PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. LARRY PRESSLER

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, June 12, 1978

● Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. Speaker, I was unable to be present for the June 5 session of the House. Therefore, I was not able to vote on H.R. 12250 to designate the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness. I was a cosponsor of Mr. FRASER's BWCA legislation, and a supporter of the Burton-Vento compromise measure. Had I been present to vote on this issue June 5, I would have cast my vote as follows:

Rollcall 408, yea.

Rollcall 409, aye (Vento amendment).

Rollcall 410, yea (final passage).●

DR. HARRY LEROY BARROWS

HON. IKE SKELTON

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, June 12, 1978

● Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, it is my sad duty to report the loss of a respected educator in western Missouri, who recently passed away. Dr. Harold Leroy Barrows, dean of the School of Education at Central Missouri State University, recently died in his home community of Warrensburg.

Dr. Barrows was a longtime and well-respected educator in the State of Missouri. Prior to being dean of Education at Central Missouri State University, he was a member of the staff there. Earlier, he served as superintendent of schools for the Center School district in Kansas City. He is survived by his wife, two sons, and a daughter.

Dr. Barrows was highly regarded by his community. He was active in civic work, the Boy Scouts, and his church. All who knew him will miss him greatly.●

IN MEMORY OF OTTO HENNING

HON. IKE SKELTON

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, June 12, 1978

● Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, along the path of life, certain friends make the journey a bit brighter. Such a person was Otto Henning of Concordia, Mo., who recently passed away.

Otto Henning served as a Lafayette County circuit clerk for many years. He was active in community affairs, and he was a devoted church member and family man. Most of all, Otto Henning will be remembered for his warm personality and devotion to his friends. I felt that I was a recipient of his special friendship, as I had the opportunity to work closely with him while I served as prosecuting attorney in the Lafayette County Courthouse and later as an attorney in Lexington. All who knew him will remember him warmly and with a feeling of gratitude for having known such a singularly kind and noble man.●

COACH BILL HAMANN

HON. IKE SKELTON

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, June 12, 1978

● Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, as we go through life, there are certain special people who wield influence by their advice, encouragement, and friendship. Coach William Hamann of Lexington, Mo., who recently retired as a high school instructor, is one such person.

Coach Bill, as he is affectionately known in the community of Lexington, Mo., served the young people of Missouri for 38 years. His skill as an athletic coach is well remembered. As a matter of fact, he gave me encouragement in my early days of running track. His devotion to the subject of history is well known, and any of his students will benefit from his inspiration and teachings. I know all of us wish coach Bill Hamann all the best on his retirement from the Lexington school system.●

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Tuesday, June 13, 1978

The House met at 12 o'clock noon and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. WRIGHT).

DESIGNATION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

THE SPEAKER'S ROOMS,
U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D.C., June 13, 1978.

I hereby designate the Honorable JIM WRIGHT to act as Speaker pro tempore for today.

THOMAS P. O'NEILL, Jr.,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER

Rev. Timothy W. Dols, St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Arlington, Va., offered the following prayer:

Heavenly Father, we pray this day that You would be with the people of this Nation, and especially with those to whom the responsibility of government has been committed. Grant a vision of Your purpose in the midst of confusion and decisionmaking; grant hope when the way seems unclear; grant imagination when the choices seem limited; and grant strength in the lives of Your servants that all they think, plan, say, and do may be to the benefit of society, to the enhancement of human life, and to Your everlasting glory.

May all Your people be enlivened and enlightened by Your presence and come to know the joy of conscious integrity.

We remember the leaders of this Nation and the leaders in the nations of this world. Be with them, O Lord, and grant to all Your people that inner peace that passes understanding—that peace that comes from knowing You and responding honestly to Your love.

All our prayers and hopes are offered in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Sparrow, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate agrees to the amendment of the House to a bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 2553. An act to authorize appropriations for the fiscal year 1979 for certain maritime programs of the Department of Commerce, and for other purposes.

REV. TIMOTHY W. DOLS

(Mr. JOHN T. MYERS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. JOHN T. MYERS. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure today to welcome my own clergyman, the Reverend Timothy W. Dols, of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Arlington, Va., as our guest chaplain.

The Reverend Mr. Dols was born in Baltimore, Md., received his education in the public schools of Baltimore, went on to graduate with a B.A. degree in fine arts from Washington & Lee University, and then received his degree in divinity from the Virginia Theological Seminary. Reverend Mr. Dols has served in a number of different capacities, both as a counselor in his community as well as a counselor in his church, and has been active in diocese work in Virginia and Maryland. He and his wife, Anne, have two sons, Christopher and Mathew, and they are with us today.

Mr. Speaker, I am most pleased to welcome Rev. Timothy W. Dols today.

PERMISSION FOR COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS TO FILE PRIVILEGED REPORT ON AGRICULTURE APPROPRIATIONS BILL, FISCAL YEAR 1979

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Appropriations may have until midnight tonight to file a privileged report on the bill making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture, rural development, and related agencies programs for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1979, and for other purposes.

Mr. ANDREWS of North Dakota reserved all points of order on the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 11877, PEACE CORPS ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1978

Mr. ZABLOCKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 11877) to authorize appropriations for the Peace Corps for fiscal year 1979, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and request a conference with the Senate thereon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin? The Chair hears none, and, without objection, appoints the following conferees: Messrs. ZABLOCKI, FASCELL, HARRINGTON, BONKER, STUDDS, PEASE, NIX, BROOMFIELD, WINN, and GILMAN.

NATION WOULD SAY NO TO BELLA ABZUG AS CODIRECTOR OF NATIONAL COMMITTEE ON WOMEN

(Mr. HUBBARD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HUBBARD. Mr. Speaker, I saw and heard through the news media late last week that President Carter has accused Congress of refusing to cooperate with his battle against inflation, suggesting that Federal lawmakers take heed of the California taxpayer revolt and its repercussions elsewhere.

Indeed, the voters of California, Ohio, and New Jersey last Tuesday sent Congress and the White House a loud and clear message. The people of this country want less taxes, less Government spending, and less Government regulations.

I am hoping that the President believes that the people in all 50 States would send Washington the same message.

It is shocking to read in this morning's edition of the Washington Post that the Federal taxpayers of this country will now have to help fund with their tax dollars a new National Advisory Committee for Women which, according to White House sources with whom I have talked this morning, will be federally funded.

The Associated Press, the Washington Post, the Washington Star, and White House sources indicate that President Carter is expected to name Bella Abzug codirector of this federally funded advisory committee for women.

I can assure President Carter that 99 percent of the taxpayers in the Commonwealth of Kentucky are opposed to any new Federal agencies or committees, and 99.9 percent of Kentuckians are opposed to their Federal tax dollars being spent by Bella Abzug.

The voters in New York State said no to Bella Abzug in 1976 when she ran for the U.S. Senate. Twice since that time the voters of New York City have said no to her campaigns for mayor and the U.S. House of Representatives.

It is difficult to believe that President Carter interprets the taxpayer revolt in this country to indicate that what we need now in Washington is Bella Abzug giving advice.

CAPITOL PAGE SCHOOL CLASS OF 1978

(Mr. MOAKLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for

1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I wish to announce to the House that the Capitol Page School class of 1978 held its commencement services last night.

I wish to pay tribute to these young men and women for their many academic accomplishments and to thank them—and I know I speak for all of my colleagues—for their loyal, dedicated, and effective service to the House of Representatives.

I hope, as they return to their own communities, that they are aware of the affection and esteem in which we hold them and I certainly wish them the best as they prepare to continue their education.

As chairman of the Democratic Personnel Committee, I would like to place in the RECORD a listing of the awards won by the pages we have appointed. But I also wish to note the outstanding accomplishments of the minority pages eloquently outlined by my minority counterpart, the gentleman from California (Mr. ROUSSELOT), in a 1-minute statement on June 8.

Mr. Speaker, I congratulate all the graduating pages and would like to call particular attention to the numerous awards won by the majority pages:

EARTHQUAKE HAZARDS

(Mr. BROWN of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, the tragic earthquake in Japan this week reminds us all of the major hazards posed by earthquakes. Much can be done to reduce the hazards of earthquakes, and a major Federal program to do this became law just last year. Unfortunately, the Appropriations Committee has cut $9 million from the earthquake hazards reduction program, which threatens to undermine our earthquake protection program, which has the potential of saving thousands of lives and billions of dollars. What happened in Japan will happen here, perhaps with far more serious consequences. I believe this program is simply too important to cut. I urge my colleagues to support my amendment to restore these funds. A more detailed explanation on this amendment will appear as a Special Order later today.

REINTRODUCTION OF HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION 916, PROPOSING CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT TO REQUIRE A BALANCED FEDERAL BUDGET

(Mr. COLEMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. Speaker, it is now a full week since the voters of California captured the attention of the Nation by their revolt against high taxes, and, today, along with 85 of my colleagues, I am reintroducing House Joint Resolution 916, a proposal for a constitutional amendment to require a balanced Federal budget.

By our actions today we are telling the people of this Nation that we intend to do our part to see that the Federal Government stops promoting inflation. Our principal national economic enemy is indeed inflation. Inflation has corrupted the American dream—the dream of owning a home, providing our children the best education, and a comfortable retirement after a life of personal responsibility and work. Today, owning a home is not possible for millions of Americans, educational costs have escaped the realm of possibility for low- or middle-income Americans, and most senior citizens' expectation of a financially secure old age has disappeared. It is little wonder the taxpayers of the Nation now view Washington as the fountain of inflation.

Democrats and Republicans are among my cosponsors, and we represent all sections of the Nation, as well as the full range of political philosophies.

But we all have one thing in common. We are concerned that steps be taken immediately to reduce the Federal Government's role in promoting inflation. Huge Federal deficits during times of economic growth, coupled with expansion of the money supply, have resulted in Government-franchised inflation that causes the taxpayers' unrest, manifested in California.

The reintroduction of House Joint Resolution 916 today brings to 157 the number of Members of the House who have sponsored various resolutions to require a balanced Federal budget. The House leadership must now recognize the national support this concept has and schedule hearings as soon as possible. It is essential that this Congress adopt this legislation to allow the States the opportunity to ratify a constitutional amendment to require a balanced Federal budget.

TURKEY SHOULD PROMPTLY CONCLUDE PRISONER EXCHANGE TREATY IF CONGRESS IS EXPECTED TO LIFT ARMS EMBARGO

(Mr. SAWYER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, in the coming days, the Congress will be considering the Carter administration's request to repeal the arms embargo against Turkey and resume military aid. At a time when the plea of human rights has become the cornerstone of U.S. foreign policy, this is the first of many statements I intend to make on behalf of the human rights of two young American girls, JoAnn McDaniel and Katherine Zenz, and other Americans serving long nonparoleable prison sentences in deplorable Turkish jails. This Congress has passed implementing legislation to permit exchange of prisoners with foreign countries, yet, the Turkish Government has been insensitive to negotiating such a treaty with the United States.

The Government of Turkey should promptly conclude work on the prisoner exchange treaty if they expect Congress to lift the arms embargo. I urge the support of my colleagues in this critical human rights matter.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION WAIVING CERTAIN POINTS OF ORDER AGAINST H.R. 12927, MILITARY CONSTRUCTION APPROPRIATION ACT, 1979

Mr. SISK, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 95-1287) on the resolution (H. Res. 1229) waiving certain points of order against the bill (H.R. 12927) making appropriations for military construction for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1979, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks in today's debate on section 209 of H.R. 12929, the Labor-HEW appropriation bill for fiscal year 1979.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

DEPARTMENTS OF LABOR AND HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE APPROPRIATION BILL, 1979

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H.R. 12929) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare, and related agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1979, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FLOOD).

The question was taken.

Mr. HAGEDORN. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 383, nays 5, not voting 46, as follows:

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H.R. 12929, with Mr. BOLLING in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Committee of the Whole rose on Thursday, June 8, 1978, the Clerk had read through line 17 on page 39, and pending was the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES).

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) in support of his amendment.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I was one of the House conferees who last year spent some 6 months working on language that came to be known as the Hyde amendment language in the Labor-HEW bill. As most of the Members will recall after 6 months of debate on this particular issue in the month of December the House and the Senate finally agreed upon what came to be known as the compromise language which was then a part of that Labor-HEW bill. I voted for the compromise language, and I did so reluctantly; but in voting for that language I did so with the realization that we had spent some 6 months of the taxpayers' time debating and arguing over the language which would finally appear in the bill. If the compromise language voted upon by the House and the Senate, which was made a part of that bill, had been included in this bill, I would not today be offering a motion to strike.

I offer a motion to strike because the section of the bill that now is under debate is only a part of the compromise language which was agreed upon after this House had worked its will. That language in the bill now reads:

"None of the funds provided for in this Act shall be used to perform abortions except where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term," which is, of course, the old Hyde amendment language.

There are several reasons why we ought to strike this language from the bill. First, there have been no hearings and no testimony relating to this section of the bill. We have not had any discussion in either the subcommittee or the full committee with reference to the language which now appears in this bill. It would seem to me that if language is to appear in the bill it should at least be the compromise language which the House agreed upon and which was made a part of the last Labor-HEW bill. There is absolutely no authority for the committee having taken the first sentence of the compromise language and making it section 209 of this bill and thereby excluding all of the other language that the House included in last year's bill after having worked its will.

Therefore, there is no authority, no rhyme, no reason for the kind of restrictive language that now appears in this bill and which I am now asking this House to strike.

You will recall that last year we agreed upon the compromise language after having 11 votes in the House, 6 in the Senate and 6 months of debate, both in the House and in the Senate.

Let me now make reference to the compromise language, which does not appear in this bill. The compromise language provided that:

Medical procedures necessary for the victims of rape or incest when such rape or incest has been reported promptly to a law enforcement agency or public health service.

It provided also that in those instances where severe or long-lasting physical health damage to the mother would result if the pregnancy were carried to term.

It further provided that payments were not prohibited for drugs or devices to prevent implantation of the fertilized ovum or for medical procedures for termination of an ectopic pregnancy.

The basic problem and the basic reason that this section ought to be stricken is well pointed up, it seems to me, in an editorial that appeared in the Washington Post a few days ago, entitled "The Abortion Question Again."

That editorial said this:

There is another fundamental inequity here. Congress is not only imposing its own judgment of the worthiness or acceptability of abortions in various circumstances. It is also imposing that judgment on only one class of citizens: those who happen to be poor.

The editorial concluded by saying, and I quote again from that editorial:

We think such federal discrimination is wrong and that Congress should refrain from legislating these curbs and allow individuals to make the decisions freely for themselves.

Now, Mr. Chairman, the Supreme Court of this Nation has made it clear that women have a constitutional right to make a choice of whether to have an abortion or not to have one.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. STOKES was allowed to proceed for an additional 3 minutes.)

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, the Supreme Court of this Nation has made it clear that women have a constitutional right to make a choice of whether to have an abortion or not to have one.

Last year on the floor of this House I said that as legislators we have a responsibility to legislate and not to play God. It seems to me that the choice that the Supreme Court of the United States speaks of is one that cannot be made a choice between a woman and the United States Congress. What Congress should be doing it seems to me, is expanding upon last year's language to cover other distressing conditions under which women are forced to make a choice, conditions such as where the fetus is deformed or bears an incurable genetic disease or where women suffer health problems, such as diabetes, heart disease or hypertension.

How can we in good conscience explain this more restrictive language in this bill?

There is not a State in the United States, Mr. Chairman, where abortions are illegal. If we in the Congress are serious about doing something about abortions, which in America are legal, then what we ought to do is make abortions illegal. Let us penalize all the 1.2 million women who will have abortions this year. Let us not pick out the 250,000 poor women in America and say to them, "You are different, you are poor, you are a lower class American women. You cannot have an abortion, not because it is illegal or unconstitutional, but because you are poor."

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues in this House to strike this restrictive, illegal, unconstitutional, unconscionable class legislation, which in my opinion is repugnant to everything this country stands for.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STOKES. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Chairman, I wish to commend the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES), and I associate myself with his remarks. I think the gentleman has made an admirable statement.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman.

Mr. BAUMAN. Mr. Chairman, would the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) yield for a question?

Mr. STOKES. I would be delighted to yield to the distinguished gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. BAUMAN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman.

I know the gentleman feels very strongly on this matter, and he presented his case very ably. The gentleman, if I am correct in my hearing, stated that the language in the bill is unconstitutional.

I am sure the gentleman knows the Supreme Court addressed itself to this precise language and ruled it was constitutional. I believe the gentleman will admit that.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I am not sure the Court addressed itself to this particular language in that precise manner.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the pending amendment conclude in 30 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Ms. HOLTZMAN. Mr. Chairman, I object.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the pending amendment conclude in 1 hour.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Members standing at the time of the unanimous-consent agreement will each be recognized for 3 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FLOOD).

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Our subcommittee has included in the bill the language which prohibits the use of funds for abortion except where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term.

This is identical to the language which was enacted into law for fiscal year 1977 and which was recommended by the subcommittee and the full committee for fiscal year 1978. My view is that this language is OK, and that it should have been included in the fiscal year 1978 bill in order to see what actual effect it would have had on the number of abortions paid for through Medicaid. The Members will recall that, though the language was adopted for fiscal year 1977, the courts did not permit it to go into effect until 2 months before the end of the fiscal year. This language was endorsed several times by the House during last year's debate over this issue.

After last year's experience, it seems to me that it ought to be clear to anyone that the House of Representatives is firm in its resolve to place restrictions on the use of public funds to pay for abortions.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER).

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) to strike the language in the legislation.

I think it is imperative that the committee do nothing more and the Congress do nothing more than they did last year in the so-called compromise language, which I think is clearly unacceptable to the women of this country. This imposition of a legislative mandate on how these women will treat their bodies and how these women will make decisions and choices with regard to their futures and their bodies is clearly unacceptable.

I would hope that, at a very minimum, the committee would stand on the language that we had last year. I strongly support the efforts and hope that the committee will support the efforts of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) to strike the more prohibitive language that currently exists in the bill as it is before us.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. DORNAN).

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Chairman, yesterday we began radio broadcasting the proceedings of this House nationwide which of course means worldwide so I begin by paraphrasing a well-used attention grabber, "The whole world is listening." I rise in opposition to this motion of the gentleman from Ohio. The word "unwanted" will probably not be as used during the proceedings today as it was last year. I think the message is getting through to the American people that it is extreme anti-God arrogance to refer to any human life as "unwanted"—either in the womb or out of the womb, young or elderly, crippled or strong.

Hearings in the Committee on the Judiciary last year, through one of the subcommittees established conclusively that there is a $10,000 going rate for underground adoption of white children. These high-priced negotiations, of course, take place while the much-wanted children are still in their mother's womb. It is impossible, therefore, to describe any white child as unwanted. So, we come down to the very ugly situation of using that word "unwanted" only in application to unborn children of color still in their mother's wombs.

This year I make the point again, vociferously, that there is no such thing as an unwanted child in any womb anywhere. God wants every child in every far corner of our delicate world whether the parents are rich or poor. "Unwanted" is a totally judgmental and subjective word. I think, since we are now heard on nationwide radio from this Chamber, that I will again at this point bring to the attention of all American citizens listening that in this august Chamber of the House of Representatives there is much religious symbolism to guide us in deliberation. The immortal words "In God We Trust" are boldly set in marble directly over the Speaker's chair and above our beautiful national flag.

