

time psychological gap. For too long the American people have been told—by the prophets of gloom and doom—that it is useless for the United States to make a maritime effort, because other countries can build and operate more efficiently. A logical examination of this claim leads, of course, to a reductio ad absurdum. For, if we accept this kind of defeatism, it follows that, very shortly, we cannot make an effort in the fields of electronics, in steel, or in textiles. All of these fields are challenged from overseas as is our maritime enterprise.

Furthermore, a recent example indicates that American labor and management in the maritime field are performing far more efficiently than the critics would have us believe. I cite the sad case of the Queen Elizabeth II, not as a criticism of the grand maritime tradition of Britain, but, rather, as, by contrast, emphasizing what America is doing and can do at sea.

The London Daily Telegraph stated (1 January 1969) of the Queen Elizabeth II that there were "minor defects, mainly electrical, in 900 of the 1,000 cabins." Their correspondent went on to say that "plumbing is bad in several cabins and one can wade in inches of water. Shower attachments are missing. The taps on baths are also missing. In some cases attachments in bathrooms have come away in people's hands." Far more serious were the faults in two turbines. The Daily Telegraph of 8 January 1969 reported these were even more serious than it was first believed and that the chairman of Upper Clyde Shipbuilders "refused to give a completion date for the ship."²

(2) National Need vs. Cost-effectiveness: Closely associated with the maritime psychological gap is the myth of maritime cost-effectiveness. A myth, because the U.S. maritime posture should, in truth, be related to national need, not to cost-effectiveness alone. The U.S. merchant marine has been steadily deteriorating. And the British merchant marine—upon which many of our exporters and importers have placed reliance—now appears to be headed towards a sharp decline. Can we believe that the Soviet Union will be so conscientious that, in future, it will refrain from taking advantage of what will be a geopolitical fact of life? If this should come to pass, would the American voter ask whether the policy had been cost effective?; or would he ask why was not something done?

² The British are not alone. The Daily Telegraph of 17 January 1969 reported that "a faulty turbine in the West German passenger ship Hamburg, 23,500 tons, has delayed its test run and speed trials for two weeks..."

Specific projections

(1) Merchant Marine: In "The Changing Strategic Naval Balance" we point out that "a vital factor in the Russian merchant marine expansion is the total of national resources devoted to this oceanic enterprise. In 1965, the Soviet government devoted more than $600 million to the construction of merchant vessels. The United States spent only $150 million in the same year. These figures make clear the different priorities that the Soviet Union and the United States assign to a vital segment of sea power."

It would appear, therefore, that a minimum program by the United States to restore the merchant marine balance would be the building of 50 ships per year for the four-year period fiscal 1970 (calendar year beginning 1 July 1969)—fiscal year 1973. This is a minimum program; indeed, in view of the growing magnitude of the Soviet effort, it may be necessary to review this number and project a total of 250 instead of 200 U.S. built merchant ships, that is, 50 in each of the first two years and 75 each in the latter two years. Based on national need, 50 per year for the four-year period would certainly appear to be a minimum number.

(2) Oceanographic: The arrival in Leningrad last October of the new oceanographic research ship Akademik Vernadskiy is in many ways symbolic of what needs to be done to redress this part of the maritime balance. This ship, built in East Germany for the USSR was reported to have made its first voyage (and where it may still be operating) not in seas adjacent to Russia, but in the Atlantic Ocean. The Akademik Vernadskiy becomes one of an increasingly large fleet of oceanographic ships given the task of both basic and applied research on the seas of this great globe. For the Russians realize that while outer space is, of course, very important, the liquid space of the world's oceans is in the long run of equal importance and, in the short run, may be—at various times—of even greater importance.

A modest program in oceanography, therefore, would be the tripling of the present approximately 3700 people in the field of ocean studies and the building of four oceanographic ships—exclusive of undersea research ships for here we should, perhaps, have a crash program—per year over a four-year period from fiscal 1970 onward.

(3) Fisheries: The magnitude of the task facing us here is too well known to require more than brief comment. A comparison with Soviet priorities is relevant. In the past fourteen years the USSR put $4 billion into its fishing fleet-shoreside plant complex. In the same period, a goodly part of the U.S. fishing fleet became museum pieces. It would hardly be imprudent to suggest that we either directly spend or indirectly use tax incentives to provide, over a four year period, at the very least, one-half the average yearly amount of the Soviet expenditure

SUMMARY

In short, what is at stake is not only a significant industry—and important the maritime industry certainly is—but, much more, a vast sector of the U.S. national security. This sector embraces the inter-related mix of naval, merchant marine, oceanography-marine resources, and fishing fleet-shoreside plant complexes. If the American people can be shown the overriding importance of this maritime complex, the evidence indicates that they will ask, indeed, may even demand, that their country adopt and implement a forward maritime policy.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Tuesday, March 25, 1969

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Edward G. Latch, D.D., offered the following prayer:

My defense is of God, who saveth the upright in heart.—Psalm 7: 10.

O God, who art a strong tower of defense to those who put their trust in Thee, have mercy upon us as we bow in prayer before Thee and gird us for the experiences of this day. Grant that in moments of low moods and in minutes of high moods we may keep our faith in Thee in whom alone true life is to be found.

Forgive the ways we have placed shackles about ourselves and others, the intolerance we have shown when others differed from us, the envy we have revealed when some have received what we thought we deserved, the prejudices we have mistaken for principles, and the ill will generated at the success of others. May we pray not only to be forgiven but to learn to be forgiving.

Amid the perplexities of this period may we always remember to be kind and generous, understanding and upright in heart, knowing that he who lives in Thy spirit and who keeps Thy commandments is walking in the way of truth and love—the best defense our Nation can ever have.

We pray in the spirit of Him who walked the way of the loving heart. Amen.

BILL TO ALLOW SMALL BUSINESS TO RETAIN MORE EARNINGS

(Mr. STEED asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. STEED. Mr. Speaker, I am today introducing a bill, the principle of which has been repeatedly endorsed in the past by the House Committee on Small Business, of which I am a member, and its Senate counterpart.

This measure would permit a tax deduction of up to $30,000, or 20 percent of net income for the taxable year, whichever is smaller, for money plowed back into a business for additional investment in depreciable assets, inventory and accounts receivable.

This would extend the principle of the 7-percent investment credit, adopted in 1962, which has worked so well in producing jobs, from the manufacturing to the retail and service fields, by the inclusion of inventories and receivables.

I first endorsed this concept more than 10 years ago after intensive hearings of the Small Business Committee conducted here and in various parts of the country.

Need for the bill was never better stated than by the Ways and Means Committee in a report at that time:

One of the greatest problems confronting small and medium-sized businesses is the acquisition of sufficient capital to modernize and maintain a rate of expansion competitive with larger companies. Small business must rely largely on retained earnings for modernization and expansion. Thus, there is a need to allow small business to retain more earnings to provide the funds necessary for growth.

This measure is one of several I intend to sponsor in connection with the overall review of the tax structure now underway. The first was introduced last week, increasing the personal income tax exemption from $600 to $1,200.

SPACEMEN SHOULD PLANT U.S. FLAG ON THE MOON

(Mr. MICHEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, it is with some amazement that I have read press reports that the National Aeronautics and Space Agency is debating what kind of flag U.S. astronauts will place on the surface of the moon when they land there this summer.

It is inconceivable to me that any flag other than Old Glory should even be considered. Press reports have indicated that a U.N. flag is being pressed by some. This, of course, would give the Communist nations a full share in what is essentially an all-American project.

The taxpayers of this country have put up $20 billion in what has openly been called a race to the moon. There have been three deaths of fine young men. There have been many risks, many daring and dangerous exploits leading up to this effort to make a successful lunar landing.

I feel it would be a travesty and a doublecross of the astronauts and the American public if any other flag than the U.S. flag were planted on the moon by our spacemen. I do not think NASA need debate that issue any longer.

PERMISSION FOR SUBCOMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS, COMMITTEE ON HOUSE ADMINISTRATION, TO SIT DURING GENERAL DEBATE TODAY

RESIGNATION FROM COMMITTEE

MARCH 21, 1969.

HON. JOHN W. McCORMACK,
Speaker of the House,
U.S. House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: I am writing to submit my resignation from the Joint Committee of Congress on the Library to which I was elected pursuant to House Resolution 263 of the 91st Congress.

With best wishes, I am,
Sincerely yours,

COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION RESTORATION OF CAPITAL IMPAIRMENT

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the unanimous-consent agreement on yesterday, I call up House Joint Resolution 584, making a supplemental appropriation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1969, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES. 584

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sum is appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to supply a supplemental appropriation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1969, and for other purposes; namely:

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Commodity Credit Corporation

For partial restoration of capital impairment of the Commodity Credit Corporation for costs heretofore incurred, $1,000,000,000.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Speaker, this is a joint resolution advancing from fiscal year 1970 into fiscal year 1969 the sum of $1 billion for the purpose of restoring impaired capital of the Commodity Credit Corporation. Due to heavy unexpected production of certain of the major crops, the Commodity Credit Corporation has on hand about $5 billion worth of commodities. As a result of this and other factors it is substantially out of cash to carry on its operations.

The reason why we have to be on the floor today to seek action prior to the Easter recess is that the dock strike has more or less paralyzed shipping and has prevented the export of commodities held by the CCC. This has also brought on stagnation in the domestic market.

Under these circumstances we are required to ask that the capital stock of the CCC be increased by $1 billion. There seems to be no alternative. There are many aspects involved here. In view of the fact that this is an emergency situation, and we will have many opportunities later in the session to discuss in depth many of the agricultural problems which trouble us, I hope we can move along with the acceptance of this emergency resolution.

The RECORD of yesterday's session, which was available this morning, carries a full statement explaining the need for this action. The report is available. The hearings have been printed and are available.

I will be glad to yield for any question at this point.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. MAHON. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. WHITTEN) the chairman of the Subcommittee on Agricultural Appropriations, the subcommittee which handled the hearings on this resolution and which handles the regular appropriations in this field.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for an additional 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, I now yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I wanted to say to my chairman that our committee, as he well knows, did hold extensive and rather complete hearings on the financial situation.

The committee recommends the budget request contained in House Document No. 91-76 for a supplemental appropriation of $1 billion to restore capital impairment of the Commodity Credit Corporation for losses heretofore incurred. This resolution, which merely moves this amount forward from the budget for fiscal year 1970 into fiscal year 1969, will not expand the total appropriations presently requested for the Commodity Credit Corporation through fiscal year 1970.

The action recommended by the committee is made necessary by a serious financial situation currently facing the Corporation. Despite the use of every financial resource available to the department, it is apparent that the Corporation's capital funds are about to be exhausted. The most current estimates indicate that the balance available on March 18, 1969, will finance the Corporation's programs for another 10 days at the present rate of expenditure.

Since carrying out the Nation's price support programs is mandatory under the law and Commodity Credit Corporation expenditures are therefore uncontrollable, it is essential that the recommended funds be provided to assure continued operation of the price support and related programs of the Corporation. None of these funds are provided for personnel and other administrative expenses.

The increased demands on the Corporation's borrowing authority were caused by large unanticipated increases in crop production, particularly in feed grains, wheat, and soybeans, and decreases in exports. Lower market prices, along with the increased supply, have resulted in higher quantities going under loan and in lower repayments.

The nationwide dock strike, which started last December 20 and is still in progress at the gulf coast ports, also has added uncertainty to the commodity markets and has slackened the demand for agricultural commodities.

These additional demands do not represent a final cost to the Corporation. They, in effect, represent an investment in commodities held by the Corporation as security for loans or commodities to which the Corporation has title. As of March 7, 1969—the latest date available—the value of commodities on hand and under loan is estimated at $5.1 billion. Of this amount, Commodity Credit Corporation has title to $1 billion and has $4.1 billion pledged for loans.

So it is a case of having money invested in commodities, with the borrowing authority tied up in secured loans, as the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. MAHON) stated earlier.

The Commodity Credit Corporation was organized under the laws of Delaware, and later organized under the laws of the United States. It has all the normal functions and powers of a corporation: to buy, to sell, to enter into contracts, and all the other practices followed by other corporations.

One of its prime purposes through the years has been to maintain a proper relationship—as was the intent of Congress—between the agricultural, industrial, and labor sectors of our economy.

The Congress has provided by law that labor can strike and organize to bargain collectively—and thereby secure a large share of the consumer dollar. Industry, too, of course, is in a position to add its profits over and above its costs, thus securing its share of the consumer dollar.

Congress, through the years, has recognized the crucial role of agriculture, as the producer of the raw material of our food and fiber, and has recognized that, unless agriculture is accorded equal treatment in law, the other two sectors of the economy would take a bigger and bigger share of the consumer's dollar, leaving less and less for the farmer.

The vehicle through which the Congress has tried to achieve this objective is the Commodity Credit Corporation. Under the law, the Corporation is charged with the responsibility of carrying out the farm program. It gets its money from borrowing authority provided by the Congress, through the sale of its commodities, and in other ways. The appropriations from the Congress are made annually only to reimburse the Corporation for losses sustained in its operations during earlier time periods. The Corporation operates from day to day on its borrowing authority.

It should also be noted that the Congress has failed to restore the Corporation's capital impairment that occurred in 1961. This impairment amounts to more than $1 billion. I think it would make sense for us to restore that impairment at this time, since the Corporation is in financial difficulties. CCC has the obligation under law to purchase commodities and grant loans to farmers on their crops. If the Corporation's officers do not do this, they are violating the law, and yet if they do do it, and the Corporation does not have any money or borrowing authority left, they will also be violating the law.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAHON. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. CONTE. I thank the chairman, the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. MAHON), for yielding to me at this time.

We are considering today whether or not to pass House Joint Resolution 584 which would make additional appropriations available for the Commodity Credit Corporation. The distinguished chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, has explained the purpose of this resolution in yesterday's RECORD—page 7162. As Chairman MAHON pointed out, the Commodity Credit Corporation has reached the limit of authorized spending authority, namely $14.5 billion.

Last year I introduced an amendment to H.R. 17126 to limit farm subsidy payments to a maximum of $20,000 a year per farmer. The amendment was adopted by this House, then dropped in conference. It was adopted by this House because the inequities and the inappropriateness of the present farm subsidy program had been clearly demonstrated.

I believe as strongly today as I did then, that our farm program is outmoded, that it is unfair, and that it must be revised.

The question before us today is whether to authorize an additional $1 billion for the Commodity Credit Corporation. This money is needed in order that contracts already entered into between the CCC and individual farmers can be fulfilled. To deny this money would be to breach existing and binding contracts and I have no intention of taking any action today which might interfere with the fulfillment of these contractual obligations.

I want to make perfectly clear, however, that I similarly have no intention of abandoning the effort which was begun last year.

At the first appropriate time I intend to again introduce my amendment placing a $20,000 maximum on farm subsidy payments. I certainly hope furthermore that all of those who supported me last year will back this limitation again.

I stated last year and let me repeat it today—there is simply no justification today for the taxpayers of this country paying hundreds of millions of dollars to large and prosperous farmers for not farming their land.

I would like to serve notice here and now that I intend to continue this battle until we have been successful—until we have eliminated the unfair subsidies which now exist and have developed new agriculture programs and policies to meet the challenges of today.

Mr. MAHON. I thank the gentleman for his cooperation in this present situation and for holding his amendment for the future.

Mr. LANGEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAHON. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. LANGEN. It is generally known to the membership of this House that I am usually not very enthusiastic about supplemental appropriation bills. The one before us today, however, seems to be of such importance and of such character that it warrants our immediate support and passage. Were we not to do so, many serious hardships would be created throughout rural America, and the economic effects would be such that they would adversely affect the entire Nation.

Mr. MAHON, chairman of the full Committee on Appropriations, and Mr. WHITTEN, chairman of the Agriculture Subcommittee on Appropriations, has, as usual very ably, eloquently, and specifically outlined for the House of Representatives the need and provisions of the legislation before us. Permit me to briefly elaborate further.

I stated at the outset that the bill was of such urgency and character that it warrants our immediate support. The committee report, which is available to every Member, sets forth the urgency in noting that this supplemental appropriation of $1 billion is to restore the capital impairment of the Commodity Credit Corporation for losses incurred during this fiscal year in order to alleviate the serious financial situation which currently faces the Corporation.

The character or provisions of this bill are such that it merely moves forward from fiscal year 1970 to fiscal 1969 $1 billion so that the total appropriations presently requested for the Commodity Credit Corporation through fiscal year 1970 will not be increased at this time. Testimony before the subcommittee indicated that the balance available on March 18, 1969, to the Corporation would finance its programs only for another 10 days at the present rates of expenditure. These are the moneys that are used for our Nation's price support programs, which are mandatory under the law, and unless additional moneys are provided at this time, the continued operation of price support and related programs could not be carried out during the remainder of this fiscal year, and so would constitute a breach of promise on the part of the Government to the many thousand participators in these programs throughout the Nation. None of these funds are used for personnel or other administrative expenses.

It would be a reasonable question to ask why has this action become necessary. Last year your subcommittee did its best to provide adequate funds for the Commodity Credit Corporation on the basis of the information and statistics that were available to us at that time. In fact, we had the assurance of the department at that time that there might be anywhere from a billion-and-a-half to $2 billion of moneys available for unforeseen circumstances. Factors beyond our control, however, which have already been identified brought demands that were far beyond any reasonable anticipation that these moneys would be needed in these amounts at this time.

Let it also be thoroughly understood that it is not the fault of the present administration, nor is it the fault of the past administration, but has rather come about because of factors that are beyond the control of any administration and are substantially unpredictable. It is most unfortunate that those who have just taken over the management of these important programs should be confronted with the inheritance of this problem.

The problem is serious because of the economic hardships that would be created for individual farmers as well as all of rural America. It is well known that the economic plight of American agriculture is severe enough as it is without further aggravation. If this bill is not passed to provide the additional moneys, it will mean that all price support and related programs will of necessity have to be discontinued because of a lack of money with which to carry them out, even though the commitments have been established by law to farmers throughout the land. This would result in an economic calamity and great injustice to farmers who in good faith have signed agreements to comply with the programs enacted by the Congress and recommended to them by their Government. Gross inequities would result because many farmers have already completed these transactions as compared to others who are presently in the process of completing their loans and preparing for the coming spring season.

The moneys involved in these programs are most essential to all farm operations around the country, and with the high cost of operation, it is most important that these moneys should be available to them or many would have real difficulty in continuing to operate their farms during this coming production season. Farmers throughout the Nation are having difficulty enough at this time in sustaining their operations for the coming year because of a lack of operating funds. It is just as unfortunate at this time that the Farmers Home Administration does not have funds available for operating or emergency loans, even though our committee and the Congress did appropriate last year more adequate funds for these purposes. However, the Budget Bureau, in spite of continuous urging by Congress, myself included, have withheld $25 million of operating loan funds, and I understand there is still $19 million more that could be provided under last year's appropriation for emergency loans. This further aggravates and increases the need for the approval by the House of this supplemental appropriation today. To not provide these moneys for the Corporation would have far-reaching economic effects in that it would force many people to move grains and agricultural commodities on the markets at accelerated rates which would only further depress the already too low prices, and so reduce farm income even below the present unacceptable levels.

Another question might be properly raised—What are the elements that have caused this emergency need for money by the Commodity Credit Corporation at this time? I have already stated that the problem has been brought about by numerous factors which were not controllable by either the Corporation or the participants in the respective programs affected. Let me identify a few of them.

Last year crop production throughout the country was at exceptionally high levels and so there were substantial increased volumes of crops and commodities that are subject to the various price support programs. This fact in itself brought a substantial increase in the number of loan requests. The demand for loans was further increased by the fact that a large grain crop depressed prices to the point where it became necessary to make further use of the loan program, all of which brought extra demands on the moneys available for these purposes as administered by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Adding to these adverse conditions was the national dock strike which started last December 20 and is still in progress at the gulf coast ports which prevented and held back the normal amount of shipments to foreign countries.

With the limited amount of moneys available to the Commodity Credit Corporation at this time, they testified before our committee that it had already been necessary for them to place a hold on shipments under the Public Law 480 program. These actions, of course, have already affected the markets throughout the country and if permitted to continue, will further aggravate the problems that are already so evident. Testimony before the committee indicated that we might have lost as much as $200 million worth of exports which cannot be recovered. Besides the increased production and reduced foreign shipments of feed grains, wheat, and soybeans, cotton has also presented an unexpected problem. While cotton production was down about 2.1 billion bales less than predicted, the present market prices are such that both domestic and export demands have dropped at the point where an extra 23 billion bales have been placed under Commodity Credit loans with an additional investment of $215 million.

The committee report identifies by language and by tables the results of these facts as they affect the demands for money of the Corporation, amounting to program increases totaling $1,686 million. Of this total $973 million occurred prior to submission of the 1970 budget and $713 million additional were added since that time.

I will include for the RECORD a summary of the program developments and the major influencing factors from the 1969 budget to the current estimates for fiscal year 1969.

* Includes sales of $111,000,000 of dairy products to sec. 32 funds.

It will be noted that in feed grains there was a production increase of 1.1 million tons, requiring an additional cost of $481 million. In wheat there was an additional 60 million bushels resulting in an additional outlay by the Corporation of $387 million. In soybeans, increased production was 30 million bushels with a net effect of $375 million of additional cost. Experience was similar with cotton, as well as other commodities, all of which brought on an additional demand for storage facility loans, costing an added $98 million.

During the course of the committee hearings, it was also called to our attention that there were other related factors that contributed to these additional outlays of money that accrued to the Commodity Credit Corporation. Statements were made to the effect that the dock strike might well have been settled much earlier had it not been for the fact that many of the strikers were participants in the food stamp program, thereby affecting the entire negotiations. It is somewhat ironic that the food supplies furnished in this manner should become a substantial factor in the costs involved to produce the food supplies to sustain the program. While it is not a subject for consideration today, it would seem that proper notation ought to be made of the effects that accrue to consumers and taxpayers alike that I am sure was not the original intention in the adoption of the food stamp program.

I am sure it is evident to everyone who has had their attention directed to these factors that I have identified for you and discussed with you briefly that in the aggregate, they amount to an added economic burden that affects the entire Nation. If we do not provide the necessary moneys today to permit the Commodity Credit Corporation to function in its normal and assigned pattern, then even further economic demands will be placed on Government, as well as all of its citizens.

It, therefore, in my judgment is of the greatest urgency that we approve the requested appropriation. This should be done without delay so that moneys will be on hand before the Commodity Credit Corporation finds it necessary to curtail any of their operations. I, therefore, urge the House to look with favor on this appropriation bill today.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAHON. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I have asked the distinguished gentleman from Texas to yield to me at this time for a question.

I believe the gentleman just stated that the Commodity Credit Corporation at this time has $5 or $6 billion in commodities. Is that correct?

Mr. MAHON. A total of $5.1 billion to be exact.

Mr. GOODLING. I would like to make this observation about this very alarming figure. I would like to make it for this reason: I have in my file at the present time two letters from the Commodity Credit Corporation in which I asked them to tell me the facts regarding sales on two lots of peanuts. I would like to point out the cost involved in those sales. Within the last 3 weeks the Commodity Credit Corporation lost a cool $3 million on the two that were sold.

If we are going to sell $5 or $6 billion in the same manner and under like conditions, they are going to have to come here for many additional supplementary appropriations.

Mr. MAHON. I thank the gentleman for his observation. Of the total, about $4 billion is invested in commodities under loan with the Commodity Credit Corporation and about $1 billion represents commodity stocks owned by the Government.

Mr. FINDLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike the last word.

(Mr. FINDLEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. FINDLEY. Mr. Speaker, on page 4 of the hearings on this supplemental appropriation is a table showing the borrowing authority in use by the Commodity Credit Corporation and the balance available or deficit. I draw the attention of the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. WHITTEN) to the item which shows the balance available on June 30, 1968, as being $1.5 billion.

I will ask the gentleman if the appropriation before the House today can reasonably be expected to restore approximately the same balance on June 30 of this year?

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman well knows, we are dealing in an area where it is virtually impossible to say what will happen. It has been pointed out that about $4 billion of capital of the Corporation is tied up in commodity loans. If those commodities are redeemed the Corporation would have $4 billion with which to operate.

Unfortunately, due to the backup of commodities in the country, largely as a result of the dock strike, and very large production of certain crops in the feed grain and wheat areas, the domestic market has been very, very bad. So, being unable to sell, the producers have turned to the Corporation, and put their crops under loan with the Corporation.

So it comes back to the fact that if the market strengthens domestically—and I believe the department is giving some thought to strengthening the domestic market—it can be hoped that many of these commodities would be withdrawn, the loans to the Government repaid, and this would leave the Corporation a larger balance as of June 30 next. But I do not know how anybody can foresee at this time what is going to happen in the next few months.

Mr. FINDLEY. Mr. Speaker, I draw attention to the bottom figure of that same column which shows the figure of minus $381 million estimated for June 30, 1969. If we accept this hearing data as being substantially correct, this means that the appropriation of $1 billion will leave the available balance at only $619 million on June 30. This, as the gentleman knows, is substantially less than the balance of the year previous—almost a billion less.

The reason I mention this is because I question whether this type of procedure actually conveys fairly the budget situation for the fiscal year just ended which, of course, in a sense is the last fiscal year of the Johnson administration, as well as the fair estimate, or presentation of the budget situation which will prevail in the next fiscal year, which will be the first full fiscal year of the Nixon administration.

Had the amount requested here been $1.9 billion instead of $1 billion, then if we accept these figures as reasonably accurate the capital of the Commodity Credit Corporation impaired during fiscal 1969 would have been fully restored, so that the available money for corporation use July 1 of this year would be about the same as July 1 of last year. As it is, figures on total budget for the fiscal years will inevitably be distorted to the disadvantage of the Nixon administration, and to the advantage of the Johnson administration.

Would the gentleman agree with me in that statement?

Mr. WHITTEN. If the gentleman will yield further, I do not believe that it can be so claimed, because the $1 billion has been moved forward from the pending budget for 1970, which could be called the Johnson budget. We are just moving it forward from then until now because in this period we have had the very heavy use of Corporation funds for loans to producers of these commodities.

Also we are going to be into our Easter recess, and the situation is a serious one, so we had no alternative whatsoever.

Mr. FINDLEY. I appreciate the seriousness of the situation.

Mr. WHITTEN. But when it comes to the prospective situation, it is difficult to answer. In 1961, as the gentleman will recall, they took inventory of the true value of the commodities, and certified the losses they had incurred. Those losses which total about $1,050,000,000 have never been restored.

So this appropriation merely restores that amount of impaired capital. But to anticipate what the situation will be the 1st of June or July, I just do not know how to go about it.

Even the figures you have made reference to on page 4 of the hearings have probably changed somewhat since they were provided.

Mr. FINDLEY. I am sure that the gentleman would have inserted a reservation in the printed hearings or the report if he had reason to question the accuracy of this minus $381 million figure.

My point is that the difference between Federal receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year that will end July 1 presents an unfair and distorted picture to the extent of nearly $1 billion, and I think it is unfortunate.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

(Mr. FINDLEY asked and was given permission to proceed for an additional 5 minutes.)

Mr. FINDLEY. Mr. Speaker, there is another item that I would like to call to the attention of the House. That is the adverse impact on Commodity Credit Corporation resources caused by the unwise action of Secretary Freeman in maintaining the loan rate of soybeans at $2.50 per bushel long after it was evident to him that this was leading soybeans into disaster.

As a result, at the end of this marketing year, the CCC is going to have over 300 million bushels in storage representing a heavy dollar investment. Had we had prudent management of the loan rate for soybeans under Secretary Freeman, this costly problem never would have developed. Now Secretary Hardin has taken what I think is a courageous and statesmanlike approach to the problem of soybeans by dropping the loan rate.

He has also announced that he will not sell the Government soybean stockpiles on the market during the next year in order to give the market an opportunity to make the adjustment which is wrecking market prices—action necessitated by the folly that Secretary Freeman put across. This will cost money, the CCC will have to tie up funds amounting to at least a billion dollars in inventory and loans, a use of Government funds which would have been totally unnecessary except for Freeman's soybean folly.

As we evaluate the circumstances which today lead us to the necessity of appropriating an extra billion dollars for the operations of the Commodity Credit Corporation, in all fairness, we ought to allocate a great measure of the blame for this unfortunate event at the doorstep of the former Secretary of Agriculture. At the same time we should salute the new Secretary who has taken this courageous step to try to right the wrong of yesterday.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FINDLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MICHEL. I would like to comment on the gentleman's earlier observation with respect to the balance at the beginning of the next fiscal year that will be on hand by the Commodity Credit Corporation even with this supplemental appropriation of $1 billion.

Actually, to have a cushion of just $600 million for the Commodity Credit Corporation is not very much. As a matter of fact, on some days transactions of the Commodity Credit Corporation can total $200 million in 1 day's activity.

I should like to point out to the gentleman that when the current fiscal year's regular appropriation bill was on the floor of the House, we were given to understand that there would be a $2 billion cushion, and I am speaking of the kind of figures and estimates as they were presented to us. But it shows how quickly outdated they become, particularly in view of the dock strike and the accumulation of commodities by the Commodity Credit Corporation to the point now where a $2 billion cushion has shrunk down practically to a minus figure and with this billion dollars, it will be down further for the new fiscal year.

If I may make one further point. We were talking of net realized losses on these commodities from prior years.

At the rate these figures are carried forward—$1,057,000,000 from 1961.

Mr. FINDLEY. And that was never restored.

Mr. MICHEL. It has never been reimbursed. And then there is $2,211,000,000 unreimbursed from 1967. Also, $2,948,000,000 in 1968. You have a total there of $6,215,000,000 of net realized losses through June 30, 1968. You see, we are a long, long way from really getting caught up.

Mr. FINDLEY. On July 1, 1967, the funds available to the Commodity Credit Corporation exceeded $3 billion. Then a year later, they were tightened down to $1½ billion. Now they are tightened down to a little over a billion dollars.

The whole purpose here, in my opinion, was to try to make the Johnson budgets look better than they really deserved to look, and trying to shift an unfair burden to the first Nixon fiscal year.

Mr. MICHEL. I thank the gentleman for his observation, and it is a very valid one. When the regular bill for fiscal year 1970 appropriations is considered we will develop this point further, for it needs to be aired fully.

Mrs. MAY. Mr. Speaker, American agriculture is currently facing a serious economic crisis. The price and income problems with which U.S. farmers have had to contend in recent years have grown even more acute in the past few months. And, on top of that, adverse weather conditions in many parts of our country have compounded the difficulty, resulting in crop losses and severe hardship to farmers who, even under more "normal" circumstances, have found it increasingly difficult to make ends meet in the face of steadily rising costs and low farm prices.

Many of us are deeply concerned over this situation and its implications for the future of American agriculture and our Nation. It is imperative, Mr. Speaker, that every possible effort be made by this Congress, the administration, U.S. farmers, and the American public to find ways in which this highly damaging trend of falling farm prices and rising costs can be reversed. Our Nation's strength is directly linked to an economically healthy agriculture, and it is most important that we never lose sight of this fact.

Nearly all segments of U.S. agriculture have been hard hit this season for one reason or another. Wheat producers, for example, are faced with price and market problems resulting from a variety of adverse factors. Wheat prices are far below last year's levels, and wheat futures are currently about the lowest of the season. The U.S. Department of Agriculture tells us that the season average price originally estimated at $1.40 per bushel now is expected to be 18 cents less—about $1.22 per bushel.

The wheat export situation presents cause for serious concern at this time, also. Wheat exports are now expected to fall around 190 million bushels below earlier USDA expectations of 790 million bushels. The dock strikes and the recent problem involving shipment of sprout-damaged wheat to Japan have reduced our exports and now the Canadian offers to sell wheat at prices below the International Grains Arrangement have cast an even deeper shadow over the entire U.S. wheat export picture. This latest action has raised a number of questions as to the future of the IGA and the effects to be expected on U.S. exports and domestic prices. A meeting of world wheat exporters has been scheduled for next week here in Washington, D.C., to discuss the problem of price cutting under the IGA, and I sincerely hope for the sake of U.S. wheat producers that the meeting will be a productive one.

With this background, Mr. Speaker, the need for congressional appropriation of additional funds needed by the Commodity Credit Corporation becomes more obvious. We are all only too well aware of the serious fiscal situation which our Nation faces today. With the budgetary belt tightening which has been required, it is necessary to thoroughly examine every further Federal expenditure from the standpoints of need and priority.

Using this yardstick to evaluate the request for additional funds for the Commodity Credit Corporation, it becomes clear that approval of this request could be the only responsible action under the circumstances. Without the needed funds, CCC would shortly cease to operate. This would mean halting the Public Law 480 program, with subsequent loss of export markets and lower domestic market prices. Price support loans could not be made to farmers, causing further market depression. The effects would be widespread and an extremely serious blow to our entire agricultural economy—an economy that has already suffered so much damage this season it would probably not be able to withstand the shock.

In summary, the need for additional Commodity Credit Corporation funds at this time serves to very effectively point up the critical economic situation faced by U.S. agriculture today. I do not believe the seriousness of this situation can be overemphasized, and I would urge all my colleagues in the House to keep this well in mind as the request before us is considered and in the days ahead as we attempt to come to grips with these problems.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, this resolution for supplemental appropriations to restore over $1 billion in capital for the Commodity Credit Corporation should draw attention to the importance of world trade in agricultural commodities. The amount of commodities exported not only affects our domestic budget by affecting the quantity of basic commodities which the Commodity Credit Corporation acquires in a particular year but it also affects our balance of payments and budgeting problems. A dock strike in the United States practically cut off these exports for several weeks. In addition to that, we have several trade and cargo preference restrictions which limit very considerably the competitive role of U.S. agricultural products.

Congress must bear its share of the blame because politically inspired amendments and gimmicks have been added to all kinds of bills as they go through Congress in an effort to prove that the author of the amendments and certain groups are Communist haters, Arab haters, anti-British, or friends of shipping interests. All of these things working together in the past few months have restricted agricultural exports, given part of our export market to other countries, required an appropriation of additional funds to the Commodity Credit Corporation, put additional pressure on the budget at a time when we have budget problems, will require borrowing money to invest in these commodities which will be stored at a time when competition for money is already too great and interest rates too high, and in the end it will require farmers to cut back on production if they are to keep supply in balance with demand well enough to avoid reduction in prices.

With exports being so important to farmers and at a time when the European Economic Community is considering a tax on our soybean meal and oil imports we certainly need the most vigorous informed and enlightened special trade representative, but this position formerly held by William Roth has not been refilled in this new administration. We need one man speaking for USDA, the State Department, the Commerce Department, and the President instead of letting negotiations get bogged down with each Department working in its own way, and pushing its own separate point of view on world trade matters. Sixty precious days have passed and American agriculture cannot help but suffer from the time that has already been lost since Roth's job was vacated. I strongly urge this new administration to install their replacement for William Roth immediately and I also urge both Congress and the administration to review the various restrictions on trade that in the end cost the American farmer, the American taxpayer and adversely affects our balance of payments. There should be no less than a complete review of all aspects of agricultural trade.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the joint resolution.

The previous question was ordered. The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may extend their remarks in connection with the consideration of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION FOR SUBCOMMITTEE ON RETIREMENT INSURANCE AND HEALTH BENEFITS, COMMITTEE ON POST OFFICE AND CIVIL SERVICE, TO MEET AT 2:30 P.M. TODAY

Mr. DANIELS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Retirement Insurance and Health Benefits of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee may be permitted to meet at 2:30 this afternoon.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

ABM SAFEGUARD SYSTEM

(Mr. CELLER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, the issue of the deployment of a limited ABM system has resulted in a flood of words, pro and con. In discussing the deployment of the ABM Safeguard system, as I view it, the question is not "What if the opponents are right," but rather "what if they are wrong?" If the opponents are right, we have spent $800 million; but if they are wrong, we, in our turn, have wronged untold millions of lives. Certainly, there are unprovable assumptions on both sides; estimates that cancel out each other, demonstrable facts upholding each end of the argument. But, the disparity in possible consequences leads me inexorably to conclude in favor of the Safeguard system, the modified anti-ballistic-missile program. The gamble is too great, the awesome risk too much to bear.

I have reached this conclusion painfully, fully aware that there is a respectable body of opinion against the deployment, in any form, of the ABM. There are those who believe earnestly that it will accelerate the arms race, inhibit disarmament talks, that we already have sufficient deterrent power to absorb an attack and still effectively retaliate, that our Poseidon force eliminates the need for the Safeguard system. But such arguments, I believe, must fall before the estimate that by the mid-seventies the Soviet Union could have a "first strike" capability. Nor do we assume that if she has, she will use it. What underlines my thinking is we just do not know now any more than we knew then that a "Pearl Harbor" could happen.

What the Safeguard system spells out is a double lock on a door. In that sense, it is a guard against a tempted aggressor, be it the Soviet Union or Red China. The ABM is not a weapon of offense. It does not thrust outward, but stands mute witness to one of the paramount interests of government to protect the lives of its people. With the knowledge that the Soviet Union is perfecting highly sophisticated undersea detective devices, total reliance on the Polaris and Poseidon force will not do.

Moreover, the project of the ABM system has not halted the willingness of the Soviet Union to enter more fully into disarmament talks.

The decision to limit the ABM to selective missile sites is an additional signal to the Soviet Union that we seek and welcome disarmament agreements. It is a precaution we take so limited in scope that I, for one, cannot view it as provocative or as indicative of an arms escalation.

Nor do I view the cost of the Safeguard system as cutting into our determination to meet our domestic needs. We can do both. Our gross national product is approaching $300,000,000,000, and we need not embrace the counsel of despair. We have the resources to heal the ravages of want and poverty if we have the national will to do so. It is up to the administration to accent this national will by stating publicly now that the savings secured by moving from a Sentinel system to the Safeguard system—from 1.8 billion to 800 million—will be allocated to wage battle against the domestic ills that beset us.

Those who oppose the ABM system, I repeat, could be right, but what—dreadful to contemplate—if they are wrong? And because I cannot know and am no prophet, I support and will vote for the ABM.

PUBLIC WORKS MORATORIUM WOULD PENALIZE FUTURE GENERATIONS

(Mr. JONES of Alabama asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. JONES of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I could hardly believe my eyes this morning when I read that the administration is seriously considering a moratorium on public works.

This startling and tragic disclosure was made by Budget Director Robert P. Mayo in testimony on the proposal to increase the debt limit. His aim in this drastic move would be an attempt to reduce inflationary pressures.

It is highly questionable that such a remedy will improve the situation, much less effect a recovery.

Coming at a time when our Nation's proportional investment in public works endeavors is every year diminishing, it is doubly confounding that such a policy would even be considered.

Aside from the adverse effect on the employment and the economy of every State in this Union, we must think of our obligation to those who come after us.

A moratorium on public works will prove to be costly to the American people in terms of the delay in benefits which accrue from these endeavors. A moratorium will prove disastrous for future generations which would be saddled with the task of trying to make repairs, if such repairs are even possible, for the mistakes and problems which we pass on by our failure to plan and act for undeniable future needs.

Our Nation's unexcelled levels of prosperity and accomplishment were not the products of an adding machine approach to problems. The greatness of America is the result of people who dared to dream boldly and to forthrightly plan and execute private and public endeavors which fostered industry, trade, and commerce.

In recent years we have not maintained a level of public investment in facilities which are the very keystone to growth and development for the people of this Nation.

This is evidenced by the pollution of many of our streams, the traffic congestion resulting in delays for travelers and goods, the overcrowding of hospitals and health facilities, the crisis in education, the bogging down of the mails, the floods which recently damaged California and which now threaten vast areas across the northern and western sections of our land, the dearth of recreational areas, and the many, many other costly and frustrating problems we see at every turn.

We have a backlog of public works needs now.

We can easily read the charts about the increases in population which are expected in the years ahead. This compounds our immediate problem and makes the need for planning and action all the more urgent.

Any moratorium adds to the problems we pass to future generations. The need is for greater investment in public works. Our failure to adequately service these needs is a selfish expedient which penalizes unborn generations. We can do better. We must.

MORATORIUM ON PUBLIC WORKS

(Mr. EDMONDSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. EDMONDSON. Mr. Speaker, this morning's Washington Post carries the news that Budget Director Robert F. Mayo, testifying before the Senate Finance Committee, stated that very serious consideration was being given to a total moratorium on public works.

To me this is one of the most alarming reports I have heard since the new administration took over. I hope that the Budget Director was merely speaking for himself and not for the administration, because it seems to me that we have some public works programs underway in this country that so vitally affect the well-being of the entire Nation that it would be disastrous to reembark upon a no-new-starts policy.

Mr. GERALD R. FORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EDMONDSON. I am glad to yield to our distinguished minority leader.

Mr. GERALD R. FORD. I read the same news story the gentleman from Oklahoma read this morning. This morning I was privileged to be at a meeting where the Director of the Bureau of the Budget was present. I asked him a question whether or not this would be the Bureau of the Budget recommendation, and the categorical answer was given: There will be no freeze on new starts. There will be high selectivity. Those projects that have a good benefit-to-cost ratio will qualify for initiation, as will also those projects where there is an emergency situation, such as we might be facing up in the North or the Northwest, with heavy rains, snow, et cetera; and there will undoubtedly be favorable consideration given—unquestionably, I should say—where those projects are underway where it would be uneconomical and unwise for the project to be stopped when it is halfway through. So I can only say to the gentleman that there is no truth to the statement that the administration is going to put an arbitrary freeze on such projects, as was indicated perhaps by the headlines this morning.

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GERALD R. FORD. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. HAYS. I hope we can rely on the statement the minority leader has made as being fairly to the point, because I recall last week he gave a statement to the press about the Democrats not having done anything about stopping the riots in our colleges and had not used the laws that were available to them. Then the next day the White House said, Well, the reason they had not used them was that no college had asked them to, and you cannot do it unless you ask them. So the gentleman sort of marched up the hill and got sort of pushed down. I hope in marching up the hill today he won't get pushed back down again.

Mr. GERALD R. FORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EDMONDSON. I am glad to yield to the minority leader.

Mr. GERALD R. FORD. The statement made by the White House was at least an affirmative statement to the effect that college presidents and university presidents ought to use the power which the Congress gave them to withhold the funds from those students who violate the law or other regulation. This was at least a White House backing up of any action that might be taken by authorities on the campuses where there is a violation of their rules and regulations. We never had that before under the previous administration.

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. EDMONDSON. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. HAYS. That is about the best "Alice in Wonderland" explanation that I have heard. Everybody who read that newspaper knows that the White House has been throwing this football back and forth. If you want to call what the President has stated an affirmative action, that is all right with me, but it is clear that it is the sort of statement designed to get him off the hook.

Mr. EDMONDSON. I hope that the selectivity on starts to which the minority leader referred will be a selectivity that recognizes the quality of a project, and the urgency of need for it, regardless of the congressional district involved.

TAX REFORM OVERDUE—TOTAL ABOLITION OF THE OIL DEPLETION ALLOWANCE

(Mr. PODELL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PODELL. Mr. Speaker, there has been an enormous amount of verbiage in recent weeks over tax reform. We hear sound. We observe fury. Great noises are heard. Huge clouds of verbal dust arise to the heavens. When all is said and done, we stand still in the same place. A time has come for plain talk.

Our tax system makes a slice of Swiss cheese look like solid concrete. It has ceased to be an equitable system of taxation. Further, a growing number of Americans are acutely aware of what is wrong and what must be done to rectify the situation. Many of these observant people reside in the 13th District of New York, and I have been hearing from them daily. They know all about millionaires and near-millionaires who pay no taxes whatsoever. They are aware of all the loopholes. From foundations, conglomerates and tax loss farming to capital gains, gifts and charitable deductions. From municipal industrial development bonds to real estate depreciation deductions. Yet none of these loopholes elicits more intelligent indignation than the 27½-percent oil depletion allowance.

Recent reports indicate that no significant attempt at closing this loophole is contemplated by the administration this year. Substantial tax relief for lower- and middle-income taxpayers is to be delayed, while the depletion loophole gushes streams of wealth for a few at the expense of the many. Yet it seems that the oil barons are untouchable. Why is this so? Why is their preserve sacred? Why should the oil barons be treated favorably at the expense of the entire Nation?

Why should scores of millions pay for the free ride they are taking? Particularly in light of their recent activities in areas of price hikes and pollution? Why, indeed?

Oil companies charge themselves higher prices for crude oil they control and produce. They then proceed to take a higher depletion allowance and raise gas and oil prices to every American citizen. Consumers are skinned from the ankles up and from the neck down.

The Congress of the United States gave the oil depletion allowance to the oil barons. What Congress gave, Congress may take back. This is exactly what it should do and can do—if it wishes. These oil barons constitute a fourth level of government, polluting our environment, maintaining artificially high prices, preventing cheaper oil from entering the Nation and generally doing everything with the Treasury but placing it on wheels and taking it away to their board rooms. I believe we can and should act to abolish the oil depletion allowance—all of it, totally, irrevocably, swiftly.

TEXAS RUBY RED GRAPEFRUIT

(Mr. DE LA GARZA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, at the risk of sounding as though I am bragging, I must admit that the Lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas grows the finest grapefruit in the country. And without any fear of successful contradiction, I point out, Mr. Speaker, that the valley's Ruby Red grapefruit are without peer in the world.

So that everyone will know whereof I speak, I have arranged that these grapefruit be served all who eat lunch tomorrow in the House Restaurant in the Capitol. The grapefruit is being served through the courtesy of the Texas delegation in the Congress with the compliments of the TexaSweat Advisory Committee, Inc., of Pharr, Tex. This is the committee handling advertising under the citrus marketing order and represents all the citrus growers in the valley.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to conclude with a poem and "A Magic Menu" I sent the Members advising about tomorrow's treat:

TEXAS RUBY RED GRAPEFRUIT

On March 26 when your lunch you eat
The House Restaurants will serve a treat
Of grapefruit from Texas' Rio Grande Valley—
Around its zesty flavor rally.

The grapefruit diet's one sure slimmer,

II. Lunch: ½ TexaSweat grapefruit, Meat, any style, any amount, Salad, as much as you can eat with any dressing that contains no sugar. Coffee or tea.

IV. Bedtime snack: Tomato juice or skimmed milk.

1. At each meal you must eat until you are full, until you cannot possibly eat more.

2. Don't eliminate anything; for example, don't skip bacon at breakfast or omit the salad at dinner. It is this combination of foods that burns up accumulated fat.

3. The TexaSweat grapefruit is important because it acts as a catalyst that starts the fat burning process.

4. Cut down on coffee. It is thought to affect the insulin balance that hinders the burning process. Try to limit yourself to one cup at each meal.

5. No eating between meals! If you can eat the combination of foods suggested until you are stuffed you won't be hungry between meals.

6. Note that this list completely eliminates sugars and starches which form lipoids and lipoids are what form fat. Fat does not form fat; it helps burn it up. You can fry your eggs in butter and use butter generously on your vegetables.

7. Note that with this "magic menu" you can eat what your family eats with the exception of desserts, breads, and white vegetables. While your family eats these, you may have a double or triple helping of meat, salad, or vegetables. Eat until you are stuffed and then force yourself to eat some more . . . the more you can eat of the proper combination the more you lose.

8. You can lose 10 pounds in 10 days. There will be no weight loss the first four days, but you will suddenly drop 5 pounds on the 5th day. Thereafter, you lose 1 pound a day until the 10th day. Then you will lose 1½ pounds every 2 days until you get down to the proper weight.

9. Check with your family doctor.

THE MIAMI TEENAGE RALLY FOR DECENCY

(Mr. PEPPER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. Speaker, on Sunday afternoon in Miami my wife and I attended an event which I think is of national, if not worldwide, significance. There, 30,000 teenagers gathered in our Orange Bowl to proclaim to the country and to the world their belief in God and in their country and their support of the cause of decency in this country.

This is the program which they announced on that occasion; the Miami Teenage Rally for Decency.

This is what we stand for:

1. Belief in God and that He loves us.
2. Love of our planet and country—Patriotism.
3. Love of family.
4. Reverence for one's sexuality.
5. Equality of all men.

It was an inspiration to have been privileged to be present and observe this great thoroughly peaceful but exciting outpouring of our young people. I hope this gigantic rally of youth will be followed throughout the country, and I hope, the world, to restore the faith of people everywhere that the youth of this generation is basically wholesome and sound and truly dedicated to the love of God, love of country and the principles of human rights and decency.

The greatest credit should go to a fine young man who is a senior at Miami Springs High School and lives at Hialeah in my district, Mike Levesque, 17 years old, for being the one to conceive and principally to organize this momentous rally. Another having much to do with the success of the rally was Father Sullivan, a dynamic young Irish priest. Others who had a great part were Father Briggs, Rabbi Lehrman, Bishop Duncan and many other spiritual leaders of the Greater Miami area who gave most meaningful support to the movement. Jackie Gleason, Anita Bryant and Ted Mack and many name bands and entertainers thrilled the thousands of eager young people present with their participation.

Mr. Speaker, I include the following newspaper articles which tell of the rally.

[From the New York Times, Mar. 24, 1969]
TEEN-AGE DECENCY RALLY DRAWS 30,000 IN MIAMI

MIAMI, March 23.—Some 30,000 hand-clapping persons, some waving signs saying "Down With Obscenity," rallied in the Orange Bowl today to support a teen-age crusade for decency in entertainment.

Teen-agers organized the rally after Jim Morrison, 24 years old, the lead singer of The Doors, a rock group, was charged with indecent exposure during a concert in Miami on March 1. Six warrants have been issued for Mr. Morrison's arrest.

Mike Levesque, 17, the originator of the rally, a senior at Miami Springs High School, said the idea had grown out of a Roman Catholic youth group discussion two days after the concert by The Doors.

"This is not a protest rally," said Julie James, 18, a member of the teen-age Rally for Decency. "We're not against something. We're for something."

TALKS ON GOD AND SEX

Teen-age speakers gave three-minute talks on God, parents, patriotism, sexuality and brotherhood. There were appearances by professional entertainers, who donated their time.

"Five virtues," selected as the keynote of the rally, were "belief in God and that He loves us; love of our planet and country; love of our family; reverence of one's sexuality, and equality of all men."

"Sex is definitely being exploited and it is because society has been losing its reverence for one's sexuality," Miss James said.

The shirt-sleeved crowd basking in a warm sun cheered for Jackie Gleason, Anita Bryant and The Lettermen, popular music singers, who appeared in order to applaud the teenage rally.

"I believe this kind of movement will snowball across the United States and perhaps around the world," Mr. Gleason said.

"I think it's great, there should be more things like that," said Tony Butala of The Lettermen.

Young Levesque said he was thrilled by the rapid growth of the decency movement and the support it had gained from adults.

The crowd was about evenly split between teen-agers and adults.

Another member of the executive committee, Alan Rosenthal, 16, said telephone calls and letters had come in from around the country from teenage groups interested in the movement.

He said: "We're going to try to come up with some kind of international youth organization. It could really tie the world together.

"The youths start out with something like this, and 10 years from now when they get a little older, who knows what could happen."

Numerous organizations, including major religious denominations, contributed to the rally. Members of the American Legion passed out 10,000 small American flags.

ABOUT 30,000 RALLY FOR DECENCY

DECENCY RALLY RATTLES ORANGE BOWL TO RAFTERS

(By Jean Wardlow)

Roaring "rock" and cheering teenagers shook Miami's Orange Bowl stadium to its cantilevered roof and rattled it down to its locker room doors Sunday as a crowd of 30,000 "stood up to be counted" at the Miami Teenage Rally for Decency.

"I want to tell you," said The Great One, Jackie Gleason, to the cheering teens rallying for "decency" in all areas of life, "that up to now I've told people I'm happy to be a Floridian."

"But now, after what you kids are doing, I want to say I'm proud to be a Floridian."

Most of the crowd, which began arriving about 1 p.m. for the pre-show was teens. They came in groups or on their own, some displaying hand-lettered signs, "Down With Obscenity," "Mater Center Backs You" and "St. John Bosco Youth Movement Supports You."

There were kids in jeans, kids in sneakers. Kids in minis and Sunday best. Kids in sports shirts and flare pants and kids in tie and jacket. Negro kids, white kids, a few with beards, a few with beads; short kids, tall kids—all clapping in time to the music of some top stars whom they'd seen on TV, heard on records and who were appearing at their rally for free because they believed "in our cause."

Sleepy-eyed Ronnie Smith of The Lettermen was clutching his breakfast-lunch—part of a hot dog and a coke—because the pop singing group had driven all night without sleep after a Saturday night concert in Jacksonville to take part here.

"We wanted to take part to bring back the good will entertainment groups should have and which was lost to some extent by what happened (with The Doors' performance here)," Smith said. Jewish groups, civic and community leaders from all faiths and political areas of Dade.

"It won't stop here," one of the rally's teens said. "This shows we are in the majority. The kids are with us."

(It is estimated that the countywide total of Dade's teenagers is 70,000.)

Father Briggs said the rally "will probably evolve into a countywide group. Gleason, who had been driven in in a 1911 touring car (all celebrities arrived by these special cars) had said, "I believe this kind of movement will snowball across the United States and perhaps even around the world."

Miami Dolphin football star Bob Griese, standing on the sidelines after his appearance, said, looking out at the cheering stadium, "You hear so much on TV programs about the bad teenagers. They're not in the majority at all, and this shows what the fine teenagers are really like, I think it's been a privilege to take part in this."

From the time the youngsters first entered the stadium, the boom of electrified sound shook their eardrums. At first, sitting in seats higher up, many later moved down to sit on the wall in front of box seats to be closer to the action—performers playing from the huge stage at the east end of the field.

The youngsters clapped, waved small U.S. flags given out by the American Legion, or kicked their heels in time to the music.

It was an enthusiastic crowd—"we've had to give out a couple of dozen aspirin—to much excitement," said a nurse at one of the stadium's four emergency nursing stations. But it was an orderly crowd throughout the long program.

At first scheduled for two hours—two and a half with the pre-show—it went to nearly four hours long, with more crowd remaining at the end than at major football games in the stadium.

"This is great. Just great," said a happy Mike Levesque, one of the originators of the rally and who, one friend said, "is so tired he can hardly stand up by now. He says it will be relaxing to just go back to school now."

Mike was presented with a special book from the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge during the program. Singer Anita Bryant made the presentation.

The singer, obviously moved by the event, told the audience, "I had a speech prepared, but now that I see the reaction of what can happen when our young people stand up for what they believe in God and our country, it makes me at a loss for words."

Ted Mack told them, "These young people are out to show the world it isn't about to fall apart."

From the first electrified twang of The Shufflin' Kind, the OYO groups and The Rainbeaux in the pre-show, the crowd was "with" the entertainers, and the five teen-age speakers who alternated between acts of the regular rally program.

And the acts showed the kids can be modern without being square or obscene.

First, to wild cheers, came the red-jacketed The Letterman ("Up, Up and Away") and then, to more wild cheers, The Village Stompers in modern Dixieland fashion whose "Washington Square" was a top hit.

There were the lavender mini-ed and rose-colored Edward-jacketed The Faculty, which brought cheering like somebody had just made a touchdown, and The Rhodes Brothers—"the Rhodes," the kids called them—whose nationwide recording of "Never My Love" was a best seller, had a whole stadium singing along ("don't be bashful, chillun, 'cause that's not where it's at.")

The acts were hip, hep and high-powered. "It's to show what we like is modern, but modern doesn't have to be obscene," said a rally teen.

By the time the big-act Impact of Brass and Sing Out America had finished their "thing" the teens had surrounded them with requests for autographs and had enough musical memories to fill a recorded scrapbook.

In between, the basic ideals of what the rally stood for on topics of God, patriotism, family, sex, and equality of man, were expressed by Joe Burke, Columbus High; Alan Rosenthal, Miami High; Pat Idlette, Miami High; Juliet James, Westminster Christian; and Mike Levesque.

"The power of Love is found in all people and makes us all brothers," said Joe Burke. "It's up to us to use our power of democracy," said Alan Rosenthal. "We do not seek to overcome; we seek to unify."

"Sex is being exploited," said Julie James. "We can be both modern and modest. Sex is not a plaything," she said. "It is not giving up the body without giving up a commitment of the total self."

And Mike said that each man "must realize for himself that he cannot just sit back and let the world go by him. He must be a part of the world."

And as the last amplified guitar string faded out over the goalpost, the Rev. Ted Place—the offstage emcee and executive director of the Greater Miami Youth for Christ—lauded the teens "who had the courage and concern to stand here and be counted."

"SHOULD DO THIS EVERY 6 MONTHS"

(By Larry Mahoney)

Plain old-fashioned Americanism, tinged with a touch of rock, reigned in the Orange Bowl on a euphoric Sunday afternoon dedicated to decency.

This is the way it was:

Legionnaires, whose own wars ended long ago, pass out 20,000 pocket-sized versions of the Stars and Stripes. The Rhodes Brothers give booming renditions of "The Green Berets" and "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." The Freedoms Foundation of Valley Forge presents an award for "moral courage."

Jackie Gleason in an antique 1911 White touring car. Anita Bryant in a 1931 Model T. Ted Mack quoting Patrick Henry. Congressman Claude Pepper, newest member of the old House Un-American Activities Committee, standing at attention for The Star Spangled Banner, a Legion flag over his heart. Near him is Father Sean O'Sullivan, the young priest from County Cork who inspired the rally.

Mayor Chuck Hall, a flag in his breast pocket, likes the scene. "I think we should do it every six months," his honor said. "This is magnificent; isn't it?"

Watching the crowd are 60 off-duty Miami policemen, double the number who staffed the famous exhibition of The Doors at Dinner Key March 1. After the rally was done, Sgt. Ronnie Reeder goes before national network TV cameras to say: "This is the best Orange Bowl crowd I've ever seen; absolutely no hoodlums around. We weren't needed. The officers have decided to donate their day's pay to the rally." That comes to about $20 from each patrolman, $25 for the sergeants.

A sign: "Stay Clean—Swim! the Coral Park High Swim Team."

A Salvation Army banner flutters in the breeze on the other side of the stadium. Some 200 children, largely subteens, are recruited from the stands to march afield with The Miami Herald's giant American flags.

Moral rearmament is represented by Miami's "Up With People" singers, who sang all the old ones such as "Which Way America?" and "The Nicest People I Know Are People."

Hank Meyer, the publicist, beams as Jackie Gleason puts in a plug for Florida before the national TV cameras. Anita Bryant draws an ovation when she mentions her twins: "And they're heavyweights, by the way . . . six pounds, 10½ ounces, and six pounds, three ounces."

Mrs. Annie King James—"just say I'm past 80"—is wearing a feathered hat and a hand-knit sweater with the U.S. flag on one side and "G.O.P." on the other. She was carried into the stadium aboard her special chair.

"Wouldn't have missed it," she said. "I'm interested in better government and what these kids are doing."

Outside, a few pickets parade with signs bearing messages like this: "Jesus Is Coming. This Is The Last Generation." Ken Russell, 17, of Fort Lauderdale, explains: "We're a group of former hippies and drug addicts who're going all the way for Christ." Ken's hair is still long enough to draw unfriendly looks from a squad of policemen.

Inside, Father O'Sullivan, the cherubic Irish priest, is smiling. "The teenagers," he said, "now realize that solidarity is their strength. They will strike when the iron is hot . . ."

Mr. WAGGONNER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. WAGGONNER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for bringing this meeting in Miami to the attention of the House. I concur with the approach of these youngsters to this matter of demonstrating their faith in God and respect for the law as they have expressed it.

It is unfortunate indeed that the headlines and the TV film always seem to go to the relatively small clique bent on destroying our country. It is a pleasure, for once, to see these young men and women making headlines. More attention should be given to them and I am glad my colleague from Florida has brought this material to our attention.

WELCOME TO NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF BROADCASTERS

(Mr. PICKLE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute, to revise and extend his remarks, and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. PICKLE. Mr. Speaker, the National Association of Broadcasters are in town again. We welcome them, for they are a great group of editors, advertisers, salesmen, programmers, and newscasters. As a former broadcaster myself, I think I know something about their dedication to the public service, and their pursuit of the American dollar, both admirable aims.

We are all agreed, I take it, that freedom of speech should be zealously protected. Every Member of this body is equally dedicated to that most fundamental right given to us in the first amendment.

But freedom of speech does not give the network broadcasters immunity from all kinds of broadcasting, whether that be newscasts, programming, or even advertising. The network broadcaster has a public duty to be fair and accurate, to be objective, and to present a balanced program in the public interest.

Freedom of speech does not mean that broadcasters are above the law or that they cannot be touched by any rule or regulation in the public interest.

There is considerable discussion going on these days about the matter of violence on television and radio, about prescreening of programs, and whether some rules and regulations over networks should be passed by the Congress. I do not subscribe to the prescreening or pre-programming or censorship of programs or news, although at times we do wonder if complete freedom is always responsibly performed.

If the prescreening is done voluntarily by the industry's association, perhaps that is well and good. I am willing to let the facts of the program stand on their own merits.

Yet we should remember that our Government grants these public licenses to individual stations and the Government has the right to be sure that programs and newscasts and advertisements of networks are fair and balanced and objective. The networks are now the sole judge and jury—outside of public reaction—of their own newscast; or of programs, which they generally own as their private property. They do not have to obtain a license, and they are under no direct rule or regulation. While it must be proudly admitted that they perform a marvelous service, still we should caution the networks that they too could be required to operate within rules prescribed by their government.

Let us all join in and wave the flag of free speech, but while we are at it, let us remind the networks that someone in our free government has the right to determine if networks abide by reasonable rules, even as their affiliate stations are held accountable to the fairness doctrine.

TIME IS RUNNING OUT IN MICRONESIA

(Mr. ZABLOCKI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ZABLOCKI. Mr. Speaker, in these times our Nation is so beset by controversy—the Vietnam war, the ABM debate, the Middle East crisis—that crises-in-the-making do not get the attention they deserve.

Today I wish to pinpoint one problem area which tomorrow may flare to emergency proportions. It is the status of the U.S. Trust Territories of the Pacific, more commonly known as Micronesia.

Mr. Speaker, time is running out for the United States in Micronesia.

How many Americans realize that the Congress of Micronesia has passed a resolution and sent it to the United Nations condemning U.S. stewardship in the islands and asking that the international body reconsider its legal and political status?

How many Americans know that the Marianas Islands District Legislature has called on the Soviet Union to aid the people of the Trust Territories?

How many Americans are concerned over a resolution that has been introduced into the Congress of Micronesia asking the Soviet Union to present its form of government to the people of the region, since the form they know—American democracy—has seemed to fail them?

Certainly, all these resolutions were intended to shock the United States into taking definite action on the status of the Pacific islands, as our Nation promised when we took over their administration after World War II.

But just as surely, in the absence of U.S. action, the people of this strategically vital area will grow more disillusioned with the United States and our system.

We have seen the problems which the actions of Anguilla have caused the United Kingdom.

Yet the very same difficulties may be in store for our Nation unless speedy action is taken to fulfill the pledges we have made to the people of Micronesia.

Last Congress I introduced a bill to establish a Commission To Study the Future of the Trust Territories. Today events appear to have outrun that kind of solution.

Very soon our Government must make a concrete proposal for allowing the people of Micronesia to exercise a right sacred to Americans—the right of self-determination.

We have educated these people. We have helped to give them a sense of identity as Micronesians. We have aided them in establishing democratic institutions patterned after our own.

Now the people of that area are demanding to be heard. They wish to be released from the political limbo in which they now find themselves. If given a choice, I have no doubt that the great majority of Micronesians will choose close association with the United States.

The people of the Marianas—who now ask for Soviet aid—again and again have petitioned for American citizenship.

But will they still wish such association on some distant—or not-so-distant—tomorrow? Because of the great importance of these islands to America's strategic position in the Pacific, it is a question of great moment.

Action is required now, Mr. Speaker. I urge the Administration to heal this breach between the Micronesian and American peoples now by taking the necessary steps to find a political accommodation acceptable to both parties.

Mr. Speaker, in order to further acquaint my colleagues with the situation, I am including at this point in the RECORD the text of the resolution passed by the Congress of Micronesia asking the United Nations to reconsider Micronesia's political and legal status. Also included is an article from the Honolulu Advertiser of March 12 on the call for Russian help by the Marianas District Legislature and an article from the March 10 Honolulu Star-Bulletin on other recent developments in the Trust Territories.

