HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, JANUARY 7, 1958

This being the day fixed by Public Law 290, 85th Congress, enacted pursuant to the 20th amendment to the Constitution, for the meeting of the 2d session of the 85th Congress, the Members of the House of Representatives of the 85th Congress met in their Hall, and at 12 o'clock noon were called to order by the Speaker, Hon. SAM RAYBURN, a Representative from the State of Texas.

The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we are entering upon this 2d session of the 85th Congress, commending and committing ourselves humbly and trustfully to the light and leading of Thy divine spirit.

Grant that our President, our Speaker, and all our chosen Representatives may be richly endowed with wisdom as they strive to safeguard our freedom and make this Nation the kind of a democracy which Thou hast intended and ordained it to be.

Help us to see and understand more clearly the relation of our material and spiritual resources to our responsibilities and may our plans and purposes include and embrace not only the intensive needs of our own beloved country, but the extensive opportunities for service to all mankind.

Hear us in the name of the Prince of Peace, who hath taught us to pray:

Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever.

Amen.

THE LATE JERE COOPER

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DAVIS].

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, it is my sad duty to announce the sudden passing of our esteemed colleague, JERE COOPER, on December 18 last. On December 4, he suffered what was thought to be a mild heart attack. Under fine professional care, and with his complete cooperation, it was thought that he was recovering. So his death came as a great shock to his family and his many friends throughout the country.

His sudden death ended a 29-year career in the House of Representatives which he held in such deep affection. Representative COOPER was born in Dyersburg, Tenn., in 1893, and had worked since he was 12 years of age. By his own efforts he attended Cumberland University in our State, and was graduated with a bachelor of laws degree. He had a private law practice in Dyersburg, Tenn., and was city attorney for 8 years. During this time he enlisted in the State National Guard, was commissioned in 1917 and served with the 119th Infantry Regiment through its campaigns in France and Belgium during World War I.

He left the Army as a captain in 1919, and returned to his law practice. He first entered statewide politics when he managed the successful senatorial campaign for the late Lawrence Tyson, who had been his commanding officer during the war. He ran for the House when the incumbent decided to run for the Senate. He won the nomination over four Democratic rivals, and served continuously until his death.

Assigned first to the Committee on Flood Control, and later to the Elections and Veterans' Affairs Committees, he soon found himself a deep student of the National Government. When a Democratic vacancy occurred on the Ways and Means Committee in 1932, he was selected over several Members who were his senior.

He became chairman of that powerful committee in January 1955. He was chairman also of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, and a member of the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures.

Some years ago he summed up his understanding of tax matters in a very few words. He said:

My philosophy on taxes is very simple. I believe the 16th amendment to the Constitution means just what it says, which, in effect, is that Congress shall have the authority to levy and collect taxes on income from whatever source derived. I think everyone should pay a fair share to the support of the Government.

Those of us who were closest to JERE COOPER recognized how quietly and yet so beautifully he carried his deep sorrows. In 1930 he married the former Mary Rankley, of Campbellsburg, Ky. She died 5 years later. Their only child, Jere, Jr., died in 1951 at the age of 16. Young Jere was being reared in the home of his aunt in Dyersburg. He was a bright youngster, and appeared to be in splendid health, but was mysteriously stricken in the middle of the night and passed away without his father being able to be with him in the last hours. It was just that sudden.

JERE is survived by a brother and three sisters.

All of us knew him as a man of unquestionable integrity. He was fully dedicated to his public office. He was loyal to his friends. He had an abiding and deep devotion and loyalty for our beloved Speaker, but he shared a quiet and almost reverent friendship and relationship with the Members of this House, regardless of political affiliations. He did not care for the commonly known social side of life, but he did love people. We shall remember him as one of the outstanding presiding officers in this body. He was called upon to preside over the Committee of the Whole on many occasions. When the debate promised to be lengthy, the issues highly controversial, and the importance of a cool, intelligent, and fair presiding officer was needed, JERE COOPER was called.

Indeed, this House has lost one of its finest Members, all of us a true friend, and the Nation one of its most useful legislators.

To his family we extend our love, and as a part of these humble yet sincere remarks, I ask unanimous consent to include an editorial which appeared in the Memphis Commercial Appeal which so ably expresses the feelings of the great Midsouth section of our country.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FRAZIER). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee? There was no objection.

REPRESENTATIVE JERE COOPER

The passing of Representative JERE COOPER, of Dyersburg, leaves this State and Nation bereaved.

He was of the soil. He went to work even before he was in his teens in order to acquire a basic education. He worked to pay his way through law school. When his country needed him, he volunteered to put on its uniform and went off to war.

Public service appealed to him and he began his long and honorable career in one of the best of elemental political schools—municipal government. From there he went on to the legislature and then to Congress. He was first elected to the House in 1928 and for three decades his constituents returned him to a seat which he occupied with dignity, with honesty, and with fearlessness.

Some of the elements of his background, some of his characteristics, and certainly many of his outlooks were reminiscent of the late Cordell Hull. The form of the two molds had much similarity and it is not unusual that the Congressional record of JERE COOPER was one of vigorous support of causes to which Cordell Hull was devoted, notably that of the reciprocal trade program.

He was a consistent and outspoken champion of TVA, of practical flood control and navigational programs, and of sound and realistic agricultural practices.

He was chairman of the very powerful Ways and Means Committee and he exercised that responsibility with wisdom and discretion.

He had the respect of the whole House without regard to party affiliation. He did not commit himself lightly, but when he did the word was the bond.

One magazine writer once described him as the "loneliest man in Washington." Actually, he was more shy than retiring. He had known great grief and the memories from which it stemmed were held dear and sacred.

The loneliness stopped there, for no man could be lonely who could live honestly with himself, his ideals, and the very evident love and devotion of his neighbors and friends. The bounds of those are the bounds of the State and country he served so well.

Mr. EVINS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. EVINS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay a brief but sincere tribute to our late departed friend, JERE COOPER, and join with our new dean of the Tennessee delegation, CLIFFORD DAVIS, in paying tribute to him.

Mr. Speaker, in the passing of our beloved friend, JERE COOPER, the State of Tennessee has lost one of her most distinguished sons, and the Nation one of its most effective statesmen, and we in this body have lost a highly esteemed colleague and leader. Words are sometimes inadequate to express either the personal sorrow we feel at his passing or to pay adequate tribute to his achievements and to the influence his life and personality exerted on the history of our Nation during the almost 30 years of his service in this Chamber. Simplicity and humility were the core of his personality.

JERE COOPER was not one to seek the dramatic spotlight or to seek headlines. His forte was not in belligerent aggressiveness but rather in a quiet, unemotional, logical appeal to reason. I have known no Member of this House who had a more considerate and conscientious regard for his colleagues and their problems; and no Member who was more generous with his friendships and his wise counsel and more willing to help any Member of this body and the newcomers to these Halls than JERE COOPER. He was dependable—and always on the job, attentive to duty, and a faithful public servant.

He rose from humble beginnings to great heights as chairman and ranking member of the great Committee on Ways and Means and a position high in the councils of his party. As the dean of the Tennessee delegation in the House, he provided wise and effective leadership of the delegation on behalf of the entire State; but always with a broad perspective and a statesmanlike lack of provincialism. He was a man who fought for the things he believed in without belligerence and with tolerance for those who differed with him. There was an unswerving devotion manifest in his life to the high principles which motivated his thinking and philosophy. The people of Tennessee and the Nation can be grateful to him for a dedicated life of public service. He championed the cause of the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Cordell Hull Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, and tax revision with fairness and justice to all. These among other great legislative acts will stand as monuments to JERE COOPER's public service.

It was my privilege to have known JERE COOPER for many years prior to coming to Congress. I well recall that the very first meeting of the Democratic caucus I attended prior to the opening of the 80th Congress was presided over by our late friend. He was renowned as one of the best presiding officers in our ranks and our great Speaker has attested to this by calling upon him frequently to serve as Chairman of the Committee of the Whole and Speaker pro tempore. JERE COOPER was one of the most able parliamentarians of the House and a skilled presiding officer. He was a great chairman of the powerful and important Committee on Ways and Means. He exercised the powers and prerogatives of chairman of his committee with scrupulous fairness and a high degree of statesmanship.

He was born in Dyer County, Tenn., in 1893; educated in the public schools of our State, and received a law degree from Tennessee's famed law school of Cumberland University at Lebanon in the district which I have the honor to represent. A lawyer by profession he practiced law until the outbreak of World War I. He served during the First World War in the American Expeditionary Forces, being discharged as captain. The high regard of his comrades was demonstrated shortly after the war when he was elected State commander of the American Legion in Tennessee. The late General Tyson, who had commanded the Tennessee regiment during that war, when undertaking his successful campaign for the Senate of the United States chose the young veteran JERE COOPER to serve as his campaign manager.

In 1929 the people of his district elected him to serve in Congress and, as we all know, he served continuously ever since—for 15 consecutive terms.

I shall miss him particularly, for I valued his counsel and advice and, above all, his warm friendship. And so will thousands of his friends and constituents. As a member of the official delegation I attended his funeral in Dyersburg, Tenn., along with several other Members of the House. Even those of us who knew his capacity for making friends and keeping them were astonished by the outpouring of his friends and neighbors at these sad final rites for our friend and colleague. In fact, it became necessary to install a public address system outside the church so that the many who could not find room inside the church could hear the beautiful tribute paid him by the minister.

The legacy JERE COOPER left us is a precious one and one which all of us can profit from if we but remember the example of his career. True to ideals and friends, dedicated to service, his memory will live on in the highest traditions of statesmanship in the history of his district, State, and Nation.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HALLECK].

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, I want to join with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle in this justly deserved tribute to the memory of a distinguished Member of this body, JERE COOPER.

The span of years during which it was his privilege to serve the Nation, as it has been my privilege, have been difficult years—at one time years of economic hardship, at other times, years of war, and more lately years of peace beset with heavy problems for all of us.

My earliest recollection of JERE COOPER go back to the time when I was a freshman member of the minority party and he was, in my eyes at least, a veteran of the opposition.

There came a time when mine was the responsibility of majority leadership and JERE COOPER was the highly respected ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

But whether the ball was in our hands—on this side of the aisle—or otherwise, I want to say this about my experience in working with JERE COOPER:

When he took a position, when he declared a course of action on any matter before us, when he gave his word on any issue, large or small, we knew exactly where he stood.

Others today have borne witness to the many qualities of our departed colleague; his high competence, his knowledge of the parliamentary process, his loyalty, and his energy.

For these he earned the admiration and respect of all of us.

But I will always remember JERE COOPER primarily as a man of complete good faith, and as I look ahead to the work before us in this new session I am deeply sorry that we have lost his services to the House and, above all, to the Nation.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLS], his immediate successor as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend from Tennessee.

Mr. Speaker, it is with profound sadness that I rise to pay my respects to the memory of our departed colleague, my very close personal friend of many years, the beloved and respected chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, JERE COOPER.

JERE COOPER's death came as a great shock to all of us, and we have all been deeply grieved. I believe I can say that I was as close to JERE as any Member of the House and hence the shock to me was all the greater because of the close personal friendship which he and I enjoyed over the years, and due to our very close and harmonious work together on the Committee on Ways and Means. I have lost a true and valued friend; the Nation has lost a true and valued statesman.

There will be many who will speak of the outstanding attributes of JERE COOPER as a statesman and as a patriot, and I could do so at great length and with deepest sincerity. However, in view of our close personal friendship, I would like to direct my brief remarks to some of his more outstanding personal characteristics at this time. JERE was a man of great integrity. His word was indeed his bond and nothing more was ever needed from him. He did not have to give his word twice—once was enough, because he never gave it lightly or without careful prior thought. His word carried great weight with his colleagues. I speak of this aspect of his character first because from among his many sterling attributes I believe it would be one of the most salient of all. As I have indicated, JERE never lightly gave his word, assumed a position, or conveyed an impression, but when he did come to a conclusion or take a position he would stand like the Rock of Gibraltar against those who sought to oppose that point of view and he was formidable in carrying forward that position with his colleagues.

JERE was a man of great dignity. Those of us who have worked with him closely over the years and have observed his demeanor in committee, on the floor of the House of Representatives, and during the hours when the Congress or the committee was not in session have always been impressed with this quality. I have heard many new Members of this great body, who have observed his activities on the floor for the first time, comment about this outstanding attribute. There have been many times when all of us have watched him at his accustomed place on the floor of the House carefully thinking through the points made by his colleagues with respect to legislation pending before the House and giving deep thought to the manner in which these proposals would affect the many thousands of Americans throughout the Nation.

JERE COOPER was a man of great humility and modesty. While he possessed an extremely keen and analytical mind which was capable of going to the crux of a complex problem and stating it in simple terms which all could understand, he always did this in a modest and unassuming way. Thus, while he possessed this great quality of humility which has been found in our outstanding leaders down through the years, he was, at the same time, tough and courageous. He was a man of strong will and could not be swayed, once he had carefully come to a conclusion based upon all of the facts available, by the pressures to which we are all subject from time to time in connection with various proposals advanced for our consideration.

Another outstanding attribute which I cannot fail to mention was his innate sense of fairness. Many, many times I have heard him make the statement, both in committee and on the floor of this House, that such-and-such a proposal which was then being pressed upon us was simply unfair. I believe that it is this basic and highly developed sense of fairness which in great measure contributed to his outstanding leadership as chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, because we all know, and particularly those of us privileged to sit on the committee, that the legislation with which we deal, including taxes, tariffs, and social-security measures, affects the lives of each and every American, no matter what their station in life may be. Thus it is that I speak of this quality of fairness which is so necessary for persons who are assigned to pass initially on these great and important categories of legislation.

JERE COOPER was said to be a lonely man. I do not believe he was lonely, because no man who has the deep respect and admiration of his colleagues in this body and of the host of close personal friends throughout the country and in his congressional district as did JERE COOPER could in fact be lonely. He was a devout Christian gentleman who had been put to great personal tests during his lifetime, including the untimely and sad loss of his dear wife only a few years after their marriage and the sudden and tragic loss of his only son just a few years ago. He sought and received great strength through his devotion to Christian principles and to his duties as a representative of his district and of his Nation. He took his responsibilities seriously, and his Christian courage and outstanding leadership will serve as a source of inspiration to all of us in the days and years to come.

We all feel a deep sense of personal loss, and the magnitude of my loss through his death certainly cannot be adequately expressed in these few words.

I join with all my colleagues in paying tribute to the memory of this outstanding Christian gentleman, patriot, and statesman, and in extending to members of his family our deepest sympathy and condolence.

Mr. REED. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from New York (Mr. REED).

Mr. REED. Mr. Speaker, the convening of this 2d session of the 85th Congress is marked with a sadness that transcends in significance other aspects of this historic day. The sadness arises from the fact that this is the time designated to pay tribute in the House of Representatives to the revered memory of a noble statesman, a valorous patriot, and selfless public servant—the Honorable JERE COOPER, of Dyersburg, Tenn. As these expressions are made today in praise of his accomplishments and in honor of his memory, there is no one present in this hallowed Chamber who has not sustained a profound loss with the untimely passing of our beloved colleague on December 18, 1957.

For those of us who were particularly privileged to serve with Mr. COOPER as his colleagues on the House Committee on Ways and Means and under his distinguished chairmanship of that great committee, the magnitude of our loss has been enhanced by the closeness of our association. With his passing it is to the inspiration of his memory that we must look for guidance in meeting the problems and responsibilities confronting us today and with respect to the future. His example and the rich knowledge that is ours from our cherished association with him will serve to strengthen the character, wisdom, and courage that we bring to the performance of our duties.

I have been honored to serve in the United States House of Representatives with Mr. COOPER for almost three decades and we have been colleagues together on the House Committee on Ways and Means for almost that same length of time. In that period Mr. COOPER's every act and his every statement exemplified the virtues of integrity, principle, and honor that he possessed in such unmatched abundance. In the rewarding period of our association together JERE COOPER was more than my honored colleague, he was my beloved friend.

The mortal remains of Mr. COOPER have returned for interment to his beloved Dyersburg, Tenn., so as to finally rest among the friends and constituents that he served so well. To us remains his memory and I submit to my colleagues that by virtue of that memory and its inspiration we are better men. That the Honorable JERE COOPER has passed from our presence will not prevent us from thinking of him often and seeking his guidance as we deal with the great issues confronting our Nation.

Mr. Speaker, this morning at 9:30 Mr. COOPER's colleagues on the Committee on Ways and Means met in executive session and unanimously adopted a resolution testifying to the sorrow of his committee colleagues over Mr. COOPER's passing and testifying also to the outstanding record of public service achieved by this noble statesman. At the direction of the Committee on Ways and Means I include that resolution as a part of my remarks at this point.

Whereas the Honorable JERE COOPER, of Dyersburg, Tenn., Representative of the Eighth Congressional District of Tennessee, served with eminent distinction and great patriotism as a Member of the United States House of Representatives continuously since March 1929, as a member of the House Committee on Ways and Means continuously since July 1932, in addition to other important capacities, and as the chairman of said House Committee on Ways and Means continuously since January 1955; and

Whereas the Honorable JERE COOPER served his Nation with valor in time of war as a commissioned officer in the American Expeditionary Forces, participating with great bravery in engagements with the enemy in France and Belgium; and

Whereas in both peace and war the Honorable JERE COOPER acquitted his duties and responsibilities to the citizens of his State of Tennessee and to the citizens of his Nation with statesmanship, courage, wisdom, and foresight so as to render his public service an inspiring example to his colleagues in the United States Congress, to his countrymen, and to the causes of peace and freedom in behalf of all men: Therefore be it

Resolved by the membership of the House Committee on Ways and Means assembled, That said committee membership express its profound sorrow over the untimely passing of their beloved chairman on December 18, 1957, and that the Committee on Ways and Means when it adjourns today shall adjourn in reverence to his memory; and be it further

Resolved by the membership of the House Committee on Ways and Means assembled, That a copy of this aforesaid resolution be sent to the beloved family of our late distinguished colleague and chairman, the Honorable JERE COOPER, of Dyersburg, Tenn.