Above us on the east side of our Chamber over the door is the wise visage of Pope Innocent III. Over the west doorway are the profiles of St. Louis and Pope Gregory IX. I have only to raise my eyes slightly and over the north portal to this august Chamber. I see the noble countenance of the greatest of lawmakers Moses. Only his face out of the 23 giants in the history of law portrayed on our walls looks directly at us, as if to say "thou shalt not kill." This rich symbolism reminds us that our beloved country was founded on Judeo-Christian standards of respect for life . . . all life, unborn or imperfect. No matter how much we want to flee from our roots and how badly we want to turn this Nation into a purely secular and materialistic society we cannot escape the fact that our American dream was not begun by pagan Phoenicians that burned their young in living sacrifice out of fear of poverty and famine. Just the opposite is true. We were founded as a Nation with a sacred, burning respect for life and liberty . . . for all . . . including the unborn. The rich always have opportunities to corrupt themselves beyond what is available to poorer citizens. The current chic Hollywood drug is cocaine, at $100 a pop not available to your average citizen except by crime—so what. The rich can afford rhinoplasty more easily, facelifts, and other plastic surgery. There are lots of things good and evil, that rich folks can afford that are not available to poor people, "spoiling their children" prominent among the tragic alternatives available to parents of means.

Rich or poor, no mother or mother-in-waiting has any right to take an innocent life in her womb or microseconds after birth. And how much worse for a mother to terminate the God-given life in her womb based on the plea that her child is "unwanted" because she, the baby's mother, is poor. And poor by what standard? Asia's? Africa's? Canada's? Or the Standard of Beverly Hills? Every God-ordained creature on the face of this Earth, including, every innocent unborn child is wanted.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from New Jersey, (Mrs. FENWICK).

Mrs. FENWICK. Mr. Chairman, I think this very difficult question divides in two. One question is: Should Federal funds or tax money, public money, be used for a procedure of which a considerable number of people disapprove?

I think that we have to look at this in the light of the Quakers, who strongly disapprove of war, and have moral and religious convictions against it, and whose taxes are continually used, year after year, for the defense of this country, for arms and for warmaking mechanisms. I do not think any group can choose the particular purpose for which taxes will or will not be used.

Then we come to the second question, and we are talking here about a legal procedure. It is a legal procedure. We are not talking about an illegal procedure.

Mr. Chairman, if one could eliminate by a stroke of the pen here or anywhere else this whole tragic subject of abortion, it would be different; but there is no way of eliminating it. It does not make any difference what one does. We will either have legal clinics or we will have abortions in motels and back-street offices, if we can call them that. At any rates, in illegal places.

Mr. Chairman, abortion has now been made legal in Italy for the first time but one gynecologist in Naples told the press that he had been making a fortune by performing illegal abortions the whole time.

In Chile, if one traveled there as I did in 1939, 35 percent of all the hospital beds were occupied by women dying or recovering from self-induced abortions.

If one is too poor even to afford a back-door clinic or an abortionist in a motel, it is a self-induced abortion that one can die from.

Mr. Chairman, there is no way of eliminating abortions. Over all the centuries they have never been eliminated.

The question is, What are we going to do about it? Is it fair to have a legal procedure in the United States of America, open to those with money, and not open to the poor? I do not think it is.

We speak of wanted and unwanted. After all, we are not talking about a market item. We are not talking about something that the public may or may not want. We are talking about a woman, and it is her decision. I do not think any of those who take this stand have ever spoken to a desperate mother of four whose husband has suddenly been stricken with an illness. Is a fifth child wanted by that particular woman?

Maybe there is out in this world somewhere a place where that child could be adopted, but that is not what we are talking about.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from New Jersey (Mrs. FENWICK) has expired.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Maryland (Ms. MIKULSKI).

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. Chairman, I would like to rise and associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES), and to say that I rise in behalf of this amendment based really on my having worked for 20 years as a social worker in the Baltimore community, with the Baltimore community's poor.

When I am talking about poor people, I am talking about a very desperate family living on less than $3,000 a year, primarily concentrated in rotten, filthy slums, where the density of population per foot can be equated with that of many poor, backward countries. I am talking about families living within the shadow of the great Johns Hopkins Hospital.

As a social worker, Mr. Chairman, I had to face a family in which a 14-year-old retarded child had been raped by her 16-year-old deaf-mute brother. That is the kind of case I am talking about. I could cite horror story after horror story.

The question becomes whether the Congress of the United States, as it talks about a right to life, will actually commit itself and give the poor of this country a right to a future. I think that it is time that we really expand our horizons in this debate and talk about a right to a future, about someone who has been poor and who has been victimized, and whose only alternative is a back-alley, coathanger abortion. I think it is time that we decide whether we are really going to talk about a right to a future and whether we are going to offer the proper medical procedures so that people can then go on and try to find some better life.

Mr. Chairman, I have no other remarks in further elaboration, but I ask the Members, as they pursue their conscience, to think about how we can really provide this right to a future.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. BAUMAN).

Mr. BAUMAN. Mr. Chairman, throughout the prolonged debate on this issue of whether or not Federal taxpayers' money should be spent to finance abortions, on no occasion has the House of Representatives ever adopted a proposition similar to the one proposed today by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES), that we have no restrictions whatever on Federal funding of abortions.

That, of course, is the only thing we will vote upon at the conclusion of this debate. Therefore, I would hope that we would overwhelmingly reject the gentleman's motion to strike out the committee language.

The committee language, after all, has been endorsed by the House on a number of occasions and was the law of the land, having been approved by the U.S. Supreme Court as constitutional.

A majority of this House repeatedly supported the language that Mr. STOKES' amendment would strike out. If, of course, we were imprudently to adopt this amendment, we would return to the situation that existed prior to the adoption of the original Hyde amendment in 1976. Then Federal taxpayers' money was being spent to perform 300,000 abortions annually at a cost of $50 million.

That only goes to the statistics. It certainly does not go to the fundamental principle that impels those of us who support the right to life to oppose an amendment such as this; that is, that these children have a right to live as much, indeed higher than, the rights claimed for those who want unlimited abortions. From January 1969, through August 1977, the Federal Government spent approximately $256 million for 1,340,000 medicated abortions. That is an appalling figure when one considers the slaughter this entails.

Those of us supporting the right to life and who oppose the motion to strike this language are not in any way imposing upon the poor, the minorities, any sort of extra restrictions except to say that their children have a right to human dignity, a right to life, as much as any others. Certainly it violates the consciences of millions of Americans to see this money expended for the elimination of unborn children.

For all those reasons I strongly urge that this most extreme position, that we adopt no limitations on Federal funding of abortions, be rejected overwhelmingly when the rollcall occurs.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BAUMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, would the gentleman agree with me that the inclusion of this language in the bill does not stop one single abortion in this country, but that it does stop abortions which are legal and which can be had under decent conditions and safe conditions, for poor women? Would the gentleman agree with that?

Mr. BAUMAN. No, I would not agree to that position, because I think without the availability of Federal funds there would definitely be a decrease in abortions. That is what we seek.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Tennessee (Mrs. LLOYD).

Mrs. LLOYD of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the motion and support the committee language restricting the availability of Federal funds for abortions. It has always been a fundamental premise of this Nation that human life is sacred, worthy of both respect and protection. It is wholly inconsistent that the Government of this Nation should seek to place itself in the position of encouraging the destruction of life through the availability of abortions.

Proponents of abortion have made reference to the freedom of choice issue. The Supreme Court has guaranteed the availability of the abortion option by overturning laws restricting this procedure. However, in that same ruling it was the Court's position that the Government remain neutral. If Federal funds are available for abortions, then the Federal Government cannot be neutral on the issue. Furthermore, those citizens who are morally and ethically opposed to abortion have the right to insist that their tax dollars not be used in the furtherance of terminating the lives of unborn children. It is discrimination of the worst kind against any taxpayer who opposes abortion to force that individual to finance an act toward which he or she has a deep personal, moral aversion.

It is my personal belief that abortion, except in those cases where the life of the mother would be endangered is wrong. I would much prefer to see the Federal Government make a stronger commitment to family planning and counseling services.

Those who do not share my views on the issue of abortion have the opportunity to contribute privately to assure access to abortions to those who cannot afford them, without forcing those who object to abortion into paying for it. Congress has no business using its power to tax to collect funds for this purpose.

I would not deny that the problem of the unwanted child is one which is very serious and very real. Yet the violent act of abortion is not an answer to this problem but rather an admission that we have given up trying to find a humane solution. We are talking about a creation of God.

I urge my colleagues to support the committee's decision in this matter and to avoid the participation of the Government in the financing of abortion programs.

We have more individual wealth and more freedoms than any country known in the history of mankind, and I think that it is intolerable that we would think of using that freedom for destruction of the creation of God.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. OAKAR).

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Chairman, our attitude toward life permeates whatever we do. It appears to me that we are on a collision course in terms of our action as Members of the Congress as they manifest our respect for life, especially as it relates to the poor. There are no funds for agencies who solely want to enable a poor woman to have counseling and assistance to carry the fetus to term. As a result, and I have seen this come in from our federally defined poverty areas myself, poor women usually are dealt with only in terms of having an abortion. It is truly discrimination in reverse.

However, those of us who wish to maintain the Hyde language must have a commitment to aid these poor children whose lives we save in terms of their human needs. We must support the Mitchell amendment which directs attention away from the military and toward the human needs. We must be interested in preserving life, not manufacturing the neutron bomb. We must be more concerned with aiding foreign countries not with bullets but with food, clothing, and shelter.

We must be concerned with the plight of our elderly.

We must love and respect life from the dawn of life (the fetus) to the evening of life (the elderly).

That is why I support the Hyde language.

It should reflect on all of our actions as Members of Congress.

I sincerely regret that I must reject the amendment put forth by my good friend and colleague, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES), whose positions on most issues I usually support and respect.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR).

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The issue we face in this debate is the right of defenseless human life to exist.

Abortion is not the solution to a problem, it is the failure of society to look for a solution.

The unborn life we seek to protect with the language of section 209 in the HEW appropriation bill, is, to be sure, inconvenient life, burdensome life. It came at the wrong time, maybe; or possibly in the wrong form—disabled, handicapped, retarded, the wrong sex—discovered through the scientific marvel of amniocentesis—or whatever other reasoned excuse. The point is, this is defenseless life; the most defenseless in our midst, life to which we owe the highest order of care and legal protection.

The issue is not whether we will provide funding for a service to one economic class of citizens and not to another—the Government does not fund abortions for the well to do so it has no obligation to provide them for the poor.

The issue is not the rights of the poor to a service, but, rather, the right of the unborn to live.

The language of the committee bill protects that right. It does two things: It protects the life of the unborn; it protects the life of the mother, if endangered by the pregnancy.

There are many other services we do provide for the poor—pre- and post-natal care, pregnancy counseling, child services, health care services, to mention a few. There are many more that we should provide—alternatives to abortion that are not now adequately provided, either through authorization or appropriation.

There can be no room in the heart of a compassionate government for funding of programs to terminate innocent life.

I urge the defeat of this amendment, which is no less than an open assault on human life.

I do not think we need extended debate—our minds have either been made up by ourselves or for us by our constituents.

I urge your vote for the voiceless and voteless of our society—the unborn.

Let us defeat this amendment and send a clear message to the other body, that we intend to stand firm for human life.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. HOLTZMAN).

Ms. HOLTZMAN. Mr. Chairman, I am concerned about the debate that we have heard here because it is really irrelevant. Whether anybody here agrees or disagrees with the right to abortion, the fact is that it exists and is constitutionally guaranteed in this country. We have the right to disagree with the Supreme Court decision or disagree with the Constitution. That is a matter of personal preference. It seems to me the debate here is irrelevant to the sole issue before us which is whether or not women who cannot afford to have an abortion, who cannot afford to exercise their constitutional rights will be denied the opportunity to a safe abortion performed under medical safeguards.

I think that it is heartless, cruel and, in a way, sanctimonious for us to say that we will prevent young women and older women who cannot afford to have an abortion the right to decent health care with respect to their abortion.

I also think that it is inexcusable for this committee to come to the floor of the House with this restriction on the right of abortion without having presented to the Members of Congress the health effects of restrictions presently in the law. How many women who have been denied the right to a safe, legal abortion have had back-alley or self-induced abortions and, as a result, have died or have suffered infections, sterility, physical infirmities and the like? Why are we not presented with that information?

I think the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) ought to be supported.

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. HOLTZMAN. I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from New York (Mr. WEISS).

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Chairman, I want to express my full support of the position taken by the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. HOLTZMAN). And I wish to thank her for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I support the motion to strike the Hyde amendment.

The bill we are considering today allocates funding for a variety of health and education programs designed to improve the quality of life for all Americans. However, as reported out of committee, it contains the original Hyde amendment—a total restriction on the use of Medicaid money for abortion services, except when the life of the mother is endangered.

This is a clearly discriminatory measure which threatens the access of poor women to abortion services. Enactment of this restrictive measure will not end abortion in this country, for the Supreme Court has stated that it is a woman's constitutional right to end a pregnancy in its early stages. What it will do is withhold from a certain segment of our population their constitutional right to equal protection of the law, and establish a dual system of access to needed medical care.

Mr. Chairman, I am deeply troubled by the consequences of this amendment. Approximately 20 years ago, one of my responsibilities as an assistant district attorney in New York was the investigation and prosecution of illegal abortionists. For the most part they were without training; the few who were trained had lost their license or capacity to practice medicine. I saw the results of their work; the maiming and killing of women who did not have the freedom to choose. I shudder to think of a law which will again send some women to those back alley abortionists that were in abundance before the Supreme Court decision.

In July of 1977, HEW Secretary Callano requested his staff to study and report to him on "Alternatives to Abortion." The following is the conclusion reached by Connie Downey, chairperson of the HEW task group:

Abortion is an option, uniquely, which is exercised between conception and live birth. As such, the literal alternatives to it are suicide, motherhood, and, some would add, madness. Consequently, there is some confusion, discomfort, and cynicism greeting efforts to "find" or "emphasize" or "identify" alternatives to abortion.

Abortion is hardly a satisfactory or desirable means of birth control. Therefore, the question we should be asking is not whether Federal funds should be allowed for the purpose of abortions, but ultimately what we can be doing to prevent the problems caused by an unwanted pregnancy. Obviously, we should be working toward that goal. Enacting the Hyde amendment, however, will not accomplish this. What it will do is increase the risks of dangerous self-induced or non-medical abortions for women as a result of systematically denying their access to legal and safe medical services.

The issue is not whether abortions will continue to be performed, for that decision has been made. The crucially important consideration is the manner in which they will be performed. Congress has an obligation to assure equality of health care to all our citizens, and thus I urge my colleagues to join me in opposing the Hyde amendment.

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. HOLTZMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. MITCHELL).

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding me this time, and I wish to closely associate myself with her remarks. I do not think it is right for the Right to Life Committee in this House to use poor women as pawns, and I think it is very cruel to do so.

Mr. Chairman, I rise not only in support of the motion to strike the language contained in Section 209 of H.R. 12929, but more importantly, I rise on behalf of the millions of poor women in this country who are being used by the Right to Life Committee and this House as pawns in a very cruel game which attempts to establish the moral codes for every American.

The Supreme Court in its 1973 Roe against Wade decision recognized a woman's right to decide whether or not to terminate a pregnancy. They articulated the guidelines and parameters by which an intelligent and legal determination could be made. That adjudication is the law of the land. However, section 209 of H.R. 12929 would effectively overrule that decision by denying poor and, oftentimes, destitute women the opportunity of receiving a therapeutically safe abortion, performed by a qualified physician. I submit to you, that it is a sad commentary on this body, when the majority of the Members vote to subject economically disadvantaged women to medically unsafe abortions just because they are too poor to afford qualified and professional treatment services.

I think it is repugnant, that the Members of the House are willing to force the very agency mandated to insure the highest quality of health care and services delivery to every American, to deny adequate health care and services to women who can least afford it.

We took an oath to uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States; and, I would submit that it is a breach of that oath for this body to chill or frustrate the constitutional right of economically disadvantaged women to choose a therapeutically safe abortion.

I appeal to you not to place a price tag on the enjoyment of a constitutional right in this country by allowing section 209 of H.R. 12929 to pass this House. However, if you insist on this course of action, then I give you fair warning that you will set a dangerous precedent, one that will surely return to haunt us all.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. VOLKMER).

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee. I do not plan to take my full 3 allotted minutes. This issue has been extensively debated last year and I believe that most Members have their minds made up on this amendment and possibly the second amendment. But, Mr. Chairman, I oppose this amendment just as much as I oppose the next amendment, if it is to be made. Mr. Chairman, I do so because I feel strongly for life. I also feel strongly for the position of the House which was taken last year on the initial vote and that position was even more strongly worded than the language that is in the committee bill. However, I believe that the language existing in the committee bill does properly voice the opinion of the majority Members of this House and should be sustained.

Mr. RUDD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOLKMER. I yield to the gentleman from Arizona.

Mr. RUDD. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. VOLKMER, for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I support the Hyde amendment prohibiting the use of Federal taxpayer dollars to perform abortions.

I oppose the motion to strike this section from the bill.

I also oppose the proposed amendment to this section, which replaces the Hyde language with the compromise conference committee language of last year.

In my view, and in the view of millions of Americans, no case can be made for the use of taxpayers' money to perform abortions.

The history of medicaid abortions in the city of Washington, D.C., alone is enough to make any person recoil in horror at the atrocities that have occurred.

Thousands of young women—most of them from circumstances of poverty and deprivation—have become the victims of abortion mills supported by family planning counselors who have shirked their responsibility to counsel moral values to teenagers and unmarried women.

Abortion mills thrive in the Nation's Capital, and in cities throughout the Nation, supported by taxpayer dollars.

Young girls have been allowed to die in these places, and have been permanently incapacitated. There are hundreds of such cases.

I do not believe that Congress can avoid the moral responsibility for these outrages unless we do everything in our power to stop the use of Federal dollars to perform abortions.

The Hyde language, which is part of this bill, gives us the opportunity to take this unequivocal stand, which the majority of the American people expect us to take.

I cannot support the proposed amendment to this language, which will open the door to all kinds of exceptions and abuses in the use of tax dollars to perform abortions.

The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE) has adequately shown how the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare has issued regulations under last year's language which for all practical purposes have allowed unlimited abortions, even though the clear intent of Congress was to prohibit them except in highly exceptional cases.

I hope that Congress will close the door to this kind of bureaucratic arrogance, which has underscored the impossibility of any abortion prohibition other than that which is currently in the bill—the Hyde language.

I urge the defeat of all efforts to strike or change this language.

We must retain section 209—the Hyde language—as it is currently written, and clearly require no Federal taxpayer dollars for abortion, except in the very rare case where the mother will lose her life if she gives birth to a child.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOLKMER. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland (Ms. MIKULSKI).

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. Chairman, I understand that the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. VOLKMER) voted against the ERA extension in the subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary. I do not see how the gentleman reconciles his passion for life as he has so carefully articulated and yet denies the opportunity for women to be fully included in the Constitution of the United States. I would like an explanation of that.

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Chairman, I do not believe that one issue has any connection with the other.

Ms. MIKULSKI. The gentleman is saying that equal rights and this issue are not connected? He wants to protect alleged female life in the woman but does not want to include women in the Constitution of the United States. I do not understand his thinking: Would he explain it to me?

