduced herself.¹³⁷ When she ran into the President in the West Wing basement and introduced herself again, according to Ms. Lewinsky, he responded that he already knew who she was.¹³⁸ Ms. Lewinsky told her aunt that the President “seemed attracted to her or interested in her or something,” and told a visiting friend that “she was attracted to [President Clinton], she had a big crush on him, and I think she told me she at some point had gotten his attention, that there was some mutual eye contact and recognition, mutual acknowledgment.”¹³⁹

In the autumn of 1995, an impasse over the budget forced the federal government to shut down for one week, from Tuesday, November 14, to Monday, November 20.¹⁴⁰ Only essential federal employees were permitted to work during the furlough, and the White House staff of 430 shrank to about 90 people for the week. White House interns could continue working because of their unpaid status, and they took on a wide range of additional duties.¹⁴¹

During the shutdown, Ms. Lewinsky worked in Chief of Staff Panetta’s West Wing office, where she answered phones and ran errands.¹⁴² The President came to Mr. Panetta’s office frequently because of the shutdown, and he sometimes talked with Ms. Lewinsky.¹⁴³ She characterized these encounters as “continued flirtation.”¹⁴⁴ According to Ms. Lewinsky, a Senior Adviser to the Chief of Staff, Barry Toiv, remarked to her that she was getting a great deal of “face time” with the President.¹⁴⁵

C. NOVEMBER 15 SEXUAL ENCOUNTER

Ms. Lewinsky testified that Wednesday, November 15, 1995—the second day of the government shutdown—marked the beginning of her sexual relationship with the President.¹⁴⁶ On that date, she entered the White House at 1:30 p.m., left sometime thereafter (White House records do not show the time), reentered at 5:07 p.m., and departed at 12:18 a.m. on November 16.¹⁴⁷ The President was in the Oval Office or the Chief of Staff’s office (where Ms. Lewinsky worked during the furlough) for almost the identical period that Ms. Lewinsky was in the White House that evening, from 5:01 p.m. on November 15 to 12:35 a.m. on November 16.¹⁴⁸

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President made eye contact when he came to the West Wing to see Mr. Panetta and Deputy Chief of Staff Harold Ickes, then again later at an informal birthday party for Jennifer Palmieri, Special Assistant to the Chief of Staff.¹⁴⁹ At one point, Ms. Lewinsky and the President talked alone in the Chief of Staff's office. In the course of flirting with him, she raised her jacket in the back and showed him the straps of her thong underwear, which extended above her pants.¹⁵⁰

En route to the restroom at about 8 p.m., she passed George Stephanopoulos's office. The President was inside alone, and he beckoned her to enter.¹⁵¹ She told him that she had a crush on him. He laughed, then asked if she would like to see his private office.¹⁵² Through a connecting door in Mr. Stephanopoulos's office, they went through the President's private dining room toward the study off the Oval Office. Ms. Lewinsky testified: "We talked briefly and sort of acknowledged that there had been a chemistry that was there before and that we were both attracted to each other and then he asked me if he could kiss me." Ms. Lewinsky said yes. In the windowless hallway adjacent to the study, they kissed.¹⁵³ Before returning to her desk, Ms. Lewinsky wrote down her name and telephone number for the President.¹⁵⁴

At about 10 p.m., in Ms. Lewinsky's recollection, she was alone in the Chief of Staff's office and the President approached.¹⁵⁵ He invited her to rendezvous again in Mr. Stephanopoulos's office in a few minutes, and she agreed.¹⁵⁶ (Asked if she knew why the President wanted to meet with her, Ms. Lewinsky testified: "I had an idea."¹⁵⁷) They met in Mr. Stephanopoulos's office and went again to the area of the private study.¹⁵⁸ This time the lights in the study were off.¹⁵⁹

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President kissed. She unbuttoned her jacket; either she unhooked her bra or he lifted her bra up; and he touched her breasts with his hands and mouth.¹⁶⁰ Ms. Lewinsky testified: "I believe he took a phone call * * * and so we moved from the hallway into the back office. * * * [H]e put his hand down my pants and stimulated me manually in the genital area."¹⁶¹ While the President continued talking on the phone (Ms. Lewinsky understood that the caller was a Member of Congress or a Senator), she performed oral sex on him.¹⁶² He finished his call, and, a moment later, told Ms. Lewinsky to stop. In her recollection: “I told him that I wanted * * * to complete that. And he said * * * that he needed to wait until he trusted me more. And then I think he made a joke * * * that he hadn’t had that in a long time.”¹⁶³

Both before and after their sexual contact during that encounter, Ms. Lewinsky and the President talked.¹⁶⁴ At one point during the conversation, the President tugged on the pink intern pass hanging from her neck and said that it might be a problem. Ms. Lewinsky thought that he was talking about access—interns were not supposed to be in the West Wing without an escort—and, in addition, that he might have discerned some “impropriety” in a sexual relationship with a White House intern.¹⁶⁵

White House records corroborate details of Ms. Lewinsky’s account. She testified that her November 15 encounters with the President occurred at about 8 p.m. and 10 p.m., and that in each case the two of them went from the Chief of Staff’s office to the Oval Office area.¹⁶⁶ Records show that the President visited the Chief of Staff’s office for one minute at 8:12 p.m. and for two minutes at 9:23 p.m., in each case returning to the Oval Office.¹⁶⁷ She recalled that the President took a telephone call during their sexual encounter, and she believed that the caller was a Member of Congress or a Senator.¹⁶⁸ White House records show that after returning to the Oval Office from the Chief of Staff’s office, the President talked to two Members of Congress: Rep. Jim Chapman from 9:25 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., and Rep. John Tanner from 9:31 p.m. to 9:35 p.m.¹⁶⁹

D. NOVEMBER 17 SEXUAL ENCOUNTER

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President had a second sexual encounter two days later (still during the government furlough), on Friday, November 17. She was at the White House until 8:56 p.m., then returned from 9:38 to 10:39 p.m.¹⁷⁰ At 9:45 p.m., a few minutes after Ms. Lewinsky’s reentry, the President went from the Oval Office to the Chief of Staff’s office (where Ms. Lewinsky worked during the furlough) for one minute, then returned to the Oval Office for 30 minutes. From there, he went back to the Chief of Staff’s office until 10:34 p.m. (approximately when Ms. Lewinsky left the White House), then went by the Oval Office and the Ground Floor before retiring to the Residence at 10:40 p.m.¹⁷¹

Ms. Lewinsky testified:

We were again working late because it was during the furlough and Jennifer Palmieri * * * had ordered pizza along with Ms. Currie and Ms. Hernreich. And when the pizza came, I went down to let them know that the pizza was there and it was at that point when I walked into Ms. Currie's office that the President was standing there with some other people discussing something.

And they all came back to the office and Mr.—I think it was Mr. Toiv, somebody accidentally knocked pizza on my jacket, so I went to go use the restroom to wash it off and as I was coming out of the restroom, the President was standing in Ms. Currie's doorway and said, "You can come out this way."¹⁷²

Ms. Lewinsky and the President went into the area of the private study, according to Ms. Lewinsky. There, either in the hallway or the bathroom, she and the President kissed. After a few minutes, in Ms. Lewinsky's recollection, she told him that she needed to get back to her desk. The President suggested that she bring him some slices of pizza.¹⁷³

A few minutes later, she returned to the Oval Office area with pizza and told Ms. Currie that the President had requested it. Ms. Lewinsky testified: "[Ms. Currie] opened the door and said, 'Sir, the girl's here with the pizza.' He told me to come in. Ms. Currie went back into her office and then we went into the back study area again."¹⁷⁴ Several witnesses confirm that when Ms. Lewinsky delivered pizza to the President that night, the two of them were briefly alone.¹⁷⁵

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she and the President had a sexual encounter during this visit.¹⁷⁶ They kissed, and the President touched Ms. Lewinsky's bare breasts with his hands and mouth.¹⁷⁷ At some point, Ms. Currie approached the door leading to the hallway, which was ajar, and said that the President had a telephone call.¹⁷⁸ Ms. Lewinsky recalled that the caller was a Member of Congress with a nickname.¹⁷⁹ While the President was on the telephone, according to Ms. Lewinsky, "he unzipped his pants and exposed himself," and she performed oral sex.¹⁸⁰ Again, he stopped her before he ejaculated.¹⁸¹

During this visit, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the President told her that he liked her smile and her energy. He also said: "I'm usually around on weekends, no one else is around, and you can come and see me."¹⁸²

Records corroborate Ms. Lewinsky's recollection that the President took a call from a Member of Congress with a nickname. While Ms. Lewinsky was at the White House that evening (9:38 to 10:39 p.m.), the President had one telephone conversation with a Member of Congress: From 9:53 to 10:14 p.m., he spoke with Rep. H.L. "Sonny" Callahan.¹⁸³

In his Jones deposition on January 17, 1998, President Clinton—who said he was unable to recall most of his encounters with Ms. Lewinsky—did remember her "back there with a pizza" during the government shutdown. He said, however, that he did not believe that the two of them were alone.¹⁸⁴ Testifying before the grand jury on August 17, 1998, the President said that his first "real conversation" with Ms. Lewinsky occurred during the November 1995 furlough. He testified: "One night she brought me some pizza. We had some remarks."¹⁸⁵

E. DECEMBER 31 SEXUAL ENCOUNTER

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President had their third sexual encounter on New Year's Eve. Ms. Lewinsky—by then a member of the staff of the Office of Legislative Affairs—was at the White House on Sunday, December 31, 1995, until 1:16 p.m.; her time of arrival is not shown.¹⁸⁶ The President was in the Oval Office area from 12:11 p.m. until about the time that Ms. Lewinsky left, 1:15 p.m., when he went to the Residence.¹⁸⁷

Sometime between noon and 1 p.m., in Ms. Lewinsky's recollection, she was in the pantry area of the President's private dining room talking with a White House steward, Bayani Nelvis. She told Mr. Nelvis that she had recently smoked her first cigar, and he offered to give her one of the President's cigars. Just then, the President came down the hallway from the Oval Office and saw Ms. Lewinsky. The President dispatched Mr. Nelvis to deliver something to Mr. Panetta.¹⁸⁸

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she told the President that Mr. Nelvis had promised her a cigar, and the President gave her one.¹⁸⁹ She told him her name—she had the impression that he had forgotten it in the six weeks since their furlough encounters because, when passing her in the hallway, he had called her "Kiddo."¹⁹⁰ The President replied that he knew her name; in fact, he added, having

According to Ms. Lewinsky, they moved to the study. “And then . . . we were kissing and he lifted my sweater and exposed my breasts and was fondling them with his hands and with his mouth.”¹⁹² She performed oral sex.¹⁹³ Once again, he stopped her before he ejaculated because, Ms. Lewinsky testified, “he didn’t know me well enough or he didn’t trust me yet.”¹⁹⁴

According to Ms. Lewinsky, a Secret Service officer named Sandy was on duty in the West Wing that day.¹⁹⁵ Records show that Sandra Verna was on duty outside the Oval Office from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m.¹⁹⁶

F. PRESIDENT’S ACCOUNT OF 1995 RELATIONSHIP

As noted, the President testified before the grand jury that on November 17, 1995, Ms. Lewinsky delivered pizza and exchanged “some remarks” with him, but he never indicated that anything sexual occurred then or at any other point in 1995.¹⁹⁷ Testifying under oath before the grand jury, the President said that he engaged in “conduct that was wrong” involving “inappropriate intimate contact” with Ms. Lewinsky “on certain occasions in early 1996 and once in early 1997.”¹⁹⁸ By implicitly denying any sexual contact in 1995, the President indicated that he and Ms. Lewinsky had no sexual involvement while she was an intern.¹⁹⁹ In the President’s testimony, his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky “began as a friendship,” then later “came to include this conduct.”²⁰⁰

III. JANUARY–MARCH 1996: CONTINUED SEXUAL ENCOUNTERS

President Clinton and Ms. Lewinsky had additional sexual encounters near the Oval Office in 1996. After their sixth sexual encounter, the President and Ms. Lewinsky had their first lengthy conversation. On President's Day, February 19, the President terminated their sexual relationship, then revived it on March 31.

A. JANUARY 7 SEXUAL ENCOUNTER

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President had another sexual encounter on Sunday, January 7, 1996. Although White House records do not indicate that Ms. Lewinsky was at the White House that day, her testimony and other evidence indicate that she was there.²⁰¹ The President, according to White House records, was in the Oval Office most of the afternoon, from 2:13 to 5:49 p.m.²⁰²

According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President telephoned her early that afternoon. It was the first time he had called her at home.²⁰³ In her recollection: "I asked him what he was doing and he said he was going to be going into the office soon. I said, oh, do you want some company? And he said, oh, that would be great."²⁰⁴ Ms. Lewinsky went to her office, and the President called to arrange their rendezvous:

[W]e made an arrangement that * * * he would have the door to his office open, and I would pass by the office with some papers and then * * * he would sort of stop me and invite me in. So, that was exactly what happened. I passed by and that was actually when I saw [Secret Service Uniformed Officer] Lew Fox who was on duty outside the Oval Office, and stopped and spoke with Lew for a few minutes, and then the President came out and said, oh, hey, Monica * * * come on in * * *. And so we spoke for about 10 minutes in the [Oval] office. We sat on the sofas. Then we went into the back study and we were intimate in the bathroom.²⁰⁵

Ms. Lewinsky testified that during this bathroom encounter, she and the President kissed, and he touched her bare breasts with his hands and his mouth.²⁰⁶ The President "was talking about performing oral sex on me," according to Ms. Lewinsky.²⁰⁷ But she stopped him because she was menstruating and he did not.²⁰⁸ Ms. Lewinsky did perform oral sex on him.²⁰⁹

²⁰¹ As noted above, White House entry and exit records are incomplete.

Afterward, she and the President moved to the Oval Office and talked. According to Ms. Lewinsky: “[H]e was chewing on a cigar. And then he had the cigar in his hand and he was kind of looking at the cigar in * * * sort of a naughty way. And so * * * I looked at the cigar and I looked at him and I said, we can do that, too, some time.”²¹⁰

Corroborating aspects of Ms. Lewinsky’s recollection, records show that Officer Fox was posted outside the Oval Office the afternoon of January 7.²¹¹ Officer Fox (who is now retired) testified that he recalled an incident with Ms. Lewinsky one weekend afternoon when he was on duty by the Oval Office:²¹²

[T]he President of the United States came out, and he asked me, he says, “Have you seen any young congressional staff members here today?” I said, “No, sir.” He said, “Well, I’m expecting one.” He says, “Would you please let me know when they show up?” And I said, “Yes, sir.”²¹³

Officer Fox construed the reference to “congressional staff members” to mean White House staff who worked with Congress—i.e., staff of the Legislative Affairs Office, where Ms. Lewinsky worked.²¹⁴

Talking with a Secret Service agent posted in the hallway, Officer Fox speculated on whom the President was expecting: “I described Ms. Lewinsky, without mentioning the name, in detail, dark hair—you know, I gave a general description of what she looked like.”²¹⁵ Officer Fox had gotten to know Ms. Lewinsky during her tenure at the White House, and other agents had told him that she often spent time with the President.²¹⁶

A short time later, Ms. Lewinsky approached, greeted Officer Fox, and said, “I have some papers for the President.” Officer Fox admitted her to the Oval Office. The President said: “You can close the door. She’ll be here for a while.”²¹⁷

B. JANUARY 21 SEXUAL ENCOUNTER

On Sunday, January 21, 1996, according to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President had another sexual encounter. Her time of White House entry is not reflected in records. She left at 3:56 p.m.²¹⁸ The President moved from the Residence to the Oval Office at 3:33 p.m. and remained there until 7:40 p.m.²¹⁹

On that day, according to Ms. Lewinsky, she saw the President in a hallway by an elevator, and he invited her to the Oval Office.²²⁰ According to Ms. Lewinsky:

We had * * * had phone sex for the first time the week prior, and I was feeling a little bit insecure about whether he had liked it or didn't like it. * * * I didn't know if this was sort of developing into some kind of a longer-term relationship than what I thought it initially might have been, that maybe he had some regular girlfriend who was furloughed. * * *²²¹

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she questioned the President about his interest in her. "I asked him why he doesn't ask me any questions about myself, and * * * is this just about sex * * * or do you have some interest in trying to get to know me as a person?"²²² The President laughed and said, according to Ms. Lewinsky, that "he cherishes the time that he had with me."²²³ She considered it "a little bit odd" for him to speak of cherishing their time together "when I felt like he didn't really even know me yet."²²⁴

They continued talking as they went to the hallway by the study. Then, with Ms. Lewinsky in mid-sentence, "he just started kissing me."²²⁵ He lifted her top and touched her breasts with his hands and mouth.²²⁶ According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President "unzipped his pants and sort of exposed himself," and she performed oral sex.²²⁷

At one point during the encounter, someone entered the Oval Office. In Ms. Lewinsky's recollection, "[The President] zipped up real quickly and went out and came back in. * * * I just remember laughing because he had walked out there and he was visibly aroused, and I just thought it was funny."²²⁸

A short time later, the President got word that his next appointment, a friend from Arkansas, had arrived.²²⁹ He took Ms. Lewinsky out through the Oval Office into Ms. Hernreich's office, where he kissed her goodbye.²³⁰

C. FEBRUARY 4 SEXUAL ENCOUNTER AND SUBSEQUENT PHONE CALLS

On Sunday, February 4, according to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President had their sixth sexual encounter and their first lengthy and personal conversation. The President was in the Oval Office from 3:36 to 7:05 p.m.²³¹ He had no telephone calls in the Oval Of-face before 4:45 p.m.²³² Records do not show Ms. Lewinsky's entry or exit.

According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President telephoned her at her desk and they planned their rendezvous. At her suggestion, they bumped into each other in the hallway, "because when it happened accidentally, that seemed to work really well," then walked together to the area of the private study.²³³

There, according to Ms. Lewinsky, they kissed. She was wearing a long dress that buttoned from the neck to the ankles. "And he unbuttoned my dress and he unhooked my bra, and sort of took the dress off my shoulders and * * * moved the bra. * * * [H]e was looking at me and touching me and telling me how beautiful I was."²³⁴ He touched her breasts with his hands and his mouth, and touched her genitals, first through underwear and then directly.²³⁵ She performed oral sex on him.²³⁶

After their sexual encounter, the President and Ms. Lewinsky sat and talked in the Oval Office for about 45 minutes. Ms. Lewinsky thought the President might be responding to her suggestion during their previous meeting about "trying to get to know me."²³⁷ It was during that conversation on February 4, according to Ms. Lewinsky, that their friendship started to blossom.²³⁸

When she prepared to depart, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the President "kissed my arm and told me he'd call me, and then I said, yeah, well, what's my phone number? And so he recited both my home number and my office number off the top of his head."²³⁹ The President called her at her desk later that afternoon and said he had enjoyed their time together.²⁴⁰

D. PRESIDENT'S DAY (FEBRUARY 19) BREAK-UP

According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President terminated their relationship (only temporarily, as it happened), on Monday, February 19, 1996—President's Day. The President was in the Oval Office from 11 a.m. to 2:01 p.m. that day.²⁴¹ He had no telephone calls between 12:19 and 12:42 p.m.²⁴² Records do not reflect Ms. Lewinsky's presence at the White House.

In Ms. Lewinsky's recollection, the President telephoned her at her Watergate apartment that day. From the tone of his voice, she could tell something was wrong. She asked to come see him, but he said he did not know how long he would be there.²⁴³ Ms. Lewinsky went to the White House, then walked to the Oval Office sometime between noon and 2 p.m. (the only time she ever went to the Oval Office uninvited).²⁴⁴ Ms. Lewinsky recalled that she was admitted by a tall, slender, Hispanic plainclothes agent on duty near the door.²⁴⁵

The President told her that he no longer felt right about their intimate relationship, and he had to put a stop to it.²⁴⁶ Ms. Lewinsky was welcome to continue coming to visit him, but only as a friend. He hugged her but would not kiss her.²⁴⁷ At one point during their conversation, the President had a call from a sugar grower in Florida whose name, according to Ms. Lewinsky, was something like "Fanuli." In Ms. Lewinsky's recollection, the President may have taken or returned the call just as she was leaving.²⁴⁸

Ms. Lewinsky's account is corroborated in two respects. First, Nelson U. Garabito, a plainclothes Secret Service agent, testified that, on a weekend or holiday while Ms. Lewinsky worked at the White House (most likely in the early spring of 1996), Ms. Lewinsky appeared in the area of the Oval Office carrying a folder and said, "I have these papers for the President."²⁴⁹ After knocking, Agent Garabito opened the Oval Office door, told the President he had a visitor, ushered Ms. Lewinsky in, and closed the door behind her.²⁵⁰ When Agent Garabito's shift ended a few minutes later, Ms. Lewinsky was still in the Oval Office.²⁵¹

Second, concerning Ms. Lewinsky's recollection of a call from a sugar grower named "Fanuli," the President talked with Alfonso Fanjul of Palm Beach, Florida, from 12:42 to 1:04 p.m.²⁵² Mr. Fanjul had telephoned a few minutes earlier, at 12:24 p.m.²⁵³ The Fanjuls are prominent sugar growers in Florida.²⁵⁴

E. CONTINUING CONTACTS

After the break-up on February 19, 1996, according to Ms. Lewinsky, "there continued to sort of be this flirtation * * * when we'd see each other."²⁵⁵ After passing Ms. Lewinsky in a hallway one night in late February or March, the President telephoned her at home and said he was disappointed that, because she had already left the White House for the evening, they could not get together. Ms. Lewinsky testified that the call "sort of implied to me that he was interested in starting up again."²⁵⁶ On March 10, 1996, Ms. Lewinsky took a visiting friend, Natalie Ungvari, to the White House. They bumped into the President, who said to Ms. Ungvari when Ms. Lewinsky introduced them: "You must be her friend from California.”²⁵⁷ Ms. Ungvari was “shocked” that the President knew where she was from.²⁵⁸

Ms. Lewinsky testified that on Friday, March 29, 1996, she was walking down a hallway when she passed the President, who was wearing the first necktie she had given him. She asked where he had gotten the tie, and he replied: “Some girl with style gave it to me.”²⁵⁹ Later, he telephoned her at her desk and asked if she would like to see a movie. His plan was that she would position herself in the hallway by the White House Theater at a certain time, and he would invite her to join him and a group of guests as they entered. Ms. Lewinsky responded that she did not want people to think she was lurking around the West Wing uninvited.²⁶⁰ She asked if they could arrange a rendezvous over the weekend instead, and he said he would try.²⁶¹ Records confirm that the President spent the evening of March 29 in the White House Theater.²⁶² Mrs. Clinton was in Athens, Greece.²⁶³

F. MARCH 31 SEXUAL ENCOUNTER

On Sunday, March 31, 1996, according to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President resumed their sexual contact.²⁶⁴ Ms. Lewinsky was at the White House from 10:21 a.m. to 4:27 p.m. on that day.²⁶⁵ The President was in the Oval Office from 3:00 to 5:46 p.m.²⁶⁶ His only call while in the Oval Office was from 3:06 to 3:07 p.m.²⁶⁷ Mrs. Clinton was in Ireland.²⁶⁸

According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President telephoned her at her desk and suggested that she come to the Oval Office on the pretext of delivering papers to him.²⁶⁹ She went to the Oval Office and was admitted by a plainclothes Secret Service agent.²⁷⁰ In her folder was a gift for the President, a Hugo Boss necktie.²⁷¹

In the hallway by the study, the President and Ms. Lewinsky kissed. On this occasion, according to Ms. Lewinsky, “he focused on me pretty exclusively,” kissing her bare breasts and fondling her genitals.²⁷² At one point, the President inserted a cigar into Ms. Lewinsky’s vagina, then put the cigar in his mouth and said: “It

IV. APRIL 1996: MS. LEWINSKY'S TRANSFER TO THE PENTAGON

With White House and Secret Service employees remarking on Ms. Lewinsky's frequent presence in the West Wing, a deputy chief of staff ordered Ms. Lewinsky transferred from the White House to the Pentagon. On April 7—Easter Sunday—Ms. Lewinsky told the President of her dismissal. He promised to bring her back after the election, and they had a sexual encounter.

A. EARLIER OBSERVATIONS OF MS. LEWINSKY IN THE WEST WING

Ms. Lewinsky's visits to the Oval Office area had not gone unnoticed. Officer Fox testified that "it was pretty commonly known that she did frequent the West Wing on the weekends."²⁷⁵ Another Secret Service uniformed officer, William Ludtke III, once saw her exit from the pantry near the Oval Office; she seemed startled and possibly embarrassed to be spotted.²⁷⁶ Officer John Muskett testified that "if the President was known to be coming into the Diplomatic Reception Room, a lot of times [Ms. Lewinsky] just happened to be walking down the corridor, you know, maybe just to see the President."²⁷⁷ Ms. Lewinsky acknowledged that she tried to position herself to see the President.²⁷⁸

Although they could not date them precisely, Secret Service officers and agents testified about several occasions when Ms. Lewinsky and the President were alone in the Oval Office. William C. Bordley, a former member of the Presidential Protective Detail, testified that in late 1995 or early 1996, he stopped Ms. Lewinsky outside the Oval Office because she did not have her pass.²⁷⁹ The President opened the Oval Office door, indicated to Agent Bordley that Ms. Lewinsky's presence was all right, and ushered Ms. Lewinsky into the Oval Office.²⁸⁰ Agent Bordley saw Ms. Lewinsky leave about half an hour later.²⁸¹

Another former member of the Presidential Protective Detail, Robert C. Ferguson, testified that one Saturday in winter, the President told him that he was expecting "some staffers."²⁸² A short time later, Ms. Lewinsky arrived and said that "[t]he President needs me."²⁸³ Agent Ferguson announced Ms. Lewinsky and admitted her to the Oval Office.²⁸⁴ About 10 or 15 minutes later, Agent Ferguson rotated to a post on the Colonnade outside the Oval Office.²⁸⁵ He glanced through the window into the Oval Office and saw the President and Ms. Lewinsky go through the door leading toward the private study.²⁸⁶

Deeming her frequent visits to the Oval Office area a “nuisance,” one Secret Service Officer complained to Evelyn Lieberman, the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations.²⁸⁷ Ms. Lieberman was already aware of Ms. Lewinsky. In December 1995, according to Ms. Lewinsky, Ms. Lieberman chided her for being in the West Wing and told her that interns are not permitted around the Oval Office. Ms. Lewinsky (who had begun her Office of Legislative Affairs job) told Ms. Lieberman that she was not an intern anymore. After expressing surprise that Ms. Lewinsky had been hired, Ms. Lieberman said she must have Ms. Lewinsky confused with someone else.²⁸⁸ Ms. Lieberman confirmed that she reprimanded Ms. Lewinsky, whom she considered “what we used to call a ‘clutch’ * * * always someplace she shouldn’t be.”²⁸⁹

In Ms. Lewinsky’s view, some White House staff members seemed to think that she was to blame for the President’s evident interest in her:

[P]eople were wary of his weaknesses, maybe, and * * * they didn’t want to look at him and think that he could be responsible for anything, so it had to all be my fault * * * I was stalking him or I was making advances towards him.²⁹⁰

B. DECISION TO TRANSFER MS. LEWINSKY

Ms. Lieberman testified that, because Ms. Lewinsky was so persistent in her efforts to be near the President, “I decided to get rid of her.”²⁹¹ First she consulted Chief of Staff Panetta. According to Mr. Panetta, Ms. Lieberman told him about a woman on the staff who was “spending too much time around the West Wing.” Because of “the appearance that it was creating,” Ms. Lieberman proposed to move her out of the White House. Mr. Panetta—who testified that he valued Ms. Lieberman’s role as “a tough disciplinarian” and “trusted her judgment”—replied, “Fine.”²⁹²

Although Ms. Lieberman said she could not recall having heard any rumors linking the President and Ms. Lewinsky, she acknowledged that “the President was vulnerable to these kind of rumors * * * yes, yes, that was one of the reasons” for moving Ms.

When she saw Ms. Lewinsky back in the White House after she no longer worked there, Ms. Lieberman asked Ms. Currie, “What is she doing here?” She also may have said to Ms. Currie, who told Ms. Lewinsky that she could watch a Presidential helicopter departure, “What are you—nuts?” or otherwise “expressed my displeasure.” Lieberman 1/30/98 GJ at 50–52.

Lewinsky out of the White House.²⁹³ Later, in September 1997, Marcia Lewis (Ms. Lewinsky's mother) complained about her daughter's dismissal to Ms. Lieberman, whom she met at a Voice of America ceremony. Ms. Lieberman, according to Ms. Lewis, responded by "saying something about Monica being cursed because she's beautiful." Ms. Lewis gathered from the remark that Ms. Lieberman, as part of her effort to protect the President, "would want to have pretty women moved out."²⁹⁴

Most people understood that the principal reason for Ms. Lewinsky's transfer was her habit of hanging around the Oval Office and the West Wing.²⁹⁵ In a memo in October 1996, John Hilley, Assistant to the President and Director of Legislative Affairs, reported that Ms. Lewinsky had been "got[ten] rid of" in part "because of 'extracurricular activities'" (a phrase, he maintained in the grand jury, that meant only that Ms. Lewinsky was often absent from her work station).²⁹⁶

White House officials arranged for Ms. Lewinsky to get another job in the Administration.²⁹⁷ "Our direction is to make sure she has a job in an Agency," Patsy Thomasson wrote in an email message on April 9, 1996.²⁹⁸ Ms. Thomasson's office (Presidential Personnel) sent Ms. Lewinsky's resume to Charles Duncan, Special Assistant to the Secretary of Defense and White House Liaison, and asked him to find a Pentagon opening for her.²⁹⁹ Mr. Duncan was told that, though Ms. Lewinsky had performed her duties capably, she was being dismissed for hanging around the Oval Office too much.³⁰⁰ According to Mr. Duncan—who had received as many as 40 job referrals per day from the White House—the White House had never given such an explanation for a transfer.³⁰¹

C. MS. LEWINSKY'S NOTIFICATION OF HER TRANSFER

On Friday, April 5, 1996, Timothy Keating, Staff Director for Legislative Affairs, informed Ms. Lewinsky that she would have to leave her White House job.³⁰² According to Mr. Keating, he told her that she was not being fired, merely "being given a different opportunity." In fact, she could tell people it was a promotion if she cared to do so.³⁰³ Upon hearing of her dismissal, Ms. Lewinsky burst into tears and asked if there was any way for her to stay in the White House, even without pay.³⁰⁴ No, Mr. Keating said. According to Ms. Lewinsky, "He told me I was too sexy to be working in the East Wing and that this job at the Pentagon where I'd be writing press releases was a sexier job."³⁰⁵

Ms. Lewinsky was devastated. She felt that she was being transferred simply because of her relationship with the President.³⁰⁶ And she feared that with the loss of her White House job, "I was never going to see the President again. I mean, my relationship with him would be over."³⁰⁷

D. CONVERSATIONS WITH THE PRESIDENT ABOUT HER TRANSFER

1. Easter Telephone Conversations and Sexual Encounter

On Easter Sunday, April 7, 1996, Ms. Lewinsky told the President of her dismissal and they had a sexual encounter. Ms. Lewinsky entered the White House at 4:56 and left at 5:28 p.m.³⁰⁸ The President was in the Oval Office all afternoon, from 2:21 to 7:48 p.m.³⁰⁹

According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President telephoned her at home that day. After they spoke of the death of the Commerce Secretary the previous week, she told him of her dismissal:

I had asked him * * * if he was doing okay with Ron Brown's death, and then after we talked about that for a little bit I told him that my last day was Monday. And * * * he seemed really upset and sort of asked me to tell him what had happened. So I did and I was crying and I asked him if I could come see him, and he said that that was fine.³¹⁰

At the White House, according to Ms. Lewinsky, she told Secret Service Officer Muskett that she needed to deliver papers to the President.³¹¹ Officer Muskett admitted her to the Oval Office, and she and the President proceeded to the private study.³¹²

According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President seemed troubled about her upcoming departure from the White House:

He also indicated that she could have any job she wanted after the election.³¹⁴ In addition, the President said he would find out why Ms. Lewinsky was transferred and report back to her.³¹⁵

When asked if he had promised to get Ms. Lewinsky another White House job, the President told the grand jury:

What I told Ms. Lewinsky was that * * * I would do what I could to see, if she had a good record at the Pentagon, and she assured me she was doing a good job and working hard, that I would do my best to see that the fact that she had been sent away from the Legislative Affairs section did not keep her from getting a job in the White House, and that is, in fact, what I tried to do. * * * But I did not tell her I would order someone to hire her, and I never did, and I wouldn't do that. It wouldn't be right.³¹⁶

Ms. Lewinsky, when asked if the President had said that he would bring her back to the White House only if she did a good job at the Pentagon, responded: "No."³¹⁷

After this Easter Sunday conversation, the President and Ms. Lewinsky had a sexual encounter in the hallway, according to Ms. Lewinsky.³¹⁸ She testified that the President touched her breasts with his mouth and hands.³¹⁹ According to Ms. Lewinsky: "I think he unzipped [his pants] * * * because it was sort of this running joke that I could never unbutton his pants, that I just had trouble with it."³²⁰ Ms. Lewinsky performed oral sex. The President did not ejaculate in her presence.³²¹

During this encounter, someone called out from the Oval Office that the President had a phone call.³²² He went back to the Oval Office for a moment, then took the call in the study. The President indicated that Ms. Lewinsky should perform oral sex while he talked on the phone, and she obliged.³²³ The telephone conversation was about politics, and Ms. Lewinsky thought the caller might be Dick Morris.³²⁴ White House records confirm that the President had one telephone call during Ms. Lewinsky's visit: from "Mr. Richard Morris," to whom he talked from 5:11 to 5:20 p.m.³²⁵

A second interruption occurred a few minutes later, according to Ms. Lewinsky. She and the President were in the study.³²⁶ Ms. Lewinsky testified:

Harold Ickes has a very distinct voice and * * * I heard him holler "Mr. President," and the President looked at me and I looked at him and he jetted out into the Oval Office and I panicked and * * * thought that maybe because Harold was so close with the President that they might just wander back there and the President would assume that I knew to leave.³²⁷

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she exited hurriedly through the dining room door.³²⁸ That evening, the President called and asked Ms. Lewinsky why she had run off. "I told him that I didn't know if he was going to be coming back. * * * [H]e was a little upset with me that I left."³²⁹

In addition to the record of the Dick Morris phone call, the testimony of Secret Service Officer Muskett corroborates Ms. Lewinsky's account. Officer Muskett was posted near the door to the Oval Office on Easter Sunday.³³⁰ He testified that Ms. Lewinsky (whom he knew) arrived at about 4:45 p.m. carrying a manila folder and seeming "a little upset."³³¹ She told Officer Muskett that she needed to deliver documents to the President.³³² Officer Muskett or the plainclothes agent on duty with him opened the door, and Ms. Lewinsky entered.³³³

About 20 to 25 minutes later, according to Officer Muskett, the telephone outside the Oval Office rang. The White House operator said that the President had an important call but he was not picking up.³³⁴ The agent working alongside Officer Muskett knocked on the door to the Oval Office. When the President did not respond, the agent entered. The Oval Office was empty, and the door leading to the study was slightly ajar.³³⁵ (Ms. Lewinsky testified that the President left the door ajar during their sexual encounters.³³⁶) The agent called out, "Mr. President?" There was no response. The agent stepped into the Oval Office and called out more loudly, “Mr. President?” This time there was a response from the study area, according to Officer Muskett: “Huh?” The agent called out that the President had a phone call, and the President said he would take it.³³⁷

A few minutes later, according to Officer Muskett, Mr. Ickes approached and said he needed to see President Clinton. Officer Muskett admitted him through Ms. Currie’s office.³³⁸ Less than a minute after Mr. Ickes entered Ms. Currie’s reception area, according to Officer Muskett, the pantry or dining room door closed audibly. Officer Muskett stepped down the hall to check and saw Ms. Lewinsky walking away briskly.³³⁹

At 5:30 p.m., two minutes after Ms. Lewinsky left the White House, the President called the office of the person who had decided to transfer Ms. Lewinsky, Evelyn Lieberman.³⁴⁰

2. April 12–13: Telephone Conversations

Ms. Lewinsky testified that the President telephoned her the following Friday, April 12, 1996, at home. They talked for about 20 minutes. According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President said he had checked on the reason for her transfer:

[H]e had come to learn * * * that Evelyn Lieberman had sort of spearheaded the transfer, and that she thought he was paying too much attention to me and I was paying too much attention to him and that she didn’t necessarily care what happened after the election but everyone needed to be careful before the election.³⁴¹

According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President told her to give the Pentagon a try, and, if she did not like it, he would get her a job on the campaign.³⁴²

In the grand jury, Ms. Lieberman testified that the President asked her directly about Ms. Lewinsky’s transfer:

After I had gotten rid of her, when I was in there, during the course of a conversation, [President Clinton] said, “I got a call about—” I don’t know if he said her name. He said maybe “—an intern you fired.” And she was evidently very upset about it. He said, “Do you know anything about this?” I said, “Yes.” He said, “Who fired her?” I said, “I did.” And he said, “Oh, okay.”³⁴³

According to Ms. Lieberman, the President did not pursue the matter further.³⁴⁴

Three other witnesses confirm that the President knew why Ms. Lewinsky was transferred to the Pentagon. In 1997, the President told Chief of Staff Erskine Bowles “that there was a young woman—her name was Monica Lewinsky—who used to work at the White House; that Evelyn * * * thought she hung around the Oval Office too much and transferred her to the Pentagon.”³⁴⁵ According to Betty Currie, the President believed that Ms. Lewinsky had been unfairly transferred.³⁴⁶ The President’s close friend, Vernon Jordan, testified that the President said to him in December 1997 that “he knew about [Ms. Lewinsky’s] situation, which was that she was pushed out of the White House.”³⁴⁷

V. APRIL-DECEMBER 1996: NO PRIVATE MEETINGS

After Ms. Lewinsky began her Pentagon job on April 16, 1996, she had no further physical contact with the President for the remainder of the year. She and the President spoke by phone (and had phone sex) but saw each other only at public functions. Ms. Lewinsky grew frustrated after the election because the President did not bring her back to work at the White House.

A. PENTAGON JOB

On April 16, 1996, Ms. Lewinsky began working at the Pentagon as Confidential Assistant to the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Public Affairs.³⁴⁸

B. NO PHYSICAL CONTACT

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she had no physical contact with the President for the rest of 1996.³⁴⁹ "I wasn't alone with him so when I saw him it was in some sort of event or group setting," she testified.³⁵⁰

C. TELEPHONE CONVERSATIONS

Ms. Lewinsky and the President did talk by telephone, especially in her first weeks at the new job.³⁵¹ By Ms. Lewinsky's estimate, the President phoned her (sometimes leaving a message) four or five times in the month after she started working at the Pentagon, then two or three times a month thereafter for the rest of 1996.³⁵² During the fall 1996 campaign, the President sometimes called from trips when Mrs. Clinton was not accompanying him.³⁵³ During at least seven of the 1996 calls, Ms. Lewinsky and the President had phone sex.³⁵⁴

According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President telephoned her at about 6:30 a.m. on July 19, the day he was leaving for the 1996

Olympics in Atlanta, and they had phone sex, after which the President exclaimed, “[G]ood morning!” and then said: “What a way to start a day.”³⁵⁵ A call log shows that the President called the White House operator at 12:11 a.m. on July 19 and asked for a wake-up call at 7 a.m., then at 6:40 a.m., the President called and said he was already up.³⁵⁶ In Ms. Lewinsky’s recollection, she and the President also had phone sex on May 21, July 5 or 6, October 22, and December 2, 1996.³⁵⁷ On those dates, Mrs. Clinton was in Denver (May 21), Prague and Budapest (July 5–6), Las Vegas (October 22), and en route to Bolivia (December 2).³⁵⁸

Ms. Lewinsky repeatedly told the President that she disliked her Pentagon job and wanted to return to the White House.³⁵⁹ In a recorded conversation, Ms. Lewinsky recounted one call:

[A] month had passed and—so he had called one night, and I said, “Well,” I said, “I’m really unhappy,” you know. And [the President] said, “I don’t want to talk about your job tonight. I’ll call you this week, and then we’ll talk about it. I want to talk about other things”—which meant phone sex.³⁶⁰

She expected to talk with him the following weekend, and she was “ready to broach the idea of * * * going to the campaign,” but he did not call.³⁶¹

Ms. Lewinsky and the President also talked about their relationship. During a phone conversation on September 5, according to Ms. Lewinsky, she told the President that she wanted to have intercourse with him. He responded that he could not do so because of the possible consequences. The two of them argued, and he asked if he should stop calling her. No, she responded.³⁶²

D. PUBLIC ENCOUNTERS

During this period, Ms. Lewinsky occasionally saw the President in public. She testified:

I’m an insecure person * * * and I was insecure about the relationship at times and thought that he would come to forget me easily and if I hadn’t heard from him * * * it was very difficult for me. * * * [U]sually when I’d see him, it would kind of prompt him to call me. So I made an effort. I would go early and stand in the front so I could see him. * * *³⁶³

She said she planned to be at the White House on Pentagon business the next day, and he told her to stop by the Oval Office. At the White House the next day, Ms. Lewinsky did not see the President because Ms. Lieberman was nearby.³⁷¹ On December 17, Ms. Lewinsky attended a holiday reception at the White House.³⁷² A photo shows her shaking hands with the President.³⁷³

E. MS. LEWINSKY'S FRUSTRATIONS

Continuing to believe that her relationship with the President was the key to regaining her White House pass, Ms. Lewinsky hoped that the President would get her a job immediately after the election. "I kept a calendar with a countdown until election day," she later wrote in an unsent letter to him. The letter states:

I was so sure that the weekend after the election you would call me to come visit and you would kiss me passionately and tell me you couldn't wait to have me back. You'd ask me where I wanted to work and say something akin to "Consider it done" and it would be. Instead I didn't hear from you for weeks and subsequently your phone calls became less frequent.³⁷⁴

VI. EARLY 1997: RESUMPTION OF SEXUAL ENCOUNTERS

In 1997, President Clinton and Ms. Lewinsky had further private meetings, which now were arranged by Betty Currie, the President's secretary. After the taping of the President's weekly radio address on February 28, the President and Ms. Lewinsky had a sexual encounter. On March 24, they had what proved to be their final sexual encounter. Throughout this period, Ms. Lewinsky continued to press for a job at the White House, to no avail.

A. RESUMPTION OF MEETINGS WITH THE PRESIDENT

1. Role of Betty Currie

a. Arranging Meetings

In 1997, with the presidential election past, Ms. Lewinsky and the President resumed their one-on-one meetings and sexual encounters. The President's secretary, Betty Currie, acted as intermediary.