Approved and adopted this 7th day of January 1958, by the unanimous vote of the membership of the House Committee on Ways and Means.

Attest:

WILBUR D. MILLS,
Member of Congress.
DANIEL A. REED,
Member of Congress.

Mr. Speaker, as a part of my remarks I will insert in the RECORD a copy of a statement I released following Mr. COOPER's death:

It is with profound sorrow that I express my most heartfelt condolence to the beloved friends and neighbors—the constituents of a great American, the Honorable JERE COOPER, of Tennessee. His untimely death is a tragic loss to our Nation. I share with his fine people the cherished privilege of his friendship. That Mr. COOPER has passed bodily from our midst is according to God's divine will that is determined for reasons not always within our understanding. It is within our understanding that his virtues of patriotism, integrity, and great wisdom are examples to each of us and they should inspire us to seek to emulate the standard he has set. It is perhaps not to be expected we will equal his attainments but it is to be expected we will honor his memory by working with his same selflessness and vigor in behalf of the American ideals for which he so resolutely stood.

For almost three decades I have been honored to serve in the United States House of Representatives with Mr. COOPER and for only shortly less time than that we have been colleagues together on the House Committee on Ways and Means. In this rewarding period our friendship has been continually enriched and my respect for his character and ability has been increasingly enhanced. In conflict and in peace, in periods of hope and in moments of despair, JERE COOPER rendered stalwart service in devotion to his country, in allegiance to its rich traditions, and in confidence of its bountiful future.

As Mr. COOPER has abided by the honored tenets initially established by those immortal Americans, Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson, so has he added the example of his own illustrious public service as an inspiration and a guide to those he left to carry on.

His beloved State of Tennessee and his Nation that he served so well justifiably pause in sadness to honor his distinguished memory.

At this point, Mr. Speaker, the favorable action unanimously taken by the membership of the House in honoring my colleague and new chairman, the Honorable WILBUR D. MILLS, of Arkansas, is an action that I am confident will always reflect great credit on the considered judgment of this august body. This House will soon undertake to eulogize our beloved former chairman, the Honorable JERE COOPER. The necessity for the orderly conduct of governmental affairs has required that we promptly designate his successor as chairman of the great Committee on Ways and Means. It is not in a sense of forgetting the illustrious memory of Mr. COOPER that I make this statement of commendation to the House with respect to the designation of Mr. MILLS as his successor. Indeed, I am confident that to Mr. COOPER will properly go much of the credit for the outstanding record that Mr. MILLS will achieve as chairman of the House Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. MILLS is a distinguished and selfless public servant who has demonstrated great ability, capacity for leadership, and courage in judgment in the conduct of the Nation's legislative affairs. I take this opportunity to pledge to him my wholehearted support and to express confidence that his already great contribution to the welfare of our Nation will be immeasurably enhanced in the years ahead.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BOGGS].

Mr. BOGGS. Mr. Speaker, I know that there is little that one can add to the magnificent tributes which have already been paid our late distinguished colleague, the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, the Honorable JERE COOPER. I think, however, that each of us creates an impression of himself as he goes through life, and the one great impression that I have of my great chairman is the word that has been used so often here this afternoon, "integrity." JERE COOPER was the essence, the quintessence, of honesty. Occasionally one might disagree with him, but one never questioned his motives. It made no difference from whence pressures came, JERE COOPER stood literally like the Rock of Gibraltar once he was convinced that his course was right and proper and in the interest of his country.

This great devotion to our country was one that inspired all of his colleagues.

I recall, Mr. Speaker, several years ago when JERE COOPER had substantial opposition back in his home district. A younger man was giving him a strong race. But, at the time there was heavy legislation scheduled here both in the Committee on Ways and Means and in this Chamber, and JERE COOPER, in traditional fashion, and characteristic of his devotion to his country and to his position, refused to leave this Chamber and go back home and protect his own interest.

He was a great legislator. He bore ably the responsibilities of drafting tax legislation which, as all of you know, is one of the grave, difficult problems which confront all of us in the House of Representatives where all tax legislation must originate under our Constitution.

He handled social-security legislation admirably. I recall that never did he get very far away from the people in handling these major issues. I remember with amusement and with pleasure how he would refer to some humble citizen back in his own district when some major legislative matter was up. For instance, when we were discussing coverage for the self-employed, he would invariably talk about his barber back in Dyersburg whose employees were covered, but the barber was not.

He was one of the great advocates of the Cordell Hull tradition of trade agreements legislation and made a tremendous contribution to that landmark of American friendship throughout the world.

He presided for many years with great dignity as chairman of the Democratic caucus and he was a parliamentarian without peer.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, we have lost one of our great leaders, one of our great Members. And I say this in all sincerity, that he died as he would have chosen to die, as a Member of this body, deep in its love and deep in the love of his fellow Members.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, at this time I yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS].

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, it was my pleasure to serve here with JERE COOPER during all the time he served. I want to say today, as I have listened to the remarks of the various Congressmen concerning JERE COOPER, that I should like to be able to send back to his people, to his relatives, the information of the high esteem in which he was held here in this Congress. They have a right to be proud of him and his achievements.

Mr. Speaker, the remarks that have been so eloquently stated by those who have preceded me in eulogizing our beloved late colleague, the Honorable JERE COOPER, of Dyersburg, are indeed deserved tribute to a great American and I believe demonstrates in part at least the extent to which he will be so sorely missed by those of us who remain to carry on the responsibilities of governmental affairs. I have been privileged to know and to serve with JERE COOPER for a long time. During this period I valued his friendship and admired his professional ability as a legislator and as a leader. You may be assured that the rich memories of those years will always be cherished by me.

Mr. COOPER played a vital role in the development of legislation affecting such important legislative subjects as taxation, social security, tariffs, and veterans' affairs. In addition to performing valiant service with respect to these national issues Mr. COOPER was also effective in bringing about the adoption of legislative measures beneficial to his State of Tennessee and to his home constituency.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, at this time I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BASS].

Mr. BASS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, few men in our world's history have lived lives that became symbols; the life of JERE COOPER was symbolic of statesmanship, astuteness, precision and complete greatness. His was a life that will long be remembered as one of absolute dedication. I doubt if there have been many men who have served in this great body whose full time was more completely devoted to his work than was JERE COOPER'S.

Although I had known Mr. COOPER personally for only the period of time that I had served with him here in the Congress, I had heard and read of him since I was a small boy. I learned after knowing him that all of the tributes I had heard paid him in Tennessee were true and factual. I feel that through association with JERE COOPER I have been privileged to attend a great school of legislative statesmanship. His work in the Congress will long be remembered by his colleagues and will forever be studied by posterity.

JERE COOPER'S untimely and unexpected passing leaves us with saddened hearts; however, a great amount of condolence can come from knowing that his life was one well spent. I join with my colleagues and friends in the House of Representatives in extending my sympathy during their grief to his family and to his professional staff that I know loved him so well.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. FORAND].

Mr. FORAND. Mr. Speaker, with a heart full of sadness I join my colleagues in this humble tribute to a great man, a great statesman, a great patriot, the Honorable JERE COOPER, of Tennessee.

His untimely passing was a great shock to all of us and has left a void that will be hard to fill, not only in the United States Congress, but also in the Committee on Ways and Means where he was a guiding light to all of us, as well as a leader that we were happy to follow.

He was a real patriot and his every action was motivated by a desire to do what was best for our country and its people.

To know JERE COOPER was to love him. He was a kind man and gave his all for his fellow man.

We shall miss him and never forget that this world is better because JERE lived.

To his family I extend my heartfelt sympathy and pray God that He give them strength in their hour of sorrow.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield to our distinguished majority leader, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, the first regular term our dear friend JERE COOPER was elected to was my first regular term in this body. I preceded him by about 3 months because I was elected to fill an unexpired term, but as far as the regular terms are concerned JERE COOPER and I entered this body together and we served in this body throughout the years until his very unfortunate death.

For 8 of the 10 years that I served on the Committee on Ways and Means, JERE COOPER was also a member of that committee. I served on that committee from 1930 to 1940, when I was elected majority leader and resigned from the committee. JERE COOPER was elected to the committee in 1932.

Our associations were most cordial and most pleasant. Between us there developed a very strong, permanent, and lasting friendship. I may say, also, that he and Mrs. Cooper, who was a wonderful girl, lived in the Hotel Washington, where Mrs. McCormack and I have lived since I have been a Member of Congress. Mrs. McCormack and the late Mrs. Cooper and also JERE COOPER as the years went by became very close personal friends. We knew his dear boy, who has been referred to by my friend from Tennessee [Mr. DAVIS] and others. It was really a tragedy in his life when his son died. Mrs. Cooper was one of the finest ladies anyone could ever meet in the journey of life. JERE'S whole life was wrapped up in her and his fine son. When one said he had a sad life, it was not sad from the angle of public service or in view of his host of friends and admirers but it was sad from the angle of the catastrophes that happened to him during his own lifetime in the death of his dear wife and the death of his dear son.

JERE COOPER was everything that my colleague said about him. Above all, he was one who could disagree with others without being disagreeable. In my opinion, he was one of the greatest statesmen in the entire history of our country. The spirit of JERE COOPER, his influence, what he stood for, those fine, deep, noble things, are what impressed us and caused our deep respect and admiration for him.

I was in Boston when I heard of his death. Mrs. McCormack and I were deeply grieved. His loss is a personal loss to us. His death is a great loss not only to our country and to the State of Tennessee, his district, and the Tennessee delegation in this body and the other body, but also to all of our colleagues.

To his brothers and sisters I extend in their sorrow the profound sympathy of Mrs. McCormack and myself. A gap has been left in the House that is going to be most difficult to fill. Those of us who have known JERE COOPER will always remember him as long as we live.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. LOSER].

Mr. LOSER. Mr. Speaker, I return to the Congress today with a feeling of deep personal loss. The Creator of us all has taken from our midst a warm personal friend of many years' standing.

In the passing of Congressman JERE COOPER the Congress of the United States has lost one of its outstanding Members. My own State of Tennessee has lost one of its leading statesmen. He was a great American who labored in the House of Representatives for more than 29 years. He had won the confidence and respect of the American people by his steadfast adherence to duty.

As the chairman of the great Committee on Ways and Means he rendered a service to this Nation that will stand as a monument to his memory.

His passing has a terrific personal impact on me. Shortly after I came to the Congress, JERE COOPER put his hand upon my shoulder and offered to assist me in my new endeavor in any way that he could. I accepted his offer and thereafter he became my trusted friend in the many and varied problems confronting a new Member of the Congress of the United States.

He was forthright and honorable. He was loyal to his God, his church, State, family and friends. He was a dedicated legislator. He will be sorely missed in the House of Representatives.

I shall always cherish the memory of JERE COOPER.

I extend my deepest sympathy to the members of his family.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield to our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MACHROWICZ].

Mr. MACHROWICZ. Mr. Speaker, I, too, wish to join my colleagues and the many friends of the late JERE COOPER to express my respect to his memory. It was my privilege to attend the funeral services for JERE COOPER in the town that he loved so well, Dyersburg, Tenn. There I saw the many evidences of love and respect which his neighbors had for him. I have heard today from those who knew JERE COOPER many expressions reminding us of the fine characteristics which were so dear to us and which we all loved in JERE COOPER. But I shall always remember best the very simple but effective way in which his minister, Reverend Cross, described him at the funeral service. He described JERE COOPER simply as an "unselfish, devoted Christian statesman." Those are simple words, but JERE COOPER loved simplicity and it is as an unselfish, devoted Christian statesman that we in the entire country will remember JERE COOPER. I offer my sympathy to his family and I sincerely hope that the indelible mark which he has left in this Chamber will always remain with us to guide us in the work for our country.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend to this point the remarks made by the Reverend Cross on the occasion to which our colleague, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MACHROWICZ] has just referred.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. EVINS). Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

EULOGY DELIVERED BY THE REVEREND ERNEST C. CROSS, CUMBERLAND PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, DYERSBURG, TENN.

The Holy Bible, the Word of God, reveals unto us that God is a Sovereign Ruler of all life, that He is all wise, all good, and all powerful. No true believer would question these attributes of God at any season, and yet there are times in the circumstances of life that our limited human understanding may not fully grasp the meaning of God as He is related to our circumstance. Perhaps many times in the last few hours since this community and the State and Nation heard the tragic words of the passing of the Honorable JERE COOPER, many minds have entertained the question, "Why did this have to happen?" In the words of an early American, who wrote of the crisis of his time, "These are days that try men's souls." Perhaps never before was there a greater need of unselfish dedicated Christian statesmen than this hour. And so we might be inclined to wonder if God is all wise and good, why could He not have spared one so needed in this very serious day?

I would not be so presumptuous as to attempt to solve this problem or answer this question other than to offer the words of the apostle when he said, "All things work together for good to those who love the Lord," and I believe that is true. Or we might say as Jesus said to Simon one time, "That which I do thou knowest not now but thou shalt understand hereafter." Maybe the Master said to His servant the other evening, "You've labored long and well." "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." Maybe in His all wise decision God has felt that He could bring into focus the pattern of statesmanship that we found in this departed servant that shall multiply his principles again and again in those that shall come after him.

Across the Nation, these days, have come many, many tributes from all levels of life from those who appreciated this great man. There are present in this sanctuary this afternoon those who knew him well as co-workers in the affairs of the State. Many could rise and more perfectly eulogize this gracious life than I today. There are members of this devoted family, this very closely knit family, who have exchanged tender words of love concerning his good and kind and sincere life. If they could express themselves they could paint a lovely picture of his life. I would not compete with these beautiful tributes, I would not attempt to add to them, such gracious words that have already been framed. But I would like to speak briefly of him in another way. I speak of him today as a churchman, a Christian, a man of God, and in this realm he held his highest office.

It would not be difficult today to find in the language of God's word some statement that is very appropriate for such a memorial service as this. It might be said as was spoken of Enoch, "He walked with God; and he was not; for God took him." We might say as of Barnabas, "He was a good man," with emphasis upon the good, "full of the Holy Ghost and of faith." We might say as Paul admonished Timothy, that he endured hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. But I found this expression that seemed to come back again and again to my mind in thinking of this hour, when David spoke of his loss in the passing of his servant Abner, "And the king said unto his servants, 'know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?' And I am this day weak, though anointed king." And I say again that surely there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel. He was a prince in this vicinity of his Israel. He was a champion in many ways. He was not only a veteran of foreign wars and a veteran of national and international conflicts, he was a veteran of personal trials in his own experience in life. A little more than a decade ago he returned home to face one of the greatest sorrows of his life, the loss of his companion. Sunday morning, February 4, 1951, he answered a telephone call to break his heart, that his young and brilliant 17-year-old son had suddenly passed away. I stood by his side in part of that hour of grief; I saw the strength of a great man undaunted by the grief of that occasion. A great man because he had a great God and a great source of strength by which to stand. He was a prince abroad as well as at home. Some months ago, one labeled him as "the loneliest man in Washington." That statement might be questioned. He may have lived a solitary life, but I doubt that he was the loneliest man, for he was surrounded with interests and devotions of many people that well filled his life. He did not participate in the gaiety of social festivities as some others may have participated but he believed in the seriousness of his responsibility and he found greater pleasure in serving than in being served by any society. He fulfilled the words of the Master who said, "But he that is greatest among you, let him be as the younger; and he that is chief, as he that does serve." In this area of service he found the fullness of life.

Yes, a prince is fallen this day in Israel and it is altogether fitting that the last service be held at this altar. For this is the scene of his great spiritual devotion. It was at this place that he learned to pray and believe in God and know his word. It was at this altar where he renewed his strength day after day of worship. Every opportunity that he had when home, Sunday morning he was here in this sanctuary, for here he found renewal of strength to meet the responsibilities of his day. It has been commonly known that not a day passed, wherever he was, but what he was found sometime on his knees, somewhere within the Word of God finding counsel for the major decisions that rested upon him.

From this side of life a prince has fallen but from the eternal side of life we may more correctly say that a prince has risen. For his term of office did not expire December 18, 1957, but rather his work shall follow him on and on. The convictions, the principles, the ideals, the hopes, the vision of his life shall be reenacted again and again in the decisions, in the courage, in the loyalty of those who shall come after him. The name of JERE COOPER shall not be immortalized upon some granite slab but rather in the hearts of men and women, young people, rich and poor, weak and strong, whose lives were touched by his dedicated influence. The name of JERE COOPER shall be a symbol of good government that shall bring shame upon selfish and indiscreet leadership and shall inspire good men to be better men and to make of this country a land of peace and justice for which he spent the greater part of his life to achieve. So Mr. COOPER we could say to you today, that your life has not been in vain but we shall keep on holding up the ideals that you cherished, that the time may come when there shall be "peace on earth good will toward men." So in that upper and better Kingdom, where there is perfect government today, a statesman has been promoted. He has been rewarded with the rejoining of loved ones who have preceded him in death.

Yes, this district has lost a statesman, our Nation a leader, our church a dedicated official, the family a beloved brother, but heaven has gained a good life, a consecrated believer in the Sovereign Ruler of all life. A prince has fallen here but has risen over there.

"When sorrow comes, as come it must,
In God a man must put his trust.
There is no power in mortal speech
The anguish of his soul to reach,
No voice, however sweet and low,
Can comfort him or ease the blow.
He cannot from his fellow men
Take strength that will sustain him then.
With all that kindly hands will do,
And all that love may offer, too,
He must believe throughout the test
That God has willed it for the best.
We realize how helpless then
Are all the gifts of mortal men.
No words which we have power to say
Can take the sting of grief away—
That Power which marks the sparrow's fall
Must comfort and sustain us all.
When sorrow comes, as come it must,
In God a man must place his trust.
With all the wealth which he may own,
He cannot meet the test alone,
And only he may stand serene
Who has a faith on which to lean."
—Edgar A. Guest.