Mr. VOLKMER. No, I do not believe that abortion and equal rights are connected. I would like to say to the gentleman one further thing.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. VOLKMER. No, I do not yield, permit me to finish.

I would like to answer the question and that is that the gentlewoman from Maryland (Ms. MIKULSKI) knows my statement before that committee was that on that amendment for an extension that that amendment extended it for 7 years and I said that I would not vote for a full 7 years.

The gentlewoman, if she looks back at the history of the ERA, will find that I have always supported the equal rights amendment and do so today and hope that the State of Illinois will ratify it.

I do not oppose the equal rights amendment, I have never opposed the equal rights amendment and will never do so.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I thank the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Colorado (Mrs. SCHROEDER).

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the motion to strike. One of the reasons I support the amendment is I care so much about human life. I think that the people who say only the antiabortionists care about human life are wrong.

Let us talk about human life, and let us talk about the biggest epidemic going on in this country right now—teenage pregnancy. Do the Members know that three-fourths of the teenagers who are now mothers have no health insurance, that 7 out of 10 of them get absolutely no prenatal care in the first trimester? This has serious implications for the development of the human brain. Many people have said, "Look, even teenagers babies, those babies are not unwanted; those babies will be adopted." That is probably true, but let me tell the Members that 9 out of 10 teenagers keep their babies because they are human, and have grown up in this country, a country that cares an awful lot about life. When a teenager spends 9 months of her life giving birth to a baby she is not anxious to just be a baby factory and then go back to doing things as usual. She wants to be the baby's mother in 9 out of 10 cases.

Let us talk about what happens to that young girl. This is a country that gets so worried about the measles epidemics in the elementary schools, so let us talk about the pregnancy epidemic among our teenagers. Its impact dwarfs the measles epidemic. What happens if a young girl, 16, has an illegitimate child? Ninety percent of her life script is immediately written for her. The major cause of dropping out of school today is teenage pregnancy. Even if she has someone to take care of the child for her, if she wants to keep the child, she is unable in most instances to find a permanent steady job because she does not have the employment skills. Taking care of a child is a very, very difficult task. It is shocking when over 25 percent of the mothers in this country are becoming mothers before they are becoming legal adults. We should think about that. We should think about the quality of life the mothers and the children are going to have. I certainly do not want laws forcing them to give up their babies. I think that is the wrong way to go, and yet what kind of parents are they going to be? What kind of future are they going to have?

We can all sit around here and make moral judgments that they should not have gotten themselves in that situation, but yet we as a society allow commercials to go on television telling young girls they must be popular; they must wear perfume; they must be sexy; they must do this; they must do that. But—aha—if they go too far, they will pay for it.

About one-tenth of the American girls in this country who are teenagers become pregnant in 1 year. We had better be worried, because the long-range future implications of that are serious. They are high-risk mothers. Their health and the baby's health are jeopardized by their age and social-economic status. Teenagers are a group that rely on Medicaid abortions. Should we not as a society allow this as a choice?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY).

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, in his next to last broadcast before he retired from the daily news grind, Eric Sevareid observed that one of the requirements for American citizens in the modern age is "to retain the courage of one's doubts as well as one's convictions in this world of dangerously passionate certainties."

These words describe my feelings on this terribly controversial issue.

I honestly do not know what the perfect set of legislative words would be that would put this question to rest in such a way that the many groups with conflicting views on it would be able to accept it.

This issue for me is not so clear as it is for some others. I envy the certainty with which some groups say, "There should be no limitation on Government funding for abortions. A woman has a right to control her own body and the Government should never get involved."

But I cannot agree with that for two reasons:

One—the idea of abortions for convenience appalls me. Abortions undeniably represent the end of opportunity for life and that constitutes a massive failure on the part of our society.

Two—I also deeply believe that society as a whole will not tolerate unlimited funding of abortions of convenience for a wide variety of complex reasons.

I also envy the ease with which some groups on the other side of the question say "the answer is simple. There should never, under any circumstances, be any funding for abortions. No exceptions are acceptable."

But I know society will not tolerate that judgment either. I know that the question is complicated by factors such as rape, questions relating to the health and life of the mother, questions such as the increase in illegal backroom abortions that such a legislative solution would cause.

So I am simply not sure what the exact language should be, but on balance I believe the best solution is to reject the amendment offered by Mr. STOKES, which would wipe out all limitations on abortion, reject the committee version, which would make no exceptions for rape, or serious health questions such as kidney diseases—an approach which we know the Senate will not accept—and accept the language of the Wright amendment.

That language prohibits Government payment of abortion except where the life of the mother would be in danger, in cases of rape incest, and except in instances where severe and long lasting physical health damage would occur and when that danger is attested to by two physicians.

That language is unacceptable to the American Civil Liberties Union and others who favor no limits on abortion and it is unacceptable to some in the right to life movement who favor no exceptions whatsoever to abortion.

It does have three things which recommend it.

One—It is a reasonable effort to balance the interests of the fetus and the interest of the mother.

Two—It has proven to be the one position that could gain a majority of support in both the House and the Senate, and Three—It seems to be reasonably well accepted by a majority of Americans.

So I urge you to vote for the Wright amendment, but no matter how you vote, let me urge you to do one other thing when you cast your vote today. Do what the American public has a right to expect of you. Very simply—do what you think is right, whether you agree with me or not.

Do not allow the legislative process to be abused by lobby groups on any side of the issue whose feelings are so strong on this question that they allow themselves to practice the theory that the end justifies the means.

Do not allow them to succeed in dealing with you by substituting political threat for rational and fair persuasion.

Mr. Chairman, yesterday I was shown a "bulletin" sent to my district by the National Committee for a Human Life Amendment Inc.

That bulletin said, among other things, that I have "consistently voted to support the unrestricted use of Federal tax dollars for abortion on demand for medicaid recipients."

Mr. Chairman, that is a lie and Members of this House know it is a lie. The record shows that last year in committee and on the floor I voted 22 times for limitations of one kind or another on Federal funding for abortions, perhaps not the exact limitations favored by Mr. Gallagher, the lobbyist for that organization, but limitations, nonetheless.

The record further shows that I voted against and spoke against the Stokes motion to remove all limitations.

So I called Mr. Gallagher and asked him how he could say what he had said about my record, given what the record shows. He made it quite clear to me that his allegations were based upon my refusal to support the Hyde amendment which provided no exceptions whatsoever, not for rape, not for incest, not for kidney disease, no exceptions at all.

In other words, he is using two or three out of the votes which occurred last year and is ignoring the rest.

Mr. Chairman, as every Member of this House knows, a vote against a specific amendment is just that, a vote against a wording of a specific amendment.

But, Mr. Gallagher, in his zeal, is apparently willing to twist the truth because of our disagreement on this question.

And Mr. Chairman, Mr. Gallagher is not alone. I have had nasty experiences with several groups on the other side of the question and they, too, have on one occasion or another chosen to be rather selective in their explanation of votes around here on this question.

I remember the "newsletter" put out by one womens rights group which began "we have a problem and his name is Dave Obey" and went on to suggest I was an enemy of women because I would not support their position of no limitation at all in Federal funding for abortion.

I raise that episode with Mr. Gallagher to illustrate the vicious distortion of fact being used by some lobby groups on this issue.

I am especially appalled when those distortions are engaged in by people who parade as representatives of religion and morality.

These groups have every right to lobby Congress. They have every right to publicly disagree with Congress and its individual Members.

They do not have the right to unfairly distort and lie about the nature of that disagreement and about what happens on this floor. Any person serving in this House knows that this kind of misinformation and outright lying is being peddled with increasing regularity not just on the abortion issue but on many others—labor law reform, consumer protection, Panama Canal, and many others.

So all I ask of each of you here today is that you vote your conscience and your judgment. Take this House back from those who would abuse the legislative process by distortion, those who try to convince you, not through persuasion but by intimidation. That is the only way this House can function again.

Vote for the one amendment that has been able to win majority support in both the Senate and the House—the Wright amendment.

You know in the end we will pass it or something close to it. Let us do it now rather than later and spare the public the charade.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE).

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, we are told there are only two things certain in life, death and taxes, and that is what we are really talking about here, death and taxes. We are talking about whether or not we shall supply tax dollars to kill prenatal life, and make no mistake about it, by definition and by intention every abortion kills someone that is living.

Now, we are told there are two main arguments against the prolife position. One of them is that the Supreme Court has legalized abortion and, therefore, we should accept that.

Second, there is no consensus on when human life begins and, hence, to impose one's theological beliefs on a constitutionally secular society is breaching the wall of separation between church and state and, hence, is wrong and un-American.

As to the Supreme Court, even a superficial study of their history ought to show how capable of error they are. The other day they legitimized ransacking newspaper offices for evidence in a crime. You could solve the energy crisis with all the flurry of responses around this chamber trying to correct that error of the U.S. Supreme Court.

So when the Supreme Court is with you, they are majestic and unassailable, and when they are against you, they are outrageous and neanderthal; but their decisions never foreclose an issue. If you do not believe that, ask Dred Scott.

As to the lack of consensus when life begins, whose word would you accept? Will you accept Planned Parenthood? Planned Parenthood is on the cutting edge of abortion; who told us in 1965, not so long ago, they had a brochure called, "Plan Your Child," and in it they said, "Is it an abortion? Definitely not. An abortion kills the life of a baby after it has begun."

Now, I asked them and I ask you, what medical, clinical, biological discoveries have occurred since 1965 to reverse this, to dehumanize, to depersonalize the unborn? You can take all the time you want, because you will not come up with any.

Do you know that a blade of grass has more protection than a human being under our laws, since the Supreme Court decision? "Do not walk on the grass, do not trespass," but you can exterminate your unborn child with perfect legality.

A bird, a crow, an eagle, a snail darter, has more legal protection than an unborn being, an unborn child. It is intolerable that this can exist in a society that calls itself caring and humane.

The art of euphemism reaches a high level in the area of abortion: Just as a sewer worker can be called an aquatic engineer, pro-abortionists may call themselves "pro-choice." That is some choice.

The "choice" they offer is this: Do we kill the unborn with a curette, or do we kill the unborn by a suction machine, or do we put a saline solution in and scald the unborn to death?

Mr. Chairman, that is the choice they offer—"Keep abortion safe and legal?" Safe for whom? Certainly not the unborn child, because in abortion the morbidity rate for the unborn is total.

Let us no longer be accessories in the carnage of abortion. Defeat this amendment resoundingly.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MICHEL).

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment to strike section 209, the language in the bill.

So long as Members of this body have been denied the opportunity to debate the abortion issue by the legislative committee, we have had to cope with the issue by way of a limitation on an appropriation bill. It is a bad way to legislate.

The rule under which we are considering the legislation provided for only two amendments, the one offered and pending by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) to strike the language completely, and another amendment that will be offered, I suspect, by the majority leader that would retain the current language that exists in law. I oppose the pending amendment, but do want to include with my remarks the long history of writing and rewriting the language we had to deal with last year.

Nor are payments prohibited for drugs or devices to prevent implantation of the fertilized ovum, or for medical procedures necessary for the termination of an ectopic pregnancy. The Secretary shall promptly issue regulations and establish procedures to ensure that the provisions of this section are rigorously enforced." Adopted 181-167-1, 14.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES).

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I have sat here and carefully listened to the debate on this amendment. I have been struck by the fact that throughout the entire debate I find those who are in favor of the inclusion of this language in the bill have circuitously avoided any discussion concerning the main point as to why we have this amendment now before the House, and that is that there is no basis for the inclusion of this language in the bill.

Our committee, Mr. Chairman, conducted hearings on this bill for 3 months. During that 3-month period, we had over 60 days of hearings on this bill, and I say to the Members that not one single Member in this Chamber who is in favor of the inclusion of this language ever appeared before that committee to ask us to include that language in the bill. That is the reason for my motion before us, the fact that there is no basis for us to legislate on an appropriation bill.

If Members felt this language ought to be included, why did they not appear before our committee and substantiate the reasons why it ought to be included in this bill? Not a single Member in this Chamber now in favor of the inclusion of this language took the time to appear before our committee and testify in favor of the language they feel is so vitally necessary.

Mr. Chairman, it disturbs me when I hear Members of the House come down in the well and talk about birds and crows and eagles. We are talking about women. We are not talking about animals. We are talking about American women and, particularly, poor women, and whether or not those poor women ought to have the same thing that every other woman in America who can afford it can have, and that is the fact that every rich and affluent woman in America can have an abortion under safe, legal, constitutional provisions. What some Members are saying here today is that if you are poor, if you are one who is dependent upon medicaid, you are not entitled to that which every other American woman is entitled to.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STOKES. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. HYDE. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I wish the gentleman could stand with me sometimes, as I wish I could stand with the gentleman sometimes, and hear people say to me, "Hyde, there are too many of those people. Why do you want to save them? Why do you want to put that burden on the taxpayers? Do you know what it costs to raise a poor kid in a poor neighborhood?"

I suggest to the gentleman that the way to get rid of poverty is not to eliminate poor people.

Mr. STOKES. I will say to the gentleman that under the law, under the American law, we know that poor women are entitled to certain types of medical aid under medicaid, and what the gentleman is doing is excepting out this particular provision and saying, "Because you are poor, you cannot have an abortion but you can be treated on medicaid if you have an illegal, back-alley abortion. Then it is okay, we will treat you for it." I am saying that that is wrong.

● Mr. YOUNG of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by Congressman Stokes. I rise because I feel that section 209 can save hundreds of thousands of unborn children. I feel that our Government should not sanction the destruction of life, much less fund this destruction.

Many people might object to the fact that the present language is more restrictive than the language approved last December. I hope everyone who voted for the final compromise language last year has had a chance to study the regulations issued by HEW. These regulations define a "prompt" reporting of rape as 60 days after the crime. The regulations require no medical documentation to support the need for an abortion performed to save the life of the mother or because of physical health damage. These regulations simply do not reflect the intent of this body of Congress as expressed last year during 6 months of debate and voting.

I urge you to vote against this amendment to remove section 209.●

● Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I support the motion to strike what is in essence the old Hyde language from last year. This is my first choice for action on this part of the bill, but, if for some reason this motion fails, and hopefully it will not, I will support the motion to replace the language with last year's compromise language.

After our never-ending battle of last year, we still find the same Hyde language in the House version again this year. Last year we were forced to pass one continuing resolution after another, just because the conference committee took so long to find a suitable compromise. Many of our Federal employees and programs wondered whether they would get paid each month. Now, here we are again back at ground zero.

It seems to me that the best thing we can do at this point is to strike the present Hyde language, and if we have to have restrictions at all, to insert the compromise language of last year. This is an important issue, and we should give it all the attention it deserves. But we are debating the same questions in the same language as last year. If we were writing new law or doing something different from last year, our time will be well spent. We have a lot of work to do, and our time would be better spent getting to the business at hand rather than in getting bogged down in repetitious battles of this sort.

I urge my colleagues to support Congressman STOKES' motion to strike.●

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES).

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. WRIGHT

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WRIGHT: Strike out section 209 on page 39 lines 14 through 17 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Sec. 209. None of the funds provided for in this Act shall be used to perform abortions except where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term; or except for such medical procedures necessary for the victims of rape or incest when such rape or incest has been reported promptly to a law enforcement agency or public health service; or except in those instances where severe and long-lasting physical health damage to the mother would result if the pregnancy were carried to term when so determined by two physicians.

"Nor are payments prohibited for drugs or devices to prevent implantation of the fertilized ovum or for medical procedures necessary for the termination of an ectopic pregnancy.

"The Secretary shall promptly issue regulations and establish procedures to ensure that the provisions of this section are rigorously enforced."

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, the amendment which I have offered is the same identical language, without any change whatever, that the House and Senate finally agreed to last year. I offer it with the suggestion that Members of the Congress may desire to save the country the 6 months of delay that was caused by this issue last year and to save the Congress the agony of prolonged debate and bitter discussion which ultimately would result in something either identical or very similar to this language. We are, after all, the same Members; it is the very same Congress.

Last year there were 28 separate votes on this single subject. There were 17 votes in the Senate and 11 in the House. It took 6 months of the time of the Congress to resolve this particular issue. Because of that delay some $60 billion or more in Federal programs were delayed in reaching the public.

Because of that delay, while people tried to hammer out some compromise in antiabortion language, school districts did not know how much they would be able to budget for the then current year. They were at least 3 months into the school year before this matter was resolved. Because of this delay, jobs-producing programs in the Labor Department budget were delayed and not allowed to go into effect.

I know that many of the Members of the House feel very keenly on this subject. It is an emotional subject. I respect the feelings and the convictions of people on both sides. The language that finally was agreed to last year undoubtedly falls short in the view of many people. I do not know anybody whom it satisfies completely. It is not completely satisfactory to the women's liberation movement. It is not completely satisfactory to the right-to-life movement.

But I do not know any reason to expect that, if we were to delay and debate and consume precious prime time of this House in another 11 or 12 or 13 votes on this subject, we could come to anything basically different from this. The committee personnel in both House and Senate are the same. The people who will have to make the linguistic decisions are the same.

Therefore, I suggest to the Members that in the interest of expediting the business of this Congress, allowing us to have one vote and then getting on with the other important business of the Congress, the Members might want to accept this amendment now. Then our House conferees would be in a position to say to the Senate, "It is not a trading position that we come to you with. We are not here jockeying for position. We are not here trying to improve our situation over last year. We are not here trying to put you in an awkward position. We have adopted the very same language that you and we jointly agreed to last year, and we call upon you to do exactly the same thing." By that means we can avoid a lot of trouble, a lot of travail, a lot of heartache, and a lot of lost time on the House floor and on the Senate floor. For those reasons I suggest to the Members they may want to vote for this language today.

I do not think there is any special need for any persuasion on this matter. Heaven knows, we heard enough oratory last year on those 11 separate occasions when we debated rules, debated amendments, and debated conference reports. We consumed more than 26 hours of the time of the House in those debates. So without any further comment, I commend to the Members the language that was adopted ultimately last year.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate conclude on this amendment in 30 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I just wonder if perhaps, already noticing the number of Members who desire to speak on this issue who are on their feet, the Chairman would reconsider that to perhaps an hour and a half?

Mr. Chairman, further reserving the right to object, I appreciate that we can move on to other business, but I suggest for millions of women this is the business of the day and that we ought to consider spending perhaps maybe an hour and a half.

Further reserving the right to object on the unanimous-consent request, I think it is very clear that a half hour is insufficient.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, as we did before, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment conclude in 1 hour.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I object.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment conclude in 1 hour.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FLOOD).

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Members standing at the time the motion was made will be recognized for 2 minutes each.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. MAHON).

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, let us make this a significant day in the history of this session of the Congress. The Labor-HEW bill never did become the law as a bill out of the subcommittee of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FLOOD) last year. It was handled by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GEORGE MAHON) on a continuing resolution that did not become the law until December 9, 1977. If we handle this abortion matter, as we did last year, a session after the election will be inevitable and the issue will not be resolved prior to the beginning of the new fiscal year.

In the past I have voted for the Hyde amendment. I have done all I could do with respect to this issue of abortion. Many of you voted for the Hyde amendment originally; but finally we had to settle the matter and we settled it by a compromise on a continuing resolution.