According to Ms. Currie, Ms. Lewinsky would often call her and say she wanted to see the President, sometimes to discuss a particular topic.³⁷⁸ Ms. Currie would ask President Clinton, and, if he agreed, arrange the meeting.³⁷⁹ Ms. Currie also said it was "not unusual" that Ms. Lewinsky would talk by phone with the President and then call Ms. Currie to set up a meeting.³⁸⁰ At times, Ms. Currie placed calls to Ms. Lewinsky for President Clinton and put him on the line.³⁸¹

The meetings between the President and Ms. Lewinsky often occurred on weekends.³⁸² When Ms. Lewinsky would arrive at the White House, Ms. Currie generally would be the one to authorize her entry and take her to the West Wing.³⁸³ Ms. Currie acknowledged that she sometimes would come to the White House for the sole purpose of having Ms. Lewinsky admitted and bringing her to see the President.³⁸⁴ According to Ms. Currie, Ms. Lewinsky and the President were alone together in the Oval Office or the study for 15 to 20 minutes on multiple occasions.³⁸⁵

Secret Service officers and agents took note of Ms. Currie's role. Officer Steven Pape once observed Ms. Currie come to the White House for the duration of Ms. Lewinsky's visit, then leave.³⁸⁶ When calling to alert the officer at the West Wing lobby that Ms. Lewinsky was en route, Ms. Currie would sometimes say, "[Y]ou know who it is."³⁸⁷ On one occasion, Ms. Currie instructed Officer Brent Chinery to hold Ms. Lewinsky at the lobby for a few minutes because she needed to move the President to the study.³⁸⁸ On another occasion, Ms. Currie told Officer Chinery to have Ms. Lewinsky held at the gate for 30 to 40 minutes because the President already had a visitor.³⁸⁹

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she once asked the President why Ms. Currie had to clear her in, and why he could not do so himself. "[H]e said because if someone comes to see him, there's a list circulated among the staff members and then everyone would be questioning why I was there to see him."³⁹⁰

b. Intermediary for Gifts

Ms. Lewinsky also sent over a number of packages—six or eight, Ms. Currie estimated.³⁹¹ According to Ms. Currie, Ms. Lewinsky would call and say she was sending something for the President.³⁹² The package would arrive addressed to Ms. Currie.³⁹³ Courier receipts show that Ms. Lewinsky sent seven packages to the White House between October 7 and December 8, 1997.³⁹⁴ Evidence indicates that Ms. Lewinsky on occasion also dropped parcels off with Ms. Currie or had a family member do so,³⁹⁵ and brought gifts to the President when visiting him.³⁹⁶ Ms. Currie testified that most packages from Ms. Lewinsky were intended for the President.³⁹⁷

Although Ms. Currie generally opened letters and parcels to the President, she did not open these packages from Ms. Lewinsky.³⁹⁸ She testified that "I made the determination not to open" such letters and packages because "I felt [they were] probably personal."³⁹⁹ Instead, she would leave the package in the President's box, and "[h]e would pick it up."⁴⁰⁰ To the best of her knowledge, such parcels always reached the President.⁴⁰¹

c. Secrecy

Ms. Currie testified that she suspected impropriety in the President's relationship with Ms. Lewinsky.⁴⁰² She told the grand jury that she "had concern." In her words: "[H]e was spending a lot of time with a 24-year-old young lady. I know he has said that young people keep him involved in what's happening in the world, so I knew that was one reason, but there was a concern of mine that she was spending more time than most."⁴⁰³ Ms. Currie understood that "the majority" of the President's meetings with Ms. Lewinsky were "more personal in nature as opposed to business."⁴⁰⁴

Ms. Currie also testified that she tried to avoid learning details of the relationship between the President and Ms. Lewinsky. On one occasion, Ms. Lewinsky said of herself and the President, "As long as no one saw us—and no one did—then nothing happened." Ms. Currie responded: "Don't want to hear it. Don't say any more. I don't want to hear any more."⁴⁰⁵

Ms. Currie helped keep the relationship secret. When the President wanted to talk with Ms. Lewinsky, Ms. Currie would dial the call herself rather than go through White House operators, who keep logs of presidential calls made through the switchboard.⁴⁰⁶ When Ms. Lewinsky phoned and Ms. Currie put the President on the line, she did not log the call, though the standard procedure was to note all calls, personal and professional.⁴⁰⁷ According to Secret Service uniformed officers, Ms. Currie sometimes tried to persuade them to admit Ms. Lewinsky to the White House compound without making a record of it.⁴⁰⁸

In addition, Ms. Currie avoided writing down or retaining most messages from Ms. Lewinsky to the President. In response to a grand jury subpoena, the White House turned over only one note to the President concerning Ms. Lewinsky—whereas evidence indicates that Ms. Lewinsky used Ms. Currie to convey requests and messages to the President on many occasions.⁴⁰⁹

When bringing Ms. Lewinsky in from the White House gate, Ms. Currie said she sometimes chose a path that would reduce the likelihood of being seen by two White House employees who disapproved of Ms. Lewinsky: Stephen Goodin and Nancy

I can't imagine—and I can't imagine that it could be." Currie 7/22/98 GJ at 115. None of the Uniformed Division officers interviewed by the OIC acknowledged having permitted Ms. Lewinsky to enter the White House without proper clearance. However, as noted elsewhere, there is clear evidence that Ms. Lewinsky was in the White House on days for which no records show her entry or exit.

⁴⁰⁹ V006–DC–00003712 (2/24/97 message). Records show seven calls from Ms. Lewinsky's line to Ms. Currie's line on December 5, 1997, for example, and six calls the following day. 1216–DC–00000022.

Hernreich.⁴¹⁰ Ms. Currie testified that she once brought Ms. Lewinsky directly to the study, “sneaking her back” via a round-about path to avoid running into Mr. Goodin.⁴¹¹ When Ms. Lewinsky visited the White House on weekends and at night, being spotted was not a problem—in Ms. Currie’s words, “there would be no need to sneak”—so Ms. Lewinsky would await the President in Ms. Currie’s office.⁴¹²

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she once expressed concern about records showing the President’s calls to her, and Ms. Currie told her not to worry.⁴¹³ Ms. Lewinsky also suspected that Ms. Currie was not logging in all of her gifts to the President.⁴¹⁴ In Ms. Lewinsky’s evaluation, many White House staff members tried to regulate the President’s behavior, but Ms. Currie generally did as he wished.⁴¹⁵

2. Observations by Secret Service Officers

Officers of the Secret Service Uniformed Division noted Ms. Lewinsky’s 1997 visits to the White House. From radio traffic about the President’s movements, several officers observed that the President often would head for the Oval Office within minutes of Ms. Lewinsky’s entry to the complex, especially on weekends, and some noted that he would return to the Residence a short time after her departure.⁴¹⁶ “It was just like clockwork,” according to one officer.⁴¹⁷ Concerned about the President’s reputation, another officer suggested putting Ms. Lewinsky on a list of people who were not to be admitted to the White House. A commander responded that it was none of their business whom the President chose to see, and, in any event, nobody would ever find out about Ms. Lewinsky.⁴¹⁸

C. FEBRUARY 24 MESSAGE

On February 24, Ms. Lewinsky visited the White House on Pentagon business.⁴²⁰ She went by Ms. Currie's office.⁴²¹ Ms. Currie sent a note to the President—the only such note turned over by the White House in response to a grand jury subpoena: "Monica Lewinsky stopped by. Do you want me to call her?"⁴²²

D. FEBRUARY 28 SEXUAL ENCOUNTER

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President had a sexual encounter on Thursday, February 28—their first in nearly 11 months. White House records show that Ms. Lewinsky attended the taping of the President's weekly radio address on February 28.⁴²³ She was at the White House from 5:48 to 7:07 p.m.⁴²⁴ The President was in the Roosevelt Room (where the radio address was taped) from 6:29 to 6:36 p.m., then moved to the Oval Office, where he remained until 7:24 p.m.⁴²⁵ He had no telephone calls while Ms. Lewinsky was in the White House.⁴²⁶

Wearing a navy blue dress from the Gap, Ms. Lewinsky attended the radio address at the President's invitation (relayed by Ms. Currie), then had her photo taken with the President.⁴²⁷ Ms. Lewinsky had not been alone with the President since she had worked at the White House, and, she testified, "I was really nervous."⁴²⁸ President Clinton told her to see Ms. Currie after the photo was taken because he wanted to give her something.⁴²⁹ "So I waited a little while for him and then Betty and the President and I went into the back office," Ms. Lewinsky testified.⁴³⁰ (She later learned that the reason Ms. Currie accompanied them was that Stephen Goodin did not want the President to be alone with Ms. Lewinsky, a view that Mr. Goodin expressed to the President and Ms. Currie.⁴³¹) Once they had passed from the Oval Office to ward the private study, Ms. Currie said, "I'll be right back," and walked on to the back pantry or the dining room, where, according to Ms. Currie, she waited for 15 to 20 minutes while the President and Ms. Lewinsky were in the study.⁴³² Ms. Currie (who said she acted on her own initiative) testified that she accompanied the President and Ms. Lewinsky out of the Oval Office because "I didn't want any perceptions, him being alone with someone."⁴³³

In the study, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the President "started to say something to me and I was pestering him to kiss me, because * * * it had been a long time since we had been alone."⁴³⁴ The President told her to wait a moment, as he had presents for her.⁴³⁵ As belated Christmas gifts, he gave her a hat pin and a special edition of Walt Whitman's Leaves of Grass.⁴³⁶ Ms. Lewinsky described the Whitman book as "the most sentimental gift he had given me * * * it's beautiful and it meant a lot to me."⁴³⁷ During this visit, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the President said he had seen her Valentine's Day message in the Washington Post, and he talked about his fondness for "Romeo and Juliet."⁴³⁸

Ms. Lewinsky testified that after the President gave her the gifts, they had a sexual encounter:

A draft of Ms. Lewinsky's thank-you note (to "Dear Mr. P") was found in her apartment. It says in part:

All of my life, everyone has always said that I am a difficult person for whom to shop, and yet, you managed to choose two absolutely perfect presents! A little phrase (with only eight letters) like "thank you" simply cannot begin to express what I feel for what you have given me. Art & poetry are gifts to my soul!

I just love the hat pin. It is vibrant, unique and a beautiful piece of art. My only hope is that I have a hat fit to adorn it (ahhh, I see another excuse to go shopping!) I know that I am bound to receive compliments on it.

I have only read excerpts from "Leaves of Grass" before—never in its entirety or in such a beautifully bound edition. Like Shakespeare, Whitman's writings are so timeless. I find solace in works from the past that remain profound and somehow always poignant. Whitman is so rich that one must read him like one tastes a fine wine or good cigar—take it in, roll it in your mouth, and savor it!

I hope you know how very grateful I am for these gifts, especially your gift of friendship. I will treasure them all * * * always.

took them out of my bra and was kissing them and touching them with his hands and with his mouth.

And then I think I was touching him in his genital area through his pants, and I think I unbuttoned his shirt and was kissing his chest. And then * * * I wanted to perform oral sex on him * * * and so I did. And then * * * I think he heard something, or he heard someone in the office. So, we moved into the bathroom.

And I continued to perform oral sex and then he pushed me away, kind of as he always did before he came, and then I stood up and I said * * * I care about you so much; * * * I don't understand why you won't let me * * * make you come; it's important to me; I mean, it just doesn't feel complete, it doesn't seem right.⁴³⁹

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she and the President hugged, and "he said he didn't want to get addicted to me, and he didn't want me to get addicted to him." They looked at each other for a moment.⁴⁴⁰ Then, saying that "I don't want to disappoint you," the President consented.⁴⁴¹ For the first time, she performed oral sex through completion.⁴⁴²

When Ms. Lewinsky next took the navy blue Gap dress from her closet to wear it, she noticed stains near one hip and on the chest.⁴⁴³ FBI Laboratory tests revealed that the stains are the President's semen.⁴⁴⁴

In his grand jury testimony, the President—who, because the OIC had asked him for a blood sample (and had represented that it had ample evidentiary justification for making such a request), had reason to suspect that Ms. Lewinsky's dress might bear traces of his semen—indicated that he and Ms. Lewinsky had had sexual contact on the day of the radio address. He testified:

I was sick after it was over and I, I was pleased at that time that it had been nearly a year since any inappropriate contact had occurred with Ms. Lewinsky. I promised myself it wasn't going to happen again. The facts are complicated about what did happen and how it happened. But, nonetheless, I'm responsible for it.⁴⁴⁵

Later the President added, referring to the evening of the radio address: "I do believe that I was alone with her from 15 to 20 minutes. I do believe that things happened then which were inappropriate."⁴⁴⁶ He said of the intimate relationship with Ms. Lewinsky: "I never should have started it, and I certainly shouldn't have started it back after I resolved not to in 1996."⁴⁴⁷

E. MARCH 29 SEXUAL ENCOUNTER

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she had what proved to be her final sexual encounter with the President on Saturday, March 29, 1997. Records show that she was at the White House from 2:03 to 3:16 p.m., admitted by Ms. Currie.⁴⁴⁸ The President was in the Oval Office during this period (he left shortly after Ms. Lewinsky did, at 3:24 p.m.), and he did not have any phone calls during her White House visit.⁴⁴⁹

According to Ms. Lewinsky, Ms. Currie arranged the meeting after the President said by telephone that he had something important to tell her. At the White House, Ms. Currie took her to the study to await the President. He came in on crutches, the result of a knee injury in Florida two weeks earlier.⁴⁵⁰

According to Ms. Lewinsky, their sexual encounter began with a sudden kiss: “[T]his was another one of those occasions when I was babbling on about something, and he just kissed me, kind of to shut me up, I think.”⁴⁵¹ The President unbuttoned her blouse and touched her breasts without removing her bra.⁴⁵² “[H]e went to go put his hand down my pants, and then I unzipped them because it was easier. And I didn’t have any panties on. And so he manually stimulated me.”⁴⁵³ According to Ms. Lewinsky, “I wanted him to touch my genitals with his genitals,” and he did so, lightly and without penetration.⁴⁵⁴ Then Ms. Lewinsky performed oral sex on him, again until he ejaculated.⁴⁵⁵

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President had a lengthy conversation that day. He told her that he suspected that a foreign embassy (he did not specify which one) was tapping his telephones, and he proposed cover stories. If ever questioned, she should say that the two of them were just friends. If anyone ever asked about their phone sex, she should say that they knew their calls were being monitored all along, and the phone sex was just a put-on.⁴⁵⁶

In his grand jury testimony, the President implicitly denied this encounter. He acknowledged “inappropriate intimate contact” with Ms. Lewinsky “on certain occasions in early 1996 and once in early 1997.”⁴⁵⁷ The President indicated that “the one occasion in 1997” was the radio address.⁴⁵⁸

F. CONTINUING JOB EFFORTS

she first broached the issue in a telephone call with the President in January 1997, and he said he would speak to Bob Nash, Director of Presidential Personnel.⁴⁵⁹ She understood that Mr. Nash was supposed to “find a position for me to come back to the White House.”⁴⁶⁰

Over the months that followed, Ms. Lewinsky repeatedly asked the President to get her a White House job. In her recollection, the President replied that various staff members were working on it, including Mr. Nash and Marsha Scott, Deputy Assistant to the President and Deputy Director for Presidential Personnel.⁴⁶¹ According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President told her:

“Bob Nash is handling it,” “Marsha’s going to handle it” and “We just sort of need to be careful.” You know, and * * * he would always sort of * * * validate what I was feeling by telling me something that I don’t necessarily know is true. “Oh, I’ll talk to her,” “I’ll—you know, I’ll see blah, blah, blah,” and it was just “I’ll do,” “I’ll do,” “I’ll do.” And didn’t, didn’t, didn’t.⁴⁶²

Ms. Lewinsky came to wonder if she was being “strung along.”⁴⁶³ Testifying before the grand jury, the President acknowledged that Ms. Lewinsky had complained to him about her job situation:

You know, she tried for months and months to get a job back in the White House, not so much in the West Wing but somewhere in the White House complex, including the Old Executive Office Building. * * * She very much wanted to come back. And she interviewed for some jobs but never got one. She was, from time to time, upset about it.⁴⁶⁴

VII. MAY 1997: TERMINATION OF SEXUAL RELATIONSHIP

In May 1997, amid indications that Ms. Lewinsky had been indiscreet, President Clinton terminated the sexual relationship.

A. QUESTIONS ABOUT MS. LEWINSKY'S DISCRETION

In April or May 1997, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the President asked if she had told her mother about their intimate relationship. She responded: "No. Of course not."⁴⁶⁵ (In truth, she had told her mother.⁴⁶⁶) The President indicated that Ms. Lewinsky's mother possibly had said something about the nature of the relationship to Walter Kaye, who had mentioned it to Marsha Scott, who in turn had alerted the President.⁴⁶⁷

Corroborating Ms. Lewinsky's account, Mr. Kaye testified that he told Ms. Lewinsky's aunt, Debra Finerman, that he understood that "her niece was very aggressive," a remark that angered Ms. Finerman. Ms. Finerman told Mr. Kaye that the President was the true aggressor: He was telephoning Ms. Lewinsky late at night. Ms. Finerman, in Mr. Kaye's recollection, attributed this information to Marcia Lewis, Ms. Lewinsky's mother (and Ms. Finerman's sister). Mr. Kaye—who had disbelieved stories he had heard from Democratic National Committee people about an affair between Ms. Lewinsky and the President—testified that he was "shocked" to hear of the late-night phone calls.⁴⁶⁸

B. MAY 24: BREAK-UP

On Saturday, May 24, 1997, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the President ended their intimate relationship. Ms. Lewinsky was at the White House that day from 12:21 to 1:54 p.m.⁴⁶⁹ The President was in the Oval Office during most of this period, from 11:59 a.m. to 1:47 p.m.⁴⁷⁰ He did not have any telephone calls.⁴⁷¹

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she got a call from Ms. Currie at about 11 a.m. that day, inviting her to come to the White House at about 1 p.m. Ms. Lewinsky arrived wearing a straw hat with the hat pin the President had given her, and bringing gifts for him, including a puzzle and a Banana Republic shirt. She gave him the gifts in the dining room, and they moved to the area of the study.⁴⁷²

According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President explained that they had to end their intimate relationship.⁴⁷³ Earlier in his marriage, he told her, he had had hundreds of affairs; but since turning 40, he had made a concerted effort to be faithful.⁴⁷⁴ He said he was attracted to Ms. Lewinsky, considered her a great person, and hoped they would remain friends. He pointed out that he could do a great deal for her. The situation, he stressed, was not Ms. Lewinsky's fault.⁴⁷⁵ Ms. Lewinsky, weeping, tried to persuade the President not to end the sexual relationship, but he was unyielding, then and subsequently.⁴⁷⁶ Although she and the President kissed and hugged thereafter, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the sexual relationship was over.⁴⁷⁷

Three days after this meeting, on May 27, 1997, the Supreme Court unanimously rejected President Clinton's claim that the Constitution immunized him from civil lawsuits. The Court ordered the sexual harassment case Jones v. Clinton to proceed.⁴⁷⁸

VIII. JUNE–OCTOBER 1997: CONTINUING MEETINGS AND CALLS

Ms. Lewinsky tried to return to the White House staff and to revive her sexual relationship with the President, but she failed at both.

A. CONTINUING JOB EFFORTS

Although Ms. Lewinsky was not offered another White House job, some testimony indicates that the President tried to get her one.

According to Betty Currie, the President instructed her and Marsha Scott to help Ms. Lewinsky find a White House job.⁴⁷⁹ Ms. Currie testified that she resisted the request, because her opinion of Ms. Lewinsky had shifted over time. At first, she testified, she considered Ms. Lewinsky “a friend” who “had been wronged” and

A fragment of a deleted file recovered from Ms. Lewinsky's home computer apparently refers to the President's May 24 announcement:

. . . cannot do anything but accept that. However, I also cannot ignore what we have shared together. I don't care what you say, but if you were 100% fulfilled in your marriage I never would have seen that raw, intense sexuality that I saw a few times— watching your mouth on my breast or looking in your eyes while you explored the depth of my sex. Instead, it would have been a routine encounter void of anything but a sexual release. I do not want you to breach your moral standard had been “maligned improperly.”⁴⁸⁰ But “[l]ater on, I considered her as a pain in the neck, more or less.”⁴⁸¹ The change of heart resulted in part from Ms. Currie’s many phone calls in 1997 from Ms. Lewinsky, who was often distraught and sometimes in tears over her inability to get in touch with the President.⁴⁸² Deeming her “a little bit pushy,” Ms. Currie argued against bringing Ms. Lewinsky back to work at the White House, but the President told her and Ms. Scott, in Ms. Currie’s words, “to still pursue her coming back.”⁴⁸³ Indeed, according to Ms. Currie, the President “was pushing us hard” on the matter.⁴⁸⁴ To the best of Ms. Currie’s recollection, it was the only time the President instructed her to try to get someone a White House job.⁴⁸⁵

According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President told her to talk with Ms. Scott about a White House job in spring 1997.⁴⁸⁶ On June 16, she met with Ms. Scott.⁴⁸⁷ The meeting did not go as Ms. Lewinsky anticipated. She later recounted in an email message:

There is most certainly a disconnect on what [the President] said he told her and how she acted. She didn’t even know what my title or my job was * * * She didn’t have any job openings to offer. Instead, she made me go over what happened when I had to leave (who told me), and then proceeded to confirm the Evelyn [Lieberman] story about my “inappropriate behavior.” Then she asked me: with such nasty women there and people gossiping about me, why did I want to come back? I was so upset. I really did not feel it was her place to question me about that. Later on, I said something about being told I could come back after November and she wanted to know who told me that! So I have placed a call to him but I don’t know what is going to happen.

Ms. Lewinsky added that she was inclined “to walk away from it all,” but acknowledged that “I’m always saying this and then I change my mind.”⁴⁸⁸

Though she characterized her recollection as “all jumbled,” Ms. Scott corroborated much of Ms. Lewinsky’s account.⁴⁸⁹ Ms. Scott said that at some point she did ask Ms. Lewinsky why she wanted to return to the White House.⁴⁹⁰ Ms. Scott also said that she was unaware of Ms. Lewinsky’s job title before their meeting.⁴⁹¹

Over the next three weeks, Ms. Lewinsky tried repeatedly, without success, to talk with the President about her job quest. In a draft of a letter to Ms. Currie, she wrote that the President “said to me that he had told [Ms. Scott] I had gotten a bum deal, and I should get a good job in the West Wing,” but Ms. Scott did not seem eager to arrange for Ms. Lewinsky’s return. Ms. Lewinsky wrote:

I was surprised that she would question his judgment and not just do what he asked of her. Is it possible that, in fact, he did not tell her that? Does he really not want me back in the complex? He has not responded to my note, nor has he called me. Do you know what is going on? If so, are you able to share it with me?⁴⁹²

Ms. Currie testified to “a vague recollection” of having seen this letter.⁴⁹³

On June 29, 1997, Ms. Lewinsky wrote several notes. In a draft letter to Ms. Scott, Ms. Lewinsky wrote that “our last conversation was very upsetting to me,” and added:

Marsha, I was told that I could come back after the election. I knew why I had to leave last year by mid-April, and I have been beyond patient since then. I do not think it is fair to . . . be told by the person whom I was told would get me a job that there is nothing for me and she doesn’t really hear about positions [in] the complex anyway. I know that in your eyes I am just a hindrance—a woman who doesn’t have a certain someone’s best interests at heart, but please trust me when I say I do.⁴⁹⁴

Ms. Lewinsky also drafted a note to the President pleading for a brief meeting the following Tuesday. Referring to her inability to get in touch with him, she wrote: “Please do not do this to me. I feel disposable, used and insignificant. I understand your hands are tied, but I want to talk to you and look at some options.”⁴⁹⁵ Around this time, Ms. Lewinsky told a friend that she was considering moving to another city or country.⁴⁹⁶

B. JULY 3 LETTER

“[V]ery frustrated” over her inability to get in touch with the President to discuss her job situation, Ms. Lewinsky wrote him a peevish letter on July 3, 1997.⁴⁹⁷ Opening “Dear Sir,” the letter took the President to task for breaking his promise to get her another White House job.⁴⁹⁸ Ms. Lewinsky also obliquely threatened to disclose their relationship. If she was not going to return to work at the White House, she wrote, then she would “need to explain to my parents exactly why that wasn’t happening.” Some explanation was necessary because she had told her parents that she would be brought back after the election.⁴⁹⁹ (Ms. Lewinsky testified that she would not actually have told her father about the relationship—she had already told her mother—but she wanted to remind the President that she had “left the White House like a good girl in April of ’96,” whereas other people might have threatened disclosure in order to retain the job.⁵⁰⁰)

Ms. Lewinsky also raised the possibility of a job outside Washington. If returning to the White House was impossible, she asked in this letter, could he get her a job at the United Nations in New York?⁵⁰¹ It was the first time that she had told the President that she was considering moving.⁵⁰²

Although not questioned about this particular letter, the President testified that he believed Ms. Lewinsky might disclose their intimate relationship once he stopped it. He testified:

After I terminated the improper contact with her, she wanted to come in more than she did. She got angry when she didn’t get in sometimes. I knew that that might make her more likely to speak, and I still did it because I had to limit the contact.⁵⁰³

After receiving the July 3 letter, though, the President agreed to see Ms. Lewinsky. In her account, Ms. Currie called that afternoon and told her to come to the White House at 9 a.m. the next day.⁵⁰⁴

C. JULY 4 MEETING

On Friday, July 4, 1997, Ms. Lewinsky had what she characterized as a “very emotional” visit with the President.⁵⁰⁵ Records show that Ms. Lewinsky entered the White House at 8:51 a.m.; no exit time is recorded.⁵⁰⁶ Logs indicate that the President was in the Oval Office from 8:40 until after 11 a.m.⁵⁰⁷

In Ms. Lewinsky’s recollection, their meeting began contentiously, with the President scolding her: “[I]t’s illegal to threaten the President of the United States.”⁵⁰⁸ He then told her that he had not read her July 3 letter beyond the “Dear Sir” line; he surmised that it was threatening because Ms. Currie looked upset when she brought it to him. (Ms. Lewinsky suspected that he actually had read the whole thing.)⁵⁰⁹ Ms. Lewinsky complained about his failure to get her a White House job after her long wait. Although the President claimed he wanted to be her friend, she said, he was not acting like it. Ms. Lewinsky began weeping, and the President hugged her. While they hugged, she spotted a gardener outside the study window, and they moved into the hallway by the bathroom.⁵¹⁰

There, the President was “the most affectionate with me he’d ever been,” Ms. Lewinsky testified. He stroked her arm, toyed with her hair, kissed her on the neck, praised her intellect and beauty.⁵¹¹ In Ms. Lewinsky’s recollection:

[H]e remarked * * * that he wished he had more time for me. And so I said, well, maybe you will have more time in three years. And I was * * * thinking just when he wasn’t President, he was going to have more time on his hands. And he said, well, I don’t know, I might be alone in three years. And then I said something about * * * us sort of being together. I think I kind of said, oh, I think we’d be a good team, or something like that. And he * * * jokingly said, well, what are we going to do when I’m 75 and I have to pee 25 times a day? And * * * I told him that we’d deal with that * * * ⁵¹²

Ms. Lewinsky testified that “I left that day sort of emotionally stunned,” for “I just knew he was in love with me.”⁵¹³

Just before leaving, according to Ms. Lewinsky, she told the President “that I wanted to talk to him about something serious and that while I didn’t want to be the one to talk about this with him, I thought it was important he know.”⁵¹⁴ She informed him that Newsweek was working on an article about Kathleen Willey, a former White House volunteer who claimed that the President had sexually harassed her during a private meeting in the Oval Office on November 23, 1993. (Ms. Lewinsky knew of the article from Ms. Tripp, who had worked at the White House at the time of the alleged incident and had heard about the incident from Ms. Willey. Michael Isikoff of Newsweek had talked with Ms. Tripp about the episode in March 1997 and again shortly before July 4, and Ms. Tripp had subsequently related the Isikoff conversations to Ms. Lewinsky.⁵¹⁵) Ms. Lewinsky told the President what she had learned from Ms. Tripp (whom she did not name), including the fact that Ms. Tripp had tried to get in touch with Deputy White House Counsel Bruce Lindsey, who had not returned her calls.⁵¹⁶

Ms. Lewinsky testified about why she conveyed this information to the President: "I was concerned that the President had no idea this was going on and that this woman was going to be another Paula Jones and he didn't really need that."⁵¹⁷ She understood that Ms. Willey was looking for a job, and she thought that the President might be able to "make this go away" by finding her a job.⁵¹⁸

The President responded that the harassment allegation was ludicrous, because he would never approach a small-breasted woman like Ms. Willey.⁵¹⁹ He further said that, during the previous week, Ms. Willey had called Nancy Hernreich to warn that a reporter was working on a story about Ms. Willey and the President; Ms. Willey wondered how she could get out of it.⁵²⁰

According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President had no telephone calls during her time with him. At 10:19 a.m., probably after her departure (her exit time is not shown on logs), he placed two calls, both potentially follow-ups to the conversation about the Newsweek article. First, he spoke with Bruce Lindsey for three minutes, then with Nancy Hernreich for 11 minutes.⁵²¹

D. JULY 14–15 DISCUSSIONS OF LINDA TRIPP

On the evening of Monday, July 14, 1997, just after Ms. Lewinsky had returned from an overseas trip, the President had her come to the White House to discuss Linda Tripp and Newsweek.⁵²² Ms. Lewinsky entered the White House at 9:34 p.m. and exited at 11:22 p.m.⁵²³ The President was in the Oval Office area from 9:28 to 11:25 p.m.⁵²⁴

Ms. Lewinsky testified that, at around 7:30 p.m. that evening, Ms. Currie telephoned and said that the President wanted to talk to her or see her. At about 8:30 or 9:00 p.m., Ms. Currie called again and asked Ms. Lewinsky to come to the White House.⁵²⁵

Ms. Lewinsky testified that the President met her in Ms. Currie's office, then took her into Ms. Hernreich's office.⁵²⁶ (Records show that seven minutes after Ms. Lewinsky's entry to the White House complex, the President left the Oval Office for the appointment secretary's office.)⁵²⁷ According to Ms. Lewinsky:

It was an unusual meeting . * * * It was very distant and very cold. * * * [A]t one point he asked me if the woman that I had mentioned on July 4th was Linda Tripp. And I hesitated and then answered yes, and he talked about that there was some issue * * * to do with Kathleen Willey and that, as he called it, that there was something on the Sludge Report, that there had been some information.⁵²⁸

The President told Ms. Lewinsky that Ms. Willey had called the White House again, this time to report that Mr. Isikoff somehow knew of her earlier White House call.⁵²⁹ The President wondered if Ms. Lewinsky had mentioned the Willey call to Ms. Tripp, who in turn might have told Mr. Isikoff. Ms. Lewinsky acknowledged that she had done so. Ms. Lewinsky testified: “[H]e was concerned about Linda, and I reassured him. He asked me if I trusted her, and I said yes.”⁵³⁰ The President asked Ms. Lewinsky to try to persuade Ms. Tripp to call Mr. Lindsey.⁵³¹ The President, according to Ms. Lewinsky, also asked if she had confided anything about their relationship to Ms. Tripp. Ms. Lewinsky said (falsely) that she had not.⁵³²

The President left to participate in a conference call, which Ms. Lewinsky understood was with his attorneys, while Ms. Lewinsky sat with Ms. Currie.⁵³³ According to White House records, at 10:03 p.m. the President participated in a 51-minute conference call with Robert Bennett, his private attorney in the Jones case, and Charles Ruff, White House Counsel. Immediately after completing that call, the President had a six-minute phone conversation with Bruce Lindsey.⁵³⁴

Afterward, the President returned and told Ms. Lewinsky, in her recollection, to notify Ms. Currie the following day, “without getting into details with her, even mentioning names with her,” whether Ms. Lewinsky had “‘mission-accomplished’ * * * with Linda.”⁵³⁵

The next day, according to Ms. Lewinsky, she did talk with Ms. Tripp, then called Ms. Currie and said she needed to talk with the President. He called her that evening. She told him “that I had tried to talk to Linda and that she didn’t seem very receptive to trying to get in touch with Bruce Lindsey again, but that I would continue to try.”⁵³⁶ The President was in a sour mood, according to Ms. Lewinsky, and their conversation was brief.⁵³⁷

E. JULY 16 MEETING WITH MARSHA SCOTT

On July 16, 1997, Ms. Lewinsky met again with Ms. Scott about returning to the White House.⁵³⁸ Ms. Scott said she would try to detail Ms. Lewinsky from the Pentagon to Ms. Scott's office on a temporary basis, according to Ms. Lewinsky.⁵³⁹ In that way, Ms. Scott said, Ms. Lewinsky could prove herself. Ms. Scott also said that "they had to be careful and protect [the President]."⁵⁴⁰ Both Ms. Scott and Ms. Currie confirmed that Ms. Scott talked with Ms. Lewinsky about the possibility of being detailed to work at the White House.⁵⁴¹ Ms. Scott testified that she tried to arrange the detail on her own, without any direction from the President; Ms. Currie, however, testified that the President instructed her and Ms. Scott to try to get Ms. Lewinsky a job.⁵⁴²

F. JULY 24 MEETING

On Thursday, July 24, 1997, the day after her 24th birthday, Ms. Lewinsky visited the White House from 6:04 to 6:26 p.m., admitted by Ms. Currie.⁵⁴³ The President was in the Oval Office when she arrived; he moved to the study at 6:14 p.m. and remained there until her departure.⁵⁴⁴ He had no telephone calls during Ms. Lewinsky's visit.⁵⁴⁵

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she went to the White House to pick up a photograph from Ms. Currie, who said the President might be available for a quick meeting. Ms. Currie put Ms. Lewinsky in the Cabinet Room while the President finished another meeting, then took her to see him. They chatted for five to ten minutes, and the President gave Ms. Lewinsky, as a birthday present, an antique pin.⁵⁴⁶

G. NEWSWEEK ARTICLE AND ITS AFTERMATH

Newsweek published the Kathleen Willey story in its August 11, 1997, edition (which appeared a week before the cover date). The article quoted Ms. Tripp as saying that Ms. Willey, after leaving the Oval Office on the day of the President's alleged advances, looked "disheveled," "flustered, happy, and joyful." The article also quoted Robert Bennett as saying that Ms. Tripp was "not to be believed."⁵⁴⁷

After the article appeared, Ms. Tripp wrote a letter to Newsweek charging that she had been misquoted, but the magazine did not publish it.⁵⁴⁸ Ms. Lewinsky subsequently told the President about Ms. Tripp's letter. He replied, Ms. Lewinsky said in a recorded con-

H. AUGUST 16 MEETING

On Saturday, August 16, 1997, Ms. Lewinsky tried, unsuccessfully, to resume her sexual relationship with the President. She visited the White House on that day from 9:02 to 10:20 a.m.⁵⁵⁰ The President moved from the Residence to the Oval Office at 9:20 a.m. and remained in the Oval Office until 10:03 a.m.⁵⁵¹ After a one-minute call to Betty Currie at her desk at 9:18 a.m., evidently from the Residence, the President had no calls while Ms. Lewinsky was at the White House.⁵⁵² The next day he left for a vacation on Martha's Vineyard.⁵⁵³

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she brought birthday gifts for the President (his birthday is August 19):

I had set up in his back office, I had brought an apple square and put a candle and had put his birthday presents out. And after he came back in and I sang happy birthday and he got his presents, I asked him * * * if we could share a birthday kiss in honor of our birthdays, because mine had been just a few weeks before. So, he said that that was okay and we could kind of bend the rules that day. And so * * * we kissed.⁵⁵⁴

Ms. Lewinsky touched the President's genitals through his pants and moved to perform oral sex, but the President rebuffed her.⁵⁵⁵ In her recollection: "[H]e said, I'm trying not to do this and I'm trying to be good. * * * [H]e got visibly upset. And so * * * I hugged him and I told him I was sorry and not to be upset."⁵⁵⁶ Later, in a draft note to "Handsome," Ms. Lewinsky referred to this visit: "It was awful when I saw you for your birthday in August. You were so distant that I missed you as I was holding you in my arms."⁵⁵⁷

I. CONTINUING JOB EFFORTS

Ms. Lewinsky and Ms. Scott talked by phone on September 3, 1997, for 47 minutes.⁵⁵⁸ According to notes that Ms. Lewinsky

When Ms. Lewinsky entered the complex through the Southwest Gate, Officer Pape, who was familiar with Ms. Lewinsky's visits, predicted to another officer that the President would move to the Oval Office shortly. Officer Pape's prediction proved accurate: The President moved to the Oval Office, according to records, 18 minutes after Ms. Lewinsky entered the White House. wrote to two friends, Ms. Scott told her that the detail slot in her office had been eliminated.⁵⁵⁹ Ms. Lewinsky told one friend:

So for now, there isn't any place for me to be detailed. So I should be PATIENT. I told her I was very upset and disappointed (even though I really didn't want to work for her) and then she and I got into it. She didn't understand why I wanted to come back when there were still people there who would give me a hard time and that it isn't the right political climate for me to come back. . . . She asked me why I kept pushing the envelope on coming back there—after all, I had the experience of being there already. So it's over. I don't know what I will do now but I can't wait any more and I can't go through all of this crap anymore. In some ways I hope I never hear from him again because he'll just lead me on because he doesn't have the balls to tell me the truth.⁵⁶⁰

Ms. Scott testified that “[t]he gist” of Ms. Lewinsky’s email message describing the conversation “fits with what I remember telling her.”⁵⁶¹

Ms. Lewinsky expressed her escalating frustration in a note to the President that she drafted (but did not send).⁵⁶² She wrote:

I believe the time has finally come for me to throw in the towel. My conversation with Marsha left me disappointed, frustrated, sad and angry. I can't help but wonder if you knew she wouldn't be able to detail me over there when I last saw you. Maybe that would explain your coldness. The only explanation I can reason for your not bringing me back is that you just plain didn't want to enough or care about me enough.

Ms. Lewinsky went on to discuss other women rumored to be involved with the President who enjoy “golden positions,” above criticism, “because they have your approval.” She continued: “I just loved you—wanted to spend time with you, kiss you, listen to you laugh—and I wanted you to love me back.” She closed: “As I said in my last letter to you I've waited long enough. You and Marsha win. I give up. You let me down, but I shouldn't have trusted you in the first place.”⁵⁶³

Ms. Lewinsky continued trying to discuss her situation with the President. On Friday, September 12, 1997, she arrived at the White House without an appointment, called Ms. Currie, and had a long wait at the gate. When Ms. Currie came to meet her, Ms. Lewinsky was crying. Ms. Currie explained that sometimes the President's hands are tied—but, she said, she had gotten his authorization to ask John Podesta, the Deputy Chief of Staff, to help Ms. Lewinsky return to work at the White House.⁵⁶⁴

Before the President had left for vacation, Ms. Lewinsky had sent a note asking if he could bring her a T-shirt from the Black Dog, a popular Vineyard restaurant.⁵⁶⁵ In early September, Ms. Currie gave several Black Dog items to Ms. Lewinsky.⁵⁶⁶ In an email message to Catherine Davis, Ms. Lewinsky wrote: "Well, I found out from Betty yesterday that he not only brought me a t-shirt, he got me 2 t-shirts, a hat and a dress!!!! Even though he's a big schmuck, that is surprisingly sweet—even that he remembered!"⁵⁶⁷

K. LUCY MERCER LETTER AND INVOLVEMENT OF CHIEF OF STAFF

A letter dated September 30, 1997, styled as an official memo, was found in Ms. Lewinsky's apartment. According to Ms. Lewinsky, she sent this letter or a similar one to the President.⁵⁶⁸ Addressed to "Handsome" and bearing the subject line "The New Deal," the faux memo proposed a visit that evening after "everyone else goes home." Ms. Lewinsky wrote: "You will show me that you will let me visit you sans a crisis, and I will be on my best behavior and not stressed out when I come (to see you, that is)." She closed with an allusion to a woman rumored to have been involved with an earlier President: "Oh, and Handsome, remember FDR would never have turned down a visit with Lucy Mercer!"⁵⁶⁹

Ms. Lewinsky did not visit the White House the night of September 30, but the President called her late the night of September 30 or October 1.⁵⁷⁰ According to Ms. Lewinsky, he may have mentioned during this call that he would get Erskine Bowles to help her find a White House job.⁵⁷¹

At around this time, the President did ask the White House Chief of Staff to help in the job search. Mr. Bowles testified about

L. NEWS OF JOB SEARCH FAILURE

On October 6, 1997, according to Ms. Lewinsky, she was told that she would never work at the White House again. Ms. Tripp conveyed the news, which she indicated had come from a friend on the White House staff. Ms. Lewinsky testified:

Linda Tripp called me at work on October 6th and told me that her friend Kate in the NSC * * * had heard rumors about me and that I would never work in the White House again. * * * [Kate’s] advice to me was “get out of town.”⁵⁷⁵

For Ms. Lewinsky, who had previously considered moving to New York, this call was the “straw that broke the camel’s back.”⁵⁷⁶ She was enraged.⁵⁷⁷

In a note she drafted (but did not send), Ms. Lewinsky expressed her frustration. She wrote:

Any normal person would have walked away from this and said, “He doesn’t call me, he doesn’t want to see me—screw it. It doesn’t matter.” I can’t let go of you. * * * I want to be a source of pleasure and laughter and energy to you. I want to make you smile.

She went on to relate that she had heard second-hand from a White House employee “that I was ‘after the President’ and would never be allowed to work [in] the complex.” Ms. Lewinsky said she could only conclude “that all you have promised me is an empty promise. * * * I am once again totally humiliated. It is very clear that there is no way I am going to be brought back.” She closed the note: “I will never do anything to hurt you. I am simply not that kind of person. Moreover, I love you.”⁵⁷⁸

When terminating their sexual relationship on May 24, the President had told Ms. Lewinsky that he hoped they would remain friends, for he could do a great deal for her.⁵⁷⁹ Now, having learned that he could not (or would not) get her a White House job, Ms.

Lewinsky decided to ask him for a job in New York, perhaps at the United Nations—a possibility that she had mentioned to him in passing over the summer. On the afternoon of October 6, Ms. Lewinsky spoke of this plan to Ms. Currie, who quoted the President as having said earlier: “Oh, that’s no problem. We can place her in the UN like that.”⁵⁸⁰

In a recorded conversation later on October 6, Ms. Lewinsky said she wanted two things from the President. The first was contrition: He needed to “acknowledge * * * that he helped fuck up my life.”⁵⁸¹ The second was a job, one that she could obtain without much effort: “I don’t want to have to work for this position. * * * I just want it to be given to me.”⁵⁸² Ms. Lewinsky decided to write the President a note proposing that the two of them “get together and work on some way that I can come out of this situation not feeling the way I do.”⁵⁸³ After composing the letter, she said: “I want him to feel a little guilty, and I hope that this letter did that.”⁵⁸⁴

In this letter, which was sent via courier on October 7, Ms. Lewinsky said she understood that she would never be given a White House job, and she asked for a prompt meeting to discuss her job situation.⁵⁸⁵ She went on to advance a specific request:

I’d like to ask you to help me secure a position in NY beginning 1 December. I would be very grateful, and I am hoping this is a solution for both of us. I want you to know that it has always been and remains more important to me to have you in my life than to come back. * * * Please don’t let me down.⁵⁸⁶

IX. OCTOBER-NOVEMBER 1997: UNITED NATIONS' JOB OFFER

Having learned that she would not be able to return to the White House, Ms. Lewinsky sought the President's help in finding a job in New York City. The President offered to place her at the United Nations. After initial enthusiasm, Ms. Lewinsky cooled on the idea of working at the U.N., and she prodded the President to get her a job in the private sector.

A. OCTOBER 10: TELEPHONE CONVERSATION

According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President telephoned her at approximately 2:00 to 2:30 a.m. on Friday, October 10.⁵⁸⁷ They spent much of the hour-and-a-half call arguing. "[H]e got so mad at me, he must have been purple," she later recalled.⁵⁸⁸

According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President said: "If I had known what kind of person you really were, I wouldn't have gotten involved with you."⁵⁸⁹ He reminded Ms. Lewinsky that she had earlier promised, "[i]f you just want to stop doing this, I'll * * * be no trouble."⁵⁹⁰ Ms. Lewinsky said she challenged the President: "[T]ell me * * * when I've caused you trouble."⁵⁹¹ The President responded, "I've never worried about you. I've never been worried you would do something to hurt me."⁵⁹²

When the conversation shifted to her job search, Ms. Lewinsky complained that the President had not done enough to help her. He responded that, on the contrary, he was eager to help.⁵⁹³ The President said that he regretted Ms. Lewinsky's transfer to the Pentagon and assured her that he would not have permitted it had he foreseen the difficulty in returning her to the White House.⁵⁹⁴ Ms. Lewinsky told him that she wanted a job in New York by the end of October, and the President promised to do what he could.⁵⁹⁵

B. OCTOBER 11 MEETING

At approximately 8:30 a.m. on Saturday, October 11, according to Ms. Lewinsky, Ms. Currie called and told her that the President wished to see her.⁵⁹⁶ Ms. Lewinsky entered the White House at 9:36 a.m. and departed at 10:54 a.m.⁵⁹⁷ The President entered the Oval Office at 9:52 a.m.⁵⁹⁸

Ms. Lewinsky met with the President in the study, and they discussed her job search.⁵⁹⁹ Ms. Lewinsky told the President that she wanted to pursue jobs in the private sector, and he told her to prepare a list of New York companies that interested her.⁶⁰⁰ Ms. Lewinsky asked the President whether Vernon Jordan, a well-known Washington attorney who she knew was a close friend of the President and had many business contacts, might help her find a job.⁶⁰¹ According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President was receptive to the idea.⁶⁰²

In a recorded conversation, Ms. Lewinsky said that, at the end of the October 11 meeting, she and the President joined Ms. Currie in the Oval Office. The President grabbed Ms. Lewinsky's arm and kissed her on the forehead.⁶⁰³ He told her: "I talked to Erskine [Bowles] about * * * trying to get John Hilley to give you * * * a good recommendation for your work here."⁶⁰⁴

Later, Ms. Lewinsky and Ms. Tripp discussed their concerns about the President's involvement in Ms. Lewinsky's job search. Specifically, Ms. Lewinsky was nervous about involving the President's Chief of Staff:

Ms. Lewinsky: Well, see, I don't really think—I'm going to tell him that I don't think Erskine should have anything to do with this. I don't think anybody who works there should.