Our Blessed Heavenly Father, may Thine arms enfold these whose hearts are hurt and may the light of Thy countenance mark the path that our feet shall tread, and may we be true to faith committed to us and when we shall have found the end of our journey may it be said of us that we stood as a prince of Israel. May we hear the words of the Master spoken to us, "Well done good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make you ruler of many things; enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." Bless the entire area affected in the passing of this loved one in the name of the Holy Comforter even the Lord Jesus Christ, we most humbly pray.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield to our distinguished colleague the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I want to pay my respects to the memory of JERE COOPER. To me he was a Congressman's Congressman, and I do not know how to characterize him better than that. When I first came here, JERE COOPER approached me and offered to assist me. I found that you could always go to him. No matter how busy he was, he had time to counsel with you and to help you. Like my colleague the gentleman from Michigan [Mr.

MACHROWICZ], I, too, had the privilege of going to Dyersburg to attend his funeral. The respect in which he was held and the homage paid him by the people of that community was evident on that occasion. I want to join with my colleagues in offering my sincere sympathy to his sister and brothers.

Representative government has lost a great champion. We have lost an able statesman.

I pray that God send us another humble, competent leader to replace him.

Mr. O'BRIEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. O'BRIEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, the death of the Honorable JERE COOPER takes from this body one of our most beloved and respected Members. I have served in the House with JERE since 1932, and we served side by side on the Committee on Ways and Means for many years. His death came as a great shock to me and I share the deep grief of all of us over his loss. We have lost an admired and respected colleague; the Nation has lost a statesman.

JERE was an outstanding chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. He was diligent in carrying out his duties; he was modest and unassuming but at the same time strong and courageous in fighting for those causes which he believed to be right; he was a highly able advocate on the floor of this House; and he was above all a Christian gentleman of the highest integrity.

I can say with no reservations whatsoever that JERE'S colleagues on the Committee on Ways and Means and in the House took great strength and inspiration from his leadership. We always paid very close attention when he spoke because he had a faculty for getting right to the nub of an issue in simple terms.

JERE COOPER was a man of the highest integrity and honesty. His word could be relied upon absolutely. He was a man of great dignity and fairness. I have never known him to be unfair to any Member or individual.

I have lost one of my best friends; the Nation has lost a great leader. I join in extending deepest sympathy to the members of JERE'S family.

Mr. ROGERS of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. ROGERS of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, it is with a sad heart that I join with the other Members in paying tribute to our departed colleague, JERE COOPER. It has been my privilege since being a Member of this House to know Mr. COOPER. We recognize that he has been an outstanding leader and factor in establishing legislation that has gone through this House in the last 25 years.

When I first came to Congress it was my privilege to discuss with Mr. COOPER many things. Often it was necessary for me to contact him in relation to con-stituent's matters. I always found him fair and decent and kind.

It was also my privilege to attend the services at Dyersburg, Tenn. It was there reflected by those who knew him best, the respect and honor and the distinction that he enjoyed in his own territory.

I join with the other Members in extending my sympathy to the members of his family.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I, too, would like to join the members of the Tennessee delegation and the Congress and the members of the great Committee on Ways and Means in paying tribute to this distinguished statesman from Tennessee, the late JERE COOPER.

It has been my lot in the years I have been a Member of this House to be one of those who bitterly opposed the position of the distinguished Tennessean on matters relating to our trade policies. I have engaged in some bitter floor fights with the gentleman from Tennessee over the renewal of our trade agreement. I was very much impressed by the comments of the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLS], in commenting on the sense of fairness of Mr. COOPER. In all of these fights in meetings of committees, and in the fights on this floor over the renewal of our trade policies, I, too, have been impressed with his fairness. He was a strong and virile fighter for the things in which he believed.

I desire to express my appreciation of the work of the distinguished gentleman as a Member of Congress and as a member of the Committee on Ways and Means. The things that he has accomplished will long be remembered.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. I yield to my distinguished colleague.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. Speaker, it is with profound sorrow that I rise today to join with my colleagues in the House in their tributes to our friend and colleague, JERE COOPER. As dean of the delegation from Tennessee he was a tower of strength. He was a great leader for all of us. He advised us freely, but only when we requested his advice, because JERE COOPER did not give advice freely. I know that he truly believed in the old maxim that "unasked for advice is seldom heeded." But when we sought his counsel and his advice he gave it willingly and freely.

I have known JERE since World War I. I knew him in his youth, and I knew him after he came to the Congress, and after I came here.

It has been said at times that he was a lonely man. I do not believe that JERE was lonely. He was not a gregarious person, but he was a most congenial companion. He was a great student and he loved to work on the great problems which confronted the House of Representatives. He was a great legislator, a great leader, and in my humble belief one of the greatest statesmen that ever graced this body.

We in Tennessee have lost a great leader and a good friend; the House of Representatives has lost a great statesman, a great parliamentarian, and the Nation has lost a leader and a statesman. Much time will pass before our grief and sense of loss is alleviated, but he will never be replaced in our hearts. Tennessee and the Nation have lost a fine public servant, and we all mourn his passing.

I extend to his family and his constituents and friends in Tennessee my deepest sympathy upon the great loss they have sustained.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Iowa [Mr. JENSEN].

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, it was with deep sorrow I learned of the passing of my beloved and esteemed friend JERE COOPER. I join with every Member of the Congress, and every person who knew JERE as we knew him here in saying that the things JERE did were done from a great kindly heart.

JERE COOPER, in my opinion, was one of the grandest, noblest, most honorable gentlemen who has ever graced the floor of the House of Representatives of the United States of America. I had many fine visits with JERE about legislation. He was always considerate; he always gave of his valuable time to counsel with me as he did with the rest of his colleagues.

I am sure the Honorable JERE COOPER of Tennessee will go down in history as one of the great statesmen of his time, and I pray that his enlightened leadership will be emulated over and over again by all of us who believe in this great, and good, and blessed Nation of ours.

JERE COOPER had much to do in bringing about the economic condition of this Nation; he played a great part in the raising of revenue. He was fair and just; he always thought first about those who could not help themselves. I knew JERE COOPER's heartbeat; I knew his high ideals, as you, my colleagues, knew them.

America can ill afford to lose men like JERE COOPER.

God rest his soul.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. I thank the gentleman from Iowa and now yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. MURRAY].

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. Speaker, I am sure I knew JERE COOPER personally longer than any Member of this body. JERE and I were reared within 45 miles of one another, his home being in Dyersburg and mine in Jackson, and we were about the same age. I knew JERE COOPER back in his college days before World War I.

We became friends at that time and our friendship increased in warmth and respect over the years. I regarded JERE COOPER as one of my closest and most dependable friends. He was the soul of honor and sincerity. His word was his bond. I never heard anyone question the integrity of JERE COOPER.

He was the dean of the Tennessee delegation. He was a great soldier in World War I. After World War I he returned to his home in Dyersburg and became city attorney. His first entry into state-wide politics was with the late United States Senator, Lawrence D. Tyson, when he managed his State campaign. JERE COOPER was elected to the House in 1928, succeeding a great legislator and outstanding statesman, Hon. Finis J. Garrett.

We will miss JERE COOPER. We will be deprived of his counsel and his wisdom. He was sincere, he was free from petty politics or guile of any kind. The Tennessee delegation will feel keenly his loss, as will the House of Representatives and the entire Congress in losing his able, outstanding services.

I extend my deepest sympathy to his three sisters and his brother. May I say in conclusion that JERE COOPER was a great statesman. He was truly an honored, respected leader in the House. He was one of the finest presiding officers I ever knew and he was a wise, experienced parliamentarian. Our Nation can ill afford at this time to lose a statesman of the caliber of JERE COOPER.

Mr. HERLONG. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. HERLONG].

Mr. HERLONG. Mr. Speaker, all of us were shocked and saddened by the untimely passing of the great and beloved chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. I join in expressing my deepest sympathy to his family.

JERE COOPER was one of the first people I met when I came to Congress. He was a devoted and effective public servant and served his constituency in a most capable manner. When he became chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means he assumed the heavy responsibilities of that position with dignity, confidence, and ability. These qualities inspired in those of us who were privileged to serve under him an assurance that here was a man on whom we could rely. As a presiding officer he was eminently fair, as you who have observed him functioning as Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House and upon occasion as Acting Speaker, will attest.

Mr. Speaker, this Congress has lost one of its most distinguished Members, the people of his district in Tennessee have lost a most able Representative and all of us have lost a valued friend.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL].

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I wish to associate my remarks with those of the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DAVIS] and the Members of this House who have paid tribute to this splendid son of the State of Tennessee, the late JERE COOPER.

I hesitated to join my voice in paying tribute to this great man because of my brief service in this body and because of the presence of many Members of this House who knew and worked with JERE COOPER so much longer than I. But I rise today, having known JERE COOPER since I was a little boy. I have known him always as a man of great sincerity, a man of great courage, a man of great integrity. My father and he were as close as brothers. They sat together on the Committee on Ways and Means and they fought together for fair and equitable taxes for the people of this country. These two men sat on this committee during the years when the present-day tax laws of this country were formulated.

It is these tax laws which manifest the fairness, the wisdom, and the integrity of JERE COOPER. The lasting friendship and respect of the Congress and people of this country will stand as a memorial to this great son of the State of Tennessee. I feel a great personal loss in the knowledge that JERE COOPER will no longer sit in the Congress of the United States. Each Member of this House feels that same loss, and yet the personal loss which we, his colleagues and friends, feel for this wonderful man is very small when we consider the loss which the country and the State of Tennessee feel at the passing of JERE COOPER.

I want to extend to his staff, to his devoted friend and secretary, Miss Hope Hart, to his brother and sisters, my own deep sympathy, the sympathy of my family and the sympathy of my mother who with my dad knew and respected JERE COOPER for the fine man he was. All of us, who respected and loved him, will pray to the good Lord that the soul of JERE COOPER will find everlasting peace in the arms of the God he loved and served here on earth.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. ROGERS].

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, to the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DAVIS] I want to express my deepest sorrow at the passing of all that could pass in this world of JERE COOPER. I sympathize so deeply with the great State of Tennessee and the great southern section of our country in their loss of their most illustrious son. I sympathize so deeply with my colleagues in the House in our loss and I sympathize so deeply in the Nation's loss. I cannot picture the House of Representatives without JERE COOPER. The history of his life is the life of an American boy grown and developed into greatness. I believe Judge DAVIS said that he started to work at 12 years of age, and I believe that work has never ceased. I hope he now from his labor is resting in God's mercy and in God's protection. I can see him now in the fight for the sort of taxation he wished. I can see him presiding over the House, as he did so many times, and I know of his granting my own wish to speak for a minute or two when members of his own committee and others sought time. I remember his tremendous ability as a legislator, his courtesy, his great dignity, and his quiet humor. In every sense of the word a true gentleman, he always seemed calm and unruffled. He never spoke of his losses and his own unhappiness, but he had a great sympathy for everyone else who was in trouble whether in a personal way or whether it was trouble in the district or in the Nation. I only wish that JERE COOPER could be with us today to help guide us in the days to come when we are fighting the most serious cold war we have ever fought. He would give to us honest and wise counsel and the strength of a great character and the courage of a lion. My deepest sympathy goes to his family and to his State.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. KARSTEN].

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Speaker, it was my privilege to know JERE COOPER for almost as long as I have been in Washington and during the past 3 years I was especially fortunate to have been able to serve with him on the Committee on Ways and Means.

While his untimely passing is a great loss to the people of his district as well as the Congress and our Nation, it is also a great personal loss to me. He was a man of many talents and virtues. Soldier, lawyer, leader of men, statesman, and Congressman extraordinary describe JERE COOPER. We shall miss his leadership in the Committee on Ways and Means, as well as the House of Representatives, but we shall also miss him as a friend whose cardinal virtue was that of kindness.

JERE COOPER lived by the Golden Rule every day of his life. His kindness to everyone came from his heart. He was one who did not criticize others but, instead, sought to look for their good qualities. He was never too busy to lend a helping hand to all who appealed to him. He had a sincere interest in the welfare of others for kindness dominated his whole life. Like a host of others, I shall always remember and cherish his many kindnesses to me over the years.

To his brother and sisters and other members of the family of my friend JERE COOPER, I extend my deepest sympathy.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks on the life and services of the late JERE COOPER.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, we have all lost a great friend in the passing of JERE COOPER. He was a man of impeccable character, of great ability and devotion to duty.

The world is better for his having passed this way.

Mr. SIMPSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, it is with heartfelt and profound sadness that I rise to pay tribute to the cherished memory of my beloved departed colleague and esteemed late chairman, the Honorable JERE COOPER, of Tennessee.

As one who was privileged to be closely associated with him over a rather considerable period, I can authoritatively state that Mr. COOPER was an extremely worthwhile friend, a noble public servant, and a patriotic statesman. He served well his constituents from his great State of Tennessee but he served equally well his fellow countrymen from every State in the Union. Mr. COOPER brought to his duties a conscientious energy and a farsighted wisdom that produced in him outstanding qualities of leadership.

There can be no doubt that the untimely passing of Mr. COOPER from our midst has increased the burdens that must be borne by those of us who remain. Similarly there can be no doubt that because we have been enriched by his friendship and inspired by his leadership, we will be better qualified to cope with those added burdens. The honored memory of this distinguished citizen of Dyersburg will long remain as an inspiration and an example to aid us in dealing with the issues confronting our Nation.

I am saddened by the loss of Mr. COOPER's friendship but I am grateful for having once possessed it. His leadership will be missed but those on whom responsibility of leadership devolve will be better leaders because of his example. The greatness of our Nation was strengthened by Mr. COOPER's contribution to its achievement. The greatness of the future of our Nation will be enlarged if we will follow the ideals and principles for which Mr. COOPER stood.

We extend to Mr. COOPER's family our deepest sympathy.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker, it is with deep sorrow that I join my colleagues in mourning the passing of our dear friend JERE COOPER, of Tennessee. His untimely death came as a tremendous shock to me; as it did to everyone, I know; and it is still difficult to realize that he will not be with us during this session of Congress.

I deem it a great privilege to have known JERE COOPER for many years, and to have served on the same committee with him ever since I was appointed to the Committee on Ways and Means in 1943, and under his chairmanship since the opening of the 84th Congress. I can say without reservation that I know of no Member of Congress who was more diligent or more hard working than the Congressman from the 10th District of Tennessee. He seldom missed a rollcall in the House and he was always in attendance at committee meetings.

His penchant for hard work was nothing recent—it had always been one of his prime characteristics, and was undoubtedly one of the assets that carried him through the many hardships he had to face. He had not come from a wealthy family and had been forced to make his own way since the age of 12. Despite all his financial difficulties he managed to complete high school and go on to obtain his law degree at Cumberland University in Lebanon, Tenn.

Unfortunately, the story of his personal life is not a completely happy one—it contained considerable sadness. His marriage, which began happily in 1930, ended tragically less than 5 years later when his wife died suddenly of pneumonia.

Filled with sorrow over the loss of his wife, his one consolation was his little son, Jere, Jr., who was then only a baby. During the following years he divided his efforts between his work in Congress, and seeing to the needs of his son, who was a quiet studious boy, well liked by his classmates, and a source of great pride to his father. When he was 14, he made his first trip to Washington, which apparently remained in his memory as one of the greatest experiences of his life.

Then came the tragic developments of February 1951. While his father was with Jere, Jr., in their home in Dyersburg, Tenn., the boy went to sleep one evening only to awake during the night with nausea and convulsions. He died a few hours later, and the source of the trouble was never known. The second tragedy left Mr. COOPER without any close family life, and forced him more than ever to devote his interest and energy to his work in Washington.

JERE COOPER was a good man, and a kindly man. In a complex world he was one of the few people I have known who was able to maintain a simple set of values to which he rigorously adhered. We shall miss him greatly, both in the committee and in the House.

Mr. AUCHINCLOSS. Mr. Speaker, JERE COOPER was not an easy man to know well but it was easy for anyone to recognize that he was a man of sterling character and of great ability. He was a dependable man of intense feelings, with definite convictions, and was not afraid to stand up for them. As a presiding officer he had few equals and, because of his thorough knowledge of the rules of parliamentary procedure, there were no situations he could not resolve. There was much personal sorrow in his life which he met with calm fortitude, commanding the sympathetic admiration of everyone. He was very brave.

I always had the greatest admiration for JERE COOPER and I shall miss him as indeed will everyone he came in contact with. The House of Representatives has lost a stalwart Member who contributed much and whose passing has left a great void. I extend my deepest sympathy to all his family and friends in this hour of their bereavement.

Mr. SADLAK. Mr. Speaker, JERE COOPER was my friend, my chairman, and my immediate neighbor sharing adjoining offices. Our association was friendly and our respective staffs were friendly.

From personal knowledge, I know the truth of the compliments and respect expressed on the floor today. I join in these sentiments. He was at all times "the gentleman from the Eighth District of Tennessee."

Mr. KEAN. Mr. Speaker, our Nation has suffered a great loss in the death of JERE COOPER. All of us have lost a friend. But this applies particularly to those of us who were so closely associated with him on the Ways and Means Committee.

Duty with him always came first. He was naturally primarily concerned with his work on the Ways and Means Committee, but in spite of his arduous duties as chairman he never neglected the work of the Congress as a whole.

We all remember his constant attendance on the floor where he kept himself fully informed of what was going on in matters which did not concern his committee. When he was requested by the Speaker, as he was so often, to preside over difficult sessions of the House, no one was a better presiding officer.

Coming from a district where he had had little opportunity to study financial matters, he made it a point when he was chosen for the Ways and Means Committee to make a deep study of the matters which came before it. Over the years he became a thorough expert on all details of taxation.

Though a strong partisan JERE when presiding was always fair to both sides of the aisle—on the floor as well as in committee.

He never broke his word to any Member.

We will miss him greatly.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I was shocked and grieved, as I am sure all his colleagues were, at the news of the passing of Congressman COOPER. We have lost a valued friend, a great legislator, and a great chairman of a great committee of this House. He will be sorely missed. I join in paying tribute to him and his memory.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. Speaker. I was deeply grieved when I learned just a few days before Christmas of the untimely passing of my dear friend and colleague, the Honorable JERE COOPER.

His death brought sadness to me at Christmastime.