The gentleman from Texas (Mr. WRIGHT) has offered an amendment which would adopt the language of last year and settle this issue, and it ought to be settled. It is not perfect. It is the best that could be worked out last year and it is the best that can be worked out this year. Whether we are right or left, whether we are pro-abortion or anti-abortion, as a practical matter compromise is necessary in a legislative body. It should accept the inevitable. It should seek to do the attainable. This is something we can do. We know how we voted last year. Let us get this issue behind us. It is an important issue. It has received a lot of attention and let us give it the attention it deserves today and let us pass the Wright amendment, regardless of our views otherwise, and settle the issue. Then without a doubt we will be able to prevail and get the matter to the White House and get this bill on the books in September or early October.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DERWINSKI).

Mr. DERWINSKI. Mr. Chairman, I would like to point out that the so-called compromise of last year was not much of a compromise. It was a last-minute adjustment that caught many of the Members away and it has not been properly administered by HEW in my judgment; I think if we are looking for the proper terminology, it should be the one the House consistently maintained last year, which supported the right to life.

I believe it indicates, among other things, the opinion of the public on this vital issue.

The charge has been made that Congress took a year to settle the issue. Any delay or ongoing complication is related to the Supreme Court ruling on abortion.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE).

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DERWINSKI)?

There was no objection.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. DICKS yielded his time to Mr. OBEY.)

(By unanimous consent, Mrs. SCHROEDER yielded her time to Mr. WEISS.)

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York (Mr. WEISS).

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Chairman, I intend to vote for the Wright amendment because obviously it is better to provide the opportunity for poor women to be able to secure abortions under certain circumstances than it is to prohibit abortions altogether unless the mother's life is in danger.

But having said that, I think more needs to be said. I think that the House is doing far less than distinguishing itself when it attempts to create two separate laws, one to apply to women who are middle class or wealthier and another to apply to women who are poor. That is really what this issue is about.

The Supreme Court has made it very clear that abortions are legal. What we are trying to do is to say, "Yes, they are, but we are not going to let poor women have them, because we will not permit Medicaid to pay for them."

The fact is, of course, that abortions will take place. I had occasion to serve as an assistant district attorney in New York City some 20 to 25 years ago when abortions were totally illegal, and I was in charge of what they then called the Abortion Bureau. We had abortions, and we had instance after instance of men being arrested and women being arrested who were performing abortions without any kind of medical training whatsoever and under the filthiest, most unsanitary conditions, constantly endangering the life of any woman who entrusted herself to them.

We had occasion to see the victims who came through our doors in the district attorney's office, and we saw that many of those people ended up in hospitals struggling for very life itself.

So our saying that we will not have the Government paying for abortions for women who cannot otherwise afford them is not going to stop the abortions. What it will do is, first, write into law again that the Congress of the United States treats the poor differently than it treats everyone else, and then it will relegate those same poor into the hands of the butchers.

Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that this House ought to find a better way of demonstrating its capacity to legislate on behalf of the people of the United States.

Mr. MARKS. Mr. Chairman, the reason I have asked for this time is to ask the majority leader a question.

Mr. Majority Leader, I think one of the questions we have in our minds is whether or not, through any inquiry the majority leader has made, or which has been made, in his behalf, can we feel somewhat assured that the Senate will go along with this amendment should it pass here in the House? Can the gentleman give us some indication of his feelings about that?

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, I can simply say that there will be strong representations made from the leadership of the House to the leadership of the Senate, imploring to do exactly that. Surely, the Members of the Senate are just as eager to get to the end of this as the House Members are.

I can simply hypothecate the reverse situation in which the House insists upon its own stringent language. The Senate then, in a trading posture, as it did last year, will insist upon its much more liberal language. Then months and months again will be consumed, before getting to the same point at which we arrived last year.

Last year, I am told, the money items in this huge bill were settled very quickly in the conference, maybe within 2 days. And then for 6 months the conferees went back and forth over the language on this secondary question. It is a repetition of that which I believe we would be wise to avoid.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. ROUSSELOT).

Mr. ROUSSELOT. Mr. Chairman, I do not think the argument is well taken that the Wright amendment language was really the ultimate position of the House. It was written at the very last minute in conference and that that somehow makes it good for the country. The House stated very firmly many, many times by strong majority votes that it supported the Hyde amendment and the last minute action of the House the fact that many Members of the House did not really know the full impact of what they were voting for in the conference report made it difficult to be sure that the House intended to move away from the Hyde amendment. Additionally 60 Members were not present for the final passage of the conference report.

So I urge the Members to reject the Wright amendment. I do not think it is correct now or then. I think the House was right the 11 times it supported the Hyde concept.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. ROUSSELOT yielded the balance of his time to Mr. BAUMAN).

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey (Mrs. FENWICK).

Mrs. FENWICK. Mr. Chairman, I hope very much that we can adopt this amendment. We have struggled a long time in this House. We all know what our different arguments are. It is not a satisfactory amendment for those of us who believe that the choice is too far narrowed. But I do not know what else we can do in this House.

We are a widely representative body. All different religions and points of view are represented here on both sides of this question. I really think we will come to some commonsense, calm agreement with the language which we adopted after so much trouble and anguish and travail last year.

Mr. Chairman, I hope that this amendment will be indeed adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. VOLKMER).

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Wright amendment.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. VOLKMER yielded the balance of his time to Mr. OBERSTAR.)

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Washington (Mr. PRITCHARD).

Mr. PRITCHARD. Mr. Chairman, as one who is totally opposed to the Hyde amendment, I recognize the Wright amendment is really a very, very small step. It is a very narrow—very narrow—expansion of abortion rights. We are trying to legislate poor women away from legal abortion, and I think that is totally wrong.

Mr. Chairman, there are 417 men, if I count correctly, in this body; and they have consistently voted against women's rights to have legal abortions, against the right of poor women to have legal abortions.

With respect to the women in this body, I notice the majority have continually voted against the Hyde amendment. I think that we ought to realize that we here are legislating laws affecting the women of America. We 417 men are making a very grave mistake when we continue to pursue the Hyde amendment approach.

Mr. Chairman, I think we have no choice but to support the Wright amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Maryland (Mrs. SPELLMAN).

Mrs. SPELLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I stand here a woman who opposes abortion, but who would ask for poor women no less than I would ask for my own daughter.

I think that this language which we have here in the amendment, which allows an abortion if the life of a woman would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term, or except for such medical procedures necessary for the victims of rape or incest, is the language that we not only should adopt but must adopt.

Mr. Chairman, I am sure that those Members who are fathers would not want to condemn their daughters to death if death could possibly be avoided; and I am sure that they would not want to condemn any of their daughters to the devastating mental anguish that would come from carrying a pregnancy to term after rape or incest.

I, therefore, plead with the Members to do no less for poor women than they would do for members of their own family.

Mr. Chairman, we held the whole HEW appropriation bill together with its programs and its employees hostage last year for months on end while we debated this subject and went through this same catharsis last year. We know what we settled for then. Let us just, in good order, settle for the same amendment. It makes sense. Frankly this is the position I would select by choice. I voted for the previous amendment, which went too far, in order to clear the deck for the Wright amendment which is right down the middle, not too narrow and not too broad. It makes neither side happy, but it lets those of us who are in the middle on this question feel very comfortable.

Do vote for this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER).

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, originally I had planned to speak at some length on this issue; but as the gentleman from Washington (Mr. PRITCHARD) pointed out, the men in this Chamber have made a decision that they only wanted to spend 1 hour in determining the fate of millions of women across this country. In fact, many of those people did not even desire to take on this issue, but only to cut off discussion among various Members on different sides of this issue in this Chamber. As a result, we are reduced to 2 minutes per speaker.

Mr. Chairman, I would just like to say that if we fail to adopt this amendment, which I still think is an unacceptable solution to the plight of poor women.

Mr. Chairman, the Members of this Chamber who will vote on the abortion issue today are overwhelmingly male and married. I address my remarks to the men; I do not wish to be so pious as to make recommendations to the women here. I fully support the right of all women to decide, without my pontification, on the issue of abortion.

Now, the married men here have certainly spoken to their wives about contraception. And, if they and their wives have chosen not to have children, the majority of these couples will depend upon their wives to provide the birth control method. Study after study reveals that most women who practice birth control use the pill, with the second most popular form of birth control being the IUD. The Family Planning Association has estimated that 80 percent of couples for whom some form of contraception is prescribed are using the pill.

Just this past March, the House Select Committee on Population heard testimony by the National Women's Health Network to the effect that taxpayer dollars have not been used effectively to develop birth control methods which are safer than the pill and the IUD. We have seen no legislative proposal as a result of those hearings, to educate the population about safer birth control, such as the diaphragm, rhythm, ovulation detection. And we have seen nothing to educate the population about safe male birth control methods. The select committee says their hearings are informational. What will we do with that information?

Let us think back to the early and mid-1950's. If we are too young for that, or if we were oblivious to the pregnancy process at that time, let us look to congressional hearings and see the evidence on DES—a drug widely prescribed to pregnant women to prevent miscarriages. We have found that women who took DES by and large experienced no side effects. Instead, the carcinogenic side effects of DES are manifested in their daughters! After learning of this hazard, most of us do not want our wives or daughters, or lovers or friends to be prescribed DES while pregnant.

But, how many of us are thinking about the situation our wives, daughters, lovers, or friends may be going through at this very moment—if they are using unsafe birth control methods? How many Members care that their wives or lovers may get cancer, liver tumors, gallstones, high blood pressure, or have a heart attack or a stroke because they are taking the pill? Doesn't anyone remember hearing that FDA warning in 1976?

I will repeat it again: In 1976, the FDA warned that pill-users may be subjecting themselves to cancer, liver tumors, gallstones, high blood pressure, heart attack, or stroke.

The Commissioner at the time, Dr. Alexander Schmidt, said the pill increases the tendency for blood clots.

Dr. Schmidt said that, if a woman becomes pregnant while taking the pill, great harm may come to the fetus.

Dr. Schmidt told us that birth control pills sometimes cause liver tumors, and that even if those tumors are benign, they can be fatal, due to hemorrhage.

We were not enlightened about DES when it was being most widely prescribed in the fifties. But, we are certainly enlightened about the pill.

Will we treat the pill like we treated DES? In other words, do we want to wait 10, 15, 20 years for the statistics to come in on our wives, our daughters, our lovers, and friends?

How many Members of this body know that America ranks only eighth in the world in the life expectancy of its women?

How many Members of this body know that, among women aged 30 to 53, the leading causes of death are breast and cervical cancer? Do we care that the pill may be contributing substantially to that death toll?

If the Members do care about all of this, how many of them are outspoken enough to stand up and say to their wives or lovers, "I love you. Get off the pill"? And, if they have taken that step, how many Members love the women in their lives enough to stand up on the House floor and do something immediately about the very grave potential threat to the lives of these women, women who are obviously, clearly, absolutely defined as persons?

None of this is to say that abortion is that alternative to the pill—but what is the alternative? Is it the IUD?

How many of the male Members would not be totally grossed out to talk about the fact that their wives or their lovers bleed excessively from the IUD? Is that not a strange, curious side effect, worthy of investigating, to find yet another alternative? And, is that discussion any more gross than discussing fetal tissue extracted from the womb?

And, what about the woman who decides to go off the IUD, the woman who uses, say, a combination of other birth control methods, but because the IUD has so distorted her menstrual cycle, becomes pregnant anyway? What is the alternative for that conscientious woman? Chances are such distortions will cause miscarriages or further excessive bleeding. That is the woman's punishment for having used the IUD and then becoming enlightened enough to quit using it.

What gentleman in this House sees his wife having a migraine and is enlightened enough to realize that, if she is on the pill, this migraine may just be a warning of impending ill health, possibly a stroke? These things are warned about, by doctors and pharmacists.

The complexities, the side effects, the menstrual cycle distortions accompanying use of the pill or the IUD may be with a woman for the rest of her life, even if she goes off the contraception.

Why do we continue to allow these punishments to happen to American women?

Where is our support for their survival?

How do the men in this Chamber show their concern and their love for the living women in their lives?

And, by the way, gentlemen in this Chamber, how many of you know that 1 out of every 4 women in this country was the victim of incest as a youngster, was molested by her father or her brother or her uncle—usually the father. According to the testimony I received last year in the Select Education subcommittee, about 25 percent of all American women have been the victims of incest. That is 1 out of every 4 gentlemen. Give that some thought. Give some thought to the unwanted pregnancies in that situation. Do we care at all about our daughters, our nieces, our sisters, our friends or relatives who have been the victims of incest?

Do we care if they turn to prostitution, do we care if they commit suicide? How do we show our love for those one in four—think of it, 1 out of every 4 families related to the members of this House may be involved in the situation. One of every four women you know may have been the victims of such awful abuse.

We all know that President Carter has spoken many times about the fact that his administration will seek alternatives to abortion, because the President opposes the right of a woman to choose abortion. So, what about the Carter-appointed study group which had to disband because the conclusion was that the only real alternatives to abortion are, and I quote, "suicide, motherhood, and, some would add, madness." This says that abortion is used as a last resort, when the woman knows nothing else to do. The only alternatives to her do not include birth control: They are unwanted pregnancy, suicide, madness. This conclusion was not disputed by the President, to my knowledge. How do we show our love and concern for that woman, that "person" who finds herself in such a desperate circumstance, perhaps because she was the victim of incest—chances are one in four that she was—perhaps, because she was the victim of rape; perhaps because she was a teenager with no guidance, but a big possibility of suicide facing her; perhaps because she was an enlightened woman trying to get off the sick merry-go-round of unsafe contraception. What about this desperate unequivocal "person"?

What about the issue of rape, a most abusive attack, a total violation, an absolutely horrendous, gory crime? Is there one Member in this Chamber who would not give even passing thought to allowing his daughter the option of abortion after being raped? Where do we show the love for this person who was not involved at all in the natural process of producing a child, but who was the victim, rather, of a brutal crime?

How many of the Members here know that in 1976, according to testimony we received in the Education and Labor Committee, perhaps one in six couples was involved in domestic violence? That is one in six, gentlemen. How many women who receive beatings from their husbands would find it easy to tell those husbands they are pregnant, and with what consequences? Time and time again, as I spoke to battered women, I heard them tell horrible stories of rape—not by some stranger, but by their own husbands. And, time and time again, battered women told me that they had been further beaten when they informed their husbands of the fact that they were pregnant. The Women's Rights Law Reporter studied the battered women syndrome in 1977 and found that 35 percent of the cases they studied involved women who received blows to the stomach during pregnancy. Do you understand, gentlemen, that a woman in that situation may face two alternatives: abortion or continued beatings resulting in injury to the woman—perhaps death to the woman—and also a possible miscarriage or deformed child. The vote last month defeating the domestic violence bill, which would provide counseling and treatment for such women, indicates that a majority of the Members do not understand the gravity of the situation. Surely, the bill did not fail because you do not care, did it?

We can quote all kind of statistics all day long. Obviously, we will not be quoting one type of statistic: The number of relatives or friends of the Members of this body who have had abortions. And, I do believe that is a matter of utmost privacy. But, when it comes down to it, do we really believe this is an issue which very rarely hits home? I do not think so. If people have told us they have had abortions, and we have accepted that privately, and understood the particular set of unique circumstances, why then do we not understand the circumstances of the people we represent? Where is the reality of the situation? Is a private decision different than a public one, on an issue which is basically personal to us all? If that is so, we have no business legislating against abortion. If we know women who have had abortions, are they immune to the public proclamations against abortion, simply because they may be friends of people in this Chamber? Indeed, many men in this House Chamber have probably agonized over a loved one having an abortion and have tried to see her through it the best they could. They probably had reached the end of the road in terms of alternatives. Well, lovers on Medicaid are no less "persons" than lovers on Aetna.

How many workingwomen are treated fairly by their employers when they become pregnant, and what do we in the House of Representatives do about it? The bill to provide pregnancy disability earned benefits cannot even muster enough support to be brought to the floor for a vote. Some incentive that is to remain pregnant. I think most Members know that a mother must have income to support her child. Where is the love for these persons who may want very much to bring children into the world, but who must work for a living?

Surely there are Members whose property taxes help pay for capital punishment, and these Members may be against capital punishment. But, they pay their property taxes and make a decision on whether or not to make a public statement about capital punishment. Where do the people who are opposed to the right to choose an abortion stand on capital punishment? Where do they stand on gun control? Where is the love for people? Were the people, who are against the right of a woman to choose an abortion, equally incensed about the cold-blooded murders of blacks on American streets, which occurred because some whites thought they were superior? What on earth could be more gory, more horrendous than that?

Sex between lovers is supposed to represent an act of love. Often, sex between lovers results in wanted pregnancy and loved children. I have been talking about the exceptions to that situation, and to the way we allow American women to face possible horrible consequences if they use unsafe birth control. I am talking about men legislators. Let us show that we are capable of compassion for the women in the many complicated circumstances which I have described. Let us not discriminate against persons on Medicaid, just because we can afford Aetna. Let us not be so pious as to say we are the omniscient group of human beings who have the right to tell a woman she cannot decide to deal with a private, unwanted situation in legal, rational, medical, personal terms. Let us stop our war against American women. They go through enough as it is.

Do the Members know that in Los Angeles, for example, the suicide rate among teenagers has increased by 100 percent—that is 100 percent—and that three of the five main causes for those suicides are poverty, pregnancy, and broken love affairs?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. DORNAN).

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Chairman, it is not unusual in this Chamber to have Members making assumptions for all of us or some grouping of us. An example today would be the remarks of the distinguished gentleman from Washington (Mr. PRITCHARD) a few moments earlier to the effect that most of us vote the way we do on abortion because we are male. The inference being that all Congresswomen are for abortion and/or taxpayer funding of abortion. Wrong. This discussion revolves around life, not around gender.

I would not advise either of my two sons to pay for or otherwise encourage an abortion any more than I would advise or assist in any way one of my three daughters to have an abortion. It is not the fault of the male Members of the House that we have only 17 Congresswomen or to the credit of the other body that for the first time in 11 years they have once again two women, both as a result of deaths.

Rather than female unanimity, Mr. PRITCHARD should have noted something very historical today—two Congresswomen taking the well—and I believe another yet to stand—speaking forcefully—in opposition to abortion with or without the encouragement of the funding of Federal tax dollars. As a result we do not see several Congresswomen standing in the House of Representatives claiming as usual to speak for all the women of America. Finally, we have balance. This never was and never will be just a gender issue; this is a critical life and death issue—probably even the life and death of our Republic as we know it.

There are millions of us in this country with the firm belief—with or without religious training and faith—that what we have here in America today is another holocaust. We have watched the holocaust of 6 million innocent human beings killed in the warmth of their mothers' wombs since that fateful Supreme Court decision of January 22, 1973. To millions of us, we are deeply passionate because this is every bit as scarring and ghastly as the extinction of 6 million Jews and an additional, oft-forgotten, 6 million Christians during the Nazi nightmare of Hitler's Europe.

That is why we refuse to have our tax dollars going toward the support of another holocaust. I believe all this carnage will end up in God not being mocked any longer. A just God will not tolerate this madness much longer. Members may draw their own conclusions from that statement.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR).

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, the majority leader has done the job which is his, the responsible job of providing leadership and attempting to resolve conflict and expedite the business of the House. But, I think it is the right job of leadership in the wrong cause.