Ms. Tripp: I don't see how that's—how that's a problem.

Ms. Lewinsky: Because look at what happened with Webb Hubbell.⁶⁰⁵

Ms. Lewinsky preferred that Vernon Jordan assist her in her job search:

Ms. Tripp: Well, I don't remember during the Webb Hubbell thing, was Vernon mentioned?

Ms. Lewinsky: Yeah, but there's a big difference. I think somebody could construe, okay? Somebody could construe or say, "Well, they gave her a job to shut her up. They made her happy * * *. And he [Mr. Bowles] works for the government and shouldn't have done that." And with the other one [Mr. Jordan] you can't say that.⁶⁰⁶

C. OCTOBER 16-17: THE "WISH LIST"

On October 16, Ms. Lewinsky sent the President a packet, which included what she called a "wish list" describing the types of jobs that interested her in New York City.⁶⁰⁷ The note began:

My dream had been to work in Communications or Strategic Planning at the White House. I am open to any suggestions that you may have on work that is similar to that or may intrigue me. The most important things to me are that I am engaged and interested in my work, I am not someone's administrative/executive assistant, and my salary can provide me a comfortable living in NY.⁶⁰⁸

She identified five public relations firms where she would like to work.⁶⁰⁹ Ms. Lewinsky concluded by saying of the United Nations:

I do not have any interest in working there. As a result of what happened in April '96, I have already spent a year and a half at an agency in which I have no interest. I want a job where I feel challenged, engaged, and interested. I don't think the UN is the right place for me.⁶¹⁰

In a recorded conversation, Ms. Lewinsky said she wanted the President to take her list seriously and not ask her to settle for a U.N. job.⁶¹¹ She said she hoped "that if he starts to pick a bone with me and the U.N., he sure as hell doesn't do it on the phone * * *. I don't want to start getting into a screaming match with him on the phone."⁶¹²

In addition to the "wish list," Ms. Lewinsky said she enclosed in the packet a pair of sunglasses and "a lot of things in a little envelope," including some jokes, a card, and a postcard.⁶¹³ She said that she had written on the card: "Wasn't I right that my hugs are better in person than in cards?"⁶¹⁴ The postcard featured a "very erotic" Egon Schiele painting.⁶¹⁵ Ms. Lewinsky also enclosed a note with her thoughts on education reform.⁶¹⁶

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she felt that the President owed her a job for several reasons: Her relationship with him was the reason she had been transferred out of the White House; he had promised her a job and so far had done nothing to help her find one; and she had left the White House "quietly," without making an issue of her relationship with the President.⁶¹⁷

D. THE PRESIDENT CREATES OPTIONS

At some point around this time in the fall of 1997, Ms. Currie asked John Podesta, the Deputy Chief of Staff, to help Ms. Lewinsky find a job in New York.⁶¹⁸ Mr. Podesta testified that, during a Presidential trip to Latin America, he approached then-U.N. Ambassador William Richardson while aboard Air Force One and asked the Ambassador to consider a former White House intern for a position at the U.N.⁶¹⁹ At the time, Mr. Podesta could not recall the intern's name.⁶²⁰ Ambassador Richardson and the President both testified that they never discussed Ms. Lewinsky with each other.⁶²¹

Ambassador Richardson returned from Latin America on Sunday, October 19.⁶²² Within a few days, his Executive Assistant, Isabelle Watkins, called Mr. Podesta's secretary and asked whether "she knew anything about a resume that John was going to send us."⁶²³ Mr. Podesta's secretary knew nothing about it and asked Mr. Podesta what to do; he instructed her to call Ms. Currie.⁶²⁴ At 3:09 p.m. on October 21, Ms. Currie faxed Ms. Lewinsky's resume to the United Nations.⁶²⁵

At 7:01 p.m., a six-minute call was placed to Ms. Lewinsky's apartment from a U.N. telephone number identified in State Department records as "Ambassador Richardson's line."⁶²⁶ Ms. Lewinsky testified that she spoke to Ambassador Richardson. A woman called, Ms. Lewinsky testified, and said, "[H]old for Ambassador Richardson."⁶²⁷ Then the Ambassador himself came on the line: "I remember, because I was shocked and I was * * * very nervous."⁶²⁸ The purpose of the call was to schedule a job interview at a Watergate apartment the following week.⁶²⁹ At odds with Ms. Lewinsky, the Ambassador and Ms. Watkins both testified that Ms. Watkins, not the Ambassador, spoke with Ms. Lewinsky.⁶³⁰

A few days later, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the President called her. She had been upset because no one at the White House had prepared her for the Ambassador's recent call and because she did not want the White House to railroad her into taking the U.N.

job.⁶³¹ She reiterated that she was eager to pursue other opportunities, especially in the private sector.⁶³² The President reassured her, promising that a U.N. position was just one of many options.⁶³³

Ms. Lewinsky spoke to the President again one week later. Ms. Lewinsky testified that she told Ms. Currie to ask the President to call her to assuage her nervousness before the U.N. interview.⁶³⁴

According to Ms. Lewinsky, on October 30, the night before the interview, the President did call. She characterized the conversation as a “pep talk”: “[H]e was trying to kind of build my confidence and reassure me.”⁶³⁵ The President told her to call Ms. Currie after the interview.⁶³⁶ In his Jones deposition, the President indicated that he learned of her interview with Ambassador Richardson not from Ms. Lewinsky herself but from Ms. Currie.⁶³⁷

E. THE U.N. INTERVIEW AND JOB OFFER

On Friday morning, October 31, Ambassador Richardson and two of his assistants, Mona Sutphen and Rebecca Cooper, interviewed Ms. Lewinsky at the Watergate.⁶³⁸ According to Ambassador Richardson, he “listen[ed] while Mona and Rebecca were interviewing her.”⁶³⁹ Neither Ambassador Richardson nor any of his staff made inquiries, before or after the interview, about Ms. Lewinsky’s prior work performance.⁶⁴⁰

On Sunday, November 2, Ms. Lewinsky drafted a letter to Ms. Currie asking what to do in the event she received an offer from the U.N.⁶⁴¹ She wrote:

I became a bit nervous this weekend when I realized that Amb. Richardson said his staff would be in touch with me this week. As you know, the UN is supposed to be my back-up, but because VJ [Vernon Jordan] has been out of town, this is my only option right now. What should I say to Richardson’s people this week when they call?⁶⁴²

Ms. Lewinsky asked Ms. Currie to speak to the President about her problem: “If you feel it’s appropriate, maybe you could ask ‘the big guy’ what he wants me to do. Ahhhhh * * * anxiety!!!!”⁶⁴³ Ms. Lewinsky also mentioned the President’s promise to involve Vernon Jordan in her job search:

I don't think I told you that in my conversation last Thursday night with him that he said that he would ask you to set up a meeting between VJ and myself, once VJ got back. I assume he'll mention this to you at some point—hopefully sooner rather than later!⁶⁴⁴

Before Ms. Lewinsky sent this letter, in her recollection, she received an offer from the U.N.⁶⁴⁵ Phone records reflect that, at 11:02 a.m. on November 3, a three-minute call was placed to Ms. Lewinsky from the U.N. line identified in State Department records as Ambassador Richardson's.⁶⁴⁶ Ms. Lewinsky stated that she believes she spoke to Ambassador Richardson, who extended her a job offer.⁶⁴⁷

According to his assistant, Ambassador Richardson made the decision to hire Ms. Lewinsky. Ms. Sutphen testified:

I said, are you sure; and he said, yeah, yeah, I'm sure, why. And I said * * * are you sure, though you don't want to talk to anyone else * * *. And he said, no, no, I think it's fine; why don't you go ahead and give her an offer?⁶⁴⁸

Ambassador Richardson and Ms. Sutphen both testified that Ms. Sutphen, not the Ambassador, extended the job offer to Ms. Lewinsky. They recalled that the offer was made a week or 10 days after the interview, though Ms. Sutphen, when shown the phone records, testified that the November 3 call to Ms. Lewinsky probably was the job offer.⁶⁴⁹

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she told Ms. Currie about the offer and she probably also told the President directly.⁶⁵⁰ Ms. Currie first testified that she had "probably" told the President about Ms. Lewinsky's U.N. offer, then testified that she had in fact told him, then testified that she could not remember, though she acknowledged that the President was interested in Ms. Lewinsky's getting a job.⁶⁵¹

When the President was asked in the Jones deposition whether he knew that Ms. Lewinsky had received the offer of a job at the U.N., he testified: "I know that she interviewed for one. I don't know if she was offered one or not."⁶⁵²

⁶⁴⁴ MSL-55-DC-0179. Ms. Lewinsky concluded the letter, "I was pleased the UN interview went well, but I'm afraid it will be like being at the Pentagon in NY . . . YUCK!" MSL-55-DC-0179 (ellipsis in original).

He testified that he intended to expand an open position in the U.N.'s Washington office and move it to New York. Richardson 4/30/98 Depo. at 39-40. F. THE U.N. JOB OFFER DECLINED

Three weeks after she received an offer, on November 24, Ms. Lewinsky called Ms. Sutphen and asked for more time to consider the offer because she wanted to pursue possibilities in the private sector.⁶⁵³ Ms. Sutphen told Ambassador Richardson, who, according to Ms. Sutphen, said the delay would be fine.⁶⁵⁴ Over a month later, on January 5, 1998, Ms. Lewinsky finally turned down the job.⁶⁵⁵

X. NOVEMBER 1997: GROWING FRUSTRATION

Ms. Lewinsky met with Vernon Jordan, who promised to help her find a job in New York. November proved, however, to be a month of inactivity with respect to both Ms. Lewinsky's job search and her relationship with the President. Mr. Jordan did not meet with Ms. Lewinsky again, nor did he contact anyone in New York City on her behalf. Ms. Lewinsky became increasingly anxious about her inability to see the President. Except for a momentary encounter in mid-November, Ms. Lewinsky did not meet with the President between October 11 and December 5.

A. INTERROGATORIES ANSWERED

On November 3, 1997, the President answered Paula Jones's Second Set of Interrogatories. Two of those interrogatories asked the President to list any woman other than his wife with whom he had "had," "proposed having," or "sought to have" sexual relations during the time that he was Attorney General of Arkansas, Governor of Arkansas, and President of the United States.⁶⁵⁶ President Clinton objected to the scope and relevance of both interrogatories and refused to answer them.⁶⁵⁷

B. FIRST VERNON JORDAN MEETING

In mid-October, the President had agreed to involve Vernon Jordan in Ms. Lewinsky's job search.⁶⁵⁸ In a draft letter to Ms. Currie dated November 2, Ms. Lewinsky wrote that the President had "said he would ask you to set up a meeting between VJ and myself."⁶⁵⁹ According to Ms. Lewinsky, on November 3 or November 4, Ms. Currie told her to call Vernon Jordan's secretary to arrange a meeting.⁶⁶⁰ Ms. Currie said she had spoken with Mr. Jordan and he was expecting Ms. Lewinsky's call.⁶⁶¹ In Ms. Lewinsky's account, Ms. Currie sought Mr. Jordan's aid at the President's direction.⁶⁶² Mr. Jordan likewise testified that, in his understanding, the President was behind Ms. Currie's request.⁶⁶³

Ms. Currie testified at various points that she contacted Mr. Jordan on her own initiative; that the President "probably" talked with her about Ms. Lewinsky's New York job hunt; and that she could not recall whether the President was involved.⁶⁶⁴ In his Jones deposition, the President was asked whether he did anything to facilitate a meeting between Mr. Jordan and Ms. Lewinsky. He testified:

I can tell you what my memory is. My memory is that Vernon said something to me about her coming in, Betty had called and asked if he [Mr. Jordan] would see her [Ms. Lewinsky]. * * * I'm sure if he said something to me about it I said something positive about it. I wouldn't have said anything negative about it.⁶⁶⁵

When pressed, the President testified that he did not think that he was the "precipitating force" in arranging the meeting between Mr. Jordan and Ms. Lewinsky.⁶⁶⁶

At 8:50 a.m. on November 5, Mr. Jordan spoke with the President by telephone for five minutes.⁶⁶⁷ Later that morning, Mr. Jordan and Ms. Lewinsky met in his office for about twenty minutes.⁶⁶⁸ She told him that she intended to move to New York, and she named several companies where she hoped to work.⁶⁶⁹ She showed him the "wish list" that she had sent the President on October 16.⁶⁷⁰ Mr. Jordan said that he had spoken with the President about her and that she came "highly recommended."⁶⁷¹ Concerning her job search, Mr. Jordan said: "We're in business."⁶⁷²

In the course of the day, Mr. Jordan placed four calls to Ms. Herrnreich (whom he acknowledged calling when he wished to speak to the President⁶⁷³) and one to Ms. Currie.⁶⁷⁴ Mr. Jordan testified that he could not remember the calls, but "[i]t is entirely possible" that they concerned Monica Lewinsky.⁶⁷⁵

Mr. Jordan also visited the White House and met with the President at 2:00 p.m. that day.⁶⁷⁶ Again, Mr. Jordan testified that he had "no recollection" of the substance of his conversation with the President.⁶⁷⁷

On November 6, the day after meeting with Mr. Jordan, Ms. Lewinsky wrote him a thank-you letter: "It made me happy to know that our friend has such a wonderful confidant in you."⁶⁷⁸ Also on November 6, Ms. Lewinsky wrote in an email to a friend that she expected to hear from Mr. Jordan "later next week."⁶⁷⁹

The evidence indicates, though, that Mr. Jordan took no steps to help Ms. Lewinsky until early December, after she appeared on the witness list in the Jones case.

Mr. Jordan initially testified that he had “no recollection of having met with Ms. Lewinsky on November 5.”⁶⁸⁰ When shown documentary evidence demonstrating that his first meeting with Ms. Lewinsky occurred in early November, he acknowledged that an early November meeting was “entirely possible.”⁶⁸¹ Mr. Jordan’s failure to remember his November meeting with Ms. Lewinsky may indicate the low priority he attached to it at the time.

C. NOVEMBER 13: THE ZEDILLO VISIT

On Thursday, November 13, while Ernesto Zedillo, the President of Mexico, was in the White House, Ms. Lewinsky met very briefly with President Clinton in the private study.⁶⁸² Ms. Lewinsky’s visit, which she described in an email as a “hysterical escapade,” was the culmination of days of phone calls and notes to Ms. Currie and the President.⁶⁸³

Over the course of the week that preceded November 13, Ms. Lewinsky made several attempts to arrange a visit with the President. On Monday, November 10, in addition to making frequent calls to Ms. Currie, she sent the President a note asking for a meeting.⁶⁸⁴

She hoped to see him on Tuesday, November 11 (Veterans Day), but he did not respond.⁶⁸⁵ By courier,⁶⁸⁶ she sent the President another note:

I asked you three weeks ago to please be sensitive to what I am going through right now and to keep in contact with me, and yet I’m still left writing notes in vain. I am not a moron. I know that what is going on in the world takes precedence, but I don’t think what I have asked you for is unreasonable.⁶⁸⁷

She added: “This is so hard for me. I am trying to deal with so much emotionally, and I have nobody to talk to about it. I need you right now not as president, but as a man. PLEASE be my friend.”⁶⁸⁸

That evening, November 12, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the President called and invited her to the White House the following

The following morning, November 13, Ms. Lewinsky tried to arrange a visit with the President. She called repeatedly but suspected that Ms. Currie was not telling the President of her calls.⁶⁹² Around noon, Ms. Currie told Ms. Lewinsky that the President had left to play golf. Ms. Lewinsky, in her own words, “went ballistic.”⁶⁹³

After the President returned from the Army-Navy Golf Course in the late afternoon, Ms. Lewinsky told Ms. Currie that she was coming to the White House to give him some gifts.⁶⁹⁴ Ms. Currie suggested that Ms. Lewinsky wait in Ms. Currie’s car in the White House parking lot. Ms. Lewinsky went to the White House only to find that the doors to Ms. Currie’s car were locked. Ms. Lewinsky waited in the rain.⁶⁹⁵

Ms. Currie eventually met her in the parking lot, and, in Ms. Lewinsky’s words, they made a “bee-line” into the White House, sneaking up the back stairs to avoid other White House employees, particularly Presidential aide Stephen Goodin.⁶⁹⁶ Ms. Lewinsky left two small gifts for the President with Ms. Currie, then waited alone for about half an hour in the Oval Office study.⁶⁹⁷ In the study, Ms. Lewinsky saw several gifts she had given the President, including Oy Vey! The Things They Say: A Guide to Jewish Wit, Nicholson Baker’s novel Vox, and a letter opener decorated with a frog.⁶⁹⁸

The President finally joined Ms. Lewinsky in the study, where they were alone for only a minute or two.⁶⁹⁹ Ms. Lewinsky gave him an antique paperweight in the shape of the White House.⁷⁰⁰ She also showed him an e-mail describing the effect of chewing Altoid mints before performing oral sex. D. NOVEMBER 14–DECEMBER 4: INABILITY TO SEE THE PRESIDENT

After this brief November 13 meeting, Ms. Lewinsky did not see the President again until the first week in December. Hoping to arrange a longer rendezvous, she sent the President several notes, as well as a cassette on which she recorded a message.⁷⁰³

Along with her chagrin over not seeing the President, Ms. Lewinsky was frustrated that her job search had apparently stalled. A few days before Thanksgiving, she complained to Ms. Currie that she had not heard from Mr. Jordan.⁷⁰⁴ Ms. Currie arranged for her to speak with him “before Thanksgiving,” while Ms. Lewinsky was in Los Angeles. Mr. Jordan told her to call him the following week to arrange another meeting.⁷⁰⁵

In draft letters to the President, which were recovered from her Pentagon computer, Ms. Lewinsky reflected on the change in their relationship: “[B]oth professionally and personally, * * * our personal relationship changing has caused me more pain. Do you realize that?”⁷⁰⁶ She asked for the President’s understanding: “I don’t want you to think that I am not grateful for what you are doing for me now—I’d probably be in a mental institute without it—but I am consumed with this disappointment, frustration, and anger.” Ms. Lewinsky rued the brevity of her November 13 visit with the President: “All you * * * ever have to do to pacify me is see me and hold me,” she wrote. “Maybe that’s asking too much.”⁷⁰⁷

XI. DECEMBER 5–18, 1997: THE WITNESS LIST AND JOB SEARCH

On Friday, December 5, Paula Jones's attorneys faxed a list of their potential witnesses—including Ms. Lewinsky—to the President's personal attorneys. The following day, President Clinton saw Ms. Lewinsky in an unscheduled visit and then discussed the Jones case with his attorneys and Deputy White House Counsel Bruce Lindsey. A few days later, Ms. Lewinsky met with Mr. Jordan at his office, and he arranged interviews for Ms. Lewinsky at three companies. In the middle of the night on December 17, the President called and informed Ms. Lewinsky that she was on the witness list and that she might have to testify under oath in the Jones case.

A. DECEMBER 5: THE WITNESS LIST

On Friday December 5, 1997, attorneys for Paula Jones identified Ms. Lewinsky as a potential witness in Ms. Jones's sexual harassment case.⁷⁰⁸ At 5:40 p.m., they faxed their witness list to the President's attorney, Robert Bennett.⁷⁰⁹ Ms. Lewinsky, however, would not learn of her potential involvement in the Jones case for twelve more days, when the President informed her.⁷¹⁰

President Clinton was asked in the grand jury when he learned that Ms. Lewinsky's name was on the witness list. The President responded: "I believe that I found out late in the afternoon on the sixth."⁷¹¹

B. DECEMBER 5: CHRISTMAS PARTY AT THE WHITE HOUSE

On Friday, December 5, Ms. Lewinsky returned from Department of Defense travel in Europe.⁷¹² She asked Ms. Currie if the President could see her the next day, but Ms. Currie said he was busy meeting with his lawyers.⁷¹³ In the late afternoon, she attended a Christmas party at the White House with a Defense Department colleague.⁷¹⁴ Ms. Lewinsky exchanged a few words with the President in the reception line.⁷¹⁵

The Christmas reception encounter heightened Ms. Lewinsky's frustration. On the evening of December 5, she drafted an anguished letter to the President.⁷¹⁶ "[Y]ou want me out of your life,"

I used to think it was you putting up walls.”⁷¹⁷ She had purchased several gifts for him, and, she wrote, “I wanted to give them to you in person, but that is obviously not going to happen.”⁷¹⁸ Ms. Lewinsky reminded the President of his words during their October 10 telephone argument:

I will never forget what you said that night we fought on the phone—if you had known what I was really like you would never have gotten involved with me. I’m sure you’re not the first person to have felt that way about me. I am sorry that this has been such a bad experience.⁷¹⁹

She concluded the letter: “I knew it would hurt to say goodbye to you; I just never thought it would have to be on paper. Take care.”⁷⁰²

C. DECEMBER 6: THE NORTHWEST GATE INCIDENT

1. Initial Visit and Rejection

On the morning of Saturday, December 6, Ms. Lewinsky went to the White House to deliver the letter and gifts to the President. The gifts included a sterling silver antique cigar holder, a tie, a mug, a “Hugs and Kisses” box, and an antique book about Theodore Roosevelt.⁷²¹ Ms. Lewinsky planned to leave the parcel with Ms. Currie, who had told Ms. Lewinsky that the President would be busy with his lawyers and unable to see her.⁷²²

Ms. Lewinsky arrived at the White House at approximately 10:00 a.m. She told the Secret Service uniformed officers at the Northwest Gate that she had gifts to drop off for the President, but that Ms. Currie did not know she was coming.⁷²³ Ms. Lewinsky and the officers made several calls in an attempt to locate Ms. Currie.⁷²⁴ The officers eventually invited Ms. Lewinsky inside the guard booth.⁷²⁵ When Ms. Currie learned that Ms. Lewinsky was at the Northwest Gate, she sent word that the President “already had a guest in the [O]val,” so the officers should have Ms. Lewinsky wait there for about 40 minutes.⁷²⁶

While Ms. Lewinsky was waiting, one officer mentioned that Eleanor Mondale was in the White House.⁷²⁷ Ms. Lewinsky correctly surmised that the President was meeting with Ms. Mondale, rather than his lawyers, and she was “livid.”⁷²⁸ She stormed away, called and berated Ms. Currie from a pay phone, and then returned to her Watergate apartment.⁷²⁹

Hands shaking and almost crying, Ms. Currie informed several Secret Service officers that the President was “irate” that someone had disclosed to Ms. Lewinsky whom he was meeting with.⁷³⁰ Ms. Currie told Sergeant Keith Williams, a supervisory uniformed Secret Service Officer, that if he “didn’t find out what was going on, someone could be fired.”⁷³¹ She also told Captain Jeffrey Purdie, the Secret Service watch commander for the uniformed division at the time, that the President was “so upset he wants somebody fired over this.”⁷³²

2. Ms. Lewinsky Returns to the White House

From her apartment, Ms. Lewinsky reached the President on the phone.⁷³³ According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President was angry that she had “made a stink” and said that “it was none of my business * * * what he was doing.”⁷³⁴

Then, to Ms. Lewinsky’s surprise, the President invited her to visit him.⁷³⁵ She testified that “none of the other times that we had really fought on the phone did it end up resulting in a visit that day.”⁷³⁶ WAVES records reflect that Ms. Lewinsky was cleared to enter the White House at 12:52 p.m. and exited at 1:36 p.m.⁷³⁷

Ms. Lewinsky testified that, overall, she had a “really nice” and “affectionate” visit with the President.⁷⁴⁰ In an email to a friend a few days later, she wrote that, although “things have been crazy with the creep * * * I did have a wonderful visit with him on Saturday. When he doesn’t put his walls up, it is always heavenly.”⁷⁴¹

3. “Whatever Just Happened Didn’t Happen”

Later that day (December 6), the uniformed Secret Service officers at the Northwest Gate were told that no one would be fired—so long as they remained quiet. According to Sergeant Williams, Ms. Currie said that, if the officers did not “tell a lot of people what had happened, then nothing would happen.”⁷⁴²

The President told Captain Jeffrey Purdie, the Secret Service watch commander for the uniformed division at the time, “I hope you use your discretion.”⁷⁴³ Captain Purdie interpreted the President’s remark to mean that Captain Purdie “wasn’t going to say anything,” and he in turn told all of the officers involved not to discuss the incident.⁷⁴⁴ One officer recalled that Captain Purdie told him and other officers, “Whatever just happened didn’t happen.”⁷⁴⁵ Captain Purdie told another officer, “I was just in the Oval Office with the President and he wants somebody’s ass out here. * * * As far as you’re concerned, * * * [t]his never happened.”⁷⁴⁶ In response, that officer, who considered the Northwest Gate incident a “major event,” “just shook [his] head” and “started making a set of [his] own notes” in order to document the incident.⁷⁴⁷

Captain Purdie recommended to his supervisor, Deputy Chief Charles O’Malley, that “no paperwork be generated” regarding the Northwest Gate incident because “Ms. Currie was satisfied with the way things were handled.”⁷⁴⁸ According to Captain Purdie, Deputy Chief O’Malley agreed, and no record of the incident was made.⁷⁴⁹ Deputy Chief O’Malley testified that the meeting between the President and Captain Purdie was the only occasion he could recall in fourteen years at the White House where a President directly addressed a job performance issue with a uniformed division supervisor.⁷⁵⁰

The President was questioned in the grand jury about the incident at the Northwest Gate. He testified that he knew that Ms. Lewinsky had become upset upon learning that Ms. Mondale was in the White House “to see us that day.”⁷⁵¹ He testified: “As I remember, I had some other work to do that morning. * * *”⁷⁵² The President said that the disclosure of information that day was “inappropriate” and “a mistake,” but he could not recall whether he wanted a Secret Service officer fired or gave any such orders.⁷⁵³ He thought that the officers “were * * * told not to let it happen again, and I think that’s the way it should have been handled.”⁷⁵⁴ When asked if he told Captain Purdie that he hoped that he could count on his discretion, the President stated, “I don’t remember anything I said to him in that regard.”⁷⁵⁵

According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President later indicated to her that he had concerns about the discretion of the Secret Service uniformed officers. On December 28 she asked how Paula Jones’s attorneys could have known enough to place her on the witness list. The President replied that the source might be Linda Tripp or “the uniformed officers.”⁷⁵⁶

Earlier in the day, at around 12:00 p.m. (after Ms. Lewinsky stormed away from the Northwest Gate but before she returned and saw the President), Mr. Lindsey had received a page: “Call Betty ASAP.”⁷⁵⁹ Mr. Lindsey testified that he did not recall the page, nor did he know, at the time, that Ms. Lewinsky had visited the White House.⁷⁶⁰

E. SECOND JORDAN MEETING

The next day (Sunday, December 7), Mr. Jordan visited the White House and met with the President.⁷⁶¹ Mr. Jordan testified that he was “fairly certain” that he did not discuss the Jones suit or Ms. Lewinsky.⁷⁶²

On Thursday, December 11, Ms. Lewinsky had her second meeting with Mr. Jordan.⁷⁶³ Ms. Lewinsky testified that they discussed her job search, and Mr. Jordan told her to send letters to three business contacts that he provided her. Mr. Jordan noted that Ms. Lewinsky was anxious to get a job as quickly as possible, and he took action.⁷⁶⁴ In the course of the day, Mr. Jordan placed calls on her behalf to Peter Georgescu, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer at Young & Rubicam; Richard Halperin, Executive Vice President and Special Counsel to the Chairman of MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. (majority stockholder of Revlon); and Ursula Fairbairn, Executive Vice-President, Human Resources and Quality, of American Express.⁷⁶⁵ Mr. Jordan told Ms. Lewinsky to keep him informed of the progress of her job search.⁷⁶⁶

At one point in the conversation, according to Ms. Lewinsky, Mr. Jordan said, “[Y]ou’re a friend of the President.”⁷⁶⁷ This prompted Ms. Lewinsky to reveal that she “didn’t really look at him as the President”; rather, she “reacted to him more as a man and got angry at him like a man and just a regular person.”⁷⁶⁸ When Mr. Jordan asked why Ms. Lewinsky got angry at the President, she replied that she became upset “when he doesn’t call me enough or see me enough.”⁷⁶⁹ Ms. Lewinsky testified that Mr. Jordan advised her to take her frustrations out on him rather than the Presi-

Mr. Jordan recalled a similar conversation, in which Ms. Lewinsky complained that the President did not see her enough, although he thought it took place during a meeting eight days later. He testified that he felt the need to remind Ms. Lewinsky that the President is the “leader of the free world” and has competing obligations.⁷⁷²

Mr. Jordan is “certain” that he had a conversation with the President about Ms. Lewinsky at some point after this December 11 meeting.⁷⁷³ He told the President that he would be trying to get Ms. Lewinsky a job in New York.⁷⁷⁴ Mr. Jordan testified that the President “was aware that people were trying to get jobs for her, that Podesta was trying to help her, that Bill Richardson was trying to help her, but that she really wanted to work in the private sector.”⁷⁷⁵

F. EARLY MORNING PHONE CALL

On December 15, 1997, Paula Jones’s lawyers served President Clinton with her second set of document requests by overnight mail. These requests asked the President to “produce documents that related to communications between the President and Monica Lewinsky” [sic].⁷⁷⁶ This was the first Paula Jones discovery request to refer to Monica Lewinsky by name.

Ms. Lewinsky testified that in the early-morning hours of December 17, at roughly 2:00 or 2:30 a.m., she received a call from the President.⁷⁷⁷ The call lasted about half an hour.⁷⁷⁸

The President gave Ms. Lewinsky two items of news: Ms. Currie’s brother had died in a car accident, and Ms. Lewinsky’s name had appeared on the witness list in the Jones case.⁷⁷⁹ According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President said “it broke his heart” to see her name on the witness list.⁷⁸⁰ The President told her that she would not necessarily be subpoenaed; if she were, he “suggested she could sign an affidavit to try to satisfy [Ms. Jones’s] inquiry and not be deposed.”⁷⁸¹

⁷⁷⁰ Lewinsky 8/6/98 GJ at 120. In her handwritten proffer, Ms. Lewinsky gave a very similar account of her second meeting with Mr. Jordan: “Ms. L. met again with Mr. Jordan in the beginning of December ‘97, at which time he provided Ms. L. with a list of three people to contact and suggested language to use in her letters to them. At some point, Mr. Jordan remarked something about Ms. L. being a friend of the Pres. of the United States. Ms. L. responded that she never really saw him as “the President”; she spoke to him like a normal man and even got angry with him like a normal man. Mr. Jordan asked what Ms. L. got angry about. Ms. L. replied that the Pres. doesn’t see or call her enough. Mr. Jordan said Ms. L. should take her frustrations out on him—not the President.” Lewinsky 2/1/98 Statement at 3–4.

The President told Ms. Lewinsky to contact Ms. Currie in the event she were subpoenaed.⁷⁸² He also reviewed one of their established cover stories. He told Ms. Lewinsky that she “should say she visited the [White House] to see Ms. Currie and, on occasion when working at the [White House], she brought him letters when no one else was around.”⁷⁸³ The President’s advice “was * * * instantly familiar to [Ms. Lewinsky].”⁷⁸⁴ She testified that the President’s use of this “misleading” story amounted to a continuation of their pre-existing pattern.⁷⁸⁵

Later in the conversation, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the President said he would try to get Ms. Currie to come in over the weekend so that Ms. Lewinsky could visit and he could give her several Christmas presents.⁷⁸⁶ Ms. Lewinsky replied that, since Ms. Currie’s brother had just died, perhaps they should “let Betty be.”⁷⁸⁷

In his grand jury appearance, the President was questioned about the December 17 phone call. He testified that, although he could not rule it out, he did not remember such a call.⁷⁸⁸ The President was also asked whether in this conversation, or a conversation before Ms. Lewinsky’s name came up in the Jones case, he instructed her to say that she was coming to bring letters. The President answered: “I might well have said that.”⁷⁸⁹

But when asked whether he ever said anything along these lines after Ms. Lewinsky had been identified on the witness list, the President answered: “I don’t recall whether I might have done something like that.”⁷⁹⁰ He speculated that he might have suggested this explanation in the context of a call from a reporter.⁷⁹¹ Nonetheless, he testified, in the context of the Jones case, “I never asked her to lie.”⁷⁹²

G. JOB INTERVIEWS

On December 18, Ms. Lewinsky had two job interviews in New York City. At MacAndrews & Forbes, she met with Executive Vice President and Special Counsel to the Chairman Richard Halperin, who viewed the interview as “an accommodation for Vernon Jordan.”⁷⁹³ At Burson-Marsteller, she interviewed with Celia Berk, Managing Director of Human Resources.⁷⁹⁴ A few days later, on December 23, Ms. Lewinsky interviewed in Washington, D.C., with Thomas Schick, Executive Vice President, Corporate Affairs and Communications, of American Express.⁷⁹⁵

XII. DECEMBER 19, 1997–JANUARY 4, 1998: THE SUBPOENA

Ms. Lewinsky was served with a subpoena in the Jones case on Friday, December 19. She immediately called Mr. Jordan, and he invited her to his office. Mr. Jordan spoke with the President that afternoon and again that evening. He told the President that he had met with Ms. Lewinsky, that she had been subpoenaed, and that he planned to obtain an attorney for her. On Sunday, December 28, the President met with Ms. Lewinsky, who expressed concern about the subpoena's demand for the gifts he had given her. Later that day, Ms. Currie drove to Ms. Lewinsky's apartment and collected a box containing some of the subpoenaed gifts. Ms. Currie took the box home and hid it under her bed.

A. DECEMBER 19: MS. LEWINSKY IS SUBPOENAED

On Friday, December 19, 1997, sometime between 3:00 p.m. and 4:00 p.m., Ms. Lewinsky was served with a subpoena at her Pentagon office.⁷⁹⁶ The subpoena commanded her to appear for a deposition in Washington, D.C., at 9:30 a.m. on January 23, 1998.⁷⁹⁷ The subpoena also required the production of certain documents and gifts. Among the items that Ms. Lewinsky was required to produce were "each and every gift including, but not limited to, any and all dresses, accessories, and jewelry, and/or hat pins given to you by, or on behalf of, Defendant Clinton," as well as "[e]very document constituting or containing communications between you and Defendant Clinton, including letters, cards, notes, memoranda, and all telephone records."⁷⁹⁸

Ms. Lewinsky testified that, after being served with the subpoena, she "burst into tears," and then telephoned Mr. Jordan from a pay phone at the Pentagon.⁷⁹⁹ Mr. Jordan confirmed Ms. Lewinsky's account; he said he tried to reassure Ms. Lewinsky: "[C]ome and talk to me and I will see what I can do about finding you counsel."⁸⁰⁰

According to records maintained by Mr. Jordan's law firm, Ms. Lewinsky arrived at his office at 4:47 p.m.⁸⁰¹ White House phone records show that, at 4:57 p.m., the President telephoned Mr. Jordan; the two men spoke from 5:01 p.m. to 5:05 p.m.⁸⁰² At 5:06 p.m.,

Mr. Jordan placed a two-minute call to a Washington, D.C., attorney named Francis Carter.⁸⁰³

Ms. Lewinsky and Mr. Jordan gave somewhat different accounts of their meeting that day. According to Ms. Lewinsky, shortly after her arrival, Mr. Jordan received a phone call, and she stepped out of his office. A few minutes later, Ms. Lewinsky was invited back in, and Mr. Jordan called Mr. Carter.⁸⁰⁴

Mr. Jordan testified that he spoke to the President before Ms. Lewinsky ever entered his office.⁸⁰⁵ He told the President: “Monica Lewinsky called me up. She’s upset. She’s gotten a subpoena. She is coming to see me about this subpoena. I’m confident that she needs a lawyer, and I will try to get her a lawyer.”⁸⁰⁶ Mr. Jordan told the President that the lawyer he had in mind was Francis Carter.⁸⁰⁷ According to Mr. Jordan, the President asked him: “You think he’s a good lawyer?” Mr. Jordan responded that he was.⁸⁰⁸ Mr. Jordan testified that informing the President of Ms. Lewinsky’s subpoena “was the purpose of [his] call.”⁸⁰⁹

According to Mr. Jordan, when Ms. Lewinsky entered his office, “[H]er emotional state was obviously one of dishevelment and she was quite upset. She was crying. She was—she was highly emotional, to say the least.”⁸¹⁰ She showed him the subpoena as soon as she entered.⁸¹¹

Ms. Lewinsky also testified that she discussed the subpoena with Mr. Jordan.⁸¹² She told him that she found the specific reference to a hat pin alarming—how could the Jones’s attorneys have known about it?⁸¹³ Mr. Jordan told her it was “a standard subpoena.”⁸¹⁴ When he indicated to Ms. Lewinsky that he would be seeing the President that night, Ms. Lewinsky told him “to please make sure that he told the President” about her subpoena.⁸¹⁵

At some point, according to Mr. Jordan, Ms. Lewinsky asked him about the future of the Clintons’ marriage.⁸¹⁶ Because Ms. Lewinsky seemed “mesmerized” by President Clinton,⁸¹⁷ he “asked her directly had there been any sexual relationship between [her] and the President.”⁸¹⁸ Mr. Jordan explained, “You didn’t have to be Einstein to know that that was a question that had to be asked by me at that particular time, because heretofore this discussion was about a job. The subpoena changed the circumstances.”⁸¹⁹ Ms. Lewinsky said she had not had a sexual relationship with the President.⁸²⁰

Ms. Lewinsky testified, however, that at this time she assumed that Mr. Jordan knew “with a wink and a nod that [she] was having a relationship with the President.”⁸²¹ She therefore interpreted Mr. Jordan’s questions as “What are you going to say?” rather than “What are the [actual] answers * * *?”⁸²² When the meeting ended, she “asked [Mr. Jordan] if he would give the President a hug.”⁸²³

That evening, Mr. Jordan visited the President at the White House. According to Mr. Jordan, the two met alone in the Residence and talked for about ten minutes.⁸²⁴ He testified:

I told him that Monica Lewinsky had been subpoenaed, came to me with a subpoena. I told him that I was concerned by her fascination, her being taken with him. I told him how emotional she was about having gotten the subpoena. I told him what she said to me about whether or not he was going to leave the First Lady at the end of the term.⁸²⁵

Mr. Jordan asked the President “[t]he one question that I wanted answered.”⁸²⁶ That question was, “Mr. President, have you had sexual relations with Monica Lewinsky?” The President told Mr. Jordan, “No, never.”⁸²⁷

Mr. Jordan told the President: “I’m trying to help her get a job and I’m going to continue to do that. I’m going to get her counsel and I’m going to try to be helpful to her as much as I possibly can, both with the lawyer, and I’ve already done what I could about the job, and I think you ought to know that.”⁸²⁸ Mr. Jordan testified: “He thanked me for telling him. was no sexual relationship between me and Monica Lewinsky, which was true. And that—then all I remember for the rest is that he said he had referred her to a lawyer, and I believe it was Mr. Carter.⁸³⁰

Asked whether he recalled that Mr. Jordan told him that Ms. Lewinsky appeared fixated on him and hoped that he would leave Mrs. Clinton, the President testified: “I recall him saying he thought that she was upset with—somewhat fixated on me, that she acknowledged that she was not having a sexual relationship with me, and that she did not want to be [brought] into that Jones lawsuit.”⁸³¹

B. DECEMBER 22: MEETING WITH VERNON JORDAN

Mr. Jordan arranged for Ms. Lewinsky to meet with attorney Francis Carter at 11:00 a.m. on Monday, December 22.⁸³² On that morning, according to Ms. Lewinsky, she called Mr. Jordan and asked to meet before they went to Mr. Carter’s office.⁸³³ She testified: “I was a little concerned. I thought maybe [Mr. Jordan] didn’t really understand * * * what it was that was happening here with me being subpoenaed and what this really meant.”⁸³⁴ She also wanted to find out whether he had in fact told the President of her subpoena. Mr. Jordan said that he had.⁸³⁵ Ms. Lewinsky also told Mr. Jordan that she was worried that someone might have been eavesdropping on her telephone conversations with the President.⁸³⁶ When Mr. Jordan asked why she thought that would be of concern, Ms. Lewinsky said, “Well, we’ve had phone sex.”⁸³⁷

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she brought some of her gifts from the President, showed them to Mr. Jordan, and implied that these items were not all of the gifts that the President had given her.⁸³⁸ Mr. Jordan, in contrast, testified that Ms. Lewinsky never showed him any gifts from the President.⁸³⁹

C. DECEMBER 22: FIRST MEETING WITH FRANCIS CARTER

Mr. Jordan drove Ms. Lewinsky to Mr. Carter’s office.⁸⁴⁰ There, he introduced Ms. Lewinsky to Mr. Carter, explaining that she needed not only a lawyer but a “counselor.”⁸⁴¹ Mr. Carter testified that, after the initial referral, he expected to have no further contact with Mr. Jordan about Ms. Lewinsky or her case.⁸⁴²

Mr. Carter and Ms. Lewinsky then met for approximately an hour.⁸⁴³ She explained that she did not want to be drawn into the Jones case and would strongly prefer not to be deposed.⁸⁴⁴ He said that he would try to persuade Paula Jones's attorneys not to depose her.⁸⁴⁵ Ms. Lewinsky testified that she suggested filing an affidavit to avert a deposition.⁸⁴⁶

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she asked Mr. Carter to get in touch with the President's personal attorney, Robert Bennett, just "to let him know that I had been subpoenaed in this case."⁸⁴⁷ She wanted to make clear that she was "align[ing] [her]self with the President's side."⁸⁴⁸ Mr. Carter testified that, while Ms. Lewinsky was in his office, he placed a call to Mr. Bennett to arrange a meeting.⁸⁴⁹

On the morning of Tuesday, December 23, Mr. Carter met for an hour with two of the President's personal attorneys, Mr. Bennett and Katherine Sexton.⁸⁵⁰ The President's attorneys told Mr. Carter that other witnesses had filed motions to quash their subpoenas, and they offered legal research to support such a motion.⁸⁵¹

D. DECEMBER 23: CLINTON DENIALS TO PAULA JONES

Throughout the sexual harassment case, Ms. Jones's attorneys attempted to obtain information about President Clinton's sexual relationships with any woman other than his wife. On December 11, 1997, the judge overseeing the Jones case, Susan Webber Wright, ruled that the President had to answer a written interrogatory naming every state and federal employee since 1986 with whom he had sexual relations or with whom he had proposed to have sexual relations. On December 23, 1997, the President answered the interrogatory: "None."⁸⁵²

E. DECEMBER 28: FINAL MEETING WITH THE PRESIDENT

A day or two after Christmas, Ms. Lewinsky called Ms. Currie and told her that the President had mentioned that he had presents for her.⁸⁵³ Ms. Currie called back and told her to come to the White House at 8:30 a.m. on Sunday, December 28.⁸⁵⁴

That morning, Ms. Lewinsky met with the President in the Oval Office. WAVES records reflect that the visit was requested by Ms. Currie and that Ms. Lewinsky entered the White House at 8:16 a.m.⁸⁵⁵

After she arrived at the Oval Office, she, the President, and Ms. Currie played with Buddy, the President's dog, and chatted. Then, the President took her to the study and gave her several Christmas presents: a marble bear's head, a Rockettes blanket, a Black Dog stuffed animal, a small box of chocolates, a pair of joke sunglasses, and a pin with a New York skyline on it.⁸⁵⁶

Ms. Lewinsky testified that, during this visit, she and the President had a "passionate" and "physically intimate" kiss.⁸⁵⁷

Ms. Lewinsky and the President also talked about the Jones case.⁸⁵⁸ In Ms. Lewinsky's account, she asked the President "how he thought [she] got put on the witness list."⁸⁵⁹ He speculated that Linda Tripp or one of the uniformed Secret Service officers had told the Jones attorneys about her.⁸⁶⁰ When Ms. Lewinsky mentioned her anxiety about the subpoena's reference to a hat pin, he said "that sort of bothered [him], too."⁸⁶¹ He asked whether she had told anyone about the hat pin, and she assured him that she had not.⁸⁶²

At some point in the conversation, Ms. Lewinsky told the President, "[M]aybe I should put the gifts away outside my house somewhere or give them to someone, maybe Betty."⁸⁶³ Ms. Lewinsky recalled that the President responded either "I don't know" or "Let me think about that."⁸⁶⁴

When Ms. Lewinsky was asked whether she thought it odd for the President to give her gifts under the circumstances (with a subpoena requiring the production of all his gifts), she testified that she did not think of it at the time, but she did note some hesitancy on the President's part:

[H]e had hesitated very briefly right before I left that day in kind of packaging * * * all my stuff back up * * * I don't think he said anything that indicated this to me, but I thought to myself, "I wonder if he's thinking he shouldn't give these to me to take out." But he did.⁸⁶⁵

When asked in the Jones deposition about his last meeting with Ms. Lewinsky, the President remembered only that she stopped by "[p]robably sometime before Christmas" and he "stuck [his] head out [of the office], said hello to her."⁸⁶⁶ The deposition occurred three weeks after this December 28 meeting with Ms. Lewinsky.

that.”⁸⁶⁷ He maintained, however, that they did not discuss Ms. Lewinsky’s subpoena: “[S]he was upset. She—well, she—we—she didn’t—we didn’t talk about a subpoena. But she was upset.”⁸⁶⁸ In the President’s recollection, Ms. Lewinsky said she knew nothing about sexual harassment; why did she have to testify? According to the President, “I explained to her that it was a political lawsuit. They wanted to get whatever they could under oath that was damaging to me.”⁸⁶⁹

Ms. Lewinsky’s friend, Catherine Allday Davis, testified about a conversation with Ms. Lewinsky on January 3, 1998. Ms. Lewinsky told Ms. Davis that she had met with the President and discussed the Jones case a few days earlier. Ms. Davis testified that Ms. Lewinsky and the President had “noted [that] there was no evidence” of their relationship.⁸⁷⁰

E. DECEMBER 28: CONCEALMENT OF GIFTS

In the afternoon of December 28, a few hours after Ms. Lewinsky’s White House visit, Ms. Currie drove to Ms. Lewinsky’s Watergate apartment and collected a box containing the President’s gifts. Ms. Currie then took the box home and hid it under her bed. Ms. Lewinsky, Ms. Currie, and the President were all questioned as to why Ms. Currie retrieved the box of gifts from Ms. Lewinsky.