Congressman COOPER was Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of which I am a member, and since I have had the honor of being connected with that committee I had occasion to become much better acquainted with the distinguished chairman and I had grown to love and respect him more and more. He was also dean of the Tennessee delegation.

In serving on the committee and on the floor of this body with Congressman COOPER, I knew—even at times when I differed with him on the issues—that he was sincere and conscientious and that he would fight until the bitter end to win his point of view. He served the people of his district and the people of the entire Nation ably and faithfully for more than 30 years as a Member of the United States Congress. He was, indeed, a great American statesman, a man of honor and of deep convictions. We all shall miss him.

I extend to his relatives and thousands of friends my heartfelt sympathy in the loss of a dear friend and a great leader.

Mr. DAGUE. Mr. Speaker, it is my firm belief that we are never so preoccupied with our own affairs that we cannot pause to admire the working of a great mind, and it was thus that I often found myself standing in open admiration of that great statesman, JERE COOPER, whose death has come at a time when we can ill afford to lose the benefit of his wisdom and the steady influence of his firm hand.

Like the Master he has gone to meet, JERE COOPER was not unacquainted with grief, and to be close to him was to sense that his inward burden was most heavy. And yet, despite his seeming loneliness, he invariably rose to splendid heights when he was called upon to preside over this body, and the fact that he was designated to fill the Speaker's chair on so many occasions attested to the recognition of his ability as a parliamentarian and presiding officer.

It has always been heartening for me to realize that we never separate as parties when it comes to the evaluation of a Member who has been taken from us, and I know that we shall all join in lamenting the passing of this distinguished legislator whose memory will be kept forever green in the hearts of those who have been privileged to call him friend.

Mr. LANE. Representative JERE COOPER, of Tennessee, passed away the week before Christmas.

For almost 30 years he was a Member of this House and at the time of his death was chairman of the powerful Ways and Means Committee.

In this responsible post and as Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, he became an outstanding parliamentarian. Through the years his colleagues placed complete confidence in his judgment and in his integrity.

For JERE COOPER was a gentleman all the way.

In the heat of legislative battles, when partisan viewpoints and personalities tended toward extremes, the wise counsels and patient manner of Representative COOPER restored reason and dignity to the legislative process, such was the high respect in which he was held by all.

Like so many of the Members of this House, he came from a humble family, and learned at an early age the virtues of hard work. In the tradition of our classless society, he won recognition by his own efforts and developed the talents which were to serve his constituents and the Nation with distinction.

Lawyer, veteran, and churchworker, he lived every moment of his journey through life as one who never forgot his responsibilities to his country and to God.

JERE COOPER, the man from Tennessee, has left us for life eternal, but as with all men that we are privileged to know and admire, the memory of his fine human qualities will ever be a part of us.

His was the grace of quiet leadership that was dedicated to the best interests of a free people.

JERE COOPER has gone, but the years of work and friendship that we shared with him are an experience that we shall always treasure.

For he strengthened our faith in democratic institutions and in the ability of representative government to overcome any challenge from any quarter. May his example continue to inspire us as we face the stern tasks ahead.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. Speaker, it was with great sadness that all of us read of the untimely death of JERE COOPER. It can be truthfully said he was a man without an enemy. A man of great ability, an expert in the field of tax and tariff legislation, and chairman of the great Ways and Means Committee, he commanded an important place in the House of Representatives. He will be sorely missed in the eventful days ahead.

As a parliamentarian, he possessed unusual skill and few men presided as gracefully as he. In my many years of close association with JERE COOPER, I never heard him utter an unkind word or criticism of another Member.

Men of the caliber of JERE COOPER gave a powerful strength to the Congress.

Tennessee has lost a fine American and a great legislator in his death. My deepest sympathy is extended to his family in their hour of sorrow.

Mr. SMITH of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I want to join in the tributes being paid to JERE COOPER. He was a statesman of the old southern school. The dignity of his bearing was an example for all of us. The integrity of his positions on the issues before the Congress was an even more important example. It is a privilege to have served in the House of Representatives with him.

I include as part of my remarks a very fitting tribute paid him in the Memphis Commercial-Appeal by Morris Cunningham, the Washington correspondent for that paper:

MIDSOUTH WILL FEEL LOSS IN DEATH OF JERE COOPER, AN EFFICIENT LAWMAKER—IN HIS QUIET WAY REPRESENTATIVE FROM DYERSBURG HAD BECOME AN IMPORTANT LEADER AND POWER IN CONGRESS

(By Morris Cunningham)

WASHINGTON, January 4.—The death of Representative JERE COOPER was a distinct loss to the interests of the Midsouth.

His passing, in Bethesda Naval Hospital December 18, will be felt in many legislative, governmental, and political fields in the forthcoming session of Congress.

In his quiet, unassuming way, Mr. COOPER had become one of the leaders of Congress, a man known for his high degree of personal integrity. His views, as a consequence, always commanded respectful attention.

Never an accomplished speaker, his effectiveness in floor debates flowed from the obvious sincerity of his statements. This same quality served him equally well in the leadership councils to which he increasingly was invited.

Yet it was characteristic of Mr. COOPER that despite his steadily rising station and increasing responsibilities he never lost sight of the interests of his constituents.

No striver for national or international renown, no seeker of headlines, his interests were those of his district, his State, his region, and his country, in about that order.

His favorite newspaper was not the New York Times or any of the other big eastern papers so popular with the politically ambitious, but the Dyersburg State Gazette, which he faithfully read and kept stacked in his office.

FOUGHT FOR SOUTH'S WAY OF LIFE

With dignity and logic, he fought through the years for the Tennessee Valley Authority, for flood control, for cotton legislation, and for preserving the South's way of life.

The House's sixth-ranking Democrat, and chairman of the taxwriting House Ways and Means Committee, he was saddled with terribly complicated chores.

Foremost among them was the task of keeping the tax laws equitable and adequate for the Nation's needs. Many men understandably would have shrunk from such exacting demands, but by working unbelievably long hours Mr. COOPER handled them as well as his other duties.

For a great many years he had occupied the same single room in the unpretentious Washington hotel when he was in Washington, which was most of the year.

A familiar sight to the room clerks was Mr. COOPER coming in from the Capitol after dark with a stack of papers and books to be studied during the night.

His power and influence, as well as his dignity and excellent manners, made him one of Washington's most attractive figures socially, but only rarely would he accept one of the social invitations that cascaded upon him.

The glitter of Washington's international society held no attraction. The few invitations he accepted were related to his district or region. These included the occasional dinners and luncheons of the Tennessee Society in Washington, the annual dinner of the Mississippi Valley Flood Control Association, and a few others.

LOST BOTH HIS WIFE AND SON

He enjoyed cigarettes, but was a resolute teetotaler in respect to anything alcoholic.

On behalf of Gov. Frank Clement, of Tennessee, I once persuaded him to attend a National Press Club party to present an honorary Tennessee colonelship to Tony Vaccaro, formerly of Memphis, who was retiring as president of the club.

Mr. COOPER's remarks were appropriately humorous and were well received. He seemed to be enjoying himself, but soon afterward he left, explaining that his nightly chores were waiting.

Because of his retiring nature and disinterest in personal publicity, Mr. COOPER was a poor news source. As a result, the important role he played in Congress was not well publicized.

An article by Sidney Shalett in the Saturday Evening Post, January 8, 1955, described him as the loneliest man in Washington.

A warm, friendly analysis, the article stressed the death of Mr. COOPER's wife in 1935, only 5 years after their marriage, and the subsequent death in 1951 of Jere, Jr., 16, their only child.

Mr. COOPER undoubtedly brooded over both of these tragedies and they accounted for a great part of his seeming shyness and almost superhuman work schedule.

His talents, his dignity and logic, and his capacity for work will be missed.

Mr. KEOGH. Mr. Speaker, I join with my colleagues in expressing profound sadness and a deep sense of loss over the untimely death of my friend, the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, JERE COOPER.

JERE was, as has been so eloquently pointed out by my colleagues today, a Christian gentleman in the highest sense of the word. He was a man of great courage in the face of personal adversity; he was a legislator and statesman of outstanding ability; and he was one who possessed those personal attributes of character which we all admire and respect.

JERE COOPER was a man of sound judgment and possessed a deep understanding and knowledge of the operations of our Government and in particular the processes of this great legislative body. We have all observed him many times when he was sitting in the chair and the precise and careful manner in which he presided, with dignity and consideration for all, regardless of the point of view being at that time espoused by individual Members.

He served his district and his Nation with distinction, and as chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means he devoted all of his energies and all of his waking hours to his heavy responsibilities and duties. He was a gentleman of strong will and great integrity. At the same time, as has also been so eloquently pointed out by my colleagues, he was a man of great modesty and unassuming in his personal demeanor.

His death was a shock to all of us, and I add my voice to those who have so fittingly paid tribute to him today. I extend my deepest condolences and sympathy to members of his family. The Christian example of his leadership will serve as an inspiration to all of us.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Speaker, it is a sad occasion to return to the Congress following a recess to find that death has taken a colleague with whom one has served for many years. It was with a sad heart that I learned of the death of the Honorable JERE COOPER, but a few short weeks before he would have begun his 30th year of service to the people of his native State of Tennessee—and to the people of the Nation—in the House of Representatives.

All of us here in the House will miss him as a person, with his inherent kindness and friendly interest. And we shall all miss him as a colleague who had a great understanding of the rules of the House. We shall miss his ability in presiding, whether it was in the committee which he so ably chaired, or in the House itself. The House will not be quite the same without this dedicated man's devotion to the programs and interests of the people, and without that fairness which was always present in his relationships with his colleagues.

When one reflects on the death of a valued colleague there arises the question of why this man, who could have given many more years of service to his Nation, was taken. But we do not question the will of God, and we are reassured when we remember that JERE COOPER was a deeply religious man, devoted to Christian principles. He lived a life full of service to his fellow man, and he leaves a lasting example of public service as a beacon to light the paths of those to follow.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, we shall miss this man as a great chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. We shall miss this man as an outstanding Member of the House of Representatives. And we shall miss him as a man among men.

Mr. BEAMER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to add my words of praise for JERE COOPER. When I first came to the Congress, he was one of the first men that I met and it seemed that our paths crossed on many occasions.

It was an early discovery that we both belonged to the same college fraternity. There were many other common interests which I hope I was privileged to share with this respected colleague of ours. I was impressed that he was ever attentive to his duties in the Congress and always conscious of the responsibilities that his years of service and his position in the House of Representatives imposed upon him.

This is one of the marks of true statesmanship which could be an example to many others.

Another outstanding characteristic of JERE COOPER was the fact that he believed in those principles that had made this country great, and he was not one to forego those principles for some of the many untried and false theories which unfortunately are being presented to all of us by certain groups.

Furthermore, he was exemplary in the fact that he did not speak often but when he spoke, all Members listened.

In pointing out these characteristics, I wish to include an editorial from the

Fort Wayne Journal Gazette under date of December 20, 1957:

PASSING OF JERE COOPER

Many American citizens may not be conscious of ever having read or heard the name of JERE COOPER, yet he was one of the most powerful men in our National Government.

COOPER, who was Congressman from the Eighth Tennessee District, died Wednesday night at the Bethesda Naval Hospital.

He was chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee which handles tax legislation. This is one of the most responsible jobs in Congress.

Despite his power, COOPER did not get many headlines. He was modest and retiring and a bachelor. He gave most of his time and attention to his important duties.

The man who is in line to succeed COOPER as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee is Representative WILBUR MILLS of the Second Arkansas District. MILLS is 48 years of age and a graduate of Harvard Law School. He is a conservative Democrat and brings to his new position a vast amount of experience, having been a Member of Congress since 1939.

It might be said in passing that the officeholders who make the most noise do not always wield the most power.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, permit me to join in and endorse the statements which have been made by my colleagues.

Anything that might here be said by me would not adequately express my respect for the ability, integrity, and public service which was in this body rendered by our departed colleague, JERE COOPER.

Departing, no man could leave behind him greater reason for the admiration for a record of service than that made by our colleague.

Always faithful to the trust reposed in him by his people; neither he nor his friends have any cause to regret either the manner or the degree in which he performed his duty.

He left a record which all may seek to equal—few, if any, will ever excell.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, JERE COOPER and I first came to Congress at the same time. Serving here with him over the past 30 years has been, for me, a rich and rewarding experience. I grieve for his loss deeply and personally; this body will miss him, the country will miss him.

We are indebted to a generous province that we have had among us such a great patriot, blessed with extraordinary talents and dedicated to the service of his country. With these talents, and in his allotted time, JERE COOPER has built a monument of service and good accomplishments far higher than any monument we could build to him. This monument will live and endure. His accomplishments will continue to serve the good of mankind, and his service will continue to inspire other men and women to great and good accomplishments.

Mr. DOYLE. Upon my entrance upon my duties as a Member of this great legislative body, about 11 years ago, I was immediately attracted to the evident fairness, soundness, sincerity, and ability of JERE COOPER in his every debate upon the floor or when he presided as Acting Speaker or Chairman of the Committee as a Whole. I also noted his cordial attitude toward Members who spoke with him. Therefore, I promptly began to submit some of my problems as a freshman Member to him. I always found him approachable and generous with his time and talent.

I suppose in about a dozen instances during these six terms I sought and relied upon his suggestions in answer to my questions. His able, sincere, Christian statesmanship and behavior appealed to me from the start.

The last subject I discussed with him, and about which I sought his mature judgment, was that of less than honorable discharges from the Military Establishments. He again freely gave me cordial hearing for a few minutes and then pleased me much by his telling me of some of the cases of lads who had received less than honorable discharges of one type or another; he greatly encouraged me and was truly helpful in the passage by the House of that bill.

When I read in the Washington paper a short time ago of his illness I naturally rushed to him at the hospital a short Christmas greeting and message of good will for his speedy and complete recovery. I am so thankful he received it a few days before his untimely death. And then I received from his loyal secretary the following letter:

MY DEAR FRIEND: Your Christmas greeting card was received in this office just before the death of our beloved Congressman, the Honorable JERE COOPER.

Mr. COOPER always enjoyed his Christmas cards and took great pleasure in answering each one with a personal letter. I visited him at the hospital just a few hours before he died and took the unanswered cards and letters that had come in up to that day. He had me read each one of them to him and then asked me to acknowledge them and bring them back for his signature. He was in good spirits and talked about returning to his office in a few weeks. That was my last visit with him. His sudden death, with its shock and grief to his office staff, has delayed this message until today.

If you care to correspond with this office during the next month about any service we may be able to render, you may send a letter to the address given below.

With my wish for the blessings of good health, peace, and happiness in the coming New Year, I am,

Sincerely your friend,

HOPE HART, Secretary.

Mrs. Doyle and I extend to his family our sincere and understanding sympathy. Even though he has passed on to his just reward and is no longer personally present daily in our midst, I know you will agree with me when I say of his life amongst us that it was a timely example of the power which a sincere, honest, upright, able, and dedicated life is certain to generate and perpetuate.

Mr. ROONEY. Mr. Speaker, I deeply regret the untimely passing of my good friend and beloved colleague, the Honorable JERE COOPER, of Dyersburg, Tenn.

JERE was first elected to the 71st Congress and served continuously in this body until the time of his death at the Bethesda Naval Hospital on December 18 last.

As chairman of the powerful Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives he served with great honor and distinction. He was a fine American, one whose first thought was of his country and of the people he represented in the Eighth Congressional District of the State of Tennessee. JERE commanded the respect and admiration of his colleagues on both sides of the aisle. He was always kind, just, and humble in his dealings with his fellow men and was, in my opinion, a gentleman of the old school.

I have lost a true and dear friend, and I shall for the rest of my life have a very warm recollection of JERE COOPER.

Mr. BURNS of Hawaii. Mr. Speaker, in joining with my colleagues of the House of Representatives in the final tribute to a highly respected and dearly beloved colleague, I am extremely conscious of the fact that without exception the Members of this House are generously kind and graciously courteous to freshmen Members. At least, I have found this to be so.

No one was kinder, more gracious, nor more helpful than the outstanding and distinguished chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, the esteemed and respected gentleman from Tennessee, the Honorable JERE COOPER. Though occupied with onerous and most responsible duties as chairman of the great Committee on Ways and Means—a subject in which he was extremely knowledgeable—JERE COOPER always had time for a friendly and encouraging word, sound advice on a problem, or a helping hand for those in need.

I had not known that JERE COOPER was ill. Following my return from Hawaii and from committee activities after the adjournment of Congress, I picked up the paper on December 17, 1957, and noticed an item reporting that Chairman COOPER was ill and in the hospital. I am most grateful that instead of turning toward home that same evening, I continued on to the hospital on the off chance that I might be able to see him. At his insistence, I did see him and we talked briefly. His spirits were high, he looked well and he was confident of the future, for he asked me to come back when I could stay longer.

The next evening I heard a radio broadcast announcing that he had passed on. I thank, from the bottom of my heart, the Almighty who guides our steps that I had had this last opportunity.

For JERE COOPER had done me great honor. Typical of his kindness, he had invited me to sit with him one day in the dining room for lunch. This was a Saturday afternoon and late. I did not get to lunch the next Saturday. The following Monday on the floor, Chairman COOPER asked where I had been on Saturday. As a result, we regularly had lunch together on Saturdays. I was thus afforded an opportunity of knowing the true breadth and greatness of as dedicated a servant of the people as has ever served the people of his district and of the State.

It is customary that we speak well of the dead. The Members and Delegates in the House speak well of their colleagues. None of the tribute, none of the praise, none of the accolade accorded JERE COOPER are exaggerated in the slightest. JERE COOPER deserves every bit of praise, every bit of honor and every tribute, and more, for he was a Christian who practiced his faith in his daily life.

To his surviving family and to his constituents I express my deepest sympathy. And, as I reflected on my loss, the loss of the country, and the mystery of the hereafter, I was reminded of the poem we all know:

Abou Ben Adhem, may his tribe increase
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace
And saw within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich, and like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold.
Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold, and to the presence in the room, he
said,

"What writest thou?"