It has been said many times through out this debate that the House has devoted 6 months to this issue. The real issue is not how much time we are spending on whether or not to fund abortions; the issue really is human life. If it takes 6 months to protect unborn human life, then I think—and most of my constituents think—that would be a good investment of our time and of my time. If it takes 6 months to save 300,000 lives, we will have spent that time well. I am willing to spend as much time as it takes to save unborn human life.

We voted 2 to 1 against the motion to strike just a few moments ago. It seems to me that it would be very inconsistent for a Member who voted no on rollcall 443 to vote aye on rollcall 444. I think he would have a hard time explaining that inconsistency to his or her constituents.

The arguments in favor of the pending amendment assume that the other body is going to stand firm, and that we are going to crumble.

But change is in the air. This is an election year. The other body has its ear a little closer to the ground this year than they had last year. I think if we stand firm with as substantial a vote on this amendment as we did on the previous amendment, the other body might just get the message that we mean business and maybe they will be ready to settle early on our terms in favor of the unborn.

I urge a "no" vote on this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. BAUMAN).

Mr. BAUMAN. Mr. Chairman, one thing that has not been alluded to in this debate is the already established effect of the language before us. It has been the law for 6 months. The gentleman from Texas offers us the existing law and says that it should be renewed in this appropriation bill. But the language before us has been in effect since last December, when the President signed the appropriation bill, and was the subject on January 26, 1978, of the issuance of HEW regulations, just as the amendment before us indicates, that the Secretary had the duty to issue.

Those of us who have fought so hard in this House, and a majority has agreed with that position repeatedly, seeking to save the lives of the unborn, were totally disappointed with the HEW regulations. These regulations allowed abortions on demand and permitted many more abortions than otherwise would have been permitted.

So what the majority leader is asking us to do is to put our stamp of approval on language which has been used to expand and increase abortions.

I do not know how many have read the statements of Secretary Califano before the subcommittee, but he made it plain he did not approve of the language now in the Wright amendment nor of the broad interpretations of the regulations. He told the subcommittee that he was bound by the debate in both the House and in the other body and by the language before him to issue these liberalized regulations. He even suggested in a letter dated February 21, 1978, a change in the language reducing the time for reporting to a shorter period of time so that prompt reporting would occur.

So in adopting the language before us the House will start from the weakest position and hope the other body will accept that. This amendment was born on one of the last days of the last session, with many Members absent. It was drafted in the last hours, and Members approved it by the slimmest of margins with more than 60 Members absent.

We are going to have a vote on whether the Federal taxpayers should be required to finance the death of hundreds of thousands of unborn children each year. We should vote to save the lives of these unborn which are as important as those of their mothers.

I urge the Members to reject this amendment and permit the language of the committee to go forward. The language in the bill has the approval of the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MICHEL) and the chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FLOOD).

Even the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MICHEL) and those who originally drafted this language have now turned against it and will vote against it because of the effect which it has had.

The issue is much different now than it was last December. We know the devastation this amendment has caused. I urge my colleagues to oppose the Wright amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES).

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I happen to be totally opposed to the Hyde language which appears in the present bill.

I also happen to feel that the compromise language offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. WRIGHT) does not go far enough.

But I was one of the House conferees last year, and when we went to conference, in 2 days we had settled $61 billion worth of money items, and we then sat there for 6 continuous months arguing over the question of whether or not a woman dependent upon Medicaid was entitled to an abortion on Federal funds.

Subsequently in December we arrived at the compromise language which this House voted upon and accepted. I was one of those who voted for the compromise language at that time.

Now we are talking about some $57 billion in the legislation which is now before this House and we have deferred $17 billion worth of money items in this bill because of the lack of authorization which means that, ultimately, we will have a $75 billion bill that could once again be tied up for an additional 6 months and thereby deprive the American people of the largest social action program that they are entitled to and which is passed by this Congress.

It seems to me that the distinguished majority leader, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. WRIGHT), has demonstrated leadership and that he is performing a real service to this House by offering us an opportunity to vote upon the compromise language which was accepted by this House after 6 months of debate this past year.

I intend, therefore, to vote for this compromise on the theory that it seems to me that we owe no less to the American people than just sitting around and arguing over this particular issue and I, therefore, intend to vote for the compromise amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. WRIGHT).

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair now recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE).

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman and Members of the House, the fact is that it was the other body that held this bill hostage last year because in 1976 they had accepted the language that is in the bill now, section 209, they accepted it and it became the law. Then later, of course, the Supreme Court did not find it unconstitutional, much to their chagrin, so they became intransigent.

The problem with the Wright amendment, which is the old Michel amendment of last year, and is the law now, in addition to its intrinsic flaws, in my humble opinion, is that the regulations drawn by HEW absolutely torpedoed any sense of compromise that we might have found in that legislation.

The Washington Star headline said: HEW sets abortion guidelines in line with liberal Senate view.

And quoting from the article:

Pro-abortion forces said they were pleased with the regulations.

That is what is wrong with the Wright amendment because the position of the House was torpedoed and sabotaged by the people who really run the country, the regulators, the bureaucrats. That is what is wrong with this.

The rape and incest reporting requirements are almost meaningless. Sixty days after the event occurred, only the name of the victim was required, and it could be done after the abortion had been performed and the name could be sent in by a secretary of the abortion clinic.

On health, there was no serious requirement for any documentation or medical records, just abortion. It was abortion on demand; in my opinion, the House legislative intent has been abused, and prevents any support.

I am not guilty and I do not feel guilty about the delay we had in this House in resolving this because I ask: How many lives were saved during this delay?

You know what I wish? I wish both sides of this controversy, even though we feel passionately about it, could respect the sincerity of the other side.

As I stand here I believe there is no more sincere or honorable person than the gentleman from Ohio and the gentleman from Wisconsin and all of those who oppose my position, but we have all felt so strongly about this that sometimes we do get emotional. But as far as I am concerned, this is one issue where there is no self-interest on either side. No one is going to make a dollar or lose a dollar on this issue. We are arguing philosophy and principle and I think that is significant. But if the gentleman from Wisconsin wants to trade horror stories, then I will be happy to do so. I can tell you how the ACLU followed me into church and sat behind me taking notes on what pages in the Bible I was referring to.

This was in an affidavit they offered in a lawsuit and the court said during the proceedings, "Who is the defendant here, God?"

By the way, I wish there really was an ACLU; it would sure help on this issue.

We are told we are being cruel to poor women. I say this, let us make a list of all the things that poor women want. Let us make such a list.

They want education and they want decent housing, they want clothing and they want job opportunities.

Let us make a list and see where they rank the money to abort their unborn child.

No; we make it easy for them to kill their preborn children, but we make it difficult for all the other things that they need.

Rev. Jesse Jackson is no conservative and yet he supports my position. So I think it is important to know that he and Dick Gregory and a few other people who speak for minorities understand that the way to solve poverty is not to kill poor people. You do not eliminate the problem by eliminating their young. Oh, the inhumanity of the humane, the things we do in the name of compassion and love for poor people!

I am reminded of Robespierre running through the streets of Paris yelling, "Liberty, equality, fraternity," while the guillotine was slicing head, after head, after head.

Yes, there is a double standard. It is the unborn of the rich who are not protected. If the mother of the well-to-do fetus wants to dispose of it, there is no one going to raise a hand to protect that one. We are here fighting for the unborn of the poor. We would love to protect the unborn of the rich, if we can ever get a human life amendment from the committee.

But why surrender to pessimism? Do you think that every kid born in the ghetto has got to stay there all his life? Is it not our business to try to provide opportunities for those youngsters instead of saying "eliminate the problem by executing the poor?"

One of our worthy speakers from New York has said he has seen the victims. I have seen the victims, too. I have seen films of buckets full of them from hospitals—little crushed bodies. They are the real victims.

Why do we always think of the pregnant woman as the only victim, when the unborn child is a victim. Give the poor a right to a future? What future is there in being exterminated? Do not talk to me about a fifth unwanted child. Enrico Caruso was an 18th unwanted pregnancy, so why be so pessimistic?

I say it is the ultimate in child abuse—abortion.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. CONTE).

(By unanimous consent, Mr. CONTE yielded his time to Mr. MICHEL).

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MICHEL).

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Chairman, the majority leader said that Members might save themselves considerable prolonged agony and debate by simply adopting the finally agreed-upon language of last year's bill. As much as I would like to spare myself that agony, I have to oppose the amendment of the distinguished majority leader.

I do not think we have to review all of the versions of this amendment that have been voted on within the last several years. Suffice it to say we have labored over phrases, words, and semantics for months. As we finalized the language last year, Members in both this body and the other were getting more and more intransigent, and I must confess that in struggling with those last few words that resulted in our finally getting a bill, I placed a great deal of faith in the public statements of the President and the Secretary of HEW to see to it that we would be backed up in our approach to an agreement with strong and tightly drawn regulations.

What did we end up with? In almost every instance the regulations came down on the side of the Senate and rejected the view of the House. Let me cite some specifics.

The regulations do not define the words "severe," "longlasting," and "physical health damage." By not doing so, they leave the way open for unscrupulous doctors to claim payment for almost any abortion.

The regulations require no documentation from physicians as to the basis for their judgment that severe and longlasting physical health damage to the mother would result.

The regulations contain no requirement that the two physicians not be associated with each other in the same clinic or practice. It was the inclusion of two doctors at the suggestion of one of our medical doctors, the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. CARTER), that brought us a final agreement. I would have to say, however, that in any regulations, we would not countenance two doctors associated in the same clinic or practice making the decision. Otherwise why have two? And under medicaid we pay two fees for the same result. Ridiculous.

The regulations establish no limitation as to who can report a rape or incest. This is leaving it totally open-ended.

No effective standards have been established to determine the legitimacy of rape or incest reports. Then those regulations define "prompt" reporting as being within a 60-day period, when we in the House had in mind something along the line of 30 days. I remember specifically in the hearings asking the Secretary of HEW, "How could you arrive at 60 days?"

He said, "Well, you know, one House said 90 days and the other said 30, so we compromised and cut down the middle."

I said, "That is what we do with figures, money figures; but not on the issue we are talking about here, the prompt reporting of a case of rape or incest."

In all these regulations, the Department came down on the side of maximum flexibility; in other words, the Senate position.

Secretary Califano tried to defend his action before our committee by stating that the legislative history was vague and contradictory. The fact is, however, that the Attorney General told him in a letter that he had "broad discretion in formulating regulations consistent with the intent of Congress."

The Attorney General added that the intent in this case was not very clear and that "Congress intended to leave many matters of interpretation concerning section 101 to the sound discretion of the Secretary rather than attempt a more detailed statutory scheme."

I will have to say again that we obviously placed an undue amount of faith and confidence in the Secretary's ability to use his leadership to force the bureaucrats to write the kind of regulation that he was publicly wedded to, but such was not the case. If we adopt this language again today, do not think for one moment that those regulations will be changed. They will be the very same ones that cause me today to argue against the adoption of the amendment and I urge Members to reject it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY).

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, first of all, let me say this. Two Members have referred to the fast way last year's language was drawn. I think it ought to be said in defense of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. MAHON) and others who participated in this process that every newspaper in the country knew that we were trying to find, almost on an hourly basis, compromise language and certainly no one was surprised by the effort, unless they wanted to be and unless they wanted to miss the vote. I suspect there were some people who did.

Let me say this. In his next to the last broadcast before retiring, Eric Sevareid observed that one of the requirements of American citizens in this modern age ought to be to retain the courage of one's doubts as well as one's convictions in this world of dangerously passionate certainties.

I can think of no advice that applies more strongly to this issue today.

I honestly do not know what amendment can be drafted that would put this question to rest for all time, for all of the groups in society who have diverging viewpoints on the subject.

I envy the certainty with which some groups say there can be no limitations on Government funding for abortions, that a woman has an absolute right to control her own body. I do not happen to agree with that and I do not think society does, either.

I also envy the certainty with which the other groups say that the answer is very simple, there should never be any abortions under any circumstances whatsoever, never. I do not think most reasonable people in society take that view, either. Most reasonable human beings do not want to say to a woman who has been raped, "Tough luck, lady; you are on your own," but that is what this committee language does.

Most reasonable people do not want to condemn a woman who has had kidney disease to being bedridden the rest of her life; but that in many cases is what this committee language does.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBEY. No, I will not.

Mr. Chairman, most reasonable people do not want to increase the back-room back-alley abortions, that the committee language will lead to, and the committee language does all these things.

Many right-to-life groups will not be satisfied with this language. The Civil Liberties Union referred to certainly will not be satisfied with this language.

I can remember one Wisconsin women's group that produced a newsletter last year and began the newsletter with the following sentence: "We have a problem, and his name is Dave Obey." That was because I would not oppose all prohibitions against abortions.

So I know what kind of unfair pressure Members have from certain women's groups on one side, and I certainly know of the lies and selective truths peddled by Mr. Gallagher and some other people who agree with him.

But this is a reasonable compromise. This is supposed to be a reasonable place. I would urge all the Members to vote, when that voting machine goes on, the same way they talk when the machine is off. I think every Member here knows that this language would pass if Members voted the same way, when the lights go on, as they talk in the privacy of their offices and in the cloakrooms before the machine is turned on.

There are no decent figures at this point on abortions. We do not really know what the effect of last year's amendment has been; it has been too soon. But we do have some preliminary results that came from a telephone survey done by HEW, and they show a substantial drop in the number of abortions since this language was adopted last year.

Mr. Chairman, I invite the Members to see those figures at the committee table.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. WRIGHT).

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I think there is very little to be said in addition to what has already been said, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FLOOD), the last speaker on the list.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, there are many of us who simply cannot vote for the antiabortion language which was finally adopted in the House last December. We believe that it is just too loose, and that it opens the door too wide to abuses. We are joined in this idea by Secretary Califano, who told us he is speaking for the President on this issue. I asked Secretary Califano in our hearings what language he would recommend, and he gave us a proposal that would tighten up the language we are talking about here considerably.

If we were to include the fiscal year 1978 language in our bill, or anything similar to it, we know what the Senate would do. The Senate would add further loopholes—we went through that for months last year—and we would find ourselves in an utterly untenable position in conference.

Mr. Chairman, I know that many Members who voted for this language in December have changed their minds about it, and I hope that it is decisively defeated by the House so we can go to conference with the solid support on this issue which we are going to need.

So, Mr. Chairman, I urge the Members to vote against the amendment.

● Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Chairman, as legislators attempting to set policy on an issue which is highly personal for those directly affected and highly emotional for those who feel strongly on one side of the issue or the other, we bear a great responsibility.

I am certain that each and every one of us has devoted a great deal of time and consideration to the question of what responsibility the Federal Government has to provide access to abortions for those who otherwise would not be able to afford them. Each of us has given considerable thought to this issue in an attempt to legislate in a manner which we believe is in the best interests of those affected. Certainly I have deliberated long and hard over this controversial matter.

Since the 1973 Supreme Court decision, I have polled my constituents on four separate occasions on the abortion issue. I have attempted to cover all aspects of the issue over the years. In each case, a majority of the respondents indicated support for abortion under some circumstances. This year I asked my constituents specifically whether the Federal and State governments should provide medicaid funds to help cover the costs of an abortion for women who otherwise would not be able to afford one. A minority of 37 percent opposed such assistance, while 34 percent support such aid without restrictions, and 29 percent supported funding with certain restrictions.

I have opposed unreasonable restrictions on the availability of abortions. My opposition to legislative restrictions does not mean that I advocate indiscriminate abortions, nor does it mean that I support the use of abortions as a standard form of birth control. It does mean that I strongly believe this should be a woman's personal decision and I do not believe that any of us has the right to impose our values on the many women whose lives are affected by any legislative restrictions we enact.

I supported the language finally adopted last year which provided that funds could only be used for abortions when the mother's life is endangered, "where severe and long-lasting physical health damage to the mother would result if the pregnancy were carried to term, when so determined by two physicians," and for "medical procedures necessary for the victims of rape or incest, when such rape or incest has been reported promptly to a law enforcement agency or public health service."

It was clear that this was the best we could do after 5 months of heated debate over the issue. It was also clearly preferable to the original restriction proposed which would have allowed medicaid funding only when the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term. Yet, today we are faced once again with that highly restrictive language in the bill currently under consideration.

Despite the Supreme Court decision in 1973 granting women the right to an abortion, the restrictions proposed by the committee bill essentially would mean that we would be promoting a dual system of "equal protection" under the law—one for those who can afford the right and another for those who cannot. The Court has granted women the "right" but the committee language would have the effect of severely restricting access to that right for some.

Middle class and wealthy women would have access to abortions in the case of rape or incest. Poor women who must rely on medicaid funds would not.

Middle class and wealthy women would have access to abortions where the mother's life would be forever marred, where a woman would be maimed or crippled if she had to give birth. Poor women who need financial assistance would not.

We must recognize the fact that, even if we presumed to enact legislation to ban abortions outright, they would still take place. The difference is that those who could afford to would go where they are legal, as they did before the Supreme Court decision. And, those who could not afford to, would resort to back-alley abortions and increased risks of death or severe physical harm. At least by providing financial assistance, women have access to safe medical treatment and face far less of a risk to life and health.

It is because I respect and revere life and cannot justify the double standard which I have just outlined that I have opposed and will continue to oppose the severe limitations on Government funding which would cause thousands of women to face life-threatening illegal abortions. I hope, at the very least, we will retain the language which is current law. ●

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. WRIGHT).

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BAUMAN) there were—ayes 31, noes 40.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk continued to read the bill.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. WALKER

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WALKER: Page 46, immediately after line 12, insert the following new section:

"SEC. 410. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act may be obligated or expended in connection with the issuance, implementation, or enforcement of any rule, regulation, standard, guideline, recommendation, or order which includes any ratio, quota, or other numerical requirement related to race, creed, color, national origin, or sex, and which requires any individual or entity to take any action with respect to (1) the hiring or promotion policies or practices of such individual or entity, or (2) the admissions policies or practices of such individual or entity."

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to prohibit funding for any quota system within the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and the Department of Labor so that practices of reverse discrimination can be stopped. I am a supporter of the affirmative action concept when practiced in a nondiscriminatory fashion. This amendment in no way strikes out affirmative action programs. It is an attempt to take quotas out of the affirmative action concept.

Affirmative action should expand opportunities. Qualified minorities must be considered as an integral part of the hiring process and educational process. The Departments of Health, Education, and Welfare and Labor have an obligation of assuring minorities an equal opportunity in our schools, colleges, and the workplaces. However, quotas do not have to be used because any quota regardless of the purpose is discriminatory. The crudest form of discrimination is a quota system or an arbitrary numerical qualification that excludes people. Therefore, this amendment is antidiscriminatory in nature. It is an effort to assure continuance of those things we have always regarded as best within our society, namely: treatment of individuals as equal under law, not as nameless, faceless members of a group to be arbitrarily disadvantaged.

Presently, our Government is in a difficult situation as a result of quota usage. Programs within the Federal Government are now responsible for classifying people according to their ethnic background and race. This imposes a great burden upon such programs since they often must classify people in clear-cut categories where no clear-cut individual standing exists. The melting pot characteristic of our country has made it absurd in many instances to attempt to classify individuals. We have people with ethnic surnames with no real heritage in that ethnic background. Yet, quota policies now used could and would classify such persons based upon their names. Such policies bring us to the point of determining what percentage of one's bloodline must be used to qualify under quota guidelines. And when sexual quotas are included, you find that the policies can make real majorities into policy minorities for exclusionary purposes.