The resolution and articles follow:

S. RES. 18

A Senate resolution requesting the United Nations to reconsider the legal and political status of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands

Whereas, on April 2, 1947, the United Nations Security Council by unanimous vote, and on July 18, 1947, the United States Senate did approve a Trusteeship Agreement between the United States and the United Nations regarding the administration of the islands, exclusive of Guam, known collectively as Micronesia; and

Whereas, by the acceptance of this Agreement, the United States bound itself to act in accordance with the letter and spirit of the United Nations Charter, the International Trusteeship System, and the Trusteeship Agreement itself; and

Whereas, the said Charter, System, and Agreement demanded of the United States, and of all other signees, certain obligations, which the United States did freely and of its own accord, take upon itself in regard to the islands of Micronesia, hereinafter referred to as the Trust Territory; and

Whereas, under the Trusteeship Agreement the United States undertook to "foster the development of such political institutions as are suited to the trust territory" and to "promote the development of the inhabitants of the trust territory toward self-government or independence," according to the "freely expressed wishes of the people concerned," and, to these ends, to give the inhabitants a progressively increasing share in the administrative services of the Trust Territory, to develop their participation in government, and to give due recognition to the customs of the inhabitants; and

Whereas, under the said Agreement, the United States undertook to "promote the economic advancement and self-sufficiency of the inhabitants," and, to this end, to regulate the use of natural resources, to encourage the development of fisheries, agriculture, and industry, to improve transportation and communication facilities, and to protect the inhabitants against the loss of their lands and resources; and

Whereas, under the said Agreement, the United States undertook to "promote the social advancement of the inhabitants," and to this end, to protect the rights and fundamental freedoms of the inhabitants without discrimination, to protect the health of the inhabitants, to control the traffic in arms and ammunition, dangerous drugs, and alcoholic beverages, and to protect the inhabitants against other social abuses; and

Whereas, under the said Agreement, the United States undertook to "promote the educational advancement of the inhabitants," and, to this end, to establish a general system of elementary education, to facilitate the vocational and cultural advancement of the population; and to encourage qualified students to pursue higher education, including professional education; and

Whereas, the International Trusteeship System (Article 73 of the United Nations Charter) requires the United States to "promote to the utmost" the well-being of the inhabitants; and

Whereas, the Trusteeship System (Article 76a of the Charter) requires the administration of the Trust Territory in such a way as to further international peace and security; and

Whereas, the Trusteeship System (Article 76c) requires administration in such a way as to "encourage respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion, and to encourage recognition of the inter-dependence of the peoples of the world; and

Whereas, the Trusteeship System (Article 76d) requires the administering authority (the United States, in this case) to "ensure equal treatment in social, economic, and commercial matters for all Members of the United Nations and their nationals;" and

Whereas, the United States has attempted to transplant in the Trust Territory a system of government far too closely resembling its own to be relevant to the actual political conditions of Micronesia; and

Whereas, the United States, in considering political alternatives for the Trust Territory, has consistently refused to discuss seriously the possibilities of independence or alliance with a country other than the United States, apparently taking for granted a continued association with itself, whether the Micronesian peoples desire this or not; and

Whereas, the United States has, for over twenty years, deferred any program of political education for the inhabitants; and

Whereas, the number of Micronesians in policy-making positions in the administration is, after twenty-one years, distressingly small; and

Whereas, regardless of the "practical necessity" of such action, so many Congress of Micronesia bills are vetoed annually as to constitute a major thwarting of the will of the inhabitants, bringing to naught their already limited participation in government; and

Whereas, the Micronesian people have no voice in the selection of members of the judiciary branch, of the High Commissioner or even of district administrators; and

Whereas, the district and territorial administrative systems impose upon the Micronesian peoples a system of government totally alien to their respective cultures; and

Whereas, to date there has been no significant development of either fisheries or industries in the Trust Territory; and

Whereas, the people of Kwajalein were forced to surrender on ninety-nine year lease approximately seven hundred fifty acres of land in return for seven hundred fifty thousand dollars, or about ten dollar per acre per year in an area where land is scarce and therefore precious beyond the comprehension of outsiders; and

Whereas, the islands of Roi-Namur in Kwajalein Atoll were expropriated without compensation; and

Whereas, the people of Eniwetok and Bikini, surrendered their land for a nominal cash fee plus a larger amount held in trust, from which the people in question are permitted to receive only the interest of a few dollars per person per year; and

Whereas, this trust fund was granted with the provision that it could be invested only in United States Government securities, meaning that, with inflation, the United States Government got the use of Eniwetok and Bikini for almost no cost to itself, and at the cost of great hardship and suffering to the former residents of those atolls; and

Whereas, the atolls of Eniwetok and Bikini were used for the detonation of several series of nuclear and thermonuclear test explosions, all with disastrous results to the atolls themselves and to the animal and plant life, both land and marine; and

Whereas, the Micronesian people do not believe that such explosions are consistent with the maintenance of international peace and security; and

Whereas, communication remains, for the most part, slow and inadequate; and

Whereas, firearms and ammunition are freely available in most areas to those who can afford them; and

Whereas, liquor control laws are inadequately enforced; and

Whereas, Micronesians suffer from discriminatory wage scales which permit an indigenous District Administrator to earn less than an American contract high school teacher, strictly on the basis of his national origin; and

Whereas, most Micronesians still live in inadequate housing, and, even in the district centers, without electricity, running water, or adequate sanitation; and

Whereas, on the islands of Kwajalein Atoll, the most rigid form of segregation is practiced, in which Micronesians are not permitted to live on the same islands as Americans, to shop in Global Associates' stores, or even to take home with them anything of any value which Americans might freely give them; and

Whereas, some district hospitals remain inadequately and/or incompetently staffed; and

Whereas, provisions for the health of Micronesians generally are so bad as to render the population highly susceptible to periodic epidemics of hepatitis, measles, and other diseases; and

Whereas, while there is a general system of elementary education within the meaning of the Agreement, it is, in many areas, inadequately or incompetently staffed, and poorly supplied; and

Whereas, the system of secondary education, such as it is, is a very recent innovation in the Trust Territory, and in many areas still lacks even basic curriculum planning; and

Whereas, excepting a handful of Micronesian doctors, the vocational advancement of the populace has not been advanced at all; and

Whereas, far from promoting cultural advancement of Micronesians, the administering authority has managed to downgrade and even virtually destroy the native culture in certain areas, replacing it with low-grade American mass culture; and

Whereas, it is difficult to see how the pursuit of higher education has been greatly encouraged by the veto of a two hundred thousand dollar scholarship bill; and

Whereas, there is no professional or college-level training institution in the Trust Territory after twenty-one years of United States administration; and

Whereas, the equal treatment which all other members of the United Nations and their nationals receive has been the systematic prohibition of entry into the Trust Territory; now, therefore,

Be it resolved by the Senate of the Third Congress of Micronesia, First Regular Session, 1969, that the manifestly unequal treatment which the Micronesian peoples receive even in their own homelands is positively destructive of the respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms which the United States under Article 76c of the United Nations Charter, is required to promote; and

Be it further resolved that it is the sense of the Senate, Congress of Micronesia, that no reasonable man could maintain that the United States has acted to "promote to the utmost" the well-being of the inhabitants, as it is required to do under Article 73 of the United Nations Charter; and

Be it further resolved that the Senate, Congress of Micronesia, hereby respectfully petitions the United Nations Trusteeship Council to commission a thorough investigation into the performance or non-performance of the United States Government in the fulfillment of its obligations under the United Nations Charter and the Trusteeship Agreement; and

Be it further resolved that the Senate, Congress of Micronesia, hereby respectfully petitions the United Nations Security Council, under Article 83 of the Charter, to review the entire basis for continuation of the United States' presence in Micronesia, with a view to revision or abolition of the Trusteeship Agreement, as may be necessary to promote to the utmost the well-being of Micronesians; and

Be it further resolved that, falling action by the Security Council, the United Nations General Assembly, under Articles 10, 12, 13, 14 and 16 of the United Nations Charter, is hereby petitioned to review the performance of the United States, as above; and

Be it further resolved that, upon the passage by the Senate, Congress of Micronesia, copies of this Resolution shall be sent to all interested persons and agencies including but not limited to the Secretary General of the United Nations, all member delegations of the Security Council of the United Nations, all Chairmen of all delegations to the United Nations, the President of the United States, all members of the United States Senate and House Committees on Interior and Insular Affairs, members of the United States Senate and House Foreign Relations Committees, the Secretary of the Interior and the High Commissioner.

Adopted January 27, 1969.

We hereby certify that the foregoing Resolution was adopted by the Senate of the Congress of Micronesia, Third Congress, First Regular Session in January, 1969.

AMATA KABUA,
President of the Senate.
VICTORIO UHERBELAU,
Clerk of the Senate.

MARIANAS PASS SHOCK RESOLUTION

AGANA, GUAM.—The Mariana Islands District Legislature has called on the Soviet Union to aid the people of the U.S. Trust Territory of the Pacific, according to the Micronesian News Agency.

The shock resolution was passed on Saipan in the last week of February in an effort to stimulate more U.S. interest in the Trust Territory.

The resolution said the Marianas people have been "disappointed again and again" when seeking help from the United States for political and economic development.

The legislature appropriated $6,000 to send a three-man delegation to the United Nations Trusteeship Council's meeting in May.

The resolution said the Soviet representative to the U.N. Security Council should be asked to approach his government with a request for aid for the Marianas.

The Mariana Islands are part of a U.N. trust administered by the United States.

UNITED STATES PUT MICRONESIA ON PATH OF DEVELOPMENT

Dr. Norman Meller, professor of political science at the University of Hawaii, takes exception with detractors of the United States Administration of the Pacific Trust Territories.

"We are facing today what we ourselves developed," said Meller, Friday, closing a day and a half seminar on Doing Business in Micronesia, held at the Ilikai Hotel by the Hawaii International Services Agency.

To the more than 50 Hawaiian businessmen Meller said, "The U.S. has favored one pattern consistently in the political development of Micronesia."

Starting on the municipal level, the American administrators have put the Micronesians on a "path of development" that led to the establishment of the Congress of Micronesia in 1965.

To those who felt the Trust Government moved too slowly, Meller said, it was understandable because "the High Commissioner is accountable to the White House, the Department of Interior, chairmen of the Senate and House Finance and Subject Committees, and to the United Nations . . . seven authorities."

Meller feels there are three alternatives in the political future of Micronesia.

The commonwealth status, he said, is improbable because "not one of 11 trusteeships has become an entity of the administering state."

"Many detractors say Micronesia cannot become independent because it is not economically viable," said Meller, countering, "Micronesians have the advantage of land which the U.S. will need someday for bases."

Meller said another anti-independence argument is "Micronesia is an artificial grouping of six different cultures and an historical happenstance."

However, Meller said, "When people believe it exists, it does. They are developing that historical myth."

The third possibility is the maintenance of Micronesia by another state other than the United States, and possibly by the United Nations, Meller said.

Answering a question posed by a member of the audience, Meller said, "There is a possibility of a political or economic relationship of Micronesia and Japan, and it would be a good tie."

Hampering such a relationship, Meller felt, would be the differences in the political and monetary systems.

"And, Japanese has not been taught in the schools for 25 years," he said, adding, "The chances are they will be associated rather than interrelated."

A member of the audience asked of the possibility of a Hawaii-Micronesia tie.

Meller answered, "This is an absurdity, but despite the absurdity expanding Hawaii's state borders seems to be a most agreeable approach."

"But whether the Guamanians, Americans, Samoans or Micronesians would agree is another thing."

Seminar planners had scheduled a military representative to speak.

Moderator Donald Wolbrink, however, read a letter from Adm. John McCain, Jr., Pacific Commander-in-Chief, who said the military could not provide any "assessments" or participate in "speculative or theoretical discussions" regarding the military's presence in the vast Pacific area.

A member of the audience asked how the Micronesians viewed the American military posture and presence to which Rep. Polycarp Basilius, member of the Congress of Micronesia answered.

He said, "The question is very touchy. It doesn't matter whether you like it, it's there."

Speaking of his home district, Basilius said, "In Palau where we are frustrated with the TT (Trust Territory) government, we accept the military because we think they can help us build roads."

"On Saipan, the legislature has asked that the military operation of Okinawa be moved to Saipan."

"In the Marshalls, they complain that the Army and Coast Guard are taking land and they are unhappy. At Ponape, they welcome the military."

George Ngrarsaol, president of his own firm at Koror and a member of the panel, said, "We prefer the military to help develop our economy, but I'm afraid the military might change the identity of the Micronesians because the military has its own way of running business."

Ngrarsaol conceded, "But whether we like it or not, if they come, they come."

Another panelist Joseph Kramer, who is associated with Acme Importers at Majuro, said, "The military has affected the Marshalls the most in Micronesia, and the feeling there is one of fear of the military."

The appropriation of land "without equitable payment" is the major objection of the Marshallese to the American military, Kramer said.

Francisco Uludong, a journalism and political science major at the University of Hawaii, spoke of "Micronesia for the Micronesians."

Uludong dispensed with his assigned topic "Asia's Role in Micronesia" with "We know the Japanese exist and they are good competition for you (Americans)."

"I am just waiting until such time that the competition can be played off!"

Uludong said, "December 7, 1941 was an end and a beginning. It was the end of Micronesia for the outsiders, and the beginning of Micronesia for the Micronesians."

"I don't think the Americans intended the changes we are witnessing there, but the emergence of nationalism which runs counter to the American presence is sometimes subject to the whims of the American government."

"America has succeeded in fostering an outspoken generation. My generation is dissatisfied with the American maintenance of the (Trusteeship) agreement."

Uludong added this final plea to the Hawaiian businessmen, "I hope you are morally responsible to help us gain independence and respect Micronesia for ourselves."

Moderator Donald Wolbrink ended the seminar with a talk on long range planning for Micronesia, stressing the importance of involving the people in planning physical facilities they will be using.

SAFEGUARD—THE ANTI-BALLISTIC-MISSILE SYSTEM

(Mr. TALCOTT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TALCOTT. Mr. Speaker, in discussing the ABM controversy, we should remember that ABM are initials for anti-ballistic missiles. Ballistic missiles are nuclear bombs which can be launched from China or Russia to any place in the United States. A single missile can obliterate New York or San Francisco. The Russians have at least several hundred aimed at the United States. China is trying to develop nuclear missiles. We have missiles, but we are committed not to launch until after an enemy attacks us with nuclear missiles. Our defense policy is "nuclear deterrent," a system of missiles—the Minuteman, now—which can achieve a "second strike" with sufficient power to inflict certain unacceptable damage upon any would-be attacker. An attack could kill and devastate most of our country and possibly knock out our Minutemen. In such event, we "have had it."

I wish there were no international marauders. Maybe that great and wonderful day will come—but it is not here yet. The Communists are committed to overrun us.

The first responsibility of the Federal Government is our common defense. The sole purpose of our anti-ballistic-missile system is to protect our lives, facilities, and our defenses. The more sophisticated and numerous the ballistic missile system of our enemies, the more sophisticated and effective our defenses must be. Any defense is costly; but the alternative of destruction and submission to communism is unthinkable.

Cost is the major factor, right after security. Our best technocracy has been applied.

Antiballistic missiles opponents include some who prefer that we have no defenses—some of these want the Communists to take us over, preferring their society; some believe the Communists would not subdue us even if we declined to resist and had no defenses. Some believe the present ABM system will not function—we can land on the moon, but we cannot intercept a missile or a bunch of them. Some think our effective system would be provocative—cause the Communists to accelerate the missile race. Some think it will cost too much—and we cannot afford to defend ourselves if it costs too much. Some oppose for a combination of these reasons.

I believe President Nixon's Safeguard ABM proposal is the best course now. It provides some defense for our basic second strike missile system; at minimal cost; with a chance to continue research and development; room for bargaining for arms controls; flexibility to cope with developing international threats; but very little protection for our people. A simple defense against nuclear missiles aimed at us cannot be as provocative as building offensive weapons. We can only pray that we will not be attacked before we are better defended.

Few will deny that our earlier perfection of the atomic bomb permitted us to survive World War II. Until world order and justice is achieved by the rule of law, we have a duty to provide for the common defense by the most advanced means known. As present, the Safeguard ABM is an integral part of our national defense.

THE 51ST ANNIVERSARY OF INDEPENDENCE OF BYELORUSSIA

(Mr. FEIGHAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FEIGHAN. Mr. Speaker, March 25 marks the 51st anniversary of the Proclamation of Independence of the Byelorussian Democratic Republic. It is very fitting that the Congress of the United States devote time to commend the Byelorussian people and to remind the world that Byelorussia and its people will continue to fight for the reestablishment of complete independence and self-government.

The Byelorussians, who had lived under the czars for several centuries, had their own sovereign and independent state before the birth of the Russian Empire. During the period of foreign rule over their country they carefully guarded many of their national traditions, and had been looking forward to the opportunity to assert their freedom. They therefore seized upon the welcome chance provided by the Russian Revolution of 1917, and proclaimed their independence on March 25, 1918. Then they formed their own democratic government in their capital city Minsk and began to rebuild their war-torn country. A National Constitution was put in force guaranteeing freedom of speech and assembly, liberty of conscience, inviolability of person and home, and equality of all citizens under law. The new Government made significant advances in education, culture, and social welfare. It obtained recognition from a number of countries.

Unfortunately the Byelorussians were not to enjoy their richly deserved freedom for very long. In December 1918 the Red army overran Byelorussia and annexed it to the Soviet Union. Today, let us therefore express our fervent hope that the day may not be too far in the future when the March 25 anniversary of Byelorussian independence may again be celebrated in a Byelorussian nation enjoying the blessings of freedom and liberty.

PROPOSAL TO EXCLUDE POW'S FROM TAXATION

(Mr. BOB WILSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOB WILSON. Mr. Speaker, at the moment there are 333 known American prisoners of war in Southeast Asia and almost a thousand other Americans listed as missing in action. Although these figures seem small compared with the staggering casualties of the war, we must not overlook the hardships these Americans are forced to endure in Communist captivity. Also, we must not forget the mental anguish suffered by their wives and families as they anxiously await the safe return of loved ones.

Last fall, I had the opportunity to meet with a group of POW wives who reside in my district of San Diego, Calif. Although our Government is doing everything possible within the bounds of existing laws to assist these families, certain inadequacies in these laws do exist and should be corrected. I am today introducing a package of three bills aimed at correcting these inadequacies.

In 1967, Congress approved a measure allowing prisoners of war and servicemen in a missing status to participate in the uniformed services savings deposit program which provides 10 percent interest on savings up to $10,000. What Congress failed to recognize, in approving this bill, however, is that the American prisoner in Southeast Asia has no control whatsoever over his return from overseas. Thus, an American who is held captive for several years would accumulate deposits considerably more than $10,000—even after the necessary allotments for his dependents were deducted from his pay. One of the bills I am introducing would remove the $10,000 limit on deposits for any member of the uniformed services who is a prisoner of war, missing in action or in a detained status during the Vietnam conflict.

Another inequitable situation exists with respect to prisoners of war. A good number of these men are enlisted servicemen with relatively low pay, and it is their dependents who suffer the most financially during their absence. Part of the economic hardship results from the fact that there is no man around the house to perform routine maintenance chores. The armed services have recognized this problem to some extent by providing a $30-a-month family separation allowance to servicemen, E-4 and above, whenever the servicemen's duties require him to be away from the home for more than 30 days—provided that his family does not live in military housing.

A second bill I am introducing would remove these restrictions. In other words, all prisoners of war and servicemen in a missing status—regardless of whether their families live in military housing or whether they are E-4 or above—would be entitled to the family separation allowance.

Much has been said about current legislation to forgive Federal income taxes for the Pueblo crew while it was held captive by the North Koreans. Our distinguished chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee has introduced a bill to carry out this proposal. Why should we not grant the same forgiveness of Federal taxes in the full incomes of American prisoners of war in Southeast Asia? This would be little recompense, indeed, for the tremendous sacrifices they are making for their country.

At present enlisted men are given a full tax deduction for basic pay received in the combat area. The exemption for officers is limited to $500 per month. While this situation may be equitable for those assigned a 1-year tour of duty, I feel this is not so for those held captive against their will for extended periods of time. Since many of the known American prisoners of war are pilots, whose monthly incomes exceed $500, I feel that such tax relief is more than justified in their cases. Therefore, the third bill that I am introducing would exclude from taxes the full pay of all members of the Armed Forces who are POW's missing in action or in a detained status.

I feel very strongly about the need for these three bills and hope that rapid and favorable action will be scheduled in the near future.

YEAR 1969 MARKS 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF GOODWILL INDUSTRIES OF CHICAGO AND COOK COUNTY, ILL.

(Mr. ANNUNZIO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute, to revise and extend his remarks and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, as the Congressman who represents the Seventh Illinois Congressional District, where the headquarters of Goodwill Industries of Chicago and Cook County, Ill., are located, it gives me great pleasure to call to the attention of my colleagues in the House of Representatives and to the American people the observance of this outstanding organization's golden anniversary which is taking place during 1969.

Goodwill Industries has served for 50 years—without regard to race, creed, or national origin—thousands of physically handicapped, mentally and emotionally disturbed, and socially and culturally deprived people. A national movement begun in Boston in 1902 by Dr. Edgar J. Helms, a Methodist minister, Goodwill Industries laid down its roots in Chicago in 1919 simply, humbly and without fanfare. It was the development of the Methodist Mutual Aid Union, an organization representing the combined efforts of Chicago Methodism, existing for the purpose of gathering cast-off material and selling it to poor people at a nominal cost.

Chicago Goodwill Industries opened shop with just five workers in the basement of an old church on the city's West Side, aptly described half a century ago as a building which in its old age served its intended purpose so well it is now doing its dying best to serve its present task. The aim of this nonprofit agency was to undertake the challenge of giving to handicapped people a chance to earn a livelihood and enjoy the social, moral, and spiritual blessings of society.

The number of times it moved to keep pace with its increasing and expanding services to the vocationally handicapped has dimmed with the passage of time. Today its five-story modern rehabilitation facility stands tall on the skyline of the same west side—a shining beacon of hope to nearly 2,000 disadvantaged people who come to its doors yearly seeking not charity but a chance.

Vocational rehabilitation was a relatively unknown concept when Chicago Goodwill Industries first opened its doors. But today it is a unique, self-help process encompassing in-depth interviewing, scientific evaluations, group and individual counseling, work adjustment programs, formal on-the-job training, and selective job placement.

The value to the Chicago community of these vocational rehabilitation services resulted in Chicago Goodwill Industries helping to place in the local labor market in the past 5 years, 1,330 men and women who otherwise might have been burdens on the State or family.

The vocationally handicapped whom Chicago Goodwill Industries serves earn while they learn. They want the dignity a paycheck provides rather than the stigma of accepting welfare money because they could not find employment in the competitive labor market or they had to depend on family or friends for support. In 1968, the agency's workers and trainees received wages totaling more than $1,450,000. Their productive efforts resulted in their paying approximately $318,000 in Federal income and social security taxes, notwithstanding thousands of dollars they paid in local and State taxes.

Chicago Goodwill Industries' enviable record in rehabilitation was attained in the face of cruelly rising costs. But the agency has accepted today the challenges of tomorrow to give the less fortunate fuller, more rewarding lives. At considerable expense it has developed a new and unique scientific testing program aimed at making employable increasing numbers of disadvantaged people who earnestly desire a bright future of steady jobs with steady wages.

Through this scientific program, known as MOVE an individual's vocational aptitudes and interests are measured by means of a series of job sample tests, job tryouts, and actual work experience within the agency. Thus is created a multidimensional job profile from which is developed the vocational program planning that renders a person employable in private industry.

Chicago Goodwill Industries' first 50 years have been recorded on the pages of time with the notation "Well done." Now it looks confidently to the future when it can implement even more the charge given by Dr. Helms, founder of the National movement, back in 1902 that:

Let us be dissatisfied with our work until every handicapped and unfortunate person in our community has an opportunity to develop his fullest usefulness and enjoy a maximum of abundant living.

I would like to take this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation, and indeed, the gratitude of all Cook County residents for the great record of accomplishment compiled by Goodwill Industries, and to commend the officers of this fine organization for their contribution to its success. They are: M. Glen Miller, president; Elmer W. Lenz, vice president; R. C. Wieboldt, Jr., vice president; Carl M. Blumenschein, vice president; Richard P. Miller, vice president; S. N. Tideman, Jr., secretary; Lynn G. Sahlin, treasurer and assistant secretary; George P. Thermos, assistant treasurer; Edward W. Lyman, Jr., assistant treasurer; Executive Director William Rogolio; Public Relations Director Paul Hoffman; Directors Laurance H. Armour, Jr., Kenneth E. Campbell, Philip V. Carter, Paul M. Corbett, John M. Coulter, John David, George H. Dovenmuehle, Robert G. Gibson, Benjamin J. Gingiss, Gerald A. Gitle, Robert M. Hoffer, Edward C. Holmblad, M.D., William Ingram, Henry S. Kahn, N. Hall Layman, Samuel N. Lebold, Fred G. Litsinger, Mrs. B. J. Maiworm, R. P. Merridew, Lester R. Minion, D.D., Richard S. Oldberg, William G. Olson, Luther I. Replogle, Alfred Slicer, Lee D. Smith, Leonard Spacek, Stanley W. Tate, Percy J. Trevethan, L.H.D., Oliver W. Tuthill, Maynard P. Venema, Vern E. Whaley; and Honorary Directors John L. Dole, Nathaniel Leverone, Bert R. Prall, Thomas M. Pryor, Bishop, Henry F. Tenney.

I know that in the years ahead, Goodwill Industries of Chicago and Cook County will remain in the forefront of leadership for the physically and mentally handicapped. To the handicapped Goodwill Industries is not a charity—it is a chance. Mr. Speaker, to this great organization I extend my congratulations on its golden anniversary and my best wishes for continuing success in its worthy endeavors.

MILITARY BASES IN SPAIN

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MATSUNAGA). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York (Mr. LOWENSTEIN), is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to discuss the questions presented by the expiration tomorrow of the agreement providing for American air and naval bases in Spain. Questions raised by these bases seem especially significant at a time when so many decisions must be made about America's role in the world and about the relationship of military expenditures to the national tax burden and priorities.

Could this money be better spent to meet domestic needs?

At what cost would these bases exceed any possible military value?

Could the continued existence of these bases "commit" the United States to protecting a government that lacks popular support in its own country and which must resort to extreme repression to remain in power?

Have the negotiations for these bases been conducted without civilian participation or have they led to the sort of alliance which should constitutionally require the advice and consent of the Senate?

I hope we shall open what will become a general discussion of these and other pressing questions so the American people can consider the impact of this decision—a decision that will have considerable effect on policies of consequence at home and abroad.

I yield at this time to the distinguished gentleman from New York (Mr. PODELL) for remarks on this question.

Mr. PODELL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

It is patently obvious that Europe's agile and durable Fascist, Francisco Franco, dear friend and comrade of Adolf Hitler, has been attempting to blackmail America over renewal of the 15-year-old bases agreement. Four hundred million dollars worth of facilities are at stake, as Spain seeks to extort from our country a prohibitive price, including a broad promise of defense for Spain and major quantities of military hardware. Although the price seems to have been lowered recently, it is sad to see us come to this.

Must the United States lie down and grovel at the boots of the dictator who "pacified" the Basques. Must our country jump through a hoop held by the man who provided Adolf Hitler with the "Blue Division," which gave its all for the Nazis in combat. Must America beg for favorable treatment from he who sheltered innumerable Nazi murderers fleeing the hangman's noose—protector of Otto Skorzeny and Juan Peron. It leaves a bitter taste in any honest man's mouth to see us cater to whims of this dictator, who managed to evade the justice meted out after World War II to others of his ilk.

This is the man who employed the Condor Legion of Nazi flyers to pulverize cities full of his own people. The man who unleashed his Foreign Legion and Moorish soldiery on his brethren. They remember the Moors at Oviedo. It was he who allowed a Falangist service for Hitler to take place in Madrid on May 10, 1968, where participants sang the Horst Wessel Lied as they came onto the street.

Here is the man who ordered executions by the thousands, legitimized sentences by military tribunals and brought terror to every corner of Spain. This is the freedom-loving gentleman who only recently suspended freedom of speech, assembly and association as well as all guarantees against unwarranted search and detention.

Now he masquerades as El Caudillo, the man who brought peace to suffering Spain. He brought peace, all right—peace of graveyards and prison cells—peace that comes after echoes of a firing squad have ended. Peace that came when all his oponents were dead, in prison or driven into exile.

How sad it is to see our country convincing itself that to remain free or fulfill its obligations we must deal with this dictator and his minions. By no stretch of any wildest imagination can we say that Franco and his bully boys are lovers or defenders of any freedom, except that to do ill unto those who oppose them.

Mr. Speaker, I question the real worth of these Spanish bases. Technological advances have eliminated much of the need for them. We are losing valuable foreign exchange by our major presence there. This ignoble chapter in our American story is long overdue for closing. Let us tell Franco what he can do with his bases, ideology and promises. Let us then forthwith pack up and depart from his sunny national prison. The facts speak for themselves.

I am totally out of patience with America's policy of lying down with dictators of the world. If it is not a Perez Jimenez, Peron or Stroessner, then it is a Franco. As our technology advances, surely we are not going to remain dependent upon such people and the regimes they have created.

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman for his most helpful contribution.

Mr. Speaker, I want to talk now about the cost of these bases relative to the cost of other items on the national agenda. Americans generally will be concerned to know at a time of enormous tax burdens and delayed domestic programs whether the money needed to continue these particular installations would be wisely spent.

We have contributed over the years more than $2 billion in economic and military aid to the upkeep of the Spanish Government in return for the bases.

That $2 billion, could have produced 35,500 classrooms in the United States, or new facilities for 1,065,000 students. $2 billion could have supported Head-start programs for 1 year for 1,904,000 children.

The Spanish Government is reported now to be asking $300 million for the renewal of the bases. This same money would buy enough food stamps to feed 1,875,000 people, which is a substantial part of the population of the United States that still suffers from chronic malnutrition.

And it pays to remember in this connection that as far back as 1959, Congressman PASSMAN of Louisiana, remarked:

Every year that we have earmarked a certain amount of money for Spain, the Administration has spent much more money out of support funds for Spain than the amount earmarked.

It is now suggested that the U.S. Government is prepared to pay what is usually described as "only" $140 million; $140 million would provide food stamps for only 875,000 people.

These sums may not seem worth quibbling about in a total annual defense budget of $80 billion, but one must start somewhere. Mr. Speaker, why not here? Why not now? $140 million or $300 million beyond $2 billion already—is this expenditure really necessary?

Furthermore, every penny spent on these bases aggravates the balance-of-payments problem. We ask American businessmen to curtail overseas investment, we put unpleasant restraints on the American people, to save much less than is spent in this one peculiar enterprise.

Congressman REUSS, of Wisconsin, wrote a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury on March 22, about this aspect of the economics of this whole affair:

I write to you in my capacity as Chairman of the Subcommittee on International Exchange and Payments of the Joint Economic Committee, and your capacity as guardian of the United States balance of payments, to express my concern about the impact on our payments position of another renewal of the 1953 bases agreement between Spain and the United States.

After a period in which renewal appeared in doubt, negotiations between Spanish and U.S. representatives now seem to be going forward, and may continue beyond the March 26 deadline originally set for agreement. As is well known, the recurrent United States balance of payments crisis is almost entirely caused by our overseas military operations. Yet neither the Pentagon nor the Department of State has seemed overly concerned by the payments damage wrought by these operations.

The Spanish bases question offers an opportunity to the Department of the Treasury to bring to bear a business-like cost-benefit analysis on military operations affecting our balance of payments. Of the three major air bases involved, one is already on a "caretaker" basis. All three have greatly diminished in strategic value as U.S. military capabilities have advanced. The submarine base at Rota appears to be useful but not absolutely vital to U.S. security. Moreover, given political uncertainties in Spain, the availability of these bases at some future time seems open to doubt. Certainly, the present number of American military personnel and dependents in Spain—some 25,000—seems excessive to need.

In sum, the time is obviously ripe to let balance of payments considerations weigh heavily in determining the future level of the U.S. military presence in Spain.

Since the original bases agreement of 1953, the Spanish reserve position has greatly improved, and the U.S. reserve position has greatly worsened. Between 1953 and 1968, U.S. reserve position has greatly worsened. Between 1953 and 1968, U.S. reserves (gold and convertible currencies) decreased from $22.09 billion to $14.42 billion. In the same period, Spain's reserves increased from $150 million to $1.09 billion.

Furthermore, between 1960 and 1965, Spain was a net purchaser of U.S. gold in the amount of some $758 million, and at a time of great embarrassment to the United States. The gold component of Spanish reserves at the end of 1968 was some 72 percent of reserves, or $785 million.

Just as the U.S. gold loss in recent years may be largely traced to our military involvement abroad, so Spain's improved reserve position may be attributed in large measure to the U.S. military presence in Spain. The direct foreign exchange cost to the United States, and the gain to Spain has averaged close to $50 million a year in recent years, in terms of outlays by the U.S. military and their dependents, and salaries for Spanish employees. As maintenance costs rise, this figure will inevitably increase.

I respectfully urge you to present these considerations at the highest level of the U.S. negotiating team. It is high time we stopped endangering the world position of the dollar and restricting American trade and investment abroad by letting foreign military operations that yield marginal military benefits at great cost to our balance of payments go unchallenged. I wish you every success.

In short, the question goes far beyond how much it will cost to renew and operate the bases. We are entitled to ask—we are not entitled not to ask—how much do these bases add, if anything, to American security, and what would it cost to do the job in other ways? The B-47's for which the airbases were originally built are no longer even part of U.S. defense forces. Our submarines can be based in the United States and elsewhere—and almost as conveniently—as at Rota.

President Truman, years ago, was unconvinced of the military necessity for bases in Spain. Then in 1963, we were assured that that extension was the last that would be needed, that in fact the airbases would be phased out because weaponry advances would make them unnecessary. There are, it seems, constant assurances from the military that bases will later on be unnecessary. But later on seems always to be yet later on. One scours the mind for an occasion when the military have acknowledged that "later on" has finally arrived.

So once again—much "later on" since the last renewal—we hear that "later on" is still to come. When, Mr. Speaker, when is it later on?

Senator SYMINGTON, one of the great authorities on military affairs in the Congress and former Secretary of the Air Force, thinks when is, in fact, now; that it is in fact at last "later on." He said in the Senate yesterday:

This country does not have the financial resources necessary to continue leasing military installations which were constructed originally under defense policies that now appear obsolescent to the point of being obsolete.

And Business Week magazine, in its issue of September 1968, said:

With changes in weaponry, equipment and mobility: U.S.-based and submarine-based missiles have, for example, lessened the need for air bases abroad. Satellites are diminishing requirements for foreign communications and electronic spy stations. The giant C-5A transport plane will enable troops and their equipment to reach trouble spots quickly from U.S. bases.

Thus, one wonders if anyone can make a case that would justify the existence of the Spanish bases in terms of defense needs, of responsible fiscal programming, of national priorities or of wise global policy.

With regard to this last point, Mr. Speaker, this House should be reminded of President Nixon's comment during the campaign:

Other nations must recognize that the role of the United States as world policeman is likely to be limited in the future.

The President has since expanded on this idea. On March 4, he was asked at a press conference:

Mr. President, there has been some concern in Congress about reports that a general in the Pentagon took the initiative in arranging for the U.S. to recognize a threat to Spain from North Africa. In your opinion, is this concern merited, and what is the policy of your administration about carving out new commitments to other countries by the United States?

The President's reply was:

Well, I think as far as commitments are concerned, the U.S. has a full plate. I first do not believe that we should make new commitments around the world unless our national interests are very vitally involved. Secondly, I do not believe we should become involved in the quarrels of nations in other parts of the world unless we are asked to become involved and unless also we are vitally involved. I referred earlier to even the quarrels and divisions in Western Europe. I stayed out of most of those up to this point, and I intend to in the future.

Mr. RYAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from New York (Mr. RYAN).

Mr. RYAN. Mr. Speaker, I should like to commend the distinguished gentleman, my colleague from New York (Mr. LOWENSTEIN) for taking this time on the eve of the day when the leases for the four military bases in Spain expire in order to bring before the House the very important question of whether or not the United States should continue to maintain the bases in Spain.

Negotiations for the extension of the leases are now in progress. This is being done at a time when the extent and character of U.S. commitments abroad is being called into serious question, and moreover, when the imbalance in our present budgetary priorities is clear. It is important that we understand these priorities and that we thoroughly examine the propriety of extending the leases with an eye toward determining both the military need for these bases and the political implications of channeling additional financial support to the Franco regime, a regime which has shown repeatedly over the years its unwillingness to grant basic civil liberties to its citizens.

Not only that, but there is another important question involved. Articles which have appeared recently, one in the New York Times of February 26 and one in the Washington Post of February 25, reported that the military had attempted to pressure the State Department into signing an agreement which contains a U.S. pledge to defend Spain as if it were a NATO country and also to defend Spain against attack from North Africa in exchange for Spain's extension of the leases.

Mr. Speaker, this is a most serious matter because it again indicates that the State Department is not exercising primary responsibility but that the Pentagon is playing a key role in developing foreign policy.

Insofar as the military need for these bases is concerned, it appears that they are now obsolete. Senator SYMINGTON yesterday on the floor of the other body made that point very clear. The Air Force admits that of the three airbases, only one is being used at this time, and that only for the maintenance of fighter interceptors. The bases were built to service and maintain the B-47, which has long since been retired, and they are not adequate to handle our advanced aircraft of today. By the same token, the naval base is not really a necessary item for the servicing and maintenance of our Polaris submarines.

It seems to me clear from a political and military point of view that the leases for the bases should not be extended.

The benefit which Franco has gained from these bases should not be underestimated. The Spanish economy was extremely shaky in 1950, 3 years before the ratification of the bases and related agreements. Many economic observers at the time believed that Spain was on the verge of bankruptcy and that, in the absence of outside aid, the Franco regime would be unable to withstand the pressures from within Spain to liberalize and modify the totalitarian institutions which Franco had instituted after the end of the Spanish Civil War of 1936-1939. Britain and France declined to provide Franco with economic or military assistance. However, the United States viewed Spain as a potentially valuable ally in the construction of the defense system which was being built to ring the Soviet Union. Negotiations on the acquisition of the four bases were begun in 1951 and were concluded on September 26, 1953. The agreements which were signed at that time consisted of three parts:

First. A defense agreement authorized the development, maintenance, and joint utilization on Spanish territory of "such areas and facilities as may be agreed upon," the sovereignty therein to remain Spanish. The agreement was to continue in force "for a period of 10 years, automatically extended for two successive periods of 5 years each" unless terminated by notice given in September 1963 or September 1968 and effective 18 months later.

Second. A military defense assistance agreement obligated the United States to provide military equipment and supplies, and funds for military expenditures by Spain. The agreement has no terminal date but is subject to cancellation on notice.

Third. An economic assistance agreement, to remain in effect until June 30, 1956, but subject to cancellation on notice. This agreement was renewed periodically but expired in 1963. Deliveries of aid materials continued until 1964.

The agreements comprised the original "Pact of Madrid Mutual Defense Treaty".

The base agreement was renewed in 1963 for 5 additional years and formally expired on September 26, 1968. After that, the two governments had a 6-month period in which to negotiate a new agreement. If the two governments could not agree, the United States would be obliged to withdraw the 25,000 American servicemen and dependents now stationed in Spain within 1 year to close down the bases. The 6-month period expires tomorrow.

Military assistance to Spain in exchange for the right to operate these bases has amounted to about $1.7 billion since 1953. In addition, the bases now bring Spain about $40 million a year in local American spending.

Last summer Spain specified an additional $1 billion in military aid as the price of renewing the leases on these four American bases. That sum was subsequently scaled down to $700 million. Even the lesser sum, however, represents a sevenfold increase in the amount of aid provided by the 1963 renegotiation, $100 million.

According to press reports, there were other demands as well, including a commitment to come to the aid of the Franco regime in the event of a Soviet-inspired attack against Spain from North Africa, a commitment from the United States to assist Spain in her efforts to regain Gibraltar from the British, and the obligation to defend Spain under the NATO agreement as "an integral part of Western Europe." All of these demands would have a far-reaching impact on future American commitments if the United States agreed to them.

The manner in which the U.S. Government has carried out negotiations for these bases during the past year also raises some fundamental questions about the way in which far-reaching commitments can be made. According to published reports in both the Washington Post and the New York Times, the negotiations were first carried on by a military man, Maj. Gen. David A. Burchinal, Deputy Commander of the U.S. forces in Europe. General Burchinal, acting without consultation with the Department of State, accepted at least two of the Franco government's demands—assistance in the event of attack from North Africa, and Spain to be defended in the same manner as a member NATO country.

The status of General Burchinal's "commitments" on behalf of the United States is in doubt at this point. Although, the Department of Defense has denied that the general has made any "irretrievable" commitments, it has not yet said whether or not the signed minutes represent "agreed views" which constitute the basis for further talks between Madrid and Washington, as General Burchinal insisted they did.

The dangers posed by this kind of "negotiation" are extremely serious. It is disturbing to contemplate what kind of "commitments" might result if the military is allowed to carry on negotiations on issues which are essentially diplomatic and political in nature. Congress must insist that any such commitment—particularly which would oblige us to come to the defense of a totalitarian and repressive regime—not be made by the Pentagon and that Congress be consulted before any such far-reaching agreement is ratified by the administration.

The facilities which the United States has constructed under past agreements with Spain include a 12-mile long naval and air station at Rota on the Bay of Cadiz; three airbases—near Zaragoza in the northeast, at Torrejon near Madrid in the center of the country, and at Moron near Seville in the south. In addition, the agreement provides for two additional naval facilities at El Ferrol and Cartagena—which are used to store supplies—and two minor airbases at San Pablo and Reus. There are also six radar sites on the mainland and one on the island of Mallorca, and a pipeline, 485 miles long, from Rota to Zaragoza, which is used to pump oil between the two bases at those locations.

The military value of these bases is, if not completely negligible, at the least dubious. According to the Washington Post of March 17, the strongest language one can extract from the Pentagon with respect to the value of these bases is that they are "desirable." The utility of the airbases is particularly questionable, especially in light of the development of intercontinental missiles and missile-carrying submarines which can be deployed from almost anywhere in the world. The Polaris submarine facility at Rota provides a convenient location to service the submarines at a marginally lower cost than if they were serviced at the eastern coast of the United States. But the savings afforded by this base is minimal and hardly essential to our overall Mediterranean force.

Beyond strategic considerations is the more fundamental question of whether or not the United States should be providing any aid whatsoever to Franco Spain. As I have indicated earlier, military and economic aid from the United States has helped to maintain Franco ever since the early 1950's. The effect of the infusion of additional U.S. military aid into Spain on the development of democratic Spanish institutions must be considered. The effect will be to place the weight of the United States behind the Franco regime and against those who seek to substitute democratic rule for the one-man authoritarianism which has characterized Franco's rule from the beginning. No amount of explanatory denials or private briefings from the White House will negate the effect of supplying more military hardware to Franco.

In the past week there have been reports that the Spanish Government is now lifting press censorship and relaxing restrictions on civil liberties. The coincidence of the new "liberalization" with the approaching deadline in the negotiations period for the bases should not be lost by the administration. In 1962 Franco used a similar ploy to try to pave the way for future Spanish association with the European Common Market. The occasion for that brief liberalization of the political climate coincided with Great Britain's efforts to enter the Common Market. Great Britain was at the time Spain's best customer abroad and, if Britain had joined the Common Market, economic consideration seemed to dictate some kind of Spanish connection with the European economic entity—perhaps as an associate member. In order to win admittance to the Common Market, it was necessary to create a "new image" of Spain in the eyes of the Western European social democrats, from whom Franco had deliberately sealed off Spain for two decades.

Just at the moment when Spain seemed on the road to social and political democratization, General de Gaulle vetoed Britain's application for the Common Market. With the economic pressures to join the Market gone, Franco almost immediately returned to the policies of press censorship and tight regulation of civil liberties which he had only a few months before relaxed.

We should not be too surprised if the newest version of Franco's "liberalization" also turns out to be founded on public relations concerns. We should additionally keep in mind the fact that the additional military aid which Franco would receive from any agreement would almost surely be used to squash incipient opposition to him in Spain. After nearly two decades of propping up the Franco regime, it is time to withdraw support from Franco in the interests of furthering the democratic evolution of Spain. To pour more money into Spain would only result in a strengthening of the totalitarian system of rule that has prevailed in that country since the end of the Spanish Civil War.

One more issue needs to be touched upon. That is the question of the effect of the ratification of a new agreement on these bases on the way in which the United States regards events in Spain. So long as we continue to maintain military bases in Spain, the fact of those bases will always be a factor in determining our response to who rules in Spain. The military will want to know what anti-Franco elements will do with the bases and whether or not they will remain amenable to future military operation in Spain. The presence of the bases means that military considerations will come ahead of political considerations. And the result will be the formulation of foreign policy based on preestablished military commitments, rather than military strategy following political aims, as should be the case.

As the Washington Post of March 17 stated:

This agreement appears to have very little to recommend it. It does not appear to be favorable to American interests on any grounds, military, political or economic, and in fact would tend to bring this country into disrepute with exactly those elements, in Spain and out of it, who should be our allies.

At a time when funds are desperately needed for the solution of urgent housing, education, and employment needs in our country, the money which the Pentagon contemplates providing to Franco Spain—whether it be $700 million or $100 million—could be far better spent on the solution of our own domestic needs. I urge the Congress to make clear to the administration that the leases should not be extended and to insist that the money be redirected instead towards the solution of the problems of our own society.

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. I thank my distinguished colleague for the insights he has added here.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I am grateful to my colleague from New York, Mr. LOWENSTEIN, for his leadership in organizing today's discussion of our relationship with Spain. As you have already heard, his timing is particularly apt. Tomorrow, March 26, will, if we are wise, mark the beginning of the end of our 15-year-old defense agreement with Spain. I fear that we shall not be that fortunate, but I do want to add my voice to those who are urging just such a parting of the ways as very much in the best interests of the United States.

You have heard, Mr. Speaker, or will hear from others here this afternoon, the variety of good reasons for permitting our 1953 defense agreement with Spain to lapse. I should like to review these arguments, and the background to this accord, only briefly and then focus on the issue which strikes me as central to the entire question—the extent to which we permit our national policies, foreign and domestic, to be dictated by military considerations.

My colleagues will recall that the United States signed a trio of agreements with Spain on September 26, 1953, after 2 years of negotiations which spanned both Democratic and Republican administrations. Our action was motivated largely by the concerns which grew out of the Korean war. We were trying to build a worldwide base network as part of our "containment" effort, and Spain was seen as a choice location. For the Spanish Government of Generalissimo Franco, the pacts offered a heaven-sent opportunity to break out of the diplomatic isolation which their policies during World War II had led the wartime allies to impose on them.

So the deed was done. The three agreements signed on that September day in Madrid covered economic aid, defense, and mutual defense assistance. They provided the framework for the United States to build and operate bases in Spain, and for the Spaniards to start profiting from the growing American programs of aid for the less-developed countries of the world. Three air bases, a naval base, and supporting facilities were hurriedly built during the 1950's at a total cost of over $395 million. The Spanish role as a so-called bulwark against communism has been bolstered with over $625 million in American military aid through fiscal 1968. And the Spanish economy has been stimulated by the infusion of over $1.5 billion in economic aid from the United States.

The agreements were entered into, in essence, for military purposes. They comprised a package which we felt in 1953 was necessary to our national security. We needed the bases; we needed a strong Spain as a potential partner in resisting Soviet expansion. The economic price, and the political price of becoming a virtual ally of a dictatorship ostracized for a decade and a half by most of the world, became a secondary consideration. One sop to democracy was inserted in the preamble of the economic aid agreement, in the form of a sentence by which the two signatories recognized "that individual liberty, free institutions, and genuine independence in all countries, as well as defense against aggression, rest largely on the establishment of a sound economy." But none of this language crept into the operative paragraphs of any of the agreements, so the Spanish Government was spared any potentially embarrassing obligation to move toward a more open society as part of the price for its friendly relationship with the United States.

Initially, the chief American strategic interest lay in our three airbases in Spain. From Zaragoza in northeastern Spain, from Torrejon on the outskirts of Madrid, and from Moron in the south, the B-47 bombers of the Strategic Air Command maintained regular patrols along the periphery of the Soviet Union as part of the nuclear force which constituted our deterrent to war. Over the years, B-52's replaced B-47's, and ballistic missiles have since pretty much put even the B-52's out of the strategic deterrent business. The focus of our strategic interest shifted then to the naval base which we had built at Rota, on Spain's Atlantic coast. For Rota became, and still is, one of just three overseas bases equipped for servicing and repairing our nuclear submarines. The airbases, meanwhile, changed character. Zaragoza was put into "caretaker" status; Torrejon became home base for tactical fighter units rotating from areas with poorer weather and for transport aircraft; and Moron came to house air-sea rescue units.

Thus, one factor to be weighed in the balance as we consider the future of our defense agreement with Spain is the current value of the installations it permits us to maintain there. In pure dollar value, the replacement cost of the bases in Spain has been estimated at slightly over $1 billion. But what about their military value? For it was our sense of urgent military need that led us to pay the initial price for their construction, and presumably this same consideration should also weigh in the decision on their retention.

Where opinion in 1953 was heavily in favor of the bases, however, opinion in 1969 is decidedly mixed. Let me give a few examples from the past 6 months. Warren Unna, writing in the Washington Post of September 17, 1968, said:

U.S. officials reportedly consider that the air bases now have been phased out by long-range missiles, but that the Rota naval base still is very important.

The Washington Daily News on the same day reported:

The new agreement will reduce the number of air bases from three to two. The U.S. wants to close its base at Zaragoza, in north-east Spain, because tactical advances have ruled out the need for it.

On September 26, the Spanish Government suggested closing of the base at Torrejon. In their statement, the Spaniards noted:

The base is situated near Madrid, Spain's capital of more than three million inhabitants and now the center of an important industrial area . . . The Spanish Government would welcome its removal.

The Washington Post added on September 27:

While U.S. authorities concede that the loss of the Rota base in particular would pose a problem for the Pentagon, it would be a loss the military could live with.

The most detailed single exposition of current views, based on the opinions of unnamed "analysts," appear under Benjamin Welles' byline in the New York Times of September 28, 1968. Mr. Welles reported as follows:

The bases are "important, but not vital" . . . The base at Rota, one of three overseas Polaris bases, was useful but could be dispensed with.

Of the three air bases, Zaragoza is already on a "caretaker" basis. Torrejon, built near Madrid at Spanish insistence, can be closed, as the Spanish are now suggesting, to avoid making Madrid a nuclear "target."

The third big base, at Moron de la Frontera, near Seville, serves as a take-off point for the tankers that refuel B-52 bombers on patrol . . . Its loss would be inconvenient but not grave, experts say.

These varied accounts differ in some detail, but are consistent in suggesting that our bases in Spain are of only marginal value for the 1970's. As the Washington Post noted only last week, "Desirable" is about the strongest word one can in good conscience extract," while former U.S. Ambassador to Spain Angier Biddle Duke once referred to the bases as "just a convenience to the United States." And the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Europe of the Foreign Affairs Committee (Mr. FARBSTEIN) said on March 4:

These facilities are no doubt convenient, but not so essential to national or Western security as to justify an unreasonable commitment of scarce military or economic resources.

Under these circumstances of marginal military value, how shall we evaluate the political costs of a defense agreement with Spain? This is, after all, not merely a run-of-the-mill dictatorship such as we have so cavalierly supported elsewhere in the world. This is the last surviving dictatorship based on the political concepts we fought against in World War II—the last surviving dictatorship whose sympathies in that conflict lay with our enemies. And the Franco government has changed its coloration only slightly in the ensuing years, despite the vast changes which have swept across the rest of the globe. A brief period of "liberalization" undertaken in 1966 never bore full fruit, and was abruptly—and brutally—reversed in January of this year with the proclamation of a "state of exception." Once more, the Spanish press was subjected to full censorship; key articles of the Organic Law were suspended; and police power to arrest, interrogate, banish or imprison opponents of the regime was virtually unchecked. The "state of exception," interestingly enough, is ending today, 1 month ahead of schedule—a piece of timing which coincides a little too neatly with the resumption of base negotiations to be accepted as pure coincidence.

Should this, then, be our choice for a partner in a defense agreement? It must also be remembered that Spain is not merely a right-wing dictatorship internally, but it is a country whose Government is willing to flirt with the Soviets and threaten "neutrality" as a means of pressuring us to comply with its demands. Spain, in 1953, may have looked like the most solid and enduring of allies. But Spain, in 1969, is a would-be ally which has made tentative offers to the Soviet Union for limited base rights and which has proposed the removal of the U.S. 6th Fleet from the Mediterranean. It is also Fidel Castro's best friend in Europe, and one of Cuba's most helpful trading partners outside the Communist world. Its national flag airline is the only non-Communist carrier providing regular service to Havana.

We have long accepted, in this amoral world, that allies are all too often bought. But "bought" allies like Spain are usually a bad bargain, and this is nowhere so clearly demonstrated as in cases like this where they show a reluctance to stay "bought" unless the price is constantly increased.

Yet it can be said, with some reason, that the political cost to us elsewhere has been relatively limited even though we have borne the Spanish incubus for 15 years. How, then, can we argue for a shift in policy on political grounds? The argument here rests, I think, on the currents of change which are moving backward in Spain and forward elsewhere in the world. When we made our initial decision in 1953, security considerations were judged to be paramount. In 1963, at the time the agreement was given its first 5-year extension at a supplementary price of $100 million, it was argued with some plausibility that the American presence was helping open Spain to the winds of progress. The Spanish economy was blossoming under the stimulus of American dollars; the Spanish political structure was seemingly loosening somewhat. But in 1969, we are negotiating with a Government which has recently taken a giant step backward. Further extension of the defense agreement, involving substantial additional military assistance to the Franco regime, would constitute an American seal of approval for political retrogression and a severe blow to those who still hope to sway the Government in Madrid from its renewed enthusiasm for dictatorial rule.

We have, then, a proposal to renew a defense agreement which gives us bases of marginal military value and bears a heavy political cost. What about the economic cost? The direct price for the past 5 years was $100 million in military assistance. Spain refused a similar offer when it called for new negotiations last year, and asked instead for an initial $1 billion and a subsequent "rock bottom" $700 million in military aid. The 5-year American counter offer, according to press reports, came to $240 million. To this, of course, must be added the operating and maintenance costs of the bases themselves, with their 25,000 American servicemen and dependents.

It is, of course, clear that we can afford the cost of our Spanish bases if they are really necessary to our national security. But with the military and political value so questionable, the cost seems badly out of proportion to the anticipated return.

This brings us, Mr. Speaker, to the key question which I believe underlies our entire discussion today. Are we dealing here with a carefully defined national security policy, and deciding whether this particular defense agreement complements or detracts from that policy? Or are we seeking to define national security policy so that it can encompass this defense agreement because our military planners want to keep this pact alive?

Incidentally, the role of the military in this particular case is a strange one. My colleagues will recall the story, first reported in Newsday by Flora Lewis late in February, of the free-wheeling negotiations conducted in Madrid last December by Maj. Gen. David A. Burchinal. The general, evidently acting well beyond his instructions, came up with new justifications for the Spanish bases—but only by accepting a major potential extension of American commitments abroad. He agreed with his Spanish opposite numbers, for example, Spain was an "integral part" of Western Europe and therefore within the U.S. defense umbrella. He also accepted their view that we might face a joint threat with Spain as a result of developments in North Africa. As the distinguished majority leader of the Senate (Mr. MANSFIELD) pointedly remarked at the time, the report of General Burchinal's activities "raises serious questions as to who shall conduct the foreign policy of the United States, be it the Pentagon or, as the Constitution states, the State Department under the direction of the President."

This bizarre episode, however, is only a parenthetical note to the overall problem. For this kind of blatant military intrusion into the negotiating process will, almost inevitably, be found out and overcome. Of far greater concern to me, and with far greater impact on the future course of this Nation, is the basic question we must consider: are we to have a rational process for deciding our national priorities, in which the military case receives appropriate but not pre-emption we must consider: Are we to be swept irresistibly along on a tide of "national security" expenditures while other urgent needs remain unmet?

This broader debate is swirling all around us. It is evident in the argument now raging over deployment of an ABM system. It is a major factor in consideration of the bill introduced recently in both Houses to undertake planning for post-Vietnam economic conversion.

It is manifest in the widespread popular outcry against our continuing inattention to a host of pressing national problems, all too often excused on the ground that national security demands leave insufficient resources for these other purposes.

Thus, Mr. Speaker, I believe we must look at this challenge to the Spanish defense agreement in the context of the debate now underway all across the country on the critical question of establishing national priorities and allocating national resources. The ABM has been called a defense in search of a mission. So the Spanish bases might be called installations in search of a justification. Just because the Defense Department, as the Washington Post said, "never voluntarily gives up its turf" is no reason for a major element of American policy to be seriously distorted to fit the Pentagon's preconceived pattern.

We must break the bad habit we have fallen into since World War II of accepting without serious question the claims advanced by the military for a share in national resources. They have for too long come to accept their 10 percent of the gross national product as their due. They have for too long gotten bases, with or without accompanying security commitments, wherever their fancies turned. I believe the proposed renewal of the defense agreement with Spain is a perfect place to draw the line. The return accruing to the United States from this pact is marginal at best in the military sphere and strongly negative in the political sphere, and the costs are out of all proportion to any benefits. Adding these solid specific arguments to our broad interest in seeing national priorities more rationally defined, there is little remaining case for renewal of the agreement.

I therefore join with my able colleague from New York (Mr. LOWENSTEIN), and with other Members who are speaking here this afternoon, in urging the administration to let this defense agreement die the quiet death it so richly deserves.

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I thank my distinguished colleague. In this light, Mr. Speaker, one must agree with him that the nature of the negotiations and the new rationale given for the continuation of the bases, has done little to increase the national confidence in the wisdom of American oversea commitments being negotiated primarily by military officials.

I include at this point the remarkable February 25 column by Miss Flora Lewis, of Newsday, Inc. Her accuracy and insights were so sustained that to date there has been no persuasive rebuttal to her rather disquieting revelations.

STATE, PENTAGON SPLIT ON COMMITMENTS TO SPAIN

(By Flora Lewis)

A secret dispute has developed between the State Department and the Joint Chiefs of Staff over American commitments to Franco Spain. At one point, the military almost made a U.S. pledge to fight for Spain as though it were a NATO country.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which is starting to study how the U.S. gets into military obligation abroad, got wind of the blow-up between the State Department and the Pentagon at its peak. A committee staff member inquired and was told by both sides that there was no disagreement, no trouble. The executive departments are not inviting the Senators into their quarrel.

But the trouble has been brewing for months. The issue is now on its way to the National Security Council and will have to be decided by President Nixon. The story is a new case history of how the U.S. can stumble into a foreign war.

The immediate issue is the two air bases and the submarine base which the U.S. has in Spain. Although American officials disagree on their precise value, there is general agreement that none is essential to national security though all are useful.

The base agreement runs out this year. It provides that unless Madrid and Washington agree on renewal terms by March 26, the U.S. must evacuate within one year.

Talks on renewal went on during much of 1968. But last September, the Spaniards broke off negotiations, saying the gap between their price of $700 million in new weapons for another five years' use of the bases and the U.S. offer of $140 million in weapons and services was too big. If it was a bluff, it didn't work.

So in October, Spanish Foreign Minister Fernando Maria Castiella called on then Secretary of State Dean Rusk to launch a new approach. In place of the diplomatic talks, an American military mission was assigned to a three-stage discussion with the Spanish military, who dominate Spain. They were to assess the actual threat facing Spain, the "tasks and missions" the Spaniards must undertake to face it, and then the equipment needed to do the job.

Rusk's idea was that by tackling the subject in terms of needs rather than supplies, Madrid could be brought way down from its exorbitant demands for its three armed services.

Rusk also asked twice for a six-month extension of the March 26 deadline to give the new Administration time for this important policy decision. The Spaniards flatly refused.

On Nov. 18-20, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, visited Madrid and opened the talks. He made a general speech about Western strategy and mentioned in passing "the potential problem of political instability in North Africa." And to head the mission he named Maj. Gen. David A. Burchinal, a tall dapper man who as deputy to NATO supreme commander Gen. Lyman Lemnitzer has the dual role of second in command over all NATO forces in Europe and over all American forces in Europe.

Burchinal started work on Dec. 7. Two days later he signed a joint minute with the Spaniards on the threat they face. It included as a serious element the threat of limited war in North Africa, mentioning such possibilities as Algerian aggression, a "proxy" war in the Spanish colonies backed by the Russians, and other highly unlikely developments. His signature to this vast expansion of Wheeler's remark implied that Spain was justified in seeking far more weapons than the U.S. wants to give.

While he worked, he kept his papers locked in a safe at the U.S. air base at Torrejon, which is under his command. Neither the U.S. Embassy in Madrid nor the regular U.S. military mission there was given any word on conduct of the talks, nor could they possibly get access to the papers that were taken each night from Madrid to Torrejon.

Burchinal sent his copy of the signed minute back to Wheeler. It was not shown to the State Department nor to Pentagon civilians. After two weeks, with the intervention of top Pentagon civilians, the paper was finally produced.

The civilians, at the Pentagon and especially at State, were distressed with it. The extended reference to a threat from North Africa could be used to involve the U.S. in a Spanish colonial war. They wanted the text changed. Burchinal refused on the grounds that it was already signed and that trying to get a redraft would ruin his negotiations.

So State and the Pentagon compromised. They agreed on the text of a "prefatory note" which was sent to Burchinal to be inserted in the next joint minute on "tasks and missions." The note said the talks were a useful exchange of views but that nothing in the first or future minutes could be considered a binding Spanish-American understanding or commitment.

They also agreed on a proposed minute for the second stage and sent it to Burchinal to negotiate. It eliminated the whole passage about North Africa. There was no report from Burchinal for over a month. Then, in early February, he returned the jointly signed minute with a deadline of 48 hours for approval. The Joint Chiefs demanded State's endorsement.

The State Department people exploded. Burchinal had made three crucial changes:

1. The "threat from North Africa" idea was reinserted.

2. A statement was inserted saying the U.S. was obligated to defend Western Europe "of which Spain is an integral part." State Department lawyers pointed out that this could extend the NATO guarantee to include Spain, a vast and probably illegal commitment without Senate ratification.

3. The "prefatory note" was changed. It said that the minutes were "agreed views" of the two military sides and "must constitute" the basis for further talks on arms for Spain, though it still contained the phrase that this was not a commitment.

Furthermore, State was incensed at the impertinence of the 48-hour deadline and refused approval. Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird intervened on the request of Pentagon staff. He got Secretary of State William P. Rogers, who was in Florida, to insist on speedy clearance of the paper.

An inter-departmental meeting was called. It was stormy. Reluctantly, State agreed to endorse Burchinal's minute provided two changes were made. The fateful "integral part of Europe" phrase was removed and a sentence was added to the "prefatory note" saying the talks "do not necessarily reflect the views of the two governments."

The whole issue was then sent, as case No. 1, to the new Inter-Departmental Group for Europe set up under the Nixon Administration's machinery for funneling policy decisions to the National Security Council. Assistant Secretary of State John Leddy is chairman of the group. Its report went into the broad dangers of any security commitment to troubled Spain, whether the U.S. really needs the bases and how high a price it should pay for them in terms of both money and future policy risks.

The Spaniards have repeatedly made vague threats that they might turn neutral if there is no new base agreement. Some American officers argue that Madrid might settle for fewer weapons if it could get a mutual security treaty with the U.S. American diplomats are convinced this would be an outrageously false economy.

At the least it would open the U.S. to serious charges from anti-Franco Spaniards that it deliberately supported his dictatorship, as Cuban moderates who initially supported Castro charged about Batista. At the worst, it could impel the U.S. into an unwanted war.

Mr. Speaker, if the United States is indeed to follow the prescription of President Nixon during and after the campaign, to decrease our policing commitments around the world, would not Spain be a salutary place to begin?

Is it really in the interest of the United States to go on propping up forever so dubious a government against so dubious a possibility as a hypothetical invasion by Algerians or from Ifni and the South Sahara?