The vision raised its head, and with a look
made of all sweet accord, answered,

"The names of those who love the Lord."

"And is mine one?" said Abou

"Nay, not so," replied the angel.

Abou spoke more low, but cheerily still; and
said,

"I pray thee then, write me as one who loves his fellow men."

The angel wrote, and vanished.

The next night it came again with great
wakening light,

And showed names whom Lord of God had blessed,

And, lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest.

I am sure that the name of JERE COOPER was mighty high on the list.

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, I was greatly shocked and deeply touched by the sad news of the sudden, untimely passing of our distinguished friend and beloved colleague, the Honorable JERE COOPER. Congressman COOPER was one of the great men of the House, and one of the great Americans of our time. He exemplified, in his personal and official life, the most cherished attributes of the dedicated statesman, and the most gracious and impressive qualities of a noble Christian gentleman.

JERE COOPER commanded the respect, admiration, and affection of every Member of the House. His career was typically American. By hard work, outstanding ability, perseverance, and courage, he rose steadily in life until he achieved one of the highest positions in the Congress of the United States. His contributions to our Nation were truly noteworthy and historic.

JERE COOPER was a modest and self-effacing man, devoid of bombast and hypocrisy, devoted to his family and friends and to his work.

A painstaking, brilliant student of government, particularly questions of taxation and revenue, and one of the greatest parliamentarians in the history of the House, he was resolute of purpose, dedicated in his Americanism, and indomitable in his ceaseless striving for the betterment of the American Government and the American people.

JERE COOPER was a man of many diverse interests, and his versatility and flexibility of mind enabled him to master the most intricate problems of statescraft. In his personal relationships, he was kindly, amiable, and thoughtful of others, invariably willing to hold out the hand of valued counsel and helpfulness to those who sought, in his alert, well-informed mind and rich experience, some solution to their problems.

Manifestly, the House can never adequately fill the void which his sorrowful demise has left in our official and personal lives. He was so distinctly a rare individual, and so devotedly a true champion of the House and of his country—stalwart, strong, and inspiring, noble of purpose, warm in his friendships, loved by family and friends, consecrated in the best sense to the fulfillment of America's noblest destiny that indeed we shall never look upon his like again.

In the House, in his district, in his State, and in the Nation, a giant oak has fallen, and we join in sorrowful tribute to his memory in mourning the great loss which his family, his constituency, and the Nation has suffered in the passing of this great, loyal son of the Volunteer State.

It is with a full heart indeed that I join with Members of the House in expressing my sympathy and condolences to his bereaved family. May the good Lord in His kindness and mercy lighten their heavy burden of sorrow, and may our noble friend, JERE COOPER, find lasting and abiding peace in his eternal home.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, I wish to join with others in paying tribute to the memory of the late JERE COOPER, the distinguished and able chairman of the great Committee on Ways and Means.

When I was first elected to Congress a number of years ago, I soon made the acquaintance of JERE COOPER, and it was not long before I discovered that he was a tower of strength in the House of Representatives. JERE COOPER was a man of tremendous energy and great ability. His devotion and dedication to duty were outstanding. I am glad that we live in a country that can produce men of the stature of the late Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. We honor ourselves today when we pay tribute to the memory of our departed colleague.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Speaker, on the walls of the Ways and Means Committee hearing room are found oil paintings of former distinguished Members of this House who during the past 100 years have been chairmen of that great and important committee. An oil painting of JERE COOPER hangs there to show that he belongs to that galaxy of distinguished statesmen. In my humble opinion the name of JERE COOPER ranks very near the top of that roster.

JERE COOPER should be characterized as having been a perfectionist. Whatever activity or responsibility he undertook, whether presiding over the deliberations of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, presiding over the deliberations of the Ways and Means Committee, or standing in the well of the House to explain the intricacies of a complicated tax bill that was before the House for consideration and action, JERE COOPER could be said to be perfection itself. He was undoubtedly one of the most able, one of the best qualified, one of the most efficient Members of this House during the past quarter of a century.

In his attitude toward legislation, in his calm, logical, judicial manner of tackling knotty legislative matters, JERE COOPER reminded me of our former colleague, Fred Vinson, who afterward became Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. If JERE COOPER had been permitted to follow in the footsteps of Fred Vinson, he would undoubtedly have added grace and dignity to that Court, performed the duties of that office with great credit to himself, and with satisfaction to the majority of the American people, located in all sections of our great Nation.

Mr. Speaker, moments such as these call for words of solace, of hope, of encouragement. My sentiments are best expressed in the words of an unknown poet who wrote a short poem entitled "There Is No Death." I offer it to you as an expression of my feelings at this time:

THERE IS NO DEATH

There is no death! the stars go down
To rise upon some other shore,
And bright in heaven's jeweled crown
They shine forevermore.

There is no death! the dust we tread
Shall change beneath the summer showers
To golden grain, or mellow fruit,
Or rainbow-tinted flowers.

There is no death! although we grieve
When beautiful familiar forms
That we have learned to love
Are born from our embracing arms.

Although with bowed and breaking heart,
With sable garb and silent tread
We bear their senseless dust to earth,
And say that they are dead.

They are not dead! they have but passed
Beyond the mists that blind us here
Into the new and larger life
Of that serener sphere.

Tho' disenthralled and glorified,
They still are here and love us yet:
The dear ones they have left behind
They never can forget.

And we, his colleagues, will not forget
JERE COOPER.

Mrs. GRANAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I cannot let this occasion pass without mentioning the kindness which I received as a new Member of Congress last year from the Honorable JERE COOPER who had the patience and took the time to give me much useful advice in connection with my efforts to serve my constituents.

From time to time last year, when problems arose in my office dealing with matters before the Committee on Ways and Means, Mr. COOPER could always be counted upon to provide invaluable guidance, and I shall always appreciate that help.

I was impressed by the unceasing efforts he put forward as a Member of Congress. His constituents were most fortunate in having him as their Representative. I feel he gave his life to them and to his country.

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, I join our colleagues from Tennessee in paying a word of tribute to one of the great men of this House. JERE COOPER was a skilled and finished legislator and parliamentarian in every sense of the term. He presided over his committee and over this House while in the Committee of the Whole with rare distinction. He presented legislation from the Committee on Ways and Means with great thoroughness and force.

He was a kind and helpful colleague and friend, ever willing to extend a hand to a younger Member of the House. Time and again I have been the recipient of his generous assistance. JERE COOPER was a man of courage and determination. He was not quick to form opinions but he was steadfast in his convictions. He was one of the great legislators of our time.

We will all miss him sorely in the arduous days ahead. I extend my deepest sympathy to his loved ones.

Mr. RHODES of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I join in paying tribute to the Honorable JERE COOPER, whose untimely passing came as a great shock to us all. As the distinguished chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, he served our Nation well. He will long be remembered for his untiring efforts to make our tax laws more equitable for all our citizens. JERE COOPER's great ability, his sincerity and courage brought admiration and respect from all who served with him in this body. It was a great privilege and honor to have known him as a friend.

Mr. BREEDING. Mr. Speaker, it is with the greatest of heartfelt sadness that I join with the distinguished members of the House Committee on Ways and Means and the entire delegation of the great State of Tennessee in expressing my sorrow over the untimely passing of one of America's leading statesmen and my esteemed friend, JERE COOPER.

The Congress and the Nation, in my estimation, have lost one of the ablest leaders to have appeared on our scene for many long years. JERE COOPER was a man possessed of genuineness and of exceptional vision, of kindness and wisdom. His contributions to his country and to his friends will surely serve as a monument to his memory outlasting the most permanent of man-made shrines.

When I arrived in Washington to take my place as a Member of this body, I sought out JERE COOPER for advice and guidance and friendship. He gave to me unstintingly, without hesitation. I shall long remember his generosity, his keenness of mind and farsightedness.

Mr. Speaker, I mourn the passing of JERE COOPER, who, in my opinion, was one of the greatest statesmen of our time.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Speaker, the House has sustained an irreparable loss in the death of the Honorable JERE COOPER, of Tennessee. For a period of 29 years JERE COOPER served his country in a diligent and conscientious manner. As chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means his responsibilities were manifold, but never during his tenure as a Representative did he neglect the problems of his constituents. And somehow in addition to all his other obligations he found time to manifest a true interest in his neighboring State of Kentucky.

JERE COOPER will long be missed, for such ability as he possessed is not soon replaced. It was, indeed, a privilege to witness his presentation of the bills reported from the Committee on Ways and Means. He was a master of many subjects, and his lucid descriptions of the bills were enlightening to all.

To appreciate fully the character of this man, one must know that he experienced profound sorrow in the death of his wife and only son. Transcending his suffering, however, was JERE COOPER's faith in God and devotion to duty. These intrinsic qualities brought to him not only the respect and admiration of his colleagues but the abiding affection of his constituents.

JERE COOPER's innumerable achievements have won him the gratitude of his district, his State, and the Congress of the United States. As a personal friend I would like to extend my very deepest sympathy to the members of his family.

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Speaker, the South has produced many outstanding statesmen for whom it has held justifiable pride. One of these who held a place of unquestioned leadership was our late, honored, and beloved colleague, JERE COOPER, of Tennessee. His contributions to public life were manifold. Now we are saddened by his absence. Those of us who had the pleasure of serving with him will long remember the outstanding faith and devotion which JERE COOPER gave to his constituents, his State, and his Nation. I join with my colleagues in expressing my deepest regrets at his passing. No one who knew him can fail to realize the magnitude of our loss.

JERE COOPER was outstanding in all that he did. Particularly, however, will he be remembered for his untiring service and contributions as chairman of the important Ways and Means Committee where he presided with dignity, honor, and integrity.

From the time that I first came to Congress, I held him in highest esteem and benefited from his counsel. I never failed to be impressed by the splendid manner in which he conducted himself in his work as a Member of Congress. By his presence here he added substantially to the standing of the Congress and to the soundness of its deliberations.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Mr. Speaker, as one of the new Members of the 85th Congress, I learned to hold the late Mr. COOPER in the high esteem and regard I witnessed on every hand from the other and older Members of Congress. He was a dedicated legislator, and any man might well model his devotion to his Congressional duties to the pattern set by this great gentleman from Tennessee.

Few of us remember any session, or part of a legislative day, in the first year of the 85th Congress, that Mr. COOPER was not present on the floor, listening intently to the procedure. I always felt that he had a magnificent grasp of procedure and frequently went over to him for explanation of some parliamentary maneuver. He always had time for us, and made us feel that he was interested in everything we did or said.

It would indeed be hard to measure his contribution to his country. I shall not attempt to do so. I am aware most vividly of the personal contribution he made in the lives and thinking of new Congressmen.

I will always think of him as a great and kindly man, devoted patriot, and exemplary American.

Mr. HORAN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to join my colleagues in paying tribute to our departed Member, JERE COOPER.

There was a dignity to JERE COOPER that immediately brought him to my attention when, several years ago, I first took my seat in Congress.

There was an aura of courtesy about him that colored his speech and his actions and made him all the more effective in his work here.

There was a confirming sense of sincerity in his work that made you listen and think when he was speaking whether you were in agreement or not.

We shall miss him sorely, for he added to this body those things we need to make this House of Representatives what it should be to this Nation and the world.

Mr. IKARD. Mr. Speaker, it is with a feeling of deepest sorrow that I rise at the first of this new session to join with my colleagues in paying tribute to the memory of my good friend and chairman, JERE COOPER.

Others have spoken at length on his qualities as a statesman and as an individual. I concur fully with what has been said and can only add that, no matter how hard we may try to give expression to our deep feeling of loss over his death, we all find that words are inadequate.

JERE COOPER brought to bear on his heavy duties and responsibilities dedicated principles and moral values which will always stand as an example to his colleagues. His sense of fairness, his unquestioned integrity and his quiet dignity were attributes of character which set JERE COOPER apart from the rank and file and which distinguished him as one whose actions were worthy of emulation by his friends and colleagues.

He presided over the Committee on Ways and Means and over the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, with precision and high professional ability. He was a Christian gentleman who was kind, considerate, and thoughtful with respect to feelings of others. He gave helpful advice and counsel to a host of new Members of this great legislative body. I treasured his friendship highly and in his passing I have lost a close friend. The Nation, at a time when it can ill afford it, has lost a great legislator and statesman.

To the members of his family, I extend deepest sympathy.

Mr. GREGORY. Mr. Speaker, in the untimely passing of JERE COOPER the Nation, the great Volunteer State of Tennessee, and the Congress of the United States lost a valuable public servant, and the people of all walks of life lost a great champion.

I have the honor to represent the Kentucky district immediately adjacent to the Eighth District of Tennessee which he has so ably represented for many years and, therefore, on the borderlines of Kentucky and Tennessee we have enjoyed many mutual friends—for the division line is a phantom line so far as friendships are concerned. We have had common problems in representing our constituency, and it has been a source of genuine satisfaction to work with him throughout these years.

Mr. Speaker, in my service in Congress and as a member of the great committee over which he so ably presided as chairman, I have never known a man more dedicated to duty than JERE COOPER. To JERE COOPER his responsibility to his country, to his State and his district always came first. He gave his service to his country in uniform and later in public life, and I think it might appropriately be said that he gave his life for his country and died in line of duty.

Shortly before his passing I had the great privilege of being with him in Tennessee at a meeting called to further the interests of west Tennessee and west Kentucky, at which time he was, as usual, endeavoring to be of service to his constituency. JERE COOPER has left a challenge to others to carry on for the benefit of humanity and has left virtues long to exist, carved on the tablets of love and memory.

In his passing the Nation has lost a great statesman, his family a devoted brother, and I a good friend. I know how that with his great faith, his Christian spirit, so evident in life, he is enjoying the reward for a life well spent on this earth.

Mr. LONG. Mr. Speaker, the State of Tennessee and all America lost a valuable public servant when JERE COOPER passed away on December 18, 1957. I feel my personal loss deeply. He was too valuable a friend and legislator to lose.

JERE COOPER not only knew his government, but he had a great faith in our way of life. His life was dedicated to its preservation and its betterment.

His death has taken from the House of Representatives a tireless and extremely capable expert in the field of taxation. His expert judgment, ceaseless efforts, and devotion to his duties as chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means stand as a memorial to him.

There is one thing we can never forget about JERE COOPER, and that was his constant demonstration of the results of hard work and complete devotion to duty. From the time he was 12 years of age he made his own way in the world. He never complained but looked toward a goal and attained it.

JERE COOPER's services to his nation included distinguished efforts on the field of battle in World War I and devoted service to the American Legion on local, State, and national levels.

When our late colleague presided over highly controversial sessions of the House, he commanded respect and praise from both sides of the aisle. He was a loyal Democrat but first of all he was a loyal American. It was a privilege to know him. Time will continue to reveal JERE COOPER's contributions to this Nation in many areas, but particularly in the fields of economic and political growth.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I join with the many friends of JERE COOPER in expressing my sorrow at his untimely passing.

I subscribe to every tribute which has been paid him here today. JERE COOPER represented the finest as a man and as a statesman. He was able, industrious, sincere, and courageous.

His death is a great loss to the Nation, and his record here will always be a challenge to all.

I join in expressing my sincere sympathy to his relatives and friends.

Mrs. KEE. Mr. Speaker, it is with a sense of deep personal loss that I pay my humble tribute to the memory of our late colleague, the Honorable JERE COOPER, of Tennessee.

We have lost a great statesman, a wonderful friend, and a distinguished colleague. It seems strange indeed to attend sessions of the House and find that JERE COOPER is no longer here. He was a great inspiration to those of us who were privileged to serve with him in the House, and his wise counsel and good advice will be sorely missed. Congressman COOPER will be long remembered for his many wonderful qualities.

My sympathy goes out especially to his family and Congressional staff in their great loss.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, for his staff and his family and the Tennessee delegation, I wish to express our very deep and sincere appreciation for the moments in which so many beautiful tributes have been expressed.

Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

House Resolution 421

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. JERE COOPER, a Representative from the State of Tennessee.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The resolution was agreed to.

THE LATE HONORABLE HENDERSON LANHAM

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. EVINS). The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. VINSON].

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, it is my sad duty to announce to the House the sudden and tragic death of a distinguished Georgian, the late HENDERSON LOVELACE LANHAM.

Mr. LANHAM was killed instantly on November 10 when his car collided with a train in Rome, Ga., as he was proceeding to address a parent-teachers' association meeting at a nearby school.

I know of no Member of the House more devoted to his constituents, his district, and his State, than the late HENDERSON LANHAM.

Born in Rome, Ga., in 1888, and educated in the public schools of Rome and the Piedmont Institute at Rockmart, Ga., Mr. LANHAM was the recipient of a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Georgia, as well as a bachelor of laws degree from the same university.

Mr. LANHAM also had a master of arts degree from the Harvard University Graduate School.

He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Delta Theta Phi law fraternity.

HENDERSON LANHAM had a long and distinguished record as a public servant.

He served as chairman of the Board of Education of the city of Rome, and later as a member of the house of representatives in the Georgia General Assembly. He was also solicitor general for the Rome judicial circuit, and was elected to the 80th Congress, and each succeeding Congress.

In his early career in the Congress he served as a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee and was one of the architects of the foreign aid program. He recognized the necessity for the maintenance of a strong free world and was convinced of the urgency of a properly executed foreign aid program.

He became a member of the Appropriations Committee in the 84th Congress and an outstanding member of the Subcommittees on Health, Education, and Welfare, and, because of his outstanding contributions on the Foreign Affairs Committee, a member of the Foreign Operations Subcommittee.

HENDERSON LANHAM was a man of integrity, sincerity, and brilliance. He never hesitated to do what he thought was right, regardless of the consequences. He was as outspoken in his views on maintaining a strong national defense. He had the courage of his convictions and never hesitated to express those convictions.

HENDERSON LANHAM was also a devout man—a man who practiced the teachings of Christ, and who lived by the Golden Rule.

The Nation can ill afford to lose men of his stature in these troubled times. His devoted friends and colleagues from the Georgia delegation paid their last respects to an outstanding American citizen when they attended Mr. LANHAM's funeral in Rome, Ga. The chairman of his Subcommittee on Foreign Operations, the distinguished Member from Louisiana [Mr. PASSMAN], represented the Appropriations Committee.