Granted there are people who definitely fall under one racial or ethnic category. However, in a pluralistic society what possible justification for quotas can there be for individuals who do not neatly fit into a particular classification? Should they be penalized by the quota system? To my way of thinking, their equality under law should not be challenged by a quota system. And what of those who can be neatly classified? Should we permit their abilities to be depreciated by the idea that their only qualification for advancement is based upon an artificial quota? I think not and I think the history of civil rights in our Nation agrees.

Back in 1964 when the Civil Rights Act of that year was passed, the late Senator Hubert Humphrey spoke to the quota issue. He said that he did not think the act required any employer to achieve racial balance in his work force by giving any kind of preferential treatment to any individual or group.

The American people have regularly had their say on this matter, too. Not long ago in a Gallup poll they said that 83 percent of them oppose the idea of preferential treatment through quotas including 64 percent of all nonwhites who oppose the quota concept.

The Supreme Court has spoken clearly over a long period. Justice Harlan in the Plessy against Ferguson decision wrote in this famous dissent, a dissent which became fundamental to Brown against the Board:

Our Constitution is color blind and neither knows nor tolerates classes among citizens.

Justice Douglas wrote a half century later:

There is no constitutional right for any race to be preferred.

Our amendment would wipe out quota systems now being employed. Quotas are a bureaucratic convenience. They are not a part of affirmative action. They are a way by which bureaucrats measure affirmative action, and in so doing, in making that kind of measurement, the bureaucrats have created a new form of discrimination no less insidious than the quotas in the past.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment gives us a chance to stop that kind of bureaucratic nonsense. It gives us a chance to stop calling discriminatory tools by other names. It seems that now is the time to put an end to quotas. I hope it deserves the support of my colleagues in the House.

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. LEVITAS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I would like to commend the gentleman on his amendment and state that the gentleman from Pennsylvania and I have worked on this amendment together, and it is my understanding that it is being offered on behalf of both of us.

Mr. WALKER. That is right.

Mr. LEVITAS. I would like to clarify one very crucial, important point on this amendment. Is it quite clear that this amendment would not abolish the opportunity for affirmative action programs which do not use numerical requirements?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

(At the request of Mr. LEVITAS, and by unanimous consent, Mr. WALKER was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. Yes; I will be glad to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. LEVITAS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

My question is, Is it quite clear that this amendment would not prohibit the use of affirmative action programs that do not rely upon or utilize numerical quotas, numerical ratios, or other numerical requirements, but could use such things as goals or timetables?

Mr. WALKER. I think that is very clear in this amendment. As a matter of fact, through this amendment we affirm affirmative action programs, because what we have had before this is primarily the executive orders that have created the programs. Through this approach we are now saying that the affirmative action programs could be employed, but they would not be able to use quota systems. I think that is a positive element to introduce into the affirmative action concept.

Mr. LEVITAS. I thank the gentleman. If the gentleman will yield further, in order to emphasize this point, is it not true, by way of legislative history, that this is substantially the amendment adopted by the House on this bill last year, and at that time an amendment was offered to strike out prohibition against goals and timetables; so it is quite clear that affirmative action has not been eliminated altogether but just the use of quotas, ratios, and other numerical requirements?

Mr. WALKER. The gentleman is absolutely right. As the gentleman well knows, it was he who offered it last year. We clarified the language, and came back with this amendment this year. It is in the same form in large part that passed the House last year by an overwhelming vote of the House.

Mr. LEVITAS. I thank the gentleman. I would like to commend the gentleman for offering this amendment which strikes the discrimination and does the very thing we want.

Mr. PURSELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. PURSELL. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the sponsor of the amendment what impact does the amendment have on universities within the context of those already having affirmative action programs in place and they are working very well and some that are not?

Mr. WALKER. The impact of this amendment would be felt only if such programs have an arbitrary quota as a part of the plan.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WALKER) has expired.

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words and I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I am fearful that the 195th Congress will still be wrestling with this kind of problem. I want to take some time, as I oppose this amendment, to offer some options so that the 195th Congress will still not be wrestling with this issue of quotas and goals and timetables.

It seems to me there are some options and I am going to lay them out and we can pick and choose among them.

Any number of groups benefit through affirmative action; blacks, Hispanics, women, and so forth; but I am just going to deal with the blacks today in terms of some options that might be offered, so that the 195th Congress will not have to debate with this issue. There is one option that is open to us. We can initiate legislative action to repeal the 13th amendment to the Constitution. That solves our problem. Repeal that amendment which ended slavery and banned involuntary servitude and the 195th Congress will not have to wrestle with this problem. That is one option.

Another option is that we can initiate legislative action to repeal the 14th amendment. If we do that, that takes away equal protection under the law. Solve that and we will not be debating the problem in the 195th Congress.

We can go on with the 13th, 14th, and 15th amendments. That is another option open to us. Take the right to vote away from us and we will not have this problem in the 195th Congress. I am certain there are other options. I am certain those I have suggested to this House are repugnant.

Another option might be some sort of ultimate solution to the "black problem" in America. Then the 195th Congress would not have to debate affirmative action. I do not think those options are attractive and I hope this House and this country have not yet reached the point where we would elect to pursue any of those options.

Rather than push for any of those repugnant, repulsive options, I would like to take the time to spell out why we have got to have affirmative action in terms of some sort of specific goals and timetables that involve numbers. I am not going to deal with education and labor for a start, because I want to treat the whole panoramic sweep of this Government in terms of what it does with regard to minorities and affirmative action, despite existing law.

I want to look at, first of all, a part of the whole picture. Let us take the National Endowment for the Arts, funded by us for the 1976 fiscal year. Under their program, they had architectural and environmental arts: $3.7 million given out in grants, and $159,000 given out to blacks.

If we deal with the educational programs under the National Endowment for the Arts, $5 million was given out in grants; $243,000 went to blacks.

In music, and those who hold to the old racial stereotypes that blacks are musically inclined should listen; in music a total of $32.5 million was given out in grants; $289,000 went to blacks.

They gave grants in the dance also. There are those who have the old racial stereotype that black folks are supposed to have this facility, but the National Endowment of the Arts does not think so, because they gave a total of $5.3 million in grants, and only $166,000 went to black groups.

The public media is the most disgraceful one; $11.7 million was given out in grants, and only $24,000 went to blacks. That is just one part of it.

Mr. WYDLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. I will yield to the gentleman in just a minute, after I have gone through my little scenario.

Mr. Chairman, what I am attempting to do is show that even this Government discriminates—and I am using the word deliberately—in the allocation of its resources, and unless we have some affirmative action programs targeted in terms of numerical goals, we will not end that discrimination.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. MITCHELL) has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, our Federal Government, in its procurement and contracting activities, contributes significantly to the economy of this Nation. I had a chance to examine the procurement and contracting records for every single agency of Government last year. I looked at every single one. Literally billions of dollars were spent, and there is not a single agency of Government that gives as much as 2 percent of its contracts to minorities.

I know we are dealing with education and labor, but this problem that we are specifically focusing on must be seen in the context of the whole exclusionary pattern that continues on the part of our Federal Government.

Let us leave the Federal Government for a moment and let us go to the private sector.

Mr. WYDLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. I yield very briefly to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WYDLER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is using an illustration of the amounts of particular programs, including amounts for the arts, as an illustration of what he apparently feels is unfair.

Is the gentleman suggesting that the awards that are made in the arts, no matter what program it is, be given on the basis of numerical quotas? Is that what the gentleman would like the Federal Government to do?

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. Mr.

Chairman, I will answer the question by saying that I am suggesting there has been a specific, ongoing, systematic pattern of exclusion of black grantees from this program, and the only way that is going to be undone or stopped is through some kind of affirmative action, and I am suggesting targeting.

Mr. WYDLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. I will not yield further at this point.

Mr. Chairman, let us go from the Government and look at the private sector. I had an opportunity to examine the procurement records of the top 100 defense contractors in this country, those companies that got the largest defense contracts. Of those top 100 companies, including Rockwell, Boeing and the rest of them, not a single one of them last year did as much as 1 percent of its contracting with minorities.

Mr. Chairman, I have laid all this out because I want to show that this is the climate in which we blacks and others operate, and it is the climate for education and labor. I suggest to my colleagues that it is not by accident that 45 percent of the black kids in Washington, in the District of Columbia, are unemployed. That is not by accident.

Do you mean to tell me that the majority of white kids in this city can get a job and 45 percent of the blacks cannot? It is not by accident that we rate twice as high in our unemployment rates, blacks as opposed to whites. That is not by accident.

I said in this House a few short weeks ago that we are abandoning the fight against unemployment for blacks because we have put white America back to work. We have put white America back to work because there is a tendency, a willingness, and a desire on the part of white employees to hire white people, despite title 7. We are not going to break that up unless we have some specific goals.

Mr. Chairman, I wish to make one or two other comments. I respectfully suggest to the Members that we may go ahead, as we probably will, and approve this pernicious amendment even before the Supreme Court acts on it, but we must remember that when we do, we will be giving some more thrust to those literally hundreds of educational institutions around the country that have already begun to retreat on affirmative action even before the Supreme Court has acted. That retreat means for me that there is no gut commitment to affirmative action, and, therefore, we find an absence of blacks in engineering and an absence of black doctors, an absence of blacks in the professional schools.

Let me tell the Members that two black institutions, Meharry Medical College and Howard Medical School, produced, between them, 90 percent of the black doctors practicing in America today.

Mr. CHARLES H. WILSON of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. CHARLES H. WILSON of California. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, may I say to my friend, the gentleman from Maryland, that I am not in disagreement with anything he said. I intend to support his position on this amendment. But the fact that the gentleman mentioned the name of Rockwell just a moment ago, I want to say that earlier this year, insofar as Rockwell is concerned, the black director of OMBE was in my district to present an award to Rockwell for the outstanding affirmative action they had. I do not remember what the percentages were that were involved, but I do know that in the case of just one company, as long as they were mentioned, I think that should be noted.

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. I think that is fair to make that statement.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. MITCHELL) has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, what the award was for in affirmative action, I do not know. It may have been in employment. But the record will show that Rockwell did not do even 1 percent of its subcontracting work with minorities last year. That record is indisputable. We blacks are not present in physics. We are not found in engineering. We are insufficient numbers in medicine. We have had a kind of closed system working that has excluded us.

Mr. Chairman, earlier on I indicated that already the colleges and universities that I know of are beginning to retreat on their affirmative action programs, even before the Court acts. That suggests, to me, that there is no desire, that there is no will, that there is no real sympathetic understanding that we have to be moved into these professional positions.

What else can I say to the Members? How can I make it any clearer, that this amendment—and I do not question the motivation of the two gentlemen offering it—merely becomes another step by means of which the anti-action, the subtle, more sophisticated anti-action against blacks, will be accelerated? Do not the Members see that this amendment plays right into the hands of those who are arguing in terms of tax revolt and everything else, arguing "that we have done too much for those people"? Do not the Members see that, even though the amendment may be well motivated, the net result will be that they are going to suggest to a greater part of white America, "Write them off," as was done for 50 years?

Mr. WYDLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WYDLER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I have the greatest respect for the gentleman and for the point he is making. Of course, I understand the problem that he is discussing. I know that he must feel, as a member of the black race, that the black people in our country are a deprived minority, not only in numbers but in jobs, advantages, and in opportunities. But I am going to suggest to the gentleman that, as alluring as a quick quota fix might be, the idea of setting racial quotas and the idea that that might help his people at this time in history, as alluring as that might be, it is the wrong concept, and in the long run it is going to hurt his people. I suggest that he think it through before he presents it to the House of Representatives.

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I will retrieve my time, and I thank the gentleman for his comments and his sage guidance that he is offering.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I submit again what I think is a completely understandable argument. I am suggesting to the Members that they are not going to move blacks or Hispanics, other minorities, and women, they are not going to move us from our present holding plateau level unless we have some affirmative action that has some targets, some timetables. It has to have a basis in numbers.

Mr. WYDLER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Walker-Levitas amendment. I do so with great respect for the gentleman who just spoke. I understand the way he sees the problem. He is willing to accept any solution to try to see that the people of his race advance in our country.

However, I am going to suggest to the House that the gentleman's view is wrong. It is just wrong on the merits, and it is shortsighted because, in the long run, this type of program is going to hurt the people of his race as it is going to hurt the people of most races in this country. That will happen if we allow this kind of quota system to start to generate itself in our Federal Government.

Mr. Chairman, we are letting it happen. We can hear it in this debate. They are already talking about letting out awards for the arts, for example, on a quota basis. They wonder why there is not enough money for one group or another in the arts. Where will it end? They are bringing it into every type of activity of the Federal Government. It is going to run through the Federal Government, and the day is going to come when there will be a righteous rise of indignation among people against this procedure.

Mr. Chairman, I will suggest to the gentleman something which I have seen, for example, in the city of New York. I would suggest to him that they are going to start fighting over the quotas between the blacks and the people of Puerto Rican extraction. Each one is going to demand a greater quota for his group. Then perhaps the oriental group will come in and they will demand a greater quota for their group.

Where is that kind of system going to lead? Where is that kind of system ever going to end? How can it, in the long run, do any of us in this country any good?

I am going to suggest to the gentleman the answer to the question he posed at the outset of his talk to this committee.

It was a good point he made, but I think he offered us all the wrong alternatives. He offered us the alternatives of doing away with various amendments of the Constitution or killing all the black people in the country. Those are not the solutions to the problem, and I do not think he is seriously suggesting to the members of this committee that that is the solution to those questions. I do not know why he puts the problem in those terms.

The solution is, of course, to give the people of every race in our country a chance, an opportunity. That is what they are entitled to have.

Mr. Chairman, I will agree with the gentleman that, yes, there has been plenty of past discrimination in our Nation. We know it was there. We know it still exists in many places today, but the way to get around that is not to say that we are going to hire so many of this race and so many of that race or that we are going to have so many contracts for this group or so many contracts for that group. The way to do it is to try to help those who have been discriminated against. We can do that.

Mr. Chairman, I am just going to give an illustration. In my own community of Nassau County, HEW came in and said they wanted an affirmative action program—that is what they called it—in the police department. Fine. They went ahead, and they tried to do it. They set up special programs for people so that they could take special courses to train for the police examinations. They did things of that nature, which were helpful. However, do the Members know that they have held up all the police tests or the promotions in that county until they set an actual quota to hire specific numbers of people of different races?

I say that is wrong. I say it will come back to haunt everybody.

Mr. Chairman, when they start counting the black faces in the room and they start counting the white faces in the room, it is going to hurt everyone, in the long run, despite the fact that some might think it might help.

Mr. Chairman, I suggest to the gentleman very sincerely because I know how he feels; I know the ache he must have in his heart that when he sees the conditions of some of the people of his race, but I suggest to him that in the long run he is doing the people of his race and all Americans, for that matter, a disservice by insisting on any kind of quota system in our country.

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WYDLER. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I would make two observations, if I may.

First, it is not a problem of counting the black faces in the room; it is the problem of counting the black faces not in the room, but in our professional schools.

The other observation I would like to make is that the gentleman is suggesting that if this approach is used, perhaps we might have to pay a price down at the end of the line.

Let us take a chance. I, for one, am willing to run the risk of paying that price rather than seeing this inequity continue to exist as it is today.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WYDLER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I would just like to point out that there are some black civil rights leaders who agree with the point the gentleman is making.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York (Mr. WYDLER) has expired.

(On request of Mr. WALKER and by unanimous consent, Mr. WYDLER was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. WYDLER. Yes, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, Bayard Rustin said not too long ago, at the University of Delaware, that he was "unalterably opposed" to quota systems. He said further that "power for religious and ethnic groups . . . relies on their ability to convince the majority that their cause is just and what they are asking for is sane."

Mr. Chairman, I think this is the kind of affirmative approach the gentleman and I were talking about.

I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. WYDLER. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. Again I urge my colleagues, do not go through this business of selectivity in quoting black leaders. One can always get somebody to say what one wants. Someone brought up CORE the other day. That is a dead organization.

The question is, I do not know whether this gentleman is viable or not, but for as many people the gentleman can cite, there are 100 others who will take my position. So, do not do the selectivity question. I think it deceives the House.

Mr. WYDLER. I cannot agree with the gentleman. I think Mr. Rustin is a well-known black leader, and his voice carries some weight in this country.

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words, and I rise in support of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment. What we are talking about is discrimination, pure and simple. For those of us who have fought discrimination in all of its forms, it is somewhat disturbing and it is somewhat heart-rendering to find that there are people who believe that discrimination can only affect or afflict certain people. But, let me state without a shadow of a doubt that the moment you have a quota, the moment you have a ratio, the moment you have a numerical requirement, you are not just including somebody—you are excluding somebody because of that person's race, because of that person's sex, or some other characteristic.

There are no two ways about it. We cannot let a quota exist that lets somebody in, which does not thereby rule somebody out. And, discrimination is discrimination. It is wrong in any form, whether we call it reverse discrimination or direct discrimination or what have you.

When a person, because of his or her sex or race, or religion or national origin, is eliminated and not even considered because of that factor, then our Government and our Constitution is no longer colorblind. Total equality of opportunity is what we have sought in many ways from the very earliest days of this Nation. It has not always been attainable. There have been times of indifference; there have been times when just the reverse occurred, and now in the modern time we clearly have a national commitment to eliminate all forms of discrimination.

But, in that process should we discriminate on the basis of race or on the basis of sex? Let me make it quite clear that there are no two ways about it—you set up a quota that puts somebody in, and you have set up a quota that, because of race or some other factor, keeps somebody out.

There is a necessity to do something about past injustices, and it should be done. There has been a period of our history, to our shame, in which every American did not have equal opportunity. For that reason, we should have programs that take this history into account in the sense that we may provide compensatory education, in the sense that we have specific efforts to look for those people who have not been searched for, and bring them into the work force and bring them into the schools. There are many ways in which affirmative action can be brought about without a discriminatory quota, and this amendment does not prohibit affirmative action which does not discriminate through quotas.

It does not prohibit trying to make up, but it says that—for example—the Vietnam veteran who never owned slaves, who never practiced Jim Crow, who comes back and because he happens to be a white male, because of a quota, is being discriminated against—it says, he cannot be made an innocent victim of discrimination.

In the long run the person who thinks that he is going to benefit from a quota ultimately becomes its victim, because that quota is not just inclusionary, it ultimately becomes exclusionary. It also becomes the maximum, not just the minimum.

In addition to that, the utilization of the quota places those people who get the job or get the admission on the basis of that quota in a position to feel that they have not been able to make it on their own but they are being given something for nothing. And I think that is destructive to them.

Let us see what the position of the administration is on the issue of numerical quotas. I have here a letter from the Assistant to the President for Domestic Affairs and Policies, Mr. Stuart E. Eizenstat, dated February 6, 1978. I will quote a portion of this letter from Mr. Eisenhower which says:

The President has stated that he favors affirmative action programs some of which may use goals and timetables to measure their effectiveness but opposes rigid exclusionary racial quotas. This remains his position.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. LEVITAS was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Chairman, I think that letter states a position which speaks to the question, the fundamental question of discrimination. If we are, indeed, opposed to discrimination—and I hope almost everyone is today—then we cannot countenance some discrimination. There are ways to rectify the past injustices through appropriate affirmative action but, my friends, to create two evils is wrong. Discrimination must be obliterated at every opportunity, and for us not to eliminate the pernicious practice of discriminatory quotas puts us on record as favoring some type of discrimination. I am opposed to that and I hope the Members of this House will join me in supporting the Walker-Levitas amendment.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. DON H. CLAUSEN was allowed to speak out of order.)