According to Ms. Lewinsky, the transfer originated in a phone call from Ms. Currie that afternoon. Ms. Lewinsky testified that Ms. Currie said, “I understand you have something to give me,” or, “The President said you have something to give me.”⁸⁷¹ Ms. Lewinsky understood that Ms. Currie was alluding to the gifts.⁸⁷² Ms. Currie said that she would stop by Ms. Lewinsky’s apartment and pick up the items.⁸⁷³ Ms. Lewinsky testified that she put many, but not all, of her gifts from the President into a box. Ms. Currie drove by her apartment and picked it up.⁸⁷⁴

Ms. Lewinsky was concerned because the gifts were under subpoena; she did not throw them away, however, because “they meant a lot to [her].”⁸⁷⁵ The reason she gave the gifts to Ms. Currie, and not to one of her friends or her mother, was “a little bit of an assurance to the President * * * that everything was okay.”⁸⁷⁶ She felt that, because the gifts were with Ms. Currie, they were within the President’s control: “Not that [the gifts] were going to be in his possession, but that he would understand whatever it was I gave to Betty and that that might make him feel a little bit better.”⁸⁷⁷

Ms. Lewinsky’s account of the events of December 28 in her sworn statement of February 1, 1998, corroborates her later grand jury testimony:

“Ms. L * * * asked if she should put away (outside her home) the gifts he had given her or, maybe, give them to someone else. Ms. Currie called Ms. L later that afternoon as said that the Pres. had told her Ms. L. wanted her to hold onto something for her. Ms. L boxed up most of the gifts she had received and gave them to Ms. Currie. It is unknown if Ms. Currie knew the contents of the box.”⁸⁷⁸

Ms. Currie’s testimony was somewhat at odds with Ms. Lewinsky’s. Though her overall recollection was hazy, Ms. Currie believed that Ms. Lewinsky had called her and raised the idea of the gifts transfer.⁸⁷⁹ Ms. Currie was asked about the President’s involvement in the transfer:

Q: And did the President know you were holding these things for Monica?

BC: I don’t know. I don’t know.

Q: Didn’t he say to you that Monica had something for you to hold?

BC: I don’t remember that. I don’t.

Q: Did you ever talk to the President and tell him you had this box from Monica?

BC: I don’t remember that either.

Q: Do you think it happened, though?

BC: I don’t know. I don’t know.⁸⁸⁰

When asked whether a statement by Ms. Lewinsky indicating that Ms. Currie had in fact spoken to the President about the gift transfer would be false, Ms. Currie replied: “Then she may remember better than I. I don’t remember.”⁸⁸¹

According to Ms. Currie, Ms. Lewinsky said that she was uncomfortable retaining the gifts herself because “people were asking questions” about them.⁸⁸² Ms. Currie said she drove to Ms. Lewinsky’s residence after work, collected the box, brought it home, and put it under her bed.⁸⁸³ Written on the top of the box were the words “Please do not throw away!!!”⁸⁸⁴ Ms. Currie testified that she knew that the box contained gifts from the President.⁸⁸⁵

⁸⁸⁵ Currie 5/6/98 GJ at 106–07.

For his part, the President testified that he never asked Ms. Currie to collect a box of gifts from Ms. Lewinsky.⁸⁸⁶ He said that he had no knowledge that Ms. Currie had held those items “until that was made public.”⁸⁸⁷

The President testified that he has no distinct recollection of discussing the gifts with Ms. Lewinsky on December 28: “[M]y memory is that on some day in December, and I’m sorry I don’t remember when it was, she said, well, what if they ask me about the gifts you have given me. And I said, well, if you get a request to produce those, you have to give them whatever you have.”⁸⁸⁸

D. DECEMBER 31: BREAKFAST WITH VERNON JORDAN

Ms. Lewinsky testified that in late December 1997 she realized that she needed to “come up with some sort of strategy as to [what to do] if Linda Tripp” divulged what she knew.⁸⁸⁹ On December 30, Ms. Lewinsky telephoned Mr. Jordan’s office and conveyed either directly to him or through one of his secretaries that she was concerned about the Jones case.⁸⁹⁰

The following day, Ms. Lewinsky and Mr. Jordan had breakfast together at the Park Hyatt Hotel.⁸⁹¹ According to Ms. Lewinsky, she told Mr. Jordan that a friend of hers, Linda Tripp, was involved in the Jones case. She told Mr. Jordan: “I used to trust [Ms. Tripp], but I didn’t trust her any more.”⁸⁹² Ms. Lewinsky said that Ms. Tripp might have seen some notes in her apartment. Mr. Jordan asked: “Notes from the President to you?” Ms. Lewinsky responded: “No, notes from me to the President.” According to Ms. Lewinsky, Mr. Jordan said: “Go home and make sure they’re not there.” Ms. Lewinsky testified that she understood that Mr. Jordan was advising her to “throw * * * away” any copies or drafts of notes that she had sent to the President.⁸⁹³

After breakfast, Mr. Jordan gave Ms. Lewinsky a ride back to his office.⁸⁹⁴ When Ms. Lewinsky returned home to her apartment that day, she discarded approximately 50 draft notes to the President.⁸⁹⁵

E. JANUARY 4: THE FINAL GIFT

On Sunday, January 4, 1998, Ms. Lewinsky called Ms. Currie at home and told her that she wanted to drop off a gift for the President.⁸⁹⁶ Ms. Currie invited Ms. Lewinsky to her home, and Ms. Lewinsky gave her the package.⁸⁹⁷ The package contained a book

XIII. JANUARY 5–JANUARY 16, 1998: THE AFFIDAVIT

On January 5, 1998, Ms. Lewinsky's attorney, Francis Carter, drafted an affidavit for Ms. Lewinsky in an attempt to avert her deposition. She spoke with the President that evening. On January 6, Ms. Lewinsky talked to Mr. Jordan about the affidavit, which denied any sexual relations between her and the President. On January 7, Ms. Lewinsky signed the affidavit. On January 8, she interviewed for a job in New York City. After the interview went poorly, Mr. Jordan placed a phone call to the company's chairman on her behalf, and Ms. Lewinsky was given a second interview. The following week, after Ms. Lewinsky told Ms. Currie that she would need a reference from the White House, the President asked Chief of Staff Erskine Bowles to arrange one.

A. JANUARY 5: FRANCIS CARTER MEETING

At 3:00 p.m. on Monday, January 5, 1998, Ms. Lewinsky met with Mr. Carter at his office for approximately one hour.⁸⁹⁹ Ms. Lewinsky testified that Mr. Carter described what a deposition was like and "threw out a bunch of different questions."⁹⁰⁰ The questions that most concerned her related to the circumstances of her departure from the White House.⁹⁰¹

Mr. Carter told Ms. Lewinsky that he would draft an affidavit for her to sign in hopes of averting her deposition. They arranged for Ms. Lewinsky to pick up a draft of the affidavit the next day.⁹⁰²

B. JANUARY 5: CALL FROM THE PRESIDENT

After her meeting with Mr. Carter, Ms. Lewinsky sent word via Ms. Currie that she needed to speak to the President about an important matter.⁹⁰³ Specifically, Ms. Lewinsky told Ms. Currie she was anxious about something she needed to sign.⁹⁰⁴

A few hours later, according to Ms. Lewinsky, the President returned her call.⁹⁰⁵ She mentioned an affidavit she would be signing and asked if he wanted to see it. According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President responded that he did not, as he had already seen about fifteen others.⁹⁰⁶ Ms. Lewinsky testified that she told the President that she was troubled by potential questions about her transfer from the White House to the Pentagon. She was concerned that “people at the White House who didn’t like [her]” might contradict her and “get [her] in trouble.”⁹⁰⁷ The President, according to Ms. Lewinsky, advised her: “[Y]ou could always say that the people in Legislative Affairs got it [the Pentagon job] for you or helped you get it.”⁹⁰⁸

The President acknowledged in the grand jury that he was aware that Ms. Lewinsky had signed an affidavit in early January, but had no specific recollection of a conversation with her in that time period.⁹⁰⁹ He testified that he did not recall telling Ms. Lewinsky that she could say, if asked, that persons in the Legislative Affairs Office of the White House had helped her obtain the job at the Pentagon.⁹¹⁰

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President also briefly discussed an antique book that she had dropped off with Ms. Currie the day before. With the book, she enclosed a letter telling the President that she wanted to have sexual intercourse with him at least once.⁹¹¹ In their phone conversation, Ms. Lewinsky told the President, “I shouldn’t have written some of those things in the note.”⁹¹² She testified that the President agreed.⁹¹³

Although the President had testified in the Jones case that any personal messages from Ms. Lewinsky to him had been “unremarkable,” he told the grand jury that he had received “quite affectionate” messages from Ms. Lewinsky, even after their intimate relationship ended.⁹¹⁴ The President testified that he cautioned Ms. Lewinsky about such messages: “I remember telling her she should be careful what she wrote, because a lot of it was clearly inappropriate and would be embarrassing if somebody else read it. I don’t remember when I said that. I don’t remember whether it was in ’96 or when it was.”⁹¹⁵ The President did remember the antique book Ms. Lewinsky had given him, but said he did not recall a romantic note enclosed with it.⁹¹⁶

C. JANUARY 6: THE DRAFT AFFIDAVIT

According to Ms. Lewinsky, in the afternoon of January 6, 1998, she visited Mr. Carter’s office and picked up a draft of the affidavit.⁹¹⁷ Later that day, according to Ms. Lewinsky, she and Mr. Jordan discussed the draft by telephone.⁹¹⁸ Ms. Lewinsky testified that having Mr. Jordan review the affidavit was like getting it

In addition, Paragraph 8 of the draft affidavit provided in part:

I have never had a sexual relationship with the President.
* * * The occasions that I saw the President, with crowds of other people, after I left my employment at the White House in April, 1996 related to official receptions, formal functions or events related to the U.S. Department of Defense, where I was working at the time.⁹²²

Deeming the reference to “crowds” “too far out of the realm of possibility,”⁹²³ Ms. Lewinsky deleted the underscored phrase and wrote the following sentence at the end of this paragraph: “There were other people present on all of these occasions.”⁹²⁴ She discussed this proposed sentence, as well as her general anxiety about Paragraph 8, with Mr. Jordan.⁹²⁵

When questioned in the grand jury, Mr. Jordan acknowledged that Ms. Lewinsky called him with concerns about the affidavit,⁹²⁶ but maintained that he told her to speak with her attorney.⁹²⁷

Phone records for January 6 show that Mr. Jordan had a number of contacts with Ms. Lewinsky, the President, and Mr. Carter. Less than thirty minutes after Mr. Jordan spoke by phone to Ms. Lewinsky, he talked with the President for thirteen minutes. Immediately after this call, at 4:33 p.m., Mr. Jordan called Mr. Carter. Less than an hour later, Mr. Jordan placed a four-minute call to the main White House number. Over the course of the day, Mr. Jordan called a White House number twice, Ms. Lewinsky three times, and Mr. Carter four times.⁹²⁸

Mr. Carter testified that his phone conversations with Mr. Jordan this day and the next “likely” related to Ms. Lewinsky and his litigation strategy for her.⁹²⁹ In fact, Mr. Carter billed Ms. Lewinsky for time for “[t]elephone conference with Atty Jordan.”⁹³⁰

When questioned in the grand jury, Mr. Jordan testified that he could not specifically remember the January 6 calls. He said he “assumed” that he talked with Ms. Lewinsky about her job search, and he believed that he called Mr. Carter to see “how he was deal-

D. JANUARY 7: MS. LEWINSKY SIGNS AFFIDAVIT

Ms. Lewinsky set an appointment with Mr. Carter to finalize the affidavit for 10 a.m. on January 7, 1998.⁹³³ She signed the affidavit; however, she acknowledged in the grand jury that statements in it were false.⁹³⁴ Mr. Carter indicated to her that he “intend[ed] to hold onto this until after I talk to plaintiff’s lawyers.” He told her to “keep in touch,” and said: “Good luck on your job search.”⁹³⁵

According to Mr. Jordan, Ms. Lewinsky came to his office on January 7 and showed him the signed affidavit.⁹³⁶ Over the course of the day, Mr. Jordan placed three calls of significant duration to the White House.⁹³⁷ He testified: “I knew the President was concerned about the affidavit and whether it was signed or not.”⁹³⁸ When asked whether the President understood that the affidavit denied a sexual relationship, Mr. Jordan testified: “I think that’s a reasonable assumption.”⁹³⁹ According to Mr. Jordan, when he informed the President that Ms. Lewinsky had signed the affidavit, the President said, “Fine, good.”⁹⁴⁰ Mr. Jordan said he was continuing to work on her job, and the President responded, “Good.”⁹⁴¹

Ten days after this conversation, in the Jones deposition, President Clinton was asked whether he knew that Ms. Lewinsky had met with Vernon Jordan and talked about the Jones case. He answered:

I knew he met with her. I think Betty suggested that he meet with her. Anyway, he met with her. I, I thought that he talked to her about something else. I didn’t know that—I thought he had given her some advice about her move to New York. Seems like that’s what Betty said.⁹⁴²

In his grand jury appearance, however, President Clinton testified that Mr. Jordan informed “us” on January 7 that Ms. Lewinsky had signed an affidavit to be used in connection with the

Jones case.⁹⁴³ The President defended his deposition testimony by stating:

[M]y impression was that, at the time, I was focused on the meetings. I believe the meetings he had were meetings about her moving to New York and getting a job.

I knew at some point that she had told him that she needed some help, because she had gotten a subpoena. I'm not sure I know whether she did that in a meeting or a phone call. And I was not, I was not focused on that. I know that, I know Vernon helped her get a lawyer, Mr. Carter. And I, I believe that he did it after she had called him, but I'm not sure. But I knew that the main source of their meetings was about her move to New York and her getting a job.⁹⁴⁴

E. JANUARY 8: THE PERELMAN CALL

The day after she signed the affidavit, January 8, 1998, Ms. Lewinsky interviewed in New York with Jaymie Durnan, Senior Vice President and Special Assistant to the Chairman at MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. (MFH).⁹⁴⁵ Mr. Durnan testified that, although impressive, Ms. Lewinsky was not suited for any MFH opening.⁹⁴⁶ He told her that he would pass on her resume to Revlon, an MFH company.⁹⁴⁷ Ms. Lewinsky called Mr. Jordan and reported that she felt that the interview had gone "very poorly."⁹⁴⁸ Mr. Jordan indicated in response that "he'd call the chairman."⁹⁴⁹

At 4:54 p.m., Mr. Jordan called Ronald Perelman, chairman and chief executive officer of MFH.⁹⁵⁰ Mr. Jordan told the grand jury with respect to Mr. Perelman, one "[c]an't get any higher—or any richer."⁹⁵¹ Asked why he chose to call Mr. Perelman, Mr. Jordan responded: "I have spent a good part of my life learning institutions and people, and, in that process, I have learned how to make things happen. And the call to Ronald Perelman was a call to make things happen, if they could happen."⁹⁵²

According to Mr. Perelman, Mr. Jordan spoke of "this bright young girl, who I think is terrific," and said that he wanted "to make sure somebody takes a look at her."⁹⁵³ Mr. Perelman testified that, in the roughly twelve years that Mr. Jordan had been on Revlon's Board of Directors, he did not recall Mr. Jordan ever calling to recommend someone.⁹⁵⁴

After he spoke with Mr. Perelman, Mr. Jordan telephoned Ms. Lewinsky and told her, “I’m doing the best I can to help you out.”⁹⁵⁵ Ms. Lewinsky soon received a call from Revlon, inviting her to another interview.⁹⁵⁶

Over the course of January 8, Mr. Jordan placed three calls to the White House—twice to a number at the White House Counsel’s Office, once to the main White House number.⁹⁵⁷ As to the Counsel’s Office calls, Mr. Jordan speculated that he was trying to reach Cheryl Mills, Deputy White House Counsel, to express his “frustration” about Ms. Lewinsky.⁹⁵⁸ According to Mr. Jordan, Ms. Mills knew who Ms. Lewinsky was: “[T]hat was no secret, I don’t think, around the White House, that I was helping Monica Lewinsky.”⁹⁵⁹

F. JANUARY 9: “MISSION ACCOMPLISHED”

On the morning of Friday, January 9, 1998, Ms. Lewinsky interviewed with Allyn Seidman, Senior Vice President of MFH, and two individuals at Revlon.⁹⁶⁰ Ms. Lewinsky testified that the interviews went well and that Ms. Seidman called her back that day and “informally offered [her] a position, and [she] informally accepted.”⁹⁶¹

Ms. Lewinsky then called Mr. Jordan and relayed the good news.⁹⁶² When shown records of a seven-minute call at 4:14 p.m., Mr. Jordan testified: “I have to assume that if she got the job and we have a seven-minute conversation and the day before I had talked to the chairman [Ronald Perelman], I have to assume the Jordan magic worked.”⁹⁶³

According to Mr. Jordan, he believed that he notified Ms. Currie and the President as soon as he learned that Ms. Lewinsky had obtained an offer: “I am certain that at some point in time I told Betty Currie, ‘Mission accomplished.’”⁹⁶⁴ Mr. Jordan testified that he also told the President directly that, “‘Monica Lewinsky’s going to work for Revlon,’ and his response was, ‘Thank you very much.’”⁹⁶⁵

Webster Hubbell be retained by Revlon by introducing him to Howard Gittes, Vice Chairman and Chief Administrative Officer at MacAndrews & Forbes. Mr. Jordan initially testified that he “certainly” also spoke with Mr. Perelman about retaining Mr. Hubbell. He then testified that “it was entirely possible” that Mr. Perelman was present on April 6, 1994, when Mr. Jordan accompanied Mr. Hubbell to the New York offices of MacAndrews & Forbes to introduce Mr. Hubbell to Mr. Gittes, General Counsel Barry Schwartz, and Richard Halperin, who was in charge of government relations. G. JANUARY 12: PRE-TRIAL HEARING IN JONES CASE

On January 12, 1998, Judge Wright held a hearing in the Jones case to discuss pre-trial issues, including the President's upcoming deposition.⁹⁶⁶ At that hearing, Judge Wright required Ms. Jones's counsel to list all the witnesses that they planned to call at trial. Ms. Jones's witness list named many women, among them Ms. Lewinsky, to support her theory that the President had a pattern of rewarding women based on their willingness to engage in sexual relations with him. At the hearing, Judge Wright indicated that she would permit Ms. Jones to call as witnesses some of the women she listed in support of her case.

H. JANUARY 13: REFERENCES FROM THE WHITE HOUSE

On Tuesday, January 13, 1998, Jennifer Sheldon, Manager of Corporate Staffing of Revlon, called Ms. Lewinsky and formally extended her a position as a public relations administrator. Asked whether this was a relatively quick hiring process, Ms. Sheldon responded, "In totality of how long open positions normally stay open, yes. This was pretty fast."⁹⁶⁷ Ms. Sheldon told Ms. Lewinsky that she needed to send her some references.⁹⁶⁸

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she then called Ms. Currie because she was "concerned that if I put [Mr. Hilley] down as a reference, he might not say flattering things about me."⁹⁶⁹ At 11:11 a.m. on January 13, Ms. Currie paged Ms. Lewinsky and left the following message: "Will know something this afternoon. Kay."⁹⁷⁰

That day, January 13, the President talked with Chief of Staff Erskine Bowles about a reference for Ms. Lewinsky.⁹⁷¹ The President told Mr. Bowles that Ms. Lewinsky "had found a job in the * * * private sector, and she had listed John Hilley as a reference, and could we see if he could recommend her, if asked." Mr. Bowles assured the President that Mr. Hilley would give Ms. Lewinsky a recommendation commensurate with her job performance.⁹⁷²

Thereafter, Mr. Bowles took the President's request to Mr. Podesta, the Deputy Chief of Staff, who in turn spoke with Mr. Hilley.⁹⁷³ Mr. Hilley responded that, because he did not know Ms. Lewinsky personally, he would have his office write a recommendation.⁹⁷⁴ It would be a generic letter, simply confirming the dates of employment, because of the less than favorable circumstances surrounding Ms. Lewinsky's departure from the White House.⁹⁷⁵

Ms. Lewinsky testified that Ms. Currie called later that day and told her that “Mr. Podesta took care of it and everything would be fine with Mr. Hilley.”⁹⁷⁶ At 11:17 a.m. the next day, Wednesday, January 14, Ms. Lewinsky faxed her acceptance to Revlon and listed John Hilley and her Defense Department supervisor as references.⁹⁷⁷

The President was asked in the grand jury whether he ever spoke to Mr. Bowles about obtaining a reference from Mr. Hilley for Ms. Lewinsky. He testified that he did, at Ms. Lewinsky’s request, although he thought he had done so earlier than January 13 or 14.⁹⁷⁸

I. JANUARY 13: FINAL JORDAN MEETING

According to Ms. Lewinsky, on Tuesday, January 13, she stopped by Mr. Jordan’s office to drop off some thank-you gifts for helping her find a job. Ms. Lewinsky offered to show him a copy of her signed affidavit in the Jones case, but he indicated that he did not need to see it.⁹⁷⁹

J. JANUARY 13–14: LEWINSKY-TRIPP CONVERSATION AND TALKING POINTS

In a face-to-face conversation on January 13, Ms. Lewinsky told Linda Tripp: “This is what my lawyer taught me. You really don’t—you don’t very often say ‘no’ unless you really need to. The best is, ‘Well, not that I recall, not that I really remember. Might have, but I don’t really remember.’”⁹⁸⁰ Ms. Lewinsky said that, if asked in a deposition, “Were you ever alone with the President?” she could say, “Um, it’s possible I may have taken a letter on the weekend, but, you know—I might have, but I don’t really. . . .”⁹⁸¹

Ms. Lewinsky and Ms. Tripp then discussed the situation:

Ms. Lewinsky: I don’t think the way that man thinks, I don’t think he thinks of lying under oath. . . .

Ms. Tripp: Yes, he is because he’s the one who said, “Deny, deny, deny.” Of course he knows.

On January 14, Ms. Lewinsky gave Ms. Tripp a three-page document regarding "points to make in [Ms. Tripp's] affidavit."⁹⁸³ Ms. Lewinsky testified that she wrote the document herself, although some of the ideas may have been inspired by conversations with Ms. Tripp.⁹⁸⁴

K. JANUARY 15: THE ISIKOFF CALL

In the grand jury, Betty Currie testified that on Thursday, January 15, 1998, she received a telephone call from Michael Isikoff of Newsweek, who inquired about courier receipts reflecting items sent by Ms. Lewinsky to the White House.⁹⁸⁵

Ms. Currie called Mr. Jordan and asked for guidance in responding to Mr. Isikoff's inquiry because, in her words, she had a "comfort level with Vernon."⁹⁸⁶ After Ms. Currie arranged to meet with Mr. Jordan at his office,⁹⁸⁷ Ms. Lewinsky drove her there.⁹⁸⁸

Mr. Jordan confirmed in the grand jury that Ms. Currie expressed concern about a call from Mr. Isikoff.⁹⁸⁹ He invited her to his office but advised her to "talk to Mike McCurry and Bruce Lindsey * * * because I cannot give you that advice."⁹⁹⁰

In a recorded conversation that day, January 15, Ms. Lewinsky encouraged Ms. Tripp not to disclose her (Lewinsky's) relationship with the President. Ms. Lewinsky tried to persuade Ms. Tripp to lie by telling her that others planned to lie: "I'm not concerned all that much anymore because I'm not going to get in trouble because you know what? The story I've signed * * * under oath is what someone else is saying under oath." When Ms. Tripp asked, "Who?" Ms. Lewinsky responded: "He will," referring to the President.⁹⁹¹ Ms. Lewinsky stated that she did not think the President would "slip up" at his deposition because she was not a "big issue" like Gennifer Flowers and Paula Jones. In contrast, she regarded herself as nothing more than "rumor and innuendo."⁹⁹²

One of Ms. Lewinsky's friends, Natalie Ungvari, testified that, when Ms. Lewinsky was implicated in the Jones case, "it seemed to me that Monica was just confident everybody would say the

L. JANUARY 15–16: DEVELOPMENTS IN THE JONES LAW SUIT

On January 15, 1998, President Clinton’s counsel served Ms. Jones’s attorneys with the President’s responses to Ms. Jones’s document requests.⁹⁹⁴ One of the requests specifically sought all documents reflecting communications between the President and Monica Lewinsky.⁹⁹⁵ President Clinton objected to the scope of this request, but, notwithstanding his objection, he stated that he did not have any responsive documents.

Also on January 15, Mr. Carter drafted a motion to quash the subpoena issued by Paula Jones’s attorneys to Ms. Lewinsky. Attached to the motion was Ms. Lewinsky’s signed affidavit.⁹⁹⁶ At the request of Katherine Sexton, one of the President’s personal attorneys, Mr. Carter faxed a copy of the affidavit to her law offices. Mr. Carter testified that he asked Ms. Sexton why she needed the affidavit that day:

I said, “Well, Katie, you’re going to get it tomorrow because I’m filing it, and it’s going to be attached as an exhibit to the motion.” She said, “Well, but you’ve already provided it to the other side, so can I get a copy”—words to that effect. I said, “I have no problem.” And so I faxed it to her.⁹⁹⁷

On January 16, 1998, Mr. Carter arranged for the overnight delivery of the motion to quash and the accompanying affidavit to Judge Susan Webber Wright’s law clerk and Paula Jones’s attorneys.⁹⁹⁸

XIV. JANUARY 17, 1998–PRESENT: THE DEPOSITION AND AFTERWARD

The President was asked a number of questions about Ms. Lewinsky during his January 17, 1998, deposition in the Jones case. In sworn testimony, the President denied having a sexual affair or sexual relations with her. That evening, the President called Ms. Currie and asked her to meet him the following day to discuss Ms. Lewinsky. After allegations that the President had an affair with a White House intern became public, the President emphatically denied the reports to aides and to the American public.

A. JANUARY 17: THE DEPOSITION

On Saturday, January 17, 1998, the President testified under oath at a deposition in the Jones case.⁹⁹⁹ Judge Susan Webber Wright traveled from Little Rock, Arkansas, to preside at the deposition in Washington, D.C.¹⁰⁰⁰

Prior to any questions, Judge Wright reminded the parties about her standing Protective Order. She specifically stated: “[I]f anyone reveals anything whatsoever about this deposition * * * it will be in violation of the Protective Order. This includes the questions that were asked * * * You may acknowledge that [the deposition] took place, but that is it.”¹⁰⁰¹ Judge Wright accepted the following definition of the term “sexual relations:”

For the purposes of this deposition, a person engages in “sexual relations” when the person knowingly engages in or causes * * * contact with the genitalia, anus, groin, breast, inner thigh, or buttocks of any person with an intent to arouse or gratify the sexual desire of any person * * *. “Contact” means intentional touching, either directly or through clothing.¹⁰⁰²

After the President had answered a few questions about Ms. Lewinsky, his attorney, Robert Bennett, urged Judge Wright to limit further inquiries. Mr. Bennett stated that Ms. Lewinsky had executed an affidavit “saying that there is absolutely no sex of any kind of any manner, shape or form, with President Clinton.”¹⁰⁰³ When Judge Wright cautioned Mr. Bennett not to make remarks that “could be arguably coaching the witness,” Mr. Bennett represented to Judge Wright: “In preparation of the witness for this deposition, the witness is fully aware of Ms. Lewinsky’s affidavit, so I have not told him a single thing he doesn't know * * *." ¹⁰⁰⁴ President Clinton, who was present when Mr. Bennett made his objection, did not contradict his attorney's comment. Rejecting Mr. Bennett's argument, Judge Wright permitted the questioning about Ms. Lewinsky to continue. ¹⁰⁰⁵

Over the course of extensive questioning, the President testified that he had seen Ms. Lewinsky "on two or three occasions" during the government shutdown in the fall of 1995, including one occasion when she brought pizza to him, and one or two other occasions when she delivered documents to him. ¹⁰⁰⁶ He could not recall whether he had been alone with Ms. Lewinsky on such occasions, although he acknowledged that it was possible. ¹⁰⁰⁷ The President further testified that he could not remember the subject of any conversations with Ms. Lewinsky. ¹⁰⁰⁸

President Clinton recalled that he received only a couple of unremarkable personal messages from Ms. Lewinsky, and he could not recall ever having received a cassette tape from her. ¹⁰⁰⁹ He received presents from her "[o]nce or twice"—a book or two and a tie. ¹⁰¹⁰ The President originally testified that he could not recall any gifts he might have given her; later in the deposition, however, he remembered that some merchandise he had purchased from a Martha's Vineyard restaurant might have reached her through Ms. Currie. ¹⁰¹¹ The President stated that he might have given Ms. Lewinsky a hat pin, though he could not recall for certain. ¹⁰¹²

The President testified that his last conversation with Ms. Lewinsky had been before Christmas, when she had visited the White House to see Ms. Currie. The President stated: "I stuck my head out, said hello to her." ¹⁰¹³ He said it was also possible that, during that encounter, he had joked with Ms. Lewinsky that the plaintiff's attorneys were going to subpoena "every woman I ever talked to" and Ms. Lewinsky "would qualify." ¹⁰¹⁴

The President testified that he was unaware that Mr. Jordan had talked with Ms. Lewinsky about the Jones case, in which she had also been subpoenaed to testify at a deposition. ¹⁰¹⁵

The President emphatically denied having had sexual relations with Ms. Lewinsky. ¹⁰¹⁶

At the conclusion of the deposition, Judge Wright said: "Before [the President] leaves, I want to remind him, as the witness in this matter, and everyone else in the room, that this case is subject to a Protective Order regarding all discovery * * * and * * * all parties present, including * * * the witness are not to say anything whatsoever about the questions they were asked, the substance of

Sometime after the President’s deposition, Mr. Podesta saw Bruce Lindsey, Deputy White House Counsel, at the White House and inquired how the deposition went. According to Mr. Podesta, Mr. Lindsey said that the President had been asked about Monica Lewinsky.¹⁰¹⁸ Mr. Lindsey testified that, during a break in the President’s deposition, the President had told him that Ms. Lewinsky’s name had come up.¹⁰¹⁹

That same evening, Mr. Lindsey met with the President in the Oval Office, where they discussed the deposition.¹⁰²⁰ Mr. Lindsey, relying on the attorney-client, presidential communication, deliberative process, and work-product privileges, declined to say what specifically was discussed at this meeting.

B. THE PRESIDENT MEETS WITH MS. CURRIE

Soon after the deposition, the President called Ms. Currie and asked her to come to the White House the next day.¹⁰²¹ Ms. Currie acknowledged that, “It’s rare for [the President] to ask me to come in on Sunday.”¹⁰²² The President wanted to discuss Ms. Lewinsky’s White House visits.¹⁰²³

At approximately 5:00 p.m. on Sunday, January 18, 1998, Ms. Currie met with the President.¹⁰²⁴ The meeting took place at her desk outside the Oval Office. According to Ms. Currie, the President appeared “concerned.”¹⁰²⁵ He told Ms. Currie that, during his deposition the previous day, he had been asked questions about Monica Lewinsky.¹⁰²⁶ Ms. Currie testified: “I think he said, ‘There are several things you may want to know.’”¹⁰²⁷ He proceeded to make a series of statements,¹⁰²⁸ one right after the other:¹⁰²⁹

- “You were always there when she was there, right?”
- “We were never really alone.”

- “You can see and hear everything, right?”¹⁰³⁰

Ms. Currie testified that, based on his demeanor and the way he made the statements, the President wanted her to agree with them.¹⁰³¹

Ms. Currie testified that she did, in fact, agree with the President when he said, “You were always there when she was there, right?”¹⁰³² Before the grand jury, however, Ms. Currie acknowledged the possibility that Ms. Lewinsky could have visited the President when she was not at the White House.¹⁰³³

With respect to whether the President was “never really alone” with Ms. Lewinsky, Ms. Currie testified that there were several occasions when the President and Ms. Lewinsky were either in the Oval Office or in the study without anyone else present.¹⁰³⁴ Ms. Currie explained that she did not consider the President and Ms. Lewinsky to be “alone” on such occasions because she was at her desk outside the Oval Office; accordingly, they were all together in the same “general area.”¹⁰³⁵ Ms. Currie testified that “the President, for all intents and purposes, is never alone. There’s always somebody around him.”¹⁰³⁶

As to whether Ms. Lewinsky “came on” to him, Ms. Currie testified that she “would have no reason to know” whether Ms. Lewinsky ever “came on” to the President because Ms. Currie was not present all the time.¹⁰³⁷ Finally, as to whether she “could see and hear everything,” Ms. Currie testified that she should not have agreed with the President.¹⁰³⁸ She testified that when the Presi-

¹⁰³¹ Currie 1/27/98 GJ at 74–75. Ms. Currie’s testimony that the President wanted her to agree with his statements shifted somewhat between her first grand jury appearance and her last, which occurred five months later. On January 27, 1998, nine days after her conversation with the President, Ms. Currie testified that she understood from the President’s questions that he wanted her to agree with him. Currie 1/27/98 GJ at 72–76. By July 22, 1998, however, Ms. Currie claimed that although the President stated “right?” at the end of the statements, Ms. Currie understood that she could agree or disagree with them. ¹⁰³⁶ Currie 7/22/98 GJ at 14. The President, apparently, had a similar understanding of “alone.” Before the grand jury, the President explained that “when I said, we were never alone, right * * * I meant that she [Ms. Currie] was always in the Oval Office complex, in that complex, while Monica was there.” Clinton 8/17/98 GJ at 132.

Elsewhere in her testimony, Ms. Currie appeared to have a different understanding of “alone.” She testified that, on one occasion, because others observed Ms. Lewinsky in the Oval Office complex, Ms. Currie accompanied Ms. Lewinsky into the Oval Office, where the President was working. Ms. Currie explained that she waited in the dining room while Ms. Lewinsky and the President met in the study so “[t]hey would not be alone.” Currie 7/22/98 GJ at 130. See also Clinton 8/17/98 GJ at 56 (“I asked her specifically * * * to remain in the dining room, Betty, while I met with Monica in my study.”). Ms. Currie testified that she did not want people who had observed Ms. Lewinsky enter the Oval Office to think that she and the President were “alone.” Currie 7/22/98 GJ at 132.

¹⁰³⁷ Currie 7/22/98 GJ at 79. Ms. Currie testified: “The way the question was phrased to me at the time, I answered, ‘Right.’ It seemed to me that was the correct answer for me to give * * * the ‘[c]ome on to me,’ I considered that more of a statement as opposed to a question.” Id. at 80.

dent and Ms. Lewinsky were alone together in the study, while Ms. Currie was at her desk, she could “hear nothing.”¹⁰³⁹

The President also made the following statement during their January 18, 1998 meeting, according to Ms. Currie: “[Monica Lewinsky] wanted to have sex with me, but I told her I couldn’t do that.”¹⁰⁴⁰

When the President was questioned about this meeting with Ms. Currie in the grand jury, he testified that he recalled the conversation, but he denied that he was “trying to get Betty Currie to say something that was untruthful.”¹⁰⁴¹ Rather, the President testified that he asked a “series of questions” in an effort to quickly “refresh [his] memory.”¹⁰⁴² The President explained: “I wanted to establish * * * that Betty was there at all other times in the complex, and I wanted to know what Betty’s memory was about what she heard, what she could hear. * * * [a]nd I was trying to figure [it] out * * * in a hurry because I knew something was up.”¹⁰⁴³

In his grand jury testimony, the President acknowledged that, “in fairness,” Ms. Currie “may have felt some ambivalence about how to react” to his statements.¹⁰⁴⁴ The President maintained that he was trying to establish that Ms. Currie was “always there,” and could see and hear everything.¹⁰⁴⁵ At the same time, he acknowledged that he had always tried to prevent Ms. Currie from learning about his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky.¹⁰⁴⁶ “[I] did what people do when they do the wrong thing. I tried to do it where nobody else was looking at it.”¹⁰⁴⁷

The President was also asked about his statement that Ms. Currie was always in the Oval Office when Ms. Lewinsky visited. He explained that he may have intended the term “Oval Office” to include the entire Oval Office complex.¹⁰⁴⁸ The President further explained, “I was talking about 1997. I was never, ever trying to get Betty Currie to claim that on the occasions when Monica Lewinsky was there when she wasn’t anywhere around, that she was.”¹⁰⁴⁹ When asked whether he restricted his remarks to the year 1997, the President responded, “Well, I don’t recall whether I did or not, but * * * I assumed [Ms. Currie] knew what I was talking about.”¹⁰⁵⁰

When questioned about his statement to Ms. Currie, “you could see and hear everything,” the President responded:

My memory of that was that, that she had the ability to hear what was going on if she came in the Oval Office from her office. And a lot of times, you know, when I was

C. JANUARY 18–19: ATTEMPTS TO REACH MS. LEWINSKY

In the wake of her Sunday afternoon session, Ms. Currie paged Ms. Lewinsky four times.¹⁰⁵³ She testified that the President “may have asked me to call [Ms. Lewinsky] to see what she knew or where she was or what was happening.”¹⁰⁵⁴ Later that evening, at 11:02 p.m., the President called Ms. Currie to ask whether she had spoken to Ms. Lewinsky.¹⁰⁵⁵

Over a two-hour span the next morning, Monday, January 19, 1998, Ms. Currie made eight unsuccessful attempts to contact Ms. Lewinsky, by either pager or telephone.¹⁰⁵⁶ After speaking with the President to let him know that she was unable to reach Ms. Lewinsky, Ms. Currie again paged her.¹⁰⁵⁷ The purpose of these calls, according to Ms. Currie, was to tell Ms. Lewinsky that her name had been mentioned in the President's deposition.¹⁰⁵⁸

Mr. Jordan also tried unsuccessfully to reach Ms. Lewinsky that morning.¹⁰⁵⁹ That afternoon, Mr. Jordan met with the President in the Oval Office.¹⁰⁶⁰ Later, Ms. Lewinsky's attorney, Frank Carter, called Mr. Jordan and told him that Ms. Lewinsky had obtained new counsel, William Ginsburg and Nathaniel Speights.¹⁰⁶¹ Mr. Jordan passed this information on to the President that evening in a seven-minute phone conversation.¹⁰⁶²

D. JANUARY 20-22: LEWINSKY STORY BREAKS

After the publication of an article alleging a sexual relationship with Ms. Lewinsky, President Clinton conferred with his attorneys and issued a number of denials to his aides and to the American public.

1. "Clinton Accused"

On Wednesday, January 21, 1998, the Washington Post published a story entitled "Clinton Accused of Urging Aide to Lie; Starr Probes Whether President Told Woman to Deny Alleged Affair to Jones's Lawyers."¹⁰⁶³ The White House learned the essentials of the Post story on the night of January 20, 1998.¹⁰⁶⁴

President Clinton placed a number of phone calls that night and the following morning.¹⁰⁶⁵ From 12:08 a.m. to 12:39 a.m., he spoke with his personal attorney, Robert Bennett. Mr. Bennett would be quoted in the Post article as saying, "The President adamantly denies he ever had a relationship with Ms. Lewinsky and she has confirmed the truth of that."¹⁰⁶⁶ He added: "This story seems ridiculous and I frankly smell a rat."¹⁰⁶⁷

Immediately after his call to Mr. Bennett, President Clinton called Deputy White House Counsel Bruce Lindsey; they spoke for about half an hour, until 1:10 a.m.¹⁰⁶⁸

At 1:16 a.m., the President called Ms. Currie at home and spoke to her for 20 minutes. Ms. Currie testified that the President was concerned that her name was mentioned in the Post article.¹⁰⁶⁹ Soon after this call, the President called Mr. Lindsey.¹⁰⁷⁰

A few hours later, at approximately 6:30 a.m., the President called Mr. Jordan in New York City to tell him, according to Mr. Jordan, that the Post story was untrue.¹⁰⁷¹ From 7:14 a.m. to 7:22 a.m., the President spoke again with Mr. Lindsey.¹⁰⁷²

Responding to the Post story that day, the White House issued a statement, personally approved by the President, declaring that he was "outraged by these allegations" and that "he has never had an improper relationship with this woman." White House spokesperson Mike McCurry said that the statement "was prepared by the Counsel's office, and I reviewed it with the President to make sure that it reflected what he wanted me to say * * * He looked at it, and he said fine. * * * It was prepared in consultation between the lawyers and the President. The Counsel's Office gave it to me. I wanted to, of course, verify that that's exactly what the President wanted me to say."¹⁰⁷³

2. Denials to Aides

According to Mr. Lindsey, the remainder of the morning was spent in a series of meetings about the Lewinsky matter, including preparing the President for anticipated Lewinsky-related questions in three previously scheduled media interviews.¹⁰⁷⁴ At these meetings, President Clinton denied the allegations to several of his top aides.