To his family, his countless friends, and constituents, I extend my deepest sympathy. HENDERSON LANHAM faithfully served his State and his Nation; he was true to his friends, and true to his Christian principles.

He earned the epitaph "Christian statesman." It is an honor to which many aspire, but few attain.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to include in my remarks editorials that appeared in various Georgia newspapers concerning the tragic death of the late HENDERSON LANHAM.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PRESTON). Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. VINSON. The Atlanta Journal in an editorial written just after the death of Mr. LANHAM said:

Congressman HENDERSON LANHAM, of Rome, for 11 years brought the Georgia delegation in Congress a special quota of intellect and political courage not easily found, or replaced, in politics.

Mr. LANHAM was that rare personality who wore a Phi Beta Kappa key lightly enough to bore no one, much less the voters of his Seventh District. And yet he wore it seriously enough to keep himself intellectually aggressive throughout a long and busy political career.

He was, in fact, a man who was as much at home with books as with people and politics, and it speaks loads for him that he was as favored a speaker on college campuses as he was on the stump for election to the Georgia General Assembly or to Congress.

Mr. LANHAM was a liberal, politically. This placed him often at odds with members of the Georgia delegation, or at least vote-wise, for his fellow congressmen admired him personally and respected his courage in voting always what he believed best for his State and his district.

The Cedartown Standard carried the following article written by Fields Whately:

Many things man shall never understand. The tragic death of HENDERSON LANHAM emphasizes again the strange decrees that providence so often issues. Another link in the golden chain of friendship has been broken, and only God knows the answer.

Our friend did not live nor think in petty terms. Nor did he make fine things small and beautiful things unattractive. He saw truth clearly, placing spiritual and mental values on the highest plateau of service to his fellow man.

Quiet and modest, he held the lifelong respect of thousands of admirers. A constant effort on his part to put nobler purposes into the lives of his constituents helped sow the seed of Christianity among his followers:

Man, with all his faults, is God's masterpiece. His existence on the shores of time is very brief. Life begets death, but God brings resurrection. Death is a solemn moment to a friend—a sacred moment to the family.

As a river gets deeper as it nears the sea, so such a life as our friend gets deeper and richer and mellow as it approaches eternity. After all has been said, service to a fellow man is the greatest of all virtues.

The memory of HENDERSON LANHAM, as the days come and go, will be an unending reminder of a life quietly and unselfishly lived. Truly, his years were well spent. Words spoken in accents soft, attest the admiration and love of his friends.

Harold Davis, writing in the Atlanta Journal, said:

The death of HENDERSON LANHAM of Rome removes from the scene Georgia's most liberal and most intellectual Congressman.

From his seat on the House Appropriations Committee, the Rome solon fought effectively for the programs that were close to his heart—ideals which the ultra conservative called New Deal but which he felt were necessary for the well-being of the little man.

LANHAM was an intellectual by any standards. He was a Phi Beta Kappa who seldom wore his key. The walls of his office were lined with books—mostly read and digested. And his appetite for good music was deep indeed.

In his apartment in the Methodist Building, a stone's throw from the Capitol, he had a fine high-fidelity set and a comprehensive library of classical records. The machine was seldom silent when he was at home.

LANHAM wore his intellectual achievements lightly and with modesty; he never felt called upon to apologize for them, even though they are not usually political assets.

In tribute to Congressman LANHAM, the Atlanta Constitution said:

Eleven years ago a stately, scholarly Rome lawyer, HENDERSON LANHAM, left the home and the rose garden which was his hobby and went to Washington as Representative from Georgia's Seventh District.

Judge LANHAM gave his district no reason to regret the trust it had placed in him. He established himself as a legislator of diligence, intelligence, integrity, and independence.

He asked no favors, he dodged no issues, he rarely missed a rollcall.

He was loyal to party, yet he could and did rise above the partisan and the section to vote on a measure according to what he considered the national interest.

Georgians are grieved at the passing of this man who was appreciated and respected by his constituents and loved by those who knew him intimately.

The mourning goes well beyond the confines of a Congressional district and a State.

The Nation has lost a public servant for whom the motivation was the greatest good to the greatest number.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, all of Georgia was grieved and saddened by the tragic death of HENDERSON LANHAM on November 10, 1957, in a train-car collision in his hometown of Rome, Ga., on his way to address a parent-teachers' association meeting. His death was a grievous blow and loss not only to Georgia and the Southland, but to the entire Nation.

HENDERSON LANHAM was loved and respected by his colleagues on both sides of the aisle. His 10 years of service in the House and his membership on the House Appropriations Committee gained for him both respect and influence in the House. He was an independent thinker and a man of profound learning and integrity. He was also a lover of nature and of music.

The Seventh District of Georgia elected him to Congress six times, and he was rewarded with worthy and important committee assignments by the House, where he served so well and capably.

In 1957, HENDERSON LANHAM received the American Vocational Association's distinguished service citation, the second Georgian to be so honored. In 51 years only 6 Americans have been given this worthy award.

Georgia and the Nation have lost a valuable public servant and friend whose life was spent in the lofty motivation of the greatest good for the greatest number. His fine character, his gentle manner, and the steadfastness of his convictions will always live in the memory of those whose lives he touched. HENDERSON will be missed greatly by his colleagues in the House where he served so well and so long. He was my friend, and I grieve for his loss with his loved ones.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LANDRUM].

Mr. LANDRUM. Mr. Speaker, in this great land of America, most men are God-fearing Christians. Occasionally one man ranks among men as a true paragon of Christian living. HENDERSON LANHAM was such a man.

He was fearless—afraid of nothing but to do wrong; he was courageous—requiring only his own clear conscience to sustain him; he was wise for he searched for truth; he was sympathetic for he understood the simple and the complex; he was forceful—yet always gentle.

Standing in his study off the living room of his home in Rome, Ga., one could see his love of everything good: flowers, music, history, law, people, and above all his love and belief in God. Open on his desk, where shortly before his tragic death, he was in characteristic study, was an essay by one of the great ministers entitled "The Assurance of Immortality."

And, so he died as he lived, with thoughts only of good. No finer public servant, no one more dedicated to the ideals of democracy has lived with us. Certainly among all who knew him he "shall not perish but have everlasting life."

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to our colleague, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. DAVIS].

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, it is with a feeling of deep sadness that I ask recognition on this first day of this new session of Congress to pay a tribute to our departed colleague, HENDERSON LANHAM. Throughout the 11 years that I served with him in this House, I felt closer to him than to the average Member of the Congress. We were elected to this body at the same time in 1946, and we took the oath of office together in January of 1947. I had known HENDERSON LANHAM at home in Georgia, prior to that time. He had made a distinguished record of public service there, as the dean of our delegation has already pointed out. He had demonstrated through his service in the Georgia House of Representatives, as an official of the city of Rome and the county of Floyd, and as prosecuting attorney of his judicial circuit, that he was a man of integrity; that he was a man who practiced truth, honor, and honesty. He had demonstrated that he was a man of courage and that he would stand, regardless of consequences, for those things in which he believed. He was a man of gentleness by nature. While he could be courageous and enter with all the force that was in him into any battle in which he was engaged, he possessed the attributes of gentleness, and he knew the finer and sweeter things of life. He has left us here in the Georgia delegation and in the Congress a fine example to follow. It is with much sadness and with profound sorrow that I join with my colleagues from Georgia and others in the House of Representatives in expressing this tribute to him. I extend to his family, his daughter, and his grandchildren, of whom he was so fond and whom he loved so well, my deepest sympathy in this time of sorrow.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. JUDD].

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Speaker, it was my privilege to serve for several terms on the Committee on Foreign Affairs with the gentleman from Georgia, our greatly beloved colleague and friend, HENDERSON LANHAM. There I came to know not only the scholarliness of his mind and the diligence with which he studied all questions, but also the fair and judicious way in which he arrived at decisions so that they would be in the interest first of all of our country. I want to join in paying tribute to him as a good personal friend and as a fine gentleman and outstanding patriot.

Mr. Speaker, I feel impelled today to give one illustration of the quality of HENDERSON LANHAM. It is an instance which, I think, has never been publicly discussed previously. It was on a Saturday morning in April 1953, when Congressional leaders of both Houses and both parties and ranking members of the affected committees were called down to the Department of State for a major consultation on the policy that we should adopt in Korea, where the Communists had just assumed a conciliatory pose—but without any real evidence of actual change—in order to get out of the bad hole that they were in at that time. I was present as chairman of the Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on the Far East and the Pacific, and Mr. LANHAM as the ranking minority member.

The Communists had previously been completely adamant in rejecting any reasonable proposal, even by a sympathetic government like India. But now their forces were in trouble in Korea. The Communist regime in China was overextended and in trouble there. It wanted to end the fighting in Korea, where it could not win, to shift to Vietnam where the prospects were more favorable. Furthermore, Stalin had just died and they were in trouble in Russia. They needed a breathing spell in which to settle the power struggle to determine his successor in the hierarchy in the Kremlin. They feared they were in trouble in Washington where a new administration had just taken charge with its first act in foreign policy a stronger stand against the Communists in China. They knew the power of the United States and they knew what the new general in the White House could do to them if he chose to. Obviously they wanted us to abandon the strong position which was getting results, and go back to the sort of soft, weak policy which has always failed. Naturally the Communists resorted to their usual trickery. They reversed themselves on the Indian proposal. They said, "We are for peace. We are against bloodshed. We will let your prisoners out, agree not to arm North Korea," and so on—the same sort of tempting offers they are making again today on a world scale.

Our authorities laid before us the situation. If we refused to fall for the bait, until there was some real evidence of sincerity, we would be called warmongers. It might expand hostilities. More Americans might lose their lives. If we went along, perhaps we could get our boys out. Perhaps there was a genuine change in Communist objectives. Maybe we could get a settlement in Korea and a step toward peaceful co-existence of some real sort. Anybody can see how great the temptation was to go along—in faith and hope.

On the other hand were some hard facts: We had nothing but words from the Communists—the same old words that had always been deceitful in the past; changes in Communist objectives are not possible until they give up communism; the tactic of negotiating had always been a means, not of ending a war, but of winning it—and the fruits of victory.

After some discussion, they polled the Members present from the House and Senate and representatives of the other administrative agencies, the Pentagon, and so on. All except four went along with the course of accepting the Communist proposals, which involved letting up our pressure on them. HENDERSON LANHAM was one who said, "I dissent." The other three were our committee chairman, DICK RICHARDS, of South Carolina; the Senator from California, [Mr. KNOWLAND]; and myself. The rest believed it might be a way toward real peace and agreed we should try it. We believed it would not lead to peace, but to larger and more dangerous conflict later. And next time we might not be able to win. In my judgment, our country lost another chance to get peace in the Pacific that morning. Chances had been lost on previous somewhat similar occasions. But here was a chance to retrieve the situation by standing firm until there were Communist deeds to match their words.

I report all of this only to show the character of HENDERSON LANHAM, his clear head and his courage. Without hesitation he refused to be party to any soft position which might be hailed as leading to peace but which he felt would be appeasement, and he knew that appeasement of this kind of a cruel and ruthless enemy has never led and cannot lead to peace—unless it be the peace of enslavement.

Mr. Speaker, it is a great personal loss to me that this dear friend has been taken from us so suddenly and tragically, but those who have known him have been enriched thereby and will long carry the memory of him in their hearts. The members of his family in their sorrow will have the knowledge down through the years that their loved one was indeed a prince among men, a man of high character, deep patriotism, great unselfishness, and unswerving fidelity.

I join in expressing sympathy to them. Mr. FORRESTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VINSON. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. FORRESTER. Mr. Speaker, our late distinguished colleague, Hon. HENDERSON LANHAM, was undoubtedly one of the most respected Members of this august body. That fact is eloquent testimony of his tremendous ability and uncompromising integrity and complete loyalty.

One of the outstanding, and probably one of the best characteristics of this body, is that no Member of this body wins the respect of this Congress because of his past laurels or achievements.

It has to be won here. That is as it should be. My good friend would not have had it any other way. He won the affection and confidence of this body as few were privileged to do. He won it because he represented the heartbeats of America and humanity. He was an outstanding counselor, a great lawyer, and an exceptional Congressman. Additionally, he was a cultured gentleman and as devoted friend as I ever knew. He was a meek man, a kindly man, a patient man; yet he was utterly determined on an issue of principle. He fought clean, but he fought hard for all legislation that would make our people happier and our Nation stronger.

I attended the funeral of our friend. It was a benediction to see the warmth and affection that all of his constituents so justly and deservedly held for him. Undoubtedly he was a family man to a degree that few of us attain. His love for his only daughter, a most remarkable woman in her own right, for his splendid niece and other members of his family, and his delightful grandchildren, was a thing of beauty and a pattern for all of us.

He was a genuine Christian, completely devoted to his church. As he humbly walked with us, Mr. Speaker, so he is now walking humbly and abiding with our God. Sure, we will all miss him, Mr. Speaker, but it is a great truth, that every one of us knows where we may find him.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to my distinguished colleague from Georgia [Mr. FLYNT].

Mr. FLYNT. Mr. Speaker, it is with a feeling of deepest sorrow that I join the dean of our delegation and my other colleagues in paying a well-deserved, though inadequate, tribute to our late beloved colleague, Honorable HENDERSON LANHAM, late a Representative of the Seventh District of the State of Georgia.

Judge LANHAM, as he was affectionately known to those of us who served with him, and indeed to the rank and file of the citizens of the Seventh District of Georgia, was a man of great and indeed unusual ability; he was a man of the greatest strength of character; he was a man who symbolized the meaning of the word "integrity." He was a man who knew not the meaning of the word "fear." He was one of the most courageous individuals I have ever known. Once he became convinced of the rightness of his position he could not be changed by any force whatsoever.

He was a devout Christian and a devoted member of his church. He was a kind man to those with whom he came in daily contact. He was a man who meant much to the life of his community, the city in which he lived. It can truthfully be said, as was said of him, as he was laid to rest in that community, that the lives of the people who came in contact with him were made the better because of HENDERSON LANHAM having lived.

He meant a great deal to me personally from the time I first came to serve in this great body. I considered him my warm friend, my counselor, and my adviser. I never called upon him for advice or counsel but that he responded gently, kindly, sincerely, and thoughtfully. I shall miss him very much. His place will be difficult to fill in this Chamber and in the hearts and minds of those of us who knew him and loved him.

Mr. Speaker, I join with those who have preceded me today in extending our profound and heartfelt sympathy and condolence to the members of his family whom he loved so well.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman from Georgia [Mrs. BLITCH].

Mrs. BLITCH. Mr. Speaker, it is with great sadness that I rise today to speak of the wonderful memory I have of the late HENDERSON LANHAM, our beloved colleague from the Seventh Congressional District of Georgia. He has been extolled already in words that beautifully describe the great life he lived. He was a man of integrity, kind, and of gentle spirit; a man of great intellect, culture, and charm. But I remember him most for his warm friendliness and the graciousness with which he shared his great political experience and wisdom with me when I first came here as a Member. I had known Mr. LANHAM casually before that time, but when I came to the Congress, I was privileged to know him well, as he labored with great distinction to strengthen and advance the form of constitutional government for the citizens of his district, State, and Nation.

While he could speak with a gentle cultured voice, the tones of which were as soft as the shadows made by the branches of the giant trees that stood on the spacious lawn of his lovely Georgia home, he could also use his tremendous intellect to enlighten his colleagues on subjects of the greatest depth. The logic he used in doing so was as strong as the giant rocks and mighty rivers that are such a characteristic part of the beautiful hills in the Georgia district that he served. I saw his home for the first time when I went to attend his funeral. The gracious atmosphere made me realize how much I had missed by not having visited him there while he lived.

The true measure of a man is the devotion paid to him by his friends and his family. HENDERSON LANHAM was a wealthy man when thought of in the terms of tributes paid him by his own family, neighbors, and friends. There I met in person for the first time those members of his family of whom I had heard him speak so many times; his lovely daughter and her fine husband, his darling grandchildren, and his niece and her husband. When I saw them, I knew why he had spoken of them so endearingly in his conversation every day.

The bulwark of his life was his great religious belief. The influence of the church to which he had remained completely loyal throughout his life was evident in all that I saw in his home.

We have lost a friend and a great man. We extend sympathy to all those who share in this loss. But it is wonderful to have known a man who developed all the great attributes with which he was divinely endowed.

The rose garden he cultivated, the beautiful camellia bushes, the sasanquas he had cut and brought into the house the day before he went away, love of music and great books, a loving family, friends, and neighbors, and the opportunity to serve his fellowman; nothing seemed to have been overlooked that would give a man's life great meaning.

His life was completely filled. God has blessed few men so much, and few there are who are able to receive such blessings.

Mr. PRESTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VINSON. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. PRESTON. Mr. Speaker, the passing of my beloved friend, HENDERSON LANHAM, came as perhaps a greater shock to me than some others because it had been my good fortune to know him for many years. Throughout these years we have maintained a warm friendship which gave me a wonderful opportunity to fully appreciate his real worth as a man. He possessed all of those fine qualities which combine to make the ideal citizen, the outstanding Congressman, and the perfect father. A brilliant student, a man of culture who had great appreciation for the aesthetic, he took from life many joys oftentimes missed by those of less stature. His brilliant record of public service in his State represents the highest and best that can be achieved in this field. Completely fearless and independent in his thinking, he never failed to fight for equity and justice when the occasion arose. Courageous at all times, he was a dangerous adversary in any debate. His record of service in the General Assembly of Georgia will long be remembered for his outstanding accomplishments. Here in the House of Representatives he was admired and respected by every sitting Member. Not once during his 11 years of service did he do or say anything that smacked of demagoguery. Always sincere, he impressed his colleagues with the sound logic of his argument. This body will truly miss HENDERSON LANHAM, and I join the membership in paying much deserved tribute to him, and to his fine family I again express my deep sorrow and sympathy.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LANE].

Mr. LANE. Mr. Speaker, Congressman LANHAM was one of my legislative neighbors in the House of Representatives for almost 11 years.