Mr. HALPERN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. HALPERN. Mr. Speaker, with the deadline near for renewal of the agreement covering American military bases in Spain, I wish to join my colleagues, and particularly commend the able gentleman from New York (Mr. LOWENSTEIN) in focusing attention on a number of significant issues involved in this agreement.

The American public deserves to have its Government examine with a much more discriminating eye this relationship which reveals so many questionable aspects of our foreign policy:

Is there a significant military necessity for American bases in Spain when even the Defense Department agrees their security value appears minimal?

Is American diplomacy to be carried out by American generals with a restricted view of the political consequences of their actions?

Is the tremendous financial commitment to Spain over the past years justified by the minimal value of these bases?

Should we allow ourselves to become involved in the internal politics of another country by giving aid to an undemocratic, a totalitarian regime?

Should the executive be allowed to make such consequential commitments by executive agreement without benefit of congressional review?

However, I would like today to briefly elaborate on one particularly important question in addition to those I have stated, which is raised by our support of the Franco dictatorship which only recently again reverted to the repressive policies of a police state.

The issue is not a new one, but it never suffers from reiteration because it is so important in disclosing a chronic flow in our foreign policy. How often must we earn the enmity of the large majority of the peoples of foreign lands by materially supporting the oppressive governments that they abhor? Why must we lose sight of the idealism we cherish so dearly?

That Franco's government has nothing in common with American ideals of democratic government hardly bears explanation, but recent facts make the conclusion even more apparent. Although a new era of moderation was supposed to have been effected over the past 5 or 6 years, on January 24 of this year Franco established a "state of exception," suspending numerous civil liberties, in response to student unrest and some simple declarations by intellectuals of desires for more freedom.

The emergency action established nothing less than a severe police state.

Hundreds of arrests were made—Spain admits to 260—and thousands of detentions were imposed without warrants.

Police were given authority to make searches at any place or time.

At least 17 intellectuals and university professors were forced into exile.

The Spanish press was severely censored. Even as the "state of exception" is being lifted, Franco's government has made it clear that it will retain power to suspend publications or fine editors who are too politically outspoken.

Indeed, the recent announcement of the lifting of emergency measures would seem to be deliberately aimed at softening criticism at this delicate point in negotiations. But the meaning of this gesture is certainly little more than illusory. When the need to cultivate American opinion is passed, the experience of this dictator has shown he will have no hesitancy in restoring his repressive measures at his whim so let us not be fooled by this superficial act of the so-called lifting of restrictions. The period of moderation that existed earlier was dispensed with as soon as the "strong man" felt the slightest threat to his omnipotent power.

In addition to the serious moral reservations the American Government should feel in dealing with this regime, due consideration should be given to the effect our support produces on the minds of the dissatisfied Spaniards. More and more America is being equated in the thoughts of millions of Spaniards with the hated regime.

The people of Spain want a change from the old ways of the "caudillo." Numerous widespread elements of the Spanish public have shown their impatience with the strong-arm tactics. Before the emergency, state students had called for academic reform; lawyers from Madrid College asked the government to shelve proposed repressive legislation; 1,300 prominent Spaniards called on the government to investigate alleged police torture practices; even the younger Catholic clergy had made some outspoken protests.

That American money and military aid should be going to Franco at precisely the time when so many of his own people have launched their heaviest criticism upon him is a course that is at once ironic and unwise. Despite explanatory speeches and the like, few Spaniards would fail to regard the concluding agreement as placing the weight of Washington behind the generals of Madrid.

In short, there is little to recommend this compact. It is not favorable to any American economic or political interests and where the needs of American security are so questionable, should the United States be aiding a foreign regime which controverts the ideals of democratic government and is opposed by its very own people. It is both the right and the responsibility of the American Government to take an objective look, unclouded by the limited views of its military advisers, at the whole question.

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. I wish to thank the distinguished gentleman from New York. And, finally, Mr. Speaker, I must ask what hidden benefits there are for the United States in expensive alliances with repressive governments in their declining periods. Do we really need to finance rotten little dictatorships resented by their own people and rejected by the decent opinion of mankind? Do we need a Greek junta so badly that we must finance and equip one?

I have spent a good deal of time in Spain over the years. There will, thank God, be a Spain when there is no longer a Francisco Franco. And one day the Spanish people, who—like many other peoples but more heroically than most—fought for their freedom against Hitler and Mussolini, will live in freedom again.

But meanwhile, what are we doing to America in the eyes of Spain. And what are we doing to Spain in the name of America.

The guns and planes with which we pay rent for our bases in Spain have been used and will be used not to fight Russians or Chinese, but to frighten Spaniards. Where do the armored personnel carriers, the machineguns, the ammunition, the helicopters—paid for by Americans and given to the Spanish Army—where do they go? What do they do? What are they for?

About these matters, Mr. Speaker, I am especially grateful for the remarks of the distinguished gentleman from New York (Mr. HALPERN).

And I want to call to the attention of the House the comments of the Abbot of Montserrat, one of the great figures of the Roman Catholic Church, who said in 1963:

We have behind us not twenty-five years of peace, but twenty-five years of victory. The victors . . . have done nothing to put an end to this division between victors and vanquished. Therein lies one of the most lamentable failures of a regime which calls itself Christian, but whose state does not obey the basic principle of Christianity.

The people should be able to choose their own form of government and should be able to alter it.

The government has no right to abuse its power. It should be an administrator in the name of God and a servant of the people.

I have been very much interested, and continue to be interested, in the political prisoners, whose existence constitutes one of the most painful aspects of the regime. Their presence in the prisons is in direct relation to the peace which the state has not succeeded in restoring.

I have been in Spain again recently, Mr. Speaker, and whatever the Spanish Government now says to ease the resentment against it here and elsewhere on the eve of these negotiations, the unhappy fact remains that the finest democrats of that sad land are once again in hiding, in jail, in terror, in remote villages for undisclosed crimes, for undefined periods of time.

There must be a better use for the money extracted from the people of this Nation than to add to the burdens of a friendly people who have done us no harm and who crave only freedom and justice for themselves.

(Mr. LOWENSTEIN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. LEGGETT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEGGETT. Before the gentleman concludes I want to compliment the gentleman on his remarks here today. I did not hear everything the gentleman had to say, but certainly it is my own view that there is some need to maintain some military capability in the Mediterranean.

I believe that the Rota Base, which our Navy uses out there, is perhaps critical for some of our deployments there. I believe there are, however, a considerable number of other surplus military installations which we still currently have on lease with the Spanish Government, and with respect to those surplus capabilities I would certainly point out they are pertinent to the nature of the gentleman's remarks.

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. I appreciate the gentleman's comments.

Mr. LEGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I wish to commend Mr. LOWENSTEIN on his fine presentation of the facts and major problems at issue in the negotiations on U.S. military aid and installations in Spain.

It is becoming increasingly clear that events such as the Spanish negotiations are symptomatic of a far deeper problem confronting U.S. foreign policy. This problem is the military determination of U.S. foreign policy. The problem takes on two dimensions. The first is that many of our advanced and extremely costly weapons systems are so far reaching in their capabilities and missions that the systems are in effect determining the foreign policy. This would seem to be the ultimate in the often feared technological takeover of our society. In the past we have always assumed that our policy would be determined by men—hopefully, the President with consultation from the Department of State. Now however, it seems that we are reaching the era where the weapons systems promoted by the military are rushed through Congress, and a foreign policy is then structured around the capabilities of the system. Not only does this directly threaten the long held concept of civilian control of the military, but goes a step further, and threatens to have the computers and systems analysts control the civilians.

The second symptom is present in the Spanish incident. In this case the military—Major General Burchinal to be exact—has negotiated far-reaching commitments with the Spanish authorities. These negotiations go far beyond technical military aid requirements and reach directly into the province of our overall commitments to the Spanish Government, including discussions on possible U.S. involvement in Vietnam-type actions which the Spanish fear may erupt in their spheres of influence in Africa. I would think we had learned a lesson by now from our Vietnam experience. It seems we have not. The military is still determined to involve the United States in a perennial position of police force to the world. These discussions were carried on by the Army without the consultation of the Department of State and from all indications against the judgment of the Department of State.

We must put a stop to the Pentagon bulldozer. Just yesterday Senator MANSFIELD charged that the officials of the Department of Defense in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and Armed Services Committee hearings had gone beyond the outline of the safeguard ABM system presented by President Nixon. The DOD is determined to have its way with these systems, and I predict that by the time they are through, the ABM system that is deployed will be far heavier than the one originally proposed. This has happened time and time again. The systems get bigger and more expensive and no effective controls are placed on their development.

This blatant example of diplomatic negotiation by the military in Spain is symptomatic of the dangerous problem facing us.

We must once and for all decide who is in charge here. Is the military the arm of the civilian authority, or are the civilians merely the conduit for funds to the military?

Mr. MONAGAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. MONAGAN. I heard one statement the gentleman made to which I should like to take exception. The gentleman has said that no evidence has been offered as to need for these bases.

I would concede that the character of the need has changed. The technology of defense, if we want to call it that, has changed, and to some degree we have passed from the bombers which were used when the bases were originally instituted to the use of submarines and also of missiles.

But I believe it is very important to look back at the history of the use of these bases and to realize they have proved to be of vital importance in many respects and I cite their use in relation to the Congo and in relation to the recent war in the Middle East.

As a Member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, I have heard no one—in the military, or in Defense, or State—say that they are not important. To the contrary, they have said they are very important.

While the importance has changed in quality and perhaps to some degree otherwise, nevertheless they still have a very vital importance for us in the Mediterranean and in relation to these other areas of which I have already spoken.

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. I was wondering whether that importance would be in connection with the accessibility of these areas to Spain? I believe it is important, if that would be the inference, to consider some of the mileages involved.

Mr. MONAGAN. It is not to the areas of Spain, but it is our use of these bases in relation to other areas in the world, such as the Middle East. I mentioned the Congo. Biafra might be a conceivable area. Although it is not big enough to require any great mercy airlift, which is what I am thinking of. With the base of Wheelus in Libya being of questionable availability, with the bases in Turkey being in some doubt, with the increased activity of the U.S.S.R. as to its fleet in the eastern Mediterranean, and its activities in the Red Sea area, its penetration of the United Arab Republic, I believe that this is practically the only remaining base available to us outside of the Azores which is on a de facto basis, means it assumes a greater significance.

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. The mileage from Madrid to the Suez Canal is 2,100 miles and the distance from Wiesbaden to the same place is 1,800 miles. In terms of critical areas the mileage from Madrid to the Bosphorus is 1,650; from Wiesbaden it is 1,150; submit that, while it may be convenient to have additional bases, these bases are neither more accessible nor more convenient than the bases we already have.

Mr. MONAGAN. Of course, Wiesbaden is not a base of this character. I have visited all of these bases. It is not the same type of base at all in size or capacity or anything else. We are not increasing the number of bases. Actually the fact is that we are decreasing them. I mentioned Wheelus and the Turkish bases, as examples. So it is not a question of increasing their number, but we are actually decreasing them.

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. I find it difficult to understand what purpose it serves to involve ourselves in this considerable additional expenditure, or to commit ourselves to the particular government that runs Spain, simply for the decreasing convenience that you suggest.

Mr. MONAGAN. We do not know what the expenditure will be. Actually, talks are in process at the present time and no agreement has been reached. In the past in similar bargaining we have seen the figures go down from something like $1 billion to a matter of several hundred million. I am sure that will happen in this case. However, I do not agree and would not want my own support of the military necessity to be read as any support of the Franco regime. Nor do the people who are negotiating on our part consider a military agreement to constitute political approval. On the other hand, we should not sacrifice our security interests because a cooperative regime does not conform in all ways to our prescription. So I think that is clearly not a point as far as this matter is concerned.

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. I wonder if the gentleman would suggest what reasonable limit we should pay, in view of the cost to the taxpayer, for the use of these additional bases which, you suggest, may have been essential years ago but now may be a matter of convenience.

Mr. MONAGAN. No. I do not say they are merely a matter of convenience. I say they are a matter of great importance. What the amount of the rental should be involves a great many things. I do not have those figures at hand. But it seems to me that there was a time when it was a matter of $100 million or something like that. However, I would not want to be held down to amounts. On the other hand, I point out that purchases have been made in this country by Spain that have exceeded the amounts we have paid for the rental rights.

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. The trouble is that when they purchase $50 million in military equipment, we give them a like amount of $50 million, which in effect means that we are giving the Spanish Government a sort of matching grant, a grant-in-aid which means they get American military equipment at half the price we pay to supply our own troops in Vietnam. I confess that I am troubled by a concept of U.S. military security that involves making available to Spain military equipment at half the price that we have to pay for it ourselves.

Mr. MONAGAN. As far as I know, it is paid for at regular prices and the purchase has been in excess of the amounts that we have paid in for the bases.

It has been used as I understand it for the modernization of the equipment of the Spanish Armed Forces.

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. If I may pursue the point a bit further, the official figures are that to date we have expended almost $700 million in military assistance to Spain, exclusive of these military matching grants and of economic aid. I agree with the gentleman from Connecticut that we would be wasting our time to argue the history of the matter at this point. But I would hope we could agree that in view of our immense national debt and tax burdens, of our other defense needs, of our varied commitments around the world, and of our innumerable other obligations, we should set up a scale of priorities. I believe it is incumbent upon the Members of the House of Representatives to consider this question of priorities, and to consider in that context whether we really ought to continue this operation in Spain. In my opinion it would be unwise to consider just the immediate price tag when there is so much involved here.

Mr. MONAGAN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, I fully agree with the gentleman. I myself have filed a bill to set up a commission to determine priorities in the allocation of our national assets. I think the gentleman from New York and I might differ as to the importance of this particular project in relation to our overall defense. When we get down to that point, I think that is basically what we are arguing about here.

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. In that connection, might it not be a useful pursuit to determine whether, in view of the limited resources of the United States, its pressing other needs, its overwhelming tax burden, and its rising national debt, it makes sense to continue this program in Spain. Is it desirable to further extend these leases without a full national discussion of the facts and of all the questions that you and I are discussing now?

Mr. MONAGAN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, I am in favor of public discussion. One of the reasons I rose to raise these points is because I think it should be discussed and we are discussing it. I do think that the gentleman from New York has done a service in bringing his point of view before the House. Mine differs somewhat and, therefore, I want to bring out the points that I think are important in this matter. Certainly, this matter of military spending does involve the consideration of an allocation of priorities. I would be the first one to admit that there are many areas where I think we could cut back. Even the Secretary of Defense has recommended a reduction in military spending. So it then becomes a matter of one's judgment as to what is best for the welfare of the country.

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. I am deeply grateful to the gentleman for taking part in this discussion. I hope, however, we have only begun the discussion today. I think it would be unfortunate for the United States, in view of the significance of this decision and the many other things involved, to act on the question of whether to extend the bases in Spain as if there were no further implications and costs.

I think on the matter of the national security that the viewpoint of Senator SYMINGTON and others who have been intimately involved with security problems for years, and who are deeply concerned about the effect of our overseas base policies and commitments on our national situation that that testimony might wisely be considered along with yours and mine.

Mr. MONAGAN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield for just one more point, I read the views of Senator SYMINGTON and I think that one must consider statements that are made at the present time in connection with negotiations that are going on. Sometimes a lawyer in a case where a settlement is about to be made might puff his case or belittle the opponent's case. I think that, perhaps, is the case here.

I thank the gentleman for yielding. Mr. TAFT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

First of all, Mr. Speaker, I believe the gentleman from New York is to be very much commended for bringing this matter to the floor for discussion. I would like to say further that I find myself somewhat in disagreement with the views expressed by the gentleman from New York, and more in conformity with the views of the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. MONAGAN) as to at least the reservations that the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. MONAGAN) has just expressed.

Be that as it may, however, the reason for asking the gentleman to yield is because, along with the gentleman from Connecticut, I serve on the Subcommittee on Europe of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. There have been some initial hearings on this subject in that subcommittee. However, I feel that I should call to the attention of the House that I believe that to the desk of every Member of the House, certainly to mine, there came a statement from the gentleman who is the chairman of the subcommittee.

In that statement there is certain language which is subject to the interpretation, and I am sure that it is not intended to be subject to that interpretation, but nevertheless is subject to the interpretation that the Subcommittee on Europe has acted upon this matter, and that the chairman has been authorized to speak for such committee. I want to make it clear that that is not the case. The subcommittee has not, as far as I know, taken any action in connection with this issue. I believe it is useful to explore the issue. I believe, however, as the gentleman from Connecticut has already explained, that when one attempts to assess the economic and military problems, as well as the effect on our foreign affairs of these decisions, one is looking at a pretty broad scope, and to try to isolate one particular area and examine it without reference to the entire problem of defense is extremely difficult.

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the contributions to this discussion made by the gentleman from Ohio. I quite share his concern that we consider the Spanish bases in a larger context—that, in fact, has been a major thrust of my remarks today. Unless we have the capacity in the United States to question whether or not it is in the interest of our country to continue this involvement and this expenditure, we have lost a very important part of our best traditions. Almost anything can be done in a cloak of secrecy if we assume that the incantation of the words "national security" precludes weighing military requests—and rejecting military requests that do not withstand careful scrutiny successfully. There would not be much left of the America we love if the people were denied the right of investigation and decision.

Thus it seems to me there is a very special responsibility for us to examine this matter with great diligence and great awareness of our overall national purposes and needs.

It does not serve simply to say that we need some military program or other because some general says so. Our generals may be highly motivated, but they have been known to be wrong nonetheless. This country is not dependent exclusively upon the views of generals in the determination of these matters. I suspect if it were we would not have done as well as we have. We would certainly not be what we are.

I hope therefore that others will want to proceed with this discussion after today, will want to urge upon the President and the Congress the importance of the continuation of such a discussion.

I hope today will help sound a tocsin for the necessity of such a discussion.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I join my distinguished colleagues today in raising serious questions as to the propriety of our renewal of our base agreement with the Franco regime. It seems to me that the Spaniards, whose foreign minister is now in Washington to consummate another 5-year executive agreement between our two Governments, have indeed struck a fine bargain—for Spain.

But has the national interest of the United States been well served? I think not. I believe it is important to view the agreements in a very basic sense. Is the U.S. Government which will have to furnish some $300 million additional in war material for the Spanish armed forces getting a good return for its money? The most ardent supporters of our continued commitment to Spain do not, and can not, claim that these bases are vital in any sense to our own security.

On the other hand, the pitfalls that could result from our continued intimate association with the dictatorial Spanish Government are too readily apparent. Should much needed social and political change finally come to Spain, on whose side shall we stand? How shall the United States as guardian and benefactor of the Ancien regime be judged by the new leadership and the Spanish people? If serious civil disturbances occur as they did on a milder scale 2 months ago, will not the pressures to intervene to protect the lives of our 15,000 servicemen and their dependents override other considerations? What of our costly installations there? Could we ever allow them to be taken over precipitously?

Mr. Speaker, the unmistakable fact that emerges is that our bases and our lavish military assistance are tying our own hands in identifying with the winds of change that must some day sweep over the Iberian Peninsula. What is surely not more than a matter of convenience today for our own military, could very well become a matter of urgency, or at the least, acute political embarrassment tomorrow.

The Defense Department's dubious role in the negotiations has fortunately already been brought to light. The arrogant unconcern for opposing viewpoints, the Byzantine secrecy, and the eagerness to commit our Government to the defense of Spain—under a set of highly unlikely circumstances, I must add—these all raise serious questions as to the proper role of our generals in making foreign policy for the United States. The Defense Department's undercutting of the authority and the responsibility of the Department of State in the base negotiations is but a single example of the increasingly preeminent role of our military in the formulation of vital political decisions affecting our country's future.

In the background of this sorry episode, we must not overlook the most severe suppression of dissent in Spain—the past 2 months under their "state of exception"—a form of rigid martial law. It is apparent to me that these draconian measures which have been conveniently lifted only yesterday, too conveniently coincide with the visit here of Foreign Minister Castiella. If anything, this cynical gesture shows a fine appreciation for public relations—particularly when the American public is involved, rather than the Spanish public.

Mr. Speaker, we must ask ourselves whether the renewal of the base agreement with Franco-Spain will encourage the liberalization that we have read about with grateful anticipation. I think not. Besides strengthening the hands of the Spanish military, the agreement gives substance to the menace of the Communist bogeyman supposedly threatening Spain, and against which the harshest measures are justified.

In sum, Mr. Speaker, a renewal of our base agreement with Spain offers aid and encouragement to the two parties whose narrow interests in this matter have unfortunately prevailed—the Franco regime, and our own Department of Defense.

April 1, 1969, will mark the thirtieth anniversary of the complete domination of Spanish life by Generalissimo Franco and his cohorts, and of the subjugation of a proud people whose culture has enriched our own hemisphere particularly. Mr. Speaker, is not the time ripe to rid ourselves of the tie to a most dismal period of Spanish history, and to commit ourselves to Spain's future?

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, the United States is being asked to pay $700 million in military aid to retain three Air Force and one submarine base in Spain for 5 years, a high price even in these days of inflated rents.

The Spanish people, and press, when allowed have made clear their unhappiness with the American military presence in Spain. The United States unfortunate experience in losing a hydrogen bomb off Paomares, Spain, in 1966 made even the Franco government unhappy. The bases have become an open sore to the Spanish workers and students, prohibiting good relations with them.

Further, the Spanish Government recently suspended many of the limited freedoms enjoyed by the Spanish people. For the United States to renew the leases, and pay $700 million in military aid for them, would be de facto endorsement of those limitations on basic freedoms.

The Christian Science Monitor has called the proposed payment "a bribe." Whether it is rent, or a bribe, the question arises whether these bases are needed, or whether they are now unnecessary real estate. The original agreement with Spain in 1953 came at a time when bases for relatively short range Air Force strategic bombers were needed. Today the United States is armed with intercontinental missiles, B-52 bombers and the Polaris submarine fleet—a fleet which can operate from the shores of the United States. What then is the need for the Spanish bases?

The security of the United States is not a question. The payment of a rent, or "bribe," for unnecessary bases is.

The present administration, which often has called for economy, can accomplish a $700 million economy at the stroke of a pen. As per our present agreements with the Spanish Government, the United States should notify Spain the bases are no longer required and will be evacuated within the specified year. The $700 million can be put to far better use.

Mr. COHELAN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to compliment my colleagues—Mr. LOWENSTEIN, Mr. ADAMS, Mr. HALPERN, Mr. McCLOSKEY, and Mr. RYAN—for arranging this opportunity for the Members of the House to discuss the critical issues involved in the negotiations for the renewal of American base rights in Spain.

It seems to me altogether fitting on the eve of the expiration of our present agreements for these bases in Spain for the House of Representatives to address itself to the question whether it is wise to continue to operate those bases, and if so whether it is wise to expend hundreds of millions of dollars and new defense commitments to preserve that continued operation.

I would only hope that the administration would heed the concerns which motivate several of us to today question the wisdom of our continued military presence in Spain at these high dollar and commitment costs.

It seems to me that the situation in Spain is not unique, but rather that it reflects circumstances in the making and operation of American foreign policy which can be, and indeed have been, duplicated in other parts of the world.

First. There is the tendency to hold on to foreign bases even after the facts justifying their original acquisition have ceased to exist.

Our bases in Spain were acquired at a time when they were thought essential to the maintenance of our nuclear deterrent. No one today claims these bases are still essential for this purpose. And so it is that one is led to question whether the continued use of these bases is worth the price we are being asked to pay—in money, in support of an unattractive regime, in the extension of further military commitments to defend still more nations in more circumstances.

I expect that the arguments we are now hearing with regard to bases in Spain, we will be hearing in the coming months with regard to bases in Japan, and in Korea, and in Turkey, and in other parts of the world. I suggest that we pay close attention to these arguments to retain these bases. In a good many cases I think we will find that the original justifications have expired, and that only jury-built reasons remain to support the request.

Second. I think we can discern in the Spanish situation a possible example of how it is that our military presence tends to expand into still further commitments and presence. Press accounts indicate that an American general negotiating on behalf of the U.S. Government may have offered to commit the United States to defend Spain in the same degree to which we are now obligated to defend NATO allies. This is, if true, a most ominous development.

Where after all is the great threat to Spain at this moment? It would appear on casual analysis to be a threat from the people of Spain in opposition to the repressive regime of the present rulers of the country. Are the French or the Italians or the Russians or Chinese apt to attack Spain? And if they did, is it clear that the United States should in every case be obligated to come to Spain's defense?

I do not think the answers to these questions are so clear as to indicate that the United States should enter into such a defense commitment—and moreover, I do not believe there can be any justification for undertaking such a commitment so lightly and in such cavalier fashion.

Again, I think it may be that this extension of commitments by military authorities in the countries in question could be duplicated in Latin America or Southeast Asia. Again, too, I suggest to my colleagues that we listen closely to how this offer of new military undertakings came about—it may be very instructive in preventing a recurrence.

Third. I am concerned with the apparent fact that the Department of Defense and not the State Department or the President has been independently carrying on negotiations which vitally affect our foreign policy. Is it true that uniformed officers have taken great pains to conceal their activities from civilian scrutiny in the Department of State? If it is, I think it is a matter which should be of interest to us.

Is it true that after review in Washington by diplomats and defense experts our negotiators in the field agree to arrangements in opposition to the instructions from Washington? If so we should be interested.

Could it be that this behavior too could be duplicated elsewhere in American relations overseas?

Fourth. I wonder whether we are giving adequate attention to the impact of continued American military assistance to the Franco regime on the attitudes of the Spanish people and of our friends and enemies throughout the world. I think it is fair to say that the present Spanish regime is antithetical to most American values and ideals. This Government has in recent months moved to an even more repressive posture than that which has marked its past reign. Military assistance provides the funds to operate, equip and maintain an army to enforce this repression should it be challenged by force. This overwhelming military strength in turn allows the present regime to refuse to accede to the desires of its people for increased liberty. Is this the sort of policy for which precious American resources should be spent?

Fifth. I come finally to the large monetary costs of our continued operation of these Spanish bases.

The American civilians and servicemen assigned to these bases consume millions of dollars in foreign exchange each year—years in which balance-of-payments difficulties have caused us to restrict American investments abroad, and to maintain artificially high interest rates. Are these Spanish bases and the convenience they provide worth the foreign exchange costs? Would American businessmen rather see American foreign exchange spent to maintain these facilities in Spain, or would they prefer to increase their freedom to invest overseas?

Would American consumers rather pay lower prices due to the elimination of "voluntary" limits on imports caused by foreign exchange shortages, or would they prefer to maintain these bases in Spain?

In terms of foreign assistance the costs are high, too. As a member of the Appropriations Subcommittee charged with oversight of the foreign assistance program I can testify to the scarcity of resources available for expenditure in support of foreign countries. Would the American people rather spend their limited foreign aid resources on payoffs to the Spanish for these bases, or would they rather meet the problems of starvation in Nigeria/Biafra, or the problems of overpopulation in India, or the general problems of economic development in Asia, Africa, and Latin America?

And then, too, would those who live in America and need food, and housing, and job training, would they rather spend American resources for the convenience of these Spanish bases, or would they rather save the money for expenditure at home?

In sum, Mr. Speaker, I believe that very grave questions are raised by our continued operation of these Spanish bases.

Are the reasons for the maintenance of these bases outdated?

Is the military expanding our commitments to defend still more countries in still more circumstances?

Is the Defense Department and not the State Department and the President making our foreign policy?

Is the United States wise in continuing to support a regime antithetical to the American way of life?

Are the costs of these bases so vital that Americans should be willing to restrict their foreign investments and foreign assistance to preserve their operation?

These I submit, Mr. Speaker, are questions which should and must be answered before we proceed to pledge away the future lives and resources of this country. Until they are answered to my satisfaction I have strong reservations about renewal of our Spanish operations.

For the sake of informing those who read the RECORD, I would like to include at this point an editorial from the Washington Post and an article by Flora Lewis which deal with the questions I have raised today:

[From the Washington Post, Mar. 17, 1969]

THE SPANISH BASES

This week Spanish Foreign Minister Fernando Castiello Maiz arrives in Washington to conduct the final round of negotiations for the continued American occupancy of four bases in Spain, whose lease expires March 26. These bases—three Air Force, one Navy—have quite a history. They were established in 1953, in the most frigid years of the Cold War as part of the defense system that ringed the Soviet Union, from Spain and Morocco to Turkey. In return for the leased land, the United States pumped $1.2 billion in economic and military assistance into Spain over the next ten years. In 1963 the lease was renewed for five years in return for $100 million in military aid. Last summer the Spanish came back with a demand for $1 billion for the next five years, a sum that was later scaled down to $700 million in military aid. There were other Spanish demands as well, among them a commitment that the United States come to Spain's defense in case of attack—presumably, and incredibly, from North Africa. The American Government's position on all this has been far from clear, in part because the Johnson Administration apparently authorized a major general to do its diplomatic business in Spain, and it is not at all certain that his views coincide with the Government's. The notion now is that the United States will settle for a five-year extension at $100 million.

It is an astonishing business. No one, not even the Air Force, contends that the three air bases in Spain—in this, the age of the ICBM—are essential to American defense. "Desirable" is about the strongest word one can in good conscience extract, and that largely on the basis that the Department of Defense, the bureaucratic proof of the validity of the territorial imperative, never voluntarily gives up its turf, in this case three air bases. The naval base, useful for the servicing of Polaris submarines, is not essential either; it is marginally less expensive to service the subs in Rota, rather than the Eastern United States, and that is about all. So there is little in the way of persuasive military argument for retention of the bases and the 10,000 men who man them, particularly at a $700 million price tag.

The objections to extension of the lease however, go way beyond $100 million or $1 billion and four obsolete and obsolescent bases. It is that the money in military aid will go to the Franco regime at precisely the time when it is under heaviest fire from its critics—left, right and center, from anarchist to monarchist—for reinstating the repression so characteristic of "the system" in the years immediately following the civil war. To conclude this agreement now would be to place the weight of Washington behind the generals in Madrid, no matter how many explanatory speeches, statements and back-grounders came from the White House. Beyond that, and not very far beyond it, is the inadvertent stake we acquire in a country once we establish bases and staff them with American soldiers. Diplomacy follows the flag. Who rules in Madrid becomes important not for political reasons but for military ones: What will they do to the bases? It would be interesting to know how the Administration is sorting out these questions. Which comes first: politics or military security, in this case—by most of the evidence—a dubious military security.

In short, this agreement appears to have very little to recommend it. It does not appear to be favorable to American interests on any grounds, military, political or economic, and in fact would tend to bring this country into disrepute with exactly those elements, in Spain and out of it, who should be our allies. A persuasive case for renewal of the leases has yet to be made.

[From the Los Angeles Times, Feb. 27, 1969]
PENTAGON'S SPANISH BASES "DIPLOMACY" TRIGGERS FEUD
 (By Flora Lewis)

A secret dispute has developed between the State Department and the Joint Chiefs of Staff over American commitments to Franco Spain. At one point, the military almost made a U.S. pledge to fight for Spain as though it were a NATO country.

The Senate Foreign Relations committee, which is starting to study how the U.S. gets into military obligations abroad, got wind of the blow-up between the State Department and the Pentagon at its peak. A committee staff member inquired and was told by both sides that there was no disagreement, no trouble. The executive departments are not inviting the senators into their quarrel.

But the trouble has been brewing for months. The issue is now on its way to the National Security Council and will have to be decided by President Nixon. The story is a new case history of how the United States can stumble into a foreign war.

The immediate issue is the two air bases and the submarine base which the United States has in Spain. Although American officials disagree on their precise value, there is general agreement that none is essential to national security though all are useful.

The base agreement runs out this year. It provides that unless Madrid and Washington agree on renewal terms by March 26, the United States must evacuate within one year.

Talks on renewal went on during much of 1968. But last September, the Spaniards broke off negotiations saying the gap between their price of $700 million in new weapons for another five years' use of the bases and the U.S. offer of $140 million in weapons and services was too big. If it was a bluff, it didn't work.

So in October, Spanish Foreign Minister Fernando Maria Castiella called on then Secretary of State Dean Rusk to launch a new approach. In place of the diplomatic talks, an American military mission was assigned to a three-stage discussion with the Spanish military, who dominate Spain. They were to assess the actual threat facing Spain, the "tasks and missions" the Spaniards must undertake to face it, and then the equipment needed to do the job.

Rusk's idea was that by tackling the subject in terms of needs rather than supplies, Madrid could be brought way down from its exorbitant demands for its three armed services.

Rusk also asked, twice, for a six-month extension of the March 26 deadline to give the new Administration time for this important policy decision. The Spaniards flatly refused.

On Nov. 18-20, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, visited Madrid and opened the talks. He made a general speech about western strategy and mentioned in passing "the potential problem of political instability in North Africa." And to head the mission he named Maj. Gen. David A. Burchinal, a tall, dapper man who as deputy to NATO chief Gen. Lyman Lemnitzer has the dual role of second in command over all NATO forces in Europe and over all American forces in Europe.

Burchinal started work on Dec. 7. Two days later he signed a joint minute with the Spaniards on the threat they face. It included as a serious element the threat of limited war in North Africa, mentioning such possibilities as Algerian aggression, a "proxy" war in the Spanish colonies backed by the Russians, and other highly unlikely developments. His signature to this vast expansion of Wheeler's remark implied that Spain was justified in seeking far more weapons than the United States wants to give.

While he worked, he kept his papers locked in a safe at the U.S. air base at Torrejon, which is under his command. Neither the U.S. Embassy in Madrid nor the regular U.S. military mission there was given any word on conduct of the talks, nor could they possibly get access to the papers, which were taken each night from Madrid to Torrejon.

Burchinal sent his copy of the signed minute back to Wheeler. It was not shown to the State Department nor to Pentagon civilians. After two weeks, with the intervention of top Pentagon civilians, the paper was finally produced.

The civilians, at the Pentagon and especially at State, were distressed with it. The extended reference to a threat from North Africa could be used to involve the United States in a Spanish colonial war. They wanted the text changed. Burchinal refused on the grounds that it was already signed and that trying to get a redraft would ruin his negotiations.

So State and the Pentagon compromised. They agreed on the text of a "prefatory note" which was sent to Burchinal to be inserted in the next joint minute on "tasks and missions." The note said the talks were a useful exchange of views but that nothing in the first or future minutes could be considered a binding Spanish-American understanding or commitment.

They also agreed on a proposed minute for the second stage and sent it to Burchinal to negotiate. It eliminated the whole passage about North Africa. There was no report from Burchinal for over a month. Then, in early February, he returned the jointly signed second minute with a deadline of 48 hours for approval. The Joint Chiefs demanded State's endorsement.

The State Department people exploded. Burchinal had made three crucial changes:

1—The "threat from North Africa" idea was reinserted.

2—A statement was inserted saying the United States was obligated to defend western Europe "of which Spain is an integral part." State Department lawyers pointed out this could extend the NATO guarantee to include Spain, a vast and probably illegal commitment without Senate ratification. It could be used to drag the United States into a second Spanish civil war if Madrid held that possible rebels were acting for Moscow.

3—The "prefatory note" was changed. It said that the minutes were "agreed views" of the two military sides and "must constitute" the basis for further talks on arms for Spain, though it still contained the phrase that this was not a commitment.

Furthermore, State was incensed at the impertinence of the 48-hour deadline and refused approval. Secretary of Defense Mel Laird intervened on the request of Pentagon staff. He got Secretary of State Bill Rogers, who was in Florida, to insist on speedy clearance of the paper.

An interdepartmental meeting was called. It was stormy. Reluctantly, State agreed to endorse Burchinal's minute providing two changes were made. The fateful "integral part of Europe" phrase was removed and a sentence was added to the "prefatory note" saying the talks "do not necessarily reflect the views of the two governments."

The whole issue was then sent, as case number one, to the new intergovernmental committee for Europe set up under the Nixon Administration's machinery for funneling policy decisions to the National Security Council. Assistant Secretary of State John Leddy is chairman of the committee. Its report went into the broad dangers of any security commitment to troubled Spain, whether the United States really needs the bases and how high a price it should pay for them in terms of both money and future policy risks.

The Spaniards have repeatedly made vague threats that they might turn neutral if there is no new base agreement. Some American officers argue that Madrid might settle for less weapons if it could get a mutual security treaty with the United States. American diplomats are convinced this would be an outrageously false economy.

At the least it would open the United States to serious charges from anti-Franco Spaniards that it deliberately supported his dictatorship, as Cuban moderates who initially supported Castro charged about Batista. At the worst, it could impel the United States into an unwanted war.

State is opposed to asking the Spaniards again to extend the March 26 deadline because that would stiffen Madrid's intransigence. Time is running out. Soon, probably before the Senate committee gets down to work on finding out how the United States gets pushed into pledges which lead to national disasters, President Nixon will have to decide how badly the United States wants its Air Force and Navy bases in Spain.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, I commend the efforts of my colleague from New York (Mr. LOWENSTEIN) in his perceptive analysis and recommendations regarding lease renewals for American military bases in Spain. As does Mr. LOWENSTEIN, I argue that we should let the leases lapse, but I think this decision should be part of a much larger move toward a positive U.S. foreign policy.

Ideally, foreign policy ought to be determined by Congress and relevant executive agencies. But, as far as I can discern, during recent years most foreign policy has emanated from the Defense Department, with both Congress and executive agencies serving as virtual rubberstamps.

In all too many instances, "national security" has turned into "international hegemony." The United States plays the part of benevolent patron for many regimes; no matter if they are authoritarian, repressive, racist—ruling cliques are favored as long as they retain vestiges of anticommunism. Humanitarian values get brushed aside, only adherence to anticommunism counts.

Given such distortions within foreign policy precepts, it is not surprising that two decades of dictators—the Diems, Kys, Trujillos, Chiangs, Francos—arise and remain smug and secure for so long in countries where needs for massive social, political, and economic change are so evident. Nor is it surprising that eventually we become terribly entangled within these countries' political affairs, with the United States often finding its support with the forces of status quo and oppression. And the results are equally unsurprising: Taiwan, Korea, Lebanon, the Dominican Republic, Cuba, Vietnam, just to name major catastrophes.

The antidote for this inept system of foreign policymaking is not hard to swallow. In simple terms, Congress—at least—must fully reassert itself in foreign policy matters, and a proper balance be established between military and diplomatic.

Congress already has the means to accomplish such a redirection in its use of the legislative appropriations process. Now, a determination to use those means must be undertaken.

A good place to start is in policy regarding our foreign military bases, and congressional disapproval of extending the Spanish leases should be the first step.

Certainly, tactical importance of most—if not all—American military bases outside this country has declined with the rise of our vaunted ICBM force. On strategic grounds, foreign bases tend more to exaggerate tensions than provide protection. Indeed, the Soviet deployment of an ABM system closely followed the mid-1950's decision to ring Russia with a series of nuclear-equipped military bases.

On humanitarian grounds, the vast sums given as lease payments reinforce oppressive governments and thus halt any evolving internal pressures for equitable development.

In economic terms, balance of payments outflows to support bases are considerable, and each dollar expended for such bases means one less dollar for vital social programs both at home and abroad.

The current negotiations with Spain are typical of the situations into which the United States has been forced by maintaining these foreign bases. The Franco government is classic in its application of terror and repression; his recent vacillations are near-farical as a display of a totalitarian who turns on and off periods of "liberalization" to suit his own whim or to improve a "public image" for foreign eyes. No, the case against the Franco government is not hard to make.

But we are fooling ourselves if we terminate our lease agreement with Spain purely on grounds of the "unattractiveness" of that government. Much as I oppose the tenets of the Franco government, I feel stronger that we could just as easily scratch out the name "Spain" and fill in its place any one of a dozen other countries or leaders. And even in those cases I do not advocate pulling our bases out because we are backing a bad regime. That, of course, is a factor, but it is not my major objection.

As long as the militarists hold reign in foreign policymaking, the proclivity for planting "American enclaves" all over the world will persist. And as long as these enclaves remain, I can foresee no end to the spate of flare-ups which trouble us year in and year out. An American "presence" is virtually imperialistic in its significance; and it is this imperialism of power, this aura of political and military greatness which above all must be halted.

We know America is not attempting to conquer the world. No rational person can argue that we should try to make the rest of the world into carbon-copy American strongholds. Yet, to foreigners who see our far-flung military bases stacked with their awe-inspiring arsenals of destruction, the thought of America as world policeman must occur often.

And it is this image of America, this view so pleasing to the militarists, that must be changed. My view of America is different; it is one of a nation still confronted with an unfinished revolution, a revolution so impressive that all the strength of the military-industrial-political-educational complex cannot stave it off, a revolution based on providing freedom, equity, and justice for all citizens of all lands.

I oppose any and all American military bases abroad because they impede rather than enhance our national security. I favor any measures which can be taken to reduce our foreign military commitments. I urge my colleagues to join me in voting against any further funds for such bases.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. LOWENSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous matter on the subject matter of my special order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MATSUNAGA). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

VIETNAM ROLL OF HONOR

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MATSUNAGA). Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. FINDLEY) is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. FINDLEY. Mr. Speaker, the United States is at a crucial point in Vietnam policy. This week the aggregate number of our men killed by hostile action will surpass Korea. If the toll continues at the present level for another 11 months, it will surpass our losses in World War I. Stalemate is evident on the field of battle, where the best that can be said is that allied forces have kept Hanoi from winning. Stalemate is equally evident at Paris, where only the shape of the conference table has been settled.

These grim facts converge at the White House where the new administration faces the necessity of deciding what to do with the legacy it assumed on inauguration day.

The voluminous transition papers prepared by President Johnson's staff with the aim of providing the new administration with a balanced appraisal of current problems should have included a series of three documents prepared by the Directorate for Statistical Service, Office, Assistant Secretary of Defense—Comptroller.

These documents, captioned "List of Casualties Incurred by U.S. Military Personnel in Connection With the Conflict in Vietnam," list by name and hometown each American killed.

In my view, these names should be called to the attention of the administration and the American people because they establish, as no other arrangement of words can possibly do, the true dimensions of the Vietnam war in total overall terms, as well as the most intimate.

For that reason, I have placed the entire listing in my remarks today, totaling in all 31,379 names.

The publication is thoroughly justified, of course, for another reason. While our combat participation in the war may have been a grievous error from the very beginning—as I firmly believe it was—the men who have died in this mistaken conflict nevertheless deserve every recognition and honor. The fact that misguided national leadership, in which I freely acknowledge my own share of the blame, erred in sending them to war diminished in no way whatever their heroism, made no easier their sacrifice, and lessened not at all the anguish of their relatives.

The names listed are all of those killed by hostile action from the very beginning of the war through the end of January 1969, a few days after President Nixon took the oath of office. The listing therefore constitutes a description of the dilemma which immediately confronted Mr. Nixon and his staff.

The listing is especially appropriate this week because, making adjustment for the Department of Defense's 1-week lag in reporting those killed in action, it is clear that Vietnam deaths have now surpassed Korea. Nearly one-third occurred since the "peace offensive" began last March 31.

This fact raises sobering questions:

What advantage to our national interest has been secured by the death of the men listed on the following pages?

Were sacrifices of this magnitude justified by events and issues in Vietnam?

In Korea, by contrast, a like amount of sacrifice left that country with both military and political stability—conditions which exist to this day. In Vietnam, despite our heavy investment, the military situation is so grim that the enemy is able to mount heavy attack across a broad front, even close to Saigon.

Last week I urged President Nixon to make the fundamental decision to withdraw our combat forces, arguing that present circumstances are the best conceivable for the decision and warning that the decision will become increasingly difficult as time goes on.

In my view our involvement was a mistake from the beginning, and the rational corrective action is to withdraw—not to compound the original error by staying there.

Questions that inevitably will be asked are: Would withdrawal dishonor those who have died? Would it be a camouflaged surrender unworthy of our Nation?

Perhaps the best answer is another question: Will additional casualties alone rectify mistaken war policy?

If the premise is accepted—as I believe it must—that our military policies have been based on false assumptions all along, then the best way to honor the war dead is to take steps to assure that the casualty lists stop growing.

To waste additional lives simply because of previous deaths is rationalization so warped as to dishonor every noble sentiment attached to the name America.

To justify more casualties primarily through appeals to national vanity is to distort our greatest tradition, under which the interests of the state are always considered subordinate to those of the individual citizen.

Every parent of a war casualty with whom I have talked has expressed the fervent hope that the loss of American lives will quickly stop.

I am glad to yield to my good colleague and friend, TIM LEE CARTER, and before doing so, to take note of his wisdom, so often expressed over the past 2 or 3 years, in which he has been in the forefront of those who have, I believe, courageously questioned the wisdom of our war policies. I came to his view at a relatively late date, and I am glad to salute my "leader."

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I think that the years our men have spent in Vietnam, the lives we have lost there, the thousands of wounded, and the billions of dollars we have blown away are mute testimony to the fact that we have made the greatest military mistake in the history of the United States. I regret this is true. I have always supported the men who are in Vietnam, and certainly I shall continue to support them, as has the distinguished gentleman in the well. I have supported the GI bill of rights. I was the first Member to introduce the GI insurance bill. I have supported everything which would be helpful to the men. However, I feel that in their conception, the ideas for having our men in Vietnam were wrong. And, remember, we must recall when this was started. It was not in 1963 or 1964. This was first escalated in 1961 when 17,000 men were first placed over there. Later, in 1964, about the time of the Tonkin Bay resolution, we were told that our vessels, the destroyers, Maddox and the C. Turner Joy were under attack by North Vietnamese vessels. Hearings in the Senate have shown beyond doubt the commanders of those vessels today know not whether they were attacked or not, and will not state whether they were attacked at that time.

Mr. Speaker, it would be as if we were attacked by a fleet of ships from Mexico, if we were at war with Mexico. Suppose that was the case, and two Argentine vessels happened to be among the group attacking us with vessels at war. Actually, if they attacked our coasts, they would be fair game. If we had two destroyers with the South Vietnamese vessels that were attacking North Vietnam in 1964, then I submit, Mr. Speaker, that shots at them would have been justified. North Vietnam had as much right to fire at them as we would have to fire at vessels accompanying the people at war with us. I was not a Member at that time, but the House took the distorted information it had, and committed thousands and thousands of troops to South Vietnam, with the effect which we have had today. And still we are in this ceaseless, tireless war where our men are mangled and mutilated, and in which 33,000 have now been killed, over 200,000 have been wounded, and $100 billion has been blown away.

To what effect? To what avail? We are still entangled in this "green hell" of Vietnam, in this morass. I regret, Mr. Speaker, that this is true. Certainly for 2 years, in 1965 and 1966, I tried to go along with what we call the loyal opposition. At that time it seemed that they were making quite an effort to do something in the war.

But after two visits to South Vietnam, one in 1965 and one in 1966, it became evident we were not winning. On the second visit, I saw villages which supposedly had been pacified which had fallen back into the hands of the enemy.

After seeing these things, it became apparent that actually during those 2 years of 1965 and 1966, we had not made the valiant effort to win which we should have. Up until that time I had said we should get in with all we have got and win it and get it over with and get out. But we did not do that. It was sort of a tit for tat, in which we would retaliate only with light counterattacks. The result has been the continued loss of life and our continued desperate involvement in Vietnam.

Certainly I do not want to be critical of anyone or of the present administration. I would hope and pray our President will continue in his efforts to get peace for this country and to bring the finest young men of the United States back home where they can live peacefully and pursue their lives as they did previous to this terrible engagement.

This war, Mr. Speaker, has not been fair at all to the manhood of America. The underprivileged youngsters, the ones who have not gone to college, are the ones who have borne the brunt of the war. They are the ones who have been subject to the draft. I regret this is true. Those who were affluent, those who were able to go to college, those who were able to get into the National Guard and the Reserve have been spared.

I feel certainly, if I may digress a moment, that our draft laws should be improved so our youngsters would be held liable for draft for a shorter period of time than they are now and if possible a volunteer army should be instituted.

Again, I certainly thank the gentleman in the well for yielding to me. Without doubt, he is one of the great thinkers in this House and one who has the courage of his convictions. I fondly hope and fervently pray that our present administration will be able to get us out of the morass in Vietnam which threatens to get us into other wars in Laos and Thailand and perhaps Burma and Malaysia and Indonesia.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman.

Mr. FINDLEY. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate very much the fine contribution of the gentleman from Kentucky.

I am sure I speak for my friend, the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. CARTER), as well as for myself in stating that we have nothing but compassion for the President and his staff as they wrestle with this very vexing problem. It is not easy to admit a mistake, whether the entity involved is a person or a nation. It is a mark of greatness when the grievous error does come to light to face it squarely and correct the error.

That is precisely the problem which lies at hand. It is not easy for the President of the United States, even though the problem he confronts is one that was inherited, for him to take a step to correct this error. But it is also fair to say, I believe, that the longer this fundamental decision is put off, the more difficult it becomes. That is why, in a spirit of compassion and good will and a desire to be helpful in the appraisal of various forces and various elements that must necessarily go into a decisionmaking process at the White House, that I hope this will be a worthwhile contribution.

Mr. Speaker, here is the roll of honor, consisting almost entirely of men between 19 and 24 years of age. It presents the precise width, breadth, and depth of the war Mr. Nixon has inherited:

FCC'S PROPOSED BAN ON CIGARETTE ADVERTISING IS DISCRIMINATORY AND USURPS CONGRESSIONAL AUTHORITY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. TALCOTT) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. TALCOTT. Mr. Speaker, on February 5, 1969, the Federal Communications Commission—FCC—issued a notice of proposed rulemaking, amending part 72 of the FCC rules, to the effect that the FCC was banning all cigarette advertising on radio and television unless the Congress vetoed the order before June 30, 1969.

I object.

I object not because I come from a tobacco producing or processing district, because I do not.

I object not because I own any interest in any radio, television, advertising agency, or tobacco-related business, because I do not.

I object not because I believe cigarette smoking is in any way beneficial to one's health, ego, or well-being, because I do not.

I object for two reasons which are basic and fundamental to our system of government—the proposed ban is discriminatory and usurps congressional authority.

My credentials for objecting will measure up to any other Member. For years I have worked in many ways to dissuade youngsters from starting to smoke before they know the consequences. I opposed the cigarette package labeling law because it was weak. I have urged the networks to voluntarily restrict cigarette advertising during daytime youth programs and sporting events, and am disappointed with their response. I have worked with the American Cancer Society to obtain more anti-smoking advertising on the electronic media. I believe that cigarette smoking is dangerous to one's health—it can and does cause death and agony.

I believe young people become hooked by smoking even though tobacco may not be technically addictive, and that radio and television advertising induces some teenagers and preteenagers to start smoking before they are able to make a responsible judgment. I believe cigarette smoking shortens more lives, causes more misery and suffering, wastes more money, and is responsible for more property damage than all nonmilitary guns, which have been the object of considerable recent congressional attention. Cigarette smoking also contributes significantly to the air pollution of public transportation and accommodations, and to the litter of our public places.

In brief, I oppose cigarette smoking for a myriad of sound reasons.

It is the responsibility and the prerogative of the Congress to initiate and enact any legislation which regulates interstate advertising. The Congress did not and should not delegate this power to any independent agency of the Federal Government. The Congress has given the FCC the authority to regulate "interstate and foreign commerce in communications." This power includes authority to issue radio and television licenses and to regulate those licensees—but it does not include the authority to set moral or social standards and then restrict truthful, balanced advertising of a perfectly legal product. By this order the FCC has spent considerable time and effort to arrogate to itself a constitutional function of the Congress.

The FCC notice of proposed rulemaking is discriminatory. It will prohibit cigarette advertising on radio and television, but this is only a part of total cigarette advertising. Interstate cigarette advertising will still be permitted in newspapers, magazines, and by direct mail.

This discriminatory factor emphasizes the basic error of the FCC order. No single independent agency should be permitted to enact a law which proscribes for only a portion of a particular industry. If cigarette advertising is deemed to be illegal, it should be banned in all media.

I oppose the FCC order because the law-making responsibility of the Congress should not be usurped by an independent agency. Congress should not mutely stand by while an independent agency arrogates to itself a legislative function.

The FCC order is discriminatory, and Congress should intervene to obviate this unfair discrimination.

Mr. Speaker, I urge that the Congress consider the whole subject of cigarette advertising, vitiate the FCC order, and enact whatever legislation is deemed necessary.

THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST-PACIFIC SOUTHWEST INTERDEPENDENCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. HOSMER) is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. HOSMER. Mr. Speaker, despite some opinion differences which might exist between the Pacific Northwest and the Southwest States over water matters, we have always taken it for granted that the two regions had some very basic, and important, common interests.

Now we no longer have to depend on mere assumptions. A new, comprehensive study, entitled "Economic Interdependence of the Western States," has been made public and it clearly, forcefully portrays what we have long thought: that the economic ties between the four great States of the Northwest—Washington, Oregon, Idaho, and Montana—and the seven States of the Colorado River Basin—Arizona, California, Nevada, Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, and Utah—are so close and so extensive that it is not only economically smart, but almost necessary, that the 11 States consider themselves as a single economic unit.

Whether or not the two regions ever decide upon any transbasin transfer of surplus water, this study will serve as a meaningful basis for future interregional relationships. It should be read and digested not only by the Members from the 11 States involved but by all Members with problems similar to ours and those interested in the strong economic dependence between specific regions vis-a-vis neighboring areas and the U.S. economy as a whole.

This report was prepared by an outstanding Los Angeles economist, Wilbur McCann, for the Colorado River Association, a citizens organization concerned with the water supply of the Colorado River and how it affects the six major agencies in southern California which rely on the river for about 80 percent of their total water needs. The report was unveiled March 24 at a meeting of the Portland (Oreg.) Chamber of Commerce by Philip F. Walsh, vice president for economic development for the Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce.

I request permission to have the whole of Mr. Walsh's fine speech inserted with my remarks, but I would also like to quote some pertinent passages from it.

Quoting some of the report's conclusions, Mr. Walsh points out that "the West has long played an important part in the economic development of the United States and its role in the future will become even more vital. The long-range growth and economic health of this Nation will be increasingly affected by what happens in the West."

The report proves, he noted, that "virtually every part of the West has an economic interest in every other major geographic segment of the country. This community of interest stems from the flow of goods and services between points within the West in both directions, with the receiving areas benefiting from this interchange as well as the shipping or originating areas."

These are just a few examples of the North-to-South commerce:

The four States of the Northwest—Washington, Oregon, Idaho, and Montana—sell the 25 million people in the Southwest everything from apples to insurance—and in vast quantities. About one-third of the tonnage of all commodities shipped by rail out of this region goes to the Southwest. More than one-fourth of the Northwest's total lumber production—most of it in Oregon—is shipped to the Southwest. Manufacturers in Seattle and vicinity ship more than one million tons of goods yearly to the Southwest.

The Los Angeles area alone buys more Washington apples than Chicago, New York and Detroit combined; more than a half million bushels of Oregon apples go to just California each year by truck. The Northwest, principally Idaho, supplies around 30 per cent of all the butter shipped into the Los Angeles market. Idaho and Oregon ship more than 300 million pounds of potatoes a year to four city markets—Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver and Salt Lake City. The shipments of Oregon potatoes to these four cities constitute more than half of the total shipments to 41 cities throughout the nation. Los Angeles is also the most important market for dry onions from Oregon.

Considering air travel, nearly 50 per cent of the passengers at Seattle-Tacoma airport are either going to or coming from points in the Southwest. The pattern is similar at the Portland airport and others up here.

To turn to another area, the 12 insurance companies headquartered in the state of Washington do more than 30 per cent of their business in California alone.

The findings which I have just cited, a mere fraction of the eye-opening data contained in the McCann report, certainly give substance to the conclusion that "in problems affecting the economic development of major portions of the West, it is logical to consider the West as a whole because of the extensive and real interdependence involved. The West also justifies a regional approach to its problems on the basis of its size and importance. If the West were a separate country, it would rank fifth in area and 16th in production among the 140 nations of the world."

Here is the text of Mr. Walsh's speech:

NORTHWEST AND SOUTHWEST—ECONOMIC PARTNERS

It is a pleasure to be with you here today on behalf of the Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce. I am also here in a very real sense on behalf of the entire Pacific Southwest which in the context of my talk means the seven states of the Colorado River Basin, namely, Arizona, California, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming.

I might begin by saying how greatly impressed I was by the sight of the mighty Columbia River as our plane came in to your airport late yesterday afternoon. The thought flashed suddenly into my mind why no one in California or elsewhere in the arid Southwest has ever considered investigating whether some of that majestic flow of water might be surplus to your needs up here.

Seriously, the Southwest believes as strongly as ever that this question should be studied fairly and carefully. The subject of my talk today is not water but, as a former chairman of the water and power committee of the L.A. chamber, I must say that water shortages will inevitably occur in the Southwest unless more water is brought into the Colorado River Basin. Desalting of ocean water, whether modification, reclamation of waste water, more efficient use of existing supplies—all these will play an increasingly important part in meeting future needs.

However, we in the Southwest are convinced that large-scale importation of water from some other basin will also be necessary and that it is shortsighted not to include a study of the Columbia in any overall assessment of how best to solve this far-reaching problem. And when I say shortsighted I mean from the standpoint of the Northwest as well because of the innumerable and strong economic links between the two regions. If an impartial, objective study proves there are really surplus waters in the Columbia, the exportation of some of that surplus to the Southwest might prove to be the wisest economic investment the people of the Pacific Northwest ever make.

Now, the study of another sort which I will discuss today—it is entitled "The Economic Inter-dependence of the Western States"—may turn out to be only a historical footnote for, as you may have heard up here, an interesting assortment of telepaths, astrologers, cultists and kooks are predicting doom for much of California very shortly. A devastating earthquake will split off the coastal areas of the state and Los Angeles and San Francisco will plop neatly into the ocean. San Francisco and Los Angeles will finally have something in common. This is all going to happen at noon on April 4 which also happens to be Good Friday—but apparently not for California. The spirit of free enterprise never flags in Los Angeles and there is already a radio commercial on the air selling residential lots far, far out on the bleak sands of the Colorado Desert. "The beaches are already in," the huckster says, "and the Pacific Ocean will be arriving soon."

However, undaunted by the approach of doomsday, let me go ahead anyway. First, a word of explanation about the origin of this study. It was made for the Colorado River Association, a citizens organization concerned over the water supply of the Colorado River Basin. The study was conducted by Wilbur McCann, an economic consultant of the highest standing. It is being made public today throughout the West simultaneously with my talk here. There will be copies available for you as you leave this meeting. I hope you will take one with you and read it carefully.

Now, we didn't need this report to tell us or you that a lot of food stuffs and manufactured goods come from the Northwest to the Southwest. But the enormous volume and the striking diversity of all this is brought out with sharp impact by the information Mr. McCann assembled from a multitude of authoritative sources and organized into understandable shape. I am a businessman myself and I did not expect to learn too much of value when I opened this booklet. In contrast, I learned a very great deal for I came to realize as I never had before that this great Western part of the United States is so closely interlinked economically that there is no Northwest or Southwest economy—there is just a single, thriving, constantly growing economic unit. And it is time that we all recognize this and work even more closely with one another in seeking answers to common problems and, where we can, helping one another.

Since I first read this study a month or so ago, I've been clipping stories from the newspapers that point up the existence of the closest kind of economic partnership in the West. For example, just a few days ago a 19-million-dollar contract for construction of a tunnel in the Los Angeles area was awarded to Lockheed Shipbuilding and Construction Company of Seattle. Proving you are not against all our water planning the tunnel will be part of the distribution system for the water that the State of California is bringing 450 miles down from Northern California. And your Governor Tom McCall held a press conference in Los Angeles to invite California business and industry to expand their activities into Oregon. And I read where some of the charming specimens of young America from the Haight-Ashbury district of San Francisco were flocking north to establish a hippy colony north of Seattle—not far enough north, you'll say. And I read an editorial about how the Pacific Northwest Power Intertie with the Southwest has lessened the chances of either of the areas suffering from a blackout as well as providing direct economic benefits to each region.

As a matter of fact, the Pacific Northwest-Southwest intertie deserves some special comment here today. It is an excellent working example of how these two great regions can cooperate to mutual advantage. You have vast power resources and we have vast power needs. A group of public and private electric utilities in the Southwest have agreed to buy from the Bonneville Power Administration surplus peaking capacity and surplus energy. The intertie system is a two-way street which also gives the Northwest the right to buy excess Southwest energy. The ability to transmit power in both directions increases the flexibility and reliability of operation of electric power systems throughout the West.

This was dramatically demonstrated last December when a construction crane working at the Grand Coulee power plant of the Bonneville system accidentally contacted power lines carrying one million kilowatts of electrical energy. The interconnected utilities in California were able to absorb this "bump" without incident, avoiding what might have been a major power blackout. A week later the California utilities again were of major assistance to the Northwest. Severe winter storms and the temporary loss of generation at the Bonneville Hanford nuclear power plant made it necessary for the Northwest to call on California utilities for assistance through the intertie network.

The capability of existing 500,000-volt intertie transmission lines to handle emergency deliveries of power under extreme conditions, as I have described, will be beefed up substantially when the 750,000-volt direct current line being built by the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power to provide another major power link with the Bonneville area is completed late this year. While this 105-million-dollar project was conceived primarily to bring an important new power resource to the Los Angeles area, it may prove of critical importance to the Northwest again if emergency conditions should require.

These operational considerations, important as they are, are fringe benefits to the basic financial fact that the purchase of surplus power through the intertie network is expected to increase net income of the Bonneville Power Authority by as much as 20 million dollars annually on a long-term basis. This proves how mutually beneficial regional cooperation can be.

But now let me tick off a few statistical highlights of this economic study of the inter-dependence of the Western States. . . .

The four states of the Northwest—Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana—sell the 25 million people in the Southwest everything from apples to insurance—and in vast quantities. About one-third of the tonnage of all commodities shipped by rail out of this region goes to the Southwest. More than one-fourth of the Northwest's total lumber production—most of it in Oregon—is shipped to the Southwest. Manufacturers in Seattle and vicinity ship more than one million tons of goods yearly to the Southwest.

The Los Angeles area alone buys more Washington apples than Chicago, New York and Detroit combined; more than a half-million bushels of Oregon apples go to just California each year by truck. The Northwest, principally Idaho, supplies around 30 per cent of all the butter shipped into the Los Angeles market. Idaho and Oregon ship more than 300 million pounds of potatoes a year to four city markets—Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver and Salt Lake City. The shipments of Oregon potatoes to these four cities constitute more than half of the total shipments to 41 cities throughout the nation. Los Angeles is also the most important market for dry onions from Oregon.

Considering air travel, nearly 50 per cent of the passengers at Seattle-Tacoma airport are either going to or coming from points in the Southwest. The pattern is similar at the Portland airport and others up here.

To turn to another area, the 12 insurance companies headquartered in the state of Washington do more than 30 per cent of their business in California alone.

And then there's beer. . . . The Los Angeles-Orange County area with some eight million people is by far the largest beer market in the West and major breweries throughout the country compete intensively in this market. A survey conducted by the marketing research department of the Los Angeles Times showed that one of the two most popular brands in the area is Olympia, a product of the Olympia Brewing Company near Tacoma. And as the Olympia ads in the magazines say, "All beers are over 90 per cent water . . . that's why we brew ours at Tumwater." What better proof do you need that you really aren't basically against letting us have some of your water?

A few more examples of Oregon's exports for the latest year records were available—and these cover shipments only to California. . . . 223,000 beef cattle and calves . . . 162,000 sheep and lambs . . . 23,000 tons of barley, oats, wheat and other grains.

I could go on at great length with more examples that abound in the report demonstrating how much business and industry and agriculture up here look to the Southwest for their markets, but they are there in the report for you to read yourself. Let me instead give you some of the general conclusions reached by Mr. McCann on the basis of the statistics he collected.

First, the West has long played an important part in the economic development of the United States and its role in the future will become even more vital. The long-range growth and economic health of this nation will be increasingly affected by what happens in the West. Based on Census Bureau projections, the 11 Western states will account for 25 per cent of the net population growth in the United States as a whole between now and 1985. In other words, a fourth of the nation's total growth will be concentrated in the West in the immediate years ahead. The West will also be responsible for a fourth or more of many other aspects of national growth.