The President met with Chief of Staff Erskine Bowles, along with his two deputies, John Podesta and Sylvia Matthews. According to Mr. Bowles, the President told them, "I want you to know I did not have sexual relationships with this woman, Monica Lewinsky. I did not ask anybody to lie. And when the facts come out, you'll understand."¹⁰⁷⁵ The President made a similar denial that morning to Harold Ickes, his former Deputy Chief of Staff.¹⁰⁷⁶

The President also discussed the matter with Ms. Currie for a second time.¹⁰⁷⁷ According to Ms. Currie, the President called her into the Oval Office and gave a "sort of a recapitulation of what we had talked about on Sunday—you know, 'I was never alone with her'—that sort of thing."¹⁰⁷⁸ The President spoke with the same tone and demeanor that he used during his previous session with her.¹⁰⁷⁹ Ms. Currie testified that the President may have mentioned that she might be asked about Ms. Lewinsky.¹⁰⁸⁰

Later that day, the President summoned Sidney Blumenthal to the Oval Office. They spoke for about 30 minutes.¹⁰⁸¹ The President said to Mr. Blumenthal, "I haven't done anything wrong."¹⁰⁸² Mr. Blumenthal testified that the President told him, "Monica Lewinsky came on to me and made a sexual demand on me." The President said that he "rebuffed her."¹⁰⁸³ The President also told Mr. Blumenthal that Ms. Lewinsky had "threatened him. She said that she would tell people they'd had an affair, that she was known as the stalker among her peers, and that she hated it and if she

The President did not specifically recall this second conversation with Ms. Currie, but did not dispute that it took place: "I do not remember how many times I talked to Betty Currie or when. I don't. I can't possibly remember that. I do remember when I first heard about this story breaking, trying to ascertain what the facts were, trying to ascertain what Betty's perception was." When later asked how he interpreted the President's statement, "I haven't done anything wrong," Mr. Blumenthal stated, "My understanding was that the accusations against him which appeared in the press that day were false, that he had not done anything wrong. . . . He had not had a sexual relationship with her, and had not sought to obstruct justice or suborn perjury." Blumenthal 6/25/98 GJ at 26.

¹⁰⁸³ Blumenthal 6/4/98 GJ at 49. The President said, "I've gone down that road before, I've caused pain for a lot of people and I'm not going to do that again." Blumenthal 6/4/98 GJ at 49. Mr. Blumenthal "understood [this statement] to mean that he had had an adulterous relationship in the past, which is something he made very plain to the American people in his "60 Minutes" interview with the First Lady, which is how he introduced himself to the public . . . And it's been very well known." Blumenthal 6/25/98 GJ at 32.

had an affair or said she had an affair then she wouldn't be the stalker any more."¹⁰⁸⁴ Mr. Blumenthal then asked the President whether he and Ms. Lewinsky were alone when she threatened him. The President responded, "Well, I was within eyesight or ear-shot of someone."¹⁰⁸⁵

According to Mr. Blumenthal, the President complained: "I feel like a character in a novel. I feel like somebody who is surrounded by an oppressive force that is creating a lie about me and I can't get the truth out. I feel like the character in the novel Darkness at Noon."¹⁰⁸⁶

Soon thereafter, in the course of a meeting about the progress of the President's State of the Union address, the President made a second denial of the allegations to Mr. Podesta.¹⁰⁸⁷ Mr. Podesta testified:

[H]e said to me that he had never had sex with her, and that—and that he never asked—you know, he repeated the denial, but he was extremely explicit in saying he never had sex with her * * * Well, I think he said—he said that—there was some spate of, you know, what sex acts were counted, and he said that he had never had sex with her in any way whatsoever—that they had not had oral sex.¹⁰⁸⁸

The President was asked during his grand jury appearance whether he recalled denying a sexual relationship with Ms. Lewinsky to his senior aides and advisors, including Mr. Bowles, Mr. Podesta, Mr. Blumenthal, Mr. Ickes, and Mr. Jordan.¹⁰⁸⁹ The President did not recall specific details but did remember the following:

I met with certain people, and [to] a few of them I said I didn't have sex with Monica Lewinsky, or I didn't have an affair with her or something like that. I had a very careful thing I said, and I tried not to say anything else * * * I remember that I issued a number of denials to people that I thought needed to hear them, but I tried to be careful and to be accurate.

And I believe, sir, that—you'll have to ask them what they thought. But I was using those terms in the normal way people use them.¹⁰⁹⁰

According to Mr. Podesta, "[h]e said to me that after she [Ms. Lewinsky] left [the White House], that when she had come by, she came by to see Betty, and that he—when she was there either Betty was with them—either that she was with Betty when he saw her or that he saw her in the Oval Office with the door open and Betty was around—and Betty was out at her desk." The President responded: "I'm not saying that anybody who had a contrary memory is wrong. I do not remember." Clinton 8/17/98 GJ at 105.

The President testified that he had said “things that were true about this relationship. That I used—in the language I used, I said, there’s nothing going on between us. That was true.”¹⁰⁹¹ I said I did not have sex with her as I defined it. That was true.”¹⁰⁹² The President qualified this answer, however: “I said things that were true. They may have been misleading, and if they were I have to take responsibility for it, and I’m sorry.”¹⁰⁹³

3. Initial Denials to the American Public

On the afternoon of January 21, the President made his first of a series of previously scheduled media appearances. In an interview on National Public Radio’s “All Things Considered,” the following colloquy took place:

Q: Mr. President, * * * [m]any Americans woke up to the news today that the Whitewater independent counsel is investigating an allegation that you * * * encouraged a young woman to lie to lawyers in the Paula Jones civil suit. Is there any truth to that allegation?

WJC: No, sir, there’s not. It’s just not true.

Q: Is there any truth to the allegation of an affair between you and the young woman?

WJC: No. That’s not true either. * * * The charges are not true. And I haven’t asked anybody to lie.¹⁰⁹⁴

That evening, the President appeared on the PBS program “The News Hour with Jim Lehrer.” He was asked again whether the allegation of an affair with a White House intern was true. The President replied, “That is not true. That is not true. I did not ask anyone to tell anything other than the truth. There is no improper relationship. And I intend to cooperate with this inquiry. But that is not true.” When asked to define what he meant by the term “improper relationship,” the President answered, “Well, I think you know what it means. It means that there is not a sexual relationship, an improper sexual relationship, or any other kind of improper relationship.”¹⁰⁹⁵

The following morning, on January 22, 1998, the President again denied he had done anything improper. Speaking at a televised White House photo opportunity with Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat, the President stated: “[T]he allegations are false, and I would never ask anybody to do anything other than tell the truth. That is false.”¹⁰⁹⁶

¹⁰⁹¹ In claiming that this statement was true, the President was apparently relying on the same tense-based distinction he made during the Jones deposition. See Clinton 8/17/98 GJ at 59–61 (“It depends on what the meaning of the word ‘is’ is. If the—if he—if ‘is’ means is and never has been, that is not—that is one thing. If it means there is none, that was a completely true statement. * * * Now, if someone had asked me on that day, are you having any kind of sexual relations with Ms. Lewinsky, that is, asked me a question in the present tense, I would have said no. And it would have been completely true.”)

The President also gave an interview to Roll Call that day. He stated: “[T]he relationship was not improper, and I think that’s important enough to say * * *. But let me answer—it is not an improper relationship and I know what the word means * * *. The relationship was not sexual. And I know what you mean, and the answer is no.”¹⁰⁹⁷

At each of these interviews, the President pledged he would cooperate fully with the investigation. On NPR, the President stated: “I have told people that I would cooperate in the investigation, and I expect to cooperate with it. I don’t know any more about it, really, than you do. But I will cooperate * * *. I’m doing my best to cooperate with the investigation.”¹⁰⁹⁸ To Mr. Lehrer, he said: “[W]e are doing the best to cooperate here, but we don’t know much yet * * *. I think it’s important that we cooperate, I will cooperate, but I want to focus on the work at hand.”¹⁰⁹⁹

[T]he American people have a right to get answers. We are working very hard to comply, get all the requests for information up here. And we will give you as many answers as we can, as soon as we can, at the appropriate time, consistent with our obligation to also cooperate with the investigations. And that’s not a dodge; that’s really what I’ve—I’ve talked with our people. I want to do that. I’d like for you to have more rather than less, sooner rather than later. So we will work through it as quickly as we can and get all those questions out there to you.”¹¹⁰⁰

Finally, in his Roll Call interview, the President vowed: “I’m going to cooperate with this investigation * * *. And I’ll cooperate.”¹¹⁰¹

4. “We Just Have To Win”

Amidst the flurry of press activity on January 21, 1998, the President’s former political consultant, Dick Morris, read the Post story and called the President.¹¹⁰² According to Mr. Morris, he told the President, “You poor son of a bitch. I’ve just read what’s going on.”¹¹⁰³ The President responded, Mr. Morris recalled, “Oh, God. This is just awful * * *. I didn’t do what they said I did, but I did do something. I mean, with this girl, I didn’t do what they said, but ¹¹⁰¹ Roll Call, Inc., January 22, 1998. President Clinton was extended invitations to appear before the grand jury and give his testimony on: January 28, 1998; February 4, 1998; February 9, 1998; February 21, 1998; March 2, 1998; and March 13, 1998. He declined all of these invitations. On July 16, 1998, the grand jury issued the President a subpoena. The President promptly moved for a postponement of two weeks in which to respond. At a hearing on the President’s motion, Chief Judge Norma Holloway Johnson stated, “What we need to do is to move forward and move forward expeditiously * * *. [A]pparently the grand jury has determined that [they] need to hear from the [President].” In re Grand Jury Proceedings, Misc. No. 98-267, July 28, 1998, at pp. 27–28. Before Judge Johnson ruled, the President’s attorneys negotiated the terms of the President’s appearance.

¹¹⁰² Morris 8/18/98 GJ at 6, 10, 12. Mr. Morris was questioned after the President’s grand jury appearance on August 17, 1998; accordingly, the OIC never had an opportunity to question the President about this conversation.

I did . . . do something¹¹⁰⁴ * * * And I may have done enough so that I don't know if I can prove my innocence * * *. There may be gifts. I gave her gifts, * * * [a]nd there may be messages on her phone answering machine."¹¹⁰⁵

Mr. Morris assured the President, "[t]here's a great capacity for forgiveness in this country and you should consider tapping into it."¹¹⁰⁶ The President said, "But what about the legal thing? You know, the legal thing? You know, Starr and perjury and all * * *. You know, ever since the election, I've tried to shut myself down. I've tried to shut my body down, sexually, I mean * * *. But sometimes I slipped up and with this girl I just slipped up."¹¹⁰⁷

Mr. Morris suggested that he take a poll on the voters' willingness to forgive confessed adultery. The President agreed.¹¹⁰⁸

Mr. Morris telephoned the President later that evening with the poll results, which showed that the voters were "willing to forgive [the President] for adultery, but not for perjury or obstruction of justice[.]"¹¹⁰⁹ When Mr. Morris explained that the poll results suggested that the President should not go public with a confession or explanation, he replied, "Well, we just have to win, then."¹¹¹⁰

The President had a follow-up conversation with Mr. Morris during the evening of January 22, 1998, when Mr. Morris was considering holding a press conference to "blast Monica Lewinsky 'out of the water.'"¹¹¹¹ The President told Mr. Morris to "be careful." According to Mr. Morris, the President warned him not to "be too hard on [Ms. Lewinsky] because there's some slight chance that she may not be cooperating with Starr and we don't want to alienate her by anything we're going to put out."¹¹¹²

Meanwhile, in California, the President's good friend and Hollywood producer, Harry Thomason, had seen the President's interview with Jim Lehrer on television.¹¹¹³ Mr. Thomason, who had occasionally advised the President on matters relating to the media, traveled to Washington, D.C., and met with him the next day.¹¹¹⁴ Mr. Thomason told the President that "the press seemed to be saying that [the President's comments were] weak" and that he, Mr. Thomason, "thought his response wasn't as strong as it could have been."¹¹¹⁵ Mr. Thomason recommended that the President "should ¹¹¹⁵ Thomason 8/11/98 GJ at 15-16. Mr. Thomason said he "went on the assumption that [the allegations] were not true," but he never asked the President because he talked to his attorney, Robert Bennett (also the President's personal attorney), who advised him "to make sure you explain it so there's no doubt in anybody's mind that nothing happened." ¹¹¹⁶ The President agreed: "You know, you're right. I should be more forceful than that." ¹¹¹⁷

In the ensuing days, the President, through his Cabinet, issued a number of firm denials. On January 23, 1998, the President started a Cabinet meeting by saying the allegations were untrue. ¹¹¹⁸ Afterward, several Cabinet members appeared outside the White House. Madeline Albright, Secretary of State, said: "I believe that the allegations are completely untrue." The others agreed. "I'll second that, definitely," Commerce Secretary William Daley said. Secretary of Education Richard Riley and Secretary of Health and Human Services Donna Shalala concurred. ¹¹¹⁹

The next day, Ann Lewis, White House Communications Director, publicly announced that "those of us who have wanted to go out and speak on behalf of the president" had been given the green light by the President's legal team. ¹¹²⁰ She reported that the President answered the allegations "directly" by denying any improper relationship. She believed that, in issuing his public denials, the President was not "splitting hairs, defining what is a sexual relationship, talking about 'is' rather than was." ¹¹²¹ You know, I always thought, perhaps I was naive, since I've come to Washington, when you said a sexual relationship, everybody knew what that meant." Ms. Lewis expressly said that the term includes "oral sex." ¹¹²²

On Monday, January 26, 1998, in remarks in the Roosevelt Room in the White House, President Clinton gave his last public statement for several months on the Lewinsky matter. At an event promoting after-school health care, the President denied the allegations in the strongest terms: "I want to say one thing to the American people. I want you to listen to me. I'm going to say this again: I did not have sexual relations with that woman, Miss Lewinsky. I never told anybody to lie, not a single time. Never. These allegations are false." ¹¹²³

THERE IS SUBSTANTIAL AND CREDIBLE INFORMATION THAT PRESIDENT CLINTON COMMITTED ACTS THAT MAY CONSTITUTE GROUNDS FOR AN IMPEACHMENT

INTRODUCTION

Pursuant to Section 595(c) of Title 28, the Office of Independent Counsel (OIC) hereby submits substantial and credible information that President Clinton obstructed justice during the Jones v. Clinton sexual harassment lawsuit by lying under oath and concealing evidence of his relationship with a young White House intern and federal employee, Monica Lewinsky. After a federal criminal investigation of the President's actions began in January 1998, the President lied under oath to the grand jury and obstructed justice during the grand jury investigation. There also is substantial and credible information that the President's actions with respect to Monica Lewinsky constitute an abuse of authority inconsistent with the President's constitutional duty to faithfully execute the laws.

There is substantial and credible information supporting the following eleven possible grounds for impeachment:

1. President Clinton lied under oath in his civil case when he denied a sexual affair, a sexual relationship, or sexual relations with Monica Lewinsky.

2. President Clinton lied under oath to the grand jury about his sexual relationship with Ms. Lewinsky.

3. In his civil deposition, to support his false statement about the sexual relationship, President Clinton also lied under oath about being alone with Ms. Lewinsky and about the many gifts exchanged between Ms. Lewinsky and him.

4. President Clinton lied under oath in his civil deposition about his discussions with Ms. Lewinsky concerning her involvement in the Jones case.

5. During the Jones case, the President obstructed justice and had an understanding with Ms. Lewinsky to jointly conceal the truth about their relationship by concealing gifts subpoenaed by Ms. Jones's attorneys.

6. During the Jones case, the President obstructed justice and had an understanding with Ms. Lewinsky to jointly conceal the truth of their relationship from the judicial process by a scheme that included the following means: (i) Both the President and Ms. Lewinsky understood that they would lie under oath in the Jones case about their sexual relationship; (ii) the President suggested to Ms. Lewinsky that she prepare an affidavit that, for the President's purposes, would memorialize her testimony under oath and could be used to prevent questioning of both of them about their relationship; (iii) Ms. Lewinsky signed and filed the false affidavit; (iv) the President used Ms. Lewinsky's false affidavit at his deposition in an attempt to head off questions about Ms. Lewinsky; and (v) when that failed, the President lied under oath at his civil deposition about the relationship with Ms. Lewinsky.

7. President Clinton endeavored to obstruct justice by helping Ms. Lewinsky obtain a job in New York at a time when she would have been a witness harmful to him were she to tell the truth in the Jones case.

8. President Clinton lied under oath in his civil deposition about his discussions with Vernon Jordan concerning Ms. Lewinsky's involvement in the Jones case.

9. The President improperly tampered with a potential witness by attempting to corruptly influence the testimony of his personal secretary, Betty Currie, in the days after his civil deposition.

10. President Clinton endeavored to obstruct justice during the grand jury investigation by refusing to testify for seven months and lying to senior White House aides with knowledge that they would relay the President's false statements to the grand jury—and did thereby deceive, obstruct, and impede the grand jury.

11. President Clinton abused his constitutional authority by (i) lying to the public and the Congress in January 1998 about his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky; (ii) promising at that time to cooperate fully with the grand jury investigation; (iii) later refusing six invitations to testify voluntarily to the grand jury; (iv) invoking Executive Privilege; (v) lying to the grand jury in August 1998; and (vi) lying again to the public and Congress on August 17, 1998—all as part of an effort to hinder, impede, and deflect possible inquiry by the Congress of the United States.

The first two possible grounds for impeachment concern the President's lying under oath about the nature of his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky. The details associated with those grounds are, by their nature, explicit. The President's testimony unfortunately has rendered the details essential with respect to those two grounds, as will be explained in those grounds.

I. THERE IS SUBSTANTIAL AND CREDIBLE INFORMATION THAT PRESIDENT CLINTON LIED UNDER OATH AS A DEFENDANT IN JONES V. CLINTON REGARDING HIS SEXUAL RELATIONSHIP WITH MONICA LEWINSKY.

(1) He denied that he had a “sexual relationship” with Monica Lewinsky.

(2) He denied that he had a “sexual affair” with Monica Lewinsky.

(3) He denied that he had “sexual relations” with Monica Lewinsky.

(4) He denied that he engaged in or caused contact with the genitalia of “any person” with an intent to arouse or gratify (oral sex performed on him by Ms. Lewinsky).

(5) He denied that he made contact with Monica Lewinsky’s breasts or genitalia with an intent to arouse or gratify.

On May 6, 1994, former Arkansas state employee Paula Corbin Jones filed a federal civil rights lawsuit against President Clinton claiming that he had sexually harassed her on May 8, 1991, by requesting her to perform oral sex on him in a suite at the Excelsior Hotel in Little Rock. Throughout the pretrial discovery process in Jones v. Clinton, United States District Judge Susan Webber Wright ruled, over the President’s objections, that Ms. Jones’s lawyers could seek various categories of information, including information about women who had worked as government employees under Governor or President Clinton and allegedly had sexual activity with him. Judge Wright’s rulings followed the prevailing law in sexual harassment cases: The defendant’s sexual relationships with others in the workplace, including consensual relationships, are a standard subject of inquiry during the discovery process. Judge Wright recognized the commonplace nature of her discovery rulings and stated that she was following a “meticulous standard of materiality” in allowing such questioning.

At a hearing on January 12, 1998, Judge Wright required Ms. Jones to list potential trial witnesses. Ms. Jones’s list included several “Jane Does.”¹ Ms. Jones’s attorneys said they intended to call a Jane Doe named Monica Lewinsky as a witness to support Ms. Jones’s claims. Under Ms. Jones’s legal theory, women who had sexual relationships with the President received job benefits because of the sexual relationship, but women who resisted the President’s sexual advances were denied such benefits.²

On January 17, 1998, Ms. Jones’s lawyers deposed President Clinton under oath with Judge Wright present and presiding over the deposition. Federal law requires a witness testifying under oath to provide truthful answers. The intentional failure to provide truthful answers is a crime punishable by imprisonment and fine.³ At the outset of his deposition, the President took an oath administered by Judge Wright: “Do you swear or affirm * * * that the testimony you are about to give in the matter before the court is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?” The President replied: “I do.”⁴ At the beginning of their questioning, Ms. Jones’s attorneys asked the President: “And your testimony is subject to the penalty of perjury; do you understand that, sir?” The President responded, “I do.”⁵

Based on the witness list received in December 1997 (which included Ms. Lewinsky) and the January 12, 1998, hearing, the President and his attorneys were aware that Ms. Jones’s attorneys likely would question the President at his deposition about Ms. Lewinsky and the other “Jane Does.” In fact, the attorneys for Ms. Jones did ask numerous questions about “Jane Does,” including Ms. Lewinsky.

There is substantial and credible information that President Clinton lied under oath in answering those questions.

A. EVIDENCE THAT PRESIDENT CLINTON LIED UNDER OATH DURING THE CIVIL CASE

1. President Clinton’s Statements Under Oath About Monica Lewinsky

During pretrial discovery, Paula Jones’s attorneys served the President with written interrogatories.⁶ One stated in relevant part:

Please state the name, address, and telephone number of each and every [federal employee] with whom you had sexual relations when you [were] * * * President of the United States.⁷

The interrogatory did not define the term “sexual relations.” Judge Wright ordered the President to answer the interrogatory, and on December 23, 1997, under penalty of perjury, President Clinton answered “None.”⁸

At the January 17, 1998, deposition of the President, Ms. Jones’s attorneys asked the President specific questions about possible sex-³Sections 1621 and 1623 of Title 18 (perjury) carry a penalty of imprisonment of not more than five years for knowingly making a false, material statement under oath, including in any ancillary court proceeding. An “ancillary proceeding” includes a deposition in a civil case. United States v. McAfee, 8 F.3d 1010, 1013 (5th Cir. 1993); United States v. Scott, 682 F.2d 695, 698 (8th Cir. 1982). The perjury statutes apply to statements made during civil proceedings. As one United States Court of Appeals recently stated, “we categorically reject any suggestion, implicit or otherwise, that perjury is somehow less serious when made in a civil proceeding. Perjury, regardless of the setting, is a serious offense that results in incalculable harm to the functioning and integrity of the legal system as well as to private individuals.” United States v. Holland, 22 F.3d 1040, 1047 (11th Cir. 1994); see also United States v. Wilkinson, 137 F.3d 214, 225 (4th Cir. 1998).

ual activity with Monica Lewinsky. The attorneys used various terms in their questions, including “sexual affair,” “sexual relationship,” and “sexual relations.” The terms “sexual affair” and “sexual relationship” were not specially defined by Ms. Jones’s attorneys. The term “sexual relations” was defined:

For the purposes of this deposition, a person engages in “sexual relations” when the person knowingly engages in or causes * * * contact with the genitalia, anus, groin, breast, inner thigh, or buttocks of any person with an intent to arouse or gratify the sexual desire of any person. * * * “Contact” means intentional touching, either directly or through clothing.⁹

President Clinton answered a series of questions about Ms. Lewinsky, including:

Q: Did you have an extramarital sexual affair with Monica Lewinsky?

WJC: No.

Q: If she told someone that she had a sexual affair with you beginning in November of 1995, would that be a lie?

WJC: It’s certainly not the truth. It would not be the truth.

Q: I think I used the term “sexual affair.” And so the record is completely clear, have you ever had sexual relations with Monica Lewinsky, as that term is defined in Deposition Exhibit 1, as modified by the Court?

Mr. Bennett:¹⁰

I object because I don’t know that he can remember—

Judge Wright:

Well, it’s real short. He can—I will permit the question and you may show the witness definition number one.

WJC: *I have never had sexual relations with Monica Lewinsky. I’ve never had an affair with her.*¹¹

President Clinton reiterated his denial under questioning by his own attorney:

Q: In paragraph eight of [Ms. Lewinsky’s] affidavit, she says this, “I have never had a sexual relationship with the President, he did not propose that we have a sexual relationship, he did not offer me employment or other benefits in exchange for a sexual relationship, he did not deny me employment or other benefits for rejecting a sexual relationship.” Is that a true and accurate statement as far as you know it?

WJC: *That is absolutely true.*¹²

2. Monica Lewinsky’s Testimony

Monica Lewinsky testified under oath before the grand jury that, beginning in November 1995, when she was a 22-year-old White House intern, she had a lengthy relationship with the President that included substantial sexual activity. She testified in detail about the times, dates, and nature of ten sexual encounters that involved some form of genital contact. As explained in the Narrative section of this Referral, White House records corroborate Ms.

Lewinsky's testimony in that the President was in the Oval Office area during the encounters. The records of White House entry and exit are incomplete for employees, but they do show her presence in the White House on eight of those occasions.¹³

The ten incidents are recounted here because they are necessary to assess whether the President lied under oath, both in his civil deposition, where he denied any sexual relationship at all, and in his grand jury testimony, where he acknowledged an "inappropriate intimate contact" but denied any sexual contact with Ms. Lewinsky's breasts or genitalia. When reading the following descriptions, the President's denials under oath should be kept in mind.

Unfortunately, the nature of the President's denials requires that the contrary evidence be set forth in detail. If the President, in his grand jury appearance, had admitted the sexual activity recounted by Ms. Lewinsky and conceded that he had lied under oath in his civil deposition, these particular descriptions would be superfluous. Indeed, we refrained from questioning Ms. Lewinsky under oath about particular details until after the President's August 17 testimony made that questioning necessary. But in view of (i) the President's denials, (ii) his continued contention that his civil deposition testimony was legally accurate under the terms and definitions employed, and (iii) his refusal to answer related questions, the detail is critical. The detail provides credibility and corroboration to Ms. Lewinsky's testimony. It also demonstrates with clarity that the President lied under oath both in his civil deposition and to the federal grand jury.¹⁴ There is substantial and credible information that the President's lies about his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky were abundant and calculating.

(i) Wednesday, November 15, 1995

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she had her first sexual contact with the President on the evening of Wednesday, November 15, 1995, while she was an intern at the White House. Two times that evening, the President invited Ms. Lewinsky to meet him near the Oval Office.¹⁵ On the first occasion, the President took Ms. Lewinsky back into the Oval Office study, and they kissed.¹⁶ On the second, she performed oral sex on the President in the hallway outside the Oval Office study.¹⁷ During this encounter, the President directly touched and kissed Ms. Lewinsky's bare breasts.¹⁸ In addition, the President put his hand down Ms. Lewinsky's pants and directly stimulated her genitalia (acts clearly within the definition of "sexual relations" used at the Jones deposition).¹⁹

¹³ White House records reflecting entry and exit are incomplete. For Ms. Lewinsky, there are no records for January 7, 1996, and January 21, 1996.

(ii) Friday, November 17, 1995

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she met with the President again two days later, on Friday, November 17, 1995.²⁰ During that encounter, Ms. Lewinsky stated, she performed oral sex on the President in the private bathroom outside the Oval Office study.²¹ The President initiated the oral sex by unzipping his pants and exposing his genitals. Ms. Lewinsky understood the President's actions to be a sign that he wanted her to perform oral sex on him.²² During this encounter, the President also fondled Ms. Lewinsky's bare breasts with his hands and kissed her breasts.²³

(iii) Sunday, December 31, 1995

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she met with the President on New Year's Eve, Sunday, December 31, 1995, after the President invited her to the Oval Office.²⁴ Once there, the President lifted Ms. Lewinsky's sweater, fondled her bare breasts with his hands, and kissed her breasts. She stated that she performed oral sex on the President in the hallway outside the Oval Office study.²⁵

(iv) Sunday, January 7, 1996

Monica Lewinsky testified that she performed oral sex on the President in the bathroom outside the Oval Office study during the late afternoon on Sunday, January 7, 1996.²⁶ The President arranged this encounter by calling Ms. Lewinsky at home and inviting her to visit.²⁷ On that occasion, the President and Ms. Lewinsky went into the bathroom, where he fondled her bare breasts with his hands and mouth. During this encounter, the President stated that he wanted to perform oral sex on Ms. Lewinsky, but she stopped him for a physical reason.²⁸

(v) Sunday, January 21, 1996

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she and the President had a sexual encounter on the afternoon of Sunday, January 21, 1996, after he invited her to the Oval Office.²⁹ The President lifted Ms. Lewinsky's top and fondled her bare breasts.³⁰ The President unzipped his pants and exposed his genitals, and she performed oral sex on him in the hallway outside the Oval Office study.³¹

He also directly touched her genitalia.³⁴ Ms. Lewinsky performed oral sex on the President.³⁵

(vii) Sunday, March 31, 1996

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she and the President had sexual contact in the hallway outside the Oval Office study during the late afternoon of Sunday, March 31, 1996.³⁶ The President arranged this encounter by calling Ms. Lewinsky and inviting her to the Oval Office. During this encounter, Ms. Lewinsky did not perform oral sex on the President. The President fondled Ms. Lewinsky's bare breasts with his hands and mouth and fondled her genitalia directly by pulling her underwear out of the way. In addition, the President inserted a cigar into Ms. Lewinsky's vagina.³⁷

(viii) Sunday, April 7, 1996

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she and the President had sexual contact on Easter Sunday, April 7, 1996, in the hallway outside the Oval Office study and in the study itself.³⁸ On that occasion, the President touched Ms. Lewinsky's breasts, both through her clothing and directly. After the President unzipped his pants, Ms. Lewinsky also performed oral sex on him.³⁹

This was their last in-person sexual encounter for over nine months.

(ix) Friday, February 28, 1997

Ms. Lewinsky testified that her next sexual encounter with the President occurred on Friday, February 28, 1997, in the early evening.⁴⁰ The President initiated this encounter by having his secretary Betty Currie call Ms. Lewinsky to invite her to the White House for a radio address. After the address, Ms. Lewinsky and the President kissed by the bathroom. The President unbuttoned her dress and fondled her breasts, first with her bra on and then directly. He touched her genitalia through her clothes, but not directly, on this occasion. Ms. Lewinsky performed oral sex on him.⁴¹ On this day, Ms. Lewinsky was wearing a blue dress that forensic tests have conclusively shown was stained with the President's semen.⁴²

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she and the President had sexual contact on the afternoon of March 29, 1997, in the Oval Office study.⁴³ On that occasion, the President unbuttoned Ms. Lewinsky's blouse and touched her breasts through her bra, but not directly. He also put his hands inside Ms. Lewinsky's pants and stimulated her genitalia.⁴⁴ Ms. Lewinsky performed oral sex on him, and they also had brief, direct genital-to-genital contact.⁴⁵

(xi) Two Subsequent Meetings

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she met with President Clinton in the Oval Office study on the morning of Saturday, August 16, 1997. They kissed, and Ms. Lewinsky touched the President's genitals through his clothing, but he rebuffed her efforts to perform oral sex. No other sexual acts occurred during this encounter.⁴⁶

On Sunday, December 28, 1997, three weeks before the President's civil deposition in the Jones case, the President and Ms. Lewinsky met in the Oval Office. In addition to discussing a number of issues that are analyzed below, they engaged in "passionate" kissing—she said, "I don't call it a brief kiss." No other sexual contact occurred.⁴⁷

3. Phone Sex

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she and the President engaged in "phone sex" approximately fifteen times. The President initiated each phone sex encounter by telephoning Ms. Lewinsky.⁴⁸

4. Physical Evidence

Ms. Lewinsky produced to OIC investigators a dress she wore during the encounter on February 28, 1997, which she believed might be stained with the President's semen. At the request of the OIC, the FBI Laboratory examined the dress and found semen stains.⁴⁹ At that point, the OIC requested a DNA sample from the President. On August 3, 1998, two weeks before the President's grand jury testimony, a White House physician drew blood from the President in the presence of a senior OIC attorney and a FBI special agent.⁵⁰ Through the most sensitive DNA testing, RFLP testing, the FBI Laboratory determined conclusively that the While phone sex may not itself constitute a "sexual relationship," it adds detail to Ms. Lewinsky's testimony and underscores the sexual and intimate nature of the relationship between the President and Ms. Lewinsky.

Ms. Lewinsky also said that the President left a few messages on her home answering machine (although he told her he did not like to leave messages). Ms. Lewinsky provided four microcassettes of four messages to the OIC on July 29, 1998. FBI Receipt for Property Received, dated 7/29/98.

5. Testimony of Ms. Lewinsky's Friends, Family Members, and Counselors

During her relationship with the President, Monica Lewinsky spoke contemporaneously to several friends, family members, and counselors about the relationship. Their testimony corroborates many of the details of the sexual activity provided by Ms. Lewinsky to the OIC.

(i) Catherine Allday Davis

Catherine Allday Davis, a college friend of Monica Lewinsky's,⁵³ testified that Ms. Lewinsky told her in late 1995 or early 1996 about Ms. Lewinsky's sexual relationship with the President.⁵⁴ According to Ms. Davis, Ms. Lewinsky told her that the relationship included mutual kissing and hugging, as well as oral sex performed by Ms. Lewinsky on the President. She also stated that the President touched Monica "on her breasts and on her vagina."⁵⁵ Ms. Davis also described the cigar incident discussed above.⁵⁶ Ms. Davis added that Monica said that she had "phone sex" with the President five to ten times in 1996 or 1997.⁵⁷

(ii) Neysa Erbland

Neyssa Erbland, a high school friend of Ms. Lewinsky's,⁵⁸ testified that Ms. Lewinsky told her in 1995 that she was having an affair with President Clinton.⁵⁹ According to Ms. Erbland, Ms. Lewinsky said that the sexual relationship began when Ms. Lewinsky was an intern.⁶⁰ Ms. Lewinsky told Ms. Erbland that the sexual contact included oral sex, kissing, and fondling.⁶¹ On occasion, as Ms. Erbland described it, the President put his face in Ms. Lewinsky's bare chest.⁶² Ms. Erbland also said that Ms. Lewinsky described the cigar incident discussed above.⁶³ Ms. Erbland also understood from Ms. Lewinsky that she and the President engaged in phone sex, normally after midnight.⁶⁴

Ms. Lewinsky told another high school friend, Natalie Rose Ungvari,⁶⁵ of her sexual relationship with the President. Ms. Lewinsky first informed Ms. Ungvari of the sexual relationship on November 23, 1995. Ms. Ungvari specifically remembers the date because it was her birthday.⁶⁶ Ms. Ungvari recalled that Ms. Lewinsky said that she performed oral sex on the President and that he fondled her breasts.⁶⁷ Ms. Lewinsky told Ms. Ungvari that the President sometimes telephoned Ms. Lewinsky late at night and would ask her to engage in phone sex.⁶⁸

(iv) Ashley Raines

Ashley Raines, a friend of Ms. Lewinsky who worked in the White House Office of Policy Development Operations,⁶⁹ testified that Ms. Lewinsky described the sexual relationship with the President. Ms. Raines testified that Ms. Lewinsky told her that the relationship began around the time of the government furlough in late 1995.⁷⁰ Ms. Raines understood that the President and Ms. Lewinsky engaged in kissing and oral sex, usually in the President's study.⁷¹ Ms. Lewinsky also told Ms. Raines that she and the President had engaged in phone sex on several occasions.⁷²

(v) Andrew Bleiler

In late 1995, Monica Lewinsky told Andrew Bleiler, a former boyfriend, that she was having an affair with a high official at the White House.⁷³ According to Mr. Bleiler, Ms. Lewinsky said that the relationship did not include sexual intercourse, but did include oral sex. She also told Mr. Bleiler about the cigar incident discussed above, and sexual activity in which the man touched Ms. Lewinsky's genitals and caused her to have an orgasm.⁷⁴

(vi) Dr. Irene Kassorla

Dr. Irene Kassorla counseled Ms. Lewinsky from 1992 through 1997.⁷⁵ Ms. Lewinsky told her of the sexual relationship with the President. Ms. Lewinsky said she performed oral sex on the President in a room adjacent to the Oval Office, that the President touched Ms. Lewinsky causing her to have orgasms, and that they engaged in fondling and touching of one another.⁷⁶ The President

When she worked at the Pentagon, Ms. Lewinsky told a co-worker, Linda Tripp, that she had a sexual relationship with President Clinton.⁷⁸ Ms. Tripp stated that Ms. Lewinsky first told her about the relationship in September or October 1996. Ms. Lewinsky told Ms. Tripp that the first sexual encounter with the President had occurred on November 15, 1995, when Ms. Lewinsky performed oral sex on him. Ms. Lewinsky told Ms. Tripp that, during the course of this sexual relationship, she performed oral sex on the President, the President fondled Ms. Lewinsky’s breasts, the President touched Ms. Lewinsky’s genitalia, and they engaged in phone sex.⁷⁹

(viii) Debra Finerman

Ms. Lewinsky’s aunt, Debra Finerman, testified that Monica told her about her sexual relationship with President Clinton.⁸⁰ Ms. Finerman testified that Ms. Lewinsky described a particular sexual encounter with the President.⁸¹ Ms. Finerman otherwise did not ask and was not told the specifics of the sexual activity between the President and Ms. Lewinsky.⁸²

(ix) Dale Young

Dale Young, a family friend, testified that Ms. Lewinsky told her that she had engaged in oral sex with President Clinton.⁸³

(x) Kathleen Estep

Kathleen Estep, a counselor for Ms. Lewinsky,⁸⁴ met with Ms. Lewinsky on three occasions in November 1996.⁸⁵ Based on her limited interaction with Ms. Lewinsky, Ms. Estep stated that she considered Ms. Lewinsky to be credible.⁸⁶ During their second session, Ms. Lewinsky told Ms. Estep about her sexual relationship with President Clinton.⁸⁷ Ms. Lewinsky told Ms. Estep that the physical part of the relationship involved kissing, Ms. Lewinsky performing oral sex on the President, and the President fondling her breasts.⁸⁸

6. Summary

The detailed testimony of Ms. Lewinsky, her corroborating prior consistent statements to her friends, family members, and counselors, and the evidence of the President's semen on Ms. Lewinsky's dress establish that Ms. Lewinsky and the President engaged in substantial sexual activity between November 15, 1995, and December 28, 1997.⁸⁹

The President, however, testified under oath in the civil case—both in his deposition and in a written answer to an interrogatory—that he did not have a “sexual relationship” or a “sexual affair” or “sexual relations” with Ms. Lewinsky. In addition, he denied engaging in activity covered by a more specific definition of “sexual relations” used at the deposition.⁹⁰

In his civil case, the President made five different false statements related to the sexual relationship. For four of the five statements, the President asserts a semantic defense: The President argues that the terms used in the Jones deposition to cover sexual activity did not cover the sexual activity in which he engaged with Ms. Lewinsky. For his other false statements, the President's response is factual—namely, he disputes Ms. Lewinsky's account that he ever touched her breasts or genitalia during sexual activity.⁹¹

The President's denials—semantic and factual—do not withstand scrutiny.

First, in his civil deposition, the President denied a “sexual affair” with Ms. Lewinsky (the term was not defined). The President's response to lying under oath on this point rests on his definition of “sexual affair”—namely, that it requires sexual intercourse, no matter how extensive the sexual activities might otherwise be. According to the President, a man could regularly engage in oral sex and fondling of breasts and genitals with a woman and yet not have a “sexual affair” with her.

Second, in his civil deposition, the President also denied a “sexual relationship” with Ms. Lewinsky (the term was not defined). The President's response to lying under oath on this point similarly rests on his definition of “sexual relationship”—namely, that it requires sexual intercourse. Once again, under the President's theory, a man could regularly engage in oral sex and fondling of breasts and genitals with a woman, yet not have a “sexual relationship” with her.

The President's claim as to his interpretation of “sexual relationship” is belied by the fact that the President's own lawyer—earlier at that same deposition—equated the term “sexual relationship” with “sex of any kind in any manner, shape or form.” The President's lawyer offered that interpretation when requesting Judge Wright to limit the questioning to prevent further inquiries with respect to Monica Lewinsky. As the videotape of the deposition reveals, the President was present and apparently looking in the direction of his attorney when his attorney offered that statement.⁹² The President gave no indication that he disagreed with his attorney's straightforward interpretation that the term "sexual relationship" means "sex of any kind in any manner, shape, or form." Nor did the President thereafter take any steps to correct the attorney's statement.

⁸⁹The President and Ms. Lewinsky had ten sexual encounters that included direct contact with the genitalia of at least one party, and two other encounters that included kissing. On nine of the ten occasions, Ms. Lewinsky performed oral sex on the President. On nine occasions, the President touched and kissed Ms. Lewinsky's bare breasts. On four occasions, the President also touched her genitalia. On one occasion, the President inserted a cigar into her vagina to stimulate her. The President and Ms. Lewinsky also had phone sex on at least fifteen occasions.

⁹¹He provided his responses during his August 17, 1998 grand jury appearance; those responses are separately analyzed in Ground II.

Third, in an answer to an interrogatory submitted before his deposition, the President denied having "sexual relations" with Ms. Lewinsky (the term was not defined). Yet again, the President's apparent rejoinder to lying under oath on this point rests on his definition of "sexual relations"—that it, too, requires sexual intercourse. According to President Clinton, oral sex does not constitute sexual relations.

Fourth, in his civil deposition, the President denied committing any acts that fell within the specific definition of "sexual relations" that was in effect for purposes of that deposition. Under that specific definition, sexual relations occurs "when the person knowingly engages in or causes contact with the genitalia, anus, groin, breast, inner thigh, or buttocks of any person with an intent to arouse or gratify the sexual desire of any person."⁹³ Thus, the President denied engaging in or causing contact with the genitalia, breasts, or anus of "any person" with an intent to arouse or gratify the sexual desire of "any person."

Concerning oral sex, the President's sole answer to the charge that he lied under oath at the deposition focused on his interpretation of "any person" in the definition. Ms. Lewinsky testified that she performed oral sex on the President on nine occasions. The President said that by receiving oral sex, he would not "engage in" or "cause"⁹⁴ contact with the genitalia, anus, groin, breast, inner thigh, or buttocks of "any person" because "any person" really means "any other person." The President further testified before the grand jury: "[I]f the deponent is the person who has oral sex performed on him, then the contact is with—not with anything on that list, but with the lips of another person."⁹⁵

The President's linguistic parsing is unreasonable. Under the President's interpretation (which he says he followed at his deposition), in an oral sex encounter, one person is engaged in sexual relations, but the other person is not engaged in sexual relations.⁹⁶

Even assuming that the definitional language can be manipulated to exclude the deponent's receipt of oral sex, the President is still left with the difficulty that reasonable persons would not have understood it that way. And in context, the President's semantics become even weaker: The Jones suit rested on the allegation that the President sought to have Ms. Jones perform oral sex on him. Yet the President now claims that the expansive definition devised for deposition questioning should be interpreted to exclude that very act.

Fifth, by denying at his civil deposition that he had engaged in any acts falling within the specific definition of "sexual relations," the President denied engaging in or causing contact with the breasts or genitalia of Ms. Lewinsky with an intent to arouse or gratify one's sexual desire. In contrast to his explanations of the four preceding false statements under oath, the President's defense to lying under oath in this instance is purely factual.

As discussed above, Ms. Lewinsky testified credibly that the President touched and kissed her bare breasts on nine occasions, and that he stimulated her genitals on four occasions.⁹⁷ She also testified about a cigar incident, which is discussed above. In addition, a deleted computer file from Ms. Lewinsky's home computer contained an apparent draft letter to the President that explicitly referred to an incident in which the President's "mouth [was] on [her] breast" and implicitly referred to direct contact with her genitalia.⁹⁸ This draft letter further corroborates Ms. Lewinsky's testimony.

Ms. Lewinsky's prior consistent statements to various friends, family members, and counselors—made when the relationship was ongoing—likewise corroborate her testimony on the nature of the President's touching of her body. Ms. Lewinsky had no apparent motive to lie to her friends, family members, and counselors. Ms. Lewinsky especially had no reason to lie to Dr. Kassorla and Ms. Estep, to whom she related the facts in the course of a professional relationship. And Ms. Lewinsky's statements to some that she did not have intercourse with the President, even though she wanted to do so, enhances the credibility of her statements. Moreover, the precise nature of the sexual activity only became relevant after the President interposed his semantic defense regarding oral sex on August 17, 1998.