FUNDS AVAILABLE FOR THOSE PUT OUT OF WORK BY EXPANDING OF REDWOOD NATIONAL PARK

Mr. DON H. CLAUSEN. Mr. Chairman, I have taken this time to ask a question of the gentleman from California (Mr. PHILLIP BURTON) regarding funds available for those people who have been put out of work by the Government's action in expanding the Redwood National Park.

In the authorizing bill approved by the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, it was the committee's intention to minimize, to the greatest extent possible, the adverse impacts of park expansion. In doing so, the committee recognized and made provision for protecting the non-wage benefits of the affected workers—such as pension plans, health insurance, and so on.

Is it true that it was not our intention to disqualify a worker just because he worked for a company which did not have a pension plan?

Mr. PHILLIP BURTON. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. DON H. CLAUSEN. Is it true that the committee's intention in enacting section 209 of the expansion bill was that section 209 would apply to those who were younger than 54 years of age and who had worked for fewer than 5 years in the industry, whether or not they had a pension plan?

Mr. PHILLIP BURTON. The gentleman also is correct on that count.

Mr. DON H. CLAUSEN. Is it true, conversely, that the intention of the committee was that sections 207 and 208 are the governing sections for those affected employees who are over 54 years of age or who have 5 or more years of creditable service in the industry, whether or not they have 5 years of pension credits. Is it also correct that it was not the intention of the committee to remove any benefits from these long-term employees by subjecting them to coverage under section 209.

Mr. PHILLIP BURTON. The gentleman is correct. As the author of the bill and the one who drafted these sections personally, I assure the gentleman I am in full agreement with his statement.

Mr. DON H. CLAUSEN. I thank the gentleman and want to state once again for the record, the gentleman's diligence in fulfilling the commitments he made at the time the Redwood Park legislation was moving through the legislative process.

I thank the House for yielding me this time.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words, and I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WALKER).

Mr. Chairman, I believe that there can be no question as to the principle that is at the heart of the amendment introduced by the gentleman from Pennsylvania and cosponsored by the gentleman from Georgia. It is the old American principle of fair play.

I will not burden you with the long and lamentable history of the "goals and time tables" system, except to say, Congress has never authorized such a system. There has never been 1 minute of hearings looking into the desirability of such a system. Bureaucrats in HEW and the Labor Department created the goals and timetables system in direct contravention of the intentions of the Civil Rights Act. Debate during the passage of the first Civil Rights Act shows without question that the drafters of the act did not wish to see such a system imposed. Goals and timetables are an open scandal; they do not improve the life of those for whom they are intended and they are racially discriminatory against their victims.

This amendment would allow true affirmative action. Those who say that affirmative action programs must have goals or timetables or numerical equivalents are confusing equality of opportunity with equality of results. The Government can and should guarantee equality of opportunity. No one, especially the Government, can or should even try to guarantee equality of results.

Recently I read an article written by the distinguished scholar Thomas Sowell, of the University of California at Los Angeles. In part, this is what he said about goals and timetables and quotas and the whole idea of "compensatory" hiring and school placement:

The past is a great unchangeable fact. Nothing is going to undo its sufferings and injustices, whatever their magnitude. Statistical categories and historic labels may seem real to those inspired by words, but only living flesh-and-blood people can feel joy or pain. Neither the sins nor the sufferings of those now dead are within our power to change. Being honest and honorable with the people living in our own time is more than enough moral challenge, without indulging in illusions about rewriting moral history with numbers and categories.

Thomas Sowell is not only a distinguished professor—he is a black American. There is not a single person who has read or studied more about goals and timetables than Dr. Sowell has. He is against goals and timetables but he is for equal opportunity. He is against discrimination. So is the Walker-Levitas amendment and I urge my colleagues to join with those of us who are ready, now, to put an end to discrimination and go on to seeing that real equality of opportunity becomes a fact for all Americans.

HEW has long been stating that it does not apply "quotas." However, it does appear to like "ratios." Now, what the difference is between "quotas" and "ratios" is anybody's guess. They both involve racial or sexual percentages.

I suspect what HEW is doing is playing a semantical game with us. They feel free in opposing the use of "quotas," because they can apply "ratios," which in effect enables them to accomplish the same thing.

Let me read what Secretary Califano stated during our hearings:

To take an example, to correct past discrimination an employer may be required to adopt a corrective plan that speaks in terms of a "ratio", even though the remedy is stated as a goal to employ women and minorities. A "ratio" may also be a useful tool or index by which to determine an appropriate employment goal and measure progress toward meeting that goal. . . .

Further he said:

A ratio may also be a useful tool or index in determining what a useful "goal" might be. Any projection of "goals" or any assessment of progress toward compliance must, of necessity, assume a "numerical" or qualitative cost of evaluations of progress by HEW or indeed any other agency are to be meaningful.

The fact is that HEW is imposing quotas under other guises. If we thus feel that action against discrimination should take place without the imposition of quotas, we should support this amendment to really insure that such is the case.

Mrs. FENWICK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this amendment. I do not think that anybody would say, "I believe in rigid and absolutely determined quotas, and we will have them, whether for women or for blacks or for Indians or for orientals, or for any one of a number of groups." But neither do I feel that to vote for this amendment is a wise and prudent and proper thing to do. We are sending a signal which we should not be sending. We are saying something we should not be saying, which is that wherever there has been some flexibility, some interest, some concern for our fellow citizens, we are going to say, "Stop." What we have been trying to do is to make sure that our fellow citizens are given for once a fair chance.

The quotas we have have not been adhered to. We do not see that many black faces in every single one of the areas of life. We have had targets or goals or hopes, and we have got to keep them. We cannot turn our backs now and say that we are going to adopt something that is going to remove any kind of numerical target or goal. They may not always be met. I am sorry to say I do not think they will be, but we have an ideal in mind. We have a vision of a more just society, and this is what we are turning our backs on.

We have conceived of a place on Earth where people will not be so hurt and so damaged. With this amendment we are moving away and backward, and turning our backs on that vision. It is not right. It is not that time of day. We have got to realize what time of day it is in the world, not just in America, but everywhere.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words, and I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, there is obviously a great deal of confusion regarding this amendment. One just has to listen to the last few moments of debate to know that there are those who think this amendment means the end of affirmative action, or those who think it means the end of goals and timetables, and there are those who think it does not mean the end of goals and timetables but the end of quotas. The fact is that this amendment is not necessary. It is not necessary for several reasons. The first is with regard to the present law dealing with affirmative action itself. Affirmative action did not fall from the sky, nor was it developed in the bowels of the bureaucracy. It was developed essentially by the courts in response to discrimination. Where discrimination was found in a school system, in higher education, wherever it was found, a remedy had to be provided to break down the barriers of discrimination, of segregation. One way to remedy discrimination is through affirmative action. That was the remedy. We do not have a right in our process of government, we do not have a right under our Constitution unless we have a remedy, and if discrimination is found within a system, the remedy is affirmative action. That is what the courts have applied. It is essentially what HEW has had to apply under the law.

What kind of affirmative action are we talking about? We are not talking about set quotas. Let us understand that. Courts have made very clear that we cannot implement specific quotas, but we can implement goals and timetables. What is the difference? A quota is a specific goal. If you do not reach it, you are in violation of your affirmative action plan. If you have a broad goal or timetable, if you do not reach that particular goal, you may not necessarily be in violation of your affirmative action plan, but you are moving toward a particular goal. That is the essence of affirmative action. So do not stand here and say you are against discrimination if you are not for affirmative action, or for goals and timetables to implement affirmative action.

This amendment is not necessary. The present law is quite clear. Quotas are not required. If you are against discrimination you have to be for affirmative action, and you have to be against this amendment.

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PANETTA. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman raises an interesting point, but I am not sure the gentleman is correct in saying the courts have ultimately ruled against quotas. I think, of course, that is the issue in the Bakke case; but as I understand, the courts, the governmental agencies in this country, particularly HEW, have repeatedly in defining goals specifically pointed to specific ratios, specific numerical numbers.

Now, I agree with the gentleman, there has got to be a remedy; but I am not sure I totally agree with what the courts have said.

Mr. PANETTA. Well, with regard to the Philadelphia plan, which was one of the original affirmative action plans designed, the court made clear they do not accept numerical quotas, but they do affirm broad goals and timetables. HEW says the same thing. Mr. Califano says the same thing. Everyone is against quotas, but that does not mean you are against goals and timetables, or you undermine any kind of affirmative action.

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield further, as I understand the gentleman's amendment does not eliminate numbers or timetables, at least in the legislative history. The gentleman wants to proceed with affirmative goals and timetables or with quotas, but not with specific numerical ratios.

Mr. PANETTA. That is the question that arises because of the use of the term "ratio." I am not sure whether the use of the term "ratio" is eliminating any kind of figure that can be achieved through affirmative action.

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield further, does the gentleman believe a party would have a legal right of action against say a company or some particular group in our society who did not comply with the affirmative action program if there was a prohibition against the use of quotas; that is, if I were a company that had an affirmative action plan and HEW told me to develop it and I did not do anything with it, but there were no quotas on the books, could I be sued?

Mr. PANETTA. You do not have an affirmative action plan unless you have a plan to hire in a particular year. The sole purpose is to try to remedy the obvious discrimination that has taken place.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California (Mr. PANETTA) has expired.

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from California (Mr. PANETTA) may proceed for an additional 2 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I have noticed that everyone who spoke on this amendment spoke on it last year and nothing has changed.

I ask that after I remove my reservation that the Chairman will put a time limit on the rest of this debate.

Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Chairman, further reserving the right to object to this quota system, I did not object when the gentleman from Maryland extended his time to 13 minutes.

I have an amendment. I do not want to be taken off my feet.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman should be given 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LEVITAS) that the gentleman from California (Mr. PANETTA) be recognized for an additional 2 minutes?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PANETTA. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I realize this is an emotional question and perhaps should be an emotional question, but I fear it is also quite important to make it crystal clear that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania and myself, both in terms of its legislative history last year and in terms of the legislative history this year, does not prohibit affirmative action. In fact, an amendment will soon be offered that will prohibit affirmative action, nor does it eliminate the opportunity to use goals and timetables in accomplishing affirmative action.

All the gentleman from Pennsylvania and I are trying to do is to eliminate the inherently discriminatory practice of numerical quotas, numerical ratios and other numerical requirements.

I think it is important that the record be quite clear on this, so that it is not interpreted to do what the gentleman suggests it might do and cause some confusion on the part of some of us.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman making the record clear, because it is very important on the issue of goals and timetables. Again, if that is the case, I do not think this amendment is necessary, because the present law in effect carries out the stated intent of the authors of this amendment.

Mr. WYDLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PANETTA. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WYDLER. Mr. Chairman, I understand the gentleman to say it is not necessary, but it cannot do any harm. The gentleman says he thinks it is right, so why not pass it and make sure that what he thinks is right is right.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. ASHBROOK AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. WALKER

Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment as a substitute for the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ASHBROOK as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. WALKER: On page 46, immediately after line 122, add the following new section:

"SEC. 410. None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used to initiate, carry out or enforce any program of affirmative action or any other system of quotas or goals in regard to admission policies or employment practices which encourage or require any discrimination on the basis of race, creed, religion, sex or age."

Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Chairman, following up on the statement made by my colleague and friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts, let me say that he is right. This is the same amendment that was offered on June 17, 1977, and it appears on page 19715 of the RECORD.

The gentleman is also right in this: Many of us are making the same statements pro and con as before.

I would particularly like to direct my remarks to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood) who opposed my amendment the last time because, as he said, it was very complicated and far-reaching and he did not fully understand it. The gentleman has had a year since that time to examine it, and I am sure he has read the amendment and understands it by now. The difference between my amendment and the Walker amendment, as the sponsor indicates, is that his amendment would allow affirmative action but somehow or other cut out numerical goals. If anyone can figure out how to accomplish that, I would like to know that.

My amendment flatly prohibits affirmative action programs or any system of quotas and goals.

In the real world we know what we are dealing with, but as legislators these facts may not be apparent. I will give the Members an example. I have had dozens of these examples I could recite.

A small businessman in Ohio had a contract. The contract was bounced. He had four categories of employees. He has a total of 127 employees. Companywide, he is more than in compliance. He has 19 percent minority workers, he has 127 employees, and he has 7 jobs going at the same time. On this one job he had 40 hours of supervisory help, with 18 percent minority; cement masons, 120 hours, 20 percent minority; laborers, 70 hours, with 14 percent minority, the lowest number; and truck drivers, 30 hours, zero minority. So they bounced him.

Why? He has four truckdrivers; two are white, and two are black. He has seven jobs going at the same time. One does not have to be a Phi Beta Kappa to figure out that if he has 100 percent black employees on one job, he may have 100 percent white employees on another job. Yet our bureaucrats said he is not in compliance, that he does not meet the numerical goals.

What we are talking about is what happens in the real world. The bureaucracy has imposed impossible standards, standards that are impossible to follow by the average businessman. This was a man who really tried to comply. Overall he had almost 20 percent minority employees.

Let us look at what has happened. I think my colleague, the gentleman from Illinois, successfully indicated the history. The Congress has not authorized affirmative action. Title 7 had one specific goal, and that was to say that an employer could not discriminate. You have categories A, B, C, and D, and when men come in, white or black, you are supposed to treat them equally. That is fine. But after that happened, the bureaucrats went one step further.

Now they said, "Oh, no, now it isn't a question of somebody coming to you. You not only are not allowed to discriminate against them, but you have to leave your office and go out and find these people." That is where affirmative action started.

The next step is this: They say, "Wait a second. You not only have to be fair to the people who come through your door but you have to go out and seek minorities, and also you have to go out and seek a specific number of minorities that we are setting out as far as the numerical quota is concerned. So you not only have to treat people fairly but you have to go out and find them."

There are many horror stories. I heard one in Rittman, Ohio. One man had to hire three people who did no work just so he could meet a quota. That contractor said, "I'm tired of trying to find these people. I will just hire three in order to be in compliance, put them down on the list and pay them. I will get the people even if they don't do any work."

That is what happens in the real world with affirmative action, all the statements to the contrary notwithstanding.

Now we are talking about quotas and ratios. We are talking about an additional plateau, numerical timetables and goals.

Let me read to the Members what the Secretary of HEW has said. If this is not a distinction without a difference, I do not know what is. I quote directly from Secretary Califano, as follows:

... If we are serious about doing that—

"That" being full participation—

we must have a way to measure our progress. I know the danger and potential for injustice that are inherent in any system of rigid arbitrary long term quotas . . . arbitrary quotas will not be a part of our enforcement program, we want to rely on the good faith and special effort of all who join in the final march against discrimination.

But we will also rely—because we must rely—on numerical goals as benchmarks of progress . . . Employment goals provide objective benchmarks to measure the progress of affirmative action programs.

Flat out, he is telling us that we can say all we want, but if we are going to affirmative action, one way or another it is a question of semantics and we are going to have quotas.

Mr. Chairman, that is why I think my amendment is a necessary amendment to address this evil. Yes, it is an evil of discrimination. We are addressing the evil of discrimination, because reverse discrimination is just that.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the pending amendment and all amendments thereto conclude in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Members standing at the time the unanimous-consent request was agreed to will be recognized for 1 minute each.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. OBEY and Mr. CONTE yielded their time to Mr. FLOOD.)

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood).

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, the reason I made my unanimous-consent request to limit discussion about these amendments is that we went through this last year, and with just about the same Members. The amendment is similar to that offered last year. The one last year was rewritten on the floor several times. It was passed by a voice vote. Of course, it went out of the final bill. The problem I had then, with an amendment like this, is the same problem I have now. We simply cannot resolve a complex civil rights problem by attaching some language to an appropriation bill. That cannot be done. I am sure that the sponsor of the amendment knows what is intended by the language of this amendment.

But the effect of the language may be quite different. For example, the amendment refers to compliance with any ratio, quota, or other numerical requirement related to race, creed, color, or national origin or sex. It is just not clear what specific civil rights enforcement activities are intended to be prohibited. It could have the effect of preventing HEW from complying with court-ordered desegregation plans.

If the gentleman is trying to prevent the use of quota systems, then the amendment is really not necessary. Labor and HEW do not impose quotas or anything like quotas. Two years ago Congress passed a law which effectively prohibits HEW from imposing quotas in higher education programs. If you want to pass another law concerning quotas, then it should be done in a legislative bill—not by a floor amendment to an appropriation bill.

Mr. Chairman, I can understand the gentleman's concern about quota systems. But this is a complex subject. This is not the time nor the place to deal with that kind of a subject. This substitute amendment will not solve the problem of quotas. If anything, as has been proved here today, it will add to the confusion, confusion, confusion that already exists.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York (Mr. WYDLER).

Mr. WYDLER. Mr. Chairman, I find what the chair, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood) said a little strange, to say the least. Although I would agree with him that it is not the best way to do it, it seems to me that it may be one of the only ways to do it.

The Chairman did not seem to take this attitude at all just a half an hour or an hour ago on the floor of this House when we were debating and determining the abortion issue.

Certainly there is no more involved emotional, complex issue than that. However, he seemed to feel that this was a good place in which to deal with that issue. I agree that this is not the best place in which to deal with it, but we do not have any other forum, Mr. Chairman; and I suggest that this committee deal with both of those complex issues by using the best method we have in which to do it and supporting the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LEVITAS).

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Chairman, I urge the adoption of the Walker-Levitas amendments, and I urge the defeat of the Ashbrook substitute. The Walker-Levitas amendment provides for the elimination of discrimination, including the elimination of reverse discrimination. It also permits the opportunity to correct past injustices through the use of proper affirmative action programs that don't use quotas.

Mr. Chairman, as the President of the United States has said, he favors appropriate affirmative action programs; but he is opposed to rigid numerical requirements.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I ask that we defeat the Ashbrook amendment and adopt the Walker-Levitas amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. McKINNEY).

Mr. McKINNEY. Mr. Chairman, I would just suggest to my colleagues that all of us are aware of the abuses of the bureaucracy in this country. Over the last 2 weeks, for example, I have been trying to get a reasonable answer for my cities of Norwalk and Stamford, but I would also suggest that if either one of these amendments passes, we are turning around to the United States any saying. "It is all over. We are not going to try."

Mr. Chairman, I think in this country we are trying to do something. We are fumbling. We are making mistakes, but we are trying to show that we really believe that people are people, regardless of race, color, or creed.

Mr. Chairman, to pass either one of these amendments would be to go against everything we have tried to build over the last 20 years, and I strongly support their defeat.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WALKER).

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I strongly urge my colleagues to reject the Ashbrook amendment to my amendment and adopt the Walker-Levitas amendment as a way of ending reverse discrimination, as practiced by the Departments of Health, Education, and Welfare and of Labor.

The chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood), made mention of the fact that a quota amendment was passed to a higher education bill a couple of years ago. He is absolutely right; and so far, HEW has shown that it will absolutely do nothing about that quota amendment. There are not even regulations for it.