Second, virtually every part of the West has an economic interest in every other major geographic segment of this part of the country. This community of interest stems from the flow of goods and services between points within the West in both directions, with the receiving areas benefiting from this interchange as well as the shipping or originating areas. In problems affecting the economic development of major portions of the West, it is logical to consider the West as a whole because of the extensive and real inter-dependences involved. The West also justifies a regional approach to its problems on the basis of its size and importance. If the West were a separate country, it would rank 5th in area and 16th in production among the 140 nations of the world.

And the last of the conclusions of this study. . . . As transportation and communication methods continue to improve, the degree of economic inter-dependence in the West will increase. Modern means of transport brought the West closer to distant markets (world and national) at the same time telescoping the West into a more compact viable economic unit. Forces are at work which will continue this trend and bring the West even closer together. The West will become more diversified and specialized, depending to an ever greater extent on the exchange of goods and services between its various geographic areas. It is obvious to even the casual observer that this trend is under way in countless ways.

And in concluding let me add a few more words of my own. I believe this economic study—which as far as we know is the first one to bring together a wealth of material of this kind—should be an invaluable tool in unifying the leaders in all the Western states on countless important programs. Perhaps it will help those of us in the Southwest to solve our long-range water problems by suggesting to you that their solution may be just as much in your fundamental interest as in ours. I can tell you that the Board of Directors of the Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce looks forward to an even friendlier and more productive relationship with the Portland chamber than we have enjoyed in the past. If the West is in truth a single economic unit—and can there be any doubt remaining that this is the fact—it is urgently necessary that we help each other in all ways that we can find.

THE 51ST ANNIVERSARY OF BYELORUSSIAN PROCLAMATION OF INDEPENDENCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. GERALD R. FORD) is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. GERALD R. FORD. Mr. Speaker, today marks the 51st anniversary of the day when the Byelorussian people proudly proclaimed their independence only to be overwhelmed by Bolshevik invaders. Today, lovers of freedom among the Byelorussians just as proudly proclaim that the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic established in place of independent Byelorussia is simply an administrative arm of the Soviet Union and does not truly represent the Byelorussian people. I firmly and fervently believe in the right of national self-determination. Mr. Speaker. The only government worthy of the name is that which governs by consent of the governed. Let it be noted here and now that there has never been a free election in Byelorussia during the 51 years since it first was absorbed into the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. In their dedication to truth and freedom, Americans salute freedom-loving Byelorussians here and throughout the world on this the 51st anniversary of their independence day. We share with them the hope that one day they will realize their national aspirations and retrieve the rights which are properly theirs.

SPECIAL ORDER TRANSFERRED

Mr. HANSEN of Idaho, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the special order heretofore granted to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. PELY) for March 26, 1969, be transferred to Thursday, March 27, 1969.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

THE UNITED NATIONS' 1972 CONFERENCE ON THE HUMAN ENVIRONMENT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. REUSS) is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. REUSS. Mr. Speaker, the continuing deterioration of our environment has reached crisis proportions. If this many-faceted worldwide problem is not attacked quickly and effectively, the results will surely be catastrophic.

An important step toward the restoration of a healthy environment was taken on December 3, 1968, when the United Nations General Assembly unanimously agreed to hold a U.N. Conference on the Human Environment in 1972.

Many of us have become increasingly alarmed by the steady growth of environmental contamination. I have seen it in my home State and in other Great Lakes States. I have seen it in many other parts of our country. And I have seen it abroad. Man's activities are largely responsible for the deterioration of our air, water, and land, and the degradation of the living things on our planet. It is man's responsibility to find the cure.

For this reason I am heartened by the U.N.'s action. I am sure that millions of persons throughout the world who have become increasingly concerned with both the urgency and the magnitude of this problem share my hope that this conference will help to protect and improve man's environment.

The 1972 conference will study the accelerating impairment of the quality of the human environment caused by air and water pollution, erosion and other forms of soil deterioration, waste, noise, and secondary effects of biocides, which are hastened by rapidly increasing population and urbanization.

Although the conference agenda has not yet been established, it is likely to emphasize such questions as what man, by himself and through the U.N. and other international organizations, can do about air and water pollution; the adverse effects of pesticides, fertilizers and other chemicals entering the environment; radioactive wastes; oil spills from tankers; the rising carbon dioxide content of the earth's atmosphere; noise pollution; the continuing crowding of people into urban areas; and the physical and psychological effects of uncontrolled urban growth.

I am particularly pleased that the conferees will also consider the question of how to deal most effectively with the world's disappearing plant and animal species. In the 88th Congress, I introduced a resolution, House Concurrent Resolution 107, which I reintroduced in the 89th Congress, House Concurrent Resolution 1032, calling on the United States to "take all necessary steps to convene an international governmental conference on the conservation of wildlife, after consultation with, and if possible, under the sponsorship of, the United Nations or its specialized agencies."

On October 7, 1966, I testified in support of House Concurrent Resolution 1032 before the Subcommittee on International Organizations and Movements of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, which thereafter reported it favorably.

In my testimony I underscored the need for a coordinated international effort "to conserve the earth's resources of wildlife." We must have, I stated, "joint action by all of the developed and developing countries, which can only come out of an international conference in order to bring an end to the disastrous poaching of wildlife." I also pointed out that voluntary international conservation organizations—such as the International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources—the IUCN—had taken the lead to save endangered species of wildlife from extinction.

The world's conservation needs far exceed the resources of private organizations. The participation of the governments of the world—their expertise, technical help, information, experience, and financial assistance—is required to keep the great benefits of conservation and to avert the loss of world assets that are literally priceless.

The IUCN recently reported—almost 2½ years after the hearings on House Congressional Resolution 1032—that "mammals alone are disappearing at a rate of one species per year," and that "the ranks of 250 mammals are dwindling so fast that they may become extinct at any moment—in a year or in a decade."

The conference participants will face both an enormous task and an enormous challenge. To the assembled member governments, natural and social scientists, educators, businessmen, engineers, and other leaders, will fall not only the job of discussing the problems and making the decisions, but also the task of recommending the action that is needed to attain and preserve a healthy environment for all mankind and living things.

In the meantime, we in America must intensify our efforts to control, and eventually to prevent, the pervasive contamination of the environment. For no one is immune from the ravages of this man-made destruction.

MIAMI, FLA., YOUTH HOLD SUCCESSFUL RALLY FOR DECENCY

(Mr. FASCELL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Speaker, national attention was focused on Miami, Fla., this past Sunday as some 30,000 teenage citizens, celebrities, and others gathered in the Orange Bowl for the Miami Teenage Rally for Decency.

This outstanding demonstration of the basic goodness of the overwhelming majority of our youngsters came about in spontaneous reaction to the recent appearance of a music group whose lead singer was subsequently charged with indecent exposure. That "performance" outraged most Miamians, but it was the teenagers themselves who took the lead in arranging the "down with obscenity" rally to counteract the adverse picture which that event created.

Miami's teenagers wanted the world to know that they were not sitting idly by while such a group smeared the reputation of the entire youthful community. And the world turned its eyes to their message as 30,000 "stood up to be counted" on the side of decency in all aspects of life.

I heartily applaud the Teenage Rally for Decency. It is a stirring and patriotic reminder of the basic creed of all Americans—and of the spiritual and moral values that have made this country great. I devoutly hope that it will help lead to a revitalization of the wholesome national spirit of our heritage, as millions of other proud Americans also "stand up" for decency.

With the fine example set by the teenagers of Miami, I hope and believe that other youngsters throughout this fine land will realize the need for each of us to contribute his part to the goal. By uniting in purpose and spirit, our citizens can restore the high standards of decency and righteousness that have served us so well during our history.

Among the many news media covering the rally was the Miami Herald. For the benefit of my colleagues, I am happy to include its accounts of the event in the RECORD.

The articles follow:

DECENCY RALLY RATTLES ORANGE BOWL TO RAFTERS

(By Jean Wardlow)

Roaring "rock" and cheering teenagers shook Miami's Orange Bowl stadium to its cantilevered roof and rattled it down to its locker room doors Sunday as a crowd of 30,000 "stood up to be counted" at the Miami Teenage Rally for Decency.

"I want to tell you," said The Great One, Jackie Gleason, to the cheering teens rallying for 'decency' in all areas of life, "that up to now I've told people I'm happy to be a Floridian."

"But now, after what you kids are doing, I want to say I'm proud to be a Floridian." Most of the crowd, which began arriving about 1 p.m. for the pre-show, was teens. They came, in groups or on their own, some displaying hand-lettered signs, "Down With Obscenity," "Mater Center Backs You" and "St. John Bosco Youth Movement Supports You."

There were kids in jeans, kids in sneakers, Kids in minis and Sunday best. Kids in sports shirts and flare pants and kids in tie and jacket. Negro kids, white kids, a few with beards, a few with beads; short kids, tall kids—all clapping in time to the music of some top stars whom they'd seen on TV, heard on records and who were appearing at their rally for free because they believed "in our cause."

Sleepy-eyed Ronnie Smith of The Lettermen was clutching his breakfast-lunch—part of a hot dog and a coke—because the pop singing group had driven all night without sleep after a Saturday night concert in Jacksonville to take part here.

"We wanted to take part to bring back the good will entertainment groups should have and which was lost to some extent by what happened (with The Doors' performance here)," Smith said.

"Man, that's a great audience," said singer Barry Smith, who had had to shed his dapper jacket and mop his brow Sachmo-style because of the hot sun. "I'd like to find out who's their agent," he joked.

"It's tremendous," said a smiling and sunburned priest, Father James Briggs of St. Mary's Cathedral. He was coordinator of the rally which was supported jointly by Protestant, Catholic and Jewish groups, civil and community leaders from all faiths and political areas of Dade.

"It won't stop here," one of the rally's teens said. "This shows we are in the majority. The kids are with us."

(It is estimated that the countywide total of Dade's teenagers is 70,000.)

Father Briggs said the rally "will probably evolve into a countywide group. Gleason, who had been driven in in a 1911 touring car (all celebrities arrived by these special cars) had said, "I believe this kind of movement will snowball across the United States and perhaps even around the world."

Miami Dolphin football star Bob Griese, standing on the sidelines after his appearance, said, looking out at the cheering stadium, "You hear so much on TV programs about the bad teenagers. They're not in the majority at all, and this shows what the fine teenagers are really like. I think it's been a privilege to take part in this."

From the time the youngsters first entered the stadium, the boom of electrified sound shook their eardrums. At first, sitting in seats higher up, many later moved down to sit on the wall in front of box seats to be closer to the action—performers playing from the huge stage at the east end of the field.

The youngsters clapped, waved small U.S. flags given out by the American Legion, or kicked their heels in time to the music.

It was an enthusiastic crowd—"we've had to give out a couple of dozen aspirin—too much excitement," said a nurse at one of the stadium's four emergency nursing stations. But it was an orderly crowd throughout the long program.

At first scheduled for two hours—two and a half with the pre-show—it went to nearly four hours long, with more crowd remaining at the end than at major football games in the stadium.

"This is great. Just great," said a happy Mike Levesque, one of the originators of the rally and who, one friend said, "is so tired he can hardly stand up by now. He says it will be relaxing to just go back to school now."

Mike was presented with a special book from the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge during the program. Singer Anita Bryant made the presentation.

The singer, obviously moved by the event, told the audience, "I had a speech prepared, but now that I see the reaction of what can happen when our young people stand up for what they believe in God and our country, it makes me at a loss for words."

Ted Mack told them, "These young people are out to show the world it isn't about to fall apart."

From the first electrified twang of The Shufflin' Kind, the CYO groups and The Rainbeaux in the pre-show, the crowd was "with" the entertainers, and the five teenage speakers who alternated between acts of the regular rally program.

And the acts showed the kids can be modern without being square or obscene.

First, to wild cheers, came the red-jacketed The Letterman ("Up, Up and Away") and then, to more wild cheers, The Village Stompers in modern Dixieland fashion whose "Washington Square" was a top hit.

There were the lavender minied and rose-colored Edward-jacketed The Faculty, which brought cheering like somebody had just made a touchdown, and The Rhodes Brothers—"the Rhodes," the kids called them—whose nationwide recording of "Never My Love" was a best seller, had a whole stadium singing along ("don't be bashful, chillun, 'cause that's not where it's at").

The acts were hip, hep and high-powered. "It's to show what we like is modern, but modern doesn't have to be obscene," said a rally teen.

By the time the big-act Impact of Brass and Sing Out America had finished their "thing" the teens had surrounded them with requests for autographs and had enough musical memories to fill a recorded scrapbook.

In between, the basic ideals of what the rally stood for on topics of God, patriotism, family, sex, and equality of man, were expressed by Joe Burke, Columbus High; Alan Rosenthal, Miami High; Pat Idlette, Miami High; Juliet James, Westminster Christian; and Mike Levesque.

"The power of Love is found in all people and makes us all brothers," said Joe Burke. "It's up to us to use our powers of democracy," said Alan Rosenthal. "We do not seek to overcome; we seek to unify."

"Sex is being exploited," said Julie James. "We can be both modern and modest. Sex is not a plaything," she said. "It is not giving up the body without giving up a commitment of the total self."

And Mike said that each man "must realize for himself that he cannot just sit back and let the world go by him. He must be a part of the world."

And as the last amplified guitar string faded out over the goalpost, the Rev. Ted Place—the offstage emcee and executive director of the Greater Miami Youth for Christ—lauded the teens "who had the courage and concern to stand here and be counted."

SHOULD DO THIS EVERY 6 MONTHS

(By Larry Mahoney)

Plain old-fashioned Americanism, tinged with a touch of rock, reigned in the Orange Bowl on a euphoric Sunday afternoon dedicated to decency.

This is the way it was:

Legionnaires, whose own wars ended long ago, pass out 20,000 pocket-sized versions of the Stars and Stripes. The Rhodes Brothers give booming renditions of "The Green Berets" and "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." The Freedoms Foundation of Valley Forge presents an award for "moral courage."

Jackie Gleason in an antique 1911 white touring car. Anita Bryant in a 1931 Model T. Ted Mack quoting Patrick Henry. Congressman Claude Pepper, newest member of the old House Un-American Activities Committee, standing at attention for The Star Spangled Banner, a Legion flag over his heart. Near him is Father Sean O'Sullivan, the young priest from County Cork who inspired the rally.

Mayor Chuck Hall, a flag in his breast pocket, likes the scene. "I think we should do it every six months," his honor said. "This is magnificent, isn't it?"

Watching the crowd are 60 off-duty Miami policemen, double the number who staffed the famous exhibition of The Doors at Dinner Key March 1. After the rally was done, Sgt. Ronnie Reeder goes before national network TV cameras to say: "This is the best Orange Bowl crowd I've ever seen; absolutely no hoodlums around. We weren't needed. The officers have decided to donate their day's pay to the rally." That comes to about $20 from each patrolman, $25 for the sergeants.

A sign: "Stay Clean—Swim! the Coral Park High Swim Team."

A Salvation Army banner flutters in the breeze on the other side of the stadium. Some 200 children, largely subteens, are recruited from the stands to march afield with The Miami Herald's giant American flags.

Moral rearmament is represented by Miami's "Up With People" singers, who sang all the old ones such as "Which Way America?" and "The Nicest People I Know Are People."

Hank Meyer, the publicist, beams as Jackie Gleason puts in a plug for Florida before the national TV cameras. Anita Bryant draws an ovation when she mentions her twins: "And they're heavyweights, by the way . . . six pounds, 10½ ounces, and six pounds, three ounces."

Mrs. Annie King James—"just say I'm past 80"—is wearing a feathered hat and a hand-knit sweater with the U.S. flag on one side and "G.O.P." on the other. She was carried into the stadium aboard her special chair.

"Wouldn't have missed it," she said. "I'm interested in better government and what these kids are doing."

Outside, a few pickets parade with signs bearing messages like this: "Jesus Is Coming. This Is The Last Generation." Ken Russell, 17, of Fort Lauderdale, explains: "We're a group of former hippies and drug addicts who're going all the way for Christ." Ken's hair is still long enough to draw unfriendly looks from a squad of policemen.

Inside, Father O'Sullivan, the cherubic Irish priest, is smiling. "The teenagers," he said, "now realize that solidarity is their strength. They will strike when the iron is hot . . ."

BILL TO HALT FLOW OF OBSCENITY

(Mr. FASCELL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Speaker, for years, Members of Congress and other concerned public officials have tried to do something about the multimillion-dollar pornography industry which is flooding the Nation with all forms of smut and filth. My own efforts as a Congressman to halt this flow of obscenity go back to my first term, in the 84th Congress, when I was a member of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. After our committee made an extensive study of distribution of obscene and fraudulent materials through the U.S. postal system, Congress passed legislation authorizing the Postmaster General to impound mail directed to a person or firm known to be distributing such literature. I also backed legislation in the 85th Congress authorizing the detention of such mail, both at point of origin and point of destination. In the next Congress, we strengthened the Post Office's powers to detain these indecent and salacious materials by giving authorities adequate time to prepare criminal charges. Still another strong effort to combat smut was made, the "antipandering" bill, which was passed by the 90th Congress. This allows any postal patron receiving material which he considers objectionable to request the Post Office to order his name expunged from the mailing list.

I wholeheartedly and vigorously supported all of these, and other, attacks on the pornography racket. Yet our mail in congressional offices tells us that still more needs to be done. The people are complaining that unsought smut continues to fill their mailboxes. In 1968 alone, the Post Office Department received more than 165,000 formal complaints from recipients of unsolicited offensive mailings. Citizens also complain about the lurid books, photographs, and magazines sold at newscounters everywhere.

One reason that our past efforts have proved inadequate is the difficulty in winning court approval of antipornography measures. For example, our statute providing criminal penalties for anyone sending obscene materials through the mail has proved difficult or impossible to enforce because the courts have construed the term "obscene" in accordance with the definition formulated by the landmark Supreme Court decision in the 1957 Roth against United States case. That decision said the test of obscenity was "whether, to the average person applying contemporary community standards, the dominant theme of the material takes as a whole appeals to the prurient interest" in a manner so as to be patently offensive. The practical effect of this test has been to open the mails and newsstands to practically any material, including that which many persons would describe as pure hard-core pornography.

The Supreme Court's purpose has been made clear in other cases reviewing and reversing lower court findings of obscenity—it believes that the Constitution's "free speech" clause gives the widest protection to the freedom of adult speech and communication. While seeking to accomplish this goal, however, the Court has, in effect, allowed pornographers to deal injury to a group who are not "average persons"—our children. And it is precisely this group that has been the prime object of the smut peddler's interest.

Investigation of the staggering number of complaints made by citizens against unsolicited obscenity received in the mails has disclosed that most come from parents of school-age children. Indeed, the pattern of unscrupulous publishers and dealers has been known for years: they attempt to "hook" young people on smut at as early an age as possible, then continue to pander to their newly aroused interest as they grow to adulthood. The unconscionable effect of this filthy material on the emotional development of our youngsters is ignored by the smut merchants, who often develop mailing lists of children from responses to innocent advertisements for stamps, model airplane kits, and toys.

Clearly, we cannot allow these callous pornographers-for-profit to continue polluting the minds of our youth. I offer today legislation to provide postal authorities with expanded power to protect school-age children from this traffic in filth.

My bill is similar to legislation, H.R. 2522, which has already been introduced by Mr. CAHILL of New Jersey and other colleagues. It is based on a new approach, one which circumvents the constitutional arguments involving adult freedom of speech by applying safeguards only to children.

My bill would prohibit mail-order sales of obscene materials to persons under 16 years of age. It also would make the unsolicited mailing of hard-core pornography, or offers to sell such material, to a family with children under 16, a Federal crime punishable by fine and jail sentence.

To avoid difficulties in the definition of "obscenity," my bill incorporates specific categories of depictions banned under the legislation. Since the bill does not affect mailings to adults, it also averts this area of judicial conflict; in the past, the Supreme Court has recognized the right of parents to direct the rearing of children in the structure of our society.

In sum, this legislation is centered solely on the protection of our children from the prurient wares of smut peddlers who now flood the mails with their filth in apparent immunity from our best efforts to stop them. I believe that Congress and the courts can accept this as an effective and constitutional approach to the problem which does not limit freedom of speech or expression in the adult world.

HISTORY OF NEGROES IN CONGRESS

(Mr. FASCELL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Speaker, in a time when all of us are trying to eliminate the remaining vestiges of racial discrimination in our Nation, it is instructive to look back into history from time to time, to get a better perspective of the present. In that connection, I am pleased to note that the first Negro claimed membership in the Congress a century ago this year.

An interesting and informative article on the subject of Negro membership in the Congress of the United States was published in a recent edition of Roll Call, the newspaper of Capitol Hill, published in Washington, D.C. As the article points out, it was 100 years ago on February 27, 1869, that John Willis Menard, a Negro from Louisiana, stood up on the floor of the House of Representatives and stated his case for being seated. Another candidate and he both claimed victory in a special election, and although neither was seated, Menard addressed the House in a plea for his seat. The historic event marked the first noteworthy effort to gain Negro representation in Congress—a goal that was achieved 1 year later, in 1870, by Senator Hiram Revels, of Mississippi.

A table accompanying the article lists States which have sent Negroes to Congress, and the number of Negroes who served. For the Senate it lists two from Mississippi and one from Massachusetts. In the House it lists: California, one; Missouri, one; Illinois, three; Michigan, two; Ohio, one; Pennsylvania, one; New York, two; Louisiana, one; Mississippi, one; Alabama, three; Georgia, one; Florida, one; South Carolina, eight; North Carolina, four; and Virginia, one.

The Representative from Florida, Josiah Thomas Walls, served in this body from March 4, 1873, to April 19, 1876, in the 42d and 43d Congresses. Born of very poor parents in Winchester, Frederick County, Va., on December 30, 1842, Mr. Walls had limited opportunity for schooling but because of his determination managed to receive the fundamentals of an education in the common schools of the area.

Moving to Florida at the close of the Civil War, Mr. Walls developed a truck-farming business, and, in addition, joined the various Republican groups operating in the State, to learn as much about politics as he could. In 1868, he was a delegate to the State constitutional convention and, later in the same year, he was elected to the State house of representatives. After 1 year in this body he ran for the State senate and was elected for a 4-year term.

In the election of 1872, he was elected to the 42d Congress. His election to the 43d Congress was contested by Jesse J. Finley, and for nearly a year Mr. Walls fought unsuccessfully for his right to be seated. On being succeeded by Mr. Finley, Mr. Walls resumed his occupation as a truck farmer. He continued to participate in his party organization by playing an important role in determining party nominations. Mr. Walls died in 1905.

The article follows:

A CENTURY AGO THE FIRST NEGRO CAME TO HILL

(By L. Robert Davids)

It was 100 years ago on February 27, 1869 that John Willis Menard, a Negro from Louisiana, stood up on the floor of the House of Representatives and stated his case for being seated. He had run for election to fill an unexpired term in the 40th Congress. Victory was claimed by Menard and by another candidate. Neither was ever seated, although Menard addressed the House in a plea for his seat.

This historic event marked the first noteworthy effort to gain representation in the National Congress. It also launched the first of two sharply contrasting periods of service in Congress for the Negro. The first period ran from 1870 to 1901 and consisted of rather indefinite tenure for 20 Representatives and two Senators. All were Republicans from the Southern States of the old Confederacy.

No member of the colored race served in Congress 1901-28, but service was resumed in 1929 and has grown with gradually increasing numbers to the present time. Representation in this period was from non-Southern States, was primarily Democratic, and resulted in stable and continuing membership.

The groundwork for entry of Negroes into Congress was laid quickly after the Civil War by the adoption of the 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments to the Constitution. The 13th Amendment, adopted in late 1865, formally abolished slavery; the 14th, adopted in 1868, gave Negroes citizenship in the U.S. and in the States where they resided; and the 15th, adopted in 1870, gave Negroes the right to vote.

By the late 1860's, some Negroes had gained seats in the legislatures of various Southern States. It was there that they obtained the little legislative experience they could before competing in elections to the National Congress.

Willis Menard had served only briefly in the Louisiana legislature. Born in Illinois in 1838, he had won an appointment in the Bureau of Emigration in Washington in 1862. This marked the first time that a Negro had held a clerkship in the Federal Government. After the Civil War he went to New Orleans where he served as Inspector of Customs. In 1868, the Representative of the Second Congressional District died, and Menard, 30 years old, decided to run in the special election. The election was held November 3 for the term ending on March 3, 1869. Menard apparently won over Caleb Hunt and was declared elected by the authorities of the reconstructed state.

When Congress assembled in Washington in December 1868, Hunt challenged Menard's claim to the vacant seat. The issue was turned over to the Committee on Elections which wrestled with the matter until it came to the House floor on February 27, 1869. There was lengthy debate over the matter and it was finally decided that both candidates would be given permission to address the House for 15 minutes. Menard, in this historic appearance, made an eloquent but moderate statement of his qualifications, starting off with "I wish it to be well understood before I go any further that in the disposition of this case, I do not expect nor do I ask that there shall be any favor shown me on account of my race or the former condition of that race."

Hunt declined the offer to speak. Eventually the matter was put to a vote. The Representatives voted 137 to 41 not to seat Hunt and 130 to 57 not to seat Menard. There was less than a week left of the 40th Congress, so it was agreed that the two would split the $5,000 salary for time and expenses contesting the seat.

Less than one year later, the Senate was confronted with its first challenge from a Negro candidate. This was Hiram Revels of Mississippi. He was a graduate of Knox College, a gospel preacher in the African Methodist Episcopal Church, and a State Senator. In January 1870, "the nation stood with its mouth wide open" when he was elected to the Senate seat last occupied by Jefferson Davis.

As the first member of his race to enter Congress, he had numerous social hurdles to overcome as well as one legal obstacle. That was the charge that he had not been a citizen the required nine years—dating from 1868 when citizenship was granted Negroes. However, he had the public endorsement of President Grant and, more importantly, he had the strong support of Charles Sumner of Massachusetts, the dominating figure in the Senate at that time. After a long and sometimes bitter debate, he was seated on February 25, 1870, almost a year to the day that Menard was refused his seat.

The next Negro elected to the Senate was Pinckney B. S. Pinchback, of Louisiana. He was Lieutenant Governor and served for a time as Acting Governor in the chaotic days of reconstruction in that State. Pinchback was elected to the Senate for the term beginning March 4, 1873, but there was another claimant and the seat was left vacant for more than three years. During this hiatus, Pinchback, also contested for a House seat, but was turned down. Eventually, his Senate bid was also defeated, although he did receive part of the Senate salary during the long contest.

In 1874, Blanche Bruce of Mississippi had the unusual distinction of being elected, being seated without a contest, and then serving a full six-year term in the Senate. Senate elections then were determined by the State legislatures, and Southern legislatures were never really under Negro control in the Reconstruction period. This was the primary reason that only three Senators were elected and two served during this period.

Only in South Carolina was there a semblance of Negro political dominance, brief as it was. That State sent eight Negroes to Congress, four at one time in 1873-75. Joseph Rainey was the first to serve in the House, taking his seat December 12, 1870; and he served the longest—to 1879.

The only House member from Mississippi was John R. Lynch. He was only 25 and the youngest member when he entered Congress in 1873. He served three terms. In 1884, long before Edward Brooke had a similar distinction, he presided as temporary chairman of the Republican National Convention in Chicago. He died in 1937 at the age of 92, the last survivor of the 43rd Congress and the oldest of all the former Negro members of Congress. He is buried in Arlington National Cemetery, based on his service in the Spanish-American War and 12 years thereafter.

Another Representative who had earlier military experience was Robert Smalls of South Carolina. He served as a riverboat pilot for the Confederates during the first part of the Civil War. However, he ran a blockade and escaped with the vessel to the North. He served with the Union Navy until the end of the conflict, attaining the rank of captain.

The background and capabilities of the first period members of Congress varied greatly. A number of them had been slaves or were from slave families. Some had mixed blood including two who were sons of slave owners. On the other hand, Senator Revels was a freeman of a white mother and a father who was Indian and Negro. When he broke the color line in Congress in 1870, he did it for more than one minority.

John Langston, of Virginia, was that State's only Negro in Congress. His mother was Indian and Negro and his father Caucasian. Graduated from Oberlin College in 1849, he practiced law in Ohio for 13 years. He then became professor of law and later Vice President of Howard University in Washington. In addition to one term in the House, he served 8 years as Minister Resident and Consul General to Haiti.

While there were some Negro legislators who had little education and lacked essential qualifications for their duties, there were others like Langston, who were well educated as freemen in the North. Two early period legislators were born in the North and became in a sense "carpetbaggers."

One of the latter was Robert Brown Elliott, born in Boston in 1842. His parents were from the West Indies and he was educated in Boston, Jamaica, and England, graduating from Eton College. Law was his chosen profession, but after the Civil War, he got into the newspaper business in Charleston, South Carolina. From there he went into Congress 1871-74. A brilliant orator, he frequently tangled in debate with Southern Representatives including Alexander Stephens of Georgia, Vice President of the old Confederacy.

James O'Hara was born in New York City but went South after the war. He represented North Carolina for two terms in the House. He proposed a bill to give Negroes equal rights with whites in Washington restaurants, but the bill was not acted upon. Nevertheless he was rated a good legislator.

He was defeated in 1886 by Furnifold Simmons and for the 1887-89 session of Congress there were no Negroes in Congress. Three came back in the next session, but the times were changing and the Whites were coming back in full control in the South. Finally there was only one left, Rep. George White of North Carolina, who frequently referred to the fact that he represented not just a district in North Carolina but nine million Negroes across the nation. A graduate of Howard University, he was a race-conscious, militant politician and he could see what was happening. He was defeated in the 1900 election and as he neared the completion of his term on January 29, 1901, he spoke with some bitterness but with great feeling and perceptive prophecy:

"This, Mr. Chairman, is perhaps the Negroes' temporary farewell to the American Congress; but let me say, Phoenix-like he will rise up some day and come again. These parting words are in behalf of an outraged, heart-broken, bruised, and bleeding, but God-fearing people, faithful, industrious, loyal people—rising people, full of potential force. . . . The only apology that I have to make for the earnestness with which I have spoken is that I am pleading for the life, the liberty, the future happiness, and manhood suffrage for one-eighth of the entire population of the United States."

The absence lasted somewhat longer than Rep. White anticipated and he passed away in 1918, a full decade before a member of his race was returned to Congress.

With the conservatives once again reigning supreme in the South, there was not a single Negro in the state legislatures by 1902. Laws were legislated and other devices were used which essentially disenfranchised the Negro. These political measures were followed by the resignation of those institutions which had been desegregated during Reconstruction, including state universities and public facilities. The result was mass migration to the Northern states in the period a few years before World War I and some time thereafter.

One example of this migration was Oscar DePriest. He was born in Alabama but moved to Kansas and then to Illinois where he established a painting and decorating business. He was the first Negro elected to the city Council of Chicago and he served as a City Commissioner 1912-22. In 1928 he was elected as a Republican from a predominantly Negro district to the House of Representatives.

Mr. DePriest was the first Negro in Congress in 28 years and as far as social barriers were concerned, it was like starting all over again. Southern Congressmen objected even when Mrs. Hoover invited Mrs. DePriest to the White House for tea. But the new Representative did not shrink from what he considered his primary task to improve the lot of his people. He invaded the South to speak for the anti-lynch law and was taunted by the KKK. In his six years of office, the tall, white-haired legislator appointed several Negroes to the U.S. Military Academy and took numerous other steps to integrate members of his race into American society.

In 1933 Franklin Roosevelt swept into office on the wings of a voter coalition that included numerous minority groups. In 1934 a Negro Democrat challenged DePriest in Illinois First District and defeated him. This was Arthur Mitchell, who also had migrated north from Alabama. Once the office boy for Booker T. Washington at Tuskegee Institute, he received his education at Columbia and Harvard. From his law practice in Chicago he went to Washington as the first Negro Democrat in Congress.

A great supporter of FDR, Mitchell said he wanted "to help this grand President of ours feed the hungry and clothe the naked and provide work for the idle of every race and creed." He declared "the Negro is in this country to stay. We have to live side by side and learn to dwell together in peace."

Mitchell, who died less than a year ago, served until his retirement in 1943. He was succeeded by William Dawson in what was becoming a Negro Democratic stronghold in Chicago. But for 16 years it was the only district in the nation sending a Negro to Congress. Finally, in 1945 a second was added in Adam Clayton Powell of New York City. Then, as Negroes continued to flood the urban centers of the North and California, Representatives were sent to Washington from Detroit, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, and a second one from Detroit. All were Democrats.

But then in 1966, there was a happening in Massachusetts that didn't fit the political pattern in any respect. Edward Brooke, a Republican, was elected by popular vote to the Senate from a State that had a minimal Negro population. In 1968 the pattern resumed with Democratic Representatives elected from St. Louis, Cleveland, and a second from New York City. There was a new dimension in the New York situation, however, as Shirley Chisholm became the first female Negro elected to Congress.

The second-period Negro Congressmen experienced unusual political stability in their districts. Over the last quarter century, none lost an election. One, Rep. Powell, was elected (twice) but not seated during the 90th Congress. When he was seated earlier this year, the total number of Negroes in Congress reached ten. Many references have been made that this is the greatest number since Reconstruction days; actually, it is two more than were seated in 1875-77, the high point of the earlier period.

Negroes also are gaining seniority. Rep. Dawson is serving his 27th consecutive year in the House. Nearly 83, he also is the oldest of all members of the present Congress. As Negro voter registration is increased and as urban organization is improved, it is expected that Negro representation in Congress will grow. Fulfillment will not come, however, until there is once again representation from heavily Negro populated areas of the old Confederacy. Then the dream of Willis Menard to enter Congress 100 years ago will be fully realized.

CONSUMER PROTECTION REQUIRES ACTION BY OFFICE OF CONSUMER COUNSEL

(Mr. FASCELL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Speaker, during the past few years, we in the Congress have enacted a number of landmark measures aimed at insuring fair dealing in the American marketplace. The American consumer is now entitled to greater protection against flammable fabrics, to more uniformity in the packaging of foodstuffs, and to increased automobile safety. Soon he will be entitled to full disclosure of the cost of his credit transactions. These examples only highlight recent congressional activities in the interest of consumer protection. In the 91st Congress, additional measures will be taken to strengthen the consumer protection machinery of the Federal Government.

In the executive branch of our Government, there is an office already established, although little known, which holds great promise for what can be done to protect the consumer under existing laws.

That is the Office of Consumer Counsel, within the Department of Justice.

First established in 1968 by President Johnson, the Office of Consumer Counsel has the potential of becoming an important coordinating force in the overall Federal consumer protection program. Currently, more than 30 different Federal agencies are engaged in activities which, in one way or another, affect consumer interest. The need for an active coordinating office to concern itself with this mass of activities is readily apparent, and I believe that the objectives of the Office of Consumer Counsel can well fill that role.

I have therefore written to the Attorney General, requesting his advice on the staffing and functions which he plans to assign to that office.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D.C., March 24, 1969.

HON. JOHN N. MITCHELL,
Attorney General,
Department of Justice,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. ATTORNEY GENERAL: The 90th Congress, as you know, probably surpassed all previous Congresses in its concern for consumer protection. The 91st Congress promises to challenge that record. In keeping with this concern, President Johnson, early in 1968, announced that he had established within the Department of Justice the Office of Consumer Counsel "to work directly under the Attorney General . . . and to serve the consumers of this land."

The potential capabilities of that office to effectuate a more coordinated and effective Federal consumer protection program are great. In a statement to the Federal Trade Commission Hearings on National Consumer Protection on December 4, 1968, former Consumer Counsel Paul G. Bower enunciated some of the goals and functions which that office may serve. These include:

1. Coordinating the consumer protection activities within the Department of Justice including prosecution under the Mail and Wire fraud statutes and security frauds.
2. Coordinating consumer related activities of the Federal agencies and assisting in developing policies for the Executive branch relating to consumer affairs.
3. Representing consumer interests before the Federal regulatory agencies and, when appropriate, in the courts.
4. Developing closer liaison with State and local consumer protection agencies.

I was encouraged by your remarks to the Fordham Law Alumni Association on March 8 wherein you stated that consumer protection is one of the principal priorities of your Department.

As Chairman of the Legal and Monetary Affairs Subcommittee of the House Committee on Government Operations, I am interested in the operations of your Department. I request that you submit to this Subcommittee your comments for the staffing and functions of that office, including plans that you may have for filling the vacancy that now exists in the Office of Consumer Counsel.

Sincerely yours,
DANTE B. FASCELL,
Chairman.

NATIONAL ORGANIZATION FOR WOMEN—NOW—ADOPTS LEGISLATIVE GOALS FOR 1969

(Mr. RYAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. RYAN. Mr. Speaker, at the national conference in Atlanta, Ga., December 7 and 8, 1968, the National Organization for Women—NOW—adopted a comprehensive legislative program for 1969 intended to advance the status of women and enable them to more fully contribute their talent, skills and ideas to the Nation.

NOW is a national civil rights movement, consisting of dedicated men and women who are working to bring women into equal partnership with men in the mainstream of American society.

NOW has described its purpose as follows:

The organization is devoted to the realization of the full human potential of women—who comprise over 51% of our population, but are almost 'invisible' in our industrial leadership, our political life, our national leadership and in the decision-making levels of government where the destiny of our nation is determined.

NOW has members in every State—and also in the Virgin Islands. The officers are: chairman of the board: Dr. Kathryn Clarenbach, University of Wisconsin professor; president: Betty Friedan, New York author—"The Feminine Mystique"—vice presidents: Muriel Fox, New York public relations executive, and Aileen Hernandez, of San Francisco, formerly an EEOC commissioner; secretary: Eliza Paschall, Atlanta civil rights leader; and treasurer: Inka O'Hanrahan, San Francisco biologist.

The proposals were recommended by Jean Faust, coordinator of the national legislative task force. After a discussion meeting with members of the task force from all over the United States, during which the final proposals were drafted, the program was presented to a session of the national conference at which further proposals were added and the final program was adopted.

Cochairmen of the National Legislative Committee for 1969 are Jean Faust—former first president of the New York chapter, currently chairman of the board—and Barbara Ireton, former president of the Washington chapter. Both were also elected members of the national board of directors at the Atlanta conference.

NOW officers and directors will be in Washington on March 29 and 30 for a national board meeting. On Monday, March 31, a legislative conference will be held, to which all Members of Congress have been invited. NOW members are also planning visits to their own legislators and to the chairmen of committees which are considering legislation pertinent to our program.

NOW's eight-point legislative program for 1969 follows:

NOW LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

I. Equal rights amendment:

"Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex." NOW supports this amendment without change.

II. Equal opportunity in education:

(a) There should be no discrimination on the basis of sex in schools that receive federal funds.

(b) Award of scholarship, fellowship and other benefits should be made without regard to sex.

III. Equal opportunity in employment:

(a) Enforcement of Title VII, Civil Rights Act of 1964.

(b) Enforcement of federal contract compliance.

(c) Equal treatment for women in federal training and job opportunity programs, such as OEO, MDTA, and the Vocational Education Act.

(d) Extension of Fair Labor Standards Act and Equal Pay Act to cover all workers.

(e) Child Care Facilities for Working Parents.

(f) Protection of Employment Rights during Maternity. Women should receive maternity leave as a form of social security and/or employee benefit (similar to sick leave or job security because of the draft for men). Women must be ensured the right to return to their jobs within a reasonable time after childbirth, without loss of seniority or other accrued benefits.

IV. Repeal of abortion laws.

V. Review of income tax laws, social security laws, and retirement plans:

(a) Eliminate tax provisions that discriminate against single persons.

(b) Allow deductions for child care, whether or not child may be listed as dependent.

(c) Social security laws should be revised to eliminate discrimination against working wives.

(d) Social security laws should be revised to eliminate discrimination against divorced women.

(e) Retirement and Pension Plans should be revised to eliminate discrimination on the basis of sex.

VI. Identifying and reporting on sex discrimination:

Agencies should be established on all governmental levels to investigate, study and report on sex discrimination in all areas of life. NOW supports the Griffiths bill (HR 837) to broaden the Civil Rights Commission mandate of studying and reporting on discrimination based on race, color, religion or national origin to include sex.

VII. Including women in appointive positions in Government:

There should be legislation to include women on all commissions, boards and other appointive bodies at all governmental levels.

VIII. Nondiscrimination in public accommodations:

"Sex" should be added to Title II of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

SABMIS, THE SOVIETS, AND MARITIME STRENGTH—ADDRESS BY CHARLES F. DUCHEIN, PRESIDENT, NAVY LEAGUE OF THE UNITED STATES

(Mr. BLANTON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, on March 13, 1969, Gen. Charles F. Duchein, U.S. Marine Corps Reserve, and president of the Navy League of the United States, delivered an address to the Military Order of World Wars and the Memphis Council of the Navy League in Memphis, Tenn. I would like to submit the text of this speech in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for the primary purpose of giving recognition to my friend and colleague, WILLIAM R. ANDERSON, former commander of the Nautilus on its historic cruise under the North Pole. The text of this speech gives due tribute to Congressman ANDERSON and his accomplishments to Tennessee, the Nation, and the world. While the entire text may not reflect my complete philosophy, I deem it a great honor to endorse the comments concerning my esteemed colleague.

Mr. Speaker, under unanimous consent, I include a copy of General Duchein's remarks in the RECORD at this point and commend it to our colleagues for their information:

SABMIS, THE SOVIETS AND MARITIME STRENGTH (Address by Charles F. Duchein, president, Navy League of the United States, before the Military Order of World Wars and the Memphis Council of the Navy League, Memphis, Tenn., March 13, 1969)

For my money, Tennessee is a great maritime state, just as America is a great maritime nation and that is why I am particularly pleased to address this joint meeting of the Military Order of World Wars and the Navy League in Memphis tonight.

Almost equidistant from the two great oceans, many of the citizens of your great state may consider the seas to be distant from your daily lives. Not on your life—the Polaris revolution changed all of this—Tennessee, just as California, Florida and Minnesota, now borders on the great ocean of the world. Tennessee has become a center of the world strategic struggle for mastery of the oceans.

All of the great land mass of planet Earth can now be dominated from the sea. The long-range, nuclear-tipped, submarine-based ballistic missile, both American and soon those of the Soviets, has brought us all into the realm of the oceans in a security sense. From an economic standpoint, our direct dependence on the oceans has been the case ever since our early history.

Living as you do on one of the great rivers of the world, the Mississippi, your Memphis friends know precisely what I mean. Hopefully, I can spark your interest in this beautiful "Volunteer State" to the wonders of the world of water in an intellectual sense, that will add depth to the national oceanic educational effort.

We are living in a turbulent world. The turmoil, tension and swift changes that characterize our lives are gradually leading us to the world ocean to seek solutions for our perplexing problems. Unfortunately, we are not moving swiftly enough. Most of our citizens are land bound in their thinking; we tend to be a country of land-conscious citizens. Consequently, there is a critical need for education, particularly oceanic education. An oceanic doctrine, a maritime concept, is the crux of capitalizing on the oceans of the world. But the concept, the doctrine, the policy and the strategy of the seas do not come naturally to most Americans.

Since the Navy League is an educational organization, understandably, I place considerable faith in the knowledge of the oceans. In reorienting our thinking to seaward—to gain the understanding of the importance of an oceanic guide for our policy and program formulation—the defense dialogues must pit the view of the oceans against that of the land. This is the only way to gain balance in the planning process.

I cite Polaris as an example, rather deliberately, not to foster fear in highlighting that Memphis has already become a prime target for nuclear destruction from the sea, but rather to bring geography into the reality of today's modern world. As free world leaders, we had best be realistic about the threats to our future. Seven-tenths of the world is water and more and more this world of water will come into play in international affairs. To capitalize on the oceans, the United States must place priority on the prosperity producing activities of the ocean.

Today there is a great debate in the Congress on the antiballistic missile system Sentinel. The implications of the dialogue are ominous. There are far reaching consequences in the decisions that our Commander-in-Chief, President Nixon, must make. The citizens of Tennessee have a stake in this and I am happy to realize that a Tennessee Congressman has assumed the leadership and is in the forefront—speaking heading a seabased solution.

The strategic importance of the North Pole quite probably was dramatically driven home to many of you friends from Tennessee by this courageous naval pioneer from the "Volunteer State." His dramatic under-the-ice cruise to the North Pole in command of Nautilus provides a heroic page in American history. It paved the way for an achievement of unprecedented strategic strength for the preservation of the Republic. Captain Anderson's historic cruise in a very true sense led to what we now know as the Polaris revolution, giving America a greater sense of security than was attainable when the nation relied preclusively on fixed land-based strategic arms.

Today, Captain Anderson is providing the same kind of enlightenment and determined action in the Congress. He is determined to give even greater defensive strength to the arms of the nation. I speak of Congressman Anderson's stand on Sabmis, the seabased antiballistic missile intercept system. Through his understanding of the oceans to build our strategic strength, he is providing perspective in the ABM debate that has reached a white heat in recent weeks. His congressional leadership on the key issue has provided the Navy League with reinforced resolve in the conduct of its oceanic educational effort. It seems fitting that I pay appropriate tribute to Bill Anderson in his home state of Tennessee during my pleasant Memphis visit, as we discuss the vast opportunities unfolding for the nation through oceanic progress.

For Sabmis is more than a defensive strategic system. It, together with Polaris-Poseidon offensive systems, can provide the operational cornerstone for the new grand strategy of the oceans needed by this nation to protect and preserve the Republic and to prosper economically through increased exploitation of the world ocean. But were it not for his articulate efforts in Congress, the seabased ABM never would have been interjected into this defense dialogue and Sabmis is of singular significance to the nation. I urge that each of you study the Sabmis concept as a means of moving nuclear wars to sea, away from our population centers of America.

Both Polaris-Poseidon and Sabmis are but a start toward reorienting our defenses to seaward. There are many other ways of utilizing the oceans of the world in our interest. The crux is to gain an understanding by the citizens and their representatives in Congress who, unfortunately, are generally land-conscious in their thinking. This is the role of the Navy League.

For example, as the peace talks in Paris move along with no apparent substantive results, and American casualties mount in Viet Nam, we begin to realize the importance of strength in solving our complex military problems in our worldwide confrontation with the Communist world. As I have said on many occasions in my talks around the country, we have never won anything when we dealt with the Communist world from a position of weakness. They are tough and determined realists and they respect only strength.

In Cuba where our strength showed, we won. We backed them down and without firing a shot! We talked with strength. Our will and our determination showed in the naval strength that provided presence and enabled President Kennedy to impose a maritime blockade. This lesson was impressive.

That is why I am encouraged that our President and his new Administration give every evidence of a returning to the harder line to insure that our battlefield victories in Viet Nam will not be lost at the conference table.

This again brings us back to the importance of water in our worldwide actions. We have led with our infantry too long. The sterility of our strategy shows when we bog down in our efforts to defeat half a nation with half a million American men in distant Southeast Asia.

The "Achilles Heel" of this Communist effort is their sea lines of communication. We should know this. Over 98% of the supplies that keep the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese fighting arrive in ships and are unloaded in the Haiphong Harbor complex. Closure of this port complex would bring the Hanoi delegation to the conference table to talk on our terms in very quick order. The Joint Chiefs of Staff understand this. They recommended the closure of Haiphong but they were overridden by those who do not understand the significance of sea lines of communications in supporting any war effort. I pray that unless an acceptable solution in Viet Nam is brought about quickly, the President will place high priority on the closure of Haiphong Harbor to bring this seemingly never-ending war to a successful conclusion promptly.

This oceanic action would be the most positive the United States can take to restore the peace. Had our nation understood the maritime concept better, I am confident that the war would have long since been terminated.

This makes me wonder whether we as a nation realize how dependent we are on the American Merchant Marine from the standpoint of security and also for long-term prosperity.

Over 98% of the beans, bullets and jet fuel is carried to our military forces in Southeast Asia; and the Merchant Marine deserves great credit. But another "hot spot" somewhere else would stretch our ship elastic limit beyond the breaking point. For this reason, watching the Middle East tinder box starting to flare up again is not only a nightmare for our strategic planners, it is a warning to remind us of our global responsibilities and requirements.

Our fast moving 20th Century industry depends increasingly on strategic materials carried from overseas in ships. The burgeoning trade along the sea lanes of the world affords the most inviting possibility for economic growth in our history.

As I see it, the problem boiled down to basics is an educational one. Yes, education—and the aggressive merchandising of the American maritime product. We must take a page out of the bold aerospace industry's promotional book to gain a number one world maritime position.

Speaking of modern methods of merchandising, Jack Gilbride, president of Todd, and a good friend of mine, and I must say one of the most progressive American shipbuilders, is telling the nation through a fine program of educational communications—"you can't walk on $\frac{3}{4}$ of the Earth's surface." How strange that the American people and their government, at this late hour, need such elementary oceanic education; but, unfortunately, they do. No, you can't walk on the water, but there is gold in the oceans of the world—and strength and security. Bold imaginative plans are needed now to tap the oceanic resources.

I watched the Apollo 8 launch at Cape Kennedy; what a marvelous experience! While catching my breath as I stared at the rocket soaring into space, to myself I humbly thanked Stalin, Khrushchev, Brezhnev and Mikoyan. Who launched Apollo 8? I would say, unquestionably, "Sputnik". The Soviets touched a sensitive American nerve—we can't stand a second place position—and that is good. The psychological shock of Sputnik's first spin in space awakened this nation. And Apollo 8, if it did nothing else, showed the tremendous American potential to produce, to create, to think—it showed the strength of our will and our determination and it came at a time when the world was beginning to wonder.

What we need now is some sort of shock treatment; Americans will then demand that we build our national maritime prowess to the strong, modern, competitive position world conditions dictate. Actually, the Russian revolution at sea provides the same competitive challenge. Though hardly as dramatic, the exploding Soviet maritime strength has far more ominous political, economic and military implications.

Focusing on the Red revolution at sea, the central significance of the competitive Merchant Marine stands out. How do we stack up? Four out of five of our merchant ships are of World War II vintage. But not Soviet ships—four out of five of their ships are less than 10 years old. While the Soviet Union builds better than 1,000,000 tons of merchant ships each year, 448 ships this year, for example, we build 48. In point of relative priorities, in 1965 the Soviet government spent more than $600 million on merchant ship construction, in the same year we spent a mere $150 million. Her vigorous ship construction program already has given her 10.4 million tons of merchant shipping and 1400 ships, with a projection of 27 million tons by 1980. Having already passed us by the end of this year, unless the trend is reversed, the Soviets in ship count will knock us out of our fifth place position as a merchant power.

For the past 18 months, I have toured the greater part of this nation and have talked largely about my reaction to the way we have conducted the Viet Nam War in context of global strategy. And I might add, I have been somewhat critical. Had the maritime concept been understood and accepted, Haiphong Harbor many months ago would have been blocked to the Communist ships that have carried the preponderance of arms used against our men in combat. As a consequence, the war would have long since been won or at least we would have talked on our terms, rather than from a pusillanimous position at the peace table confrontation.

What has impressed me most has not been the handling of the war by our political leadership, but the spirit of our American fighting men—the youth of our nation—in the fox holes of this distant battlefield. From the youthful American viewpoint of our forces at sea, there is room for much optimism in the prospect for the oceanic future. Make no mistake, America's destiny is oceanic.

To you friends in Memphis, I propose for your consideration the following five maritime measures to give our oceanic power a preeminent world position.

First, and foremost, the formulation of national maritime policy providing positive incentive to gain a competitive maritime position on the oceans of the world. The new Administration, with a minimum of delay, must provide national policy, undergirded by an oceanic doctrine, to guide our government in the military and Merchant Marine and oceanic programs of a scientific, technological and educational nature. A platform plank provides for such.

Second is strategy. Our nation must orient its national strategy to the oceans of the world, just as the Kremlin has done in recent years. To do so will require the construction of many more naval and merchant ships than we are producing at present.

My third point is, therefore, ship construction. America must go after the merchant marine market by building a minimum of 100 ships a year for at least the next decade.

Fourth, Oceanic Education must be fostered in our school systems to give our youth as good a subject grounding in the seas as they now receive on the land environment. The Sea Grant College program on the college and university level must be pursued with the utmost vigor to mobilize the best minds of this nation—the scientists, the scholars, the student—in the pursuit of oceanic solutions to the pressing problems of state. I know I don't have to remind you that in recent history when great powers lost control of the seas, they lost their greatness. Consider Spain after the defeat of the Armada, France after Trafalgar, Japan after Midway, England after the exhaustion of two wars.

My fifth point is a proposal I have previously made for the establishment of a Maritime Manhattan Project that gives the magnitude impetus to the maritime research programs largely neglected of late. My concept follows along the same lines as the Maritime Manhattan Project that produced the atomic bomb. Its purpose would be to give a sea based profile to the revolutionary technological advances this nation is capable of achieving in our 20th Century. Obviously, I am thinking in terms of the swiftest, most modern, streamlined merchant and naval ships, the kind that can compete and maintain a strategic mastery of the environment of the oceans.

A single sentence sums up my proposal, "The security and prosperity of the United States and its allies depend increasingly on the military, economic and political exploitation of the world oceans." If we pursue this program that I propose with vigor, vision and determination, I am confident that our flag will fly with pride worldwide in recognition of American supremacy of the high seas and our mastery of the world ocean.

The voice of a soft spoken, but articulate, Representative from Tennessee is leading the way for this transformation and we of the Navy League are behind him 100%. I hope you are also, for this nation desperately needs his kind of maritime leadership.

SOUTH-WEST AFRICA

(Mr. RARICK asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. RARICK. Mr. Speaker, the U.N. continues to beat its drums of prejudice and hate against our friend, South Africa by passing some Security Council resolution which "does not commit the Council to the narrow path of mandatory sanction." Possibly the U.N. is only interested in the world community opinion.

Most observers acquainted with the U.N.O.'s propaganda techniques wonder where the sanctions are against Russians being in Czechoslovakia and the British being in Anguilla.

At most, the action by the United Nations can be interpreted as a mop-bucketful of officious intermeddling in a civilized country at peace. And who can disagree with the reply by the South African Government that it would pay no more attention to this resolution than it did to previous mutterings against the peace and security of its people and protectorate?

The United Nations has proved again that it is nothing but an assembly of loud mouths who know they cannot back up their threats unless they have U.S. boys and equipment and U.S. taxpayers money.

Mr. Speaker, I place two news clippings concerning South-West Africa and Art Buchwald's column at this point in the RECORD:

[From the Washington (D.C.) Post,
Mar. 21, 1969]

SOUTHWEST AFRICA RESOLUTION PASSES U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, March 20.—With U.S. support, the U.N. Security Council, called on South Africa today to withdraw immediately from the neighboring territory of South-West Africa.

The 15-nation Council adopted a resolution to that effect 13-0, with two abstentions. Britain and France abstained because they believed the United Nations cannot insure its implementation and it would only encourage false hopes.

It was the first Council action to put into effect the General Assembly's 2½-year-old declaration that South Africa's League of Nations mandate to govern South-West Africa, a former German colony, was terminated.

Before the vote, U.S. Ambassador Charles W. Yost said the United States was able to support the resolution "because it wisely does not commit the Council to the narrow path of mandatory sanctions."

Many black African nations have been demanding at least economic sanctions against South Africa for defying the U.N. declaration. Zambian Ambassador Vernon Johnson Mwaanga, who introduced the resolution, contended it was broad enough to encompass mandatory sanctions.

[From the Washington (D.C.) Post,
Mar. 22, 1969]

SOUTHWEST AFRICA

UNITED NATIONS.—South Africa indicated it would pay no more attention to a U.N. Security Council Resolution Calling for it to withdraw from South-West Africa than it has to a similar demand from the General Assembly.

South Africa holds that the General Assembly acted illegally Oct. 27, 1966, when it declared that South Africa's League of Nations mandate over the big territory had been terminated.

ALL HAIL PLUCKY LITTLE BRITAIN FOR HUMBLING MIGHTY ANGUILLA

(By Art Buchwald)

The only bright spot in the news these days is what has happened in Anguilla. In one of the most amazing reversals in modern military history, tiny, helpless, and, up to now, ineffectual Great Britain defeated the powerful forces of Anguilla and conquered this impregnable island fortress.

Little Britain, playing the role of David, smote the Anguillan Goliath, to the surprise of the experts and the delight of those who are constantly rooting for the underdog.

"No one thought the British could do it," said a London correspondent at the National Press Club bar, where everyone was buying him drinks. "But I believe this proves once and for all Her Majesty's Government can no longer be considered a paper tiger."

The bar rang with cheers. "The Anguillians bit off more than they could chew," someone shouted.

What everyone wanted to know was how the lightly armed British paratroopers and Marines managed to break through the heavy Anguillan defenses, which consisted of one Napoleonic cannon, 12 shotguns, three Ford trucks and 2000 sheep.

"The Anguillians were overconfident," the British correspondent told us. "They thought our troops were afraid of their sheep. But we used their overconfidence to our advantage. We pulled our frigates up, and when the sheep saw them, they scattered. The sheepherders tried to rally the herds, but by this time the sheep were so disorganized they couldn't possibly put up any defense.

"It proves again that a small, tight-knit, well-trained force of paratroopers and Marines can overwhelm a much larger force of sheep if they are determined to do the job."

This was the first military defeat for Anguilla in its history, and there is great soul searching going on now amongst the Anguillan armed forces, which consist of three constables, six deputies and three Red Cross nurses. There will probably be a shake-up in the Anguilla military within the next month.

Anguilla watchers in Washington felt that the consequences of the British invasion would be felt throughout the world.

"Anguilla can no longer be considered a major power," a State Department man at the bar said.

"We have to readjust our thinking vis-a-vis their military potential. If a little country like Great Britain can defeat them, with all the hardware the Anguillians had at their disposal, then we'll have to figure out some other way of defending the Caribbean."

The London correspondent said, "We have always insisted that we could take Anguilla any time we wanted to, but everyone laughed at us. I don't imagine they're laughing anymore. The world must know by now that we just won't allow anyone to trifle with our Empire."

He went on to say that the doves in Britain had argued against the invasion, not because it was immoral but because they didn't think the British military could do the job. But the hawks argued that with a surprise attack they could overwhelm the Anguillians before they could get their pitchforks out of their barns. The hawks, it turned out, were right.

"Now that you've brought Anguilla to her knees," an American correspondent said, "what do you plan to do next?"

"We are a peace loving people," the London correspondent replied. "We intervened in Anguilla only when our interests were threatened. But I think this will serve as a warning that aggression will not go unpunished in any part of the globe."

A member of the English Speaking Union raised his glass. "Today Anguilla—tomorrow the world."

WORLD PEACE: WHO THREATENS IN AFRICA?

(Mr. RARICK asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. RARICK. Mr. Speaker, in Africa who threatens world peace? An established civilized Christian government or a band of Communist guerrillas who seek to impose a puppet Red dictatorship by terrorism?

The situation in South Africa has been trumped up to indicate some pretended threat to world peace—should the civilized leadership not surrender the safety of their people for the benefits of a proven culture to the raw savagery of the Red dictatorship. The facts of life are that the civilized nations in Africa have proven they can protect their people very well and are the most advanced progressive governments on the continent.

The record is clear that any threat to peace in Africa comes from the Communist terrorists—armed, trained, and commanded in the Communist world and supported, strangely enough, by some misguided Americans, including even religious groups.

Mr. Speaker, I think our colleagues will be interested in reviewing the activities in South Africa with reports from both sides of the question, and I place an interview with Dr. Eduardo Mondlane from the War and Peace publication, a chapter from "Blueprint for Conflict," by the American-Africa Affairs Association, and several reports on Africa from American Opinion magazine follow:

ANOTHER "VIETNAM" IN AFRICA?

(NOTE.—The American press has almost totally overlooked the "war of national liberation" in Mozambique—despite the fact that the Frelimo rebels claim control of a fifth of the territory of this big Portuguese African colony. Here is presented an interview with Dr. Eduardo Mondlane, leader of the revolution, followed by comments from the Portuguese government.)

A guerrilla operation, smaller and younger than that of the Viet Cong but operating on the same general principles, has established a firm base in the Portuguese East African colony of Mozambique. It is being led by a Mozambican professor on leave from New York's Syracuse University. Dr. Eduardo Mondlane, who is president of the Mozambique Liberation Front.

The U.S. press appears almost totally unaware of the extent of the rebel activities in Mozambique. It may be that editors are more attuned to the denials of rebel activity coming from Lisbon than from firsthand reports out of Africa.

The most complete recent report on the war came in a series of articles published in late September and early October in Rhodesian newspapers by Lord Kilbracken, of the conservative Evening Standard (London). After traveling with Portuguese patrols, he wrote:

"By military airplane, army lorry and gunboat I have traversed in 10 hard days the whole active battle zone along Lake Malawi, where Portuguese troops are locked in combat with Frelimo (nationalist) guerrillas. . . .

"The scale of fighting in this bitter, unending war has steadily increased since the first minor incidents just a year ago—especially in recent weeks when there has been a strong Frelimo build-up. Today the battle zone stretches some 20 to 40 miles inland along almost all Mozambique's lake shore from the Tanzanian to the Malawi border. In 3,000 terrorized square miles the Portuguese, both civil and military, are now confined to five small isolated garrisons.

"The Frelimo, a Viet Cong in miniature, are a tough and elusive enemy. They generally operate in very small units, often only half a dozen men. I could obtain no estimate of their total strength in Mozambique. They are at home in the jungle and bush, where they live off the country, striking silently by night, withdrawing swiftly into the dense cover if the Portuguese reply in strength. . . .

"I saw much captured equipment—mortars, grenades, machine-guns, high explosives and mines—certainly identified as Chinese- and Russian-made. . . ."

The Frelimo (the name is an acronym from Frente de Libertação de Mozambique) are undertaking their insurrection in a territory somewhat larger than Texas lying east of Rhodesia on the Indian Ocean. On the other side of Africa, in another Portuguese colony, Angola, a separate revolution is older and has been much more widely reported on. However, the Angolan revolt seems to be making less headway now than it was a year or so ago, partly because of the factionalism of its leadership and partly because of the political instability in the Congo, which has been providing sanctuary to the rebels. Frelimo so far has avoided both these problems: Its leadership is more united and Tanzania has offered a stable sanctuary.

Frelimo's leader, Dr. Mondlane, who was born in 1920 in southern Mozambique, took his Ph. D. in sociology at Northwestern University and taught at Syracuse before returning to his country. His headquarters is in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania. His white wife, Janet, who is from Minnesota, now runs the Mozambique Institute in Dar es Salaam, which educates exiles and refugees from Mozambique.

About a year ago, Dr. Mondlane spent a month in the U.S. seeking backing and publicity for his cause, but he encountered principally apathy. A few weeks later, he made a trip to Peking to seek aid from the Chinese—and it was only then that the American press took note of him.

Last month Dr. Mondlane finished another stay in the U.S. His main business was at the United Nations, where he testified before the Fourth Committee (Trusteeship) of the General Assembly. He again sought American backing and notice in the press for his cause—and again he failed.

War/Peace Report arranged a discussion with Dr. Mondlane on Dec. 7, just before his return to Dar es Salaam. In addition to WPR Editor Richard Hudson, participants were Immanuel Wallerstein, associate professor of sociology at Columbia University and author of the book, Africa: the Politics of Independence; Marvin Harris, chairman of the department of anthropology at Columbia University, who lived in Mozambique for a year as a Ford Foundation fellow, and Collin Gonze, publications director of the American Committee on Africa.

The interview, which begins on the next page, is followed by comments on it from the Portuguese Embassy in Washington, D.C.

THE INTERVIEW WITH DR. MONDLANE

HUDSON: Dr. Mondlane, what is going on in Mozambique?

MONDLANE: In Mozambique there is a military action that started in September, 1964, led by the Mozambique Liberation Front to force the Portuguese either to negotiate with us for independence, or to get out of Mozambique. We are fighting the Portuguese government, which uses both the police and an army to maintain its colonial control over our country.

HUDSON: What are conditions like in Mozambique?

MONDLANE: There are about seven million Mozambicans and a hundred thousand Europeans in the country. Economically, the Europeans dominate the commercial, administrative and other structures that exploit the majority of the people, who are predominantly farmers. In addition, several hundred thousand Mozambican migratory laborers work in Mozambique, Rhodesia and South Africa. They work mostly for foreign companies and are controlled by the Portuguese government.

Clearly, the white people enjoy a position of economic and social privilege at the expense of the African people in Mozambique.

GONZE: This new booklet, "Mozambique," published by the Portuguese government, says, "The franchise is the same as in Portugal, i. e., universal adult suffrage, based on being either literate, or a taxpayer or a householder." Is this true?