By contrast, the President's testimony strains credulity. His apparent "hands-off" scenario—in which he would have received oral sex on nine occasions from Ms. Lewinsky but never made direct contact with Ms. Lewinsky's breasts or genitalia—is not credible. The President's claim seems to be that he maintained a hands-off policy in ongoing sexual encounters with Ms. Lewinsky, which coincidentally happened to permit him to truthfully deny "sexual relations" with her at a deposition occurring a few years in the future. As Ms. Lewinsky noted, it suggests some kind of "service contract—that all I did was perform oral sex on him and that that's all this relationship was."⁹⁹

⁹⁷ She testified that she had orgasms on three of the four occasions. We note that fact because (i) the definition referred to direct contact with the genitalia with the "intent to arouse or gratify" and (ii) the President has denied such contact. Ms. Lewinsky also testified that on one occasion, the President put his hand over her mouth during a sexual encounter to keep her quiet. Lewinsky 7/31/98 Int. at 3.

⁹⁹ Lewinsky 8/20/98 GJ at 54.

The President also had strong personal, political, and legal motives to lie in the Jones deposition: He did not want to admit that he had committed extramarital sex acts with a young intern in the Oval Office area of the White House. Such an admission could support Ms. Jones's theory of liability and would embarrass him. Indeed, the President admitted that during the relationship he did what he could to keep the relationship secret, including "misleading" members of his family and Cabinet.¹⁰⁰ The President testified, moreover, that he "hoped that this relationship would never become public."¹⁰¹

At the time of his civil deposition, the President also could have presumed that he could lie under oath without risk because—as he knew—Ms. Lewinsky had already filed a false affidavit denying a sexual relationship with the President. Indeed, they had an understanding that each would lie under oath (explained more fully in Ground VI below). So the President might have expected that he could lie without consequence on the belief that no one could ever successfully challenge his denial of a sexual relationship with her.

In sum, based on all of the evidence and considering the President's various responses, there is substantial and credible information that the President lied under oath in his civil deposition and his interrogatory answer in denying a sexual relationship, a sexual affair, or sexual relations with Ms. Lewinsky.¹⁰²

II. THERE IS SUBSTANTIAL AND CREDIBLE INFORMATION THAT PRESIDENT CLINTON LIED UNDER OATH TO THE GRAND JURY ABOUT HIS SEXUAL RELATIONSHIP WITH MONICA LEWINSKY.

A. BACKGROUND

In January 1998, upon application of the Attorney General, the Special Division of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit expanded the OIC's jurisdiction to investigate, among other matters, whether Monica Lewinsky and the President obstructed justice in the Jones case. The criminal investigation was triggered by specific and credible evidence that Monica Lewinsky denied her relationship with President Clinton in a false affidavit in the Jones case, that she had spoken to the President and Vernon Jordan about her testimony, and that she may have been influenced to lie by the President through the assistance of Vernon Jordan and others in finding her a job. After the President, in his January 17 deposition, denied any sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky and otherwise minimized his overall relationship with her, the President's testimony became an additional subject of the OIC investigation.

The threshold factual question was whether the President and Monica Lewinsky in fact had a sexual relationship. If they did, the President would have committed perjury in his civil deposition and interrogatory answer: The President, as noted in Ground I above, had denied a sexual affair, sexual relationship, or sexual relations with Monica Lewinsky, including any direct contact with her breasts or genitalia. The answer to the preliminary factual question also could alter the interpretation of several possibly obstructionist acts by the President—the employment assistance for Ms. Lewinsky, the concealment of gifts he had given to Ms. Lewinsky, the discussion between the President and Ms. Lewinsky of her testimony or affidavit, the President's post-deposition communications with Betty Currie, and the President's emphatic denials of a relationship to his aides who later testified before the grand jury.

During the investigation, the OIC gathered a substantial body of information that established that the President and Monica Lewinsky did, in fact, have a sexual relationship. That information is outlined in Ground I above. In particular, the information includes: (i) the detailed and credible testimony of Ms. Lewinsky regarding the 10 sexual encounters; (ii) the President's semen stain on Ms. Lewinsky's dress; and (iii) the testimony of friends, family members, and counselors to whom she made near-contemporaneous statements about the relationship. All of this evidence pointed to a single conclusion—that she and the President did have a sexual relationship.

B. THE PRESIDENT'S GRAND JURY TESTIMONY

The President was largely aware of that extensive body of evidence before he testified to the grand jury on August 17, 1998. Not only did the President know that Ms. Lewinsky had reached an immunity agreement with this Office in exchange for her truthful testimony, but the President knew from public reports and his own knowledge that his semen might be on one of Ms. Lewinsky's dresses. The OIC had asked him for a blood sample on August 3, 1998 (two weeks before his grand jury testimony) and assured his counsel that there was a substantial predicate for the request, which reasonably implied that there was semen on the dress.

As a result, the President had three apparent choices in his testimony to the grand jury. First, the President could adhere to his previous testimony in his civil case, as well as in his public statements, and deny any sexual relationship. But he knew (or at least, had reason to know) that the contrary evidence was overwhelming, particularly if his semen were in fact on Ms. Lewinsky's dress. Second, the President could admit a sexual relationship, which would cause him also to simultaneously admit that he lied under oath in the Jones case. Third, the President could invoke his Fifth Amendment privilege against compelled self-incrimination.

Confronting those three options, the President attempted to avoid them altogether. The President admitted to an "inappropriate intimate" relationship, but he maintained that he had not committed perjury in the Jones case when he denied having a sexual relationship, sexual affair, or sexual relations with her.¹⁰³ The President contended that he had believed his various statements in the Jones case to be legally accurate.¹⁰⁴ He also testified that the inappropriate relationship began not in November 1995 when Ms. Lewinsky was an intern, as Ms. Lewinsky and other witnesses have testified, but in 1996.

During his grand jury testimony, the President was asked whether Monica Lewinsky performed oral sex on him and, if so, whether he had committed perjury in his civil deposition by denying a sexual relationship, sexual affair, or sexual relations with her. The President refused to say whether he had oral sex. Instead, the President said (i) that the undefined terms "sexual affair," "sexual relationship," and "sexual relations" necessarily require sexual intercourse, (ii) that he had not engaged in intercourse with Ms. Lewinsky, and (iii) that he therefore had not committed perjury in denying a sexual relationship, sexual affair, or sexual relations.¹⁰⁵

A more specific definition of "sexual relations" had also been used at the civil deposition. As to that definition, the President said to the grand jury that he does not and did not believe oral sex was covered.

Q: [I]s oral sex performed on you within that definition as you understood it, the definition in the Jones—

See also Excerpt from President Clinton's Televised Address to the American People, 8/17/98, reprinted in The Washington Post, at A5 (8/18/98) ("In a deposition in January, I was asked questions about my relationship with Monica Lewinsky. While my answers were legally accurate, I did not volunteer information.")

¹⁰⁵ Clinton 8/17/98 GJ at 23–24.

A: As I understood it, it was not; no.¹⁰⁶

The President thus contended that he had not committed perjury on that question in the Jones deposition—even assuming that Monica Lewinsky performed oral sex on him.

There still was the question of his contact with Ms. Lewinsky's breasts and genitalia, which the President conceded would fall within the Jones definition of sexual relations. The President denied that he had engaged in such activity and said, in effect, that Monica Lewinsky was lying:

Q: The question is, if Monica Lewinsky says that while you were in the Oval Office area you touched her breasts would she be lying?

A: That is not my recollection. My recollection is that I did not have sexual relations with Ms. Lewinsky and I'm staying on my former statement about that. * * * My, my statement is that I did not have sexual relations as defined by that.

Q: If she says that you kissed her breasts, would she be lying?

A: I'm going to revert to my former statement [that is, the prepared statement denying "sexual relations"].

Q: Okay. If Monica Lewinsky says that while you were in the Oval Office area you touched her genitalia, would she be lying? And that calls for a yes, no, or reverting to your former statement.

A: I will revert to my former statement on that.¹⁰⁷

The President elaborated that he considered kissing or touching breasts or genitalia during sexual activity to be covered by the Jones definition, but he denied that he had ever engaged in such conduct with Ms. Lewinsky:

Q: So touching, in your view then and now—the person being deposed touching or kissing the breast of another person would fall within the definition?

A: That's correct, sir.

Q: And you testified that you didn't have sexual relations with Monica Lewinsky in the Jones deposition, under that definition, correct?

A: That's correct, sir.

Q: If the person being deposed touched the genitalia of another person, would that be—and with the intent to arouse the sexual desire, arouse or gratify, as defined in definition (1), would that be, under your understanding then and now—

A: Yes, sir.

Q: —sexual relations.

A: Yes, sir.

Q: Yes it would?

A: Yes it would. If you had a direct contact with any of these places in the body, if you had direct contact with intent to arouse or gratify, that would fall within the definition.

Q: So you didn't do any of those three things—

A: You—

Q: —with Monica Lewinsky.

¹⁰⁶ Id. at 93.

¹⁰⁷ Id. at 110 (emphasis added).

A: You are free to infer that my testimony is that I did not have sexual relations, as I understood this term to be defined.

Q: Including touching her breast, kissing her breast, touching her genitalia?

C. SUMMARY

In the foregoing testimony to the grand jury, the President lied under oath three times.

1. The President testified that he believed oral sex was not covered by any of the terms and definitions for sexual activity used at the Jones deposition. That testimony is not credible: At the Jones deposition, the President could not have believed that he was telling “the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth” in denying a sexual relationship, sexual relations, or a sexual affair with Monica Lewinsky.

2. In all events, even putting aside his definitional defense, the President made a second false statement to the grand jury. The President's grand jury testimony contradicts Ms. Lewinsky's grand jury testimony on the question whether the President touched Ms. Lewinsky's breasts or genitalia during their sexual activity. There can be no contention that one of them has a lack of memory or is mistaken. On this issue, either Monica Lewinsky lied to the grand jury, or President Clinton lied to the grand jury. Under any rational view of the evidence, the President lied to the grand jury.

First, Ms. Lewinsky's testimony about these encounters is detailed and specific. She described with precision nine incidents of sexual activity in which the President touched and kissed her breasts and four incidents involving contacts with her genitalia.

Second, Ms. Lewinsky has stated repeatedly that she does not want to hurt the President by her testimony.¹⁰⁹ Thus, if she had exaggerated in her many prior statements, she presumably would have said as much, rather than adhering to those statements. She has confirmed those details, however, even though it clearly has been painful for her to testify to the details of her relationship with the President.

Third, the testimony of many of her friends, family members, and counselors corroborate her testimony in important detail. Many testified that Ms. Lewinsky had told them that the President had touched her breasts and genitalia during sexual activity. These statements were made well before the President's grand jury testimony rendered these precise details important. Ms. Lewinsky had no motive to lie to these individuals (and obviously not to counselors). Indeed, she pointed out to many of them that she was upset that sexual intercourse had not occurred, an unlikely admission if she were exaggerating the sexual aspects of their relationship.

Fourth, a computer file obtained from Ms. Lewinsky's home computer contained a draft letter that referred in one place to their sexual relationship. The draft explicitly refers to “watching your mouth on my breast” and implicitly refers to direct contact with Ms. Lewinsky's genitalia.¹¹⁰ This draft letter further corroborates

Ms. Lewinsky's testimony and indicates that the President's grand jury testimony is false.

Fifth, as noted above, the President's "hands-off" scenario—in which he would have received oral sex on nine occasions from Ms. Lewinsky but never made direct contact with Ms. Lewinsky's breasts or genitalia—is implausible. As Ms. Lewinsky herself testified, it suggests that she and the President had some kind of "service contract—that all I did was perform oral sex on him and that that's all this relationship was."¹¹¹ But as the above descriptions and the Narrative explain, the nature of the relationship, including the sexual relationship, was far more than that.

Sixth, in the grand jury, the President had a motive to lie by denying he had fondled Ms. Lewinsky in intimate ways. The President clearly sought to deny any acts that would show that he committed perjury in his civil case (implying that the President understood how seriously the public and the courts would view perjury in a civil case). To do that, the President had to deny touching Ms. Lewinsky's breasts or genitalia—no matter how implausible his testimony to that effect might be.

Seventh, the President refused to answer specific questions before the grand jury about what activity he did engage in (as opposed to what activity he did not engage in)—even though at the Jones deposition only seven months before, his attorney stated that he was willing to answer specific questions when there was a sufficient factual predicate.¹¹² The President's failure in the grand jury to answer specific follow-up questions suggests that he could not supply responses in a consistent or credible manner.

3. Finally, the President made a third false statement to the grand jury about his sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky. He contended that the intimate contact did not begin until 1996. Ms. Lewinsky has testified that it began November 15, 1995, during the government shutdown—testimony corroborated by statements she made to friends at the time.¹¹³ A White House photograph of the evening shows the President and Ms. Lewinsky eating pizza.¹¹⁴ White House records show that Ms. Lewinsky did not depart the White House until 12:18 a.m. and show that the President was in the Oval Office area until 12:35 a.m.¹¹⁵

Ms. Lewinsky was still an intern when she says the President began receiving oral sex from her, whereas she was a full-time employee by the time that the President admits they began an "inappropriate intimate" relationship. The motive for the President to make a false statement about the date on which the sexual relationship started appears to have been that the President was unwilling to admit sexual activity with a young 22-year-old White House intern in the Oval Office area. Indeed, Ms. Lewinsky testified that, at that first encounter, the President tugged at her intern pass. He said that "this" may be a problem; Ms. Lewinsky interpreted that statement to reflect his awareness that there would be a problem with her obtaining access to the West Wing.¹¹⁶

For all these reasons, there is substantial and credible information that the President lied to the grand jury about his sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky.¹¹⁷

¹¹⁶Lewinsky 7/30/98 Int. at 6; Lewinsky 8/24/98 Int. at 5.

¹¹⁷The President contended that he had only one encounter in 1997 with Ms. Lewinsky, whereas she says that there were two. The motive for making a false statement on that issue is less clear, except that perhaps the President wanted to portray the 1997 relationship as an isolated incident.

III. THERE IS SUBSTANTIAL AND CREDIBLE INFORMATION THAT PRESIDENT CLINTON LIED UNDER OATH DURING HIS CIVIL DEPOSITION WHEN HE STATED THAT HE COULD NOT RECALL BEING ALONE WITH MONICA LEWINSKY AND WHEN HE MINIMIZED THE NUMBER OF GIFTS THEY HAD EXCHANGED.

The President testified to the grand jury and stated to the Nation on August 17 that his testimony in his civil deposition had been “legally accurate.” Even apart from his answers about the sexual relationship, the President’s deposition testimony was inaccurate on several other points.

During President Clinton’s deposition in the Jones case, Ms. Jones’s attorneys asked the President many detailed questions about the nature of his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky, apart from whether the relationship was sexual. The questions included: (i) whether the President had been alone with Ms. Lewinsky in the White House and, if so, how many times; and (ii) whether he and Ms. Lewinsky exchanged gifts.¹¹⁸ Both issues were important in determining the nature of the relationship.¹¹⁹

There is substantial and credible information that the President lied under oath about those subjects.

A. There is substantial and credible information that President Clinton lied under oath when he testified that he could not specifically recall instances in which he was alone with Monica Lewinsky.

1. The President’s Civil Deposition Testimony

President Clinton was asked at his deposition whether he had ever been alone with Ms. Lewinsky. He testified as follows:

Q: * * * At any time were you and Monica Lewinsky together alone in the Oval Office?

[videotape shows approximately five-second pause before answer]

WJC: I don’t recall, but as I said, when she worked at the legislative affairs office, they always had somebody there on the weekends. I typically worked some on the weekends. Sometimes they’d bring me things on the weekends. She—it seems to me she brought things to me once or twice on the weekends. In that case, whatever time she would be in there, drop it off, exchange a few words and go, she was there. I don't have any specific recollections of what the issues were, what was going on, but when the Congress is there, we're working all the time, and typically I would do some work on one of the days of the weekends in the afternoon.

¹¹⁸Ms. Jones’s attorneys had earlier served President Clinton with a document request that sought documents reflecting “any communications, meetings or visits involving” President Clinton and Ms. Lewinsky. 1414-DC-00001534-46.

¹¹⁹Throughout the Jones case, Judge Susan Webber Wright ruled that Ms. Jones was entitled to discover information regarding the nature of President Clinton’s relationship with government employees, including Monica Lewinsky, a federal employee at the time. See, e.g., 921-DC-00000459-66; 920-DC-00000517-25; 1414-DC-00001006-14; 921-DC-00000736-44; 921-DC-00000751-52; 1414-DC-00001188-92.

Q: So I understand, your testimony is that it was possible, then, that you were alone with her, but you have no specific recollection of that ever happening?

WJC: Yes, that's correct. It's possible that she, in, while she was working there, brought something to me and that at the time she brought it to me, she was the only person there. That's possible.¹²⁰

The President also was asked whether he had ever been alone with Ms. Lewinsky in the hallway that runs from the Oval Office, past the study, to the dining room and kitchen area.¹²¹

Q: At any time were you and Monica Lewinsky alone in the hallway between the Oval Office and this kitchen area?

WJC: I don't believe so, unless we were walking back to the back dining room with the pizza.¹²² I just, I don't remember. *I don't believe we were alone in the hallway, no.*¹²³

The President was then asked about any times he may have been alone in any room with Ms. Lewinsky:

Q: At any time have you and Monica Lewinsky ever been alone together in any room of the White House?

WJC: I think I testified to that earlier. I think that there is a, it is—I have no specific recollection, but it seems to me that she was on duty on a couple of occasions working for the legislative affairs office *and brought me some things to sign, something on the weekend. That's—I have a general memory of that.*¹²⁴

2. Evidence That Contradicts the President's Testimony

In the seven months preceding the President's grand jury testimony on August 17, the OIC gathered substantial and credible information that the President lied under oath in his deposition statements about being alone with Monica Lewinsky.

First, Monica Lewinsky testified before the grand jury that she was alone with the President on numerous occasions¹²⁵ and in numerous areas, including the Oval Office,¹²⁶ Nancy Hrenreich's office,¹²⁷ the President's private study,¹²⁸ the private bathroom across from the study,¹²⁹ and the hallway that leads from the Oval Office to the private dining room.¹³⁰ Ms. Lewinsky confirmed that she and the President were alone during sexual activity.¹³¹

Second, Betty Currie testified that President Clinton and Ms. Lewinsky were alone together in the Oval Office area a number of times.¹³² She specifically remembered three occasions when the President and Ms. Lewinsky were alone together: February 28, 1997,¹³³ early December 1997,¹³⁴ and December 28, 1997.¹³⁵

Third, six current or former members of the Secret Service testified that the President and Ms. Lewinsky were alone in the Oval Office area—Robert Ferguson,¹³⁶ Lewis Fox,¹³⁷ William Bordley,¹³⁸ Nelson Garabito,¹³⁹ Gary Byrne,¹⁴⁰ and John Muskett.¹⁴¹

Fourth, White House steward Glen Maes testified that on some weekend day after Christmas 1997,¹⁴² the President came out of the Oval Office, saw Ms. Lewinsky with a gift, and escorted her into the Oval Office. Mr. Maes testified that the President and Ms. Lewinsky were alone together for approximately eight minutes, and then Ms. Lewinsky left.¹⁴³

3. The President's Grand Jury Testimony

On August 17, 1998, the President testified to the grand jury and began his testimony by reading a statement admitting that he had been alone with Ms. Lewinsky:

*When I was alone with Ms. Lewinsky on certain occasions in early 1996 and once in early 1997, I engaged in conduct that was wrong.*¹⁴⁴

The President acknowledged being alone with Ms. Lewinsky on multiple occasions, although he could not pinpoint the precise number.¹⁴⁵ Perhaps most important, the President admitted that he was alone with Ms. Lewinsky on December 28, 1997,¹⁴⁶ less than three weeks before his deposition in the Jones case. Indeed, he acknowledged that he would have to have been an “exhibitionist” for him not to have been alone with Ms. Lewinsky when they were having sexual encounters.¹⁴⁷

4. Summary

Substantial and credible information demonstrates that the President made three false statements under oath in his civil deposition regarding whether he had been alone with Ms. Lewinsky.

First, the President lied when he said “I don’t recall” in response to the question whether he had ever been alone with Ms. Lewinsky. The President admitted to the grand jury that he had been alone with Ms. Lewinsky. It is not credible that he actually had no memory of this fact six months earlier, particularly given that they were obviously alone when engaging in sexual activity.

Second, when asked whether he had been alone with Ms. Lewinsky in the hallway in the Oval Office, the President answered, “I don’t believe so, unless we were walking back to the back dining room with the pizza.”¹⁴⁸ That statement, too, was false: Most of the sexual encounters between the President and Ms. Lewinsky occurred in that hallway (and on other occasions, they walked through the hallway to the dining room or study), and it is not credible that the President would have forgotten this fact.

Third, the President suggested at his civil deposition that he had no specific recollection of being alone with Ms. Lewinsky in the Oval Office, but had a general recollection that Ms. Lewinsky may have brought him “papers to sign” on certain occasions when she worked at the Legislative Affairs Office.¹⁴⁹ This statement was false. Ms. Lewinsky did not bring him papers for official purposes. To the contrary, “bringing papers” was one of the sham “cover stories” that the President and Ms. Lewinsky had originally crafted to conceal their sexual relationship.¹⁵⁰ The fact that the President resorted to a previously designed cover story when testifying under oath at the Jones deposition confirms that he made these false denials in a calculated manner with the intent and knowledge that they were false.

The President had an obvious motive to lie in this respect. He knew that it would appear odd for a President to have been alone with a female intern or low-level staffer on so many occasions. Such an admission might persuade Judge Wright to deny any motion by Ms. Lewinsky to quash her deposition subpoena. It also might prompt Ms. Jones’s attorneys to oppose efforts by Ms. Lewinsky not to be deposed and to ask specific questions of Ms. Lewinsky about the times she was alone with the President. It also might raise questions publicly if and when the President’s deposition became public; at least parts of the deposition were likely to become public at trial, if not at the summary judgment stage.

Because lying about their sexual relationship was insufficient to avoid raising further questions, the President also lied about being alone with Ms. Lewinsky—or at least feigned lack of memory as to specific occurrences.¹⁵¹

B. There is substantial and credible information that the President lied under oath in his civil deposition about gifts he exchanged with Monica Lewinsky.

During his civil deposition, the President also was asked several questions about gifts he and Monica Lewinsky had exchanged. The evidence demonstrates that he answered the questions falsely. As with the questions about being alone, truthful answers to these questions would have raised questions about the nature of the relationship. Such answers also would have been inconsistent with the understanding of the President and Ms. Lewinsky that, in response to her subpoena, Ms. Lewinsky would not produce all of the gifts she had received from the President (an issue discussed more fully in Ground V).

1. The President's Civil Deposition Testimony About His Gifts to Monica Lewinsky

During the President's deposition in the Jones case, Ms. Jones's attorneys asked several questions about whether he had given gifts to Monica Lewinsky.

Q: Well, have you ever given any gifts to Monica Lewinsky?

WJC: I don't recall. Do you know what they were?

Q: A hat pin?

WJC: I don't, I don't remember. But I certainly, I could have.

Q: A book about Walt Whitman?

WJC: I give—let me just say, I give people a lot of gifts, and when people are around I give a lot of things I have at the White House away, so I could have given her a gift, but I don't remember a specific gift.

Q: Do you remember giving her a gold broach?

WJC: No.¹⁵²

2. Evidence that Contradicts the President's Civil Deposition Testimony

(i) Just three weeks before the President's deposition, on December 28, 1997, President Clinton gave Ms. Lewinsky a number of gifts, the largest number he had ever given her.¹⁵³ They included a large Rockettes blanket, a pin of the New York skyline, a marble-like bear's head from Vancouver, a pair of sunglasses, a small box of cherry chocolates, a canvas bag from the Black Dog, and a stuffed animal wearing a T-shirt from the Black Dog.¹⁵⁴ Ms. Lewinsky produced the Rockettes blanket, the bear's head, the Black Dog canvas bag, the Black Dog stuffed animal, and the sunglasses to the OIC on July 29, 1998.¹⁵⁵

¹⁵¹ In criminal law, a feigned lack of memory is sufficient for a perjury conviction. See, e.g., United States v. Chapin, 515 F.2d 1274 (D.C. Cir. 1975); Behrle v. United States, 100 F.2d 174 (D.C. Cir. 1938).

(ii) The evidence also demonstrates that the President gave Ms. Lewinsky a hat pin as a belated Christmas gift on February 28, 1997.¹⁵⁶ The President and Ms. Lewinsky discussed the hatpin on December 28, 1997, after Ms. Lewinsky received a subpoena calling for her to produce all gifts from the President, including any hat pins.¹⁵⁷ In her meeting with the President on December 28, 1997, according to Ms. Lewinsky, “I mentioned that I had been concerned about the hat pin being on the subpoena and he said that that had sort of concerned him also and asked me if I had told anyone that he had given me this hat pin and I said no.”¹⁵⁸ The President’s secretary Betty Currie also testified that she had previously discussed the hat pin with the President.¹⁵⁹

(iii) Ms. Lewinsky testified that the President gave her additional gifts over the course of their relationship, such as a brooch,¹⁶⁰ the book Leaves of Grass by Walt Whitman,¹⁶¹ an Annie Lennox compact disk,¹⁶² and a cigar.¹⁶³

3. President’s Civil Deposition Testimony About Gifts from Monica Lewinsky to the President

When asked at his civil deposition in the Jones case whether Monica Lewinsky had ever given him gifts, President Clinton testified as follows:

Q: Has Monica Lewinsky ever given you any gifts?

WJC: Once or twice. I think she’s given me a book or two.

Q: Did she give you a silver cigar box?

WJC: No.

Q: Did she give you a tie?

WJC: Yes, she has given me a tie before. I believe that’s right. Now, as I said, let me remind you, normally when I get these ties, I get ties, you know, together, and then they’re given to me later, but I believe that she has given me a tie.¹⁶⁴

4. Evidence that Contradicts the President's Testimony

(i) Monica Lewinsky's Testimony

The evidence reveals that Ms. Lewinsky gave the President approximately 38 gifts; she says she almost always brought a gift or two when she visited.¹⁶⁵

a. Ms. Lewinsky testified before the grand jury that she gave the President six neckties.¹⁶⁶

b. Ms. Lewinsky testified that she gave the President a pair of sunglasses on approximately October 22, 1997.¹⁶⁷ The President's attorney, David E. Kendall, stated in a letter on March 16, 1998: "We believe that Ms. Lewinsky might have given the President a few additional items, such as ties and a pair of sunglasses, but we have not been able to locate these items."¹⁶⁸

c. On November 13, 1997, Ms. Lewinsky gave the President an antique paperweight that depicted the White House.¹⁶⁹ Ms. Lewinsky testified that on December 6, 1997, and possibly again on December 28, 1997, she saw this paperweight in the dining room, where the President keeps many items of political memorabilia.¹⁷⁰ The President turned over the paperweight to the OIC in response to a second subpoena calling for it.¹⁷¹

d. Ms. Lewinsky gave the President at least seven books:

- The Presidents of the United States, on January 4, 1998;¹⁷²
- Our Patriotic President: His Life in Pictures, Anecdotes, Sayings, Principles and Biography,¹⁷³ on December 6, 1997;¹⁷⁴

- Oy Vey, in early 1997;¹⁷⁷
- a small golf book, in early 1997;¹⁷⁸ and

5. Grand Jury Testimony of the President and Ms. Currie

When he testified to the grand jury, President Clinton acknowledged giving Monica Lewinsky several gifts, stating that “it was a right thing to do to give her gifts back.”¹⁸² He acknowledged giving her gifts on December 28, 1997,¹⁸³ just three weeks before the civil deposition.

During the criminal investigation, the President has produced seven gifts that Ms. Lewinsky gave him. He testified to the grand jury that Ms. Lewinsky had given him “a tie, a coffee cup, a number of other things I had.”¹⁸⁴ In addition, the President acknowledged that “there were some things that had been in my possession that I no longer had, I believe.”¹⁸⁵

Betty Currie testified that Ms. Lewinsky sent a number of packages for the President—six or eight, she estimated.¹⁸⁶ Ms. Lewinsky also sometimes dropped parcels off or had family members do so.¹⁸⁷ When the packages came to the White House, Ms. Currie would leave the packages from Ms. Lewinsky in the President’s box outside the Oval Office, and “[h]e would pick [them] up.”¹⁸⁸ To the best of her knowledge, such parcels always reached the President: “The President got everything anyone sent him.”¹⁸⁹ Ms. Currie testified that to her knowledge, no one delivered packages or something as many times as Ms. Lewinsky did.¹⁹⁰ from Ms. Lewinsky only “once or twice.”¹⁹² In fact, the evidence demonstrates that they exchanged numerous gifts of various kinds at many points over a lengthy period of time. Indeed, on December 28, only three weeks before the deposition, they had discussed the hat pin. Also on December 28, the President had given Ms. Lewinsky a number of gifts, more than he had ever given her before.

¹⁹¹ In his grand jury testimony, the President said that this question at his civil deposition confused him and that he thought that the questioner was asking whether he could list specific gifts he had given her rather than whether he had ever given Ms. Lewinsky a gift. Clinton 8/17/98 GJ at 51–52. Even if that explanation were credited, the President’s answer to the hat pin question is inaccurate, particularly because he had discussed it with Ms. Lewinsky on December 28, according to her testimony.

A truthful answer to the questions about gifts at the Jones deposition would have raised further questions about the President’s relationship with Monica Lewinsky. The number itself would raise questions about the relationship and prompt further questions about specific gifts; some of the specific gifts (such as Vox and Leaves of Grass) would raise questions whether the relationship was sexual and whether the President had lied in denying that their relationship was sexual. Ms. Lewinsky explained the point: Had they admitted the gifts, it would “at least prompt [the Jones attorneys] to want to question me about what kind of friendship I had with the President and they would want to speculate and they’d leak it and my name would be trashed and he [the President] would be in trouble.”¹⁹³

A truthful answer about the gifts to Ms. Lewinsky also would have raised the question of where they were. Ms. Lewinsky had been subpoenaed for gifts, as the President knew. The President knew also from his conversation with Ms. Lewinsky on December 28, 1997 (an issue discussed more fully in Ground V) that Ms. Lewinsky would not produce all of the gifts she had received from the President.

For those reasons, the President had a clear motive when testifying under oath to lie about the gifts.

IV. THERE IS SUBSTANTIAL AND CREDIBLE INFORMATION THAT THE PRESIDENT LIED UNDER OATH DURING HIS CIVIL DEPOSITION CONCERNING CONVERSATIONS HE HAD WITH MONICA LEWINSKY ABOUT HER INVOLVEMENT IN THE JONES CASE.

President Clinton was asked during his civil deposition whether he had discussed with Ms. Lewinsky the possibility of her testifying in the Jones case. He also was asked whether he knew that she had been subpoenaed at the time he last had spoken to her.

There is substantial and credible information that the President lied under oath in answering these questions. A false statement about these conversations was necessary in order to avoid raising questions whether the President had tampered with a prospective witness in the civil lawsuit against him.

A. CONVERSATIONS WITH MS. LEWINSKY REGARDING THE POSSIBILITY OF HER TESTIFYING IN THE JONES CASE

1. President Clinton's Testimony in His Deposition

In the President's civil deposition, he was asked about any discussions he might have had with Monica Lewinsky about the Jones case:

Q: Have you ever talked to Monica Lewinsky about the possibility that she might be asked to testify in this lawsuit?

[videotape indicates an approximately 14-second pause before answer]

WJC: *I'm not sure, and let me tell you why I'm not sure. It seems to me the, the, the—I want to be as accurate as I can here. Seems to me the last time she was there to see Betty before Christmas we were joking about how you-all [Ms. Jones's attorneys], with the help of the Rutherford Institute, were going to call every woman I'd ever talked to * * * and ask them that, and so I said you [Ms. Lewinsky] would qualify, or something like that. I don't, I don't think we ever had more of a conversation than that about it, but I might have mentioned something to her about it, because when I saw how long the witness list was, or I heard about it, before I saw, but actually by the time I saw it her name was on it, but I think that was after all this had happened. I might have said something like that, so I don't want to say for sure I didn't, because I might have said something like that.*

* * * * *

Q: What, if anything, did Monica Lewinsky say in response?

WJC: Nothing that I remember. Whatever she said, I don't remember. Probably just some predictable thing.¹⁹⁴

¹⁹⁴Clinton 1/17/98 Depo. at 70–71 (emphasis added).

2. Evidence that Contradicts the President's Civil Deposition Testimony

(i) Ms. Lewinsky's Testimony

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she spoke three times to President Clinton about the prospect of testifying in the Jones lawsuit—once (December 17, 1997) after she was on the witness list and twice more (December 28, 1997, and January 5, 1998) after she had been subpoenaed.

a. December 17, 1997, Call. Ms. Lewinsky testified that President Clinton called her at about 2:00 a.m. on December 17, 1997. First, he told her that Ms. Currie's brother had died; then he told Ms. Lewinsky that she was on the witness list in the Jones case. According to Ms. Lewinsky, "[h]e told me that it didn't necessarily mean that I would be subpoenaed, but that that was a possibility, and if I were to be subpoenaed, that I should contact Betty and let Betty know that I had received the subpoena."¹⁹⁵ Ms. Lewinsky said that the President told her that she might be able to sign an affidavit to avoid being deposed.¹⁹⁶ According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President also told her, "You know, you can always say you were coming to see Betty or that you were bringing me letters."¹⁹⁷ Ms. Lewinsky took that statement to be a reminder of the false "cover stories" that they had used earlier in the relationship.¹⁹⁸

b. December 28, 1997, Visit. Ms. Lewinsky was subpoenaed on December 19. At her request, Vernon Jordan told the President that Ms. Lewinsky had been subpoenaed.¹⁹⁹ She then met with President Clinton nine days later on December 28, less than three weeks before the President was deposed.

According to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President discussed the Jones lawsuit and how the Jones lawyers might have learned about her. Ms. Lewinsky said they also discussed the subpoena's requirement that she produce gifts she had received from the President, including specifically a "hat pin."²⁰⁰

Because of their mutual concern about the subpoena, Ms. Lewinsky testified that she asked the President if she should put the gifts away somewhere.²⁰¹ The President responded "I don't know" or "Hmm" or "Let me think about it."²⁰² Later that day, according to Ms. Lewinsky, Ms. Currie called to pick up the gifts, which she then stored under her bed in her home in Virginia.²⁰³ (This issue will be discussed more fully in Ground V below.)

c. January 5, 1998, Call. Ms. Lewinsky also testified that she spoke to the President by telephone on January 5, 1998, and they continued to discuss her role in the Jones case. Ms. Lewinsky expressed concern that, if she were deposed, she might have a difficult time explaining the circumstances of her transfer from the White House to the Pentagon. According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President suggested that she answer by explaining that people in the White House Legislative Affairs office had helped her get the Pentagon job—which Ms. Lewinsky understood to be a misleading answer because she in fact had been transferred as a result of her being around the Oval Office too much.²⁰⁴

(ii) The President's Grand Jury Testimony

When the President testified to the grand jury, the President admitted that Ms. Lewinsky visited him on December 28, 1997,²⁰⁵ and that during that visit, they discussed her involvement in the Jones case:

WJC: * * * I remember a conversation about the possibility of her testifying. I believe it must have occurred on the 28th.

She mentioned to me that she did not want to testify. So, that's how it came up. Not in the context of, I heard you have a subpoena, let's talk about it.

She raised the issue with me in the context of her desire to avoid testifying, which I certainly understood; not only because there were some embarrassing facts about our relationship that were inappropriate, but also because a whole lot of innocent people were being traumatized and dragged through the mud by these Jones lawyers with their dragnet strategy * * *.²⁰⁶

* * * * *
Q: * * * Do you agree that she was upset about being subpoenaed?

WJC: Oh, yes, sir, she was upset. She—well, she—we—she didn't—we didn't talk about a subpoena. But she was upset. She said, I don't want to testify; I know nothing about this; I certainly know nothing about sexual harassment; why do they want me to testify. And I explained to her why they were doing this, and why all these women were on these lists, people that they knew good and well had nothing to do with any sexual harassment.²⁰⁷

3. Summary

There is substantial and credible information that President Clinton lied under oath in his civil deposition in answering “I'm not sure” when asked whether he had talked to Ms. Lewinsky about the prospect of her testifying. In fact, he had talked to Ms. Lewinsky about it on three occasions in the month preceding his civil deposition, as Ms. Lewinsky's testimony makes clear.

The President's motive to lie in his civil deposition on this point is evident. Had he admitted talking to Ms. Lewinsky about the possibility that she might be asked to testify, that would have raised the specter of witness tampering. Such an admission likely would have led Ms. Jones's attorneys to inquire further into that subject with both the President and Ms. Lewinsky. Furthermore, had the President admitted talking to Ms. Lewinsky about her testifying, that conversation would have attracted public inquiry into the conversation and the general relationship between the President and Ms. Lewinsky.

B. There is substantial and credible information that President Clinton lied under oath in his civil deposition when he denied knowing that Ms. Lewinsky had received her subpoena at the time he had last talked to her.

1. Evidence

In his civil deposition, President Clinton testified that the last time he had spoken to Ms. Lewinsky was in December 1997 (the month before the deposition), "[p]robably sometime before Christmas."²⁰⁸ The President was asked:

Q: Did [Ms. Lewinsky] tell you she had been served with a subpoena in this case?

WJC: No. *I don't know if she had been.*²⁰⁹

Vernon Jordan testified that he had told the President about the subpoena on December 19, 1997, after he had talked to Ms. Lewinsky. Ms. Lewinsky confirmed that Mr. Jordan had told her on December 22, 1997, that he (Mr. Jordan) had told the President of her subpoena.²¹⁰

When he testified to the grand jury, the President stated that in his conversation with Ms. Lewinsky on December 28, 1997, "my recollection is I knew by then, of course, that she had gotten a subpoena. And I knew that she was, therefore * * * slated to testify."²¹¹

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she and the President had two conversations after she was subpoenaed: the December 28, 1997, meeting and a January 5, 1998, phone conversation.²¹²

2. Summary

There is substantial and credible information that the President lied under oath in his civil deposition by answering "I don't know if she had been" subpoenaed when describing his last conversation with Ms. Lewinsky. In fact, he knew that she had been subpoenaed. Given that the conversation with Ms. Lewinsky occurred in the few weeks immediately before the President's civil deposition, he could not have forgotten the conversation. As a result, there is no plausible conclusion except that the President intentionally lied in this answer.

During the civil deposition, the President also falsely dated his last conversation with Ms. Lewinsky as "probably sometime before Christmas," which implied that it might have been before the December 19 subpoena. Because Ms. Lewinsky had been subpoenaed on December 19, that false statement about the date of the conversation was a corollary to his other false statement (that he did not know she had been subpoenaed at the time of their last conversation).

The President's motive to lie in his civil deposition on the subpoena issue is evident. Had he admitted talking to Ms. Lewinsky after her subpoena, that would have raised the specter of witness tampering, which could have triggered legal and public scrutiny of the President.

V. THERE IS SUBSTANTIAL AND CREDIBLE INFORMATION THAT PRESIDENT CLINTON ENDEAVORED TO OBSTRUCT JUSTICE BY ENGAGING IN A PATTERN OF ACTIVITY TO CONCEAL EVIDENCE REGARDING HIS RELATIONSHIP WITH MONICA LEWINSKY FROM THE JUDICIAL PROCESS IN THE JONES CASE. THE PATTERN INCLUDED:

(i) concealment of gifts that the President had given Ms. Lewinsky and that were subpoenaed from Ms. Lewinsky in the Jones case; and

(ii) concealment of a note sent by Ms. Lewinsky to the President on January 5, 1998.

From the beginning, President Clinton and Monica Lewinsky hoped and expected that their relationship would remain secret. They took active steps, when necessary, to conceal the relationship. The President testified that “I hoped that this relationship would never become public.”²¹³

Once the discovery process in the Jones case became an issue (particularly after the Supreme Court’s unanimous decision on May 27, 1997, that ordered the case to go forward), their continuing efforts to conceal the relationship took on added legal significance. The risks to the President of disclosure of the relationship dramatically increased.

An effort to obstruct justice by withholding the truth from the legal process—whether by lying under oath, concealing documents, or improperly influencing a witness’s testimony—is a federal crime.²¹⁴ There is substantial and credible information that President Clinton engaged in such efforts to prevent the truth of his relationship with Monica Lewinsky from being revealed in the Jones case.

A. CONCEALMENT OF GIFTS

1. Evidence Regarding Gifts

Ms. Lewinsky testified that in the early morning of December 17, at roughly 2:00 or 2:30 a.m., she received a call from the President.²¹⁵ Among other subjects, the President mentioned that he had Christmas presents for her.²¹⁶

On December 19, 1997, Monica Lewinsky was served with a subpoena in connection with the Jones v. Clinton litigation. The subpoena required her to testify at a deposition on January 23, 1998.²¹⁷ The subpoena also required Ms. Lewinsky to produce “each and every gift including, but not limited to, any and all dresses, accessories, and jewelry, and/or hat pins given to you by, or on behalf of, Defendant Clinton.”²¹⁸ After being served with the subpoena, Ms. Lewinsky became concerned because the list of gifts included the hat pin, which “screamed out at me because that was the first gift that the President had given me.”²¹⁹

Later that same day, December 19, 1997, Ms. Lewinsky met with Vernon Jordan and told him of her concern about the gifts, including the hat pin.²²⁰ During that meeting, Ms. Lewinsky asked Mr. Jordan to inform the President that she had been subpoenaed.²²¹ Mr. Jordan acknowledged that Ms. Lewinsky “was concerned about the subpoena and I think for her the subpoena ipso facto meant trouble.”²²²

Shortly after Christmas, Ms. Lewinsky called Ms. Currie and said that the President had mentioned that he had presents for her.²²³ Ms. Currie called back and told her to come to the White House at 8:30 a.m. on Sunday, December 28, 1997.²²⁴ On December 28, Ms. Lewinsky and the President met in the Oval Office. According to her testimony, Ms. Lewinsky “mentioned that [she] had been concerned about the hat pin being on the subpoena and he said that that had sort of concerned him also and asked [her] if [she] had told anyone that he had given [her] this hat pin and [she] said no.”²²⁵ According to Ms. Lewinsky, she and the President discussed the possibility of moving some of the gifts out of her possession:

[A]t some point I said to him, “Well, you know, should I—maybe I should put the gifts away outside my house somewhere or give them to someone, maybe Betty.” And he sort of said—I think he responded, “I don’t know” or “Let me think about that.” And [we] left that topic.²²⁶

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she was never under the impression from anything the President said that she should turn over to Ms. Jones’s attorneys all the gifts that he had given her.²²⁷

On the 28th, the President also gave Ms. Lewinsky several Christmas gifts. When asked why the President gave her more gifts on December 28 when he understood she was under an obligation to produce gifts in response to the subpoena, Ms. Lewinsky stated:

You know, I can’t answer what [the President] was thinking, but to me, it was—there was never a question in my mind and I—from everything he said to me, I never questioned him, that we were never going to do anything but keep this private, so that meant deny it and that meant do—take whatever appropriate steps needed to be taken, you know, for that to happen * * *. So by turning over all these gifts, it would at least prompt [the Jones attorneys] to want to question me about what kind of friendship I had with the President and they would want to speculate and they'd leak it and my name would be trashed and he [the President] would be in trouble.²²⁸

Ms. Lewinsky testified that a few hours after their meeting on December 28, 1997, Ms. Currie called her.²²⁹ According to Ms. Lewinsky, Ms. Currie said: "I understand you have something to give me.' Or, 'The President said you have something to give me'— [Something] [a]long those lines."²³⁰ In her February 1 handwritten statement to the OIC, which Ms. Lewinsky has testified was truthful, she stated: "Ms. Currie called Ms. L later that afternoon a[nd] said that the Pres. had told her [that] Ms. L wanted her to hold onto something for her. Ms. L boxed up most of the gifts she had received and gave them to Ms. Currie."²³¹

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she understood that Ms. Currie was referring to gifts from the President when she mentioned "something for me."²³² Ms. Lewinsky testified that she was not surprised to receive the call, given her earlier discussion with the President.²³³

Ms. Currie testified that Ms. Lewinsky, not Ms. Currie, placed the call and raised the subject of transferring the gifts. In Ms. Currie's account, Ms. Lewinsky said that she (Ms. Lewinsky) was uncomfortable retaining the gifts herself because "people were asking questions about the stuff she had gotten."²³⁴ Ms. Currie also testified that she did not remember the President telling her that Ms. Lewinsky wanted her to hold some items, and she did not remember later telling the President that she was holding the gifts for Ms. Lewinsky.²³⁵ When asked if a contrary statement by Ms. Lewinsky—indicating that Ms. Currie had in fact spoken to the President about the gift transfer—would be false, Ms. Currie replied: "Then she may remember better than I. I don't remember."²³⁶

According to both Ms. Currie and Ms. Lewinsky, Ms. Currie drove to Ms. Lewinsky's home later on December 28 for only the second time in her life.²³⁷ Ms. Lewinsky gave her a sealed box that contained several gifts Ms. Lewinsky had received from the President, including the hat pin and one of the gifts he had given her that very morning.²³⁸ Ms. Lewinsky wrote "Please do not throw away" on the box.²³⁹ Ms. Currie then took the box and placed it in her home under her bed. Ms. Currie understood that the box contained gifts from the President, although she did not know the specific contents.²⁴⁰ Ms. Lewinsky said that Ms. Currie did not seem

President Clinton testified that he had spoken to Ms. Lewinsky about gifts he had given her, but said the conversation may have occurred before she received the subpoena on December 19. He testified:

*I did have a conversation with Ms. Lewinsky at some time about gifts, the gifts I'd given her. I do not know whether it occurred on the 28th, or whether it occurred earlier. I do not know whether it occurred in person or whether it occurred on the telephone. I have searched my memory for this, because I know it's an important issue. * * * The reason I'm not sure it happened on the 28th is that my recollection is that Ms. Lewinsky said something to me like, what if they ask me about the gifts you've given me. That's the memory I have. That's why I question whether it happened on the 28th, because she had a subpoena with her, request for production. And I told her that if they asked her for gifts, she'd have to give them whatever she had, that that's what the law was.*²⁴⁴

The President denied that he had asked Betty Currie to pick up a box of gifts from Ms. Lewinsky:

Q: After you gave her the gifts on December 28th [1997], did you speak with your secretary, Ms. Currie, and ask her to pick up a box of gifts that were some compilation of gifts that Ms. Lewinsky would have—

WJC: No, sir, I didn't do that.