HENDERSON was a scholarly friend who is no longer with us.

Although he was an eloquent spokesman for the new South in its period of greatest economic growth, he was also the bearer of a proud heritage; that of old southern culture and charm.

I was a Yankee—at least by geography, if not by heredity—and he was the scion of an old Georgia family. Much of the textile industry that Massachusetts was losing Georgia was gaining. Although there was competition between us on this score, and serious as far as we, the losers, were concerned, it never separated our friendship.

HENDERSON LANHAM was too big a man for pettiness in any form. I think he saw that greater future in which our country would be united as never before. And he was true to that faith with all the resources of his fine mind and generous spirit.

He was an able and dedicated member of the Appropriations Committee, where his intellectual capacity served the Nation with a high degree of efficiency that will be hard to duplicate.

Every civil servant of the Federal Government mourns his passing because he thoroughly understood the need of improved working conditions and better salaries for career personnel upon whom the Government depends for its essential operations.

Death has taken from this House one of the best of Representatives. Representative LANHAM has gone to dwell in eternal happiness.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MATTHEWS].

Mr. MATTHEWS. Mr. Speaker, I could not let this opportunity pass without humbly paying my word of tribute to our departed colleague, the Honorable HENDERSON LANHAM from Georgia. I think it is peculiarly appropriate today when we have great problems to resolve that by a ceremony such as this we once again take cognizance of the fact that America's greatness is founded on eternal spiritual values of life. The greatness of our country in the past and today and in the future will be because we have men and women of the character of HENDERSON LANHAM. I did not know him as well, of course, as his colleagues from Georgia, but I had the opportunity these past 5 years of knowing something of this great man and of being associated with him rather intimately many times.

As has been said, he was a gentleman of even temperament, of judicial character, and of an integrity beyond question. I knew him best as we associated together in our weekly prayer meetings that many of you attend each Thursday. There I knew him as an humble man, as one who would not dare to presume of a professional piety, and yet as one who had an abiding faith in the God who created him and in the God whom he worshiped. And I think as well as any man in the House that he lived according to that deep faith.

I am conscious of the immortal words of that great poet, William Cullen Bryant, who said:

So live, that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan, which moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave,
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

I am confident that HENDERSON LANHAM lived that kind of life and that he approached his eternal reward in that spirit of abiding faith.

I join my colleagues from Georgia in expressing to his loved ones my deepest sympathy on his untimely passing.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. ALBERT].

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, I was deeply shocked when I read one afternoon in my hometown newspaper in Oklahoma of the tragic and untimely death of my good friend, HENDERSON LANHAM.

Congressman LANHAM and I came to this House together 11 years ago. We became friends at that time and our friendship grew over the years.

I served with Congressman LANHAM on the Select Committee To Investigate

Lobbying Activities. This was a difficult assignment. The committee was subject to tremendous pressures from many sources. In all its activities Congressman LANHAM was calm, steadfast, courageous. He was a fine scholar and skillful legislator. His contributions to our work were outstanding.

Judge LANHAM was a Christian gentleman with rare attributes of character. He combined at one time a gentle and kindly soul with a stanch and courageous will.

He was an outstanding, valued Member of this House. I shall miss him sorely. I extend to his loved ones my deepest personal sympathy.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to our distinguished colleague from West Virginia [Mr. BAILEY].

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I would like very much to join the Georgia delegation in the Congress in paying tribute to an outstanding liberal statesman of the South—the late HENDERSON LANHAM. Judge LANHAM, as he was familiarly known by his colleagues, came to the Congress at about the same time I began my service in this distinguished body. As a liberal, I was soon attracted to this Georgia gentleman by his intense desire to serve the interests of the average American.

Judge LANHAM was the first among his colleagues south of the Mason-Dixon Line to realize that changing conditions in the South made necessary changed thinking if he were to serve the best interests of the South in an economic way. Mr. LANHAM realized that the South's major industry and the processing of this cotton through textile mills would be injured by the approval of this Congress of the new Japanese trade agreements and he soon became a leader among a fast growing group of southern Representatives who realized that they had been voting more or less blindly for a trade policy that was destroying their southern economy.

Judge LANHAM also had a deep interest in the welfare of the boys and girls of the Nation. He was active in the support of legislation that would benefit our youth.

Few men in the Congress had a greater acquaintanceship than did Judge LANHAM with his colleagues. They, like myself, held this distinguished Georgian in high esteem as a courtly gentleman, a courageous fighter for what he considered right.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to our distinguished colleague from Virginia [Mr. ROBESON].

Mr. ROBESON of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I wish to join in tribute to my longtime friend and colleague, HENDERSON LANHAM. My friendship with HENDERSON LANHAM goes back over 50 years when we were college boys together at the university at Athens, Ga.

It was one of my happy experiences when I came here in 1950 to renew that friendship and to learn that he had continued over these years in his manner of living, in his studious, careful, and firm approach to what he thought was right. He was a friendly man and I enjoyed visiting with him and seeing him.

I shall miss him personally and we shall miss his service here.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to our distinguished majority leader, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, when I read of the tragic, unfortunate death of our late friend, HENDERSON LANHAM, I was in Boston. It was indeed sad news to me. When he took the journey into the great beyond I lost a close, a dear, and a valued friend.

HENDERSON LANHAM was a typical American, one who believed in the American way of life, one who had an intense love of the Constitution of the United States and all of its provisions, and everything it stands for—in letter, in meaning, in spirit, and in its traditions.

Various Members have referred to his fine, kindly, sweet disposition and I concur in those expressions. I can see him now, with that fine, sweet, philosophical look on his face, coming up the middle aisle, or engaged in conversation with some of our colleagues and oftentimes with me.

HENDERSON LANHAM had a philosophy of life that was an inspiration to all who knew him too follow. He had an understanding mind. He did not react to small or mean or narrow impulses. His understanding mind looked forward, and in his association with his fellow human beings he thoroughly respected them when he and they disagreed. He was a man who had profound respect, as I said, for the fundamentals of our Government as expressed in the Constitution of the United States.

I feel keenly the loss of HENDERSON LANHAM because in his death a close personal friend has left me. Friendships of that kind leave their imprint when they are separated by death, but the memory of those friends who have taken the journey into the great beyond always is an inspiration to us, and treasured by us. HENDERSON LANHAM was one of those friends.

I join my friends from Georgia in their expression of sorrow at the passing of HENDERSON LANHAM. I extend my deep sympathy to my colleagues of the Georgia delegation and the people of the State of Georgia and the district he so ably represented. To the loved ones he left behind I extend my profound sympathy in their sorrow.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. THOMSON].

Mr. THOMSON of Wyoming. Mr. Speaker, during my first term, circumstances were such that I came to know the distinguished gentleman from Georgia, Mr. LANHAM, quite well early in the first year, 1955. Time moved along and it was my privilege, and I considered it one of the great privileges of my life, to become better acquainted with him.

To his colleagues from Georgia and to all America I say that here was a real statesman, here was an intelligent servant of the people, a man of unquestioned integrity, one of the most charitable and kindly men I have ever had the privilege of knowing. To a junior Member on the minority side or to any Member of the House he was always ready to give of his expert counsel and advice and if the cause was basically right, to lend a helping hand. Certainly that is what it takes to make a real man, a big man, and to make a real country and a big country. He has made a big contribution to that. It is the hope of many of us that sometime we shall be able to emulate the fine pattern he has set.

I extend my sympathy, and I know the sympathy of the Members on this side of the House, to his loved ones, and also to the people of his district, for he was truly an outstanding representative not only of them but of America. All America has lost an able and dedicated public servant. We all grieve his loss, and extend our most sincere sympathy to the members of his family.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks on the life and character of the late HENDERSON LANHAM.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PILCHER. Mr. Speaker, it was with a heavy heart that I learned on the afternoon of November 10, 1957, of the unfortunate passing of my dear friend and colleague, HENDERSON LOVELACE LANHAM. I knew him intimately and affectionately for many years. As fellow members of the Georgia Senate my work brought me in frequent and constant contact with him. I always found him to be fair in his dealings with his fellow man and a gentleman of the highest principles. It was only natural when I came to Congress in 1953 that I availed myself of his friendly advice and wise counsel. He was more than perfunctorily friendly and helpful—he went far beyond the call of an ordinary friendship and was most helpful to me. It would take hours to tell of the many great deeds of public service performed by HENDERSON LANHAM. He has done many great things for the people of his native Georgia during his many years of public service. I knew HENDERSON LANHAM long before either of us came to Congress and I can say to you today that I never met a more pleasant and dedicated man. He was a loyal American, a true Christian gentleman. It is recorded that "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." HENDERSON LANHAM was that type of man. HENDERSON had just left a little country church where he had taught Sunday School and was on his way to the schoolhouse located in his hometown, Rome, Ga., where he was to meet with and speak to a group of palsied children at the moment his automobile was struck by a train. I know that his spirits were high and that he was happy at that moment for he dearly loved the church and little children. I personally shall miss him, and I join in extending to his loved ones my deepest sympathy in this hour of their bereavement.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, HENDERSON LANHAM was a real man. He had ability, he had character. His good soul shone out, he radiated good will. He made our world better.

Mr. DAGUE. Mr. Speaker, it is with heavy hearts that we are brought face to face with the irreparable losses visited upon this body during the period of recess, and certainly the passing of Judge LANHAM must be recalled as one of the severest blows we have sustained.

HENDERSON LANHAM was a man of brilliant attainments; and to those who became intimately acquainted with him, he constantly revealed that courtesy and kindness which are the hallmarks of a southern gentleman. HENDERSON LANHAM and I separated widely on many political issues, but invariably we found ourselves traveling side by side in support of those things which are vital to the prosperity and security of our Nation. The strongest tie that bound us together, however, was the realization of our mutual inadequacy, and it was as seekers after divine guidance that we found ourselves at the breakfast table with the House prayer group each Thursday morning.

The judge has gone on to his reward, and we must turn back to the duties which devolve upon us in this uncertain world. We shall, however, take strength from our years of association with him, and we feel that we are a bit more competent to meet the test than we would have been had we not been privileged to call this distinguished citizen our loyal friend.

Mr. SMITH of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, we have lost an outstanding legislator in the tragic death of HENDERSON LANHAM. He was zealously devoted to the welfare of our country but full of human understanding of the problems of all of us. He will be greatly missed.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Speaker, when I first came to the Congress some 9 years ago, one of the first Members from the southern part of the United States with whom I became acquainted was the Honorable HENDERSON LANHAM, of Georgia, who had come to the House with the beginning of the 80th session. In the years which followed, my first impression—which was most favorable—of HENDERSON LANHAM was confirmed. In a quiet, effective manner, he never stopped working industriously and conscientiously for those programs and projects which he believed best served the interests of the Nation and the district whose people he was honored to represent. Having come to know and respect him over the years, it was a distressing shock to read of his tragic death.

The House has lost one of its keen intellects with the death of HENDERSON LANHAM. It has also lost a Member who thoroughly understood, and was devoted to committee work—but who, at the same time, demonstrated a willingness to take the floor in a most critical and constructive manner whenever he thought it necessary to do so.

HENDERSON LANHAM came to the House with a wide background of legislative and legal experience, and with a record of service to his community. In his years in Congress this was a contributing factor to the outstanding service he rendered to his State and to his country.

Mr. Speaker, it will be most difficult to replace a man of the outstanding ability, the industry, the fairness and the sterling character of the late Honorable HENDERSON LANHAM.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, I wish to join with others in speaking of the life and work of the late HENDERSON LANHAM, of Georgia. It was my privilege and honor to serve with him on the House Committee on Appropriations. On the committee and in the House he showed himself to be a man of very great capability. He had a warm heart and an outstanding mind. His devotion to duty was never questioned. We are going to miss the wise counsel of HENDERSON LANHAM during this session of Congress.

I join my colleagues in extending sympathy to his family and in paying tribute to the memory of our departed colleague and friend.

Mr. DOYLE. Mr. Speaker, it was a rare privilege I had for a couple of years in my third term in this great legislative body to serve on the Special Lobby Investigating Committee of the House, of which committee HENDERSON LANHAM was a member. It was commonly known as the Buchanan committee. I know we also continue to miss Frank Buchanan who was the distinguished chairman of that committee and who has also passed on. On that committee also were Representatives BROWN, Ohio; HALLECK, Indiana; and O'HARA of Minnesota. The fairness, energy, and anxiousness of my colleague, Congressman LANHAM, on that difficult committee work was quickly recognized by me. It was by all of us and his ingenuity and resourcefulness in approaching the study and actual committee hearings were an inspiration to me.

Subsequent to that 2 years day-to-day work with him on the same House committee, I naturally continued to visit with him and confer with him on very frequent occasions from that time until his very unfortunate and untimely death by accident. I know I am not the only Member of this House who quickly recognized his voice on the floor of this legislative body as speaking out for sound, patriotic methods and means of national unity and soundness and achievements for the American people. I shall miss him very much indeed and I shall always remember and appreciate how earnestly and firmly he helped me in my study of and my working on the subject of less-than-honorable discharges. He told me of his experiences as a distinguished judge in his native State of Georgia and I readily recognized his kind attitude toward all people who had problems which had to be solved. A huge heart for humanity, a great heart and a sound patriotism with vigilance for all that was fair and square and a real regard for the opinions of men that might differ with him. This is my brief appraisal of my distinguished colleague who in my humble judgment has left a very large void in our ranks. Mrs. Doyle and I extend our understanding sympathy to his family.

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Speaker, I, too, have been saddened by the untimely death of our beloved colleague, HENDERSON LANHAM. I enjoyed the privilege of serving in the Congress with this outstanding Georgia statesman from the time he was first elected. In more recent years, I have been very closely associated with him as a member of the House Appropriations Committee. Therefore, I share the great grief which has come to his loved ones and I am intimately acquainted with the loss which his death brings to his own State of Georgia and to the Nation.

Since his election to the House of Representatives in 1946 our devoted colleague served with distinction, honor, and dignity. His courtesy, his friendliness and his devotion to his duty stamped him as outstanding and will cause him to be greatly missed by those of us who had the pleasure of knowing him and working with him through the years.

Mr. ROONEY. Mr. Speaker, I wish to associate myself with my colleagues in paying tribute to the life and character of the late Honorable HENDERSON L. LANHAM, of Georgia, who met such a tragic accidental death on November 10 last.

I had the pleasure of serving with HENDERSON in this body and on the Committee on Appropriations for a number of years, and always found him to be a capable and extremely hard working Member. He was respected and held in high esteem by his colleagues in the House on both sides of the aisle. His passing is a great loss to the people of his district, his State, and the Nation. It is indeed a great tragedy that his successful legislative career has been terminated.

His dear ones have my deepest sympathy in their bereavement.

Mr. BURNS of Hawaii. Mr. Speaker, it was my privilege during the 1st session of the 85th Congress to be blessed with the friendship of the Honorable HENDERSON LOVELACE LANHAM, a true son of the South—scholarly, temperate, courteous, generous with his praise, sparing—exceedingly so—with his criticism.

Though fully occupied with his many duties on behalf of his constituents and the people of the United States, as are other Members of the Congress, the very well liked and highly respected gentleman from Georgia found time to honor me with several long conversations. Included in these conversations—some of which were in the nature of counsel and advice by a most able and knowledgeable legislator—was the subject of Hawaii and the hopes and aspirations of her people.

I can recall that we talked over the thorough and impartial investigation made into the Hawaiian situation in 1893 by the outstandingly distinguished Georgian, the Honorable James H. Blount, a former Member of the House of Representatives.

I can also recall that as a result of our conversation, I was assured of the good will and assistance of the able gentleman from Georgia in my efforts on behalf of Hawaii and her rightful aspirations.

Hawaii has lost a friend whose assistance would have been invaluable. I have lost a counselor whose guidance and advice I valued tremendously.

In the passing of HENDERSON LOVELACE LANHAM, America has lost a statesman who exemplified the finest traditions of a southern gentleman. To his family and his constituents I express my deepest sympathy. May his soul rest in peace with the Almighty he served so faithfully.

Mr. O'HARA of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, it is not given to us to understand the pattern of life. When we adjourned at the close of the first session the beloved gentlemen from Tennessee and Georgia, Mr. COOPER and Mr. LANHAM, seemed in the full bloom of lives of rich usefulness, and with none was the thought that never again were we to be permitted to meet with them in human form. There is a void in this Chamber as we convene today for the second session, and the sadness of that void is felt by every Member.

Their memory will remain with us as long as we are here, and the course of history as it is affected by what is done in this greatest legislative body in the world and in the generations as yet unborn will speak their influence. JERE COOPER and HENDERSON LANHAM have taught us how to live with our fellow men and with our God. They were statesmen of uncompromising integrity. They possessed the great personal quality of humility. Humility always is the attribute of the person of strength of mind and of heart. Strength of character needs no pretense upon which to buttress its claim for recognition.

The distinguished dean of the Illinois delegation, the Honorable THOMAS J. O'BRIEN, has spoken from the font of a warm affection of the chairman of the great Ways and Means Committee with whom so long and so closely he was associated. For him, for my other Democratic colleagues from Illinois and for myself may I bring a very sincere tribute to the memory of the sweet and dedicated son of Georgia whose passing has brought to us a deep personal grief. It was not many months ago when in a memorable debate on an issue attended with territorial differences that HENDERSON LANHAM's time had expired and no more time was available unless surrendered by one who previously had received a time allotment. TOM O'BRIEN turned to me and suggested that while we were on the opposite side of the debate that I give my time to the gentleman from Georgia, remarking "He is one of the nicest and fairest men in the Congress." I was of course happy to do as our beloved dean suggested, not only because it was his desire but also because during all my association with HENDERSON LANHAM I had found practiced by him in all his relations with his colleagues those qualities of patience, fairness, consideration, and human understanding that characterize the man who walks with his conscience and in humiliation in the presence he senses of his God. He was a gentle friend, a statesman of great ability, and a public servant of dedication. Our deepest sympathy goes to the bereaved family and to the people of Georgia and the district HENDERSON LANHAM so brilliantly represented and with such devotion in the Congress of the United States.