MONDLANE: The first qualification, literacy, would cut out 95 percent of the African adult population.

GONZE: How about the taxpayer qualification?

MONDLANE: The tax system in the country depends on a certain level of income, which your source conveniently did not indicate. Ninety-eight percent of the African population would be eliminated by this qualification.

GONZE: Take the third one, a householder.

MONDLANE: The Portuguese define family in a strictly European manner, which excludes most Africans from being classified as householders. It is the European, the mulatto and a few assimilados who would be honored with this kind of name.

We discovered, in statistics taken from the March, 1964, elections, that less than two per cent of the population of Mozambique voted, a percentage which exactly equals the percentage of adult Europeans in Mozambique.

From a practical point of view, then, this has no meaning.

HUDSON: How would you compare conditions in Mozambique with those in South Africa?

MONDLANE: The policy of the government of South Africa is quite different from that of the Portuguese in Mozambique. Although we personally disagree with the policy of South Africa, the policy of apartheid is nevertheless an open and honestly-stated policy of separation and discrimination. In Mozambique, the Portuguese government says that there is no discrimination, but practices discrimination anyway.

HUDSON: Is the objective of Frelimo to take over the government?

MONDLANE: Yes. We want the same chance that other African states have had to take over their own governments. We want a democratic government based on majority rule, not a government that controls by fear, as does the present one.

HUDSON: Does this mean independence from Portugal?

MONDLANE: Yes.

HUDSON: And what would happen, in your opinion, to the Portuguese there in the event of majority rule?

MONDLANE: The same thing that happened to the English whites who are settled in Kenya, Tanzania, of many African countries after independence came. They will have the option to be citizens if they wish to be citizens.

Whether or not a person is a natural citizen of Mozambique will depend not on his race, but on whether or not he was born in Mozambique. Portuguese whites who wish to be Mozambicans should participate in our struggle for liberation. After liberation even those who did not participate in our struggle may become citizens providing they did not commit crime against the African people.

HARRIS: To go back to the comparison between Mozambique and South Africa, I do not think that it is widely known that much of the South African labor force consists of migrants from Mozambique, and that this is also true of a considerable portion of the labor force in Rhodesia. Would you comment, Dr. Mondlane, on the reason to this situation, and its prospects for the future?

MONDLANE: There is a historical reason for this situation. There is more than a hundred thousand Mozambican laborers in South Africa. When South Africa was first established a state, even before the Union of South Africa was established, there were no laws to force black men to work for Europeans. But there were never enough Africans who wanted to work in the mines of South Africa. They tried bringing in Chinese, first, and then Indians to work, but both attempts were unsuccessful.

Finally they noticed that there were a large number of Mozambicans who seemed interested in working in South Africa. When the Portuguese also became aware of this, they saw an opportunity to make some money, so they negotiated an agreement with South Africa. South Africa was provided with cheap labor and the Portuguese government could profit from regulating and controlling the labor. For example, the Portuguese would limit the period of time a Mozambican could spend working in South Africa, but it would not limit the number of times he could go back. Since the Portuguese government got a certain amount of money every time a Mozambican laborer went into South Africa, the Portuguese profited. The Portuguese also decided that the worker's family could not travel with him to South Africa, thus always ensuring his return to Mozambique.

Part of the South African commitment in this agreement was to ship goods from the mining-industrial area of the Witwatersrand through Mozambique. As a matter of fact, it stipulated that 50 per cent of the industrial production of that area must go through the port of Lourenco Marques.

HARRIS: How much do the Portuguese get per worker each time he enters?

MONDLANE: It now amounts to six dollars per person. Then, for the first four months, the Portuguese government gets 50 per cent of the man's wages, which is deducted from his salary. During the remainder of the two years he is allowed to spend in South Africa, 50 per cent of his wages go to the Portuguese government, which hands this back to him, without interest, in Portuguese escudos when he returns. This helps to keep the Portuguese coffers well supplied with South African sterling. The whole system is worth millions per year to the Portuguese.

HARRIS: Dr. Mondlane, how can the Portuguese pretend that they wish to avoid establishing a system of apartheid, while Mozambique labor is contributing to the maintenance of the South African economy?

MONDLANE: They only try to tell foreigners that they do not wish to establish apartheid. They know better than to try to tell us that, since they know that we know that apartheid exists.

What they have said to many of us is that the South African racial problem is really due to giving the African population too much education, thus making control over them more difficult. They do not hesitate to tell some of us that they do not intend to educate too many Mozambicans, since the African position must always be that of an inferior.

My wife, Janet, and I spoke with the governor of Mozambique in 1960. He said that it was Portuguese policy not to discriminate and that Africans were to be treated as brothers. He admitted, though, that discrimination existed and that my people were treated very badly. He considered himself to be in the wing of the Portuguese government favoring a change in the policy, but he said, "Realistically, we can't change this; it will be here for years." Now I say that he was dreaming. The Portuguese government can't be there for years, because the Africa of today is not the Africa of his time.

WALLERSTEIN: Under what circumstances do you conceive it possible that the Portuguese will negotiate?

MONDLANE: Possibly after a change of government in Lisbon—meaning the death of Salazar. We might have a new government which would not carry out all these policies, but we do not expect it.

WALLERSTEIN: Would this new government come about without an internal revolution in Portugal? Within the framework of the present regime, might some other man be willing to negotiate?

MONDLANE: No. I think that the death of Salazar would mean an internal revolution in Portugal.

WALLERSTEIN: Could the revolution gain power?

MONDLANE: They might.

WALLERSTEIN: Under what circumstances would they negotiate?

MONDLANE: By seeing realistically that they can't win.

WALLERSTEIN: Would they then have to concede independence?

MONDLANE: Yes, they would have to or we would not talk.

WALLERSTEIN: Would there be discussion about some sort of Portuguese Commonwealth in Africa?

MONDLANE: No. There is no basis for it.

WALLERSTEIN: What argument could they use back home to justify granting independence?

MONDLANE: They would be under pressure back home to let us go, since young Portuguese men are dying in the African colonies.

WALLERSTEIN: Would this, then, be a military victory, or the result of public opinion back home, as well as world opinion?

MONDLANE: Both. Algeria is a good example. There it was a complex of internal opinion, and pressures within France, and the inability of the French army to defeat the liberation movement, which forced de Gaulle to negotiate.

WALLERSTEIN: Why isn't that combination of pressures working in Rhodesia?

MONDLANE: Because the main eye of resistance is not in Britain, but is within Rhodesia. The only point of comparison would be if you asked "Do you expect a white settler government to develop in Mozambique?"

WALLERSTEIN: Do you?

MONDLANE: No. First, the population proportion is extremely in our favor. Second, there is not a white settler government in Mozambique as there is in Rhodesia.

WALLERSTEIN: What is the impact of the present Rhodesian crisis on the Portuguese in Mozambique?

MONDLANE: I'm sure that they are pleased with the success of Ian Smith. He supports the position Portugal maintains.

WALLERSTEIN: Will the Rhodesian crisis be a setback to your struggle in Mozambique?

MONDLANE: Yes, unless the nationalists take direct action.

WALLERSTEIN: What are the prospects, as far as you can see, of the Organization of African Unity getting involved?

MONDLANE: It is possible, but I do not know whether it will. I can say, though, that the Rhodesian nationalists can get support from us if they want it.

HUDSON: How would you describe the ideology of Frelimo?

MONDLANE: Our ideology is independence. We are fighting for freedom, democracy, and majority government in Mozambique. In this ideology, we have been supported by the majority of the members of the United Nations.

To achieve independence, we first approached the Portuguese to negotiate and they refused. We then appealed to world opinion to push Portugal into negotiation, and world opinion has not been successful. This left us with the third alternative, military action, in which we are now engaged.

We need support, and we get most of it from Africa. However, since African states do not produce many weapons, we must seek this material support outside of Africa. If the West won't give it to us, the communists will.

WALLERSTEIN: Do you get any significant aid from the West in any form?

MONDLANE: None, in terms of equipment, although we do get some medical and educational aid, particularly from Scandinavian countries.

We prefer to get our aid, however, from everybody, everywhere. We have no special choice.

HUDSON: Aren't you afraid that if you get help from the communist countries, the U.S. will call your insurgency communist and, therefore, will not support you?

MONDLANE: We don't really care what the Americans think of us. No American has given us any equipment we need for our struggle. It would be ridiculous if we shivered in fear that the United States would call us communist when the only countries willing to give us military assistance are the communist countries.

HARRIS: I would like to make the point here that the mere fact that you have an insurgent movement appears these days to be sufficient for the United States to claim that it is communist-inspired and supported by Peking and Moscow, even when no arms have been supplied. If I were running a revolutionary movement and faced the prospect of being called a communist regardless of whether or not I took arms from Moscow or Peking, I would take the arms, since I would be called communist anyway. We (the U.S.) are suppressing every liberal, revolutionary movement throughout the world as a matter of policy.

MONDLANE: Beyond this, we in Mozambique feel no special obligation to be any more sensitive to the feeling of United States citizens concerning our struggle than we are toward the Chinese, the Russians, or anybody.

HUDSON: Are you asking for help in the United States, and what reaction are you getting?

MONDLANE: We are getting a negative response in the United States, even for educational help. Our educational program in Dar es Salaam was started with a grant from the Ford Foundation, but after the Portuguese yelled "foul," the Ford Foundation withdrew. It is still impossible to get help from foundations or private groups.

HARRIS: You might add that the Portuguese threatened the Ford Company and that the Ford Company then reacted on the Ford Foundation.

MONDLANE: And the Ford Foundation promised the Portuguese that it will never consider giving any aid to educational programs in their colonies without their approval.

HUDSON: Do you have proof of this?

MONDLANE: Yes, it was in the New York Times last year. Many letters of protest were written both to the Ford Foundation and to newspapers by myself and many private citizens in the United States, including the American Committee on Africa, but the Foundation never said "boo."

I have many friends in the United States, individual friends, but they are not people who can afford to finance and equip an army like ours.

WALLERSTEIN: Do you see this war in Mozambique as a short war or a long war?

MONDLANE: It will be a long war because we must force the Portuguese into talking or getting out.

HUDSON: Are you looking for advisers?

MONDLANE: No. We train our people now, ourselves. Originally Algeria helped. The president of Algeria, Houari Boumediene, directed the training of our officers, who now train our soldiers in Mozambique. We train in Mozambique, not in Tanzania, as some think.

WALLERSTEIN: What percentage of the territory is under your control?

MONDLANE: About one-fifth.

WALLERSTEIN: What does it mean when you say it is under your control? Do you mean there are no Portuguese troops there?

MONDLANE: No, it means that the Portuguese army is confined to specific points and the roads are not usable by them. Supplies have to be brought in by air.

WALLERSTEIN: This is near the northern border?

MONDLANE: About 500 miles deep, and we are pushing steadily south. There is political action throughout the country, but the military action has to be more confined at first because of the difficulty of transporting the equipment. Militarily, we must proceed point by point until the war is won.

WALLERSTEIN: Would you care to comment on the support you get from neighboring African countries.

MONDLANE: No, I cannot.

HUDSON: Is your war following the guerrilla war patterns advocated by such guerrilla experts as Che Guevara, Mao Tse-tung and General Vo Nguyen Giap?

MONDLANE: Yes, to the extent that they attempted to develop universal principles of action and, in a sense, made guerrilla war scientific. However, every such war has to be adapted to its particular environment, and so we are adding our own techniques to these principles based on our own experience in Mozambique.

GONZE: Do you have a military commander for Frelimo?

MONDLANE: No, we have a secretary of defense. You see, we work as a team. We have a secretary of defense just as we have a secretary for education and a secretary for social welfare. Each of these secretaries reports to me, and I, in turn, report to the central committee.

HUDSON: What should be American policy toward Frelimo? I would like to hear what you Americans think on this.

GONZE: I don't think there has been a specific American policy toward Mozambique. What seems to be at stake is U.S. policy toward Portugal.

It is a curious phenomenon that one can talk to desk officers at the State Department and find enlightenment, understanding, and abundant information, and then go to another bureau and find the most abysmal ignorance and medieval kind of thinking. For example, one finds that U.S. policy is dominated by concern about Portugal's strategic role on the Iberian Peninsula. But it gets even more petty than that.

About five years ago, American policy was generally sympathetic toward the movement for liberation in southern Africa. But about two years ago the American lease for an air base in the Azores expired and a new one was to be negotiated. It became evident that in exchange for the continued use of the base, the U.S. agreed not to push its policy for liberation in Angola. As a result, the State Department has put on continual pressure to prevent as many student exiles from Portuguese territories coming to the United States, and has tried to prevent them from making too much of a show or making too many speeches, so as not to anger the Portuguese.

So, I do not think that the U.S. has any real policy toward these countries.

HARRIS: I believe that American policy is a national disgrace which exists by virtue of the colossal ignorance of the American people concerning affairs in Portugal and southern Africa. The U.S. is supporting in Portugal a dictatorial regime which maintains the Portuguese in perhaps the most backward condition of any people in Europe, and yet the U.S. continues to support Portugal in its attempt to provide so-called civilization to the African territory.

HUDSON: It's really not an either-or proposition, is it? The United States is not giving weapons to the Mozambique Liberation front, nor is it giving weapons to Portugal through NATO.

MONDLANE: Well, that is precisely it. It is an either-or proposition, and the U.S. is supporting Portugal.

HARRIS: Dr. Mondlane's men are now fighting Portuguese who have been equipped either directly or indirectly through American NATO support, and the American people don't know this.

MONDLANE: And there are leaders and military commanders who are trained in NATO counter-insurgency techniques in the United States.

HUDSON: But they are not actually getting much equipment, are they?

MONDLANE: They used American planes in Angola and Guinea, but this caused quite a stir and NATO insisted that Portugal withdraw these planes. Other equipment from the U.S. is used, I'm sure.

GONZE: We have in our office fragments of napalm shells and casings of napalm bombs which were made in the U.S. and used in Angola by the Portuguese.

WALLERSTEIN: Regardless of whether or not the arms we give Portugal reach the colonies directly, the arms we give will make it possible to release other arms, made by somebody else, which can reach the Portuguese colonies. So this detective game, though it may be fun, is not to the point. If we give arms to Portugal we are, by definition, aiding its fight in Mozambique.

MONDLANE: The position of the U.S. in the Security Council a few weeks ago was anything but encouraging. A resolution sponsored by the African states was watered down as much as possible by the U.S. and when the vote came, the U.S. abstained. Later, I was told by reliable sources that Ambassador Goldberg had been told either to water it down or veto it. So even African leaders friendly to the United States have no choice but to conclude that the United States is pro-Portuguese.

U.S. diplomats help to convince the Mozambicans that Americans are pro-Portuguese. For instance, the U.S. ambassador to Portugal, Admiral Anderson, makes public statements every chance he gets supporting Portuguese power in Africa.

HUDSON: Do you have any idea how long the war will take—one year, five years, ten years?

MONDLANE: We cannot predict. It depends on so many complex factors. We might venture a guess, were we fighting Portugal alone, but with the support she is getting from the U.S. and other countries, it is impossible to predict. We wouldn't be surprised eventually to see European and American "advisers" coming to work with the Portuguese. I wouldn't even rule out another Vietnam situation in Mozambique. But our people are ready for any eventuality. Since we have waited 450 years, another 10 or 20 years does not seem too long to get what is our right.

HARRIS: Although I'm not a political scientist by profession, I nevertheless feel entitled, as an American citizen who has lived in Mozambique and knows Dr. Mondlane and what he stands for, to point out that the American State Department has missed a great opportunity to provide the basis for a genuinely multiracial and democratic form of government in southern Africa. There is every moral reason and every practical possibility for the United States to lend its assistance, not to Portugal and to the dictatorship which controls the Portuguese people, but to this movement in southern Africa which promises to put an end to the vicious apartheid system and the tyranny which we theoretically condemn. Instead of lending our support to this movement to build up the forces of democracy, we are doing our best to repress it.

As is well known, Dr. Mondlane, who holds a Ph. D. degree from Northwestern University, who is on leave from an American university (Syracuse) and who is married to an American woman, was, in the beginning, extremely friendly toward the stated goals of American democracy. I do not know to what extent there is any remnant left in his heart of the friendship which he once felt for the American people. He would be a remarkable person if he maintained the admiration that he once had concerning the potentiality of the American system.

HUDSON: Is that right?

MONDLANE: His point was well made. In view of the attitude of the American government toward my people who are now dying, if I were to continue to admire the United States for its democratic ideals the way I used to, I would have to be mentally deranged. We judge a government by its actions. The actions of the U.S. government concerning the Portuguese question are, at best, dubious.

HUDSON: Given our traditions you expected more . . .

MONDLANE: More understanding, more support and more outright opposition to Portuguese colonialism.

I do not know what the U.S. wants to save in Portugal. I go to Europe quite often and the question I hear is, "Why don't the Americans save themselves?" Europeans don't need your protection in this sense. Why should you allow Portugal, a fascist government, to sit on us in Mozambique when the Portuguese don't have any special affection for your system of government? Portugal is a fascist state that is against the ideals in which Americans say they believe.

A PORTUGUESE COMMENT ON DR. MONDLANE'S INTERVIEW

(The Portuguese Embassy to the United States, in response to an invitation by War/Peace Report, made the following comments on the interview with Dr. Mondlane.)

The population of Mozambique is near 6,500,000, not 7,000,000, and the number of inhabitants of European descent is well over 150,000, not 100,000. It is untrue to allege that literacy is a necessary qualification for voting. The legal requirements are: a) if, being of age, the person can read and write Portuguese, or, b) if unable to read and write, he contributes to the state a sum of no less than 100 escudos ($3.50), yearly, in payment of property tax, industrial tax, professional tax or tax on use of capital.

Although Mozambique still suffers from a high percentage of illiteracy, as do all other African territories south of the Sahara, the percentage is much lower than the 95 per cent Dr. Mondlane indicated. As of December, 1964, 988,949 children and many adults were attending the state, private and missionary primary schools of Mozambique, 446,299 in mission schools—which means 16 per cent of the whole population (excluding the ones attending the schools on the secondary, technical and university levels). This percentage is higher than in most African states.

Dr. Mondlane states that "the Portuguese government says there is no discrimination but practices discrimination, anyway." This is utterly false and all the visitors to Mozambique (thousands of them every year) know this. An example: Nampula, a district capital, and Mozambique's most modern city, has a black mayor, although the majority of the urban population is white. A British Labor M.P., Mr. Ron Ledger, after a visit to Mozambique, wrote in the London Evening Standard (Sept. 21, 1964): "There was no race discrimination. I was surprised and pleased with what I saw and I am glad I captured it on film—anyone who is interested can see it."

About the migratory labor from Mozambique to the South African mines, which is strictly voluntary, Dr. Mondlane again makes untrue statements, to wit: a) it is untrue that the Portuguese government receives "six dollars per head" for every migrant worker. The worker merely pays a small tax for assistance, unemployment compensation and social services which are rendered to him by Portuguese supported agencies in his zone of work, b) it is untrue that the Portuguese government collects for itself the first four months' pay of the laborer, or any fraction thereof. It is true that 50 per cent of the worker's wages are withheld and paid in escudos; this insures, first, the support of the worker's family, secondly, savings for the worker when he returns home. The correctness and desirability of this practice have never been questioned, least of all by the workers' families. Even so, some of the workers return to Mozambique loaded with useless and expensive articles sold to them by merchants and unscrupulous pushers always to be found around mining camps. The Report of the International Labor Organization (a specialized agency of the United Nations), after an exclusive survey in loco has this to say:

Par. 745—"The Commission finds that the recruitment of labor in Mozambique for South Africa is based on the economic attraction of employment in South Africa and the element of social status which having been so employed confers, and that there is no element of compulsion under Portuguese jurisdiction and no element of fraud in such recruitment; it also finds the operations of the Witwatersrand Native Labor Association which it inspected to be both efficient and humane."

The I.L.O. report is available at the U.N. The new agreement of 1964 between the Portuguese and South African governments improved still more the working conditions and assistance to the Mozambique migrant workers.

Dr. Mondlane claims that for many years he has been carrying on his fight against "Portuguese colonialism." It is curious to note that on his last visit to Lourenço Marques, in 1961, just before he decided to lead an anti-Portuguese group, he spoke over Mozambique Radio, voluntarily, of course, and warmly praised the Portuguese administration, the progress, and multiracial society of his native land.

Speaking of material support, Dr. Mondlane says, "If the West won't give it to us, the communists will." Clarification, please: the communists have supported Frelimo from the very beginning. Money, instructors on terrorist warfare, and weapons to Frelimo have always come and are still coming from such states. Since November, 1964, the Portuguese security forces in northern Mozambique have captured enough war material, prisoners and other evidence to prove this. In a statement to the journalist, Malcolm Payne, published in the Daily Colonist, of Victoria, B.C., Canada (Oct. 22, 1965), Dr. Mondlane revealed that the Frelimo weapons came mostly from "China, Russia, Czechoslovakia and Indonesia."

He also claims that his terrorist training camps are inside Mozambique. This again is untrue. Such camps are in Tanzania: the main base at Bagamoye, two more at Moshi and Kizibu; another camp at Mgawina; and still two more at Tanga and Kongwa. He also claims that "one-fifth" of Mozambique is under Frelimo control. This is a ridiculous claim and Dr. Mondlane knows it. Please name a single town of any importance, port, airfield, means of communication, or area, under Frelimo control. If his terrorist organization controls one-fifth of Mozambique (which would mean 60,540 square miles, nearly the area of the large state of Washington), why is Dr. Mondlane residing at Dar es Salaam? He claims further that his "forces" have penetrated "five hundred miles" inside Mozambique territory. This again is plainly preposterous. But, as the hit-and-run actions by Frelimo terrorists have occurred and still are occurring in points bordering Tanzania, it is conceivable that Dr. Mondlane is counting the five hundred miles from his palatial home at Dar es Salaam (Tanzania) to the Mozambique border, across Tanzanian territory.

Unfortunately, the limitations of space for our comments will not permit us to take, point by point, the extensive pronouncements of the interview. Inasmuch as Dr. Mondlane was touring this country on a propaganda trip, trying to raise funds and rally support for his terrorist organization, Frelimo, one cannot be too surprised at his distortion of the facts, with the heavy anti-Portuguese slant, and his exaggerations. In the last few years either at the U.N. forum or on propaganda junkets throughout the world extremist leaders of all sorts have indulged in that kind of talk against anything or anyone who stands for law and order.

What is much more shocking than Dr. Mondlane's pronouncements is the utterances of some of the "interviewers," particularly Prof. Marva Harris, for many years a fancy champion of any anti-Portuguese cause that might have come along, regardless of whether or not he knew what he was talking about. In regard to the present situation in the Portuguese Overseas Provinces, he does not know what he is talking about; as for the communist-oriented nature of subversive movements, such as Frelimo, he undoubtedly does know. His statement beginning—"I would like to make the point here . . ." and ending, "We (the U.S.) are suppressing every liberal revolutionary movement throughout the world as a matter of policy."—clearly defines where he stands.

EXCERPT FROM "BLUEPRINT FOR CONFLICT" ON THE MOZAMBIQUE FRONT

One cannot infer from this diversification, however, that the Communists are experimenting to determine the best way to conquer the fastest. From personal observation I am inclined to believe it much more likely that they were forced to adapt to situations created when hot-headed terrorists launched the fighting prematurely.

Consider, for instance, the evolution of battle in those 4,000-odd square miles of northeastern Mozambique now claimed as "secured" by the Frente Libertadora Mocambique (Frelimo) forces from the Tanzanian frontier to the Lurio River in the south. Their use of the word "secure" is more than a little dubious. Rebel troops, captained by Algerian, Cuban and occasional American Black Nationalist officers, and encadred by a few elite regular troops from Ethiopia, Kenya, and Tanzania, conquered and held, no matter how briefly, some of the more strategic heights, by Portugal's own admission. Certainly there are still rebels in the area—in strong positions, too. But the nonchalance of Portuguese paratroopers and their black Mozambique Rifles circulating in the area—even with me, a foreign visitor, to protect—totally belies the insurgents' claim to hold a solid front.

Not that the Portuguese soldiers and their tribal allies are careless. Quite the contrary. They know that their real strength lies in the elasticity of their superb defenses, now virtually a reflex, which to date has resulted in the capture of several thousands of prisoners, including the man generally credited with firing the first shot that triggered the Frelimo fighting—prematurely. He is Lucas Fernandez, currently one of more than 2,000 terrorist prisoners in a detention camp in southern Mozambique.

Fernandez, a leader and self-appointed secretary of the Mozambicano African National Union (MANU), was credited early in the resistance planning with the recruitment of more than 1,000 volunteers. At the time—1963—this was considered to be an excellent showing, even if the recruits had virtually no weapons. The showing, in fact, was enough for Fernandez to believe he was entitled to membership in the Frelimo's Party Council or steering committee, then headed by Adelino Gwambe and Uria Simango and located in Tanzania. The rivalry between these two men, however, was so bitter that their Red Chinese sponsors relieved both and called in a compromise candidate for the presidency of the movement. He was Eduardo Mondlane, a native of Mozambique, who was taken directly from his post as Professor of African Studies at Syracuse University. (Mondlane was killed by a time bomb in Dar es Salaam on February 3, 1969.)

Not only did this move leave Fernandez out in the cold, but it angered him sufficiently to goad him into planning and executing a coup of his own, one he hoped and believed would compel the Chinese Communists to recognize his worth to the movement. Picking up a truckload of weapons, which he told his Chinese sponsors were to be used in a weapons familiarization course, and ammunition from Soviet recruiters who were interested in gaining influence in the activist MANU, he went to Mueda where he organized a team of terrorists. With them he worked his way across-country, the Portuguese say, warning the Meconda and Angonia tribesmen to keep their ears open because "the black man will rise."

The authorities reacted quickly, but not fast enough to prevent Fernandez from reaching Vila Cabral near the Malawi border. There, on September 25, 1964, he picked for his target one of the most popular men in the district, Father Daniel, a Jesuit priest and medical missionary, whose real last name is lost in the dusty archives of the Catholic Church. All that is known about him, just a little more than four years later, is that he was Dutch and "rather old." Characteristically, the methodical Fernandez organized a mammoth demonstration, knowing full well that as soon as the priest heard of it, he would also appear—if only to debate.

Fernandez reportedly toyed with the debate until the priest turned to the assembled tribesmen and told them all to go home. Witnesses say Fernandez' four shots hit the priest in the neck, the back, the chest and the abdomen. He then leaped from the podium he had set up for himself and stabbed the dying priest a total of 33 times.

The audience was thunderstruck—too frightened to flee, too confused to react, and too shocked to do anything but stand and stare. Fernandez had made his mark. Stooping to pick up the frail priest's body, he held it out: "See," he shouted to the crowd, "I have killed a white man! I am not afraid! I shall lead you on to other victories like this until all of Mozambique belongs to the black man!" He and his fellow terrorists, a mere handful of men, walked away in the stunned silence that followed. Portuguese secret police soon traced them to Dar-es-Salaam—inviolate sanctuary, from which they could be neither extradited nor abducted.

This first shot triggered an increasingly vicious war. The Portuguese reacted swiftly, deploying defensive troops. So too did the Red Chinese and their Soviet collaborators. Apparently, however, the Communists determined to dump Fernandez, and they duped him into leading another expedition into Mozambique. Insiders today say he believed he was opening an African counterpart of the Ho Chi Minh Trail. Fernandez' "Ho Trail" was to lead from the Tanzanian frontier southward some 750 miles to the Republic of South Africa—right across the heart of Mozambique. Inevitably Fernandez was captured, some say on information received. The date was April 12, 1965.

One learns with no little surprise that even in a war as vicious as this one, the Portuguese, who abolished the death penalty in 1810, have not reinvented it for guerrillas. Even though the matter has received considerable thought, executions are still banned. Fernandez therefore wound up in a detention camp near Lourenço Marques, the capital. I interviewed him there in a room of his choosing. He demonstrated all the symptoms of acute schizophrenia, talking on the one hand quite freely of his day-long prayers for the priest, and on the other of a mysterious companion who "really committed the murder," and whose identity he can readily assume. Breaking off, he will invite the visitor to inspect a crucifix he carved out of waste lumber and erected in the prison yard as a monument to his victim.

He is a ready talker and speaks more than passable English. But ask him any details of the crime: "I didn't kill the priest," he will shout, "Carlos did!" Carlos, a prison doctor explains, is his alter ego. Pressing him only precipitates anger, and since he is a very strong, wiry man, despite his imprisonment, one doesn't press too far. But a proposed compromise worked out well. I asked him what Carlos did, and down to the last detail I got the full story, embellished perhaps a little by pride when the listener expressed any horror.

Only once during the interview did Fernandez drop the mask of Carlos to assume a first person role in the murder, and that was when he said, "I stopped soon after the death to wash the blood from my clothes . . . it was drawing flies." Aside from that one slip, Fernandez firmly indicated that he now believes himself to have been merely one of the 236 eyewitnesses whose identical stories of the murder were written in the record. The man will remain in prison until the day his body dies. His mind is already gone.

The consequences of that cold-blooded murder, too, will linger. Despite the premature triggering of the fighting, the Frelimo forces did at one time push as far south as the Lurio, but their claim to holding some 4,000 square miles today does not hold up. My own more conservative estimate, based on a personal survey and the freedom of movement enjoyed during the look-see, might concede some 1,800 miles under spotty control of the guerrillas. That is somewhat more than the 1,100 square miles admitted by the Portuguese as of mid-September, 1968. And the rebels appear to be using only some 8,000 to 10,000 spottily trained forces.

One thing does appear certain: from the frequency of their attacks, in bands of 15 or 20 sallying out of their strongholds, the Frelimo is still far from defeated. "But we feel that time is on our side," explained one official, a knowledgeable subinspector of Portugal's security forces—the Policia Internacional de Defesa do Estado (PIDE) at Lourenço Marques. "The Frelimo's slow progress and heavy casualties seem to be cooling the enthusiasm of their backers on the other side of the Tanzanian frontier [i.e., the Chinese Communists], and the loyal blacks on our side of the frontier are getting better organized."

This subinspector conceded that the Mozambicano tribesmen had been forced to react because "they were in trouble. If they helped the terrorists, they risked getting shot by our [black] Rifles. If they didn't, they risked getting shot by the terrorists. But now the balance appears to have swung to our side. We arm the blacks when we believe it will do some good. To date, it has."

The frequency of the rebels' probing forays across the front can be accurately charted. PIDE and other sources each admit an average of about 15 to 20 incidents a month. Keeping tabs and neutralizing these thrusts, however, hasn't yet strained what at first glimpse seems to be a rather skimpy frontier guard. That guard, though, is made up of elite troops, all men well versed in jungle warfare and guerrilla tactics, familiar to the point of contempt with their immediate action theaters.

Now while attacks can be and are fairly freely discussed with an outside observer, casualty figures for the enemy, and particularly the number of prisoners, are not. True, prisoner totals of 2,000 or so in any camp can be accurately estimated, but it is not quite so simple to determine how many camps there really are. One neutral intelligence source said his non-African headquarters believed that the Portuguese alone were holding more than 20,000 prisoners. And a recently captured Iron Curtain agent (European, not Asian), interviewed while under house arrest, was even gloomier in his estimates. He frankly admitted that total losses on all fronts since August, 1964, amounted to "at least 42,000, many of whom, of course, were deserters."

Prisoners only recently taken into custody claimed that in the 15-day period immediately preceding their capture, they knew of nine operations involving a total of perhaps slightly more than 200 insurgents. Four of these engagements were to set booby traps, simple but dreadfully effective Chinese land mines, on the main patrol routes. These highly portable TNT charges are designed to explode under four pounds of pressure. Simple they may be, but the terrorist in his nervousness is sometimes betrayed by them. One occasionally hears them exploding, both night and day. Subsequent investigation invariably shows that some of the terrorists fail to learn Rule One of the household handyman: "Don't paint yourself into a corner." Quite often they set so many mines they step on them themselves.

A favorite trick of the rebels, however, initially inflicted some damage on the defending forces. Portuguese military men engaged in neutralizing these attacks admitted losing three men in the earliest days through sheer carelessness. The terrorists had deliberately allowed themselves to be detected, and fled at the approach of the counter-insurgents. Lying in plain sight were 12 or 15 unplanted mines. The stack of black, hatbox-shaped mines was tempting and, it transpired, triggered to explode on contact. A trooper walked over and picked one up . . . Three men died, one of them a black Rifleman who had guessed the trap and sought to prevent it.

Surrounded by a pile of mines still stacked in his office, another PIDE inspector, waiting for an ordnance man to come in and disarm them, cursed the "outside interference" disrupting Mozambique.

"If they'd leave our blacks alone," he said, "we could improve their lot fifty times faster than we are doing. We've been working at that since the end of World War II, just as all other progressive, white governments in Africa have been doing. Don't for a minute believe our concern was motivated by or because of the guerrillas. It is in spite of them. If the outside assistance now reaching the Frelimo from Tanzania were to be cut off tomorrow, fighting would collapse in a matter of days—if not hours. Then all we'd have to contend with would be the Meconda tribesmen. They are fierce, proud and, up to the past few years, completely autonomous by their own wish. In this world, however, the state of Mozambique can only survive united.

"The outsiders don't want that. It prevents them from moving in and imposing a dictatorship of their own on our people. Don't you for a minute believe they have any intention of permitting any of this 'one-man, one-vote' opposition once they take over, either.

"Look at Cuba! Did Fidel Castro ever in the past almost ten years come closer than talking about it to giving the guajiro [peasant] a vote? Okay! So where's the world's opprobrium against Castro? Where are the British frigates lying off the coast? They cut us [the Portuguese] off from free trade with the world because of suspected oppression in Rhodesia? Is Cuba blockaded?"

"Admit it, Mr. Brigham, the 'idealists' in your country, in Britain, in the United Nations, have deprived you of your reason. They have seized control to right an imagined wrong without so much as an unbiased look at the target states of their hatred. They have permitted themselves, and forced all thinking men, to abandon logic for emotion."

GUARDING CABORA BASSA

Perhaps because of the slow inroads the Portuguese, playing a waiting game, are making on the northeast frontier against the Frelimo, the Communists have recently reactivated operations on what might be called the West Mozambicano front in the province of Tete, where the Portuguese line all but completely surrounds Malawi, making it an enclave of Mozambique.

Terrorist forces in this area are largely Zambian-based, somewhat better trained and equipped, but still too newly engaged to permit of any accurate assessment. Tactically, their operations are generally the lethal hit-run variety, with no quarter given or asked. Casualties are, therefore, consistently high. These rebels are members of the Committee for Revolution in Mozambique (COREMO) and their effectiveness appear to specialize in sabotage of a highly skilled type.

Currently one of their principal targets appears to be the Mozambicano hydro-electric plant on the Zambesi River at Cabora Bassa. When completed that installation, larger than Egypt's Aswan Dam, will deliver some 2 million kilowatts to an 800-mile powerline net, construction of which is well under way. One can readily appreciate the virtually impossible task of protecting such a powerline; intermittent sabotage, particularly in the more deserted zones, is almost a daily occurrence. The Portuguese are meeting this problem in a most interesting way.

Drawing from the ranks of war prisoners in various detention camps, they have "rehabilitated" hundreds willing to accept the responsibility of protecting the pylons, armed them, and sent them into the region with their families. The PIDE with great satisfaction reports the system is paying off.

"You have the tale of your farmer in America," said Anthony Vaz, Sub-Director of PIDE in Mozambique (there is only one PIDE Director, and he is in Lisbon). "Well, this farmer trapped a raccoon, I believe, that was stealing grain from his barn. He was irked because the grain was for his horses. When he killed the animal, he skinned it and made a whip from its hide. Just a neighbor asked him why he hadn't just thrown the pelt away, he replied: 'I'm going to get horsepower out of that grain, one way or the other.'

"We Portuguese, too, have to get 'horsepower' one way or another out of the swelling ranks of the prisoners, particularly with the threat hanging over us all the time of a mass attack by all of the black states in the north. And if we just rounded up the prisoners and let them rot mentally and physically right where they are . . . well, we can neither afford this, nor is the idea tolerable.

"Some day, the men we're now meeting on battlegrounds of their choosing will return to their homes. Peace will come—it always has in the history of war. So we got the idea it might be a good thing to start training our enemies for peace. It hasn't failed us yet."

Director Vaz, of course, has a number of things going for his idea. First, by returning the prisoner to his home or tribal area, he is sending back a man under suspicion. Had he talked? Was that why he was released? Should the local tribesmen believe this story of rehabilitation, or should they kill him? Did he return as a spy?

It speaks well for the PIDE that to date not a single attacker of one of the rehabilitates has escaped. Nor, with the exception of a single ex-prisoner who was surprised working with a sabotage team, has any of the released prisoners failed to repulse an attack on the pylons. The one exception was killed when he tried to shoot his way out of the trap.

On the other hand, by early October of 1968, eleven of the ex-prisoner guards had paid in blood for their loyalty to their new responsibilities. Four of them were killed. Two of the wounded, questioned through interpreters, grinned through their pain: "What?" one of them asked. "Do you for a minute believe an outsider could come into my valley undetected and attack property I am defending? I've got a family, you know. And neighbors who are watching me all the time, waiting for me to slack my responsibilities. I've been given a second chance. I'm going to fight for it!"

Fight for it, he had. He killed three of his five attackers, captured another, though grievously wounded himself, and was trying to stop the villagers from beating the fifth to death when outside help arrived.

The other, who lost a foot to an attacker's hand grenade, managed to kill all three of the saboteurs. A high-school graduate before he joined the terrorists, he'll receive a pension from the state—$25 a month, not bad by African standards. But he was much happier about the "proof of his rehabilitation" that his act had given the government. "Now they'll have to believe me when I say I'm Portuguese!"

TRIPARTITE DEFENSE

Prior to this experiment with rehabilitation troops (historically, first used by the British in Germany toward the end of World War II) the sabotage activity on the Coremo front had pinned down so many Portuguese and Mozambicano Riflemen that the Communists had enjoyed an almost completely free hand building up supply routes across the Chirundu plateau from Tanzania to Rhodesia. And under the same diversionary umbrella, the Communists had also made considerable progress in developing their African "Ho Chi Minh Trail," some 400 miles long and skirting Mozambique's western frontier with Rhodesia, to bring rebels and equipment into South Africa.

Well marked on the ground but fairly well hidden from air reconnaissance, even during the recent intensive drought, that trail was to be the main route also used by the troops of the Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU) and Zimbabwe African Peoples Union (ZAPU) sent to strike into eastern Rhodesia. Portuguese forces, however, are now freed to mop up both trails and are doing it.

These mopping-up operations, moreover, appear to be demonstrating the effectiveness of another unobtrusive evolution in the "White South's" counter-insurgency. With the quiet development of an informal central command for all three countries, an international and (again) informal radio net has been created for instantaneous communications that earlier were often bogged down for days in "channels." The tripartite arrangement has also permitted the free interchange of manpower, information and equipment, to forestall invasions, build reinforcements and step up pressure on the rebels' lines.

As noted previously, with the exception of a single bombing run on a rebel formation fleeing into Tanzania from Mozambique, there has been to date no counter invasion of the north. Not that the police and military directly concerned haven't wanted to counterattack, since both Zambia and Tanzania serve the rebels as ready sanctuaries to which they can flee, regroup and re-equip, and shift the axis for their next attack, always secure in the knowledge that no one will follow.

One diplomat, from a neutral non-African (and non-European) nation, recalled that he termed "the ultimate affront" the White South had suffered, when ideologues associated with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace compiled a 170-page staff study, including estimates of probable casualties presumably American troops would suffer in a not-so-hypothetical plan to invade South Africa to end apartheid.

"Where are the outcrops from the idealists against that plan?" he asked. "The point I wish to make," he added, "is that even at its stylized worst, which it definitely is nowhere near approaching, the relationship between the black man and his alleged white overlords is no excuse for the current programs of sanctions, implicit and explicit, against these powers in the south—as anybody could plainly determine if he would take the trouble of making one unbiased survey trip with no preconceived notions as to what to expect."

Rhodesia's BSAP has been reinforced with units of the Rhodesian African Rifles (white officers, black troops). Portugal's totally unsegregated Mozambicanos have been reinforced with some 45,000 elite troops from the Metropole (Lisbon), and the Republic of South Africa has loaned some 300 of its highly skilled State Police to the joint effort. Pretoria's simple explanation for its contribution: it wants to hold the terrorist operation as far from South African soil as it can. "The day we have to fight them on our soil," explained General van den Bergh, "it will be an entirely different kind of war: one where we will have to drop the defensive and strike hard on the offensive. It will be a total war."

Prime Minister Vorster recently warned: "If we ever have to strike back at President Kaunda and the Zambians, we will hit them so hard where it hurts that they will never forget it. We may be a small state, but we have a compact defensive force." His reference to "where it hurts" was presumably to an all-out counterattack into Zambia.

Invasion rumbles on both sides of the terrorist front continue to echo, with sometimes amazing side-effects. President Kaunda blasted British Prime Minister Harold Wilson and his "cowardly government that resorts to dirty tricks" for its refusal to release to Zambia (on credit, naturally) some $20 million worth of British-manufactured "Rapier" missiles. Wilson told a House of Commons questioner it would take two years to deliver the missiles, that British defense experts doubted Zambian soldiery "possessed the technical know-how to use them," but that the missiles could still be purchased—if Zambia wanted to pay cash. Wilson satisfied his questioner further with assurance that it "appears highly unlikely that the [white African] states will attack Zambia." At last report, Kaunda was attempting to induce the Chinese to move some of their missileery now protecting the southern approaches to Dar-es-Salaam (from Mozambique) to the area around his capital, Lusaka. Infiltrators indicate he has not yet been successful.

Paradoxically, President Kaunda recently served notice on the guerrillas now stationed on his soil to "Fight or quit!" Infiltrators slipping back across the lines after Zambian penetrations reported Kaunda, as late as mid-October, had ordered the closing of a chain of "Freedom Houses" from which the OAU's Committee of Liberation had been directing the insurgency effort. Key personnel from those local headquarters have apparently been evacuated to Dar-es-Salaam to new offices near the Sino-Soviet headquarters.

Kaunda also cracked down on press gangs operating throughout the mining areas in Zambia, looking for "recruits" for the terrorist movement. His public statement was that "while it was deplorable that many [Zambians] had been inadvertently [sic] impressed into service, many others who did not want such service were so severely beaten that many died."

Invasion rumors brought an invitation from the Zambian government for an on-site inspection by neutral newspapermen. Curiously enough, only Iron Curtain newsmen appeared to have succeeded in obtaining visas from Kaunda's Vice President, Simon Kapwepwe. Nevertheless, a ringer managed to sneak in and brought back a report:

1. There is a network of training and transit camps within walking distance of the Rhodesian frontier.

2. The camps were set up by ZANU and ZAPU organizers. Both resistance groups have now been outlawed by decree from Kaunda, though they have a stay of dissolution through late January—presumably to permit them to conform to Kaunda's order to fight or quit.

3. To date, camps have been moved constantly, apparently to spare Zambia international embarrassment.

4. Activities of troops in these camps were directed by a Sino-Soviet staff operating in Lusaka with the full knowledge of the Zambian Foreign Office.

5. By Kapwepwe's own admission, Zambia's attitude to date toward these camps had been one of blind permissiveness. He is reported to have commented on the Kaunda "fight or quit" order that the black resistance movement can't delay much longer because the White South's defensive measures are "becoming perfected."

Kapwepwe himself, however, is a bit of an opportunist. Infiltrators repeatedly tell of the Vice President's pep talks at terrorist training camps. Making no bones about it, he was quoted many times as telling the recruits, "The day is coming . . . when you shall follow my leadership to complete victory over the white man." A rabid pro-Peking Communist, Kapwepwe has somehow managed to keep his political skirts clean by avoiding a direct confrontation with Zambian regular troops. These are encircled by British-trained and hence presumably anti-Communist officers—a by-product of Zambia's recent independence.

Prisoners captured on the Rhodesian front often spoke with awe of those Zambian regulars and specifically of their ruthlessness in those rare confrontations with the rebels "in training." From the tenor and context of such interviews, however, it might justifiably be inferred that since January 1968 Kapwepwe's advisors have misled the Vice President into believing that the time is near to begin testing the regulars' loyalty to the President. If so, it may produce some interesting results. Kapwepwe at this juncture, even with all his determination to "kill off the whites," could scarcely survive without the help of the Chinese Communists. Few outside Kapwepwe's immediate circle believe the Communists would be foolish enough to commit their forces in an internecine struggle.

The same may be said of Tanzania where, whatever his other sympathies, President Nyerere sees to it that his regular army forces are hand-picked and get the cream of the Communist weapons entering his country. He carefully nurtures a two-faced intimacy with both the Soviets and the Red Chinese. Does he hope he can play them off, one against the other? Many small-nation strong-men have entertained that hope, even though history to date suggests it is illusory. In Nyerere's case the hope would seem futile, given the unity of purpose the two Communist giants have maintained in the African theater.

The Free World would do well to note that unity of purpose in Africa. And the mere fact that the Communist pressure is maintained, in spite of continuing reverses, may be read as an augury of the Sino-Soviet joint determination.

The so-called White South, most directly and immediately concerned because of proximity, of course, recognizes this continuing pressure. Nonetheless it has been able, thanks to successes to date, to relax many of the onetime oppressively restrictive measures it was forced to apply. Clifford W. Dupont, Officer Administering the Government of Rhodesia—an office roughly equivalent to that of Governor-General under the British—deplored the necessity for such laws, however temporary.

"When the controversial Section 48-A (1) (a) of the Law and Order (Maintenance) Act was legislated in 1963, black men, women and children were innocent victims of an increasing terror. The casualties mostly resulted from fire bombs callously tossed into highly flammable grass-thatched huts. The resulting conflagrations often wiped out entire black villages, not only near the present front lines but far into the interior." (Guerrillas and their leaders captured after such attacks freely admitted that their sole intent was to sow terrorism to forestall future resistance.) "The only offense of the victims was that, being black, they did not espouse the terrorists' cause."

"Enactment of Section 48 made it a mandatory hanging offense for a man to enter Rhodesia bearing weapons of war. Enforcement of that law so dramatically stopped those firebombings that this October the law's mandatory capital punishment provisions were repealed. A Justice will now mete out the death penalty only on the evidence. It is only fair to add, however, that not a single terrorist among the several hanged, after apprehension under Section 48, was executed for being a terrorist. Every one of them went to the scaffold for common law murder."

The same can be said of South Africa, where the death penalty has only been invoked where acts of terrorism have cost human lives.

Talking to prisoners at all stages of detention, from immediate capture to those already jailed for a long time, one encounters emotions ranging from conviction that the tide has turned to fear that it hasn't and won't until the Communists are cornered and evicted from Africa. Then white and black can get on with the job of building started immediately after World War II when the world awoke to the concept of the developing nation.

PORTUGUESE AFRICA

Portugal is taking sensible precautions to protect her multi-racial citizenry in both her east and west overseas provinces. In Mozambique, on the east coast, desperadoes began fighting in the jungles; by coincidence very close to the Tanganyikan border. But the Portuguese have put fifty thousand troops into the area to demonstrate a sense of responsibility. They would like to get their hands on Eduardo C. Mondlane, who reportedly has left his hideout at the State Department in Washington to lead the jungle games in person. He studied his trade at a number of prominent American vocational institutes, ranging from Oberlin to Harvard, and took his apprenticeship in Ralph Bunche's office at the UN Trusteeship Council. Mondlane, who recently taught at Syracuse University, is a Peace Corps instructor when not leading Communist terrorists.

FROM AFRICA

(By George S. Schuyler)

Students of World War III with their attention riveted on Vietnam and the Pueblo incident might well be equally concerned with the African sector of the conflict where significant gains have been made by the Communist enemy.

There is first the continuing and devastating civil war in Nigeria where the successes of the Federals over the Biafran rebels have been largely made possible by massive aid from Moscow in the form of arms and aircraft. Of course, since the Lagos government has no pilots capable of flying the Soviet planes, the Kremlin has graciously sent an ample supply of those too. With the death toll already at thirty thousand, or more than the total U.S. deaths in Vietnam, it continues to mount daily as Soviet bombers destroy cities, churches, and hospitals, in the absence of any worthwhile military targets. The British military aid to Lagos has also been substantial, but nothing approaching the Russian help which came from the beginning after urgent appeals.

Thanks to this foreign military aid, the Federal forces have demolished Biafra's great trading city of Onitsha—where a $1.4 million market is now a scorched skeleton of twisted girders, the $17 million bridge across the mighty Niger has been destroyed, and the population of 160,000 has been reduced to less than 1,000, without water, electricity or food, except that supplied by the victorious Federal forces of General Yakubu Gowon.

Both the Roman Catholic Church and the World Council of Churches have appealed for peace in Nigeria in a joint statement saying they "unite in one voice in most urgent appeal to both contesting parties for an immediate cessation of armed hostilities in this sad conflict and for the establishment of a lasting peace by honorable negotiations in the highest African tradition." Neither of these august bodies, of course, has ever appealed to the Algerian dictatorship for the release of the kidnaped and imprisoned Moise Tshombe; nor to anyone in behalf of the half million Christians and pagans chased out of southern Sudan by the Khartoum politicians beefed up by Soviet arms (nothing can be done about the half million already slaughtered there in the civil war which has been going on since 1956); nor have they appealed on behalf of the thousands of hapless Jehovah's Witnesses who have been raped, robbed, tortured, and killed by the brave forces of Dr. Hastings Banda, dictator of Malawi.

Only the much-maligned Portuguese and the French have helped supply arms to the Biafrans, though the Dutch (with their usual eye to commerce) have run several freighters through the blockade. The United States has aided neither side but has recognized all sorts of virtue in the case of Lagos. In return it has been daily denounced by the Moscow-leaning Nigerians.

President Tubman, of one-Party Liberia, and Emperor Haile Selassie, the daddy of all African dictators—who co-chaired the Nigerian peace mission of the Organization of African Unity—have been distressingly ineffective as the genocide against the talented and progressive Ibo people of Biafra has progressed. But, as a sort of farcical note, it was announced in mid-March that a month hence the big brass of the Negro Leadership Conference on Africa would emplane for Lagos to offer their good offices in bringing about Nigerian peace (something they can't maintain in their "ghettos" at home!). The delegates were to be Roy Wilkins of the N.A.A.C.P.; Whitney Young of the Urban League; A. Philip Randolph, President of the Sleeping Car Porters; and, Dr. Martin Luther King, the nonviolent agitator. With King now gathered to his fathers, the trip may be postponed with no loss to anybody except the airplane companies.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union is zealously prosecuting its plans for conquering Africa, thereby enriching its sources of mineral wealth and denying same to the capitalist world. The Rhodesian war is being stepped up with increasing attacks across the Zambesian border by guerrillas trained by Chinese Communist military experts and equipped with the latest arms. It is estimated that there are two thousand of these guerrillas in Tanzania and Zambia, although the voracious President Kenneth Kaunda denies they are being trained in his country. This is affirmed by James R. D. Chikerema, Lusaka-based Vice President of the Zim-babwe African Peoples Union, and the Dar es Salaam-based Oliver Tambo, who heads the African National Congress forces in Tanzania. But, only the incredibly naive believe them. Both operate up-to-date headquarters from which they direct the movement of their Communist guerrillas across the Rhodesian and Mozambique borders.

The multi-racial Rhodesian army has repulsed the several murder teams sent across the Zambezi, but its officers admit that the guerrillas are highly trained and well equipped. That figures, since their leaders were instructed in Russia and China, with the rank-and-file being drilled in Tanzania and Zambia—and the whole tribe carrying Russian- and Chinese-made rockets and rocket-launchers. Since each guerrilla gets a $70.50 handout when he starts out on a mission, it is evident that Messrs. Chikerema and Tambo are handling a lot of money from the Liberation Committee of the Organization of African Unity (which gets its from the Soviet Union).

Parked over in Kinshasa and also backed by the O.A.U. is Communist Holden Roberto, author of the March 15, 1961 atrocities in Angola, with his forces of the Revolutionary Government of Angola; across the Congo River in Brazzaville, capital of the old French Congo, is quartered the People's Movement for the Liberation of Angola, headed by the Communist Angolan intellectual, Dr. Neto.

Roberto has the nod and cash from the O.A.U., but Neto's funds come directly from the Red bosses.

The other prong of the Red pincers on Southern Africa is directed by Eduardo Mondlane, President of the Mozambique liberationist group called FRELIMO, which is quartered in Dar es Salaam. A Mozambique mulatto, married to an American girl from the Midwest, and formerly Professor at Syracuse University, Dr. Mondlane was originally bankrolled by the Ford Foundation which supported his "school" on the outskirts of Dar es Salaam. His outfit is now financed by the O.A.U.'s Liberation Committee and is credited with having eight thousand guerrillas training inside Mozambique and an equal number in Tanzania. The 65,000-man Portuguese Army is holding its own and the rebels are making no advance.

The strategy is to invade Rhodesia, Angola, Botswana, and Mozambique, and to encircle South Africa, the real goal. With South Africa's wealth in capital and natural resources, and South West Africa's diamond bonanza, the Communists figure they would have it made. The only obstacle to world conquest would then be the United States.

PORTUGAL: ENJOYING THE LAST LAUGH IN AFRICA

(By George Schuyler)

Fifty years before their erstwhile protege, Christopher Columbus, "discovered" America, the Portuguese established their presence in West Africa; and, at the turn of the Sixteenth Century, they were a terror to the Asiatic bosses along the East African littoral who had for half a millennium been exploiting and selling the natives.

Today, after weathering five centuries of competition, envy, warfare, and derision of Africa's poverty, ignorance, weakness, and ineptitude, the much-maligned Portuguese are rapidly approaching Easy Street there. In the early centuries (like everybody else) they eked out a living and maintained their African presence by selling the most readily available product: slaves. Now they are the first coffee exporter in Africa (the third largest in the world), and a major marketer of diamonds. They have some of the largest hydroelectric schemes in Africa, tremendous mineral resources, gushing oil wells, and an African territory a third the size of the United States.

The Third World since its emergence has evil-wished the Portuguese empire, denigrated it, maligned it, conspired against it in the United Nations, invaded it with guerrilla mercenaries bankrolled indirectly by the Russian and Chinese Communists, and mobilized the vast propaganda machine of the "Liberal" West against it. The Portuguese have endured the psychological and military attacks, tolerated the defection and treason of their N.A.T.O. partners, rolled with the juridical punches of the black conspirators in the U.N., and are today living higher on the hog than all of their Third World detractors.

The politico-military lineup against Portuguese Africa has been formidable. Communist Holden Roberto's People's Movement for the Liberation of Angola launched the initial attack from the new Congo Republic eight years ago, hitting northern Angola on March fifteenth. The initial slaughter was terrific, an orgy of butchery and mutilation unprecedented this side of the Iron Curtain, and using the innovation of sawmills in disposing of victims. The latter were not only white but colored farmers. A month later when your correspondent was in Luanda and toured the affected area, I saw hundreds of the impoverished refugees. They were of all colors, rich and poor.

As soon as Guinea's Sekou Toure celebrated his independence by giving Khrushchev his first foothold in Africa, and the brilliant Communists supplied quantities of tanks, anti-aircraft guns, and snow shovels, the African Independence Party of Portuguese Guinea and Cape Verde was born. Portuguese Guinea, sandwiched between Senegal and Guinea, seemed particularly vulnerable. The initial surprise attack swept a large area of country, and the Communists were jubilant, predicting early ousting and/or slaughter of the Portuguese. It didn't happen.

Three years later the Mozambique Liberation Front was formed by the ex-Syracuse University professor, Eduardo Mondlane—well-oiled with contributions from the elite of the American Left. Eduardo set up headquarters in Dar-es-Salaam at a "school"—for "Mozambique refugees" financed by the Ford Foundation—where the curriculum consisted of courses in revolution and guerrilla warfare. The warriors are generally under the Afro-Asian People's Solidarity Organization (A.A.P.S.O.) headquartered in Cairo and dominated by the minions of Mao. Arms for the guerrillas are delivered through Zanzibar, and training and leadership are supplied by Chinese officers. No doubt their help will be needed as Mondlane opened a package containing a bomb early this year and disappeared. I do not know who was the world benefactor, but Eduardo Mondlane has been gathered to his fathers—via a vacuum cleaner.

The Red terrorists maintain two staging areas in Zambia, where Kenneth Kaunda, the "pacifist," is President. Several heavy infiltrations have been made through the Zambezi valley of Rhodesia and the Caprivi Strip of South-West Africa. These have been regularly attended by disaster. It will be noted that occupancy of the Caprivi Strip would threaten southern Angola as well as Botswana, and hence Rhodesia.

But the Portuguese were not born yesterday, and they have known Africa and the Africans intimately, for five hundred years. Where younger and more cruel imperialists imposed white racism on the conquered blacks and insulted them with discriminatory practices which particularly offended people of position and education, the Portuguese pronounced and practiced inter-racialism from the Fifteenth Century. So after Roberto's and Mondlane's failure to penetrate Angola and Mozambique, the Portuguese redoubled their social work in border areas, put up model villages to replace those bombed during the warfare, bought off venal rebel leaders, and soon had things back to normal. All can vote, schools have been greatly increased, and universities have been established.

So, while racism soars everywhere else in the continent, it declines toward nadir in Portuguese Africa. This reporter has traveled five thousand miles in the two big departments, and if there had been any manifestations of racism, he would have detected it.

Today, those who evil-wished Portugal are grinding their molars to the quick over her new African prosperity. Offshore discoveries, spouting wells, and a busy refinery in Angola's Cabinda area are now producing 20,000 to 25,000 barrels daily. This sulphur-free oil will be increasingly in great demand as delivery of oil from the Middle East grows more uncertain because of politics. Production will be 150,000 barrels daily by 1970. As Robert F. Ward of Cabinda Gulf says: "This represents one of the major growth areas in the corporation." No wonder Texaco is trying to get in on the action.

Diamonds totaling 1,268,140.45 carats showed an annual increase of 9.7 percent. Geologists report that the Cassinga district in southern Angola is so rich in top grade iron ore (with reserves of 123 million tons) that it bids fair to becoming one of the world's major producing areas. The Benguela fishing industry is one of the world's biggest.

At Cabora-Bassa on the Zambezi in Mozambique a huge dam is being built which will establish a hydrographic basin covering an area of 1,200,000 kilometers—a bigger project than Aswan. The Cunene River project along Angola's South-West African border is almost equally promising with possibilities of settling 500,000 inhabitants, thanks to irrigation and giant power. Labor is sharing in this new prosperity, with improved housing and plentiful food. Volks-wagens (dubbed "Hitler's Revenge" in Portuguese Africa) scamper all over the place, and all major U.S. automobile companies have agencies.

With prosperity busting out all over, and the highest African wage rates outside South Africa and the copper districts, long-aligned Portugal is having the last laugh.

GREEK INDEPENDENCE DAY

(Mr. EDWARDS of California asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, in the second decade of the 19th century, Western Europe began to take notice of the agonies of the Greek people who were striving to throw off the yoke of four centuries of Turkish oppression.

The possibility of the resurrection of a people fraught with such historical meaning thrilled like the sound of a trumpet through the heart of Europe. And a young English poet was moved to write:

The mountains look on Marathon,
And Marathon looks on the sea;
And musing there an hour alone,
I dreamed that Greece might still be free.
LORD BYRON.

The Greeks are an ancient people, makers of myths and philosophies, tenacious in their individualism, devoted in their love of freedom.

Today is Greek Independence Day. It celebrates the 148th year since the Greek War of Independence broke out on March 25, 1821. On that date, Bishop Germanos hoisted the flag of rebellion in the village of Kalavryta. And this is the official beginning of the revolt, although numerous other revolts had erupted in Greek settlements throughout the Balkans.

The 19th-century British historian, Archibald Alison, wrote movingly of the condition of the Greeks at the time the rebellion began:

Although the Greeks had for four centuries groaned under the dominion of the Ottomans, and the heel of conquest had perhaps crushed them with more severity than any other nation in Europe, yet they had preserved the elements of nationality, and kept alive the seeds of resurrection more entirely than any other people.

Amidst all the severities of Turkish rule they had retained the great distinctive features of nationality, their country, their language, their religion. As long as a nation preserves these, no matter how long the chains of servitude may have hung about it, the means of ultimate salvation are not lost, the elements of future independence exist.

The very severity of the Ottoman rule, the arrogance of their Turkish masters, the difference of language, religion, manners, laws, between the victors and the vanquished, had tended to perpetuate the feelings of the subjugated people, and prevent that amalgamation with their oppressors which, though it often softens the severity of conquest, does so only by preventing its chains from being ever thrown off. They had lost all—all but the sense of oppression and the desire of vengeance.

This passage has relevance for us today. It should be read and re-read by those who wish to understand the psychology of rebellion in Czechoslovakia currently, in Hungary in 1956, and in subject states everywhere.

The Greeks of 1821 numbered but two million in their mountain strongholds of southern Greece. They dared to face an Ottoman Empire of 30 million people. The five million Greeks scattered in the Balkans and along the Black Sea were of some help but more often they were victimized by their vulnerability and slaughtered by the thousands.

At last, the Greeks prevailed, despite quarrels among themselves. With help from the great powers, England, France, and Russia, peace was achieved in 1828. And there was a Greece again.

Alison wrote:

The newly-instructed Greeks found to their astonishment that they were the descendants of a people, inhabited a country, and spoke a language celebrated beyond any other in the literature of western Europe, and from the genius of which nearly the whole illumination of the world had sprung.

The image of the ancient freedom, the triumphs of ancient art, the glories of ancient warfare, which had come down to them in their own country only through the dark and uncertain streams of tradition, now stood clearly revealed in the works of their own ancestors, written in their own tongue, and preserved with pious care by the Christians of the West.

Thus modern Greece was born in the revolution of 1821. Its result was a fraction of what are today's boundaries. At the beginning in 1828, there was only Peloponnesos, a small corridor of the mainland around Athens, and a few of the Aegean islands.

For more than a century, Greece pursued her dream and her destiny, redeeming her lost children. In 1864, she acquired the Seven Islands of the Ieanian Sea; in 1881, Thessaly; in 1912, Crete; in 1913, portions of Macedonia and Epius, the islands of Samos, Chios, Lesbos, and others in the north Aegean. At last, in 1948, she redeemed the final islands of the Aegean, the group lying between Crete and Turkey, known as the Dodecanese.

Only Cyprus remains, and this helps explain the emotions behind the cry for Enosis which agitated Greece and Cyprus in the 1950's. One other dream, the re-taking of the ancient center of the Greek empire of Byzantium, Constantinople, was shattered in the Greek-Turkish War of 1921-22.

Greece, now a nation of 8 million people, was a faithful ally in World War II. Indeed, its undermanned forces gave the Allies their first victory in 1940 by throwing back the Italian invasion.

Following the German defeat, a wounded Greece endured a bitter civil war which ended with the defeat of a new totalitarianism.

The United States, with its Truman doctrine aid, played a vital role in the success of pro-West democratic Greece.

We have been intimately involved in Greece ever since. American action or inaction has a critical impact on Greek political affairs.

In this context, it must be with some sadness that we observe Greek independence day today, for Greek freedom has been smothered by a military dictatorship.

We should ask ourselves what we would like to see in Greece. This is particularly pertinent now that a new administration is in office in Washington and, presumably, a review of past policies is being made.

I believe a fair answer, acceptable to American liberals and conservatives, and to Greek liberals and conservatives, is that we would like to see a Greece that is free, pro-West, prosperous, with an independent parliament, basic constitutional freedoms, a viable political system with two non-Communist political parties—one liberal and one conservative and an annual economic growth rate of 6 to 8 percent. Does this seem too much to ask? Well, it's almost exactly what existed in 1965 prior to the blundering dismissal of Prime Minister George Papandreu by King Constantine.

This blunder precipitated a long political crisis which culminated in a coup by a group of obscure colonels in April 1967. Unfortunately, the American Embassy was a party to the political blunders which created the atmosphere of the coup, though not a party to the coup itself.

I think the United States should now express with greater emphasis its support for a "national government," made up of leaders of liberal and conservative political parties. This could, if established, serve as a transitional government until genuine elections were held.