WJC: I did not do that.²⁴⁵

3. Summary of Gifts

The uncontroverted evidence demonstrates that the President had given gifts to Ms. Lewinsky before December 28, 1997; that the President told Ms. Lewinsky on the phone on December 17, 1997, that he had more gifts for her; that Ms. Lewinsky met with the President at the White House on December 28; that on the 28th, Ms. Lewinsky was concerned about retaining possession of the gifts the President had previously given her because they were under subpoena; that on the 28th, the President gave several Christmas gifts to Ms. Lewinsky; and that after that meeting, Ms. Lewinsky transferred some gifts (including one of the new gifts) to the President's personal secretary, Ms. Currie, who stored them under her bed in her home.

Ms. Lewinsky testified that she spoke to the President on December 28 about the gifts called for by the subpoena—in particular, the hat pin. The President agreed that they talked about gifts, but suggested that the conversation might have taken place before Ms. Lewinsky was subpoenaed on December 19. The President said, however, that his memory is unclear on the timing.²⁴⁷

The testimony conflicts as to what happened when Ms. Lewinsky raised the subject of gifts with the President and what happened later that day. The President testified that he told Ms. Lewinsky that “you have to give them whatever you have.”²⁴⁸ According to Ms. Lewinsky, she raised the possibility of hiding the gifts, and the President offered a somewhat neutral response.

Ms. Lewinsky testified that Betty Currie called her to retrieve the gifts soon after Ms. Lewinsky's conversation with the President. Ms. Currie says that she believes that Ms. Lewinsky called her about the gifts, but she says she has a dim memory of the events.²⁴⁹

The central factual question is whether the President orchestrated or approved the concealment of the gifts. The reasonable inference from the evidence is that he did.

1. The witnesses disagree about whether Ms. Currie called Ms. Lewinsky or Ms. Lewinsky called Ms. Currie. That issue is relevant because Ms. Currie would not have called Ms. Lewinsky about the gifts unless the President directed her to do so. Indeed, because she did not know of the gifts issue, there is no other way that Ms. Currie could have known to make such a call unless the President told her to do so.

Ms. Lewinsky's testimony on the issue is consistent and unequivocal. In her February 1, 1998, handwritten statement, she wrote: “Ms. Currie called Ms. L later that afternoon a[nd] said that the Pres. had told her Ms. L wanted her to hold onto something for her.”²⁵⁰ In her grand jury testimony, Ms. Lewinsky said that several hours after she left the White House, Ms. Currie called and said something along the lines of “The President said you have something to give me.”²⁵¹

²⁴⁸ Id. at 46.

²⁴⁹ Ms. Currie testified that she was taking St. John's Wort to try to remember, but it was not helping. Currie 7/22/98 GJ at 172.

²⁵¹ Lewinsky 8/6/98 GJ at 154–55; see also Lewinsky 8/20/98 GJ at 70–72.

Ms. Currie's testimony is contrary but less clear. Ms. Currie has stated that Ms. Lewinsky called her, but her memory of the conversation, in contrast to Ms. Lewinsky's, generally has been hazy and uncertain. As to whether she had talked to the President about the gifts, for example, Ms. Currie initially said she had not, but then said that Ms. Lewinsky (who said that Ms. Currie had talked to the President) "may remember better than I. I don't remember."²⁵²

Ms. Lewinsky's testimony makes more sense than Ms. Currie's testimony. First, Ms. Lewinsky stated that if Ms. Currie had not called, Ms. Lewinsky simply would have kept the gifts (and perhaps thrown them away).²⁵³ She would not have produced the gifts to Ms. Jones's attorneys. And she would not have given them to a friend or mother because she did not want to get anyone else involved.²⁵⁴ She was not looking for someone else to take them.²⁵⁵

Also, Ms. Currie drove to Ms. Lewinsky's house to pick up the gifts. That was only the second time that Ms. Currie had ever gone there.²⁵⁶ More generally, the person making the extra effort (in this case, Ms. Currie) is ordinarily the person requesting the favor.

2. Even if Ms. Lewinsky is mistaken and she did call Ms. Currie first, the evidence still leads clearly to the conclusion that the President orchestrated this transfer.

First, it is unlikely that Ms. Lewinsky would have involved Ms. Currie in this matter unless the President had indicated his assent when Ms. Lewinsky raised the issue with him earlier in the day. Indeed, there is a logical flaw in the President's story: If the President had truly suggested that Ms. Lewinsky produce the gifts to Ms. Jones's attorneys, Ms. Lewinsky obviously would not have turned around and called the President's personal secretary to give the gifts to her, in direct contravention of the President's instruction.

Second, it also is unlikely that Ms. Currie would have driven to Ms. Lewinsky's home, retrieved the gifts from Ms. Lewinsky, and stored them under her bed at home without being asked to do so by the President—at least, without checking with him. It would have been out of character for Ms. Currie to have taken such an action without the President's approval. For example, when helping Ms. Lewinsky in her job search, Ms. Currie said that she told the President of her plans and agreed that she "would not have tried to get Ms. Lewinsky a job if * * * [I] thought the President didn't want [me] to."²⁵⁷

3. Even if the President did not orchestrate the transfer to Ms. Currie, there is still substantial evidence that he encouraged the concealment and non-production of the gifts by Ms. Lewinsky. The President "hoped that this relationship would never become public.”²⁵⁸ The President gave Ms. Lewinsky new gifts on December 28, 1997. Given his desire to conceal the relationship, it makes no sense that the President would have given Ms. Lewinsky more gifts on the 28th unless he and Ms. Lewinsky understood that she would not produce all of her gifts in response to her subpoena.

²⁵⁵ Id. In addition, under her immunity agreement, Ms. Lewinsky has no apparent motive to shift blame on this issue. In fact, just the opposite. If the truth were that she had called Ms. Currie, she could have said as much, and it would not have affected Ms. Lewinsky's legal rights or obligations at all. Moreover, she stated that does not want to harm the President with her truthful testimony. Lewinsky 8/26/98 Depo. at 69.

4. The President had a motive to orchestrate the concealment of gifts, whether accomplished through Ms. Currie indirectly or through Ms. Lewinsky directly. The President knew that Ms. Lewinsky was concerned about the subpoena. Both of them were concerned that the gifts might raise questions about the relationship. By confirming that the gifts would not be produced, the President ensured that these questions would not arise.

The concealment of the gifts also ensured that the President could provide false and misleading statements about the gifts under oath at his deposition (as he did) without being concerned that Ms. Lewinsky might have produced gifts that the President was denying (or minimizing the number of). If Ms. Lewinsky had produced to Ms. Jones’s attorneys all of the gifts that she had given to Ms. Currie, then the President could not plausibly have said “I don’t recall” in response to the question, “[H]ave you ever given any gifts to Monica Lewinsky?” He could not have said, “I don’t remember a specific gift.”²⁵⁹ Indeed, unless the President knew that Ms. Lewinsky had not complied with the subpoena, it is unlikely he would have risked lying about the number and nature of the gifts he had given her.

In analyzing the evidence on this issue, it also bears mention that President Clinton likely operated no differently with respect to the gifts than he did with respect to testimony. It is clear that he lied under oath and that Ms. Lewinsky filed a false affidavit after the President suggested she file an affidavit. So there is little reason that he would not have attempted to ensure (whether directly or subtly) that Ms. Lewinsky conceal the gifts as a corollary to their mutual lies under oath. (Also, it was the President’s pattern to use Ms. Currie as an intermediary in dealing with Ms. Lewinsky.²⁶⁰)

The President’s apparent response to all of this is that Ms. Lewinsky on her own contacted Ms. Currie and involved her in this endeavor to hide subpoenaed evidence, and that Ms. Currie complied without checking with the President. Based on the testimony and behavior of both Ms. Currie and Ms. Lewinsky, those inferences fall outside the range of reasonable possibility.

There is substantial and credible information, therefore, that the President endeavored to obstruct justice by participating in the concealment of subpoenaed evidence.

B. JANUARY 5, 1998, NOTE TO THE PRESIDENT

1. Evidence Regarding the January 5, 1998 Note

On December 16, 1997, the President was served by Ms. Jones's attorneys with a request for production of documents, including documents relating to "Monica Lewinsky" [sic]. The request placed upon the President a continuing obligation to preserve and produce responsive documents. Notes and letters from Ms. Lewinsky were responsive and relevant.

On January 4, 1998, Ms. Lewinsky left a book for the President with Ms. Currie.²⁶¹ Ms. Lewinsky had enclosed in the book a romantic note that she had written, inspired by a recent viewing of the movie Titanic.²⁶² In the note, Ms. Lewinsky told the President that she wanted to have sexual intercourse with him, at least once.²⁶³

On January 5, in the course of discussing her affidavit and possible testimony in a phone conversation with the President, Ms. Lewinsky says she told the President, "I shouldn't have written some of those things in the note."²⁶⁴ According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President said that he agreed and that she should not write those kinds of things on paper.²⁶⁵

On January 15, President Clinton served responses to Ms. Jones's second set of document requests, which again asked for documents that related to "Monica Lewinsky." The President stated that he had "no documents" responsive to this request.²⁶⁶

2. President Clinton's Testimony

The President remembered the book Ms. Lewinsky had given him about the Presidents and testified that he "did like it a lot."²⁶⁷ President Clinton testified that he did not recall a romantic note enclosed in the book or when he had received it.²⁶⁸

3. Summary on January 5, 1998, Note

The request for production of documents that the President received from Ms. Jones's attorneys called for all documents reflecting communications between him and Ms. Lewinsky. The note given to him by Ms. Lewinsky on January 5, 1998, fell within that category and would have been revealing about the relationship. Indeed, had the note been produced, the President might have been foreclosed from denying a sexual relationship at his deposition. Based on Ms. Lewinsky's testimony, there is substantial and credible information that the President concealed or destroyed this note at a time when such documents were called for by the request for production of documents.²⁶⁹

VI. THERE IS SUBSTANTIAL AND CREDIBLE INFORMATION THAT

- (i) President Clinton and Ms. Lewinsky had an understanding that they would lie under oath in the Jones case about their relationship; and
- (ii) President Clinton endeavored to obstruct justice by suggesting that Ms. Lewinsky file an affidavit so that she would not be deposed, she would not contradict his testimony, and he could attempt to avoid questions about Ms. Lewinsky at his deposition.

Based on their conversations and their past practice, both the President and Ms. Lewinsky understood that they would lie under oath in the Jones case about their sexual relationship, as part of a scheme to obstruct justice in the Jones case. In pursuing this effort:

- the President suggested that Monica Lewinsky file an affidavit, which he knew would be false;
- the President had an interest in Ms. Lewinsky's false affidavit because it would "lock in" her testimony, allowing the President to deny the sexual relationship under oath without fear of contradiction;
- Ms. Lewinsky signed and, on January 16, sent to the Court the false affidavit denying a sexual relationship with the President as part of a motion to quash her deposition subpoena;
- the President's attorney used the affidavit to object to questions about Ms. Lewinsky at his January 17 deposition; and
- when that failed, the President also lied under oath about the relationship with Ms. Lewinsky at his civil deposition, including by the use of "cover stories" that he and Ms. Lewinsky had devised.

A. EVIDENCE REGARDING AFFIDAVIT AND USE OF AFFIDAVIT

Monica Lewinsky testified that President Clinton called her at around 2:00 or 2:30 a.m. on December 17, 1997,²⁷⁰ and told her that her name was on the Jones case witness list.²⁷¹ As noted in her February 1 handwritten statement: "When asked what to do if she was subpoenaed, the Pres. suggested she could sign an affidavit.* * *"²⁷² Ms. Lewinsky said she is "100% sure" that the President suggested that she might want to sign an affidavit.²⁷³

Ms. Lewinsky understood the President's advice to mean that she might be able to execute an affidavit that would not disclose the true nature of their relationship. In order "to prevent me from being deposed,” she said she would need an affidavit that “could range from anywhere between maybe just somehow mentioning, you know, innocuous things or going as far as maybe having to deny any kind of relationship.”²⁷⁴

Ms. Lewinsky has stated that the President never explicitly told her to lie. Instead, as she explained, they both understood from their conversations that they would continue their pattern of covering up and lying about the relationship. In that regard, the President never said they must now tell the truth under oath; to the contrary, as Ms. Lewinsky stated:

[I]t wasn't as if the President called me and said, “You know, Monica, you're on the witness list, this is going to be really hard for us, we're going to have to tell the truth and be humiliated in front of the entire world about what we've done,” which I would have fought him on probably. *That was different. And by him not calling me and saying that, you know, I knew what that meant.*²⁷⁵

Ms. Jones's lawyers served Ms. Lewinsky with a subpoena on December 19, 1997. Ms. Lewinsky contacted Vernon Jordan, who in turn put her in contact with attorney Frank Carter.²⁷⁶ Based on the information that Ms. Lewinsky provided, Mr. Carter prepared an affidavit which stated: “I have never had a sexual relationship with the President.”²⁷⁷

After Mr. Carter drafted the affidavit, Ms. Lewinsky spoke to the President by phone on January 5th.²⁷⁸ She asked the President if he wanted to see the draft affidavit. According to Ms. Lewinsky, the President replied that he did not need to see it because he had already “seen 15 others.”²⁷⁹

Mr. Jordan confirmed that President Clinton knew that Ms. Lewinsky planned to execute an affidavit denying a sexual relationship.²⁸⁰ Mr. Jordan further testified that he informed President Clinton when Ms. Lewinsky signed the affidavit.²⁸¹ Ms. Lewinsky's affidavit was sent to the federal court in Arkansas on January 16, 1998—the day before the President's deposition—as part of her motion to quash the deposition subpoena.

Two days before the President's deposition, his lawyer, Robert Bennett, obtained a copy of Ms. Lewinsky's affidavit from Mr. Carter.²⁸² At the President's deposition, Ms. Jones's counsel asked questions about the President's relationship with Ms. Lewinsky. Mr. Bennett objected to the “innuendo” of the questions, noting that Ms. Lewinsky had signed an affidavit denying a sexual relationship, which according to Mr. Bennett, indicated that “there is absolutely no sex of any kind in any manner, shape or form.”²⁸³ Mr.

Bennett said that the President was “fully aware of Ms. Lewinsky’s affidavit.”²⁸⁴ Mr. Bennett affirmatively used the affidavit in an effort to cut off questioning. The President said nothing—even though, as he knew, the affidavit was false. Judge Wright overruled the objection and allowed the questioning to continue.

Later, Mr. Bennett read Ms. Lewinsky’s affidavit denying a “sexual relationship” to the President and asked him: “Is that a true and accurate statement as far as you know it?” The President answered: “That is absolutely true.”²⁸⁵

B. SUMMARY OF PRESIDENT’S GRAND JURY TESTIMONY

The President told the grand jury: “[D]id I hope [Ms. Lewinsky would] be able to get out of testifying on an affidavit? Absolutely. Did I want her to execute a false affidavit? No, I did not.”²⁸⁶ The President did not explain how a full and truthful affidavit—for example, an affidavit admitting that they engaged in oral sex and that Vernon Jordan had been involved, at the President’s request, in late 1997 and early 1998 in obtaining Ms. Lewinsky a job—would have helped her avoid a deposition.

When questioned about his phone conversation with Ms. Lewinsky on December 17, 1997—during which the President suggested filing an affidavit—the President testified that he did not remember exactly what he had said.²⁸⁷ The President also maintained that Ms. Lewinsky’s affidavit, as it ultimately was filed denying a “sexual relationship,” was not necessarily inaccurate. He testified that, depending on Ms. Lewinsky’s state of mind, her statement denying a sexual relationship could have been true.

I believe at the time that she filled out this affidavit, *if she believed that the definition of sexual relationship was two people having intercourse, then this is accurate. And I believe that is the definition that most ordinary Americans would give it.*²⁸⁸

At his grand jury appearance, the President also was asked about his counsel’s statement to Judge Wright that Ms. Lewinsky’s affidavit denying a “sexual relationship” was equivalent to saying “there is absolutely no sex of any kind in any manner, shape or form” with President Clinton. Given the President’s interpretation of the term “sexual relationship” to require sexual intercourse, the President was asked how he lawfully could have sat silent while his attorney—in the President’s presence and on his behalf—made a false statement to a United States District Judge in an effort to forestall further questioning. The President offered several responses.

First, the President maintained that he was not paying “much attention” when Mr. Bennett said that there is “absolutely no sex of any kind” between the President and Ms. Lewinsky.²⁸⁹ The President further stated: “That moment, that whole argument just passed me by. I was a witness.”²⁹⁰ The President’s explanation is difficult to reconcile with the videotape of the deposition, which shows that the President was looking in Mr. Bennett’s direction when his counsel made this statement.

Alternatively, the President contended that when Mr. Bennett said that “there is absolutely no sex of any kind,” Mr. Bennett was speaking only in the present tense and thus was making a completely true statement. The President further stated: “It depends on what the meaning of the word ‘is’ is,”²⁹¹ and that “actually, in the present tense that is an accurate statement.”²⁹² Before the grand jury, counsel for the OIC then asked the President: “Do you mean today that because you were not engaging in sexual activity with Ms. Lewinsky during the deposition that the statement of Mr. Bennett might be literally true?”²⁹³ The President responded: “No, sir. I mean that at the time of the deposition, it had been—that was well beyond any point of improper contact between me and Ms. Lewinsky.”²⁹⁴ The President’s suggestion that he might have engaged in such a detailed parsing of the words at his deposition is at odds with his assertion that the “whole argument passed me by.”

Finally, the President took issue with the notion that he had any duty to prevent his attorney from making a false statement to Judge Wright: “Mr. Bennett was representing me. I wasn’t representing him.”²⁹⁵ That is a truism. Yet when a witness is knowingly responsible for a misstatement of fact to a federal judge that misleads the Court and attempts to prevent questioning on a relevant subject, that conduct rises to the level of an obstruction of justice.

C. EVIDENCE REGARDING COVER STORIES

The affidavit was not the only part of the scheme in which both the President and Ms. Lewinsky would lie under oath. Ms. Lewinsky testified that, as part of their mutual concealment efforts, she and President Clinton formulated “cover stories” to explain Ms. Lewinsky’s presence in the West Wing and Oval Office. When Ms. Lewinsky worked at the White House, she and the President agreed that Ms. Lewinsky would tell people that she was coming to the Oval Office to deliver papers or to have papers signed, when in truth she was going to the Oval Office to have a sexual encounter with the President.²⁹⁶

While employed at the White House, Ms. Lewinsky used this cover story on several occasions.²⁹⁷ It worked: Several Secret Service officers testified that they understood that Ms. Lewinsky was at the Oval Office to deliver or to pick up papers.²⁹⁸ In fact, however, Ms. Lewinsky stated that her White House job never required her to deliver papers or obtain the President's signature, although she carried papers as a prop.²⁹⁹

After she was transferred to the Pentagon, Ms. Lewinsky testified that she and the President formulated a second "cover story": that Ms. Lewinsky was going to the White House to visit Betty Currie rather than the President. Ms. Lewinsky testified that she and the President discussed how "Betty always needed to be the one to clear me in so that, you know, I could always say I was coming to see Betty."³⁰⁰ Ms. Lewinsky testified that she met with the President privately on ten occasions after she left her job at the White House.³⁰¹ Ms. Currie signed her in for each of those private visits.³⁰²

Ms. Lewinsky has stated that her true purpose in visiting the White House on these occasions was to see President Clinton, not Ms. Currie.³⁰³ President Clinton agreed that "just about every time" that Ms. Lewinsky came to see Ms. Currie when he was there, Ms. Lewinsky saw him as well.³⁰⁴

Ms. Lewinsky testified that President Clinton encouraged her to continue to use the cover stories to conceal their relationship after her name appeared on the witness list in the Jones case. In her early-morning phone conversation with President Clinton on December 17, 1997—the same conversation in which the President told her that her name was on the witness list and suggested that she file an affidavit if subpoenaed³⁰⁵—Ms. Lewinsky discussed cover stories with the President:

ML: At some point in the conversation, and I don't know if it was before or after the subject of the affidavit came up, he sort of said, "You know, you can always say you were coming to see Betty or that you were bringing me letters." Which I understood was really a reminder of things that we had discussed before.

Q: So when you say things you had discussed, sort of ruses that you had developed.

ML: Right. I mean, this was—this was something that—that was instantly familiar to me.

Q: Right.

ML: And I knew exactly what he meant.

Q: Had you talked with him earlier about these false explanations about what you were doing visiting him on several occasions?

ML: Several occasions throughout the entire relationship. Yes. *It was the pattern of the relationship, to sort of conceal it.*³⁰⁶

President Clinton used those same deceptive cover stories during his deposition in the Jones case. In the civil deposition, when asked if he had met with Ms. Lewinsky “several times” while she worked at the White House, the President responded that he had seen her on two or three occasions during the government shutdown, “and then when she worked at the White House, I think there was one or two other times when she brought some documents to me.”³⁰⁷ When asked if he was ever alone with Ms. Lewinsky in the Oval Office, the President stated:

[W]hen she worked at the legislative affairs office, they always had somebody there on the weekends. * * * Sometimes they'd bring me things on the weekends. In that case, whatever time she would be in there, drop it off, exchange a few words and go, she was there. * * * It's possible that she, in, while she was working there, brought something to me and that at the time she brought it to me, she was the only person there, That's possible.³⁰⁸

The pattern of devising cover stories in an effort to forestall an inquiry into the relationship continued even after Ms. Lewinsky was subpoenaed to testify. On January 5, 1998, she met with her attorney, Frank Carter, and discussed questions that she might be asked at a deposition. One of the questions was how she had obtained her Pentagon job. Ms. Lewinsky worried that if the Jones lawyers checked with the White House about the transfer, some at the White House would say unflattering things about why she had been terminated.³⁰⁹ Ms. Lewinsky spoke to President Clinton on the phone that evening and asked for advice on how to answer the question. Ms. Lewinsky testified that the President responded, “[Y]ou could always say that the people in Legislative Affairs got it for you or helped you get it”—a story that Ms. Lewinsky stated was misleading because Ms. Lewinsky in fact had been transferred because she was around the Oval Office too much.³¹⁰ President Clinton knew the truth.

D. THE PRESIDENT'S GRAND JURY TESTIMONY ON COVER STORIES

The President testified that before he knew that Ms. Lewinsky was a witness in the Jones case, he “might well” have told Ms. Lewinsky that she could offer the cover stories if questioned about her presence in the West Wing and Oval Office:

Q: Did you ever say anything like that, you can always say that you were coming to see Betty or bringing me letters? Was that part of any kind of a, anything you said to her or a cover story, before you had any idea she was going to be part of Paula Jones?

WJC: I might well have said that.

Q: Okay.

WJC: Because I certainly didn't want this to come out, if I could help it. And I was concerned about that. I was embarrassed about it. I knew it was wrong.³¹¹

However, no doubt aware of the significance of the question, the President testified that he did not remember whether he had discussed the cover stories with Ms. Lewinsky during the December 17, 1997, conversation,³¹² or at any time after Ms. Lewinsky's name appeared on the Jones witness list:

Q: Did you tell [Ms. Lewinsky] anytime in December something to that effect: You know, you can always say that you were coming to see Betty or you were bringing me letters? Did you say that, or anything like that, in December '97 or January '98, to Monica Lewinsky?

WJC: Well, that's a very broad question. I do not recall saying anything like that in connection with her testimony. I could tell you what I do remember saying, if you want to know. But I don't—we might have talked about what to do in a nonlegal context at some point in the past, but I have no specific memory of that conversation.

I do remember what I said to her about the possible testimony.

Q: Did you say anything like [the cover stories] once you knew or thought she might be a witness in the Jones case? Did you repeat the statement, or something like it to her?

WJC: Well, again, I don't recall, and I don't recall whether I might have done something like that, for example, if somebody says, what if the reporters ask me this, that or the other thing. I can tell you this: In the context of whether she could be a witness, I have a recollection that she asked me, well, what do I do if I get called as a witness, and I said, you have to get a lawyer. And that's all I said. And I never asked her to lie.

Q: Did you tell her to tell the truth?

WJC: Well, I think the implication was she would tell the truth.³¹³

E. SUMMARY

There is substantial and credible information that the President and Ms. Lewinsky reached an understanding that both of them would lie under oath when asked whether they had a sexual relationship (a conspiracy to obstruct justice or to commit perjury, in criminal law terms). Indeed, a tacit or express agreement to make false statements would have been an essential part of their December and January discussions, lest one of the two testify truthfully in the Jones case and thereby incriminate the other as a perjurer.

There also is substantial and credible information that President Clinton endeavored to obstruct justice by suggesting that Ms. Lewinsky file an affidavit to avoid her deposition, which would "lock in" her testimony under oath, and to attempt to avoid ques-

³¹³ Clinton 8/17/98 GJ at 118, 119-20 (emphasis added). tions at his own deposition—all to impede the gathering of discoverable evidence in the Jones v. Clinton litigation.³¹⁴

During the course of their relationship, the President and Ms. Lewinsky also discussed and used cover stories to justify her presence in and around the Oval Office area. The evidence indicates—given Ms. Lewinsky’s unambiguous testimony and the President’s lack of memory, as well as the fact that they both planned to lie under oath—that the President suggested the continued use of the cover stories even after Ms. Lewinsky was named as a potential witness in the Jones litigation. At no time did the President tell Ms. Lewinsky to abandon these stories and to tell the truth about her visits, nor did he ever indicate to her that she should tell the truth under oath about the relationship. While the President testified that he could not remember such conversations about the cover stories, he had repeated the substance of the cover stories in his Jones deposition. The President’s use of false cover stories in testimony under oath in his Jones deposition strongly corroborates Ms. Lewinsky’s testimony that he suggested them to her on December 17 as a means of avoiding disclosure of the truth of their relationship.

³¹⁴The OIC is aware of no evidence that Mr. Bennett knew that Ms. Lewinsky’s affidavit was false at the time of the President’s deposition.

VII. THERE IS SUBSTANTIAL AND CREDIBLE INFORMATION THAT PRESIDENT CLINTON ENDEAVORED TO OBSTRUCT JUSTICE BY HELPING MS. LEWINSKY OBTAIN A JOB IN NEW YORK AT A TIME WHEN SHE WOULD HAVE BEEN A WITNESS AGAINST HIM WERE SHE TO TELL THE TRUTH DURING THE JONES CASE.

The President had an incentive to keep Ms. Lewinsky from jeopardizing the secrecy of the relationship. That incentive grew once the Supreme Court unanimously decided in May 1997 that the case and discovery process were to go forward.

At various times during the Jones discovery process, the President and those working on his behalf devoted substantial time and attention to help Ms. Lewinsky obtain a job in the private sector.

A. EVIDENCE

The entire saga of Ms. Lewinsky's job search and the President's assistance in that search is discussed in detail in the Narrative section of this Referral. We summarize and analyze the key events and dates here.

Ms. Lewinsky first mentioned her desire to move to New York in a letter to the President on July 3, 1997. The letter recounted her frustration that she had not received an offer to return to work at the White House.³¹⁵

On October 1, the President was served with interrogatories asking about his sexual relationships with women other than Mrs. Clinton.³¹⁶ On October 7, 1997, Ms. Lewinsky couriered a letter expressing dissatisfaction with her job search to the President.³¹⁷ In response, Ms. Lewinsky said she received a late-night call from President Clinton on October 9, 1997. She said that the President told her he would start helping her find a job in New York.³¹⁸

The following Saturday, October 11, 1997, Ms. Lewinsky met with President Clinton alone in the Oval Office dining room from 9:36 a.m. until about 10:54 a.m. In that meeting, she furnished the President a list of New York jobs in which she was interested.³¹⁹ Ms. Lewinsky mentioned to the President that she would need a reference from someone in the White House; the President said he would take care of it.³²⁰ Ms. Lewinsky also suggested to the President that Vernon Jordan might be able to help her, and President

Clinton agreed.³²¹ Immediately after the meeting, President Clinton spoke with Mr. Jordan by telephone.³²²

According to White House Chief of Staff Erskine Bowles, at some time in the summer or fall of 1997, President Clinton raised the subject of Monica Lewinsky and stated that “she was unhappy where she was working and wanted to come back and work at the OEOB [Old Executive Office Building]; and could we take a look.”³²³ Mr. Bowles referred the matter to Deputy Chief of Staff John Podesta.³²⁴

Mr. Podesta said he asked Betty Currie to have Ms. Lewinsky call him, but heard nothing until about October 1997, when Ms. Currie told him that Ms. Lewinsky was looking for opportunities in New York.³²⁵ The Ambassador to the United Nations, Bill Richardson, said that Mr. Podesta told him that Ms. Currie had a friend looking for a position in New York.³²⁶

According to Ms. Lewinsky, Ambassador Richardson called her on October 21, 1997,³²⁷ and interviewed her soon thereafter. She was then offered a position at the UN.³²⁸ Ms. Lewinsky was unenthusiastic.³²⁹ During the latter part of October 1997, the President and Ms. Lewinsky discussed enlisting Vernon Jordan to aid in pursuing private-sector possibilities.³³⁰

On November 5, 1997, Ms. Lewinsky met Mr. Jordan in his law office. Mr. Jordan told Ms. Lewinsky that she came “highly recommended.”³³¹ Ms. Lewinsky explained that she hoped to move to New York, and went over her list of possible employers.³³² Mr. Jordan telephoned President Clinton shortly after the meeting.³³³

Ms. Lewinsky had no contact with the President or Mr. Jordan for another month.³³⁴ On December 5, 1997, however, the parties in the Jones case exchanged witness lists. Ms. Jones’s attorneys listed Ms. Lewinsky as a potential witness. The President testified that he learned that Ms. Lewinsky was on the list late in the day on December 6.³³⁵

The effort to obtain a job for Ms. Lewinsky then intensified. On December 7, President Clinton met with Mr. Jordan at the White

Mr. Jordan gave her the names of some of his business contacts.³³⁷ He then made calls to contacts at MacAndrews & Forbes (the parent corporation of Revlon), American Express, and Young & Rubicam.³³⁸

Mr. Jordan also telephoned President Clinton to keep him informed of the efforts to help Ms. Lewinsky. Mr. Jordan testified that President Clinton was aware that people were trying to get jobs for her, that Mr. Podesta was trying to help her, that Bill Richardson was trying to help her, but that she wanted to work in the private sector.³³⁹

On the same day of Ms. Lewinsky's meeting with Mr. Jordan, December 11, Judge Wright ordered President Clinton, over his objection, to answer certain written interrogatories as part of the discovery process in Jones. Those interrogatories required, among other things, the President to identify any government employees since 1986 with whom he had engaged in sexual relations (a term undefined for purposes of the interrogatory).³⁴⁰ On December 16, the President's attorneys received a request for production of documents that mentioned Monica Lewinsky by name.

On December 17, 1997, according to Ms. Lewinsky, President Clinton called her in the early morning and told her that she was on the witness list, and they discussed their cover stories.³⁴¹ On December 18 and December 23, she interviewed for jobs with New York-based companies that had been contacted by Mr. Jordan.³⁴² On December 19, Ms. Lewinsky was served with a deposition subpoena by Ms. Jones's lawyers.³⁴³ On December 22, 1997, Mr. Jordan took her to her new attorney; she and Mr. Jordan discussed the subpoena, the Jones case, and her job search during the course of the ride.³⁴⁴

The President answered the "other women" interrogatory on December 23, 1997, by declaring under oath: "None."³⁴⁵

On Sunday, December 28, 1997, Monica Lewinsky and the President met in the Oval Office.³⁴⁶ During that meeting, the President and Ms. Lewinsky discussed both her move to New York and her involvement in the Jones suit.³⁴⁷

On January 5, 1998, Ms. Lewinsky declined the United Nations offer.³⁴⁸ On January 7, 1998, Ms. Lewinsky signed the affidavit denying the relationship with President Clinton (she had talked on

The next day, on January 8, 1998, Ms. Lewinsky interviewed in New York with MacAndrews & Forbes, a company recommended by Vernon Jordan. The interview went poorly. Mr. Jordan then called Ronald Perelman, the Chairman of the Board at MacAndrews & Forbes. Mr. Perelman said Ms. Lewinsky should not worry, and that someone would call her back for another interview. Mr. Jordan relayed this message to Ms. Lewinsky, and someone called back that day.³⁵¹

Ms. Lewinsky interviewed again the next morning, and a few hours later received an informal offer for a position.³⁵² She told Mr. Jordan of the offer, and Mr. Jordan then notified President Clinton with the news: “Mission accomplished.”³⁵³

On January 12, 1998, Ms. Jones’s attorneys informed Judge Wright that they might call Monica Lewinsky as a trial witness.³⁵⁴ Judge Wright stated that she would allow witnesses with whom the President had worked, such as Ms. Lewinsky, to be trial witnesses.³⁵⁵

In a call on January 13, 1998, a Revlon employee formalized the job offer, and asked Ms. Lewinsky to provide references.³⁵⁶ Either that day or the next, President Clinton told Erskine Bowles that Ms. Lewinsky “had found a job in the * * * private sector, and she had listed John Hilley as a reference, and could we see if he could recommend her, if asked.”³⁵⁷ Thereafter, Mr. Bowles took the President’s request to Deputy Chief of Staff John Podesta, who in turn spoke to Mr. Hilley about writing a letter of recommendation. After speaking with Mr. Podesta, Mr. Hilley agreed to write such a letter, but cautioned it would be a “generic” one.³⁵⁸ On January 14, at approximately 11:17 a.m., Ms. Lewinsky faxed her letter of acceptance to Revlon and listed Mr. Hilley as a reference.³⁵⁹

On January 15, the President responded to the December 15 request for production of documents relating to Monica Lewinsky by answering “none.” On January 16, Ms. Lewinsky’s attorney sent to the District Court in the Jones case her affidavit denying a “sexual relationship” with the President.³⁶⁰ The next day, on January 17, the President was deposed and his attorney used her affidavit as the President similarly denied a “sexual relationship.”

B. SUMMARY

When a party in a lawsuit (or investigation) provides job or financial assistance to a witness, a question arises as to possible witness tampering. The critical question centers on the intent of the party providing the assistance. Direct evidence of that intent often is unavailable. Indeed, in some cases, the witness receiving the job assistance may not even know that the party providing the assistance was motivated by a desire to stay on good terms with the witness during the pending legal proceeding.³⁶¹ Similarly, others who are enlisted in the party's effort to influence the witness's testimony by providing job assistance may not be aware of the party's motivation and intent.

One can draw inferences about the party's intent from circumstantial evidence. In this case, the President assisted Ms. Lewinsky in her job search in late 1997, at a time when she would have become a witness harmful to him in the Jones case were she to testify truthfully. The President did not act half-heartedly. His assistance led to the involvement of the Ambassador to the United Nations, one of the country's leading business figures (Mr. Perelman), and one of the country's leading attorneys (Vernon Jordan).

The question, therefore, is whether the President's efforts in obtaining a job for Ms. Lewinsky were to influence her testimony³⁶² or simply to help an ex-intimate without concern for her testimony. Three key facts are essential in analyzing his actions: (i) the chronology of events, (ii) the fact that the President and Ms. Lewinsky both intended to lie under oath about the relationship, and (iii) the fact that it was critical for the President that Ms. Lewinsky lie under oath.

There is substantial and credible information that the President assisted Ms. Lewinsky in her job search motivated at least in part by his desire to keep her "on the team" in the Jones litigation.

³⁶¹ The arrangement may not be explicitly spelled out. In this case, for example, there is no evidence that Ms. Lewinsky received an explicit proposal where someone said, "I'll give you a job if you lie under oath."

³⁶² In a recorded conversation, Ms. Lewinsky discussed the job assistance various individuals, including Vernon Jordan, gave Webster Hubbell, and she expressed her concern that someone could similarly consider the assistance she was provided as improper in some manner: "I think somebody could construe, okay? Somebody could construe or say, 'Well, they gave her a job to shut her up. They made her happy.'" T2 at 11.

VIII. THERE IS SUBSTANTIAL AND CREDIBLE INFORMATION THAT THE PRESIDENT LIED UNDER OATH IN DESCRIBING HIS CONVERSATIONS WITH VERNON JORDAN ABOUT MS. LEWINSKY.

President Clinton was asked during his civil deposition whether he had talked to Mr. Jordan about Ms. Lewinsky's involvement in the Jones case. The President stated that he knew Mr. Jordan had talked to Ms. Lewinsky about her move to New York, but stated that he did not recall whether Mr. Jordan had talked to Ms. Lewinsky about her involvement in the Jones case. The testimony was false. A lie under oath about these conversations was necessary to avoid inquiry into whether Ms. Lewinsky's job and her testimony were improperly related.

A. PRESIDENT'S TESTIMONY IN THE JONES CASE

The President was questioned in his civil deposition about his conversations with Vernon Jordan regarding Ms. Lewinsky and her role in the Jones case. Beforehand, the President was asked a general question:

Q: Did anyone other than your attorneys ever tell you that Monica Lewinsky had been served with a subpoena in this case?

WJC: *I don't think so.*³⁶³

The President later testified in more detail about conversations he may have had with Mr. Jordan concerning Ms. Lewinsky's role in the case:

Q: Excluding conversations that you may have had with Mr. Bennett or any of your attorneys in this case, within the past two weeks has anyone reported to you that they had had a conversation with Monica Lewinsky concerning this lawsuit?

WJC: I don't believe so. I'm sorry, I just don't believe so.

* * * * *

Q. Has it ever been reported to you that [Vernon Jordan] met with Monica Lewinsky and talked about this case?

WJC: I knew that he met with her. I think Betty suggested that he meet with her. Anyway, he met with her. *I, I thought that he talked to her about something else. I didn't know that—I thought he had given her some advice about her move to New York. Seems like that's what Betty said.*³⁶⁴

B. EVIDENCE THAT CONTRADICTS THE PRESIDENT'S CIVIL DEPOSITION
TESTIMONY

Vernon Jordan testified that his conversations with the President about Ms. Lewinsky's subpoena were, in fact, "a continuing dialogue."³⁶⁵ When asked if he had kept the President informed about Ms. Lewinsky's status in the Jones case in addition to her job search, Mr. Jordan responded: "The two—absolutely."³⁶⁶

On December 19, Ms. Lewinsky phoned Mr. Jordan and told him that she had been subpoenaed in the Jones case.³⁶⁷ Following that call, Mr. Jordan telephoned the President to inform him "that Monica Lewinsky was coming to see me, and that she had a subpoena"³⁶⁸—but the President was unavailable.³⁶⁹ Later that day, at 5:01 p.m., Mr. Jordan had a seven-minute telephone conversation with the President:³⁷⁰

I said to the President, "Monica Lewinsky called me up. She's upset. She's gotten a subpoena. She is coming to see me about this subpoena. I'm confident that she needs a lawyer, and I will try to get her a lawyer."³⁷¹

Later on December 19, after meeting with Ms. Lewinsky, Mr. Jordan went to the White House and met with the President alone in the Residence.³⁷² Mr. Jordan testified: "I told him that Monica Lewinsky had been subpoenaed, came to me with a subpoena."³⁷³ According to Mr. Jordan, the President "thanked me for my efforts to get her a job and thanked me for getting her a lawyer."³⁷⁴

According to Mr. Jordan, on January 7, 1998, Ms. Lewinsky showed him a copy of her signed affidavit denying any sexual relationship with the President.³⁷⁵ He testified that he told the President about the affidavit, probably in one of his two logged calls to the White House that day.³⁷⁶

Q: [W]alk us through what exactly you would have said on the portion of the conversation that related to Ms. Lewinsky and the affidavit.

VJ: Monica Lewinsky signed the affidavit.

Q: [L]et's say if it was January 7th, or whenever it was that you informed him that she signed the affidavit,³⁷⁷ is it accurate that based on the conversations you had with him already, you didn't have to explain to him what the affidavit was?

VJ: I think that's a reasonable assumption.

Q: So that it would have made sense that you would have just said, "She signed the affidavit," because both you and he knew what the affidavit was?

VJ: I think that's a reasonable assumption.

Q: All right. When you indicated to the President that she had signed the affidavit, what, if anything, did he tell you?

VJ: I think he—his judgment was consistent with mine that that was—the signing of the affidavit was consistent with the truth.³⁷⁸

Mr. Jordan testified that "I knew that the President was concerned about the affidavit and whether or not it was signed. He was, obviously."³⁷⁹ When asked why he believed the President was concerned, Mr. Jordan testified:

Here is a friend of his who is being called as a witness in another case and with whom I had gotten a lawyer, I told him about that, and told him I was looking for a job for her. He knew about all of that. *And it was just a matter of course that he would be concerned as to whether or not she had signed an affidavit foreswearing what I told you the other day, that there was no sexual relationship.*³⁸⁰

Mr. Jordan summarized his contacts with the President about Monica Lewinsky and her involvement in the Jones litigation as follows:

I made arrangements for a lawyer and I told the President that. When she signed the affidavit, I told the President that the affidavit had been signed and when Frank Carter told me that he had filed a motion to quash, as I did in the course of everything else, I said to the President that I saw Frank Carter and he had informed me that he was filing a motion to quash. It was as a simple information flow, absent a substantive discussion about her defense, about which I was not involved.³⁸¹

The President himself testified in the grand jury that he talked to Mr. Jordan about Ms. Lewinsky's involvement in the case. Despite his earlier statements at the deposition, the President testified to the grand jury that he had no reason to doubt that he had talked to Mr. Jordan about Ms. Lewinsky's subpoena, her lawyer, and her affidavit.³⁸²

³⁷⁷The affidavit is dated January 7, 1998, so the conversation informing the President that it had been signed could not have occurred any earlier than this date.