Mr. RHODES of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I, too, have been greatly saddened by the tragic passing of the Honorable HENDERSON LANHAM. We have lost an outstanding Member of the House and a distinguished American who steadfastly devoted himself to the type of liberal programs benefiting the greatest number of our people. HENDERSON LANHAM was a man of integrity and principle, with a quiet dignity that commanded the respect of all who knew him. He will be sorely missed in the crucial days ahead.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Mr. Speaker, among the new and happy friendships I was privileged to make in 1957 was that of Congressman HENDERSON LANHAM. We always called him Judge as a mark of respect, and he had a magnificent judicial approach to all legislative affairs. He not only understood the law, but he would always fight vehemently to protect it. His courtesy and patience were his greatest virtues. He walked and spoke softly, but he carried a big stick. He was generous with his time and his advice and like any great judge on the bench, impartial in his deliberations and decisions.

We of South Carolina feel a great loss in the passing of our Georgia friend and colleague. He was an inspiring example to all of us of the true southern gentleman.

Mr. EVINS. Mr. Speaker, permit me to join with my colleagues in paying a brief but sincere tribute to our late departed colleague and esteemed friend, the Honorable HENDERSON LANHAM, of Georgia.

It was my good fortune and privilege to come to the Congress at the same time HENDERSON LANHAM was first elected to the Congress. We soon became fast friends and our friendship remained throughout our years of service together.

We served together as members of the Committee on Appropriations and my life has been enriched by my association with him and our friendship. I enjoyed his quiet, good humor and admired his courage and manly qualities. He was devoted to his district, his State, and Nation, and while representing his district and the South, he was not provincial in his outlook but took the broader, national point of view. He was a Christian gentleman a warm friend and an able and devoted legislator. The State of Georgia has lost a great son, this Congress an esteemed colleague, and the Nation a dedicated statesman.

I join with my colleagues in extending an expression of sympathy to the members of his family.

Mr. HORAN. Mr. Speaker, as one of those who for many years served on the same committee with HENDERSON LANHAM I want to add my tribute to his memory.

HENDERSON had a relish for life, a zest for work and a great love for his Nation.

He was diligent in his committee work and never shirked those responsibilities for leadership which came his way.

HENDERSON was a fine man to work with. He had a keen sense of humor and an insight into the problems which came before him.

He was not provincial in his approach to problems that were so national in scope as those things connected with health, education, and labor where he labored tirelessly.

All of us who were privileged to call him "Friend" shall miss him.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. Speaker, like all Members of the House, I was shocked and deeply grieved over the tragic death of our friend and colleague, HENDERSON LANHAM.

Congressman LANHAM and myself represented adjoining districts; his in Georgia and mine in Tennessee. The people we had the honor to represent came from the same section and had the same interests, so it was natural that we conferred with each other frequently in regard to legislation affecting our respective areas. He was always most helpful. He was dedicated to the service of his people.

I had known HENDERSON LANHAM for many years. He was an outstanding lawyer and a fine public servant; he had the respect of his colleagues in the House on both sides of the aisle. In his passing the House has lost a valuable Member and we who served with him have lost a friend. He was a fine Christian gentleman.

I extend to his family my deepest sympathy.

Mr. LONG. Mr. Speaker, HENDERSON L. LANHAM was one of the most conscientious and capable legislators to have been sent to the House from Georgia, which has produced so many vigorous public servants in the United States Congress.

Mr. LANHAM represented the Seventh District of Georgia with distinction. The tragic accident which caused his death deeply saddened the citizens of Georgia and his many friends throughout our Nation.

Born in Rome, Ga., in 1888, HENDERSON LANHAM early in life proved his worth. He was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of Georgia, received his law degree from Georgia in 1911, and the master of arts degree from Harvard University in 1912. Subsequently he entered the practice of law in Rome, Ga., and began a distinguished career of public service, which continued until his death. His qualifications were recognized and rewarded by his return to Congress on six consecutive elections. His Congressional career included service on the Public Works, Government Operations, Foreign Affairs, and Appropriations Committees of the House.

From the beginning of his public career he exhibited a grasp of the intricate and vital problems of government. He said what he believed. Mr. LANHAM once said of himself, "I am a progressive without being radical." He also once said that his greatest regret upon being elected was that he would have to leave his rose garden.

He brought to the United States Congress a fine mind, a high devotion to responsibility, and a friendliness which have produced a sharp sense of loss among his colleagues.

I had frequent contact with Mr. LANHAM at the weekly Congressional prayer breakfast. I knew him intimately and regarded him as one of my best friends and personally feel a great loss in his passing. I wish to extend to his family my heartfelt sympathy.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I would like to join with my other colleagues in paying tribute to Judge HENDERSON LANHAM. His tragic passing has saddened us all and his presence, guidance, and wise counsel will be greatly missed during the days that are before us.

I was fortunate in that our offices were next door to each other so that I had an opportunity to see and talk with Judge LANHAM many times and enjoy a close association with him and benefit from his advice and counsel. My father was a classmate of Judge LANHAM's at the University of Georgia, so that before I came to Congress I had had the privilege of knowing and respecting him, as my father did before me, and to admire him for his many outstanding qualities and fine character.

He was a man of strong convictions, ever ready to speak those convictions. He had a broad outlook on life, but was entirely devoted to his own district and State. A man of integrity and principle, Judge LANHAM had a quiet dignity that brought him recognition and respect in all places.

Mr. Speaker, I had the pleasure of meeting and knowing Judge LANHAM's daughter and fine grandchildren, to whom he was greatly devoted. To them he has left a fine heritage and a knowledge that he lived a great life to the fullest, with a calm and deep abiding faith in the future beyond. To them I would like to express my deepest sympathy in their great loss.

We have all lost a great American. He will be sorely missed in the days that lie ahead.

Mr. FOGARTY. Mr. Speaker, I regret sincerely that fate has made it necessary for me to express my deep sorrow upon the occasion of the passing of Hon. HENDERSON LANHAM, of Georgia. All too frequently we find that we have neglected the opportunity to praise one of our associates while he lived—so that he could appreciate the respect in which we hold him. Then we are faced with the sad prospect of reciting his virtues after he has gone on to his eternal reward. The only midgeon of happiness I can feel at this moment lies in the fact that I have taken advantage of opportunities which permitted me to tell you, my colleagues, of the valued assistance I have received from Representative LANHAM in our work with the Appropriations Committee.

Congressman LANHAM has been a member of the Labor-Health, Education, and Welfare Subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations, of which subcommittee I have the honor to be chairman.

HENDERSON LANHAM was an able lawyer, and has also served on the board of education of his native city of Rome, Ga. I frequently had occasion to discuss with him the legal aspects of some of the activities of agencies with which we were concerned. He was an excellent adviser on the relationship between the United States Office of Education and local school boards. He was patient but insistent in his inquiries during committee hearings. He was well-informed and earned the respect of his colleagues on the committee as well as representatives of the departments who came before us seeking funds for their activities.

I shall miss him greatly. I know all of us shall miss him. To his bereaved widow and daughter I offer my heartfelt sympathy.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to HENDERSON LANHAM, late a Representative from the State of Georgia.

Since I had the good fortune to work directly with him on the Subcommittee on Foreign Operations of the Committee on Appropriations, I became well acquainted with HENDERSON LANHAM. I knew him to be a dedicated, conscientious man, anxious to fulfill his duties as a public servant. I also know that HENDERSON LANHAM diligently worked to familiarize himself with every facet of foreign operations because he was the type person who wanted to do well in all things undertaken. The high caliber and output of his work proved that his 11 years in Congress were fruitful years.

Moreover, HENDERSON LANHAM was a gentleman of the old school—quiet, kind, courteous. The suddenness of his death was a severe blow to all who knew him. His innate goodness won our affection and his industriousness our admiration. Because he was a sensitive man who possessed an abundance of tact, his friends were legion. This friendly man who held the respect and confidence of so many people will long be grieved by his colleagues. The people of Georgia in placing their public trust in HENDERSON LANHAM have contributed more to the legislative history of the United States than they can possibly realize.

I wish to join with my colleagues in extending my sincere sympathy to the members of HENDERSON LANHAM's family.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I join his many friends in paying tribute to our beloved colleague whose unfortunate and untimely death occurred during the recess of the Congress. Mr. LANHAM was an outstanding legislator. It was my privilege to serve with him on the Appropriations Committee. He had a keen and penetrating mind. He possessed an uncanny faculty for asking questions which would elicit the true facts concerning the subject under discussion from witnesses appearing before our committee. He was an able debater.

HENDERSON LANHAM served his district, State, and Nation well, and his presence will be sorely missed on the floor of this House.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, it was my pleasure to serve on the Committee on Appropriations with HENDERSON LANHAM. He was a thorough gentleman, a kind and patient man of real convictions, a true friend, and an outstanding representative of his district and Nation. We shall miss him and join with our colleagues in the fine tributes paid him here today.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Members of this body were as shocked as I by the tragic and untimely passing of our distinguished colleague, the Honorable HENDERSON L. LANHAM, of Georgia, in November. A Member of this House for 11 years, Congressman LANHAM was highly respected for his grasp of legislative proceedings and deeply loved by all those who knew him.

I am sure many of you consider the death of HENDERSON LANHAM as a personal loss, as I most assuredly do. Congressman LANHAM and I had occasion to work together several times, including our joint efforts to secure development of the Coosa-Alabama River, which flows from the Seventh Georgia District—which Congressman LANHAM represented so diligently—through the Fourth Alabama District—which I am privileged to represent—in its course toward the Gulf of Mexico. The people of the Coosa Valley, as well as the entire State of Alabama, will feel the vacuum created by the passing of our colleague from Rome, Ga.

May I respectfully add my sincere sympathy and condolences to the bereaved family of the late HENDERSON LOVELACE LANHAM.

Mr. Speaker, I ask permission to have inserted an editorial which appeared November 13, 1957, in the Anniston (Ala.) Star, and one which appeared in the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

The editorials follow:

[From the Anniston (Ala.) Star of November 13, 1957]

ROME'S LOSS IS SHARED

The Anniston area lost a tried and true friend when Congressman HENDERSON L. LANHAM, 69, was killed in a train-automobile collision Sunday at a crossing in Rome, Ga., where he had lived all his life.

In the period from 1918 to 1946, he had served in various public offices of a more or less local nature. He was at different times chairman of the city board of education in Rome, Floyd County representative in the Georgia General Assembly, and solicitor-general of the Rome judicial circuit.

But with his election to the Congress in 1946, he was able to make his influence felt beyond Georgia's boundaries, and it was the very good fortune of the people of this part of Alabama that his constituents saw fit to keep him in the House of Representatives for the remainder of his life.

For he was effective not only in routine Congressional duties, but also as an advocate of worthwhile legislation of a regional and national character.

He took his place in the forefront of the 100-year fight to harness the Coosa River for electric power, flood control, recreational advantages, industrial and agricultural water supply, and the relatively cheap water transportation that he recognized as feasible all the way from his native city through northeast Alabama and on to Montgomery and Mobile.

At long last, there is the prospect of cashing in within the foreseeable future on some of the Coosa's vast potentialities, and to the late Congressman LANHAM is due a large share of the credit for what's been accomplished.

Let it also be said to his everlasting credit that he never permitted himself to be counted among those ill-advised Congressmen who in the last decade have embraced at various times the notion that national security could be bought as a counter bargain. Representative LANHAM fought tirelessly for appropriations adequate to the needs and responsibilities of our Military Establishment.

It is true that Georgia's Seventh Congressional District is separated from Alabama's Fourth and Fifth by a State boundary, but this never was a barrier to full cooperation on the part of Congressmen LANHAM, ROB-ERTS, and RAINS in the interest of Coosa Valley progress.

In a very real sense, northeast Alabama shares northwest Georgia's loss in the tragic accident Sunday that claimed Representative LANHAM's life.

[From the Atlanta Constitution]

A VALUABLE PUBLIC SERVANT LOST

Eleven years ago a stately, scholarly Rome lawyer, HENDERSON LANHAM, left the home and the rose garden which was his hobby and went to Washington as Representative from Georgia's Seventh District.

To earn that right he had defeated an able man, Malcolm Tarver, of Dalton.

Judge LANHAM gave his district no reason to regret the trust it had placed in him. He established himself as a legislator of diligence, intelligence, integrity and independence.

He asked no favors, he dodged no issues, he rarely missed a rollcall.

He was loyal to party, yet he could and did rise above the partisan and the section to vote on a measure according to what he considered the national interest.

The Seventh District elected him to Congress six times. The House rewarded him with worthy committee appointments.

This year he became the second Georgian—Senator George was the other—to receive the American Vocational Association's distinguished service citation. In 51 years only 6 Americans have been so honored.

HENDERSON LANHAM had earned such respect in the district that younger men eyeing the seat in Congress and making exploratory remarks always have prefaced them with "if Judge LANHAM decides not to run."

Judge LANHAM will not be a candidate for Congress in 1958. He died Sunday afternoon, victim of a railroad crossing accident.

Georgians are grieved at the passing of this man who was appreciated and respected by his constituents and loved by those who knew him intimately.

The mourning goes well beyond the confines of a Congressional District and a State.

The Nation has lost a public servant for whom the motivation was the greatest good to the greatest number.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution (H. Res. 422) as follows:

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. HENDERSON L. LANHAM, Representative from the State of Georgia.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The resolution was agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, as a further mark of respect to the deceased Members who have been eulogized today, I move that the House do now adjourn.

Year: 19-----

REPORT

PURSUANT TO FEDERAL REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

P	QUARTER
	1st	2d	3d	4th

(Mark one square only)

NOTE ON ITEM "A"—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

- (1) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)
 - (ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".
- (b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:
- (1) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.
 - (ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names or agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE ON ITEM "B"—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER.—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE ON ITEM "C"—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302 (e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) Description; (b) quantity distributed; (c) date of distribution; (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out item "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly" Report.◀

AFFIDAVIT

NOTE ON ITEM "D."—(a) In General. The term "contribution" includes anything of value. When an organization or individual uses printed or duplicated matter in a campaign attempting to influence legislation, money received by such organization or individual—for such printed or duplicated matter—is a "contribution." "The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution"—Section 302 (a) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN EMPLOYER.—(i) In General. Item "D" is designed for the reporting of all receipts from which expenditures are made, or will be made, in accordance with legislative interests.

(ii) Receipts of Business Firms and Individuals.—A business firm (or individual) which is subject to the Lobbying Act by reason of expenditures which it makes in attempting to influence legislation—but which has no funds to expend except those which are available in the ordinary course of operating a business not connected in any way with the influencing of legislation—will have no receipts to report, even though it does have expenditures to report.

(iii) Receipts of Multipurpose Organizations.—Some organizations do not receive any funds which are to be expended solely for the purpose of attempting to influence legislation. Such organizations make such expenditures out of a general fund raised by dues, assessments, or other contributions. The percentage of the general fund which is used for such expenditures indicates the percentage of dues, assessments, or other contributions which may be considered to have been paid for that purpose. Therefore, in reporting receipts, such organizations may specify what that percentage is, and report their dues, assessments, and other contributions on that basis. However, each contributor of $500 or more is to be listed, regardless of whether the contribution was made solely for legislative purposes.

(c) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE.—(i) In General. In the case of many employees, all receipts will come under Items "D 5" (received for services) and "D 12" (expense money and reimbursements). In the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, it will be presumed that your employer is to reimburse you for all expenditures which you make in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Employer as Contributor of $500 or More.—When your contribution from your employer (in the form of salary, fee, etc.) amounts to $500 or more, it is not necessary to report such contribution under "D 13" and "D 14," since the amount has already been reported under "D 5," and the name of the "employer" has been given under Item "B" on page 1 of this Report.

The following registrations were submitted for the third calendar quarter 1957:

(NOTE.—The form used for registration is reproduced below. In the interest of economy in the RECORD, questions are not repeated, only the essential answers are printed, and are indicated by their respective letter and number.)

FILE TWO COPIES WITH THE SECRETARY OF THE SENATE AND FILE THREE COPIES WITH THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

This page (page 1) is designed to supply identifying data; and page 2 (on the back of this page) deals with financial data.

PLACE AN "X" BELOW THE APPROPRIATE LETTER OR FIGURE IN THE BOX AT THE RIGHT OF THE "REPORT" HEADING BELOW:

"PRELIMINARY" REPORT ("Registration"): To "register," place an "X" below the letter "P" and fill out page 1 only.

"QUARTERLY" REPORT: To indicate which one of the four calendar quarters is covered by this Report, place an "X" below the appropriate figure. Fill out both page 1 and page 2 and as many additional pages as may be required. The first additional page should be numbered as page "3," and the rest of such pages should be "4," "5," "6," etc. Preparation and filing in accordance with instructions will accomplish compliance with all quarterly reporting requirements of the Act.

P	1st	2d	3d	4th
(Mark one square only)
PURSUANT TO FEDERAL REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

NOTE ON ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

- (i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)
- (ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".

(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:

- (i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.
- (ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

- 1. State name, address, and nature of business.
- 2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names or agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE ON ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) if a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER.—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE ON ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302 (e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

- 1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.
- 2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.
- 3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) Description, (b) quantity distributed; (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out item "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly" Report. <

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 8, 1958

The House met at 12 o'clock noon. The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Eternal God, our Father, Thy gracious providence is our shield in the stillness of the night and our strength in the struggles of each new day.

We rejoice that in times of great crisis and confusion we may avail ourselves of the companionship and counsel of our blessed Lord.

Help us to appreciate more fully our need of accepting the Master's overtures of friendship if, during these days, we would be impervious to any despondent and hysterical tempers of mind and heart.

Grant that the Members of Congress may be men and women of faith and courage who know how to meet every mountain of difficulty without fear or frustration.

May nothing ever undermine our trust in the conquering and invincible power of truth and righteousness.

In Christ's name we offer our prayer. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

CALENDAR WEDNESDAY

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the business in order on Calendar Wednesday for today and next week be dispensed with.