The Papadopoulos junta government is a dead-end government, unable to solve Greece's problems, uninspiring to a sullen Greek people, and uncommitted to genuine elections which would topple it from power. Accordingly, a U.S. policy which supports the junta is a dead-end policy. We ignore at our peril the long-term dangers of such support and its crippling effect on those very elements in Greece who engineered Greece's post-war economic and political recovery.

I believe we must not discount the importance of America's moral leadership and moral responsibility. We must believe in our own democratic principles and their almost universal appeal abroad. If we assert these principles, then with Byron we, too, can say:

The mountains look on Marathon,

And Marathon looks on the sea;

And musing there an hour alone,

I dreamed that Greece might still be free.

RELEASE OF FLOOD CONTROL FUNDS

(Mr. EDWARDS of California asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, the recent storms and flooding in California have made clear the necessity of flood control and drainage projects. Further, huge sections of the United States face one of the most serious flood threats in history this spring.

My county, Santa Clara, escaped by but a narrow margin disastrous flooding earlier this year. Even so, the southern end of the county had many acres of rich farmland flooded by waters from the Upper and Lower Llagas Creeks.

Flood control projects have been pending on these creeks for many years. But funding for these projects under Public Law 566 has been held up since 1966. The two projects in my county are but among 96 nationwide delayed by a dispute between the President and the Congress. For 12 years prior to 1966, the funding was approved by the Congress, but President Johnson in that year decided the authority to fund small watershed projects belonged to the President, not the Congress.

I am strongly urging President Nixon to end this dispute and promptly release the funds for these needed projects.

A COUNCIL OF SOCIAL ADVISERS

(Mr. PEPPER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. Speaker, it was my privilege on Saturday last to address the graduating class of the School of Social Work of Florida State University in Tallahassee. This occasion called to my mind a proposal which I have been considering for some time and which I am introducing in the House of Representatives today.

The proposal is that we create a Council of Social Advisers which would advise the President on broad matters of social policy, as the Council of Economic Advisers now advises on economic policy, and prepare for the President, the Congress and the country an annual social report to complement the economic report which has been prepared now for more than 20 years.

The preparation of an annual economic report is one of the results of the Full Employment Act of 1946, which I was privileged to help enact when I was a Member of the Senate. This report is prepared by the Council and, when it is submitted by the President to the Congress, is given very close study by the Joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report. Both the Joint Committee and the Council were created by the Employment Act to give the President and the Congress greater capacity in dealing with the economic problems faced by any modern industrial economy.

Today, many of the economic problems which prompted the adoption of the Full Employment Act following World War II and the bitter depression years of the 1930's loom less ominously than they did in former years. The terrifying possibility of a plunge into another great depression no longer haunts us. We have enjoyed an 8-year period without ever an economic recession. There is, of course, the problem of now reducing the inflationary forces in our economy without producing a significant increase in unemployment. But, as a result, in a large measure of the Full Employment Act of 1946 and the creation of the Council of Economic Advisers and the Joint Committee on the Economic Report, we are confident that we can make the public and private economic decisions necessary to prevent a return to the periodic economic crises which were for so long characteristic of our economic life. The instrumentalities created by the Employment Act have developed national measures of economic activity, such as the gross national product, national income, and other economic accounts, as a basis for enlightened decisionmaking by Government and industry.

I believe we can begin to do the same thing in the field of social policy. We can develop more objective criteria for measuring the extent of our social problems and for gauging our progress in dealing with these problems.

Our most urgent domestic problems today are social crises rather than economic upheavals. We are witnessing an appalling rise in crime and a corresponding decline in the sense of security of our people. We are being shocked by student revolts into a reconsideration of our comfortable past assumptions that the quality of life automatically improves with an increase in the quantity of economic means available to our citizens—that rises in our gross national product can be correlated directly with increases in human happiness. We are being forced to face the ugly facts of discrimination; the development of poverty cycle and perhaps a permanent poverty class amid great abundance, the breakdown of family life and marriages, widespread mental illness, alcoholism and drug abuse, the deterioration of our inner cities, the continuing slaughter on our highways, the denial of dignity and meaningful life to so many of our senior citizens, and many other broad indications of deep and insistent social problems affecting the lives and happiness of millions of Americans.

In the face of these problems we should bring our social scientists into the forefront of our national decisionmaking, into the highest councils of our Government, and into the active public consciousness of our democratic society—just as we have made economic expertise an essential factor in the decision-making of a modern society.

We should seek to place alongside our annual economic report a comprehensive social report on how we are doing in our efforts to build a society which offers expanding opportunities for meaningful living for our people. We should enable the President, the Congress and the people to judge in the most concrete terms possible how we are doing as a human and humane society.

To this end I am today introducing in the House a proposal which has been introduced in the other body by Senator MONDALE and others to provide a "Full Opportunity Act" to complement the Full Employment Act of two decades ago. This bill provides for the creation in the Executive Office of the President a Council of Social Advisers who would assist the President in the preparation of an annual social report. It would also create a Joint Committee on the Social Report to review this annual report in the Congress and make recommendations to the several committees of the Congress dealing with legislation relating to the social report.

The text of the bill is as follows:

A bill to promote the public welfare

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Full Opportunity Act."

DECLARATION OF POLICY

SEC. 2. In order to promote the general welfare, the Congress declares that it is the continuing policy and responsibility of the Federal Government, consistent with the primary responsibilities of State and local governments and the private sector, to promote and encourage such conditions as will give every American the opportunity to live in decency and dignity, and to provide a clear and precise picture of whether such conditions are promoted and encouraged in such areas as health, education, and training, rehabilitation, housing, vocational opportunities, the arts and humanities, and special assistance for the mentally ill and retarded, the deprived, the abandoned, and the criminal, and by measuring progress in meeting such needs.

SOCIAL REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT

SEC. 3. (a) The President shall transmit to the Congress not later than March 20 of each year a report to be known as the social report, setting forth (1) the overall progress and effectiveness of Federal efforts designed to carry out the policy declared in section 2 with particular emphasis upon the manner in which such efforts serve to meet national social needs in such areas as health, education and training, rehabilitation, housing, vocational opportunities, the arts and humanities, and special assistance for the mentally ill and retarded, the deprived, the abandoned, and the criminal; (2) a review of State, local, and private efforts designed to create the conditions specified in section 2; (3) current and foreseeable needs in the areas served by such efforts and the progress of development of plans to meet such needs; and (4) programs and policies for carrying out the policy declared in section 2, together with such recommendations for legislation as he may deem necessary or desirable.

(b) The President may transmit from time to time to the Congress reports and supplementary to the social report, each of which shall include such supplementary or revised recommendations as he may deem necessary or desirable to achieve the policy declared in section 2.

(c) The social report, and all supplementary reports transmitted under subsection (b) of this section, shall, when transmitted to Congress, be referred to the joint committee created by section 5.

COUNCIL OF SOCIAL ADVISERS TO THE PRESIDENT

SEC. 4. (a) There is created in the Executive Office of the President a Council of Social Advisers (hereinafter called the Council). The Council shall be composed of three members who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and each of whom shall be a person who, as a result of his training, experience, and attainments, is exceptionally qualified to appraise programs and activities of the Government in the light of the policy declared in section 2, and to formulate and recommend programs to carry out such policy. Each member of the Council, other than the Chairman, shall receive compensation at

A DEPARTMENT OF OCEANOGRAPHIC SERVICES

(Mr. PEPPER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. Speaker, we have come a long, long way in a very short time since this country embarked on a crash program of space exploration.

The fruits of this effort will be reached with a manned landing on the moon before the end of the year and the long-range benefits are as unbounded as man's imagination.

The space exploration program, on the whole, is a laudable and worthy enterprise. But I rise today to voice attention to another vast, equally mysterious, largely unexplored and potentially rich environ.

I refer, of course, to the depth, the breadth, and the width of the seas.

In the forward of "Our Nation and the Sea," from the recently released report of the Commission on Marine Science, Engineering and Resources, is the opening statement:

From the days of discovery and colonization, America has looked to the sea. In times of stress the sea has been our ally, and in times of peace, a source of our prosperity. Sometimes hostile and sometimes generous in its moods, the ocean always has offered its abundant resources in countless ways. But only recently have we begun to perceive its true potential.

The report points out that it is now nearly 10 years since the National Academy of Sciences and the U.S. Navy focused attention upon the vital import of our underdeveloped marine resources.

Packed within the 300-pages of this expertly detailed report are facts and forecasts of efforts to explore and control the sea for the service of man. I highly commend this publication to my colleagues.

It is, then, my distinct pleasure today to have the opportunity to introduce a bill to create a Department of Oceanographic Services within the cabinet of the President.

To those who might question the advisability of yet another "bureaucratic department," I would reply that this bill is designed to accomplish just the opposite.

Under the present Federal setup relating to maritime and marine interests, there is a total of 11 separate agencies engaged in the marine sciences.

Not one of these agencies functions in any substantial part for the total interest of a national marine science policy.

This legislation envisions the coordination and consolidation of the major civilian marine functions of the Federal Government to accomplish, among its goals: the expansion of exploration of marine environs and the use of marine resources; development of port, harbor and estuarine areas; enunciation of a national policy pertinent to the maritime and marine interest of the United States, and the revitalization of the American-flag merchant marine.

Under this plan, the Secretary of the Department of Oceanographic Services would work with a general counsel and four Assistant Secretaries, one each designated as the Assistant Secretary for Merchant Marine, Assistant Secretary for Exploration and Resource Development, Assistant Secretary for Marine Fisheries, and Assistant Secretary for Port and Harbor Development.

Transferred to the new Department would be the U.S. Maritime Administration, the Federal Maritime Commission, U.S. Coast Guard, U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, National Oceanographic Data Center of the Office of the U.S. Navy Oceanographer, the Sea-Air Interaction Laboratory, the sea-grant college program of the National Science Foundation.

Also, the Coastal Engineering Research Center of the U.S. Corps of Engineers, Bureau of Commercial Fisheries, Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, and whatever other agencies as the President deems advisable.

There would additionally be created an Office of Marine Geology and Mineral Resources to develop mineral, fossil-fuel exploration and related affairs pertinent to the exploitation of the wealth and reserves of the Continental Shelf, Great Lakes, and world oceans for the enhancement of the national and international economy.

Studies have shown that resources from the oceans will help to diminish the world's protein deficiency. The United States is now recognizing the value of fish protein concentrate—FPC—as the means to end world hunger, and has undertaken steps for large-scale processing FPC for export.

The Government estimates that within two decades 30 to 40 percent of the domestic and world production of petroleum and mineral gas will come from offshore sources.

And we are only beginning to realize the amazing potential of the seas to produce what in time may prove to be the major source of the world's food supply.

In the matter of ocean-borne trade, it has been distressing for me to see the foreign ocean-borne commercial tonnage carried by U.S.-flag ships drop from almost 60 percent in 1947 to less than 6 percent today. Government projections see a further decline to less than 3 percent by 1980.

The policy to move our international commerce aboard cheaper foreign carriers not only reduces the freight revenues accruing to the U.S. merchant marine and aggravates the balance-of-payments deficit, but also erodes our status as a world maritime power.

We must focus prompt attention to the plight of our country's maritime fleet.

We must have an awakened attitude to the potentials that can be obtained from the exploration and cultivation of the seas. Our past and present greatness grew in large measure from dependency on the seas. Our future greatness could very well depend on it.

About three-fourths of our population is concentrated in 30 States which border the oceans, the Gulf of Mexico, and the Great Lakes. Nearly one-half of our industrial might is concentrated in coastal counties.

We are only recently becoming aware of the active and effective work that the Soviet Union is pursuing in our last frontier on earth—the oceans.

For these and other reasons, I offer for consideration a cabinet Department of Oceanographic Services.

Mr. Speaker, I request that at this point the full text of the legislation proposed be printed in the RECORD:

H.R. 9482

A bill to coordinate and consolidate the major civilian marine functions of the Federal Government through the establishment of a Department of Oceanographic Services to enunciate national policies pertinent to the maritime and marine interests of the United States, to further the expanded exploration of marine environs and the use of marine resources, to revitalize the American-flag merchant marine, to develop port, harbor and estuarine areas, and for other purposes

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SHORT TITLE

SECTION 1. This Act may be cited as the "Oceanographic Services Act of 1969."

DECLARATION OF PURPOSES AND POLICIES

SEC. 2. The Congress finds and declares:

(1) That the lessons of our history in unlocking the frontiers and resources of the North American Continent for the benefit of mankind offers an historic parallel with the situation confronting the Nation today in the virtually unexplored and underdeveloped resources of the marine environments of the oceans, the Great Lakes, and the Continental Shelf. That the historic role of Federal Government in these United States with regard to little-known environs and the discovery of potential resources of benefit to its people is primarily one of exploration and survey, of leading the way through geographic exploration for scientific investigation, research, and conceptual development by the academic community, private industry and government alike, and by private industrial and capital investment and development to follow. That the expansion and enhancement of governmental exploration efforts for the greater ascertainment and delineation of marine environment and resources is clearly in the national interest.

(2) That the United States acquired under international law on June 10, 1964, sovereign rights to the exploration and development of resources of the Continental Shelf under the Convention of the Continental Shelf adopted at the United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea. Pursuant to the internationally recognized and exclusive rights so secured, the United States assumes the responsibility of executing an accelerated program of exploration and development of the physical, chemical, geological, and biological resources of the Continental Shelf.

(3) That the expansion of human knowledge of phenomena in and related to the oceans, the marine environment, the Great Lakes, their boundaries and contents, and to the interaction of sea, earth, and atmosphere is of paramount importance to the peoples of the world and particularly of importance to the general welfare and security of the United States and therefore worthy of vigorous pursuit.

(4) That the United States must encourage private investment in the economic utilization of the marine resources on the Continental Shelf and in the Great Lakes and oceanic environs and determine the benefits from the use of these marine resources for increased investment and economic growth.

(5) That the development and improvement of the capabilities, performance, and efficiency of vehicles, equipment, and instruments for use in exploration, research, surveys, the recovery of resources, and the transmission of energy in the marine environments is an integral and prerequisite part of the national effort and is worthy of maximum encouragement.

(6) That the effective utilization of the scientific and engineering resources of the United States, requires close cooperation and coordination among all interested Federal and State agencies and the private industrial sectors of the United States, in order to avoid unnecessary duplication of effort, facilities and equipment, or waste, and further that such cooperation and coordination is only possible when the various agencies and private industries concerned with marine endeavor foster the collection, storing, and distribution of significant data and knowledge acquired as a result of scientific and engineering marine and atmospheric research developments, surveys, and technological advances when such are in the national interest.

(7) That the establishment of long-range studies of the potential benefits to the United States economy, security, health, and welfare to be gained from the opportunities for, and the problems involved in the utilization of scientific marine, Great Lakes and oceanic research, investigations, and surveys is paramount to the continued enhancement of the national interest.

(8) That it is of paramount importance for the United States to cooperate with other nations and groups of nations, including organizations of the United Nations, in oceanographic, marine, and related development, research and surveys when such cooperation is in the national interest.

(9) That the preservation and enhancement of the role of the United States as a leader in oceanographic and marine science, technology, and development is clearly a national goal and that to this end the advance of education and training in marine science and technology is of basic importance.

(10) That the execution of the purposes and policies heretofore enumerated and the recognition of the vital role of marine resources and oceanographic and atmospheric considerations in the affairs of our national life and the enhancement of our international stature in the conduct of such affairs requires the establishment of an executive department to achieve the best administration of the principal civilian programs of the Federal Government concerned with marine affairs.

(11) That the American-flag merchant marine is and has been since the founding of the Republic, vital to the defense of the Nation. And that its revitalization is necessary to both the economy and the national defense. That, because of major differentials, equipment and labor costs between the United States and foreign maritime nations, the Federal Government is required to play a major role in cooperation with industry to support the merchant marine. That this role should be expanded and supported in concert with the nation's economic and defense needs.

(12) That the fisheries of the high seas, the inter-continental shelf and such major inland fresh water bodies as the Great Lakes contain enough food on an annual yield basis to feed several times the present population of the world. That, because of the exploding world population and increasing world hunger both in the United States and other countries the world's fisheries resources have taken on new importance, particularly since agricultural production in the United States and abroad is approaching its outer limits. That this resource has been scarcely tapped by the United States fishing industry. That a more dynamic United States policy toward fisheries is required to stimulate the further harvesting of these invaluable replenishable resources. That, through such a policy, advantage can be taken of the technological and scientific developments that lead to a greatly expanded and more efficient harvest of these resources. That such government policy is in the best interest of the Nation through the founding of human nutritional improvement both domestically and internationally.

(13) That the port harbor and estuarine areas of the nation constitute increasingly valuable resources, particularly as the nation's population surges from inland toward these coastal areas. That a defined government policy toward port harbor and estuarine areas can help stimulate and develop conservation. That federal guidelines in the usage of the latest technological and scientific developments can lead to the orderly and most efficient development of these areas. That such policy is clearly in the national interest.

LAST HOME OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN SHOULD BE A NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE

(Mr. MICHEL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. MICHEL, Mr. Speaker, it is a great privilege to join my distinguished colleague and neighbor, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. FINDLEY), in sponsoring a bill which, if it becomes law, will make the last home of Abraham Lincoln a national historic site.

Although the great emancipator was born in Kentucky and grew to manhood in Indiana, it was as a citizen of Illinois that he achieved national and worldwide fame. He was a resident of Springfield from 1844 until 1861, when he became President of the United States. He and Mrs. Lincoln had looked forward to a return to their home in Illinois' capital at the conclusion of his service as Chief Executive. Unfortunately, he was not able to enjoy a few years among his old friends and neighbors as an elder statesman, for an assassin's bullet decreed otherwise.

Mr. Speaker, even though Abraham Lincoln was not permitted to return to Springfield, his spirit has pervaded it in the century that has elapsed since he saved the Union, freed the bondsmen, and gave a new birth of freedom. While Lincoln belongs to Illinois, he also belongs to the Nation. While his home is a State memorial, let us pass this legislation and make it a national shrine.

HAWAII'S 10 YEARS OF STATEHOOD

(Mr. MICHEL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, 10 years ago, on March 12, 1959, when the House of Representatives voted overwhelmingly to make Hawaii one of the United States, I was one of the Members of this body who voted "aye." As the other body had, on the previous day, passed the act providing for admission, the measure needed only the signature of President Dwight D. Eisenhower to become effective.

On the following July 4, the 49 stars of the flag of the United States became 50, as the new State joined the galaxy. Although it did not achieve statehood until six decades after its annexation by the United States, Hawaii had long been one with our spirit.

Many of the inhabitants of Hawaii had come from the United States. Hawaii had borne the brunt of the Japanese attack that plunged our Nation into what was to become World War II. The sons of Hawaii fought courageously, not only against Japan, but against National Socialist Germany and Fascist Italy. When I voted for statehood for Hawaii, I was only confirming a fact, because, as far as I am concerned, it was already a part of our great country.

Mr. Speaker, the first 10 years of statehood have been years of progress and prosperity for our youngest State. May the people of the State of Hawaii write even brighter chapters in the decades that lie ahead.

STUDENT VIOLENCE AND THE LAW

(Mr. HUNT asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. HUNT. Mr. Speaker, I am most encouraged by the actions of Secretary Finch of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and President Nixon, over the past week in announcing the intent of the administration to enforce the laws relating to denial of Federal funds to students who substantially disrupt the operations of our colleges and universities.

That it was necessary in the first instance to say the law will be enforced is evidence not only of the growing seriousness of unrestrained student violence, but of the failure of the past administration to faithfully execute the laws as Congress directed it to do. For those who have probed the depths of the appendix of "The Budget of the U.S. Government," fiscal year 1970, it is to be noted that on page 486, the former administration proposed to delete section 411 of the Departments of Labor, and Health, Education, and Welfare Appropriations Act, 1969. You will recall that that section prohibits the use of funds under the act to provide a loan, guarantee of a loan, or a grant to any applicant that, through his actions, prevents the officials or students at an institution of higher education from engaging in their duties or pursuing their studies.

Only last month, in my remarks to the House, I suggested that "every ounce of public support must be marshalled through the elected and appointed public officials of Government to enhance and encourage the exercise of the existing prerogatives of educational administrators to deal firmly with those whose conduct interferes with the lawful functioning of the institution in a manner that paralyzes its educational responsibilities." There should be no doubt, now, in the minds of our college and university administrations that the Government is reflecting the attitude of the public in its appeals to put down this student violence so that reason might once again prevail.

I trust, Mr. Speaker, that the administrators of our institutions of higher education will heed the words of our President and will forthrightly comply with the intent and purposes of the law.

GREEK INDEPENDENCE DAY

(Mr. WYMAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. WYMAN. Mr. Speaker, today, March 25, is the 148th anniversary of Greek independence. It is, therefore, a fitting occasion to review the heritage of this noble nation whose people have given, and continue to give, much to human achievement.

I am sure that most Americans recognize and are deeply impressed with the fact that so much of the world's basic knowledge, in so many varied fields, is of Greek derivation. For example, Grecian art, philosophy, literature, and science have profoundly affected each of our daily lives.

Americans recognize the concept of freedom of the individual. Historically, this concept is Greek and our concern today for man's freedom was no less important to the ancient Greeks. Indeed, it was the genesis of much of their civilization. Herodotus, the Greek historian, quotes a Greek conversing with a Persian:

You do not know what freedom is . . . if you did, you would fight for it with bare hands—if you had no weapons.

One cannot find a more appropriate comment on today's many problems particularly those confronting this Nation now in Southeast Asia.

But paramount among the reasons for Greek freedom was their willingness to obey the law, whether written or not. Their respect for law is also a cornerstone upon which our cherished freedoms rest. In addition, their ideals of self-control, moderation and devotion to reason served to substantiate their commitment to freedom.

While Grecian culture flourished under the city-states, the inability of Greece to unite politically led to the annexation of her territories. The death of Alexander the Great in 323 B.C., the shattering of his empire, and the lack of national unity laid the groundwork for defeat by Rome near the end of the Macedonian wars in 146 B.C. and Greece became a Roman province; but Athens remained a center of learning, and the Greek language and culture were widely influential in Rome as well as other places. In A.D. 395, the Roman Empire crumbled, and Greece became the center of the Byzantine Empire for more than a thousand years—a genuine recognition of Greek knowledge and influence.

The Ottoman Turks who conquered Constantinople in 1453 gave the Greeks a large measure of political autonomy. Greek merchants became engaged in worldwide trade, and the Greek Orthodox Church gained ascendancy in communal affairs. But the age-old flame for individual freedom and liberty was still smoldering in the hearts of the Greek people and the spark was united unsuccessfully in the brief uprising of 1770. That revolt led to severe retaliation by the Turks, and in 1821, under the leadership of Archbishop Patras, the Greeks on March 25 launched their war of independence against Turkish suzerainty. Their cause was assisted by Britain, France, and Russia who recognized Greece's independence in the London Protocol of 1830.

Mr. Speaker, a strong sense of patriotism is characteristic of both modern and ancient Greeks—as an example, in 1912-13, an estimated 50,000 Greek immigrants returned home from the United States, at their own expense of passage, to help their motherland capture northern Greece during the Balkan wars. The magnitude of this undertaking becomes clear when it is realized that free Greece's population at that time was 3 million. The volunteers from America were decisive.

In summation, the Greeks of yesterday left such an imprint on their world that those of us in the modern world literally live in their shadow. One might reflect for a moment that the State of Virginia has been the site of so many battles during the Revolutionary and Civil Wars, and has been the birthplace of so many of our great men, that it can fairly be said every acre has a story to tell. In the case of Greece, with its longer history of struggle and glory, virtually every rock has its own story.

The most esteemed modern Greek writer, Nikos Kazantzakis, has written:

Greek soil has been so saturated with blood, sweat and tears, the Greek mountains have witnessed so much human struggle, that you shudder in contemplating the fact that here on these mountains and shores, the destiny . . . of all mankind was at stake.

Ancient Greece picked man up and set him on his feet as an individual with individual worth. After many centuries of decline and foreign occupation, the revolution of 1821 began the liberation of modern Greece. This land which has given us so much has much to give to the world once again and I am pleased to have this opportunity to salute Greece and its sons and daughters on this Greek Independence Day 1969.

RESOLUTION TO PROVIDE KIND OF FUNDING AUTHORITY ESSENTIAL TO SUCCESSFUL U.S. EFFORT WITHIN THE INTERNATIONAL BIOLOGICAL PROGRAM

(Mr. DADDARIO asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. DADDARIO. Mr. Speaker, I am today joining with Chairman MILLER of the Committee on Science and Astronautics in the introduction of a new resolution designed to provide the kind of funding authority which is essential to a successful U.S. effort within the international biological program—IBP.

The resolution provides no new authorization or specific appropriation. It simply assures that appropriate Federal agencies will be able to support the IBP as the Office of Science and Technology has requested without any question as to legality or congressional intent.

Hence the provision in the resolution which states:

The Congress authorizes and requests all Federal departments and agencies having functions or objectives which coincide with or are related to those of the International Biological Program to obligate or make appropriate transfers of funds to the program from moneys available for such functions or objectives and provide such other support as may be appropriate.

This provision appears to be necessary in view of the uncertainty of some of the departments and agencies concerning their present authority to aid the IBP through the Interagency Coordinating Committee for the IBP even though the amounts involved are relatively nominal.

Mr. Speaker, the IBP is not just another Government venture and it is not some abstract international dream. It is a very real, planned, and coordinated effort to establish an ecological base for the management of our environment and for the prevention of the deterioration which is threatening our entire planet. It may be one of the most crucial programs, in spite of its mild-sounding title, to evolve in our time.

Let me provide a bit of background.

The international biological program is the scientific core of many of the problems with which the Committee on Science and Astronautics, and indeed the entire Congress, has been concerned over the past several years. As Mr. MILLER reminded a convention of American biologists at Ohio State University last September, this program is centrally ecological and as such it is indispensable to the development of the intellectual disciplines at stake in pollution abatement and in the appraisal and control of the quality of our environment. He emphasized then, as have witnesses before my subcommittee, that the needed increase in numbers of theoretical and field scientists competent to deal with environmental problems can come only from an action program like the IBP which involves fieldwork and at the same time strives for a more complete fundamental base.

Since last summer when the Subcommittee on Science, Research and Development completed its hearings and review on the status of the IBP a great deal has transpired to justify our original enthusiasm and to eliminate those reservations we had concerning the organization and management of such a complex program.

The U.S. IBP leadership has responded well to our several suggestions. The scope of the program has been focused on the most pressing problems, the national committee has evolved into a decision-making body, and agreements on points of responsibility have been worked out with the National Science Foundation as the lead agency. The program's grasslands ecosystem project, even on a minimum budget, appears to have become a model project in systems ecology; its 700-page progress report and proposal of January 1969 is a complete document which justifies past and planned expenditures for that biome. This program helps provide the confidence we need for funding and supporting recommendations to the Federal agencies for real efforts on other biomes such as the deciduous and coniferous forests, the arctic tundra, as well as those projects which deal with our "urban ecosystem."

Mr. Speaker, since World War II we have left ecology—the only scientific discipline which specializes in the total environment—to its own devices in a market in which it could not possibly compete. As a result, a science which might have matured to meet our problem solving needs in environmental matters has fallen behind the bold advances in many other areas of American science.

It is the problem solving—the utilitarian and practical aspects of conservation and its management—which is the motivation for the IBP, rather than the usual emphasis on sentiment and esthetics. This pragmatic approach has led ecological practitioners in the United States and in some 70 other nations to undertake the complex task of planning and designing a research program which will produce the manpower, skills and theory essential to the management of our environmental resources.

We have no responsible policy choice other than to respond favorably to the needs of the ecological sciences. Our immediate opportunity is the international biological program which we have requested American biologists to design and promulgate. Thus we intend and expect, by means of this resolution, that Federal agencies which conduct relevant scientific work will support the IBP to the extent that meets the needs of the U.S. projects under that program.

BLACKBURN INTRODUCES RETIRED OFFICERS PAY EQUALIZATION BILL

(Mr. BLACKBURN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. BLACKBURN. Mr. Speaker, today it is my privilege to reintroduce a bill to equalize the retirement pay of members of the uniformed services of equal rank and years of service.

The purpose of this bill is to repeal that provision of the law which provides for the adjustment of retirement or retainer pay when the Consumer Price Index goes up 3 percent. Substitute for this provision would be my bill which would have the pay of personnel recomputed to reflect increases in the basic pay of persons on active duty. Thus, when the basic pay of active military personnel is increased, the retired or retainer pay of retired members would be recomputed on the basis of the new pay rate for the grade in which he was serving at the time of his retirement, rather than at the rate in effect at the time he retired, which is currently the case.

Under present law members of the armed services who retired with equal rank and equal length of service, but not at the same time, can be receiving greatly varying rates of retirement pay. The rate differential between some of our older retirees and the younger comrades has slipped to as much as 30 percent.

President Nixon issued a statement during his campaign which I am sure his administration will follow:

Our retired military personnel have been unjustly treated because of the failure of the Congress to remedy the growing disparity between active and retired pay. This unfair discrimination is wholly contrary to the long established principles of equalizing retired pay with existing active duty pay for the same grade or rank.

I urge my colleagues to seriously consider this proposal in order to correct a glaring inequity.

NATIONAL HOUSING CONFERENCE CALLS FOR NEW HOUSING EFFORTS

(Mr. PATMAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD, and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, the National Housing Conference recently held its 38th annual convention in Washington. Along with other Members of Congress, it was my privilege to address the conference as I have done for many years during its conventions. I was pleased to note that Secretary Romney and his principal staff appeared on a panel at one of the sessions at the conference.

For many years, the National Housing Conference has been recognized as the conscience of the public interest in programs for housing, urban renewal and community development. Its members include representatives of public interest organizations, local officials, labor officials, church, business and professional groups—all of whom share the goal of providing adequate housing for people of all incomes. NHC has functioned as a clearinghouse for information and support of these programs over the years. It has played a leading role in securing the enactment of many measures for Federal assistance to these programs which have passed the Congress over the past 3½ decades, including the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968.

During the annual convention, the membership of the National Housing Conference adopted a comprehensive set of resolutions relating to all segments of the housing and urban development programs. These resolutions were the result of many meetings during the past year attended by representatives of public interest organizations from all parts of the country. There was a continuing legislative policy committee which functioned under the chairmanship of Mr. David L. Krooth. As president of the National Housing Conference, Mr. Nathaniel S. Keith then presented the recommendations of this committee to several meetings of the board of directors of NHC which adopted resolutions to be presented at the annual meeting. At the convention, Mr. William J. Guste, Jr., served as chairman of the resolutions committee which adopted the resolutions that were later approved by the full membership. I recite this process because it indicates the careful study and wide participation involved in the formulation and adoption of the resolutions.

I believe it would be helpful for Members of Congress and others to read these resolutions in order to have a better understanding of the critical problems in our cities and the solutions recommended by this group of outstanding professional and civic leaders. These resolutions are really an encyclopedia which we can use for reference purposes. On each program, they contain a statement of: first, its objectives and the actions taken in the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968; second, the actions taken in appropriation acts; and third, the recommendations for necessary additional appropriations, legislation, and administrative actions. The resolutions not only cover the programs enacted into law, but they also recommend additional and supplemental programs. There is a table of contents at the beginning to help you locate the subjects in which you are interested.

In speaking to the National Housing Conference, I pointed out that the housing field is pockmarked by goals that have never been met. All of us here can recall the string of high-sounding goals that have come forward from the National Housing Conference, from Presidents of the United States, and from various committees of the Congress. Wonderful words, excellent goals, but little performance.

This is shameful in a great and powerful nation. We pride ourselves on our ability to produce. In the production of material goods, we look on ourselves as second to none in the world. We are able to build sophisticated space vehicles that reach to the moon. We are able to glut the market with millions of shiny high-powered automobiles, and we are able to devise and construct the most complex computer and communications systems. Yet somehow—and for some reason—we cannot put together the financing, the bricks, the lumber, and the glass to house our population in decent, reasonably priced homes.

This kind of failure demands attention from the highest levels of the Federal Government. This is an emergency which cannot be dealt with by another round of high-sounding Presidential messages and reports from the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. The Nation must have action—real action—on housing and not another reshuffling of existing machinery. We need officials all down the line who really believe in these programs and who believe that the Nation's domestic priorities can and should be met.

In the 1968 Housing Act, Congress established a housing goal of 26 million units in the next 10 years and declared that "the highest priority and emphasis should be given to meeting the housing needs of those families for which the national goal has not become a reality." We do not accomplish anything by passing great authorizing laws like the 1968 Housing Act unless there is a proper followup with adequate appropriations and effective administration.

There is no doubt about America's capacity to meet this housing goal if we all work together toward achieving this goal and remove the obstacles that impede the housing program. We must find answers and take action in the critical areas of financing and credit, both as to its availability and its price. We must get full funding of the 1968 act by the Congress. We must get action by housing officials, labor, the building industry, and suppliers to meet our housing needs and goals and produce housing in the volume and at prices which the American people need and can afford.

The resolutions follow:

RESOLUTIONS RECOMMENDED BY THE LEGISLATIVE POLICY COMMITTEE AND APPROVED BY THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE NATIONAL HOUSING CONFERENCE

CHAPTER A. GENERAL STATEMENT OF PROBLEMS AND OBJECTIVES

1. America's cities are in a crisis resulting from the decay of decades and from failure to improve the quality of American life. Many of the people in the cities are ill-housed and live in despair and disillusionment. The need for decent housing is at the heart of the crisis. We must take vigorous and immediate action toward achieving our goal of providing good homes and good neighborhoods for all who are ill-housed. It is not enough to build new housing or rehabilitate existing housing. At the same time there must be an expansion of social programs and services for the people.

2. We must respond to the hopes and aspirations of the ill-housed and eliminate their human suffering and disillusionment which is contributing to demonstrations and violence in our cities. In these Resolutions, NHC presents measures which are essential to help solve these problems and alleviate the crisis in our cities. No single program can embrace the solutions to all of the cities' problems. These Resolutions recommend programs designed especially to:

(a) Provide good homes for people of all incomes in wholesome living environments which are in keeping with our Nation's standards and aspirations;

(b) To take action to revitalize our cities and save them from blight and obsolescence; and

(c) To expand social programs, services and job opportunities to improve the quality of American life.

3. The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 was enacted by an overwhelming bipartisan vote. It is a comprehensive and historic law to help meet these critical housing and urban problems. On behalf of NHC and other public interest organizations who cooperate with us, we express our appreciation for the acceptance in the 1968 Housing Act of many of the recommendations which NHC made last year. However, much more remains to be done. In these Resolutions, we are recommending additional measures which are needed to accomplish our goals—both (a) through new or amendatory legislation, and (b) through changes in policy and improvements in administration of existing legislation.

CHAPTER B. CONGRESSIONAL DECLARATION OF HIGHEST PRIORITY FOR HOUSING LOWER INCOME FAMILIES

1. The 1968 Housing Act reaffirms the national housing goal of "a decent home and a suitable living environment for every American family" which was first proclaimed in a housing law enacted 20 years ago. In the Declaration of Policy of the 1968 Housing Act, the Congress "finds that this goal has not been fully realized for many of the Nation's lower income families; that this is a matter of grave national concern; and that there exist in the public and private sectors of the economy the resources and capabilities necessary to the full realization of this goal." NHC applauds the action of the Congress in so clearly restating our national goal and affirming that it is a matter of grave national concern that this goal has not been realized for many of the lower income families.

2. In these times when there are so many competing demands for the use of federal funds and national resources, it is most significant that Congress further declared that these programs should have the highest priority. This Congressional determination is so important that we quote it in full as a necessary introduction to these Resolutions:

"The Congress declares that in the administration of those housing programs authorized by this Act which are designed to assist families with incomes so low that they could not otherwise decently house themselves, and of other Government programs designed to assist in the provision of housing for such families, the highest priority and emphasis should be given to meeting the housing needs of those families for which the national goal has not become a reality; and in the carrying out of such programs there should be the fullest practicable utilization of the resources and capabilities of private enterprise and of individual self-help techniques." (Emphasis added.)

3. This declaration by the Congress recognizes the need for a drastic realignment of past priorities in our federal budget and expenditures, since these housing programs were given a lower priority than other less urgent programs. Now the Congress had declared that these programs should be given the highest priority and there is a federal commitment to take all action necessary to achieve the goal of providing decent housing for families with incomes so low that they could not otherwise decently house themselves. To translate this highest priority into reality takes firm and courageous action. We must assure that action is taken to carry out this mandate. Specifically this highest priority means that:

(a) All of the legislative authorizations in the 1968 Housing Act should be provided with full funds and full contract authority in Appropriation Acts.

(b) Such funds and contract authority should not be subject to recapture by the Budget Bureau; instead, these programs should be exempted from the further restraints and recaptures pursuant to across-the-board reductions in the national budget, such as the $6 billion cut in the current fiscal year.

(c) When funds or contract authority are made available, they should be promptly committed so that the planning and work in initiating projects can proceed promptly in order to step up the rate of production as contemplated by the Congressional goals.

(d) Adequate legislative authorizations should be included in future housing acts to provide sufficient funds and contract authority to achieve the Congressional goals.

(e) Adequate administrative staffs should be made available to carry out the new programs and achieve the Congressional goals.

(f) Administrative actions should be geared to accomplishment rather than caution and all necessary measures should be taken to simplify and expedite housing programs at all levels to speed them up.

(g) Adequate authorizations and appropriations of federal grants required for public facilities and services in housing and urban development programs, including those relating to health, education, and welfare and other purposes.

CHAPTER C. GOALS TO ACHIEVE HOUSING WE NEED

1. In the 1968 Housing Act there is a very important determination made by the Congress, which we quote:

"The Congress finds that the supply of the Nation's housing is not increasing rapidly enough to meet the national housing goal, established in the Housing Act of 1949, of the realization as soon as feasible of the goal of a decent home and a suitable living environment for every American family. The Congress reaffirms this national housing goal and determines that it can be substantially achieved within the next decade by the construction or rehabilitation of twenty-six million housing units, six million of these for low and moderate income families." (Sec. 1601) (Emphasis added.)

During the next decade Congress has fixed the goal to produce 26 million dwelling units, 6 million of which are to be for low and moderate income families. Moreover, it has determined that this goal can be substantially achieved. This includes both new housing units and rehabilitated housing.

2. (a) The Congress also required that the President make a report to it by January 15, 1969, setting forth a plan to be carried out during the next decade for the elimination of all substandard housing and the realization of the foregoing housing goals. A further report is to be made on January 15 of each succeeding year comparing the results achieved during the preceding fiscal year with the objectives for (a) the completion of new or rehabilitated housing units and (b) the reduction in occupied substandard housing. In this manner, Congress will be informed each year as to the deficit in housing production and the recommendations of the President concerning the measures necessary to eliminate this deficit and to meet the goal during the coming year. NHC recommends that the report should identify gaps or areas of unmet needs in our housing program.

(b) NHC further recommends that there be Congressional hearings each year on the Report received from the President concerning the progress toward meeting the goals and the additional legislation and other actions necessary to achieve the goals in the coming year.

3. In keeping with these Congressional goals there should be no gaps or areas of unmet needs in our housing programs. Effective means must be developed so that housing will be available to families of all incomes. Each family whose income is too low to obtain decent housing should receive the amount of assistance it needs to get such housing. We must reach the unserved income group below the level now served by public housing or rent supplements as more fully discussed below. Likewise, we must avoid a gap or area of unmet need in programs serving moderate and lower income families through private enterprise with federal aid consisting of (a) below market interest rates under Section 221(d)(3); and (b) assistance under Sections 235 and 236.

4. While the law approves an average national goal of 2,600,000 units annually during the next ten years, NHC urges that the average national goal should be 3,000,000 units a year. NHC agrees that 2,000,000 units should be built annually for those above the low and moderate income groups who do not need federal assistance. However, instead of 600,000 units annually for low and moderate income housing, NHC recommends a goal of at least 1,000,000 units annually for these income groups—of which half would be for the low income group. The recommendations contained in these Resolutions are intended to provide the measures necessary to achieve this goal and bring construction up to a level commensurate with it.

CHAPTER D. OBSTACLES WHICH PREVENT NEW PROGRAMS FROM STARTING

1. We are facing a critical emergency which will prevent the building of housing to serve lower income families through the new interest assistance programs and the rent supplement program. Under these programs, the capital financing has been shifted to the private market where mortgage loans must be obtained at market interest rates which are currently 7½%.

2. Unfortunately, there is no assurance that it will be possible to sell these FHA-insured mortgages at par, and no federal funds have been made available to buy them. If sponsors of projects cannot obtain this financing at par in the private market they will have to pay a discount which is not covered by mortgage proceeds. Nonprofit organizations do not have this money to pay this discount. Cooperatives will not be able to increase the downpayments by the amount needed for the discount above the amount which is already required. Other sponsors will not increase their investment by this amount.

3. The current 7½% interest rate on FHA-insured mortgages was declared to be a "temporary" solution. On housing to serve those of moderate or lower incomes, we should find a way to achieve a more reasonable interest rate without charging the consumer for discounts. NHC strongly recommends an approach whereby GNMA purchases mortgages for such housing at par under its special assistance programs and then resells the mortgages to FNMA at the market price.

4. The Federal National Mortgage Association ("FNMA") is no longer regarded as a government agency or a part of the Budget as a result of action taken in the 1968 Housing Act to establish it as a private institution with a gradual retirement of the federal investment. As a private institution, FNMA will not provide subsidies. Accordingly, it will not purchase mortgages at a price or interest rate which results in a yield below the current market yield. FNMA recently took action to issue advance commitments to buy mortgages under the Section 236 and rent supplement programs at a price based upon the market as established through weekly auctions in the sale of single-family home mortgages. When the interest rate was 6¾%, FNMA was requiring a discount on a mortgage under the programs of interest assistance and rent supplements which ranged from 1½% to 5%, depending upon the auction prices on single-family mortgages and yield-related prices on multifamily mortgages. This discount on purchase commitments varied from week to week, based upon the auction prices on single-family mortgages and the special yield-related price for mortgages on rent supplement and interest subsidy (236) projects. Now with 7½% rate FNMA's current discount on these mortgages is 1½%.

5. On a program which Congress declared was entitled to the highest priority, we must find a way to achieve two objectives:

(a) to make mortgage financing available at reasonable interest rates for housing to serve those of moderate or lower incomes; and

(b) to obtain capital financing for such projects without requiring the sponsors to pay a discount which they are unable to do.

6. Fortunately, we have two institutions available to help in providing this mortgage financing—the Federal National Mortgage Association ("FNMA") which has now become a private operation and the Government National Mortgage Association ("GNMA") which is authorized to provide special assistance. These two institutions should work together in a "tandem" program. NHC urges that GNMA purchase these market-interest-rate mortgages at par under its special assistance program. It is imperative that this be done to enable the development of housing under the interest-assistance and rent supplement programs. In the Reports of the House and Senate Committees, there was a clear statement of intention by the Congress that they intended special assistance funds to be used to purchase these mortgages when necessary. In fact, Congress made an additional $500 million of special assistance funds available on July 1, 1969, to supplement the $625 million of such funds which became available on July 1, 1968, under the existing law. As to these funds, the committee reports stated the Congressional intention as follows: "It is understood, of course, that the President could use these funds as needed, along with the present special assistance funds to support the new sections 235, 236 and 237 programs of housing for lower income families."

7. Accordingly, we strongly recommend that the President authorize the use of special assistance funds for the GNMA purchase of mortgages at par under the interest assistance and rent supplement programs. After it has purchased the mortgages at par, GNMA would sell them at the current market price and reuse the sales proceeds to buy additional mortgages. There should be only one commitment and marketing fee charged—the one to be paid to FNMA which will provide a take-out commitment to buy the mortgages from GNMA. Unless this action is taken now, these housing programs will be stopped and lower income families will be denied the fulfillment of legislation to meet their housing needs. Obviously, with higher interest rates, there will be a lower volume of housing produced with the contract authority available under the 1968 Housing Act.

8. It is necessary that additional measures be taken to meet the needs for mortgage financing for the programs involving interest assistance and rent supplements. While the authorized amount of special assistance funds will help to start and continue these programs, it will not be sufficient to meet their increasing needs for capital funds as the programs accelerate. Under the 3-year programs authorized by the 1968 Housing Act for interest assistance and rent supplements, a total of $18 billion of mortgage financing will be required or an average of $6 billion a year. We must assure the availability of a steady flow of mortgage financing without requiring sponsors either (a) to pay discounts on mortgages for which they lack funds; or (b) to pay unreasonable interest rates in order to avoid discounts. NHC recommends a new program to meet this problem. Since GNMA does not have special assistance funds to buy or hold the billions of dollars of mortgages which will be involved as the new programs accelerate, we recommend that GNMA sell the mortgages after it has purchased them. GNMA would sell them at the current market price. GNMA would then reuse the sales proceeds to buy additional mortgages through the operation of its revolving fund. Under such a program the amount that would appear in the federal budget would represent only the discount instead of 100% of any mortgage held by GNMA.

9. In the foregoing discussions, we have referred to sales to FNMA at a discount if the mortgage bears an interest rate below the special related yield for multifamily mortgages. However, there may be times when the interest fixed in the mortgage would justify a sale of the mortgage to FNMA at a premium. If such conditions arise, it should be recognized that FNMA would pay a premium to GNMA for the mortgage based upon its yield as compared with the prevailing yields in the market.

10. The proposed program would represent a proper use of GNMA as a governmental agency to provide the limited subsidy assistance required to meet the discounts which nonprofit, cooperative or other sponsors are unable to pay. At the same time, by reselling the mortgage in the private market, GNMA would accomplish the Congressional purpose of obtaining private financing for the projects. Such mortgages could be sold by GNMA to FNMA (as a private mortgage), insurance companies and other investors. They should be prepared to buy the mortgages at the prices which reflect the current market prices.

The proposed program would enable GNMA to utilize its limited special assistance funds as a revolving fund to provide a steady flow of capital financing at reasonable interest rates for the interest assistance and rent supplement programs and other special assistance programs. This would help enable the fulfillment of the Congressional goals to provide housing which is urgently needed for moderate and lower income families.

11. Besides its use to provide capital financing for projects receiving interest assistance and rent supplements, the proposed program should also be used for the GNMA purchase at par and resale at market prices of other mortgages now covered by special assistance authorizations. This includes programs which Congress has previously determined had a sufficient public interest to merit such special assistance, such as market-rate mortgages under Sections 213, 221 (d) (3) and 220. Moreover, as to these and other multifamily mortgages, FNMA should buy them at the same special yield-related price as it now pays for mortgages aided by interest assistance and rent supplements, instead of charging higher discounts on these mortgages. These multifamily mortgages have the same lower servicing costs as multifamily mortgages aided by interest assistance on rent supplements.

12. There is an alternative solution to this problem of mortgage discounts. FHA could include the discount as part of the cost of the project, just as other financing costs and building costs are now included. If this were done, mortgage proceeds would be available to pay the discounts, so this would meet the problem of sponsors who are unable to pay discounts.

13. Besides assuring a market for mortgages on the completed projects, it is necessary to assure interim financing during the period when the projects are under construction. In past tight-money periods, there were times when it was not possible to obtain construction financing at a reasonable price. To avoid a recurrence of this problem in the present tight-money period, NHC recommends that FNMA issue a commitment which would cover both the construction financing and the permanent financing on a project. FNMA could take a 90% participation in the construction financing and another mortgage institution could take a 10% participation and handle the processing involved in construction advances. Under such a program, the construction financing should be provided for a total fee which is not more than the amount allowed in the mortgage.

14. NHC urges the repeal of the requirement that nonprofit sponsors make a 5% investment in rent supplement projects as a condition to the use of special assistance funds for the GNMA purchase of mortgages on a nonprofit project. Nonprofit sponsors cannot meet this requirement and should not be denied the use of special assistance funds for the purchase of their mortgages at par.

15. In addition to its present authority to make purchases on the open market, the Federal Reserve Board should be authorized to purchase directly from FNMA, GNMA and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board the obligations issued by these agencies. This would assure that the funds would be channeled directly into the mortgage market when needed during periods of monetary stringency and rising interest rates. These obligations would include participation certificates or other securities issued against a pool of mortgages or consolidated debentures or other obligations.

16. NHC recommends a 2-year extension of the legislation lifting the 6% interest ceiling on mortgages which are FHA-insured or VA-guaranteed.

CHAPTER DD. NEED FOR ASSURING AN ADEQUATE SUPPLY OF MORTGAGE FUNDS AT REASONABLE INTEREST RATES FOR LOW AND MODERATE INCOME FAMILIES

1. It is important to reduce interest rates and increase the supply of mortgage funds for low and moderate income housing. Low and moderate income housing is least able to compete for mortgage funds. In this statement we recommend that programs be developed to assure an adequate flow of capital into housing, particularly for low and moderate income families.

(a) There will not be an adequate supply of mortgage funds for the program and the achievement of the housing goals set forth in the Housing Act of 1968 unless Congress and the Administration take measures to assure the availability of adequate mortgage funds for housing. Housing cannot compete with others seeking money for financing and offering higher interest rates, such as those who are building industrial plants and commercial and office buildings. Without the action described below to implement the highest priority for housing prescribed in the 1968 Act, the private sector will not meet the housing goals in the 1968 Act.

(b) Unless additional steps are taken as described below, the mortgage money will not be available for housing at reasonable rates.

2. Need for fiscal restraint and monetary ease: NHC favors a combination of sufficient fiscal restraint and monetary ease to assure that the needed real and financial resources are available to support this volume of homebuilding while maintaining reasonable price stability. The Federal Reserve Board currently has the power to make additional resources available for mortgage financing of housing but has failed to do so.

As stated earlier in these resolutions, one of the measures we recommend is that in addition to its present authority to make purchases on the open market, the Federal Reserve Board should be authorized to purchase directly from FNMA, GNMA, and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board the obligations issued by these agencies. This would assure that the funds would be channeled directly into the mortgage market when needed during periods of monetary stringency and rising interest rates. These obligations would include participation certificates or other securities issued against a pool of mortgages or consolidated debentures or other obligations.

3. Suggestions for institutional reforms: (a) NHC suggests a change in the lending policies of the Federal Home Loan Banks so that savings and loan associations can borrow with greater certainty at lower costs and for a longer time than at present. In addition, we recommend that the Federal Home Loan Banks should earmark a substantial part of the funds it advances to savings and loan associations for exclusive use in purchasing mortgages to finance housing for low and moderate income groups. Other measures should be taken to assure that an appropriate percent of the loans of associations from other funds will also be for the low and moderate income housing market.

(b) NHC suggests that financial institutions be required to direct a certain percentage of their new loanable funds into mortgages. Other countries have been successful in requiring various financial institutions to use a certain percentage of their new loanable funds for mortgages to finance housing, particularly for those in the moderate and lower income group. The institutions listed below should be directed to invest a certain percentage of their funds in housing for moderate and lower income persons and families. The investments could be in bonds guaranteed by GNMA under the 1968 Housing Act which bonds would be secured by a pool of insured housing mortgages. This would relieve the investors of the burdens or costs of servicing the mortgages. It would also assure a full recovery of the funds invested.

(1) Social Security Trust Funds. An appropriate percentage of these funds should be earmarked for investment in mortgages to produce such housing. This requirement will not work a hardship on the Trust funds because the mortgages would provide a reasonable return.

(2) Pension Funds. An appropriate percentage of pension funds should be invested in housing for those of low and moderate incomes. Like the Social Security Trust Fund, this requirement would work no hardship on these funds.

(3) Insurance Companies. While the insurance companies pledged $1 billion for the purchase of housing mortgages to meet the needs of those of lower incomes in our cities, they should be urged by the Commission to make additional pledges for such mortgage purchase each year.

(4) Veterans Administration Funds. With respect to certain Veterans Administration funds which are available for investment, NHC supports the pending legislation authorizing the use of such funds for investments in VA-guaranteed mortgages.

NHC applauds the recent effort by the AFL-CIO to help the adverse effects of the unprecedented high interest rates and tight mortgage money. The AFL-CIO has recently embarked upon an expansion of its Mortgage Investment Trust. A national campaign has begun to attract general treasury and pension and welfare funds of AFL-CIO affiliates and qualified labor-management funds into a mortgage investment program designed to do three principal things: (1) to help provide adequate housing for America's families; (2) to provide a safe, reasonable yield on the investment of union funds; (3) and to create jobs. NHC joins with the AFL-CIO in urging the participation of all AFL-CIO affiliates and the allocation of regular percentages of union investments in the AFL-CIO Mortgage Investment Trust.

(c) As stated earlier, NHC is in favor of requiring the Federal Reserve System to purchase securities guaranteed by the Federal Home Loan Bank, FNMA, or GNMA in times of tightness in the mortgage market thereby providing these institutions with funds to funnel to the mortgage market. NHC believes the Federal Reserve Board should be authorized to purchase directly from FNMA, GNMA, and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board the obligations issued by these agencies. This would assure that the funds would be channeled directly into the mortgage market when needed during periods of monetary stringency and rising interest rates. These obligations would include participation certificates or other securities issued against a pool of mortgages or consolidated debentures or other obligations. In the past, the Federal Reserve has objected to open market purchases because it stated that there was no guarantee that if Federal Reserve did make purchases the money would find its way back into the mortgage market. However, this objection would be met since purchases of securities from the Federal Home Loan Bank, FNMA or GNMA will automatically feed back into the mortgage market because the operation of these institutions are limited to the financing of housing.

(d) NHC recommends that savings and loan associations, mutual savings banks, and other mortgage lenders be permitted to issue long-term securities to raise funds for mortgages. This would be an additional means of channeling funds into mortgages in housing.

(e) NHC recommends legislation to permit thrift institutions to accept deposits of cities and other public agencies for investment in housing; such deposits should be fully guaranteed and exempt from the $15,000 limit on guaranties.

(f) As stated above, NHC strongly recommends bringing into early operation the new authority provided to the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) to insure mortgage-backed bonds issued by institutions seeking to raise new funds for mortgages. It will tap additional sources for investment in housing. Many institutions and investors would buy such bonds since they would be relieved of the burdens or costs of servicing the mortgages. They would also be assured of necessary protection on their investment through the GNMA guaranty.

4. Dealing with Discounts: (a) In the private financial markets when there are changes in the expected yields through interest, it is not feasible to forbid discounts or premiums on mortgages with fixed interest rates. Whenever there is a fixed interest rate on mortgages, the price paid for the mortgage will reflect the current market yield available on comparable investments. Accordingly, there will be a discount or a premium on a mortgage bearing a fixed interest rate, as this is the method by which there is an adjustment in the yield to reflect the market conditions.

(b) While there may be discounts on mortgages which bear a fixed interest rate, this does not necessarily mean that the consumer should pay the discounts. On housing for families of moderate or lower incomes, it is necessary to achieve reasonable interest rates without discounts in order to serve the families at monthly charges which they can afford. There are many families in the moderate income group who will not be eligible for interest assistance under the programs of Sections 235 and 236, because their incomes are above the lower income limits that have now been established for these programs. The recent increases in interest rates have excluded people from the housing market who need homes but can no longer afford them at the higher interest rates. Accordingly, as stated above, we have recommended a tandem program for the combined use of GNMA and FNMA which would make it possible to achieve reasonable interest rates for those of moderate incomes without charging the discount to the consumer. Instead, any discounts that are necessary—even with an increased flow of funds into the housing mortgage market—would be absorbed by GNMA as part of a sound public policy to assure the availability of housing financing at a reasonable price for those of moderate incomes who need housing.

1. Objectives: Since 1961, there has been a program under Section 221(d)(3) to provide housing for moderate and lower income families who could not obtain decent housing in the private market without Federal assistance. This is accomplished through FHA-insured financing at a below-market-interest rate of 3%. This program has been a most successful one. There is a long accumulated backlog of unfilled applications for additional projects under Section 221(d)(3).

2. Authorizations in 1968 Housing Act: In the 1968 Housing Act, there was an increase of $500 million in the special assistance authority to become available on July 1, 1969. This was in addition to the present revolving authority which was increased by $525 million on July 1, 1968 under existing law. In their reports, the House and Senate Committees stated that they had approved these additional funds primarily for the use by GNMA in the purchase of Section 221(d)(3) below-market-interest rate mortgages. The Senate and House Committees recognized the necessity for continuing the 221(d)(3) program without a lapse of authority which could do damage to the Congressional goal for stepped-up activity in the field of new construction for housing for lower income families. The Committee reports further stated:

"The committee is mindful of the practical difficulties of getting a new program rolling; that is, the long lead time it takes to prepare regulations, allocate the funds, educate the local sponsors and builders and finally produce specific projects to receive the benefits of the new subsidy program. The Section 221(d)(3) BMIR has hurdled all of these obstacles and it is now a going program. The committee wants to assure that it will continue to be a going and effective program until the new Section 236 program has reached some degree of efficiency. The additional special assistance funds of $500 million would be used to provide the backup support for the program necessary to carry out this objective."

3. Recommendations: (a) As explained elsewhere in these Resolutions, the 236 program has not become fully operational nor has it hurdled the obstacles in getting the new program started. One of the major obstacles is the lack of private financing without a discount of at least 1½ points in the current market. Nonprofit, cooperative and other sponsors are generally unable to provide funds to meet this discount which is not covered by mortgage proceeds. There was a clear Congressional intent and mandate to continue the 221(d)(3) program as indicated above. Yet the Bureau of the Budget is recapturing all funds not previously allocated under the 221(d)(3) program for the GNMA purchase of below-market-interest-rate mortgages. As a result of this action, no further allocations will be made under Section 221(d)(3). We strongly urge that this action by the Bureau of the Budget be rescinded that the balance of 221(d)(3) funds be allocated for housing projects which require financing.

(b) NHC opposes the request of former President Johnson to defer from July 1, 1969 to July 1, 1970 the $500 million increase in GNMA's special assistance funds which the 1968 Housing Act made available. These funds should be committed primarily for mortgages under Section 221(d)(3).

(c) While GNMA would make allocations and commitments to purchase mortgages with these special assistance funds, the actual expenditures and purchases of the mortgages would not occur until the housing is completed. This will not happen on any new construction during fiscal year 1969. Likewise, most of the housing construction will not be completed in fiscal 1970, so there will be a relatively small impact on the Budget through GNMA expenditures during fiscal 1970.

(d) The advance commitments by GNMA to purchase these mortgages is necessary now to enable the 221(d)(3) projects to proceed. Otherwise, it will not be possible to continue the 221(d)(3) program while action is being taken to get full and efficient operations under Section 236. Unless the 221(d)(3) projects receive the foregoing special assistance funds, there will be a serious interruption in the program to provide housing for lower income families, contrary to the goals and mandates of the 1968 Housing Act.

(e) The 221(d)(3) program was continued under the 1968 Housing Act, with $500 million of additional special assistance primarily for this program commencing July 1, 1969. However, it had been contemplated that this program would be phased out in later years after the new interest assistance program under Section 236 became equally efficient and acceptable in its operations. NHC recommends against phasing out the 221(d)(3) program of below-market-interest rates, because such action would create a new gap and area of unmet need in our housing program. The new interest assistance programs have lower income limits for eligibility than Section 221(d)(3). Moreover, due to the requirement that occupants spend certain percentages of their income for housing, these programs will result in little or no interest assistance for many moderate income families who had been eligible under 221(d)(3); such families will be excluded from interest assistance they need to achieve monthly payments which they can afford. Accordingly, it is necessary to continue the 221(d)(3) program as a permanent program to serve those of moderate income who will not be eligible under the interest assistance programs, but who need help to obtain decent housing. A similar situation occurred several years ago when the rent supplement program was proposed; it had then been contemplated that the 221(d)(3) program would be phased out. However, the rent supplement program was finally enacted to serve the low income group instead of the same group which had been served by 221(d)(3); consequently, Congress determined that the 221(d)(3) program should be continued. Similar action is required now on the 221(d)(3) program to avoid creating a new gap and area of unmet need.

CHAPTER F. HOMEOWNERSHIP UNDER SECTION 235

1. Objectives: The new program under Section 235 provides financial assistance to enable lower income families to acquire individual or cooperative homeownership. This law responds to the urgent desire for homeownership among such families. They want the pride of owning their own home and the greater sense of security and dignity which it affords. Individual and cooperative ownership provides benefits not only to the owner, but to the community as well. Such owners take responsibility for maintaining and improving their homes. They acquire a stake in the community and participate in its affairs. The result is a more stable and wholesome living environment in which to raise children.

2. Authorizations in the Housing Act of 1968: (a) HUD is authorized to enter into contracts to make periodic payments to lenders who make FHA-insured home mortgage loans to lower income families. The payments will be in an amount necessary to make up the difference between 20 percent of the family's monthly income and the required monthly payment under the mortgage for principal, interest, taxes, insurance, and mortgage insurance premium. In no case, however, can payment under the mortgage exceed the difference between (1) the required payment under the mortgage for principal, interest, and mortgage insurance premium and (2) the payment that would be required for principal and interest if the mortgage bore an interest rate of 1 percent. The amount of the payment on each mortgage will vary according to the income of the homeowner. The family's income is required to be recertified at least every 2 years and appropriate adjustments made in the assistance payment to reflect any change.

(b) The assistance payment is available for a purchaser having an income at the time of his initial occupancy not in excess of 135% of the maximum income limits that can be established in the area for initial occupancy in public housing. However, up to 20 percent of the funds authorized in appropriation acts for the program can be used to assist families with incomes above these limits but which are not in excess of 90 percent of the income limits for occupancy in a section 221(d)(3) below-market interest rate housing project.

(c) In calculating the income of the homeowner for the purpose of determining eligibility as well as the amount on which the 20 percent computation will be made, there will be deducted $300 for each minor child who is a member of the homeowner's immediate family and living with him. Also, income of minors will not be included in the homeowner's income for this computation. By administrative action pursuant to recommendations in the Senate Committee Report, there is a deduction of 5% of gross income to cover payroll deductions for social security taxes and compulsory pension funds.

(d) The amount of a home mortgage cannot exceed $15,000 ($17,500 in high cost areas). These limits are increased to $17,500 except that it may be $20,000 in high cost areas for families with five or more members. The same limits apply as an average to the blanket mortgage of a cooperative.

(e) On individual ownership of single family homes, the minimum downpayment is $200 for families with incomes up to 135 percent of the maximum income limits that can be established in the area for initial occupancy in public housing and 3 percent in other cases.

(f) HUD is authorized to provide budget, debt management, and related counseling services to homeowners who purchase homes under the program.

(g) The housing, with a few limited exceptions, must be new or substantially rehabilitated housing, except that up to 25 percent of the amount of contracts authorized to be made before July 1, 1969 can apply to existing housing, with this percentage decreasing to 15 percent the following year, and 10 percent the third year.

(h) The aggregate amount of contracts to make payments cannot exceed amount approved in appropriation Acts. The payments pursuant to the contracts cannot exceed $75 million per annum prior to July 1, 1969. This amount is increased by $100 million on July 1, 1969, and by $125 million on July 1, 1970.

(i) The 221(h) program—with a new limit of $50 million—is charged to allow the Secretary to reduce the interest rate on a home purchaser's mortgage under the program to as low as 1 percent where the purchaser's income justifies, with periodic adjustments between 1 and 3 percent to reflect changes in the homeowner's income. Under this program nonprofit mortgagors purchase and rehabilitate housing with FHA insured mortgages and resell it to low-income families.

3. Authorization in Appropriation Acts: Of the $75 million authorized under Section 235 for interest-assistance contracts prior to July 1, 1969, $25 million of the contract authority has been embodied in appropriation acts.

4. Recommendations: (a) Additional Authorizations in Appropriation Acts. NHC recommends that appropriation actions include the additional interest-assistance contract authority under Section 235 as follows:

(1) The $50 million in interest-assistance contract authority which has not been included in appropriation acts and is authorized by the 1968 Housing Act for use prior to July 1, 1969; and

(2) The $100 million in interest-assistance contract authority for fiscal year 1970 and $125 million in contract authority for fiscal year 1971.

In making these recommendations, we emphasize the need for advance authorizations for each succeeding fiscal year, besides the current one, to allow more lead time for the planning and initiation of homeownership programs for lower income families.

(b) Increase in Legislative Authorizations: NHC recommends increasing the legislative authorizations for interest assistance contracts under Section 235 to achieve an average annual rate of 300,000 units for a 5-year period. Initially, the annual rate should be 225,000 units, but it should be accelerated each year until it reaches 375,000 units in the fourth and fifth years.