C. SUMMARY

In his civil deposition, the President stated that he had talked to Vernon Jordan about Ms. Lewinsky's job. But as the testimony of Mr. Jordan reveals, and as the President as much as conceded in his subsequent grand jury appearance,³⁸³ the President did talk to Mr. Jordan about Ms. Lewinsky's involvement in the Jones case—including that she had been subpoenaed, that Mr. Jordan had helped her obtain a lawyer, and that she had signed an affidavit denying a sexual relationship with the President. Given their several communications in the weeks before the deposition, it is not credible that the President forgot the subject of their conversations during his civil deposition. His statements "seems like that's what Betty said" and "I didn't know that" were more than mere omissions; they were affirmative misstatements.

The President's motive for making false and misleading statements about this subject in his civil deposition was straightforward. If the President admitted that he had talked with Vernon Jordan both about Monica Lewinsky's involvement in the Jones case and about her job, questions would inevitably arise about whether Ms. Lewinsky's testimony and her future job were connected. Such an admission by the President in his civil deposition likely would have prompted Ms. Jones's attorneys to inquire further into the subject. And such an admission in his deposition would have triggered public scrutiny when the deposition became public.

At the time of his deposition, moreover, the President was aware of the potential problems in admitting any possible link between those two subjects. A criminal investigation and substantial public attention had focused in 1997 on job assistance and payments made to Webster Hubbell in 1994. The jobs and money paid to Mr. Hubbell by friends and contributors to the President had raised serious questions about whether such assistance was designed to influence Mr. Hubbell's testimony about Madison-related matters.³⁸⁴ Some of Mr. Hubbell's jobs, moreover, had been arranged by Vernon Jordan, which was likely a further deterrent to the President raising both Ms. Lewinsky's job and her affidavit in connection with Vernon Jordan.

³⁸⁴ That matter is still under criminal investigation by this Office.

IX. THERE IS SUBSTANTIAL AND CREDIBLE INFORMATION THAT PRESIDENT CLINTON ENDEAVORED TO OBSTRUCT JUSTICE BY ATTEMPTING TO INFLUENCE THE TESTIMONY OF BETTY CURRIE.

In a meeting with Betty Currie on the day after his deposition and in a separate conversation a few days later, President Clinton made statements to her that he knew were false. The contents of the statements and the context in which they were made indicate that President Clinton was attempting to influence the testimony that Ms. Currie might have been required to give in the Jones case or in a grand jury investigation.³⁸⁵

A. EVIDENCE

1. Saturday, January 17, 1998, Deposition

President Clinton's deposition in Jones v. Clinton occurred on Saturday, January 17, 1998. In that deposition, the President testified that he could not recall being alone with Monica Lewinsky and that he had not had sexual relations, a sexual affair, or a sexual relationship with her. During his testimony, the President referred several times to Betty Currie and to her relationship with Ms. Lewinsky. He stated, for example, that the last time he had seen Ms. Lewinsky was when she had come to the White House to see Ms. Currie;³⁸⁶ that Ms. Currie was present when the President had made a joking reference about the Jones case to Ms. Lewinsky;³⁸⁷ that Ms. Currie was his source of information about Vernon Jordan's assistance to Ms. Lewinsky;³⁸⁸ and that Ms. Currie had helped set up the meetings between Ms. Lewinsky and Mr. Jordan regarding her move to New York.³⁸⁹

At the deposition, Judge Wright imposed a protective order that prevented the parties from discussing their testimony with anyone else. "Before he leaves, I want to remind him, as the witness in this matter, * * * that this case is subject to a Protective Order regarding all discovery, * * * [A]ll parties present, including * * * the witness are not to say anything whatsoever about the questions they were asked, the substance of the deposition, * * *, any details. * * *" ³⁹⁰

2. Sunday, January 18, 1998, Meeting with Ms. Currie

Because the President referred so often to Ms. Currie, it was foreseeable that she might become a witness in the Jones matter, particularly if specific allegations of the President's relationship with Ms. Lewinsky came to light.³⁹¹ Indeed, according to Ms. Currie, President Clinton at some point may have told her that she might be asked about Monica Lewinsky.³⁹²

Shortly after 7:00 p.m. on Saturday, January 17, 1998, two and a half hours after he returned from the deposition, President Clinton called Ms. Currie at home³⁹³ and asked her to come to the White House the next day.³⁹⁴ Ms. Currie testified that “[i]t’s rare for [President Clinton] to ask me to come in on Sunday.”³⁹⁵

At about 5:00 p.m. on Sunday, January 18, Ms. Currie went to meet with President Clinton at the White House. She told the grand jury:

He said that he had had his deposition yesterday, and they had asked several questions about Monica Lewinsky. And I was a little shocked by that or—(shrugging). And he said—I don’t know if he said—I think he may have said, “There are several things you may want to know,” or “There are things—” He asked me some questions.³⁹⁶

According to Ms. Currie, the President then said to her in succession:³⁹⁷

- “You were always there when she was there, right? We were never really alone.”³⁹⁸
- “You could see and hear everything.”³⁹⁹
- “Monica came on to me, and I never touched her, right?”⁴⁰⁰
- “She wanted to have sex with me, and I can’t do that.”⁴⁰¹

Ms. Currie indicated that these remarks were “more like statements than questions.”⁴⁰² Ms. Currie concluded that the President wanted her to agree with him.⁴⁰³ She based that conclusion on the way he made most of the statements and on his demeanor.⁴⁰⁴ Ms. Currie also said that she felt the President made these remarks to see her reaction.⁴⁰⁵

Ms. Currie said that she indicated her agreement with each of the President's statements,⁴⁰⁶ although she knew that the President and Ms. Lewinsky had in fact been alone in the Oval Office and in the President's study.⁴⁰⁷ Ms. Currie also knew that she could not or did not in fact hear or see the President and Ms. Lewinsky while they were alone.⁴⁰⁸

In the context of this conversation, President Clinton appeared to be "concerned," according to Ms. Currie.⁴⁰⁹

The President's concern over the questions asked at the civil deposition about Ms. Lewinsky also manifested itself in substantial efforts to contact Monica Lewinsky over the next two days. Shortly after her meeting with the President, Ms. Currie made several attempts to contact Ms. Lewinsky. Ms. Currie testified it was "possible" she did so at the President's suggestion, and said "he may have asked me to call [Ms. Lewinsky] to see what she knew or where she was or what was happening."⁴¹⁰ Later that same night, at 11:01 p.m., the President again called Ms. Currie at home.⁴¹¹ Ms. Currie could not recall the substance but suggested that the President had called to ask whether she had spoken to Ms. Lewinsky.⁴¹² The next day, January 19, 1998, which was a holiday, Ms. Currie made seven unsuccessful attempts to contact Monica Lewinsky, by pager, between 7:00 a.m. and 9:00 a.m.⁴¹³ The President called Ms. Currie at home twice, and Ms. Currie called the President at the White House once that day.⁴¹⁴

B. THE PRESIDENT'S GRAND JURY TESTIMONY

The President was asked why he might have said to Ms. Currie in their meeting on Sunday, January 18, 1998, “we were never alone together, right?” and “you could see and hear everything.” The President testified:

[W]hat I was trying to determine was whether my recollection was right and that she was always in the office complex when Monica was there, and whether she thought she could hear any conversations we had, or did she hear any.

* * * * *

I was trying to—I knew * * * to a reasonable certainty that I was going to be asked more questions about this. I didn't really expect you to be in the Jones case at the time. I thought what would happen is that it would break in the press, and *I was trying to get the facts down. I was trying to understand what the facts were.*⁴¹⁶

Later, the President stated that he was referring to a larger area than simply the room where he and Ms. Lewinsky were located. He also testified that his statements to Ms. Currie were intended to cover a limited range of dates:

WJC: * * * [W]hen I said, we were never alone, right, I think I also asked her a number of other questions, because there were several times, as I'm sure she would acknowledge, when I either asked her to be around. I remember once in particular when I was talking with Ms. Lewinsky when I asked Betty to be in the, actually, in the next room in the dining room, and, as I testified earlier, once in her own office.

But I meant that she was always in the Oval Office complex, in that complex, while Monica was there. And I believe that this was part of a series of questions I asked her to try to quickly refresh my memory. So, I wasn't trying to get her to say something that wasn't so. And, in fact, I think she would recall that I told her to just relax, go in the grand jury and tell the truth when she had been called as a witness.

Q: So, when you said to Mrs. Currie that, I was never alone with her, right, you just meant that you and Ms. Lewinsky would be somewhere perhaps in the Oval Office or many times in your back study, is that correct?

WJC: That's right. We were in the back study.

Q: And then—

WJC: Keep in mind, sir, I just want to make it—I was talking about 1997. I was never, ever trying to get Betty Currie to claim that on the occasions when Monica Lewinsky was there when she wasn't anywhere around, that she was. I would never have done that to her, and I don't think she thought about that. I don't think she thought I was referring to that.

Q: Did you put a date restriction? Did you make it clear to Mrs. Currie that you were only asking her whether you were never alone with her after 1997?

WJC: Well, I don't recall whether I did or not, but I assumed—if I didn't, I assumed she knew what I was talking about, because it was the point at which Ms. Lewinsky was out of the White House and had to have someone WAVE her in, in order to get in the White House. And I do not believe to this day that I was—in 1997, that she was ever there and that I ever saw her unless Betty Currie was there. I don't believe she was.⁴¹⁷

With respect to the word “alone,” the President also stated that “it depends on how you define alone” and “there were a lot of times when we were alone, but I never really thought we were.”⁴¹⁸

The President was also asked about his specific statement to Betty Currie that “you could see and hear everything.” He testified that he was uncertain what he intended by that comment:

Q: When you said to Mrs. Currie, you could see and hear everything, that wasn't true either, was it, as far as you knew. You've already—* * *

WJC: * * * My memory of that was that, that she had the ability to hear what was going on if she came in the Oval Office from her office. And a lot of times, you know, when I was in the Oval Office, she just had the door open to her office. Then there was—the door was never completely closed to the hall. So I think there was—I'm not entirely sure what I meant by that, but I could have meant that she generally would be able to hear conversations, even if she couldn't see them. And I think that's what I meant.⁴¹⁹

The President then testified that when he made the comment to Ms. Currie about her being able to hear everything, he again was referring to only a limited period of time:

Q: * * * you would not have engaged in those physically intimate acts if you knew that Mrs. Currie could see or hear that, is that correct?

WJC: That's correct. But keep in mind, sir, I was talking about 1997. That occurred, to the—and I believe that occurred only once in February of 1997. I stopped it. I never should have started it, and I certainly shouldn't have started it back after I resolved not to in 1996. And I was referring to 1997.

And I—what—as I say, I do not know—her memory and mine may be somewhat different. I do not know whether I was asking her about a particular time when Monica was upset and I asked her to stand, stay back in the dining area. Or whether I was, had reference to the fact that if she kept the door open to the Oval Office, because it was always—the door to the hallway was always somewhat open, that she would always be able to hear something if anything went on that was, you know, too loud, or whatever.

I do not know what I meant. I'm just trying to reconcile the two statements as best I can, without being sure.⁴²⁰

The President was also asked about his comment to Ms. Currie that Ms. Lewinsky had “come on” to him, but that he had “never touched her”:

Q: * * * [I]f [Ms. Currie] testified that you told her, Monica came on to me and I never touched her, you did, in fact, of course, touch Ms. Lewinsky, isn't that right, in a physically intimate way?

WJC: Now, I've testified about that. And that's one of those questions that I believe is answered by the statement that I made.⁴²¹

Q: What was your purpose in making these statements to Mrs. Currie, if it weren't for the purpose to try to suggest to her what she should say if ever asked?

WJC: Now, Mr. Bittman, I told you, the only thing I remember is when all this stuff blew up, I was trying to figure out what the facts were. I was trying to remember. I was trying to remember every time I had seen Ms. Lewinsky.

* * * I knew this was all going to come out * * * . I did not know [at the time] that the Office of Independent Counsel was involved. *And I was trying to get the facts and try to think of the best defense we could construct in the face of what I thought was going to be a media onslaught.*⁴²²

Finally, the President was asked why he would have called Ms. Currie into his office a few days after the Sunday meeting and repeated the statements about Ms. Lewinsky to her. The President testified that although he would not dispute Ms. Currie's testimony to the contrary, he did not remember having a second conversation with her along these lines.⁴²³

C. SUMMARY

The President referred to Ms. Currie on multiple occasions in his civil deposition when describing his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky. As he himself recognized, a large number of questions about Ms. Lewinsky were likely to be asked in the very near future. The President thus could foresee that Ms. Currie either might be deposed or questioned or might need to prepare an affidavit.

The President called her shortly after the deposition and met with Ms. Currie the next day. The President appeared “concerned,” according to Ms. Currie. He then informed Ms. Currie that questions about Ms. Lewinsky had been asked at the deposition.

The statements the President made to her on January 18 and again on January 20 or 21—that he was never alone with Ms. Lewinsky, that Ms. Currie could always hear or see them, and that he never touched Ms. Lewinsky—were false, but consistent with the testimony that the President provided under oath at his deposition. The President knew that the statements were false at the time he made them to Ms. Currie. The President’s suggestion that he was simply trying to refresh his memory when talking to Ms. Currie conflicts with common sense: Ms. Currie’s confirmation of false statements could not in any way remind the President of the facts. Thus, it is not plausible that he was trying to refresh his recollection.

The President’s grand jury testimony reinforces that conclusion. He testified that in asking questions of Ms. Currie such as “We were never alone, right” and “Monica came on to me, and I never touched her, right,” he intended a date restriction on the questions. But he did not articulate a date restriction in his conversations with Ms. Currie. Moreover, with respect to some aspects of this incident, the President was unable to devise any innocent explanation, testifying that he did not know why he had asked Ms. Currie some questions and admitting that he was “just trying to reconcile the two statements as best [he could].” On the other hand, if the most reasonable inference from the President’s conduct is drawn—that he was attempting to enlist a witness to back up his false testimony from the day before—his behavior with Ms. Currie makes complete sense.

The content of the President’s statements and the context in which those statements were made provide substantial and credible information that President Clinton sought improperly to influence Ms. Currie’s testimony. Such actions constitute an obstruction of justice and improper influence on a witness.

X. THERE IS SUBSTANTIAL AND CREDIBLE INFORMATION THAT PRESIDENT CLINTON ENDEAVORED TO OBSTRUCT JUSTICE DURING THE FEDERAL GRAND JURY INVESTIGATION. WHILE REFUSING TO TESTIFY FOR SEVEN MONTHS, HE SIMULTANEOUSLY LIED TO POTENTIAL GRAND JURY WITNESSES KNOWING THAT THEY WOULD RELAY THE FALSEHOODS TO THE GRAND JURY.

The President's grand jury testimony followed seven months of investigation in which he had refused six invitations to testify before the grand jury. During this period, there was no indication that the President would admit any sexual relationship with Ms. Lewinsky. To the contrary, the President vehemently denied the allegations.

Rather than lie to the grand jury himself, the President lied about his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky to senior aides, and those aides then conveyed the President's false story to the grand jury.⁴²⁴

In this case, the President lied to, among others, three current senior aides—John Podesta, Erskine Bowles, and Sidney Blumenthal—and one former senior aide, Harold Ickes. The President denied any kind of sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky; said that Ms. Lewinsky had made a sexual demand on him; and denied multiple telephone conversations with Monica Lewinsky. The President, by his own later admission, was aware that his aides were likely to convey the President's version of events to the grand jury.

The President's aides took the President at his word when he made these statements. Each aide then testified to the nature of the relationship between Monica Lewinsky and the President based on those statements—without knowing that they were calculated falsehoods by the President designed to perpetuate the false statements that the President made during his deposition in the Jones case.

The aides' testimony provided the grand jury a false account of the relationship between the President and Ms. Lewinsky. Their testimony thus had the potential to affect the investigation—including decisions by the OIC and grand jury about how to conduct ⁴²⁴Two federal criminal statutes, Sections 1512 and 1503 of Title 18 of the United States Code, prohibit misleading potential witnesses with the intent to influence their grand jury testimony. Section 1512 provides that whoever "corruptly * * * engages in misleading conduct toward another person, with intent to—(1) influence, delay, or prevent the testimony of any person in an official proceeding * * * shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both." 18 U.S.C. § 1512(b). It is no defense to a charge of witness tampering that the official proceeding had not yet begun, nor is it a defense that the testimony sought to be influenced turned out to be inadmissible or subject to a claim of privilege. 18 U.S.C. § 1512(e).

Section 1503 provides that whoever "corruptly or by threats or force * * * influences, obstructs, or impedes or endeavors to influence, obstruct, or impede the due administration of justice" has committed a felony. 18 U.S.C. § 1503(a)–(b).

The Governor of Guam was convicted of witness tampering for lying to a potential witness "intending that [the witness] would offer [the Governor's] explanation concerning the [illegally used] funds to the FBI." *United States v. A. THE TESTIMONY OF CURRENT AND FORMER AIDES

1. John Podesta

John Podesta, Deputy Chief of Staff,⁴²⁵ testified that on several occasions shortly after the media first began reporting the Lewinsky allegations, the President either denied having a relationship with Ms. Lewinsky or otherwise minimized his involvement with her.

Mr. Podesta described a meeting with the President, Chief of Staff Erskine Bowles, and Deputy Chief of Staff Sylvia Matthews, in the morning of January 21, 1998.⁴²⁶ During that meeting, the President stated: “Erskine, I want you to know that this story is not true.”⁴²⁷ Mr. Podesta further recalled that the President said “that he had not had a sexual relationship with her, and that he never asked anybody to lie.”⁴²⁸

Several days later, on January 23, 1998, the President more adamantly told Mr. Podesta that he had not engaged in sex of any “kind, shape or manner” with Ms. Lewinsky. Mr. Podesta recalled:

JP: [H]e said to me that he had never had sex with her, and that—and that he never asked—you know, he repeated the denial, but he was extremely explicit in saying he never had sex with her.

Q: How do you mean?

JP: Just what I said.

Q: Okay. Not explicit, in the sense that he got more specific than sex, than the word “sex.”

JP: Yes, he was more specific than that.

Q: Okay. Share that with us.

JP: Well, I think he said—he said that—there was some spate of, you know, what sex acts were counted, and he said that he had never had sex with her in any way whatsoever—

Q: Okay.

JP: —*that they had not had oral sex.*⁴²⁹

Later, possibly that same day,⁴³⁰ the President made a further statement to Mr. Podesta regarding his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky. Mr. Podesta testified that the President “said to me that after [Monica] left [her job at the White House], that when she had come by, she came by to see Betty, and that he—when she was there, either Betty was with them—either that she was with Betty when he saw her or that he saw her in the Oval Office with the door open and Betty was around—and Betty was out at her desk.”⁴³¹ The President relayed to Mr. Podesta one of the false “cover stories” that the President and Ms. Lewinsky had agreed to use.

Both the President and Mr. Podesta knew that Mr. Podesta was likely to be a witness in the ongoing grand jury criminal investigation.⁴³² Nonetheless, Mr. Podesta recalled that the President “volunteered” to provide information about Ms. Lewinsky to him⁴³³ *even though Mr. Podesta had not asked for these details.*⁴³⁴

Mr. Podesta “believe[d]” the President, and testified that it was important to him that the President denied the affair.⁴³⁵ Mr. Podesta repeated to the grand jury the false and misleading statements that the President told him.

2. Erskine Bowles

Mr. Bowles, the White House Chief of Staff,⁴³⁶ confirmed Mr. Podesta’s account of the President’s January 21, 1998, statement in which the President denied having a sexual relationship with Ms. Lewinsky. Mr. Bowles testified:

EB: And this was the day this huge story breaks. And the three of us walked in together—Sylvia Matthews, John Podesta, and me—into the Oval Office, and the President was standing behind his desk.

Q: About what time of day is this?

EB: This is approximately 9:00 in the morning, or something—you know, in that area. And he looked up at us and he said the same thing he said to the American people. He said, “I want you to know I did not have sexual relationships [sic] with this woman Monica Lewinsky. I did not ask anybody to lie. And when the facts come out, you’ll understand.”⁴³⁷

Mr. Bowles testified that he took the President’s statements seriously: “All I can tell you is: This guy who I’ve worked for looked me in the eye and said he did not have sexual relationships with her. And if I didn’t believe him, I couldn’t stay. So I believe him.”⁴³⁸ Mr. Bowles repeated the President’s false and misleading statement to the grand jury.

3. Sidney Blumenthal

Sidney Blumenthal, an Assistant to the President,⁴³⁹ similarly testified that the President made statements to him denying the Lewinsky allegations shortly after the first media report.

Mr. Blumenthal stated that he spoke to Mrs. Clinton on the afternoon of January 21, 1998, and to the President early that evening. During those conversations, both the President and Mrs. Clinton offered an explanation for the President’s meetings with Ms. Lewinsky, and President Clinton offered an explanation for Ms. Lewinsky’s allegations of a sexual relationship.⁴⁴⁰

Testifying before the grand jury, Mr. Blumenthal related his discussion with President Clinton:

I said to the President, "What have you done wrong?" And he said, "Nothing. I haven't done anything wrong."
* * * And it was at that point that he gave his account of what had happened to me and he said that Monica—and it came very fast. He said, "Monica Lewinsky came at me and made a sexual demand on me." He rebuffed her. He said, "I've gone down that road before, I've caused pain for a lot of people and I'm not going to do that again."

*She threatened him. She said that she would tell people they'd had an affair, that she was known as the stalker among her peers, and that she hated it and if she had an affair or said she had an affair then she wouldn't be the stalker any more.*⁴⁴¹

Mr. Blumenthal testified that the President appeared "upset" during this conversation.⁴⁴²

Finally, Mr. Blumenthal asked the President to explain alleged answering machine messages (a detail mentioned in press reports).

He said that he remembered calling her when Betty Currie's brother died and that he left a message on her voice machine that Betty's brother had died and he said she was close to Betty and had been very kind to Betty. And that's what he recalled.⁴⁴³

According to Mr. Blumenthal, the President said that the call he made to Ms. Lewinsky relating to Betty's brother was the "only one he could remember."⁴⁴⁴ That was false: The President and Ms. Lewinsky talked often on the phone, and the subject matter of the calls was memorable.

A grand juror asked Mr. Blumenthal whether the President had said that his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky included any kind of sexual activity. Mr. Blumenthal testified that the President's response was "the opposite. He told me that she came on to him and that he had told her he couldn't have sexual relations with her and that she threatened him. That is what he told me."⁴⁴⁵

Mr. Blumenthal testified that after the President relayed this information to him, he "certainly believed his story. It was a very heartfelt story, he was pouring out his heart, and I believed him."⁴⁴⁶ Mr. Blumenthal repeated to the grand jury the false statements that the President made to him.

4. Harold Ickes

Mr. Ickes, a former Deputy Chief of Staff,⁴⁴⁷ also related to the grand jury a conversation that he had with the President on the morning of January 26, 1998,⁴⁴⁸ during which the President denied the Lewinsky allegations.

Regarding that conversation, Mr. Ickes testified: “The two things that I recall, the two things that he again repeated in public—had already said publicly and repeated in public that same Monday morning was that he had not had—he did not have a—or he had not had a sexual relationship with Ms. Lewinsky and that he had done nothing—now I’m paraphrasing—had done nothing to ask anybody to change their story or suborn perjury or obstruct justice.”⁴⁴⁹

Mr. Ickes recalled that the President probably volunteered this information.⁴⁵⁰ Mr. Ickes repeated the President’s false statements to the grand jury.

B. THE PRESIDENT’S GRAND JURY TESTIMONY

The President admitted to the grand jury that, after the allegations were publicly reported, he made “misleading” statements to particular aides whom he knew would likely be called to testify before the grand jury. The President testified as follows:

Q: Do you recall denying any sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky to the following people: Harry Thomasson, Erskine Bowles, Harold Ickes, Mr. Podesta, Mr. Blumenthal, Mr. Jordan, Ms. Betty Currie? Do you recall denying any sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky to those individuals?

WJC: I recall telling a number of those people that I didn’t have, either I didn’t have an affair with Monica Lewinsky or didn’t have sex with her. And I believe, sir, that—you’ll have to ask them what they thought. But I was using those terms in the normal way people use them. You’ll have to ask them what they thought I was saying.

Q: If they testified that you denied sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky, or if they told us that you denied that, do you have any reason to doubt them, in the days after the story broke; do you have any reason to doubt them?

WJC: No.

The President then was specifically asked whether he knew that his aides were likely to be called before the grand jury.

Q: It may have been misleading, sir, and you knew though, after January 21st when the Post article broke and said that Judge Starr was looking into this, you knew that they might be witnesses. You knew that they might be called into a grand jury, didn’t you?

WJC: That’s right. I think I was quite careful what I said after that. I may have said something to all these people to that effect, but I’ll also—whenever anybody asked me any details, I said, look, I don’t want you to be a witness or I turn you into a witness or give you information that would get you in trouble. I just wouldn't talk. I, by and large, didn't talk to people about this.

Q: If all of these people—let's leave out Mrs. Currie for a minute. Vernon Jordan, Sid Blumenthal, John Podesta, Harold Ickes, Erskine Bowles, Harry Thomasson, after the story broke, after Judge Starr's involvement was known on January 21st, have said that you denied a sexual relationship with them. Are you denying that?

WJC: No.

Q: And you've told us that you—

WJC: I'm just telling you what I meant by it. I told you what I meant by it when they started this deposition.

Q: You've told us now that you were being careful, but that it might have been misleading. Is that correct?

WJC: It might have been. * * * So, what I was trying to do was to give them something they could—that would be true, even if misleading in the context of this deposition, and keep them out of trouble, and let's deal—and deal with what I thought was the almost ludicrous suggestion that I had urged someone to lie or tried to suborn perjury, in other words.⁴⁵¹

C. SUMMARY

The President made the following misleading statements to his aides:

- The President told Mr. Podesta that he had not engaged in sex “in any way whatsoever” with Ms. Lewinsky, “including oral sex”.
- The President told Mr. Podesta, Mr. Bowles, and Mr. Ickes that he did not have a “sexual relationship” with Ms. Lewinsky.
- The President told Mr. Podesta that “when [Ms. Lewinsky] came by, she came by to see Betty [Currie].”
- The President told Mr. Blumenthal that Ms. Lewinsky “came on to him and that he had told her he couldn't have sexual relations with her and that she threatened him.”
- The President told Mr. Blumenthal that he couldn't remember making any calls to Ms. Lewinsky other than once when he left a message on her answering machine.

During the President's grand jury testimony, the President admitted that his statements to aides denying a sexual relationship with Ms. Lewinsky “may have been misleading.”⁴⁵² The President also knew his aides likely would be called to testify regarding any communications with him about Ms. Lewinsky. And he presumably expected his aides to repeat his statements regarding Ms. Lewinsky to all questioners, including to the grand jury. Finally, he himself refused to testify for many months. The combination of the President's silence and his deception of his aides had the effect of presenting a false view of events to the grand jury.

The President says that at the time he spoke to his aides, he chose his words with great care so that, in his view, his statements would be literally true because he was referring only to intercourse.

⁴⁵¹ Clinton 8/17/98 GJ at 105–109 (emphasis added).

⁴⁵² Id. at 107.

That explanation is undermined by the President's testimony before the grand jury that his denials "may have been misleading" and by the contradictory testimony by the aides themselves—particularly John Podesta, who says that the President specifically denied oral sex with Ms. Lewinsky. Moreover, on January 24, 1998, the White House issued talking points for its staff, and those talking points refute the President's literal truth argument: The talking points state as the President's view the belief that a relationship that includes oral sex is "of course" a "sexual relationship."⁴⁵³

For all of these reasons, there is substantial and credible information that the President improperly tampered with witnesses during the grand jury investigation.

⁴⁵³ 1512-DC-00000037.

XI. THERE IS SUBSTANTIAL AND CREDIBLE INFORMATION THAT PRESIDENT CLINTON'S ACTIONS SINCE JANUARY 17, 1998, REGARDING HIS RELATIONSHIP WITH MONICA LEWINSKY HAVE BEEN INCONSISTENT WITH THE PRESIDENT'S CONSTITUTIONAL DUTY TO FAITHFULLY EXECUTE THE LAWS.

Before, during, and after his January 17, 1998, civil deposition, the President attempted to conceal the truth about his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky from the judicial process in the Jones case. Furthermore, the President has since lied under oath to the grand jury and facilitated the provision of false information to the grand jury by others.

The President also misled the American people and the Congress in his public statement of January 26, 1998, in which he denied "sexual relations" with Ms. Lewinsky. The President misled his Cabinet and his senior aides by denying the relationship to them. The Cabinet and senior aides in turn misled the American people and the Congress by conveying the President's denials and professing their belief in the credibility of those denials.

The President promised in January 1998 to cooperate fully with the grand jury investigation and to provide "more rather than less, sooner rather than later." At that time, the OIC was conducting a criminal investigation and was obligated to report to Congress any substantial and credible information that may constitute grounds for an impeachment.

The President's conduct delayed the grand jury investigation (and thereby delayed any potential congressional proceedings). He asserted, appealed, withdrew, and reasserted Executive Privilege (and asserted other governmental privileges never before applied in federal criminal proceedings against the government). The President asserted these privileges concerning the investigation of factual questions about which the President already knew the answers. The President refused six invitations to testify voluntarily before the grand jury. At the same time, the President's aides and surrogates argued publicly that the entire matter was frivolous and that any investigation of it should cease.

After being subpoenaed in July, the President made false statements to the grand jury on August 17, 1998. That night, the President again made false statements to the American people and Congress, contending that his answers in his civil deposition had been "legally accurate." The President then made an implicit plea for Congress to take no action: "Our country has been distracted by this matter for too long."⁴⁵⁴

The President has pursued a strategy of (i) deceiving the American people and Congress in January 1998, (ii) delaying and impeding the criminal investigation for seven months, and (iii) deceiving the American people and Congress again in August 1998.

A. BEGINNING ON JANUARY 21, 1998, THE PRESIDENT MISLED THE AMERICAN PEOPLE AND CONGRESS REGARDING THE TRUTH OF HIS RELATIONSHIP WITH MS. LEWINSKY.

On January 21, 1998, the day the Washington Post first reported the Lewinsky matter, the President talked to his long-time advisor Dick Morris. With the President's approval, Mr. Morris commissioned a poll that evening. The results indicated that voters were willing to forgive the President for adultery but not for perjury or obstruction of justice.⁴⁵⁵ When the President telephoned him that evening, Mr. Morris explained that the President thus should not go public with a confession or explanation.⁴⁵⁶ According to Mr. Morris, the President replied, "Well, we just have to win, then."⁴⁵⁷

The next evening, the President dissuaded Mr. Morris from any plan to "blast[] Monica Lewinsky 'out of the water.'" The President indicated that "there's some slight chance that she may not be cooperating with Starr and we don't want to alienate her."⁴⁵⁸

The President himself spoke publicly about the matter several times in the initial days after the story broke. On January 26, the President was definitive: "I want to say one thing to the American people. I want you to listen to me. I'm going to say this again: I did not have sexual relations with that woman, Miss Lewinsky. I never told anybody to lie, not a single time. Never. These allegations are false."⁴⁵⁹

The President's emphatic denial to the American people was false. And his statement was not an impromptu comment in the heat of a press conference. To the contrary, it was an intentional and calculated falsehood to deceive the Congress and the American people.⁴⁶⁰

⁴⁵⁹Televised Remarks by President Clinton at the White House Education News Conference, Monday, January 26, 1998, 10:17 a.m.

⁴⁶⁰Other than Ms. Lewinsky's status and age, several aspects of the relationship could have raised public concerns.

First, Ms. Lewinsky lost her job at the White House in April 1996 and was transferred to the Pentagon. Under oath, Ms. Lewinsky was asked: "Do you believe that if you hadn't had a sexual relationship with the President that you would have kept your job at the White House?" She answered: "Yes." Lewinsky 8/26/98 Depo. at 60.

Second, Ms. Lewinsky was asked, "Do you believe that your difficulty or inability to return to employment at the White House was because of your sexual relationship with him?" She answered: "Yes. Or the issues that, or that the problems that people perceived that really were based in truth because I had a relationship with the President." Lewinsky 8/26/98 Depo. at 60.

Third, in late 1997, the President saw to it that Ms. Lewinsky received extraordinary job assistance. Such assistance might have been tied to her involvement in the Jones case, as discussed earlier, as well as a benefit to an ex-paramour. If the latter was a factor, then the President's actions discriminated against all of those interns and employees who did not receive the same benefit.

B. THE FIRST LADY, THE CABINET, THE PRESIDENT'S STAFF, AND THE PRESIDENT'S ASSOCIATES RELIED ON AND PUBLICLY EMPHASIZED THE PRESIDENT'S DENIAL.

After the President lied to the American people, the President's associates argued that the allegations against the President were false and even scurrilous.

Mrs. Clinton forcefully denied the allegations on January 27, 1998, one day after the President's public denial. She admitted that the American people "should certainly be concerned" if a President had an affair and lied to cover it up. She acknowledged that it would be a "very serious offense." But she emphasized that the allegations were false—a "pretty bad" smear. She noted that the President "has denied these allegations on all counts, unequivocally." And Mrs. Clinton shifted the focus away from the President, indicated that "this is a battle" and stated that "some folks are going to have a lot to answer for" when the facts come out.⁴⁶¹

The most senior officials in the Executive Branch served as additional (albeit unwitting) agents of the President's deception. The Cabinet and White House aides stated emphatically that the allegations were false. For example, White House spokesperson Michael McCurry was asked whether the President's denial covered all forms of sexual contact, and Mr. McCurry stated that "I think every American that heard him knows exactly what he meant."⁴⁶² So, too, White House Communications Director Ann Lewis said on January 26, 1998: "I can say with absolute assurance the President of the United States did not have a sexual relationship because I have heard the President of the United States say so. He has said it, he could not be more clear. He could not have been more direct."⁴⁶³ She added: "Sex is sex, even in Washington. I've been assured."⁴⁶⁴

After a Cabinet meeting on January 23, 1998, in which the President offered denials, several members of the Cabinet appeared outside the White House. Secretary of State Albright stated: "I believe that the allegations are completely untrue."⁴⁶⁵ Coupled with the President's firm denial, the united front of the President's closest advisors helped shape perception of the issue.

C. THE PRESIDENT REPEATEDLY AND UNLAWFULLY INVOKED THE EXECUTIVE PRIVILEGE TO CONCEAL EVIDENCE OF HIS PERSONAL MISCONDUCT FROM THE GRAND JURY.

When the allegations about Ms. Lewinsky first arose, the President informed the American people that he would cooperate fully. He told Jim Lehrer that "we are doing our best to cooperate here."⁴⁶⁶ He told National Public Radio that "I have told people that I would cooperate in the investigation, and I expect to cooperate with it * * *. I'm going to do my best to cooperate with the investigation."⁴⁶⁷ He told Roll Call "I'm going to cooperate with this investigation * * *. And I'll cooperate."⁴⁶⁸

Such cooperation did not occur. The White House's approach to the constitutionally based principle of Executive Privilege most clearly exposed the non-cooperation. In 1994, White House Counsel Lloyd Cutler issued an opinion that the Clinton Administration would not invoke Executive Privilege for cases involving personal wrongdoing by any government official.⁴⁶⁹ By 1998, however, the President had blended the official and personal dimensions to the degree that the President's private counsel stated in a legal brief filed in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit: "In a very real and significant way, the objectives of William J. Clinton, the person, and his Administration (the Clinton White House) are one and the same."⁴⁷⁰

After the Monica Lewinsky investigation began, the President invoked Executive Privilege for the testimony of five witnesses: Bruce Lindsey, Cheryl Mills, Nancy Hernreich, Sidney Blumenthal, and Lanny Breuer. These claims were patently groundless. Even for official communications within the scope of the privilege, the Supreme Court ruled unanimously in 1974 in *United States v. Nixon*⁴⁷¹ that the Executive Privilege gives way in the face of the compelling need for evidence in criminal proceedings.

The President's assertion of Executive Privilege for Ms. Hernreich, an assistant who manages the secretarial work for the Oval Office,⁴⁷² was frivolous. At the time that the President was asserting Executive Privilege for one assistant, the President's other assistant (Betty Currie) had already testified extensively.

Based on Nixon, the OIC filed a motion to compel the testimony of Hernreich, Lindsey, and Blumenthal. The United States District Court held a hearing on March 20. Just before the hearing, the White House—without explanation—dropped its Executive Privilege claim as to Ms. Hernreich.⁴⁷³

On May 4, 1998, Chief Judge Norma Holloway Johnson ruled against the President on the Executive Privilege issue.⁴⁷⁴ After the White House filed a notice of appeal, the OIC filed an expedited petition for certiorari before judgment in the Supreme Court. The President thereupon dropped his claim of Executive Privilege.

The tactics employed by the White House have not been confined to the judicial process. On March 24, while the President was traveling in Africa, he was asked about the assertion of Executive Privilege. He responded, "You should ask someone who knows." He ⁴⁷³ Even though the White House later withdrew the claim, the mere assertion of Executive Privilege as to Ms. Hernreich is important. Such an invocation causes a needless, but substantial, expenditure of litigation resources and delays and impedes the grand jury process. The overuse of Executive Privilege against the United States in the criminal process thus ultimately hinders the faithful execution of the laws—as the Supreme Court unanimously recognized twenty-four years ago in United States v. Nixon.

also stated “I haven’t discussed that with the lawyers. I don’t know.”⁴⁷⁵

This was untrue. Unbeknownst to the public, in a declaration filed in District Court on March 17 (seven days before the President’s public expression of ignorance), White House Counsel Charles F.C. Ruff informed Chief Judge Johnson that he “ha[d] discussed” the matter with the President, who had directed the assertion of Executive Privilege.⁴⁷⁶

The deception has continued. Because the President withdrew his Executive Privilege claim while the case was pending in the Supreme Court of the United States, it was assumed that the President would no longer assert Executive Privilege. But that assumption proved incorrect. White House attorney Lanny Breuer appeared before the grand jury on August 4, 1998, and invoked Executive Privilege. He would not answer, for example, whether the President had told him about his relationship with Monica Lewinsky and whether they had discussed the gifts he had given to Monica Lewinsky.⁴⁷⁷ On August 11, 1998, Chief Judge Johnson denied the Executive Privilege claim as a basis for refusing to testify, and ordered Mr. Breuer to testify.⁴⁷⁸

On August 11, 1998, Deputy White House Counsel Cheryl Mills testified and repeatedly asserted Executive Privilege at the President’s direction.⁴⁷⁹ The breadth of the claim was striking: The privilege was asserted not only for Ms. Mills’s communications with the President, senior staff, and staff members of the White House Counsel’s Office—but also for Ms. Mills’s communications with private lawyers for the President, private lawyers for grand jury witnesses, and Betty Currie.⁴⁸⁰

On August 17, the President testified before the grand jury. At the request of a grand juror, the OIC asked the President about his assertions of Executive Privilege and why he had withdrawn the claim before the Supreme Court. The President replied that “I didn’t really want to advance an executive privilege claim in this case beyond having it litigated, so that we, we had not given up on principal [sic] this matter, without having some judge rule on it * * *. I strongly felt we should not appeal your victory on the executive privilege issue.”⁴⁸¹

Four days after this sworn statement, on August 21, 1998, the President filed a notice of appeal with respect to the Executive Privilege claim for Lanny Breuer that Chief Judge Johnson had denied ten days earlier (and six days before the President’s testimony). In addition, Bruce Lindsey appeared again before the grand jury on August 28, 1998, and the President again asserted Executive Privilege with respect to his testimony—even though the President had dropped the claim of Executive Privilege for Mr. Lindsey while the case was pending before the Supreme Court of the United States in June.⁴⁸²

The Executive Privilege was not the only claim of privilege interposed to prevent the grand jury from gathering relevant information. The President also acquiesced in the Secret Service's attempt to have the Judiciary craft a new protective function privilege (rejecting requests by this Office that the President order the Secret Service officers to testify). The District Court and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit rejected the privilege claim. The litigation was disruptive to the Secret Service and to the grand jury. The frivolity of the claim is evidenced by the Chief Justice's decision to reject the Secret Service's request for a stay without even referring the matter to the full Court. All of that litigation would have been unnecessary had the President testified in February instead of August, or had he taken the position that relevant facts should be fully available to the grand jury.

D. THE PRESIDENT REFUSED SIX INVITATIONS TO TESTIFY TO THE GRAND JURY, THEREBY DELAYING EXPEDITIOUS RESOLUTION OF THIS MATTER, AND THEN REFUSED TO ANSWER RELEVANT QUESTIONS BEFORE THE GRAND JURY WHEN HE TESTIFIED IN AUGUST 1998.

This Office extended six separate invitations to the President to testify before the grand jury. The first invitation was issued on January 28, 1998. The OIC repeated the invitations on behalf of the grand jury on February 4, February 9, February 21, March 2, and March 13. The President declined each invitation. His refusals substantially delayed this Office's investigation.

Finally, in the face of the President's actions, this Office asked the grand jury to consider issuing a subpoena to the President. The grand jury deliberated and approved the issuance of a subpoena. On July 17, 1998, the OIC served the subpoena, in accordance with the grand jury's action, on the President's private counsel. The subpoena required the President to appear on July 28.

The President sought to delay his testimony.⁴⁸³ Shortly after a hearing before the District Court on the President's motion for a continuance, the President and the OIC reached an agreement by which the President would testify on August 17 via live video feed to the grand jury. In a Rose Garden ceremony on July 31, 1998, the President stated to the country: "I'm looking forward to the op-⁴⁸²Lindsey 8/28/98 GJ at 58. The President's use and withdrawal of Executive Privilege was not new to this Office. In August 1996, the White House invoked Executive Privilege to prevent White House attorneys from producing documents regarding their communications with Hillary Rodham Clinton. After the OIC filed a motion to compel in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Arkansas, the claim was withdrawn, and the White House relied solely on a claim of government attorney-client privilege, which the United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit rejected. The public never knew at that time of the President's assertion of Executive Privilege in that case.

In 1997, the President again asserted Executive Privilege—this time to prevent Thomas "Mack" McLarty from testifying fully. The conversations in question related in part to Mr. McLarty's efforts to find employment for Webster Hubbell as Mr. Hubbell was resigning his position as Associate Attorney General. The President withdrew the assertion before the OIC filed a motion to compel.

portunity * * * of testifying. I will do so completely and truthfully.”⁴⁸⁴

At the outset of his grand jury appearance, the President similarly stated: “I will answer each question as accurately and fully as I can.”⁴⁸⁵ The President then read a prepared statement in which he admitted “inappropriate intimate contact” with Ms. Lewinsky.⁴⁸⁶ Despite his statement that he would answer each question, the President refused to answer specific questions about that contact (other than to indicate that it was not intercourse and did not involve the direct touching of Ms. Lewinsky’s breasts or genitals).⁴⁸⁷

E. THE PRESIDENT MISLED THE AMERICAN PEOPLE AND THE CONGRESS IN HIS PUBLIC STATEMENT ON AUGUST 17, 1998, WHEN HE STATED THAT HIS ANSWERS AT HIS CIVIL DEPOSITION IN JANUARY HAD BEEN “LEGALLY ACCURATE.”

The President addressed the Nation on the evening of August 17, 1998, after his grand jury appearance. The President did not tell the truth. He stated: “As you know, in a deposition in January, I was asked questions about my relationship with Monica Lewinsky. While my answers were legally accurate, I did not volunteer information.”⁴⁸⁸ As this Referral has demonstrated, the President’s statements in his civil deposition were not “legally accurate,” and he could not reasonably have thought they were. They were deliberate falsehoods designed to conceal the truth of the President’s sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky.

The President’s claim that his testimony during the civil deposition was legally accurate—which he made to the grand jury and to the American people on August 17—perpetuates the deception and concealment that has accompanied his relationship with Monica Lewinsky since his first sexual encounter with her on November 15, 1995.

F. SUMMARY

In this case, the President made and caused to be made false statements to the American people about his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky. He also made false statements about whether he had lied under oath or otherwise obstructed justice in his civil case. By publicly and emphatically stating in January 1998 that “I did not have sexual relations with that woman” and these “allegations are false,” the President also effectively delayed a possible congressional inquiry, and then he further delayed it by asserting Executive Privilege and refusing to testify for six months during the Independent Counsel investigation. This represents substantial and credible information that may constitute grounds for an impeachment.