(c) Other Legislative Amendments: NHC makes the following recommendations for other legislative amendments:

(1) NHC recommends the removal of the limitation that interest assistance payments shall be limited to the initial owner of a house or the initial and second member-occupant of a cooperative dwelling unit—and the person to whom the initial member transfers his membership. This present limitation will prevent the program from meeting the continuing need for housing low and moderate income families because it prevents the particular house or dwelling unit involved from being available to subsequent families with such incomes. We recommend that this provision be amended so that when the owner or cooperative member sells his dwelling to a purchaser meeting the income limits applicable to this program, and the purchaser will also be eligible to obtain an interest subsidy on the dwelling involved. This amendment should apply to all subsequent eligible purchasers.

(2) NHC recommends an amendment to the provision requiring families to spend 25% of their income for mortgage payments for total housing expenses. NHC recommends that including utilities and maintenance, a family should pay 20% instead of 25% under Section 235. The proposed interest subsidy would pay only the excess of the mortgage payment above the amount which represents 20% of the family income. Statistics show that a median of 15.5% of income was spent for such mortgage payments, as distinguished from total housing expense, under the FHA 203 program. NHC recommends a requirement that 1/6th of income be spent for mortgage payments under Section 235. This is necessary to assure that families will have enough income remaining to pay for food, clothing and other requirements for a decent standard of living. As to the present requirement that the owner spend 20% of his income for mortgage payments, it results in reducing or eliminating the amount of interest assistance available for many lower income families. This excludes them from assistance they need to achieve monthly payments which they can afford; thus it excludes them from the market for this housing and creates an unfilled gap in our housing program, as explained below in the discussion of Section 236.

(3) NHC recommends an amendment which will establish a realistic cost limit for high-cost areas comparable to other provisions in existing law. In high-cost areas, the Secretary should be authorized to increase by 45% the mortgage amounts of $15,000, or, in the case of families with five or more members, $17,500.

(4) With respect to the contract authority for interest assistance, NHC recommends that the same 25% thereof should be made available for use on existing dwellings in fiscal 1970 and 1971 as the Act now authorizes for fiscal 1969. This would represent an increase above the 15% and 10% of such contract authority now authorized for such use in fiscal 1970 and 1971. Besides enabling the homeownership program to have a greater immediate impact, this amendment would afford a greater opportunity for freedom of choice among lower income families in selecting the areas in which they desire to live.

(d) Administrative Actions: NHC makes the following recommendations for administrative actions:

(1) In computing family income under Section 235, FHA should allow deductions of the type which have been long recognized in public housing, particularly since the income limits in the interest assistance program are now computed as a percentage of the local public housing limits. Moreover, this action would respond to the Senate Committee's report that fair standards and rules should be followed within HUD for determining such income.

(2) FHA should repeal the asset limitations which penalize lower income families who have been thrifty. The 1968 Housing Act does not require that lower income families be declared ineligible if they have accumulated savings. NHC does not believe that such a limitation should be imposed administratively.

CHAPTER G. RENTAL AND COOPERATIVE PROGRAM UNDER SECTION 236

1. Objectives. The new program under Section 236 provides financial assistance to enable lower income families to acquire rental housing or cooperative homeownership. This program is urgently needed to provide housing for families with incomes too high to qualify for public housing but too low to afford decent housing that could be produced in the private market. A tremendous unmet need exists for housing to serve moderate income families who cannot afford standard private housing without federal assistance. There is a long accumulated backlog of unfilled requests and applications for additional projects to serve this income group. Unlike Section 221(d)(3), the capital financing under Section 236—as well as Section 235—is shifted to the private market where the mortgage loans must be obtained at market interest rates. Federal Assistance payments would make up the difference between the market rate of interest and 1%.

2. Authorizations in the Housing Act of 1968: (a) Section 236 authorizes a new program of Federal assistance to rental and cooperative housing for lower income families. The assistance is in the form of periodic payments to the mortgagee financing the housing to reduce the mortgagor's interest costs on a market rate FHA-insured project mortgage.

(b) The interest assistance payments will reduce payments on the project mortgage from that required for principal, interest, and mortgage insurance premium on a market rate mortgage to that required for principal and interest on a mortgage bearing an interest rate of 1 percent.

(c) The interest assistance payments will reduce rental or occupancy charges to a basic charge. A tenant or cooperative member will either pay (a) the basic charge or (b) such greater amount as represents 25 percent of his income, but not in excess of the charges which would be necessary without any interest assistance payments. Incomes of tenants or cooperative members will be re-examined at least every 2 years for the purpose of adjusting charges. Rental or occupancy charges collected in excess of the basic charges are to be returned to HUD for deposit in a revolving fund for the purpose of making other interest assistance payments.

(d) Tenants or cooperative members of these projects who pay less than the fair market rental charge for their units will generally have to have incomes, at the time of their initial occupancy, not in excess of 135 percent of the maximum income limits that can be established in the area for initial occupancy in public housing dwellings. However, up to 20 percent of the contract funds authorized in appropriation acts may be made available for projects in which some or all of the units will be occupied, at the time of the initial occupancy, by tenants or cooperative members whose incomes exceed the above limit but do not exceed 90 percent of the income limits for occupancy of section 221(d)(3) below-market-interest-rate housing.

(e) In determining income for the purpose of eligibility as well as the amount of rent or occupancy charges to be paid a $300 deduction is permitted for each minor person in the family and any income of such minor is not counted. By administrative action pursuant to recommendations in the Senate Committee Report, there is a deduction of 5% of gross income to cover payroll deductions for social security taxes and compulsory pension funds.

(f) To qualify for mortgage insurance under the new program, a mortgagor must be a nonprofit organization, a cooperative, or a limited dividend entity of the types permitted under the section 221(d)(3) housing program. The mortgage limitations with respect to maximum mortgage amount are the same as for mortgages insured under the 221(d)(3) program. Interest assistance payments can also be made with respect to State-aided housing projects approved for receiving the benefits of the program prior to completion of construction or rehabilitation of the projects.

(g) Contracts for assistance payments are authorized, subject to approval in appropriation acts, in the amount of $75 million annually prior to July 1, 1969. This amount is increased by $100 million on July 1, 1969, and by $125 million on July 1, 1970.

(h) A project financed under the new program can include such nondwelling facilities as HUD deems adequate and appropriate to serve the occupants of the project and the surrounding neighborhood, as long as the project is predominantly residential and any nondwelling facilities contribute to the economic feasibility of the project. Where a project is designed primarily for occupancy by the elderly or handicapped it can include related facilities for their use, such as dining, work, recreation, and health facilities.

(i) A cooperative or private nonprofit corporation or association can purchase a project from a limited dividend mortgagor and finance the purchase with a mortgage insured under the program.

(j) Rent supplement payments may be provided for tenants in projects financed under Section 236, but no more than 20 percent of the units in any one project can receive rent supplement assistance.

3. Authorization in Appropriation Acts: Of the $75 million authorized under Section 236 for interest-assistance contracts prior to July 1, 1969, $25 million of the contract authority has been embodied in appropriation acts.

4. Recommendations: (a) Additional Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: NHC recommends that appropriation acts include the additional interest-assistance contract authority under Section 236 as follows:

(1) The $50 million in interest-assistance contract authority which has not been included in appropriation acts and is authorized by the 1968 Housing Act for use prior to July 1, 1969; and

(2) The $100 million in interest-assistance contract authority for fiscal year 1970 and $125 million in contract authority for fiscal year 1971.

In making these recommendations, we emphasize the need for advance authorizations for each succeeding fiscal year, besides the current one, to allow more lead time for the planning and initiation of housing programs for lower income families.

(b) Increase in Legislative Authorizations: NHC recommends increasing the legislative authorizations for interest assistance contracts under Section 236 to achieve an average annual rate of 300,000 units for a 5-year period. Initially the annual rate should be 225,000 units, but it should be accelerated each year until it reaches 375,000 units in the fourth and fifth years.

(c) Other Legislative Amendments: NHC makes the following recommendations for other legislative amendments:

(1) NHC recommends an amendment to the provision requiring that 25% of family income be paid for total housing expenses—including mortgage payments, real estate taxes, utilities, heat, and the estimated cost of maintenance and repair. The proposed interest assistance would pay only the excess of total housing expense above the amount which represents 25% of family income. Statistics show that a median of 19.6% of income was spent for total housing expense under the FHA 203 program. NHC recommends that 1/5th of the income be spent for total housing expense under Section 236 so that families will not be required to spend a disproportionate amount of their earnings for housing. This is necessary to assure that families will have enough income remaining to pay for food, clothing and other requirements for a decent standard of living. As to the present requirement that the owner spend 25% of his income for total housing expense, it results in reducing or eliminating the amount of interest assistance available for many lower income families. This excludes them from assistance they need to achieve monthly payments which they can afford; thus, it excludes them from the market for this housing and creates an unfilled gap in our housing program as shown by the following examples:

These examples relate to a $15,000 mortgage on a 2-bedroom unit where the fair market charge would be $167 per month:

(i) If the income of a family of four, after allowable deductions, were $8,000, it would be required to pay the $167 a month which would represent 25% of its income—so this family would receive no subsidy.

(ii) If the income of this family, after allowable deductions, were $7,000, it would pay $146 a month and receive a $21 subsidy. This would be about a third of the authorized subsidy on this unit, which would be $58 monthly at the 1% interest rate.

Families with incomes cited in the foregoing examples cannot afford to pay these monthly charges. Unless the 221(d)(3) program is continued to serve these families, the 236 program would create a new gap in meeting housing needs by excluding moderate income families who previously received adequate subsidies under Section 221(d)(3) and who will receive little or no subsidy under Section 236.

(2) NHC recommends that Section 236 and Section 221(d)(3) should be amended to remove the 10% limit on the number of units in a project which may be occupied by moderate-income individuals as distinguished from families. All moderate-income individuals would then be treated in the same manner as those who are elderly or handicapped.

(d) Administrative Actions: NHC makes the following recommendations for administrative actions:

(1) In computing family income under Section 236, FHA should allow additional deductions of the type which have been long recognized in public housing, particularly since the income limits in the interest assistance program are now computed as a percentage of the local public housing limits. Moreover, this action would respond to the Senate Committee's report that fair standards and rules should be followed within HUD for determining such income, after deductions.

(2) To help effectuate the Congressional purpose to encourage ownership, FHA should include cooperative ownership as one of the major criteria in selecting projects for the allocation of funds under Section 236.

(3) FHA should establish cost limits which will be realistic and workable in high cost areas, including both high and low rise buildings. This is necessary to assure that housing under 236 can be constructed within the cities where employment and public transportation are available.

(4) FHA should repeal its administrative limitation that no more than 20% of the units in any one project can receive assistance under the rent supplement or leasing programs. The statute merely establishes this 20% limitation as to those receiving rent supplements. NHC recommends against the extension of this limitation to include occupants who receive assistance under the leasing program. In appropriate cases, it will be desirable to have more than 20% of the units in a project occupied by low income families, in which case the additional families could receive assistance under the leasing program.

CHAPTER GG. SPECIAL MORTGAGE INSURANCE ASSISTANCE UNDER SECTION 237

1. Objectives: In the new section 237, the 1968 Housing Act provides help to assure adequate housing for families of low and moderate incomes who—because of poor credit records, irregular income or seasonal employment—are unable to meet the credit requirements of purchasing single-family homes financed by a mortgage insured under Sections 203, 220, 221, 234, or 235(j)(4). This help is to be extended to those who appear able to achieve homeownership through the counseling assistance.

2. Authorizations in the Housing Act of 1968. (a) HUD is authorized to insure mortgages under the above-mentioned programs in an amount not to exceed $15,000 with increases not to exceed $17,500 in high-cost areas.

(b) Monthly payments, in combination with local real estate taxes on the property, must total 25% of the applicant's monthly income during the year prior to his application or the average monthly income during the three years prior to his application, whichever is higher.

(c) The Secretary is authorized to provide, or contract with public or private organizations to provide such budget, debt management and related counseling services to those obtaining housing under Section 237.

(d) The aggregate principal balance of all mortgages insured under Section 237 and outstanding at one time may not exceed $200 million.

(e) Authorizations are made in such sums as necessary to carry out the provisions in Section 237.

3. Recommendations: (a) NHC recommends an amendment which would require families to spend 20% instead of 25% of their income for mortgages, including insurance and real estate taxes.

(b) NHC recommends an amendment which will establish a realistic cost limit for high-cost areas comparable to other provisions in existing law. In high-cost areas, the Secretary should be authorized to increase by 45% the mortgage amounts of $15,000, or, in the case of families with five or more members, $17,500.

(c) NHC recommends necessary appropriation of funds to enable FHA to provide budget, debt management, and related counseling services to those obtaining housing under Section 237.

CHAPTER H. LOW-RENT PUBLIC HOUSING

1. Need: There is a tremendous unmet need for additional housing to serve the low-income group who cannot be decently housed without the aid of Federal subsidies. Many of the ill-housed in this income group are living in the slum and ghetto areas of our cities. Their unmet need for adequate housing has contributed to the crisis in our cities. Cities throughout the country have recognized the urgency of building additional public housing. Applications for additional public housing units are now being submitted to HUD at an annual rate of about 140,000 units.

2. Authorizations in 1968 Housing Act: (a) The Act provided an increase in the contract authorization for annual contributions of $100 million upon its passage and an additional $150 million on July 1, 1969 and July 1, 1970. These increased authorizations would provide about 375,000 low-rent dwelling units over the 3-year period for the public housing program.

(b) The Act authorizes HUD to make grants to local housing authorities to assist in financing tenant services for tenants of public housing. Appropriations for the grants are authorized up to $15 million for fiscal year 1969, and $30 million for fiscal 1970. The tenant services include: counseling on household management, housekeeping, budgeting, money management, child care, and similar matters; advice as to resources for job training and placement, education, welfare, health, and other community services; services which are directly related to meeting tenant needs and providing a wholesome living environment; and referral to appropriate agencies when necessary for the provision of such services.

(c) High-rise public housing projects for families with children are prohibited except where HUD determines that there is no practical alternative.

(d) HUD is prohibited from prescribing limitations on the types or categories of structures or dwelling units (other than those provided in the law) which can be leased under the public housing, section 23 leasing program.

(e) An additional annual subsidy of $120 is authorized for public housing units occupied by large families or families with very low incomes. In the past a like subsidy has been limited to the elderly and displaced families.

3. Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: No appropriation has been made of the $15 million authorized for fiscal 1969 to assist in financing tenant services in public housing. No further authorizations are required in appropriation acts on the authority for annual contribution contracts.

(4) Recommendations: (a) Necessary Appropriation: NHC recommends the appropriation for the fiscal year 1969 of the $15 million authorized for grants to local housing authorities to assist in financing tenant services in public housing. We also recommend the advance appropriation of the $30 million authorized for such grants for fiscal 1970, since such an advance appropriation will allow necessary lead time for the initiation and planning of programs to provide tenant services.

(b) Increases in Legislative Authorizations: There is a need to increase the authorizations for public housing to an average annual rate of 200,000 units for a 5-year period. Initially, the annual rate should be 150,000 units, but it should be accelerated each year until it reaches 250,000 units in the fourth and fifth years. This should include public housing of the conventional type, along with turnkey housing and leasing programs.

(c) Other Legislative Amendments: We should perfect the existing public housing programs in light of our experience. In the conventional public housing program, this requires the following new federal aids to meet conditions that have been too long neglected.

(1) Additional annual contributions should be provided to meet all costs except those which low income families can afford as rentals. This should include not only the debt service, but also adequate maintenance, conservation and operation of public housing, and additional services. It should also cover the cost of work required to comply with Federal anti-air-pollution legislation. The present needs and costs are higher than those which prevailed when the original annual contribution contracts were signed. If the annual contributions are not raised, local housing authorities will be forced to increase rents and income limits. This would jeopardize the continued achievement of the purpose of this program to serve low-income families. Also, it will cause the deferment of necessary maintenance and repairs, thereby jeopardizing the physical condition and long-term life of the property. The present annual contributions were computed to assure their adequacy to meet debt service, but without provision for the increased later costs of maintenance and operation; or the need for additional services. There has been criticism of conventional public housing because of its failure to provide necessary services and because of its lack of conservation through renovation. Correction of these conditions should remove the cause of this criticism and produce a better living environment in public housing.

(2) There should be an amendment authorizing the leasing of available private housing outside central cities for low-rent housing purposes. Parenthetically, state laws should likewise be amended to enable local authorities to lease such housing outside central cities.

(3) Authorization to HUD to make federal capital grants to cover the full amount of land and site development costs in excess of the reuse value of the improved land for new low-rent public housing projects which are not located in urban renewal areas. Also to make such federal grants for a write down on buildings acquired for rehabilitation.

(4) The annual subsidy formula should be revised to permit annual Contributions equal to full debt service on permanent financing (plus such additional amounts as may be necessary for the purposes described in paragraph (c) (1) hereof) with residual receipts being used either for project rehabilitation and improvement or accelerated amortization. At any time after completion of a public housing project, provision should be made for reopening development cost, if necessary (1) to make additional loans for needed rehabilitation or improvements, with annual contributions correspondingly increased; or (2) to make grants for such other purposes as may be necessary.

(5) The present law provides for disposition of public housing to residents, when the housing is sufficiently separable for ownership by the residents. We recommend an amendment to authorize sale of an entire project to a cooperative with a membership limited to those who will reside in the project. In broadening the authorization for disposition of public housing, the amendment should require a finding that such disposition would not adversely affect the low-rent program of the public housing agency involved. The proposed NHC amendment would make it possible for residents of public housing to achieve cooperative home ownership and to produce better and more stable communities. Further, instead of requiring over-income families to move out, they should be allowed to acquire cooperative homeownership by paying a higher monthly charge which they can afford, based upon a percentage of their increased earnings. This amendment will give public housing tenants an incentive to better themselves. As to public housing tenants whose incomes have not increased, they can either be: (1) relocated in other public housing projects, with their moving expenses paid; or (2) permitted to remain in the project as public housing tenants receiving the benefit of annual contributions so long as they qualify as low-income families. When vacancies occur, they would be filled with over-income tenants from other public housing projects who desire to become cooperative homeowners.

(6) Increase the present statutory limits on construction costs per rental room from $2,500 to $3,000 and increase the additional allowance for high-cost areas from $250 to $500; and provide that the only monetary limitation to be applied in project development shall be the statutory room cost. In other words, administrative limitations should not be imposed as is now the case. This would enable local authorities to meet the great need for large housing units to serve large families.

(7) Repeal the provision in the U.S. Housing Act of 1937, as amended, which requires a 20% gap between the lowest private and the upper public housing income limits for admission. Also, permit low-income individuals—in addition to low-income families—to be eligible for occupancy in low rent public housing.

(8) Make the necessary changes to permit construction in a municipality of low-rent public housing for those of low income who will later migrate to the municipality for employment in industries located there or in service activities. This would include new towns or municipalities outside of central cities. It would facilitate dispersal of population and reduction of the concentration of low-income families in central cities.

(9) In new and existing low-rent housing projects, there is a great opportunity to provide social impetus and vitality not only to those living in the development, but also the neighborhood. The need is both for physical community facilities on a large scale and for skilled and dedicated personnel to operate them imaginatively. A program was authorized by the 1965 Act for 3/4 federal grants to assist communities in developing neighborhood facilities of all types, with preference to those in neighborhoods involving the anti-poverty program. While this affords a new opportunity to obtain needed physical facilities, the law should be amended to provide for necessary social and counseling services in such neighborhood facilities. Where funds or services cannot otherwise be obtained, local authorities should be permitted to use project funds for this purpose. Adequate funds for social and counseling services should be included in the project budget.

(10) Neither the program to lease privately-owned housing for public housing purposes, nor the rent-supplement program for those of public-housing incomes, require a local financial contribution in the form of exemption from local real estate taxes. Conventional public housing projects are therefore at a disadvantage in gaining acceptance by local governments, since these projects require tax exemption and 10% of shelter rents in lieu of taxes. To eliminate this disadvantage, NHC recommends that local housing authorities be permitted to make payments in lieu of taxes equal to full taxes. Federal annual contributions should be increased to cover the payment of a full tax equivalent.

(11) The 1965 Act repealed as to future projects the requirement of Section 10(c) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 that annual contributions to a public housing agency be reduced by any amounts by which the receipts of the agency exceed its expenditures. As a matter of fairness and to meet the needs of public housing agencies, NHC recommends that this repeal should also apply to public housing projects existing at the time of the 1965 Act, as well as future projects.

(12) The Section 23 leasing program should be amended to permit longer term leases as this will encourage more private owners to participate in the program. The leasing program should be available for use in connection with any FHA-insured housing so as to help achieve economic integration. It should also be available for use in connection with FHA-insured nursing homes.

(13) NHC recommends the removal of the 10% limit on the number of units in a project which may be occupied by low income individuals as distinguished from low income families.

(d) Administrative Actions: NHC recommends and approves the following administrative actions by HUD:

(1) While we believe the proposal for private management of turnkey housing is of dubious merit, we favor trying this new approach to determine whether it will produce benefits or improve techniques in the management of public housing and the achievement of the program's social objectives. The proposal should be recognized as a pilot and experimental program to be determined by local housing authorities. Meanwhile, NHC reaffirms the wisdom of continuing the present tested management operations through local authorities. They have long experience in handling the operations and problems and social aspects of public housing management. Moreover, they are clearly motivated by the public interest in managing public housing to serve low-income families.

(2) NHC is impressed by the early evidence of widespread community acceptance of the provision in the 1965 Act authorizing the use of suitable private housing for low-income families through lease or other arrangements between local authorities and the owners and operators of private housing.

(3) We again commend HUD for its flexibility in using existing legislative tools to develop a program which will enable low-income families to live in the same projects as families of moderate incomes instead of isolating families of each income group. Under this program, the low-income family can continue in occupancy when its income increases, but would no longer receive public housing subsidies; instead, it would get the benefit of a below-market interest rate. When the family becomes self-supporting, it would pay the full market rate of interest.

(4) The special subsidy for housing elderly and displaced persons is now available only in the event of a deficit operation. NHC recommends that this subsidy be made available generally in an amount equal to the difference between the rent paid per month and the average cost of operation.

(5) NHC recommends that the documentation required to qualify initially for the leasing program eliminate the unnecessary requirement for development of detailed hypothetical data as to the extent of the potential supply of units.

(6) The 1958 Housing Act emphasizes the importance of good public housing design to the low-income family and to the local community. The Nation is concerned not only with the quantity of new public housing, but also with its quality. We urge HUD to take all actions necessary to achieve higher design standards for public housing developments.

(7) NHC recommends necessary adjustments in public housing income limits in those localities which have failed to keep pace with the increases in costs and incomes; also, there should be a recognition of the larger income which larger families require. Thus, there is no justification for a public housing limit for a larger family which would make a welfare recipient ineligible for occupancy.

(8) NHC recommends administrative action by HUD to pay the maximum amount of annual contributions allowed by statute in order to help toward meeting the costs and expenses on a public housing project which are not defrayed from rentals paid by low income families in amounts which they can afford. While this administrative action will alleviate the critical needs of local housing authorities it is not adequate; so, we have recommended an increase in the present statutory ceilings on annual contributions.

(9) NHC recommends a revision in the letters of intent used by the Housing Assistance Administration in its turnkey housing program which would make it mandatory for housing authorities to purchase the land and plans from the developer if—for any reason—the local housing authority and the developer fail to execute a contract to purchase.

CHAPTER I. THE RENT SUPPLEMENT PROGRAM

1. Objectives: The Rent Supplement Program is an innovative approach to low income housing. It utilizes the free enterprise system and has been strongly endorsed by the home-building, real estate, and insurance industries. It provides incentives for people to escape from poverty and for the building of modest but decent housing for those who need it most.

2. Authorization in the Housing Act of 1968: The Act makes all previous authorizations for rent supplement contracts aggregating $150 million available for contract prior to July 1, 1969, but only to the extent that these contract authorizations are contained in appropriation acts. The Act provides for an additional $40 million in contract authority for rent supplements in fiscal year 1970 and an additional $100 million in contract authority for fiscal year 1971. The 1968 Housing Act provides that state aided projects are eligible for rent supplements if the projects are approved for such assistance prior to completion of construction or rehabilitation.

3. Authorization in Appropriation Acts: Of the $150 million authorized for rent supplement contracts prior to July 1, 1969, only $72 million of the contract authority has been embodied in appropriation acts. As yet, there are no appropriation authorizations covering the increased rent supplement contracts authorized for fiscal years 1970 and 1971.

4. Recommendations: (a) Additional Authorization in Appropriation Acts: NHC recommends that appropriation acts include the additional rent-supplement contract authorizations in the 1968 Act as follows:

(1) The $78 million in rent-supplement contract authority which has not been included in appropriation acts and are authorized by the 1968 law for use prior to July 1, 1969.

(2) The $40 million in contract authority for fiscal year 1970, and the $100 million in contract authority for fiscal year 1971.

In making these recommendations we again urge the need for advance appropriations for each succeeding fiscal year, besides the current one, to allow more lead time for the planning and initiation of rent supplement programs. Accordingly, besides the authorization of rent-supplement contracts for fiscal year 1970, the next appropriation act should include rent-supplement contract authority for fiscal year 1971.

(b) Increase in Legislative Authorizations. NHC recommends increasing the legislative authorizations for rent-supplement contracts to achieve an average annual rate of 100,000 dwelling units for a five year period.

Initially the annual rate should be 75,000 dwelling units but it should be accelerated each year until it reaches 125,000 units in the fourth and fifth years.

(c) Other Legislative Amendments. NHC makes the following recommendations for other legislative amendments:

(1) The rent supplement legislation imposes too great a burden on low income families by requiring them to pay rents equal to 25% of their annual incomes since rent supplements will pay only the difference between such a rental payment and the fair market rental. To eliminate this hardship, NHC recommends that this rent paying requirement be reduced to 20% of family income. A similar recommendation has been made elsewhere in these resolutions relating to the requirement that too high a percentage of family income be spent for housing under the interest supplement programs of Sections 235 and 236.

(2) Counseling and social services should be made available to residents of housing aided by rent supplements. Such services should be allowable housing costs in computing rent supplement payments.

(3) Instead of being allowed to use only 10% of rent supplement funds in the program involving a below-market-interest rate, NHC recommends that half of the rent supplement funds be authorized for use in such projects. This would make it possible to combine in one project (a) rent supplements for low income families and (b) below-market interest financing for moderate income families. In the interest supplement program under Section 236 where mortgages will bear a market rate of interest, it will be possible to combine occupancy by low income families receiving rent supplements with moderate income families receiving interest supplements. These programs should be encouraged and expanded to help achieve the objective of economic integration.

(4) The present law limits rent supplements to lower income families who are living in substandard housing. NHC recommends that the law be amended to include overcrowded conditions as a substandard housing condition; and to permit any low-income family to be eligible for housing aided by rent supplements so long as the family qualifies as to low income, even though the family does not live in physically substandard housing. This would meet the needs of newly-formed families and those who are spending too much of their low income for housing.

(5) There should be a repeal of the requirement for a workable program or local government approval before rent supplements can be used in a locality.

(6) Local housing authorities should be eligible as sponsors under the rent supplement program; also, we make the same recommendation concerning the Section 221(d)(3)-below-market-interest-rate program and the Section 236-interest-assistance program.

(7) NHC urges the establishment of an additional rent supplement program for non-profit mortgagors who own buildings which are not financed under Section 221(d)(3). When the buildings meet code standards—or are rehabilitated to meet such standards—rent supplements should be available so that the housing can serve low-income families. Present rent supplement requirements for rehabilitation are often unworkable because they cost too much. Rehabilitation to meet code requirements should be acceptable. This will stimulate rehabilitation and provide standard housing quickly and reasonable for many low and moderate income families.

(8) The standards under the rent supplement program should be ungraded to produce better-designed housing which will more adequately meet the needs of families, with attention to their comfort and convenience. The limit of one-bathroom-per-dwelling unit should be removed, as this denies adequate sanitary facilities for larger families.

5. Recommendations for Administrative Actions: (a) Construction cost limitations were initially established in the rent supplement program which were unworkable in many high cost cities that faced the greatest need for this program. Last year NHC recommended that there be sufficient increases in these cost limitations to make it possible to build rent supplement projects within these cities. FHA has approved some increases in these cost limits. If these increases prove insufficient, NHC recommends further increases in the cost limitations to keep pace with the increases in construction costs. Only through adequate construction cost allowances can the rent supplement program fulfill its purpose of serving low-income families in these cities, near the places of employment and public transportation.

(b) FHA has established lower limits as to the amount of rent supplements available for families in a project than the amount permitted by the statute. NHC recommends the repeal of these lower administrative limits. FHA should be prepared in appropriate cases to contract to pay the full amount of rent supplements on a project up to the statutory ceiling. Only in this way can the needs of many low income families be met, particularly in high cost areas.

CHAPTER J. HOUSING FOR FAMILIES RECEIVING PUBLIC ASSISTANCE AND OTHERS WITH VERY LOW INCOMES; ALSO, CODE ENFORCEMENT

1. Four million American families are receiving all or part of their income from public assistance programs. Many of these families are ill-housed, primarily because welfare grants in most cities are inadequate to pay the cost of standard housing. NHC urges the enactment of legislation which would establish and enforce minimum standards for housing occupied by recipients of public assistance. In addition, such legislation should require that public-assistance shelter allowances cover the full charge for decent housing and that the Federal Government bear the entire additional cost above the present inadequate allowances for shelter. Such shelter allowances should be made in a manner which will encourage rather than discourage home ownership and the security which it should afford.

2. NHC recommends Federal grants to housing authorities or other public agencies—as described elsewhere in these Resolutions—to bring housing up to minimum code standards and to make it available for families of low income, including those who are receiving public assistance.

3. NHC urges an acceleration of concentrated code enforcement in deteriorating areas, together with necessary public improvements to halt their decline. The costs of code enforcement programs—both for determining Federal grants and local grant-in-aid credits—should include all costs incurred for repair or installation of streets, sidewalks, streetlighting, trees, parks, open areas, recreational facilities, and other necessary improvements.

CHAPTER K. REHABILITATION OF HOUSING

1. Need: NHC again reaffirms the importance of saving existing neighborhoods through rehabilitation and other conservation measures. It is sound policy to improve our present housing supply and conserve neighborhoods, rather than allow them to deteriorate until they require greater costs in demolition and reconstruction.

2. Authorizations in 1968 Housing Act: (a) Dwellings Eligible for Rehabilitation Grants and Loans. The Act broadened the program of rehabilitation loans under Section 312 for repairs and improvements of dwellings. Instead of limiting the program to dwellings located in urban renewal and code enforcement areas, owners and tenants of dwellings are eligible for loans if the dwelling is located in an area certified by the local governing body as containing a substantial number of structures in need of rehabilitation and:

(1) If the locality has a workable program; and

(2) If the area is definitely planned for rehabilitation or code enforcement within a reasonable time, and the repairs to be assisted are consistent with the plan for rehabilitation or code enforcement.

The Act authorizes rehabilitation grants under Section 115 to low income homeowners whose properties are located in an area of the character described above, instead of limiting such grants to dwellings in urban renewal and code enforcement areas. The Act also authorizes the Secretary of HUD to make rehabilitation grants and loans to low income homeowners whose property has been determined to be uninsurable because of physical hazards. Such grants or loans may be made only to rehabilitate the property to the extent necessary to make it insurable under a statewide plan.

(b) Increase in Rehabilitation Loan Authorizations: The new Act increases the amount authorized to be appropriated for rehabilitation loans. The increase for each fiscal year is from $100 million to $150 million; also, the program is extended to June 30, 1973. The Act limits eligibility for residential rehabilitation loans to persons whose annual income meets the locally applicable income limits for the Section 221(d)(3) below-market-interest-rate program.

(c) Increase in Rehabilitation Grants: The Housing Act of 1968 increases the limit on the amount of rehabilitation grant to a low income homeowner from $1,500 to $3,000.

(d) Repeal of Urban Renewal Limit on Acquisition and Rehabilitation: The Act removes the previous limits on the acquisition and rehabilitation of residential properties by local renewal agencies. Under prior law, such agencies could acquire and rehabilitate for demonstration purposes no more than 100 units or 5% of the total residential units suitable for rehabilitation in an urban renewal area, whichever was the lesser. This limit has been repealed.

3. Recommendations: To provide additional tools that are needed to achieve substantial progress through rehabilitation, NHC recommends the following:

(a) Section 312 should be amended to increase to $500 million the annual appropriations in each fiscal year to carry out the program. Section 312 should broaden the category of eligible borrowers to include public bodies, cooperatives, nonprofit corporations and limited dividend companies in addition to owners or tenants who are now eligible.

(b) With respect to residential rehabilitation loans under Section 312, NHC recommends that the 221(d)(3) income limits should not be applicable to persons who will occupy the rehabilitated housing who have previously been residents of the neighborhood where the dwellings are located.

(c) While the 1968 Housing Act increased to $3,000 the federal rehabilitation grants to eligible occupants who own their own homes in the rehabilitation neighborhood, NHC recommends an increase to $5,000.

(d) Where state or local governments allow tax abatement to encourage rehabilitation, there should be an annual Federal grant to reimburse them for the tax losses.

(e) Relocation assistance and payments should be available to anyone displaced as a result of a rehabilitation program.

(f) More realistic financing should be made available under FHA programs, particularly to serve those people by low and moderate incomes. This requires more practical and workable financing terms and allowances as follows:

(1) The formulas for determining mortgage amounts must recognize the actual cost of acquiring and rehabilitating properties that are structurally sound.

(2) There should be a contingency allowance built into the mortgage financing, which has been recently done by FHA. In rehabilitation, the contractor is often not aware of potential problems until he opens the walls and ascertains actual conditions.

(3) The FHA requirements for rehabilitation should not require a specified percentage of mortgage proceeds to be used for rehabilitation, so long as property is brought up to code standards.

(4) In projects where the property is owned or controlled by the proposed mortgagor, cost savings may be achieved by stripping down the building and tearing out the interior walls before making estimates or getting bids, for the rehabilitation work. In such cases, FHA should recognize the cost of gutting the building since this increases the value of the property for rehabilitation because conditions are known and unforeseen contingencies are minimized.

(5) To reduce the monthly charges to the level which moderate-income families can afford, it is necessary to eliminate present requirements for short amortization periods on rehabilitation projects. Where the rehabilitation project property is in a central city, there is likely to be an increment in land value from which to repay the loan, even though demolition occurs well in advance of the remaining estimated life of the improvements. Thus, the property may later become part of a model city neighborhood or urban redevelopment area. At present, the statute limits the mortgages to a maturity not exceeding three-quarters of the remaining economic life of the building improvements. This limitation should be repealed. FHA should be authorized to permit up to 40-year maturities where appropriate.

(g) There should be Federal grants to a local agency for a total coordinated plan for rehabilitation of the neighborhood and for carrying out the rehabilitation program contemplated by the plan. The local agency should enlist the participation of cooperative and nonprofit organizations and local housing authorities. The local agency would also act on behalf of eligible homeowners in the area in obtaining:

(1) Rehabilitation grants, interest supplements or rent supplements for them;

(2) Below-market-interest-rate loans or market-interest-rate loans for their rehabilitation work; and

(3) Contracts to perform the rehabilitation work, subject to supervision by the local agency.

CHAPTER L. HOUSING FOR THE ELDERLY

1. Authorization in 1968 Housing Act: The 1968 Housing Act does not provide for any increase in the authorization in the 202 program of direct loans at 3% interest to provide housing for the elderly. Instead, the new 236 program of interest assistance is intended to make FHA-insured financing available for this program. There will be interest assistance to reduce monthly housing payments to the level achievable with an interest rate of 1% and without any FHA mortgage insurance premium. Under 236, projects can now be undertaken which will provide housing exclusively for the elderly. Such projects may include related facilities, such as dining, work, recreation and health facilities. The Act authorizes the refinancing of certain 202 projects in order to achieve the lower monthly charges resulting from refinancing with interest assistance.

2. Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: The contract authority in appropriation acts for 236 will now be utilized to finance housing for the elderly. For a description of the 236 authorizations in appropriation acts, see the section hereof which covers that program.

3. Recommendations: (a) NHC urges that an average of 30,000 housing units for the elderly be provided each year for the next 5 years. Our recommendations relating to the 236 program include the amounts needed for this program.

(b) NHC recommends against phasing out the 202 program because it has not been demonstrated that the 236 program will fully and adequately meet the housing needs of the elderly. We anticipate a continuing need for the 202 program to avoid creating another gap and area of unmet need due to the lower income limits in the 236 program and its other restrictions.

(c) NHC also recommends that the authorizations under 202 and 236 should be available to acquire existing housing for the elderly, including projects developed with FHA insurance under Section 231.

4. Other Legislative Amendments: There is a need for special programs to provide federal grants for the following purposes in housing for the elderly:

(a) to assist in training professional personnel to manage elderly housing projects; and

(b) to provide working capital and seed capital to states and localities and to national nonprofit organizations such as church groups, labor unions, fraternal and cooperative-servicing organizations.

5. Recommendations for Administrative Action: (a) The 202 and 236 cost limits should permit housing to be built within the cities where they are needed to serve the elderly. In view of high land costs, this should include high-rise buildings. The programs should include rehabilitation as well as new construction. Tax abatement should not be required since it is often unavailable because of restrictions in state and local laws. Moreover, many cities are facing problems of inadequate tax revenues and are reluctant to grant tax abatements. Section 202 and 236 housing for the elderly should be permitted to pay full taxes, as is permitted in leasing privately-owned housing for public housing purposes and in the rent supplement program. Nursing facilities should be eligible for financing in housing for the elderly.

(b) NHC urges that housing for the elderly be included in all planning under the model cities program.

(c) In accordance with the statutory authority for loans equal to the total development costs, HUD should not require in the 202 or 236 programs that an approved sponsor must make an investment to cover the cost of preliminary expenses, facilities, furnishings, equipment and working capital. Such costs should be included in the loan. It should not be necessary for a nonprofit sponsor to make a monetary contribution. Its contribution consists of its devotion of time, ingenuity, and energy in initiating, and developing projects—all without compensation and motivated by public service.

CHAPTER M. FINANCING NURSING HOMES AND FACILITIES FOR GROUP MEDICAL PRACTICE

1. Objectives: NHC again recognizes that a continuing desperate need exists for hundreds of thousands of nursing home beds, especially among the low-income elderly. This need has increased by demands generated through Medicare. Since local housing authorities have long experience in building low-rent housing for the elderly, they are well qualified to develop nursing homes for low-income persons. They should be authorized to coordinate programs of housing and nursing homes facilities for the low-income group. This can be done effectively by amending the U.S. Housing Act of 1937, to authorize annual contribution contracts with local housing authorities for nursing home facilities.

2. Authorization in 1968 Housing Act: The 1968 Housing Act amends Section 232 of the National Housing Act to permit the cost of major items of equipment used in the operating of a nursing home to be included in the FHA-insured mortgage; also, to permit supplementary loans for the installation of such equipment in nursing homes previously constructed.

3. Recommendations: (a) NHC recommends that Section 202 and the new Section 236 be amended to permit the inclusion of nursing facilities in housing projects for the elderly. In this way, elderly persons who need nursing facilities would not have to leave the community in which they are living. NHC further recommends that financing be available to nonprofit sponsors under Sections 202 and 236 which will cover the full cost of nursing homes; also that such projects should get the benefit of below market interest rates or subsidies which would reduce the interest rate to 1%.

(b) The 1966 Act included a program of FHA insurance for facilities used for group medical practice. NHC reaffirms its support of this program and urges its use to encourage the development of nonprofit cooperatives whose members will obtain the benefits of bonafide group medical practice at a reasonable cost. The program should operate in both urban and rural areas.

(c) NHC continues to recommend that mortgage amortization be permitted to commence after completion of construction of group practice facilities rather than at the time the mortgage is executed.

(d) NHC continues to support the basic concept of the prior Patman Bill, H.R. 10188, which would remove obstacles that impede the broader development of group health plans and which would make financing available for group health programs providing hospitalization, out-patient and preventive care.

CHAPTER N. COLLEGE HOUSING

1. Objective: Need for College Housing: Our Nation has increasingly recognized its dependence upon higher education for its security, welfare, and continued prosperity. To meet the demands made by the expanding number of students and by required increases in facilities, additional housing must be provided for students and faculty. Congress recognized the appropriateness of meeting these needs for college housing nearly twenty years ago. In the Housing Act of 1950, it initiated low-interest loans for housing and educational facilities for students and faculties. Since 1961 there have been authorizations for loan increases at the rate of $300 million each year. Such increases are wholly inadequate to meet current needs. The study conducted under the auspices of the American Council on Education has indicated that approximately $1.5 billion per year will be needed for college housing for the next ten years. Recognizing that a portion of this amount may be derived from non-federal sources, the Council recommended that Congress authorize a minimum of $1 billion a year for the next ten years in the form of long-term, low interest loans for the construction of housing facilities.

2. Authorizations in the 1968 Housing Act: Instead of expanding the direct loan program for college housing, the Act contemplates financing in the private market, but it authorizes financial assistance to colleges by means of annual debt service grants. The new grant program is to be used to reduce the borrower's annual debt service payments on private market loans to the average annual debt service that would have been required if the loan were based on the rate charged on loans under the direct loan program. Annual grants can be made over a fixed period up to 40 years. The total amount of annual grant contracts is subject to approval in the appropriation acts. The total amount cannot exceed $10 million, with this limit increased by $10 million on July 1, 1969. The new grant program is made available for loans involving the purchase of existing properties which are in need of little or no rehabilitation.

3. Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: There was an authorization of $3 million of annual grant contracts for college housing instead of the $10 million authorized in the 1968 Housing Act.

4. Recommendations: (a) Additional Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: NHC recommends that the authorized balance of $7 million of annual grant contracts be included in the next appropriation act, together with an advance authorization of $10 million in annual grant contracts for fiscal 1970 to give colleges more lead time for their planning and development of college housing programs.

(b) Increase in Legislative Authorizations: NHC recommends a 5-year authorization of contracts for annual debt service grants which would be sufficient for $1 billion of private financing annually for college housing.

CHAPTER O. COOPERATIVE HOUSING

1. In urban areas where multifamily housing predominates, cooperatives provide an important means of achieving homeownership. This produces better communities where the control and responsibility rests with the people who have a stake and pride in their own housing development.

2. NHC approves the use of the 221(d)(3) interest assistance and rent supplement programs in cooperatives. They will make it possible to reach lower income groups because of the economic savings and advantages of cooperatives. These are illustrated by the following savings:

(a) Lower closing costs with one closing on an entire project of many dwellings, rather than one for each dwelling.

(b) Lower transfer costs since it is unnecessary on a cooperative sale to incur the costs of title examinations and transfers, brokers' fees, refinancing and other charges.

(c) Lower construction costs which cooperatives have achieved through the economies of large scale building when many housing units are presold before construction starts.

The cooperative programs has been successful for low and moderate income families assisted under Section 221(d)(3) where financing is provided at a 3% interest rate. Even though these projects serve lower income families, there have been no failures or defaults among the consumer cooperatives in this program. NHC fully concurs in the Congressional mandates to encourage such cooperative ownership.

3. The need and demand for cooperative housing at a below-market interest rate greatly exceeds the amount of funds available. The below-market program of 221(d)(3) has demonstrated its success in meeting the housing needs of lower income families who cannot be served by private enterprise without Federal assistance. Cooperative housing represents over one-fourth of the accumulated backlog of projects awaiting funds under the 221(d)(3) program of below-market interest rates. This backlog of need should be met by the release of funds already available and increased authorizations recommended for the 221(d)(3), 235 and 236 programs.

4. We recommend that FHA recognize the presently uncompensated costs to Section 221(d)(3) Below Market Interest Rate cooperative projects resulting from the requirement of recertifying incomes. The cooperative should be reimbursed by retaining the costs of recertifications from "over-income" surcharges that are ultimately returned to HUD. In addition, FHA should allow portions of the "over-income" surcharges to be used by the cooperative for improvements that FHA may consider advisable and justifiable during the life of the project.

5. Eleven years ago Congress established a revolving fund of $225 million—which is now administered by GNMA—for the purchase of cooperative mortgages insured by FHA under Section 213. This financing has made it possible for middle-income consumers to join together to help themselves get good housing through their cooperatives.

While there have been extensive mortgage purchases from the cooperative revolving fund, much of the money has been returned, so it now has an uncommitted balance of about $100 million. The Administration has impounded this fund and no further GNMA commitments can now be issued. NHC strongly recommends that the balance in the cooperative revolving fund be made immediately available for the purchase of mortgages on cooperative projects. The 213 program meets an important need among those middle-income families and individuals who can only afford the lower monthly charges achievable through cooperative economies and financing.

6. NHC supports the proposition that FHA should carry out the Congressional intent that Section 213 cooperatives be allowed appropriate reduction in mortgage insurance premiums in recognition of the lower loss rates of these cooperatives.

7. As recommended elsewhere in these Resolutions and subject to the conditions stated therein, NHC urges the disposition of public housing and Federally-owned housing to cooperatives whose members will reside in such housing and enjoy the benefits of mutual ownership.

8. We urge HUD and its constituent agencies to use fully all available legislative tools under existing programs to achieve the values and objectives of cooperative homeownership by people with low or moderate incomes. This should include the following:

(a) Encouragement of cooperative housing projects in all parts of the country under all available programs. NHC commends FHA for the issuance of a circular to impress upon all Insuring Offices that it is the policy of HUD to encourage homeownership through the cooperative approach and to offer all possible assistance in the development of cooperative housing projects. However, there is a need for FHA to assure that its Insuring Offices observe this policy in recognition of the importance of cooperative homeownership.

(b) In the disposition of housing acquired by HUD and its constituent agencies, a priority should be afforded to the residents so they will have the opportunity to acquire the properties through their cooperative. An FHA circular advised Insuring Offices that many acquired multifamily housing projects are particularly suitable for cooperatives and that negotiated sales would be made. This was successfully done in a pilot case.

(c) In the disposition of property by urban renewal agencies, there should be a recognition in the disposition plan that it is important to achieve cooperative ownership of multifamily housing in urban renewal areas. Accordingly, part of these areas should be considered for the development of housing to be so owned by the people. In making a disposition for this purpose, there should be a disposition condition that those who acquire the property agree to develop it for housing that will involve cooperative ownership.

(d) The Special Assistant for Cooperative Housing at FHA should be provided with adequate staff and funds to undertake a broad program for the encouragement and development of cooperative housing including necessary training of cooperative leaders and managers.

CHAPTER P. RURAL HOUSING, RENEWAL AND PLANNING FOR MULTI-COUNTY AREAS

1. Objectives: There is increasing national concern to make rural America more attractive and livable for all. To achieve this goal, programs must be initiated to encourage the young and better educated to continue living in rural America. Programs which provide the same kinds of financial assistance as are provided for urban housing and urban renewal should be available to rural areas for rural housing and rural renewal. We endorse those provisions of the 1968 Housing Act which make certain housing assistance equally available to rural areas, but other legislation is required as described below.

2. Authorizations in the 1968 Housing Act: Under new Sections 235 and 236, the Secretary of Agriculture a reasonable portion of the total authority to contract to make periodic interest reduction payments for use in rural areas and small towns. By agreement, the Secretary of Agriculture was delegated $2 million in contract authority under Section 235(k). However, projects under Section 236 will be processed by FHA.

3. Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: Elsewhere we have described the authorizations of interest assistance contracts under Sections 235 and 236 which are now available for housing in rural areas. In addition, the rural housing program of the Department of Agriculture was authorized to maintain a $5 million program of 3%, 50-year loans.

4. Recommendations: (a) Legislative Amendments Relating to Rural Housing: NHC recommends the following legislation relating to rural housing programs:

(1) The 3%, 50-year loan program to supplement the new authority granted under the 1968 Housing Act should not only be continued but increased and the Secretary of Agriculture should be authorized to contract to maintain the interest rate throughout the duration of the loan. Also, the Secretary should be granted the power to reduce the interest rates to as low as 1% under this program.

(2) Repeal of the provision, in Section 515(b) and termination of the administrative practice under Section 515(a) of the Housing Act of 1949, limiting mortgage size to $300,000 on multifamily rental or cooperative projects; and enactment of provisions permitting the Secretary of Agriculture to contract at the outset to finance all stages of a multifamily housing project.

(3) An increase of the mortgage term to 50 years for rural housing loans under Section 515(b) of the Housing Act of 1949.

(4) Enactment of legislation creating the position of Special Assistant for Cooperative Housing in the Farmers Home Administration of the Department of Agriculture (a similar position to that created in the Housing Amendments of 1955 for urban cooperative housing) with similar powers, duties and adequate staff and budget; and the additional responsibility of mobilizing the support of rural area cooperatives of all types for the creation and continued successful operation of rural cooperative housing projects.

(5) Amendments to make applicable to all rural areas provisions similar to those of Title VI of the 1968 Housing Act which would:

(i) authorize HUD to make planning grants to assist district planning agencies for rural and other non-metropolitan areas; (ii) authorize grants of $20 million for fiscal 1969; and (iii) give the Secretary of Agriculture certain functions as to planning grants for districts, including a requirement that he be consulted before any such grant is made.

(6) Give the Secretary of HUD authority to waive rules and regulations of HUD programs so small cities and towns can get an equitable share of HUD programs.

(7) An amendment to provide that only the new farm home and the immediate lot—not exceeding one acre—need be encumbered in home mortgages under the Farmers Home Administration ("FmHA").

(8) Expand the low-interest loan program under the Aiken-Poage Water and Sewer Act to include predominantly rural areas and to cover community facilities such as police and fire facilities, street lighting and community centers.

(9) Provide Farmers Home Administration the $25-million requested in the Budget for fiscal 1970 to employ an additional 2,000 employees so that it can carry out its greatly expanded responsibilities for housing, sewer and water, and economic development in rural areas.

(10) Eliminate ceiling of $100-million in Section 517(c) of Housing Act of 1949 on amount of loans Secretary of Agriculture can hold at any one time in Rural Housing Insurance Fund, which, at present, has the effect of limiting Farmers Home Administration insured housing loans to $500-million a year since the fund as a practical matter can only be revolved about five times a year. This provides for only about 50,000 new and rehabilitated housing units a year—far below the need in rural areas where there are more than four million substandard housing units.

(11) Delete the restriction in Section 517(h) of the Housing Act of 1949, which prohibits the Secretary of Agriculture from borrowing from the Secretary of the Treasury for additional capital for the Rural Housing Insurance Fund. This would enable Farmers Home Administration realistically to meet the tremendous needs of low and moderate income people for housing credit, which generally is not being met by any other source—government or private—in communities under 5,500 population.

(12) Add a provision to Title X of the Housing Act of 1968 to permit Farmers Home Administration to make loans to public and private non-profit community corporations for the acquisition and development of land as building sites to be subdivided and sold to low and moderate income families or cooperatives who are eligible under Section 235 or 236 of the National Housing Act or Title V, Sections 501 and 521 of the Housing Act of 1949. This provision would supply two important ingredients now missing in the FmHA housing program; namely, involvement of local leadership, and development of housing on a larger scale.

(b) Recommendations for Administrative Actions:

(1) Besides Congressional actions, there is a need for more effective executive actions and better coordination of Agriculture and HUD, and for consultation with industry and public interest groups. Such actions should be taken to assure that federal housing, community facility and planning aids for rural areas are equivalent to those available in cities and metropolitan areas.

(2) NHC recommends and urges the Secretary of Agriculture to stimulate and encourage programs under new and existing cooperative housing provisions to alleviate the housing ills in rural areas.

(3) NHC urges the Federal Housing Administration and the Farmers Home Administration to work out a plan for making housing credit available in small towns that are too large for FmHA to service (over 5,500), but not practical for FHA to service because of remoteness or other reasons. A serious credit shortage exists in many of these areas.

CHAPTER Q. NATIONAL HOMEOWNERSHIP FOUNDATION; NATIONAL ADVISORY COMMISSION ON LOW-INCOME HOUSING; NATIONAL HOUSING PARTNERSHIP; AND ASSISTANCE TO NON-PROFIT SPONSORS OF LOW AND MODERATE INCOME HOUSING

I. National Homeownership Foundation

1. Objectives: The 1968 Housing Act creates the National Homeownership Foundation to carry out a continuing program of encouraging private and public organizations to provide increased homeownership and housing opportunities in urban and rural areas for lower income families.

2. Authorizations in 1968 Housing Act: The Act authorizes the Foundation to make grants and loans (not otherwise available from Federal sources) to such organizations to help defray organizational and administrative expenses, necessary preconstruction costs, and the cost of counseling or similar services to lower income families for whom housing is being provided. The Foundation can also provide technical assistance to the organizations. The Foundation is to be administered by an 18-member Board of Directors. Fifteen members are to be appointed by the President. The Secretary of HUD, the Secretary of Agriculture and the Director of OEO are the other three members. The board will appoint an executive director as its executive officer.

3. Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: Appropriations up to $10 million are authorized. The Foundation can also use donated funds. $250,000 was requested in Supplemental Appropriations for fiscal year 1969. Nothing was appropriated.

4. Recommendations: NHC urges that the Foundation be fully funded so that the Foundation can begin its vital assignment.

II. National Advisory Commission on Low-Income Housing

1. Objectives: The 1968 Housing Act establishes a National Advisory Commission on Low-Income Housing to undertake a comprehensive study and investigate the resources and capabilities in the public and private sectors of the economy which may be used to fulfill more completely the objectives of the national goal of "a decent home and a suitable living environment for every American family".

2. Assignments: The Act directs the Commission to submit to the President and the Congress an interim report with respect to its findings and recommendations not later than July 1, 1969, and a final report not later than July 1, 1970.

III. National housing partnerships

1. Objectives: The 1968 Housing Act creates a national housing partnership for the purpose of securing the participation of private investors in programs and projects to provide housing for low and moderate income families. Initially, a federally chartered, privately funded corporation will be organized under the District of Columbia Business Corporation Act. The corporation in turn will organize the National partnership under the D.C. Uniform Limited Partnership Act. The corporation in turn will organize the National partnership under the D.C. Uniform Limited Partnership Act. The corporation will serve as the general partner and managing agent of the National partnership and each of its stockholders can be a limited partner. It will provide the staff and expertise for the Partnership in organizing and planning project undertakings in which the partnership has an interest, and receive a fee for such services.

2. Authority: Both the corporation and the National partnership are authorized to engage in a broad range of activities appropriate to the provision of housing and related facilities primarily for low or moderate income families, with or without the use of Federal programs, and may enter into and participate in all forms of partnerships and associations. The National partnership is expected to form partnership ventures with local investors for the purpose of building low and moderate income housing projects throughout the nation. Normally, it will be a limited partner in such undertakings, with an interest of not more than 25% of the aggregate initial equity investment for the project. The President has appointed the incorporators of the corporation and will appoint 3 of the 15 members of the board of directors. The incorporators will serve as the initial board of directors and arrange for the initial offering of shares of stock in the corporation and interests in the National partnership. The President is authorized to create additional partnerships when he determines it to be in the national interest. National banks are authorized to invest in a corporation and other entities formed under this title.

3. Recommendations: NHC recommends that the following actions be taken:

(a) FHA should issue necessary directives and procedures to implement the provisions of Section 236(j)(3) of the 1968 Housing Act relating to the sale of housing projects by limited distribution mortgagors to co-operators or other non-profit corporations. It is important that this be done promptly in order to encourage participation by private investors in the National Housing Partnership.

(b) Actions should be taken to encourage widespread participation and private investment in the National Housing Partnership. This includes appropriate measures to provide contemplated tax incentives for undertaking housing developments to serve low and moderate income persons.

IV. Assistance to nonprofit sponsors of low- and moderate-income housing

1. Objectives: The 1968 Housing Act has provisions to assist nonprofit sponsors of low and moderate income housing.

2. Authorization in the 1968 Housing Act: (a) The Secretary of HUD is authorized to provide technical assistance with respect to the construction, rehabilitation, and operation of low and moderate income housing to nonprofit organizations.

(b) The Secretary can also make 80-percent, interest-free loans to non-profit sponsors of such housing to cover certain pre-construction costs under Federally-assisted programs.

(c) The Low and Moderate Income Sponsor Fund is established for the purpose of making the loans with an authorization of appropriations of $7.5 million for fiscal year 1969 and $10 million for fiscal year 1970. The fund will be a revolving fund and repayments of loans will be deposited in the Fund.

3. Authorization in Appropriation Acts: $500,000 was appropriated in the Supplemental Appropriations for fiscal 1969.

4. Recommendations. NHC urges that the full authorization of $7.5 million be appropriated for fiscal 1969 and at the same time the full authorization of $10 million be appropriated for fiscal 1970.

CHAPTER R. MODEL CITIES

1. Objectives: NHC reaffirms its endorsement of the model cities program to launch local programs for the upgrading of entire neighborhoods. This is done through the concentrated and coordinated use of all available Federal aids and local private and governmental resources, including the supplementary Federal grants for such model cities. We urge acceleration in the disbursement and release of funds under the present program.

2. Authorizations in the 1968 Housing Act: The Housing Act of 1968 provides for (a) an increased authorization of $1 billion for the fiscal year 1970 for supplemental grants and (b) $12 million for fiscal year 1969 for grants to plan model cities programs. Any amounts authorized, but not appropriated, may be used for any succeeding fiscal year commencing prior to July 1, 1971.

3. Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: (a) Of the $400 million authorized for supplemental grants to model cities for fiscal year 1968, $200 million was appropriated. For fiscal year 1969, there was an authorization of $500 million for supplemental grants but the amount appropriated was $312.5 million. No appropriation has been made of the additional $1 billion for fiscal year 1970 for supplemental grants.

(b) Of the $12 million authorized for fiscal year 1967 for grants to plan model cities programs, there was an appropriation of $11 million. For fiscal year 1968, there was an appropriation of the $12 million which was authorized for such planning grants. No appropriation has been made of the $12 million of planning grants for fiscal year 1969.

4. Recommendations: (a) Additional Appropriations: NHC urges that the authorizations in the 1968 Housing Act be fully funded, including: (1) the $1 billion of additional funds for supplemental grants during fiscal year 1970, together with the $387.5 million authorized for previous fiscal years but not appropriated; and (2) the $12 million of model cities planning funds for fiscal year 1969, together with the $1 million previously authorized but not appropriated.

(b) Increase in Legislative Authorizations: NHC recommends a legislative increase in the appropriations for the model cities program for a 5-year period as follows: (1) additional supplemental grants at the rate of $1 billion a year; and (2) additional model cities planning funds at the rate of $50 million a year. We further recommend that there be advance appropriations for each fiscal year, besides the current one, to give cities more lead time for their planning and development of model city programs. While we are pleased to note the significant increase in cities now participating in the model cities program, we urge that the foregoing recommendation be adopted to enable participation by all qualified cities and counties which apply; also, to enable participating cities and counties to obtain the additional funds which they require.

(c) Other Legislative Amendments: The model cities program cannot achieve its goals and provide necessary housing unless there are increased authorizations and programs—as recommended elsewhere in these Resolutions—as follows:

(1) To expand urban renewal activities.

(2) To increase the supply of adequate low- and moderate income housing in the model cities. Such housing should not be limited to what will be developed in the model neighborhood area or the city itself. New housing and relating community facilities should be developed extensively on vacant land or other sites not involving substantial residential displacement.

(3) To increase Federal grant funds for water, sewer, and neighborhood facilities, and for open-space and urban beautification.

(4) To increase Federal grant funds for all other programs involved in model city areas, including those relating to health, education, training, welfare, mass transportation, training and other purposes relating to urban affairs; also, to specifically designate such categorical funds for these purposes which would be available for model cities.

(d) Other Recommendations. To achieve the objectives of this program, full coordination is required between HUD—and all of its participating constituents—and all of the other Departments of the Federal Government who participate in the model cities program; also between the Federal Government and local governments. Each must effectively use all of its powers and available funds in doing its share of the total job. NHC recommends Presidential action and direction to assure that all participating Departments of the Federal Government fulfill their responsibilities under the programs for model cities and urban affairs, including (i) effective coordination and cooperation between them and (ii) the priority handling of applications for assistance filed with the various Federal Departments by model cities.

NHC recommends the removal of the present limitation that a model cities program cannot cover more than 10% of the area of the city. NHC also recommends the appropriation of the additional funds required for this enlarged program.

CHAPTER S. URBAN RENEWAL PROGRAM

1. Objectives: Urban renewal is a major instrument of reform which deals primarily with the physical side of removing blight. Its objective is to eliminate slum, blighted or deteriorating areas and provide for the use and disposition of land in accordance with comprehensive urban renewal plans that meet community needs. Nearly 900 cities are reclaiming such blighted areas for redevelopment or rehabilitation under urban renewal programs. The backlog of urban-renewal-grant applications was in excess of $1.75 billion at the end of the last fiscal year, despite HUD actions to discourage applications by the imposition of more stringent requirements concerning program objectives and priority criteria. Each year about 60 additional communities are joining in the participation of the urban renewal program, after adopting workable programs for community improvement. There is a tremendous need for increased urban renewal authorizations to meet the requests of cities who are seeking to stop the insidious blight which is overwhelming their older neighborhoods.

2. Authorizations and Limitations in the 1968 Housing Act: (a) An additional $1.4 billion of urban renewal grants was authorized by the Act for fiscal year 1970. In addition, there was an authorization of $350 million for urban renewal grants for projects in model city areas, which supplements the previous authorization of $250 million for this purpose.

(b) The Act provides for a new approach to urban renewal which is intended to facilitate more rapid rehabilitation and redevelopment of blighted areas on an effective scale. Financial assistance would be provided for a neighborhood development program which consists of urban renewal undertakings and activities in one or more areas that are planned and carried out on the basis of annual increments. Financing is based on the amount of funds needed to carry out the activities planned during a 12-month period in each of the urban renewal areas in the community's program. As to subsequent annual increments of the program, the community would receive financial assistance to the extent that funds are then available and the community's program is acceptable to HUD. This will permit the undertaking of urban-renewal-execution activities, land acquisitions and public improvements simultaneously with planning.

(c) The Act requires that a majority of the total number of housing units in a community's residential urban renewal projects which receive Federal recognition after August 1, 1968, must be for low and moderate income families or individuals. As to housing units in urban renewal areas, at least 20% of the total must house low-income families or individuals, but HUD may waive this 20% requirement to the extent that these units are not needed in the community.

3. Authorization in Appropriation Acts: For fiscal 1969, $750 million was authorized and appropriated for urban renewal grants. In addition, an advance appropriation was made of $750 million of the $1.4 billion authorized for fiscal 1970 in order to give communities more lead time for planning their urban renewal program. For urban renewal projects in model city areas, $312.5 million was appropriated for fiscal 1969, as compared with the $350 million authorized. Of the $250 million authorized for grants on urban renewal projects in model city areas for the preceding fiscal year, $150 million was appropriated.

4. Recommendations: (a) Additional Authorization in Appropriation Acts: NHC recommends appropriations in the full amount previously authorized by law but not yet appropriated, including: (1) $650 million for urban renewal grants of the $1.4 billion authorized for fiscal 1970; and (2) $137.5 million for urban renewal grants in model city areas.

(b) When there are additional legislative authorizations as recommended below, there should be additional appropriations for each fiscal year and an advance appropriation for the succeeding fiscal year. This will follow the precedent established by the last Congress to give communities more lead time for planning their urban renewal programs.

(c) Increase in Legislative Authorizations: NHC recommends an increase in the authorizations for appropriations for a 5-year period at an annual rate of $3 billion for urban renewal grants. Such an appropriation will make realistic the national objective of overtaking the decay in our cities and making urban renewal more immediately responsive to urban needs.

(d) Other Legislative Amendments: NHC recommends the following amendments to urban renewal laws:

(1) On capital grants for urban renewal, code enforcement and other comparable programs, there should be an increase in the federal grant to $\frac{3}{4}$ from the present $\frac{2}{3}$ which is paid to larger cities. The $\frac{3}{4}$ grants are now made only to smaller cities, but they are equally needed by larger cities. Further, where the community elects to finance survey and planning costs at its own expense, the project capital grants should be increased to $\frac{5}{8}$ from $\frac{3}{4}$. Pooling all of such grants should be permitted for all urban renewal projects in the city. Where the urban renewal is located in a distressed area, existing law already provides for a larger urban renewal grant.

(2) Loan and grant contracts should be authorized for the purpose of assisting the rehabilitation of scattered properties in residential neighborhoods designated for conservation, rehabilitation, or intensive code enforcement by an approved community renewal program. The cost of any new public improvements serving the rehabilitation properties should be recognized for appropriate grant-in-aid credits.

(3) Local public agencies should be authorized to make sales of industrial and commercial land for later development by nonprofit industrial development corporations or properly constituted public bodies on the same basis as is now authorized under economic development laws.

(4) There should be a broadening of the existing statutory provisions for recognition of real property tax losses—on the land as improved before the demolition occurred—by the locality in an urban renewal area as a local grant-in-aid credit. Such losses should be computed from the date of acquisition of the property to the completion of the redevelopment in accordance with the urban renewal plan for the project.

(5) Where a project is in execution, tax abatement should count as a non-cash local grant-in-aid to the project when such tax abatement is granted to federally-assisted housing for the purpose of achieving lower rents and facilitating relocation unless there is a Federal grant to reimburse the state and local taxing authorities for their tax losses.

(6) NHC supports special urban renewal provisions for central business districts which would:

(i) permit a waiver of residential requirements in renewing such districts;

(ii) recognize that employment, commercial, industrial and cultural functions of central business districts are of vital importance to community growth and revitalization; and

(iii) require HUD to accept 100% of site improvements and supporting facilities as part of the gross project cost and as a local grant-in-aid.

(7) There should be an amendment to the urban renewal law allowing any public facility to be eligible for non-cash grant-in-aid credit covering the full cost of the facility; (i) if its development was occasioned by the urban renewal program as certified by the urban renewal agency; (ii) if it is located in a community having more than one urban renewal project; and (iii) if the community has a workable program and a community renewal program.

(8) There should be no limit in the amount of grants to a particular urban renewal demonstration project, under Section 314, so the Federal Government in special cases could pay up to 100% of the cost of the demonstration program.

(9) Non-cash grant-in-aid credits should be extended to cover air rights involved in the development costs for 221(d)(3) or 236 projects for low and moderate income families.

(10) Urban renewal grants of 75% should be available for the reclamation of otherwise unbuildable land which is located within metropolitan areas. Often there are large available areas of land which are not suitable for building because of problems which can be corrected by appropriate expenditures of public funds, and the use of appropriate reclamation and conservation techniques.

This will provide convenient sites for housing and other community facilities needed by those now living within the overcrowded areas of central cities.

(11) Where state or local law requires abutting property owners to pay a portion of the cost of street repairs, federal urban renewal grants should be made to cover the owner's share when there is a showing of need.

(12) Under the Neighborhood Development Program (N.D.P.), non-cash grants-in-aid—otherwise meeting time requirements—should become eligible as soon as an area is recognized by HUD for overall study purposes, to the full extent which said facilities serve the study area, without any prerequisite for an approved urban renewal plan covering such study area.

(e) Recommendations for Administrative Action: NHC recommends the following administrative actions in the Neighborhood Development Program:

(1) It should be flexibly administered, particularly as regards the requirements for actions on plans for areas larger than those proposed for the action year.

(2) HUD should make every effort to develop administrative guidelines which will permit the program to function smoothly under existing state renewal enabling legislation.

(3) Costs of development of the initial application should be an allowable project cost.

CHAPTER T. INTERIM ASSISTANCE AND INTERIM REHABILITATION PROGRAMS IN SLUM AND BLIGHTED AREAS

1. Interim Assistance for Blighted Areas as Provided for in the 1968 Housing Act: The 1968 Housing Act authorizes the Secretary of HUD to contract to make grants aggregating up to $15 million in any fiscal year to cities or counties to assist them in taking interim steps to alleviate harmful conditions in slum or blighted areas of communities. To qualify, these areas must be planned for substantial clearance, rehabilitation, or federally assisted code enforcement in the near future, and must need some immediate public action until permanent action can be taken. Grants may not exceed two-thirds of the cost of planning and carrying out an interim assistance program, except that three-fourths grants can be made to any community with a population of 50,000 or less. A community has to have an approved workable program to qualify for assistance.

2. Need for Interim Rehabilitation Program: In slum and blighted areas, there should be a fast program of interim rehabilitation to correct those housing conditions which directly affect health and safety. The people now living in substandard housing should not be expected to wait until permanent neighborhood improvement programs are developed. We need a program which will provide grants and loans which can be rapidly disbursed to eliminate health and safety hazards, without regard to the useful life of the buildings. The objective is to provide whatever assistance is needed to achieve monthly charges, after interim rehabilitation, which will be within the financial reach of the low income and moderate income residents. The emergency upgrading of structures should not involve increases in rents beyond the reach of the present tenants.

3. Authorizations in Appropriation Acts for Interim Assistance: There have been no appropriation authorizations to implement the 1968 Act providing interim assistance to alleviate harmful conditions in slum or blighted areas.

4. Recommendations: (a) Authorizations in Appropriation Act: NHC recommends necessary appropriation authorizations to carry out the 1968 Act relating to the interim assistance program in slum areas. However, the Secretary should be authorized to enter into contracts for grants in such amounts as are commensurate with the need. This should include an advance appropriation for fiscal year 1971 to give cities and counties more lead time in planning interim steps to alleviate harmful conditions in slum or blighted areas. NHC further recommends that the amount of the appropriations—and legislative authorizations therefor—should be increased in response to the increasing needs evidenced by the applications which will be filed for interim assistance.

(b) Legislative Amendments on Interim Assistance: All cities should be eligible for a three-quarters grant for the cost of planning and carrying out the interim program. Instead of limiting the larger grants to the smaller cities, the large cities should get such a grant and not be limited to a two-thirds grant.

(c) Legislation for Interim Rehabilitation Program. NHC recommends legislation to provide for the above-described program of interim rehabilitation to correct housing conditions which directly affect health and safety, without regard to the useful life of the buildings. The legislation should include the following:

(1) Amendments to the interim assistance law, so that it is broadened to include such interim rehabilitation of housing as is necessary to protect the health and safety of residents. This would make grants available to cities and counties which are undertaking such a program.

(2) With respect to interim rehabilitation to correct conditions which directly affect health and safety in homes located in slum and blighted areas, the following financial assistance should be extended to owners of homes who have low and moderate incomes: (i) rehabilitation grants under Section 115 in an amount not to exceed $3,000; and (ii) rehabilitation loans under Section 312.

(3) Federal code enforcement grants for interim rehabilitation of housing.

(4) Federal grants to urban renewal agencies to acquire slum buildings which are in violation of housing codes, and for interim rehabilitation to eliminate hazards. Public acquisition of properties for interim rehabilitation may be an early acquisition of part of the property that would later be involved in a permanent renewal program for the neighborhood.

(5) Section 312 should be further amended to provide loans to public bodies or agencies which take possession or control of any property—through receivership or otherwise—which violates code requirements or local laws concerning health or safety. This would cover property where the owner has failed to correct such violations within a period prescribed by local law. The loan should be made on the condition that it will be repaid from the income derived from the rehabilitated property, with appropriate liens or other rights that will be enforceable against the property.

Pursuant to the foregoing legislation, the assistance should be sufficient to achieve monthly charges, after interim rehabilitation, which will be within the financial reach of the present occupants or of others of low or moderate incomes.

CHAPTER V. NEW TOWNS AND NEW COMMUNITIES

1. Need: Since 40,000,000 additional people will be living in cities during the next decade, we need new towns and new communities to help take care of this increased urban population; and to provide for an orderly dispersal of population and relieve further city congestion. These new towns would be carefully planned as balanced communities. They would be largely self-contained with homes, apartments, schools, jobs, hospitals, recreational facilities and open spaces. They should be planned to minimize transportation needs by assuring employment for residents within or near the new community. They should provide housing for all income groups, including those of low and moderate incomes. These new communities can provide a new kind of urban living which can offer an alternative to the sprawling growth that threatens to overwhelm our metropolitan regions with costly and inefficient development.

There is an urgent need for Federal guaranties to overcome major obstacles which have prevented greater efforts in this field, namely: (1) the large capital investments to acquire large land areas and install the basic facilities needed to prepare the land for development; and (2) the extended period for the planning and installation of site improvements, during which large expenditures must be made for debt service, taxes and overhead.

2. Authorizations in 1968 Housing Act: The Act authorizes HUD to guaranty obligations issued by new community developers to help finance approved new community developments. These guaranties should overcome the major obstacles which have prevented greater accomplishments in this field. With the security of Federal guaranties, investors should be willing to provide financing geared to the realities of internal cash flow in new community development projects. To encourage localities to use Federal aid programs in support of new communities, the Act includes a program of incentive grants. When Federally-assisted facilities are being constructed to serve a new community, the public agency will be eligible—in addition to the basic Federal grants—for a supplementary grant covering an additional 20% of construction costs. However, the total Federal contribution to the cost of community facilities cannot exceed 80% of the cost of the facility. This would include facilities such as water, sewer and the open-space land. Appropriations for supplemental grants were authorized in the amount of $5 million for fiscal year 1969 and $25 million for fiscal year 1970.

3. Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: The appropriation acts have not appropriated the funds authorized for supplement grants to public agencies which install Federally-assisted facilities to serve new communities.

4. Recommendations: (a) Appropriations: We recommend that the full amount of $5 million be appropriated for supplemental grants for fiscal year 1969. We also recommend an advance appropriation of the $25 million authorized for supplemental grants for fiscal year 1970 in order to give more lead time for initiating and planning new communities.

(b) Increase in Legislative Authorizations: We recommend that the aggregate limit on outstanding guaranties be increased by $1 billion above the present limit of $250 million. We further recommend an additional authorization of appropriations for supplemental grants of $30 million a year over a 5-year period.

(c) Other Legislative Amendments: (1) The 1968 Act should be amended to include public agencies or authorities instead of limiting the HUD guaranties to private developers. NHC believes that a public authority is an effective instrumentality to undertake necessary land acquisition and to carry out the development of a new town.

(2) The Bureau of Public Roads should be authorized to purchase excess land beyond the amount needed for the roads themselves. This would include land suitable for residential development which the Bureau should make available to rehouse displaced families. At large road interchanges, the Bureau should be authorized to acquire additional land for the development of new communities which can meet the needs of our growing population, including displaced families. Such land can generally be acquired by the Bureau at low cost at the time that land is being acquired for new road systems.

(3) The 1968 Act requires low and moderate-income housing to be included in new towns as a prerequisite for supplemental grants. There should be a similar requirement as a condition to a HUD guaranty of obligations issued by a new community developer.

(d) NHC joins with the National Committee for Urban Growth Policy in recommending the additional measures which should be taken to facilitate New Communities and urban growth.

CHAPTER V. PUBLIC AND COMMUNITY FACILITIES INCLUDING WATER, SEWER, NEIGHBORHOOD FACILITIES AND OPEN-SPACE LAND PROGRAMS

1. Need: There is a great and continuing need for Federal public facilities grants to assist in overcoming serious backlogs in replacing substandard or obsolete facilities—especially in the central cities—and eliminating water pollution and meeting the unprecedented demands for additional facilities and services generated by population expansion. These needs cut across whole metropolitan areas and involve central cities, new suburbs and the new communities still to come. This essential expansion in Federal aid could be a potent influence in resolving the present chaotic conditions created by the multiplicity of local governmental jurisdictions in most metropolitan areas. This multiplicity has led to suburban sprawl, land misuse, land speculation, and frequent failure to metropolitan area and regional planning as an effective tool for the control of new developments. Such a program could provide important leverage to establish coordinated local governmental approaches to control programs of area and region-wide significance. At the same time, it could foster decentralization of local governmental functions of strictly local application.

2. Authorizations in 1968 Housing Act: The Act only authorized funds to be appropriated for water and sewer facilities and the open-space land program. For water and sewer facilities an additional $150 million was authorized for fiscal year 1969 and $115 million for fiscal 1970. For the open-space land program, the 1968 Act authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of making grants, an additional $150 million (for a total ceiling of $460 million) prior to July 1, 1970. The limit on the amount of funds the Secretary of HUD is authorized to use for grants for technical assistance on open space was raised by $75,000. The Act provided that any appropriations made for water and sewer facilities, neighborhood facilities, and advance acquisitions of land programs not already appropriated may be appropriated for fiscal 1970. The Act extends the interim planning requirements under the basic water and sewer facilities grant program to October 1, 1969.

3. Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: For fiscal year 1969 there was an appropriation of $165 million for water and sewer grants, an appropriation of $75 million for open-space land grants, and an appropriation of $35 million for neighborhood facilities grants.

4. Recommendations: (a) Additional Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: Based upon past Congressional legislative authorizations and actions, we anticipate that at least $165 million would be appropriated for each fiscal year for water and sewer grants.

However, there should be advance appropriations for each succeeding fiscal year, besides the current one, to give public agencies more lead time for their planning and development of these programs. When the additional legislative authorization recommended below is made, we recommend an increase in the rate of appropriations to $2 billion annually for water and sewer grants, and for other public and community facilities as described below.

(b) Increase in Legislative Authorization: NHC recommends a 5-year authorization of $2 billion annually for grants to local governments for basic water and sewer facilities and other types of public improvements and community facilities. Of the $2 billion, $250 million should be made available annually for the open space land program. The public improvements and community facilities should include those authorized by the 1965 Act such as neighborhood and public facilities, particularly in slum and ghetto areas. It should also include the acquisition of land to provide parks and recreational facilities in urban areas, so that they are closely accessible to the people who need them most.

(c) Other Legislative Amendments: (1) As recommended in these Resolutions on other comparable programs, Federal grants to larger cities for public and community facilities should be increased to $\frac{3}{4}$ from the present $\frac{2}{3}$'s, since their need is as grave as that of small cities. For neighborhood centers, parks and recreational facilities in slum and ghetto areas, the Federal grant should be 100%. Moreover, there should be annual Federal grants to provide for the staff and operating expenses of such facilities. The neighborhood facilities centers in such areas should be permitted to include swimming pools—either indoor or outdoor—and gymnasiums.

(2) We believe that the foregoing grants should be generally restricted to communities that are simultaneously providing adequate housing for low and moderate income families, where the need for such housing exists.

CHAPTER W. URBAN PLANNING AND FACILITIES—COMPREHENSIVE PLANNING AND PLANNED AREA-WIDE DEVELOPMENT

1. Need. The increased concentration of population in and around metropolitan areas has created an urgent need for a coordinated development of resources and services for urban and rural areas and a need to facilitate comprehensive planning for these areas. Because of the problem of multiplicity of political jurisdictions and agencies involved with this planning, and because of the inadequacy of the operational and administrative arrangements available for cooperation among them, NHC believes that Federal programs are badly needed to achieve the additional participation and cooperation from the states and localities. The 1968 Housing Act contains the following provisions to meet this need:

(a) The Section 701 planning assistance grant program is extensively revised. The Secretary of HUD is now authorized to make comprehensive planning grants to State planning agencies for assistance to "district" planning agencies for rural and other non-metropolitan areas. Consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture is required prior to approval of any district planning grants. The Secretary of Agriculture and, when appropriate, the Secretary of Commerce, may provide technical assistance in connection with the establishment of districts and the carrying out of planning by them.

(b) Other new provisions authorize direct planning grants to Indian tribal planning councils or other bodies for planning on Indian reservations; to regional and district councils of government as well as those organized on a metropolitan basis; to regional commissions and economic development districts established under the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965; to cities, without regard to population, within metropolitan areas for planning which is part of metropolitan planning; and to official Government planning agencies for areas where rapid urbanization is expected as a result of a new community development assisted under Title IV of the act. The Secretary is required to consult with the Secretary of Commerce before making any planning grant which includes any part of an economic development district.

(c) The definition of comprehensive planning is broadened to include planning for the provision of governmental services and for the development and utilization of human and natural resources. The inclusion of a housing element is required as part of the preparation of comprehensive land use plans. The use of private consultants, where their professional services are deemed appropriate by the assisted governments, is added to the stated purposes of the program.

2. Authorizations in the 1968 Housing Act: (a) Comprehensive Planning: The Act increased the amounts authorized to be appropriated for the purposes of comprehensive planning by $35 million making a total not to exceed $265 million prior to July 1, 1969 and authorized to be appropriated an additional $125 million for a total not to exceed $390 million prior to July 1, 1970. Of the amount available prior to July 1, 1969, $20 million may be used only for district planning grants and that amount shall be increased by $10 million on July 1, 1969. All amounts appropriated must remain available until expended except that any funds so appropriated, not to exceed an aggregate of $10 million plus 5 percentum of the funds so appropriated, may be used by the Secretary for studies and research in comprehensive planning.

(b) Planned Area-Wide Development: Supplementary grants (designed to encourage areawide planning) are authorized for Federally-assisted projects in all multijurisdictional areas (not just metropolitan areas as previously provided) such as the rural planning districts proposed to be assisted with comprehensive planning grants under the comprehensive planning provisions of the law. Unused authorizations for appropriations for supplementary grants for fiscal year 1967 and 1968 are made available through fiscal year 1970.

3. Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: For fiscal year 1969, $43,338,000 was appropriated for urban planning grants. Out of $10 million requested for area-wide development grants for fiscal year 1969, none was appropriated.

4. Recommendation—Additional Authorization in Appropriation Acts: NHC urges that $55 million be appropriated for fiscal 1969 as supplemental grants for the orderly growth of our urban areas. These are needed to achieve more effective coordinated metropolitan area planning and program development. In addition, NHC urges that the $10 million requested for a program of area-wide incentive grants in fiscal 1969 be appropriated.

CHAPTER X. URBAN MASS TRANSPORTATION

1. Objective: There is an urgent need to modernize, expand and reorganize the urban transportation systems. Adequate Federal grants are necessary to achieve this objective.

2. Authorizations in the 1968 Housing Act: The Act increased authorized appropriations for grants and other assistance to urban mass transportation by $190 million for fiscal year 1970. The amount of funds which can be used for research, development, and demonstration projects was increased by $6 million, commencing July 1, 1968; also the statutory limit on the funds available for this purpose is removed, commencing July 1, 1969. The definition of "mass transportation" was broadened to allow greater flexibility and opportunity for application of new concepts and systems.

3. Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: For the fiscal years 1969 and 1970 there were appropriations of $175 million each year. Of the total amount in legislative authorizations for mass transit grants, $70 million has not been appropriated.

4. Recommendations: (a) Additional Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: NHC recommends an appropriation of the $70 million authorized by law, but not yet appropriated. When the additional legislative authorization recommended below is made, we urge an increase in the rate of appropriations to $750 million annually for mass transportation grants.

(b) Increase in Legislative Amendments: NHC recommends that the authorization of appropriations for mass transit grants be increased to $750 million per year for the next 5 years. The expansion of the program is necessary to achieve the housing and urban development goals recommended in these Resolutions. We also urge an advance appropriation for each succeeding fiscal year, besides the current one, in order to give cities more lead time for planning their mass transit programs.

CHAPTER Y. RESEARCH, TECHNOLOGY, TRAINING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

1. Need for Basic Research and Training: (a) The housing industry has neither the organization nor the resources to support substantial research in the area of housing technology and research. Existing research is almost exclusively in the hands of material and large equipment suppliers and reflects the particular interests of these groups. It is necessary that Federal financial support be given towards the development of new systems and overall construction techniques. The technological advances necessary to reduce housing costs must be accompanied by more uniform building codes in all areas of the nation. This will make it more feasible for developers and manufacturers to produce housing and materials for a national market.

(b) There is a shortage of trained professional and sub-professional personnel in the broad field of community development. This presents a serious problem in achieving effective action programs.

2. Authorizations in 1968 Housing Act: The Act recognizes the need for urban technical assistance, research, and training and provides assistance in the following areas:

(a) Advances in Technology in Housing and Urban Development: The Act authorizes such sums as may be necessary to be appropriated, commencing with fiscal year 1969, for studies of new and improved techniques and methods of applying advances in technology to housing construction and rehabilitation, and to urban development. Four-year contracts are authorized for such studies rather than two-year contracts as heretofore authorized.

(b) Housing for Lower Income Families Through New Technologies: The Act directs the Secretary of HUD to institute a program under which qualified public and private organizations will submit plans for the development of housing for lower income families, using new and advanced technologies, on Federal land which has been made available for that purpose or on other suitable land. The Secretary is to approve five plans, each of which shall have a technology and organization with a potential to produce at least 1,000 dwelling units a year. The Secretary is to seek the construction of that number of dwelling units a year over a five-year period for each of the various types of technologies proposed in approved plans. Mortgages financing the projects are authorized to be insured under the FHA experimental housing program.

(c) Authorization for Urban Information and Technical Assistance Service Program: The Act increases the authorization for grants to states to assist in the provision of urban information and technical assistance by $5 million for fiscal year 1969, and by $15 million for fiscal year 1970. Amounts authorized for these grants, but not appropriated, are authorized to be appropriated for any succeeding fiscal year commencing prior to July 1, 1970.

(d) Federal-State Training Programs: The Act broadens the Federal-State training program to permit grants to states for the training of subprofessional—in addition to professional—persons who will be employed in the field of housing or community development. The trainees may be trained for employment by private nonprofit organizations or public organizations which have responsibility for housing and community development programs.

3. Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: Instead of the $20 million which the President requested for urban research and technology, there was an appropriation of $11 million. Instead of about $4.5 million requested for the low income demonstrations program, there was an appropriation of $2 million for this purpose. There was an appropriation of $500,000 for urban fellowships. There was an appropriation for the urban information and technical assistance service programs.

4. Recommendations: Additional Authorizations in Appropriation Acts: NHC recommends necessary appropriation authorizations to carry out all of the authorizations in the 1968 Act. Where the appropriations were less than the amounts requested by the President, we recommend appropriations in the full amounts so required as necessary for each of these programs. In addition, NHC recommends that $1 million a year be appropriated for training under a 5-year program; and that the fellowships be increased to $2 million a year under a 5-year program.

CHAPTER 2. PROGRAMS AND POLICIES FOR GENERAL APPLICATION TO HOUSING

1. Equal Opportunity for Housing: (a) Throughout its entire life NHC has been committed to equal opportunity for all American families to secure good housing in good neighborhoods. It again reaffirms this position. While recognizing the slow but significant progress that has been achieved in recent years, it deplors the fact that this opportunity is still denied to millions of American families throughout every section of the land because of their race, color, creed or national origin, or because of the myth which exists as to their desire, or ability to pay for and maintain good homes. To overcome this denial of opportunity and to dissipate these myths, a great challenge is facing the nation.

(b) NHC has long supported the principle of a competitive housing market open to free bargaining by all American families without regard to racial or ethnic background. Many localities have been limited in achieving this objective, however, because of inadequate supplies of low and moderate cost living accommodations and by the congestion of many minority group families in limited sections of the community. To provide an adequate supply of housing, it is necessary to raise production to a minimum of 3,000,000 dwelling units per year.

(c) We urge the President and the Congress of the U.S. to take all steps toward providing an equal opportunity for housing. This includes full and adequate appropriations for the administration of the fair housing program under Title IV of the Civil Rights Act of 1968. Of the $8 million requested by the President, Congress only appropriated $2 million for such expenses of administration. We strongly urge the larger appropriations required for sufficient staff to effectuate fully the foregoing open-housing objectives of achieving equal opportunity for all American families to secure good housing in good neighborhoods. Finally, we urge the Administration to take all necessary additional actions to achieve this equal opportunity objective. Strong affirmative measures should be taken to enforce the fair housing rights in Title IV.

(d) We should provide an opportunity for freedom of choice in our housing program. The choice of individual or cooperative homeownership or rental housing and the choice of city, suburban, new town or country living must not be limited by race, color, or religion.

2. Relocation: (a) NHC has long recognized the need for coordinated relocation payments and practices within the various programs of the Federal Government. We therefore give strong support to S. 1, the Uniform Relocation Assistance and Land Acquisition Policies Bill of 1969 pending before Congress. However, this bill makes no provision for assistance to persons displaced by rehabilitation outside of urban renewal, code enforcement, and model city areas. NHC suggests that the bill be amended to provide for assistance to all families displaced by any governmental activities.

(b) When homeowners or tenants are being displaced for urban renewal or other governmental action, there should be a Federal grant to provide adequate payments as equitable compensation to pay not only their moving expenses, but also to help them obtain decent homes elsewhere. In the case of a displaced home owner the amount of the payment should be sufficient to enable him to obtain adequate housing, without limiting such payment to $5,000 as is now provided in the Housing Act of 1968.

(c) When a small business is being displaced through urban renewal or other governmental action, affirmative action should be taken to assist its relocation either within the urban renewal area or elsewhere. If it is to be relocated within the urban renewal area, there should be a policy to establish a rental for the small business which it can afford. In order to achieve this, an appropriate write-down should be made in the disposition of property under the urban renewal program. While it is recognized that there are allowances under the present legislation to cover the cost of relocation by a business which is displaced through urban renewal, we recommend this additional action to better assure the continuance of a small business that is being displaced. NHC also recommends the full implementation and use of the 1965 amendments to the Small Business Act for businesses which are being displaced by urban renewal or other governmental actions.

3. Uniform System for Computation of Incomes by HUD: (a) HUD should have a uniform system for computing incomes which could be used by all constituent agencies administering housing programs which involve income limits. To be equitable, income limits should allow appropriate deductions and exemptions like those long recognized and utilized in the public housing program. The Senate Committee on Banking and Currency recognized the appropriateness of such uniformity in its Report on the 1968 Housing Act:

"Although the statute is silent on defining income, the committee is aware of the necessity for the Secretary to establish procedures to assure that fair standards and rules are followed within HUD for determining income (after allowable deductions) for eligibility of low or moderate income families or mortgagors under HUD's various programs. These procedures would apply to those who receive the benefit of subsidies or below-market interest rates to enable them to obtain occupancy, homeownership, or cooperative housing membership."

(b) At the present time, the methods of computing income differ in HUD, although the constituent agencies are administering comparable housing programs involving income limits. For years, public housing has allowed appropriate deductions or exemptions in computing the family income such as:

(1) Deduction of $600 from the income of a secondary wage earner thereby recognizing that there are at least this amount of additional expenses in earning such wages, so they do not represent a full increment to family income;

(2) Deductions for expenses for the care of children or sick or incapacitated family members when these expenses are necessary to permit the wage earner to be employed;

(3) Deductions for social security taxes and compulsory pension funds; and

(4) Deductions for minors or dependent adults.

(c) Although these deductions or exemptions are allowed in the public housing program, they are not recognized uniformly in the FHA program involving rent supplements or below-market interest rates under Section 221(d)(3). Thus, in interest supplement programs the 1968 Housing Act provides for the deduction from family income of $300 for each minor child and the elimination of the earnings of all minor children. Pursuant to the Congressional intent as evidenced by the foregoing quotation from the Senate Committee Report, FHA has allowed a further deduction of 5% of gross income to cover payroll deductions for social security and compulsory pension funds. However, FHA has not allowed other deductions of the type which have been long recognized in public housing, particularly since the income limits in the interest supplement program are now computed as a percentage of the local public housing limits.

4. Rehabilitation in Slum Areas not Intended as Containment Program: Rehabilitation programs for slum areas are not intended to be containment programs which would restrict present residents so that they must continue to live there. They should have an opportunity to move into other areas. The NHC goals contemplate development of new and rehabilitated housing in other areas which would be available for the low and moderate income families now living in slum and ghetto areas. To help assure achievement of this objective, we recommend enactment of legislation providing that no program of subsidy, aid, or assistance by any agency of HUD—including sewer and water facility grants, open space grants, community facilities grants, urban renewal programs, model cities programs, mass transit grants, and FHA insurance—may be carried on within any jurisdiction if a reasonable share of housing will not be available for low and moderate income families. Such legislation would help assure the development of balanced programs of housing in new areas into which the residents of slum and ghetto areas could move.

5. Adequacy of Housing to be Provided for Low and Moderate Income Families: Federally-assisted housing programs are intended to provide adequate space and facilities and otherwise meet proper standards for low and moderate income families. To meet the needs of larger families, more housing units must be built of larger size and with more bedrooms. In housing communities for low and moderate income families, provision should be made for recreational facilities—including swimming pools when appropriate—day care and pre-school centers, and other facilities for community activities. This will provide children and other residents with opportunities to engage in wholesome and constructive activities which will help create better communities. These measures to improve the quality of life in Federally-assisted projects will accomplish the objectives prescribed in the 1968 Housing Act, including the requirement for better design standards in such housing. These housing communities should be pleasant places to live and respond to the needs of the residents, with attention to their comfort, convenience and recreation. As such, they will be attractive for residence by families of both moderate and low incomes.

6. Uniform System of Tax Exemption and Tax Abatement: (a) In some HUD programs there is no requirement for real estate tax exemption or tax abatement. This is true in the new leasing program for the use of privately-owned housing for public housing purposes. It is also true in the rent supplement program for those of public housing incomes. Yet, conventional public housing projects are required to have tax exemptions and they pay only 10% of shelter rent in lieu of taxes. We previously recommended that conventional public housing projects conform with those other publicly-assisted programs which serve low-income families. This would be accomplished by permitting the payment in lieu of taxes to be equivalent to full taxes.

(b) There should be a more practical and consistent policy concerning the requirement for tax abatement on privately-owned projects which are Federally-assisted either with (i) below-market-interest rates, (ii) interest assistance, (iii) rent supplements, or (iv) leasing programs under public housing. Tax abatement should not be required on these projects, even as a means of offsetting the higher costs that prevail in some cities. Such tax abatement is often unavailable because of restrictions in state and local laws; moreover, the cities often face serious problems of inadequate tax revenues and are unwilling to grant tax abatement. Cost limits should be made realistic so that these private housing programs can function in high cost areas without requiring tax abatement.

(c) Where state and local governments grant tax abatements on housing projects which are Federally-assisted in the manner described above, there should be an annual Federal grant to reimburse them for their tax losses.

7. Disposition of Federally-Owned Housing Projects: (a) FHA has acquired ownership of rental housing projects upon which defaults have occurred. When requested, FHA should either lease these projects to local housing authorities for public housing or make negotiated sales of these projects for cooperative ownership by low income or moderate income families. Also, sales may be made to public agencies or nonprofit or other properly motivated organizations which will use them to provide housing for low or moderate income groups. The housing should be sold at a price and with a mortgage term and interest rate—on the purchase money mortgage accepted by FHA—which would enable the property to serve these income groups at monthly charges which they can afford. When necessary, financing should be made available to rehabilitate these properties. Such properties should be eligible for rent supplements and interest subsidies. These recommendations also apply to other federally-owned housing.

(b) FHA has also acquired ownership of single-family homes on which defaults have occurred. In the disposition of this housing, FHA should meet the needs of those of low and moderate incomes. The housing should be sold to them at a price and with a mortgage term and interest rate—on the purchase-money mortgage accepted by FHA—which would be within the financial reach of the low and moderate income purchasers. Priorities should be established for sales which would accomplish this purpose, rather than granting priority to cash sales or sales involving conventional loans, as these generally involve purchasers with incomes above those at the low and moderate level. Legislation should be enacted if it is necessary to establish disposition policies in accordance with the foregoing principles.

8. Support for Increased Grants to Meet Cities' Needs. (a) NHC favors increased Federal grant authorizations to meet the needs of cities, many of which are facing financial crises. These Federal grants should include all of the following:

(1) Necessary increases in supplemental untied grants under the Model Cities Program which give cities an incentive to develop programs for the improvement of entire neighborhoods.

(2) Necessary funding of the authorization for supplemental untied grants under the New Communities Program of Title IV of the Housing Act of 1968 where a balance has been achieved economically and racially; such grants give public agencies an incentive to provide necessary facilities for such New Communities.

(3) Federal grants to reimburse state and local taxing authorities for their tax losses when they grant tax abatement on housing projects which are federally assisted.

(4) Necessary increases in the authorizations of Federal grants: (i) for urban renewal; (ii) for water, sewer and neighborhood facilities; (iii) for open-space and urban beautification; and (iv) to meet other vital needs including those relating to health, education, training, welfare, mass transportation and other purposes.

(b) We recommend development of a three-year demonstration program of untied Federal supplemental grants-in-aid to be used by cities, counties and other local public agencies. This will help relieve their financial plight. This should be done in a manner which would provide incentives to them to promote national policies relating to housing and urban development.

(c) All supplemental untied grants—including those under this new proposed demonstration program and those under the Model Cities and New Communities programs—should be made available for use by cities, counties and other local public agencies for purposes determined by them, without Federal accountability or program supervision.

9. Acceptance and Accumulation of Applications for Programs: HUD has discouraged the submission of new applications in programs where a backlog of unsatisfied applications exists. NHC is strongly opposed to this discouragement of applications for HUD assistance. Even when there is an unsatisfied backlog of applications, HUD should continue to accept applications. There is no better way by which HUD can learn the needs and demands for programs which it administers, so that it can document and support requests for necessary Congressional authorizations and appropriations.

10. Construction Work and Employment in Ghetto Areas: Increased construction volume will require substantial increases in the work force. The large pool of untrained unemployed or under-employed within the ghetto is a large source of additional manpower. There should, therefore, be an effective program to accelerate the training of unskilled groups and to broaden their opportunities for employment in the construction industry. NHC recommends an adequate expansion of the training program of the Manpower and Training Administration of the Department of Labor, together with the full amounts needed as appropriations. NHC endorses the provisions in the 1968 Housing Act which direct the Secretary of HUD to require:

(a) That opportunities for training and employment arising in connection with the planning, construction, rehabilitation, and operation of housing be given to lower income persons residing in the area of the housing; and

(b) That to the greatest extent feasible contracts for work pursuant to the housing programs shall, where appropriate, be awarded to business concerns located in or owned in substantial part by persons residing in the area of the housing. If bonding is not available to such contractors or subcontractors, HUD should take necessary actions to enable them to obtain adequate bonds.

In the foregoing programs, we recommend that bids be invited from local contractors which have the participation of minority groups either in an ownership, executive management or direction capacity.

11. Support for International Programs for Housing: (a) NHC is aware of the critical housing problems elsewhere in the world, particularly in the developing countries. We urge continuation and expansion of our Government's foreign aid programs for housing in the developing countries, particularly cooperative housing to provide ownership by moderate income families as contemplated by the Foreign Assistance Act.

(b) Further, we urge our Government to support efforts: (i) to elevate the importance of housing in the economic development process by supporting efforts to establish, within the framework of the United Nations, a specialized international agency dedicated to solving the housing problems of the developing countries; (ii) to increase U.S. financial support to U.S. universities and other institutions for research and training programs to help solve these housing problems and supply the trained personnel so badly needed.

(c) NHC applauds the leadership provided by the United States in the adoption of a resolution by the United Nations giving emphasis to a pilot demonstration program for the improvement of squatter areas; also for support of the United Nations resolution concerned with the campaign to focus world attention on housing including consideration of an International Housing Year.

(d) NHC recommends enlargement of the investment guaranty program for housing by increasing the available guaranty authority and by extending the 100% guaranties to other appropriate areas besides Latin America. We recommend legislation providing for the encouragement of cooperative and other homeownership by low and moderate income families in the cooperating countries and for the utilization of financing assistance of the types which have been proven effective in our domestic programs.

(e) NHC supports the proposal for the creation of an International Housing Finance Corporation, which would be associated with the World Bank or the United Nations Development Program, to facilitate the mobilization of capital and the development of housing programs, particularly in the newly developing countries.

12. Appropriation Authorization: (a) NHC strongly recommends Congressional appropriations of adequate amounts for the administration of all HUD programs, including the additional funds which are required for additional staff to administer the many new programs contained in the 1968 Housing Act. These funds are urgently needed to meet the critical problems of our urban areas and the shortage of adequate housing for persons of low and moderate incomes. We further recommend all of the additional appropriations described elsewhere in these Resolutions.

(b) Advance appropriations to provide lead time for initiating and planning programs in all authorizations in appropriation bills providing contract authority or funds. The authorizations should cover the succeeding fiscal year in addition to the fiscal year involved in the appropriation act. Appropriation acts have recently adopted this practice for the urban renewal and mass transit programs. It is equally necessary that this be done in all other programs involving private enterprise as well as public agencies. This will give more lead time for the planning and initiation of programs. Such a practice in the housing program will help avoid the past difficulties experienced as a result of uncertainties and delays in providing funds and commitments. Through advance authorizations for two fiscal years, there will be an uninterrupted flow of funds and commitments at an early enough time to permit advance planning and work in the initiation of housing programs.

13. Workable Program: In order to remove impediments to construction of low and moderate income housing, NHC recommends repeal of the requirement for a workable program or local government approval of projects receiving Federal assistance. However, in localities without a workable program, the Secretary of HUD must first be satisfied that: (i) there is a need for the project; and (ii) its location will provide a satisfactory residential environment.

14. Preparation for Post-Viet Nam Period: In preparation for the termination of hostilities in Viet Nam, NHC recommends that we be ready to provide for the necessary expansion of peacetime development in order to assure steady employment for those formerly in jobs supporting our forces in Viet Nam. This should include the long-delayed construction of housing and urban development, together with the production of all materials and equipment required therein. It should also include plans for the use of abandoned defense housing or other installations. In the post Viet Nam period, we should fulfill the housing needs of those families for which the national goal has not become a reality. This would implement the highest priority and emphasis established for this program in the Housing Act of 1968.

15. Recommended Change in Budget Concepts Concerning Mortgage Purchases: (a) NHC does not believe in new concept of the Federal Budget which initially reflects expenditures for mortgage purchases in the same way as it reflects expenditures for grants, even though collections on mortgages are later credited as offsetting income. If several billion dollars of mortgages are purchased and retained by a government agency, all of this initially appears as an expenditure in the Budget during the fiscal year when the mortgages are purchased. This has an adverse effect on many public interest and social programs which are dependent upon the steady flow of mortgage financing at reasonable interest rates. The Budget should reflect only the actual cost to the Government of purchasing and holding these mortgages—this would be the differential in interest between the rate of the mortgages held by the Government and the rate on Government borrowings.

(b) If the present Budget concepts are retained which initially treat mortgage purchases as an expenditure in its entirety, NHC believes that there should be active encouragement of the sale to private investors of participations in mortgages held by GNMA or other Government agencies. Upon such sales, the funds realized can and should be offset against the expenditures for the purchase of the mortgages.

16. Availability of Land: NHC recommends such measures as are necessary to help assure the availability of enough land, at reasonable cost, to achieve our housing goals. These should include the establishment of appropriate reserves of land for future use to provide the housing, public facilities and recreational areas required to meet these goals.

17. Increases in Housing Costs: We deplore the inflationary rise in housing costs, particularly the spiraling increases in interest rates and prices of building materials such as lumber. It is urgent that action be taken to achieve a reasonable and stable level of interest rates and housing costs. When interest rates and housing costs increase, many people who need homes can no longer afford them—even though they could have afforded them previously when the interest rates and housing costs were at more reasonable levels. NHC strongly recommends that necessary measures be taken to stop these inflationary increases in interest rates and housing costs which adversely affect the consumer and jeopardize achievement of the housing goals established by Congress and the higher goals recommended in these Resolutions.

18. Insurance for Ghetto Areas: NHC recommends that when a home is purchased in a ghetto area and the mortgage is FHA-insured, necessary federal action should be taken to assure that the home owner obtains all hazard insurance required for his protection.

19. Private Investment in Lower Income Housing: NHC urges the participation of private investors in programs to provide housing for low and moderate income families. NHC recognizes that the tax savings which result from current rules of accelerated depreciation on improved real property are essential to insure the continued flow of such equity funds into investment in low and moderate income housing. NHC opposes any change in such rules which would reduce the already too-low return from investments in housing for families of low and moderate income.

20. Reduction of Monthly Mortgage Payments: With the recent increases in interest rates, people have been excluded from the housing market who need dwellings but can no longer afford them at the higher interest rates. Elsewhere in this report, NHC recommends measures to increase the flow of funds into the housing mortgage market and to make mortgage financing available at more reasonable interest rates. In addition, FHA should take administrative actions which would help to reduce the monthly debt service on mortgages by providing for level amortization payments instead of the higher amortization payments presently applicable to certain mortgage insurance programs—e.g. those under Sec. 220, 221(d) (4) & 207—which involve higher initial curtailments of principal. By reducing the debt service payments, the level amortization plan would reduce the monthly charges to the consumer and help offset the current high interest rates.

CHAPTER AA. NEED FOR EFFECTIVE INSTITUTIONS, ADMINISTRATION AND FEDERAL-LOCAL RELATIONS

1. In itself, the enactment of adequate legislation will not achieve the goals set forth in these Resolutions; nor will it meet the needs of the American people or the crises in our cities. Laws are not self-executing. It is necessary to assure the establishment of effective institutions, administration, and federal-local relations. NHC recommends that HUD take the following actions to assure the effective execution of laws relating to the programs under HUD's jurisdiction.

2. HUD should redefine its role to concentrate on major policies and on constructive leadership in executing federal laws and to grant greater local autonomy to local governments and agencies in undertaking and operating projects involving HUD aid. NHC believes this HUD role would constitute creative federalism. The expenditure of federal monies should be subject to broad federal guidelines. Through the years, there has been a continuing increase in the burden and detail of HUD controls over local operations in the conduct of HUD-aided programs. All HUD controls should be eliminated which are not required by federal law. We will never achieve the volume and expedition required in programs authorized by the Congress unless there is a decentralization of responsibility to the local agencies involved. The local agencies can properly be held to account for their responsibilities under programs. There is no reason to assume that there is any less integrity and competence in local officials than in federal officials.

3. HUD should accelerate processing, production and decision-making by federal and local officials and by participants in all HUD programs, including the establishment of time schedules for all actions required. There should be a time limit for submission of applications by local agencies and a time limit for HUD action in approving or rejecting applications. However, qualified applications should not be rejected because of technical or insubstantial reasons, lack of money or lack of a priority status according to a schedule established by HUD; likewise, applications should not be rejected in order to remove them from the pending work load.

4. After applications have been approved and allocations made, there shall be a time limit for contracting and execution. With respect to requirements for HUD approval after a contract or commitment is issued, there should be a recognition that HUD has a certain period within which to act; and, failing such action on matters requiring HUD's approval, the proposal to HUD shall thereby be accepted and considered approved.

5. HUD should act promptly in making allocations and commitments of all authorizations and funds made available by Congress. Such allocations and commitments should be based upon:

(a) The requests that are received within a designated time which meet the applicable statutory requirements; and

(b) The respective needs for the communities involved. There should be no impounding or holdback of funds. The money should be allocated and committed as quickly as possible. All monies should be made available based upon the qualified requests that are received within a prescribed time limit. The guideline should be the need for the program in the community involved.

6. HUD should simplify its regulations and conditions attached to HUD aid and eliminate the detailed controls over project development and operations. Such controls are overly burdensome, costly, and time-consuming. They discourage initiative and innovation. They are inconsistent with the achievement of the goals recommended in this report.

7. HUD should eliminate conflicting policies and requirements among its different units, as applied to comparable programs. For example, the methods of determining incomes under the public housing program are different from those under the rent supplement, interest supplement and below-market-interest-rate programs.

8. HUD should consult with representative groups of local public agencies and private participants in each of its programs to identify problems which impede their progress and to develop workable solutions. For this purpose HUD should establish:

(a) A federal-local committee on public housing and urban renewal; such a committee functioned effectively for years until it was discontinued.

(b) A federal-city committee on the model cities program.

(c) Like committees of representatives from the participants in each program; thus, there should be a restoration of the committee of representatives of cooperatives participating in FHA programs.

Each such committee would meet periodically to give HUD first-hand experience concerning the operations of the HUD-aided program involved. Such consultation should result in quick and realistic action in eliminating obstacles and solving problems. Otherwise, such obstacles and problems are long neglected, often because they are not known or because HUD does not get proposals for solutions from those directly engaged in the program.

9. (a) In Section 5, the 1968 Housing Act directs the Secretary of HUD to make a report to the Banking and Currency Committees early in calendar years 1969 and 1970 identifying specific areas of program administration and management which require improvement. The report will describe actions taken and proposed for the purpose of making such improvements, and recommended such legislation as may be necessary to accomplish such improvements.

(b) Many of our recommendations in these Resolutions cover areas of administration on which HUD is required to report to the Committees, pursuant to the following provision in the 1968 Housing Act:

"Each such report shall include, but not be limited to, the following areas of program administration and management: uniformity and standardization in program requirements, simplification of program procedures, ways and means of expediting consideration of proposed projects and applications for assistance, the provision of more useful and specific assistance to communities, organizations, and individuals seeking to utilize the Department's programs, and ways and means of combining or otherwise adapting the Department's programs to increase their usefulness in meeting the individual needs of applicants."

(c) We urge HUD to take the actions recommended in these Resolutions relating to areas of program administration and management which require improvement and to report thereon to the Banking and Currency Committees.

HIGH INTEREST RATES HIT THE LOW-INCOME GROUPS HARDEST

(Mr. PATMAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD, and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, when prime interest rates are raised as they were last week, it is not the big businesses that suffer, but it is the low-income and moderate-income families and the small business concerns that take it on the nose.

On the financial pages, we hear much of the "prime rate" which goes only to the triple A big corporations with perfect credit ratings. We hear very little about the rates that are paid by the average citizen and by the small businessman. Invariably these rates are substantially above the quoted prime rate and I regret that the Nation's news media says so little about the real rates which hit the great mass of the population.

For this reason, I was happy to see a column by Harold B. Dorsey in the Washington Post of Monday, March 24, outlining this very fact—that high interest rates hit the little man in this economy the hardest.

Mr. Speaker, I place in the RECORD a copy of this column, entitled "Impact of High Interest Rates Falls on Low-Income Group."

IMPACT OF HIGH INTEREST RATES FALLS ON LOW-INCOME GROUP

(By Harold B. Dorsey)

Last week's increase in the interest rate which commercial banks charge for loans of prime quality is more significant than suggested by the relatively strong behavior of the stock market.

The 7½ per cent rate is available only to commercial customers of the highest credit rating. Others must pay more. And since the borrower is normally permitted to draw out only about 80 per cent of his money—while the remaining 20 per cent is kept by the bank as a "compensating balance"—actual interest cost for the top quality borrowers is about 9½ per cent on the money which can be used.

The main impact of soaring interest rates falls on consumers, small businessmen, municipalities and home builders. Larger corporations are more likely than the others to obtain the available credit, because they have firm credit lines with the banks and a ready access to money in the capital markets. And they can charge off the interest cost as a tax-deductible expense at the 52.8 per cent marginal corporate income tax rate.

But, insofar as these corporations can attract the available credit supply that might otherwise go to consumers, home owners and small businesses, they ultimately hurt themselves. The other groups—and particularly the consumer whose spending accounts for 62 per cent of Gross National Product—cannot maintain their rate of buying if they are unable to get credit. As a result, the corporations find that they cannot meet their sales targets; inventories pile up; and they are then forced to cut back production and, ultimately, trim their capital spending programs.

None of these economic consequences are yet visible, although they are likely to become more apparent within the next two or three months. Meanwhile the catch-up payments for individual income taxes due April 15 may also have a negative effect on consumer spending; particularly for durable goods.

And with tax payments rising sharply, and with Federal spending recently—and belatedly—showing signs of flattening out, the budget swing from deficit to surplus in the period immediately ahead should have a slow-down effect on the economy, especially since the Federal Reserve is simultaneously restraining the growth of money supply.

Despite these signals of things to come, a great many people are not "buying" the disinflation idea. In this space last week, supporting evidence for this observation was presented in capital spending intentions, rising employment and relatively good retail sales.

I encountered an additional illustration last week at a meeting with about two dozen managers of very substantial investment capital. The majority view was the effect that continuing inflation was inevitable. The worst that could be seen was a brief period of modest hesitation and then we would be off on another inflationary boom.

It was argued that minority groups would continue to press for more government spending in the welfare area—especially so if there was even a modest increase in the unemployment rate. It was contended that policy-makers in Washington would not have the courage to continue with restraining pressures long enough to break the deeply imbedded inflation psychosis. As a result, it was the consensus of this group that their investment policies must continue to favor common stocks and that commitments in bonds should be avoided.

So what's wrong with inflation? In the first place, the low income groups are hurt the worst by inflation. Next in line for suffering are the millions of savers and pensioners who lose—via inflation—many billions of dollars of purchasing power of their incomes, savings and insurance. The Nation as a whole will suffer because continuing inflation will probably lead to another international currency crisis, which would have an adverse effect on the economies of the industrial world.

Nevertheless, there is plenty of evidence—up to this point at least—that many business executives, consumers and investment managers believe that inflation has gone on too long to stop. Even the highest interest rates in modern history have failed to reduce the pressures in that direction. So far!

GREEK INDEPENDENCE DAY

(Mr. McCORMACK (at the request of Mr. ALBERT) was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, the celebration of independence days has its particular significance; it rekindles and revives the spirit which once united a people for the glorious fight that culminated in their freedom. And the celebration of Greek Independence Day is of great significance for a number of reasons. In the first place, the ancient Greeks were the first citizens of the West and the free world. They showed the world that they preferred to fight for the attainment and preservation of their freedom rather than willingly submit to their conquering oppressors. In the second place, when eventually they were forced to submit to alien tyrants, they proudly maintained their spiritual independence throughout the many centuries. And finally, in 1821 when they saw a chance of regaining their freedom and national independence, they staged a revolt which in the course of many years of bloody warfare, led to the birth of modern Greece.

From the day the stouthearted Archbishop Germanos, of Patras, raised the standard of the cross over his monastic establishment in 1821 to this present day, the American people have followed the course of events in Greece with keen interest and heartfelt sympathy. There never was, and let me hope that there may never be, any doubt of our wholehearted and united sympathy for the Greek people whenever they have been pitted against foreign oppressors and totalitarian tyrants. We have always held them in exceptionally high esteem. Long before the beginning of their war of independence we were fully conscious of our debt to Greece, the real nursery of many human values associated with our civilization. When we attained our independence the Greek people were suffering under alien oppressors in their homeland. And when the news of their revolt against the Turks reached us, it was natural for us to hope and pray for Greek success. Many years later when they succeeded in attaining their goal we on this side of the Atlantic were as much overjoyed by their success as were those closer to them in Europe.

Nor have we wavered in our sympathy for the Greeks since then. During and after the last two World Wars we have done our very best to save Greece from the ravages of war and from the clutches of Communist totalitarianism, and have striven consistently to help them maintain their hard-won independence. In doing this we have gained a loyal ally in our struggle against Communist tyranny.

During the last war the Greeks fought bravely and brilliantly in their homeland and on their islands on the side of democracies, and suffered much at the hands of the Nazi oppressors. Toward the end of that war, when their liberation was in sight, the country was plagued by Communist partisans and Soviet agents, who came very close to dragging it into the Stalin totalitarian camp. But the timely and resolute British aid, backed up and then effectively supplanted by our own assistance under the Truman doctrine, saved the Greeks from Communist totalitarianism and safeguarded their national independence. It is no exaggeration to state that, soon after the last war, when Greek independence was in peril, our material aid to Greece and our moral support were of decisive importance. Even though it cost us more than a billion dollars to do this, I am indeed glad to say that we were in position to render such aid for a great cause, and in return gain a valuable ally, a true bastion against communism in the Balkans.

The Greek people have shown their appreciation of our help in many ways, particularly by their participation in the Korean war, and by their very firm and unwavering stand against totalitarian tyrants. The courage, the tenacity and the willingness to sacrifice their all for the attainment of their independence, are Greek national characteristics and these characteristics serve them well in defending their national independence.

I am indeed glad to join all loyal and patriotic Greek-Americans on the observance of Greek Independence Day.

SERMON DELIVERED BY REV. FATHER JOHN F. DONOGHUE AT ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH ON MARCH 17

(Mr. McCORMACK (at the request of Mr. ALBERT) was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, the following sermon, most appropriate and informative, which I am pleased to include in my remarks, was delivered by Rev. Father John F. Donoghue, secretary to His Eminence, Cardinal O'Boyle and vice chancellor of the archdiocese of Washington, at a concelebrated mass in St. Patrick's Church, Washington, D.C., on Ireland's patronal feast, March 17. The principal celebrant of the mass was His Eminence, Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle, archbishop of Washington.

SERMON DELIVERED BY REV. FATHER JOHN F. DONOGHUE AT ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH, MARCH 17

Every nation has endeavored to preserve and perpetuate the memory of its heroes, so that future generations might be inspired by their feats and accomplishments and encouraged by their example to emulate them. Monuments of stone and marble give evidence of a peoples' love for their heroes. Today, Irishmen, wherever they may be, celebrate the feastday of their greatest hero, a man who has been elevated by the Church and numbered among the ranks of the saints—a man who bears the proud title, "Apostle of Ireland." Neither monuments of stone nor marble can fittingly attest to the devotion and love of the Irish people for St. Patrick. Continents are his monuments because those who enjoy his faith, who have never swerved from his allegiance, are found everywhere. His memory, however, is preserved in a special way in the hearts of everyone of Irish ancestry.

It might be well for us to review briefly the highlights of Patrick's life, because it is from his life that Irishmen in every generation have drawn the inspiration and courage to resist the temptations that could destroy their faith.

Although the date and place of his birth are not known with certainty, historians generally believe he was a Briton, a citizen of a Roman province who was born about the year 385. He was a descendant of those Roman conquerors of the world who made the Roman Empire—an empire which ruled over all the civilized peoples of their time. He lived at a time when a large portion of the then known world had become Christian. He was likewise a contemporary of such men as St. Augustine, St. Jerome and St. Ambrose.

Very little is recorded of the early life of the saint, except that when he was sixteen years of age he was carried off by Irish raiders and taken to Ireland as a slave. During this period of captivity, which was a blessing in disguise, he underwent a religious conversion and, as he himself describes it, he spent his days and nights in prayer while tending the herds of his master in the forests and mountains of Ulster. He likewise acquired a knowledge of the language and customs of his captors, and came to admire deeply and to love the character of the Irish people. Separate from his family and friends he learned to put his trust in God and to learn from Him the lessons of wisdom and love, which he would one day preach to the Irish people.

After six years of captivity, Patrick managed to escape. From the time he obtained his freedom until his return to Ireland many years later, he devoted himself assiduously to his studies at the Seminary of Tours in preparation for his life's work. When at last he was ordained to the priesthood, he travelled to Rome as Apostles in all ages have done, as St. Paul went to Peter, as St. Augustine did before he set out for England, as St. Boniface and St. Francis Xavier did to receive the blessing and commission of Christ's Vicar. Pope Celestine, impressed by Patrick's zeal and desire for the missions, consecrated him a bishop and commissioned him to carry the gospel of Christ to the pagan people of Ireland.

When St. Patrick returned to Ireland he found there a very remarkable people, a people it is true who were sunk in superstition, and with a fixed pagan religion, with an established priesthood proud of its traditions and jealous of the power it exercised. These people were not only isolated from the rest of the continent, but despite the fact that they were pagans worshipping false gods they were, nevertheless, preserved from the coarseness and orgies often associated with paganism. They believed in a supreme being on whom they depended for their life, for their success in this world, and for the happiness that they craved in the world to come.

When St. Patrick began to preach the doctrine of christianity he found the soil very receptive. In other countries the apostles were received with open opposition, and in many cases—in fact it was almost always the rule—the apostle of a country paid the penalty with his life. In the conversion of Ireland, however, it is a very singular fact that not one drop of blood was shed. It was a peaceful conquest, but not only so, it was accomplished in the lifetime of the apostle himself—so that St. Patrick lived to see the length and breadth of the island devoted to christianity and devoted to it with an enthusiasm that was unparalleled. It looked, in fact, at one time as if the whole island was going to become one great monastery.

His Confession, which was written towards the end of his life, is singularly lacking in information about the details of his later career. He speaks in general terms of "the success of his preaching, of the many thousands he converted of the sons of the Scots and the daughters of the chieftains" who became monks and virgins of Christ, of the persecutions he endured and his continual travels "amid many perils to remote places where there was no one beyond and where no one else had ever penetrated to baptize or ordain clergy or to confirm the people." It is sufficient to say that success following him wherever he went. Kings as well as peasants embraced christianity as a result of his preaching. After thirty-three years as an apostle, he died, leaving Ireland almost entirely converted.

The work which St. Patrick began continued to flourish after his death. The seed of the gospel planted by St. Patrick bore abundant fruit, not only on the island, but throughout Europe. Not long after their conversion, converts who became priests went out as missionaries, spread the doctrine of Christianity and diffused the light of scholarship as well, all over the west of Europe. They realized, as must we, that one of the features of religious zeal is not merely personal sanctification, but it is the desire to share the blessings of religion with our less fortunate neighbors. Religion is a light, and it shines not merely to illuminate the faith of him who walks in it, but it is to give an example to those who are not blessed with the same knowledge, the same devotion. It is for this reason that Irish missionaries went to the ends of the earth, carrying with them the message that they received from St. Patrick, and that wherever they went they taught those same remarkable lessons that had made converts of the Irish nation. And there was supreme need of their work. The Romans were in utter decadence. The barbarous invaders of Roman territory from the north had come down to take first the vices and only afterwards the virtues of the civilization they threatened to destroy. This declivilizing effect was felt not only in Italy, but practically everywhere in Roman territory. But Ireland stood as the missionary of civilization, of learning, and of sanctity, lifting men up from the mire of barbarism, opposing the spirit of the world of war and bringing men together by the ties of human brotherhood, learning and religion.

When persecution came to Ireland, as it has many times, it was a persecution of their religion; it was not merely a war of conquest, nor a war of retribution; it was an endeavor to uproot the faith that had been planted in the hearts of their fathers and that had grown and developed in the hearts of their children. Exile was one of the penalties that they paid for their faith. That exile sent them not merely into England and the continent, but it sent them across the stormy Atlantic; it sent them to distant Australia; and it gave to this country an untold number of heroic men and devoted women, who brought with them, not merely the faith that they had received, but brought with them the sturdy devotion, the tireless energy and industry, the genial humor, that has done so much to make the Irish people honored and loved. Macaulay, the English Protestant historian has fittingly remarked: "We have used the sword for centuries against the Catholic Irish. We have tried famine, we have tried extermination, we have had recourse to all the severity of the law. What have we done? Have we succeeded? We have neither been able to exterminate nor enfeeble them. I confess my incapacity to solve the problem. If I could find myself beneath the dome of St. Peter's and read with the faith of a Catholic, the inscription around it, 'Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it', then I could solve the problem of Ireland's story."

That same indomitable spirit which moved St. Patrick, St. Columkille, St. Columba and an army of missionaries after them to leave the shores of Ireland and to spend themselves for christianity in countries far from home, is still alive in Irishmen wherever they may have settled. When Irish emigrants, compelled by the condition of their own land to seek a better life, left their country, Irish priests followed them. Today, there are literally millions of Irish in all parts of the world united by a common bond of faith and belief, who have preserved in tact the tenets of christianity which fifteen hundred years ago St. Patrick preached.

Perhaps the greatest glory possessed by the Irish race and a glory which any people can desire, is the solid permanent uncompromising christian character. A character of singular interest in the knowledge and desire of the supernatural, which made the conversion of Ireland to christianity so bloodless, so immediate and so universal; a character of a love of truth and deep religious instinct, and a character of christian zeal with which Ireland was inflamed to make known the truths she possessed. A character of exalted christian charity by which she manifested the truths of God even in the midst of her suffering.

As Christ prayed for St. Peter, so St. Patrick prayed for Ireland. It is said that when about to die, St. Patrick went to the top of a neighboring mountain and asked for fidelity to the faith for the Irish people. It is nearly fifteen hundred years since St. Patrick passed from earth to heaven and Ireland's faith has not failed yet. Fifteen centuries of fidelity to Christ and His Church; fifteen hundred years of strong spiritual life, a life of vigorous faith and love, which neither prosperity nor persecution could interrupt. From the moment that Ireland had seen the sun of faith rise upon her, she had vowed herself to it with an ardor and tender devotion which became her very life.

This same determination and strong faith, this same filial love and devotion to the Holy See which nothing can shake, the same reverence and respect for bishops and priests are the strong characteristics of the faith of the Irish today.

We believe that the heritage of truth that Christ gave to His Apostles by the Sea of Galilee with the direction to teach all nations, and that Patrick received in direct line from Peter's successor, is ours today, and that mandate was not given to a class, but to all, and each of us is a treasure bearer of that faith and each of us should be a disseminator of its knowledge.

Those of us of Irish ancestry possess the heritage of the faith and the mission of St. Patrick. We continue his missionary effort and preach the religion of Christ by the example of our lives. It was the virtue of the Irish people that kept their faith strong. And may the memory of their heroic virtues, the memory of their long fidelities, of their honor and suffering sustain us and may St. Patrick pray for us as he did for his converts, that our own faith may not fall us, and we by our lives may continue his missionary activity.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

BYELORUSSIAN INDEPENDENCE DAY

HON. WILLIAM T. MURPHY

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 25, 1969

Mr. MURPHY of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, Byelorussians are one of the little-known Slavic peoples whose homeland in the northwest of Russia and east of Poland has been part of the Russian empire for centuries. These sturdy people, never numerous or strong enough to cope with their more powerful foes, had been overwhelmed by the Russians. For many centuries they endured all sorts of hardships under the czarist regime, and when that regime was no more, in 1918 they attained their goal of freedom and independence.

On March 25 of that year, Byelorussian leaders proclaimed their national independence and founded the Byelorussian Republic. They formed their own democratic government, began rebuilding their war-torn country and were doing their best to reconstruct the shattered fabric of their social, economic, and political life. Unhappily, however, they were faced from the beginning by numerous insurmountable difficulties, and the defenses of the country were totally inadequate. Soon the country became an easy prey for the Red Army of Communist Russia. Late in 1918, the Byelorussian people were robbed of their richly deserved, but short-lived, freedom.

Since then, the Byelorussian people have been suffering under Communist totalitarian tyranny. But the idea of freedom and independence has never deserted them, and they still cling to the hope that someday they will once again—and this time permanently—attain their national goal. On the 51st anniversary of Byelorussian Independence Day we all pray that their just cause will prevail against the forces of tyranny, and that they will attain that freedom.

Correspondence recognizing Byelorussian Independence Day follows:

BYELORUSSIAN-AMERICAN ASSOCIATION, INC.,

Jamaica, N.Y., February 18, 1969.

HON. W. T. MURPHY,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN MURPHY: On March 25, 1918, the Byelorussian people proclaimed their independence. On that date the Byelorussian Democratic Republic was born. In spite of all the sacrifices, the young state was unable to preserve its independence against the onslaught of overwhelming Bolshevik forces.

The Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic which was created in its place is nothing but an administrative arm of the Moscow government and does not represent the will of the Byelorussian people.

This is why March 25th is being celebrated by Byelorussians throughout the Free World as a symbol of their national aspirations. Americans of Byelorussian descent will also celebrate the twenty-fifth of March this year, which marks the fifty-first anniversary of the struggle of Byelorussian people for freedom and independence.

We deeply appreciate your moral support of the nations enslaved by Russian Communism, among them the Byelorussian nation. This is why we ask you, as a United States Congressman, to make this year a statement from the House floor in defense of the national and political rights of the Byelorussian people.

Speeches in the halls of Congress give strength and hope to the Byelorussian people behind the Iron Curtain and encourage them in their spiritual resistance against Communist slavery.

Respectfully yours,

VLAD KURYLLO,
National President.

UNITED BYELORUSSIAN-AMERICAN COMMEMORATIVE COMMITTEE,
Kew Gardens, N.Y., March 7, 1969.

HON. WILLIAM T. MURPHY,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR SIR: The day of March 25, 1969 will mark the anniversary of great importance for American citizens of Byelorussian origin. On this day Byelorussians everywhere in the countries of the free world will celebrate the 51st anniversary of the proclamation of independence of the Byelorussian Democratic Republic.

In Byelorussia, however, this national celebration is not permitted. This year, instead, marks the 50th anniversary of the existence of the Byelorussian SSR.

The Byelorussian SSR is not a sovereign state. Soviet Russia turned Byelorussia into its own colony by military conquest. At the time of the First World War, the Tsarist Russian Empire was disintegrating. All the non-Russian nations liberated and restored themselves as free, independent and sovereign countries. The Byelorussian constituent body—the First All-Byelorussian Congress— assembled on December 17, 1917 in Miensk, the capital of Byelorussia. It was composed of 1,872 freely elected delegates from all areas