Mr. Chairman, I think it is high time that this House does adopt some kind of language to show the bureaucrats we mean business in terms of quotas. This is the place in which we can do that. This is the forum we have, and it seems to me that the opposition to this amendment has made it clear that they think this is an important thrust.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I would ask my colleagues to join with me and do something in this House to show that we will not permit quotas to continue to be practiced.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. ASHBROOK).

Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Chairman, I think our chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood), has pretty well set it out when he said it will not solve the problems of quotas. Perhaps it will not. It certainly will start moving us in the right direction.

Our colleague, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. McKINNEY), said that what we have done over the last 20 years we can be reasonably proud of.

I would just like to have us vote on that basis. If the Members are reasonably proud of what has been accomplished by bureaucracy in the last 20 years, I would say vote down my amendment.

There is a very clear distinction. My colleague and friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WALKER), believes in affirmative action, but does not want quotas in America or numerical goals. I suggest that that is a distinction without a difference. We cannot have affirmative action without numerical goals unless we are engaging in some kind of semantics.

Mr. Chairman, my amendment, pure and simple, is opposed to affirmative action.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. MITCHELL) to close debate.

Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I would, of course, oppose both amendments.

However, I say to the Members who plan to vote for either one, vote for the Ashbrook amendment. It is more honest. It simply comes out and says, "This is where we stand. We are going to turn back the clock, and if you do not like it, that is too bad."

Mr. Chairman, that is open and honest, as opposed to the kind of more deceptive amendment offered by my colleagues, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WALKER) and the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LEVITAS). That is the more dangerous amendment because it perpetuates the illusion that something is being done when, in fact, the amendment is stopping affirmative action.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I say to the Members who are going to vote for either amendment, vote "yea" on the Ashbrook amendment. Vote his amendment up.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. ASHBROOK) as a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WALKER).

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. ASHBROOK) there were—ayes 8; noes 54.

So the amendment offered as a substitute for the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WALKER).

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I demand a record vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 232, noes 177, not voting 25, as follows:

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Hughes for, with Mr. Conyers against.
Mr. Le Fante for, with Mr. Jenrette against.
Mr. Nedzi for, with Mrs. Burke of California against.
Mr. Dent for, with Mr. Edwards of California against.

Messrs. HOWARD, QUILLEN, GUDGER, JONES of Tennessee, FOLEY, McCORMACK, NOWAK, DICKS, and WAXMAN changed their votes from "no" to "aye."

Mr. KASTEN and Mr. FISH changed their votes from "aye" to "no."

So the amendment was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, last week when the Symms amendment was offered to cut OSHA appropriations back to last year's level, I voted for that amendment, as did many of the rest of us.

In my case, the vote to curb the appropriation was an instinctive reaction to the enormous number of complaints which have attended the needlessly complex and sometimes arrogant manner in which the enforcement activities of that agency have been administered in the past.

Now, ironically, it develops that the funds which that amendment would deny were earmarked for activities expressly designed to correct those very inequities.

Since the time of that vote, I have had careful conversations with Dr. Eula Bingham, Assistant Secretary of Labor who now administers the OSHA program and with Members of the House familiar with its current administration. I am advised that the extra funds requested by the administration this year are for two express purposes.

First, those funds would be used to train inspectors in the gentler arts of treating the small businessmen of our country with the respect which is their rightful due as citizens. Second, they would be used for individual consultation services available to small businessmen upon their request.

Specifically, I am told that most of the additional amount requested is for the purpose of an informational campaign aimed at helping businessmen to comply with the provisions of the law, not entrapping them into situations of noncompliance.

One of the most salutary developments in government has been the work of Dr.

Bingham, carried out at the insistence of the President, which has resulted in reducing the redtape and eliminating 1,100 needless regulations—picayune regulations which had confused and frustrated many small businessmen in their well-intentioned efforts to comply with this law.

The elimination of these ridiculously detailed regulatory guidelines is an example which needs to be followed by many other arms of administrative government.

In addition to this, we all recall, of course, that Congress enacted a special law to require OSHA inspectors to give small businessmen ample opportunity to come into voluntary compliance, and prohibiting the imposition of citations or penalties upon the initial discovery of noncomplying conditions, and this bill contains language reinforcing that provision.

That, too, ought to be a guide for every agency which enforces regulations upon the law-abiding citizens of this country. It is much more harmonious with the principles of a free society.

In view of these circumstances, I am told that a separate vote will be demanded in the House on that amendment, adopted in the Committee of the Whole, by which we voted to reduce funds which now turn out to have been earmarked for improved administration.

In recognition of what appears to be an earnest effort to reform the offensive practices of the past, and the recognition of the genuine importance of this activity aimed at protecting American workmen from genuinely unsafe conditions, I intend now to oppose the amendment for which I and others earlier voted.

I call upon my colleagues to take another, more careful look at the sincere attempts of our present administrators to carry out congressional intent, and to join me in voting to restore these particular funds in order that this may be done.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I think the committee last week made a wise choice. I compliment the committee for its vote. The issue was decided correctly.

The distinguished majority leader, the gentleman from Fort Worth, Tex. (Mr. WRIGHT), makes an articulate argument, but those arguments were all made in committee, and the vote has been taken. Now we are in a position where, if we reverse our votes, we are adding some $28 million to $30 million back in the bill, going against the wishes, I think, of the taxpayers of this country to eliminate excessive regulation and taxation. What we are doing here today, if we have another vote on this amendment and if the Members do change their votes, is reversing what I think was a wise decision.

Most of the Members were here on the floor and heard the debate. They have already made up their minds, and I would encourage the Members to stay with their position. Many of those who now would like to have been in the column shown as voting for an amendment which would restrain OSHA somewhat—and this is not going to leave OSHA without money, incidentally—may want to take another look at the amendment. We would like to invite those Members onto the winning bandwagon so they can be on the side of cutting money out of OSHA.

There is going to be $139 million in this bill to run this agency. That is a fairly good sum of money, and there is no reason why Dr. Eula Bingham cannot carry out her intentions with that $139 million. She does not need, in my opinion and in the opinion of the committee, this $28.5 million that would be put back into the bill, if my amendment is defeated.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SYMMS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. Mr. Chairman, I would like to respond to our colleague, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. WRIGHT), who, I think, voted properly the other day when he voted for the Symms amendment.

The argument is now made by Mr. WRIGHT that there is a need for new inspection officers in OSHA.

The argument is wrong and not proven to be so even by the record. Presently OSHA has unfilled positions in the compliance officer category. The gentleman from Texas said that part of the reason for the increase in the 1979 appropriation was for new inspection officers. Congress has given OSHA an authorized level of 1,650 compliance officers. But OSHA has only hired 1,531. So this argument that they suddenly need to expand the number of inspection officers is not true. I urge my colleagues not to be persuaded by that argument.

Let me make a second point. When we passed this law originally—and I remember the arguments very well, as many of the Members do—we were told that OSHA would help to persuade the several States to do a better job of implementing safety and health regulations. Most States have done that. The reason we do not need to increase the amount of money spent for OSHA over the 1978 appropriation is because most States have done the job in complying with the original request of the Congress to implement good State laws. They have done that. We do not need to expand the Federal bureaucracy in this area. So do not be persuaded that there is a desperate need to expand OSHA's expenditures. I urge my colleagues to stay with the Symms amendment.

Mr. SYMMS. I thank the gentleman for his remarks.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I know the House wants to vote. I do too. I will take 1 minute. I simply want to make three statements.

No. 1, there is no amount in the amendment being talked about by the majority leader for additional inspectors.

There are no additional inspectors above last year's amount in that amendment.

No. 2, the State programs that the gentleman just referred to, which he is so strongly in favor of, are funded to the tune of $8.4 billion in the amendment that the gentleman from Texas, the majority leader, has supported. I urge the Members to support the position of the majority leader when a separate vote is voted on in the House.

Mr. RISENHOOVER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. RISENHOOVER was allowed to speak out of order.)

ANNUAL FLAG DAY CEREMONY

Mr. RISENHOOVER. Mr. Chairman, I take this time very briefly here to advise the Members that tomorrow, at 12 o'clock, the House will conduct its annual Flag Day ceremony. Members may bring their families on the floor. Dr. Oral Roberts will be our guest speaker. We will be honoring the Nation's astronauts and the gentleman from Texas (TIGER TEAGUE), chairman of the Committee on Science and Technology, on the 20th anniversary of NASA.

I would like to inform all of the Members that there will be a whip call about 10 minutes before the ceremony starts. If the gallery and the Chamber are not full, we will allow the staff members to come in and fill up the gallery space and the space on the floor.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MILLER OF OHIO

Mr. MILLER of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MILLER of Ohio: On page 46 after line 12, insert the following paragraph:

Sec. 411. "Of the total budget authority provided in this Act, for payments not required by law, two per centum shall be withheld from obligation and expenditure; provided, that of the amount provided in this Act for each appropriation account, activity, and project, for payments not required by law, the amount withheld shall not exceed five per centum."

Mr. MILLER of Ohio. Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee, as many Members are aware, I have over the last several years offered 5 percent cuts in appropriations bills.

This is a 2-percent cut. We had approximately a 3-percent cut when the Michel amendment reduction of $1 billion was made. In the nonmandatory spending items we would have a 5-percent reduction amounting to $1.8 billion. Therefore, with the Michel amendment of $1 billion removed from the bill, the 2-percent cut would allow the $800 million reduction, which comes out to a total reduction of 5 percent. That is the purpose of changing this amendment from 5 to 2 percent.

Mr. Chairman, almost everyone is concerned today about the explosive cost of government. The vote in California Tuesday on proposition 13 underscores what the public thinks.

Mr. Chairman, this is the 25th anniversary of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. What has happened to this particular Federal department should give us concern about the alarming growth of the Federal Government.

Mr. Chairman, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare started out in 1954 with an annual budget of $1.9 billion. The budget today for HEW is the third largest budget in the world, surpassed only by the budgets of the U.S. Government and the Soviet Government. It is even larger than the combined budgets of all 50 States by some $50 billion. Mr. Chairman, $1 out of every $3 spent by the Federal Government goes to this bureaucracy.

Twenty-five years ago HEW employed 37,000 persons, but today it employs 157,000 people.

Today we are paying interest on our national debt to nations that have loaned us money; and I think it is important that we at least attempt to reduce one of the largest budgets that we have in the Federal bureaucracy, the HEW budget.

Mr. Chairman, I would urge the Members to support the 2-percent reduction.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio to cut 2 percent of the controllable costs of this Labor-HEW bill. This ladies and gentleman is again attempting to lower the meat-axe into but another appropriations bill. This time he would strike at programs directly designed to improve the employment, health, education and welfare of millions of Americans. As has been pointed out many times with respect to Mr. MILLER's amendments, this approach gives control of the budget-cutting process to the less-than-sage budget cutters downtown. Moreover, it would appear that this action is in addition to the more sensible budget cut of $1 billion offered by my friend from Illinois (Mr. MICHEL) which attacks fraud and abuse. The amendment of the gentleman from Ohio does not require concentration on fraud and abuse. It can be directed against innovation and against programs which the subcommittee, after months of deliberation, found deserving of additional support.

It should be made clear that although this amendment is directed against controllable cost only, no small piece of change is involved. His amendment amounts to roughly $800 million.

Just where would this cut come? Would it be in the basic opportunity grants program, the title I elementary and secondary education account, or perhaps health resource funding but research in cancer, heart, lung, arthritis, child beating? Would other programs be impacted? Would it be a little bit of each?

This body does not know and I have a feeling it would not like to find out. It is much easier to make anonymous cuts.

While I fully agree that this body should respect the message sent by the voters of California that they would like to see less Government intrusion in their lives, we should not misinterpret that message. It is not a bugle call to tear down fresh attempts and proven programs dealing with problems involving the blight of illness, poverty and lack of educational benefits.

Our burden as legislators is to make Government work for the people, rather than against them. I believe this bill accomplishes the latter goal.

Perhaps the time has come for us to run a tighter ship with regard to expenditures, but the slash-the-cash approach suggested by the gentleman from Ohio is not the way to go.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition, of course, to the amendment. Here is act II, scene I. This, Mr. Chairman, is the classic meat-ax.

You have heard the gentleman say sometimes a 2-, sometimes a 5-, sometimes a 10-percent cut in appropriated funds. Just cut everybody across the board, no matter how important. That is no problem. Never mind about the program, just make the cut.

Now, here are programs which affect every man, woman, and child in the Nation. So you want to "Cut NIH medical research; or cut programs for the handicapped?" Ai-yi-yi.

Cut, if you are not busy, mental health programs. I have two opinions about that.

Cut—here we break down and cry—maternal and child health. All right, if we do not want to do that, then cut the whole National Health Service Corps. What is the matter with that? Cut the whole thing. All right, let us cut vocational education—ever hear about that? As I look around the room, I see Members representing certain towns and certain cities and certain areas—wait until you hear this one; hold your hat. Cut Impact aid.

Now Mr. Chairman, I know whereof I speak. This committee has been working on this bill since January, and the committee has examined each program comma by comma, item by item. Some programs were increased—what is the matter with that? Some were decreased—sure. We listened to most Members of the House anyhow.

The amendment now proposed will undo all the work put into this very, very large and very complicated Labor-HEW appropriation bill, the one you hear about all the time. The bill already has arbitrarily been cut $1 billion.

I urge the defeat of this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. PATTISON of New York). The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. MILLER).

The question was taken; and the Chairman pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. MILLER of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

Mr. CARTER changed his vote from "aye" to "no."

Mr. WYDLER, Mrs. LLOYD of Tennessee and Mr. KREBS changed their vote from "no" to "aye."

So the amendment was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk concluded the reading of the bill.

● Mr. GIAIMO. Mr. Chairman, I would like to inform my colleagues how this bill making appropriations for Labor-HEW compares to the first budget resolution for fiscal year 1979.

This bill includes budget authority of approximately $58 billion, with estimated outlays of $43.4 billion. The bill is thus below the targets established by the Appropriations Committee for the Labor-HEW Subcommittee by $24.3 billion in budget authority and $41.4 billion in outlays. When we add to the amounts in this bill amounts previously enacted or having passed the House, the bill is still below the targets by $24.2 billion in budget authority and $20.5 billion in outlays.

A substantial portion of the budget for Labor and HEW was not considered by the Appropriations Committee and is not contained in this bill because it is either unauthorized or is a new initiative requiring legislation. For example, existing programs requiring reauthorization include CETA—the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, vocational rehabilitation, older Americans, programs in the Action Agency and in the Community Services Administration, Head Start, and a large number of health service and training programs. Similarly, several new initiatives are very likely, including improved child health benefits under Medicaid, expansion of the title I elementary and secondary education program, reimbursement to States for pre-1975 social service claims, expansion of title XX social services, child welfare programs, and fiscal relief to States for welfare costs. Additionally, the first budget resolution assumed that there would be a general fund payment to the Medicare trust fund because of a rollback in social security taxes.

A conclusive projection of how total and final Labor-HEW appropriations will compare with the amounts assumed in the resolution is thus very difficult because of the substantial share of legislation yet to be considered. However, if the legislation requiring reauthorization and legislation authorizing new initiatives are funded at the levels assumed in the first budget resolution, the targets will be exceeded by $304 million in budget authority and $125 million in outlays. The potential budget authority overage consists of $155 million in function 500—education, training, employment, and social services; $27 million in function 550—health; and $122 million in function 600—income security. I must emphasize, however, the very tentative nature of this projection, given the huge amount of legislation yet to be considered. Also, to put the possible overage in perspective, I note that the possible overage is only $304 million, whereas the amounts assumed in the resolution but not yet considered sum to $25.3 billion. It is certainly quite possible that the appropriations committee will find $304 million in reductions out of a total of $25.3 billion. Moreover, $100 million of this possible $304 million overage is simply due to differing estimates of requirements for the black lung program, and has no impact whatsoever on the deficit.

Several adjustments had to be made to the subcommittee targets in making this projection in order to assure comparability with assumptions in the budget resolution.

First, an adjustment of $96 million was made with respect to the unemployment compensation trust fund to reflect this amount of offsetting receipts which do not show up in the bill.

Second, an adjustment of $677 million was made to show amounts required to fully fund the Middle-Income Student Assistance Act. While the conference version of the resolution includes only one-half of the amounts to fully fund tuition tax credits or the Middle-Income Student Assistance Act, the conference report indicated neutrality on this issue and assured that full funding would be provided in the second resolution to whichever approach was finally adopted.

In order to continue this neutrality and to leave all options open until the Congress has resolved this issue, we make this adjustment in the targets. ●

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment proposed by the Congressman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WALKER).

Others with greater expertise than my own can address the legal ramifications of this amendment. I would like to speak of its effect upon my people.

For years we have had to struggle against overt discrimination in every aspect of our lives: education, housing, employment. It took the lives of many innocent people and the tumultuous riots of the 1960's to raise consciousness of many Americans as to the injustices suffered by blacks, Hispanics and our own American Indian.

Now we are facing a problem that may revert our lives to those past experiences. We all know that minorities are underrepresented in institutions of higher education, as well as in Government. Colleges as well as the Government put great emphasis on the results of standard tests in their evaluation of potential students or candidates. Yet it is a well known fact that minorities score lower on standard tests than the average non-minority person, not necessarily due to lower motivation or qualifications, but only as a result of the quality of education that they have been exposed to. (As a matter of fact, questions are being raised as to the validity of the results of these tests as applied to minorities.) This situation clearly places minorities at a disadvantage.

I therefore believe that special admissions and hiring practices are the only way to insure a true participation of minorities in the educational system as well as in the work force. Thus, Mr. Chairmen, this amendment must be defeated.

● Mrs. COLLINS of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I opposed the Walker amendment which was designed to prohibit the funds in this bill from being used to implement affirmative action programs based on quota systems for the purpose of the admission, hiring, and promotion of minorities by institutions of higher education.

Not only does this amendment violate the spirit and intent of affirmative action as interpreted by both Congress and the courts since the passage of the 14th amendment to our Constitution in 1866 it is also an ill-timed attempt to preempt the Supreme Court's forthcoming decision in the case of Bakke against Regents of the University of California. Adoption of this amendment would represent a landmark setback for the civil rights of black Americans since it would jeopardize the most important vehicle of equal opportunity for blacks and other minorities in the history of this country: higher education.

Everyone knows that jobs and income are both closely related to education, and it is in the field of education that blacks have made their biggest strides. The number of black college students has more than doubled in the last 10 years and today blacks make up 10.7 percent of the total college enrollment, only one point below their portion of the college-age population. This progress has been made possibly only through a nationwide commitment to the concept of equal opportunity and to the practice of affirmative action. However, without continued commitment to the practice of affirmative action, lipservice on behalf of equal opportunity will be nothing but empty rhetoric.

Whether you call them "goals" or "quotas," statistical measurements are necessary if institutions of higher learning are to be held accountable for the enforcement of the equal protection clause of our Constitution. How else are we to determine whether or not efforts are indeed being made to ameliorate the centuries-old conditions of inequality that black Americans have had to bear? ●

● Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, despite the passage last week of the Michel amendment, this bill contains spending increases over last year which are about twice as great as cost-of-living increases.

Worse, it is anticipated that supplemental appropriations will be required which will raise spending even higher.

There are many items in this bill that are necessary. But, overall, it is just too expensive. When we are running a huge deficit in the 4th year of an economic recovery, it is not possible to justify increases of 10 to 20 percent, especially when there are few new programs.

With reluctance, I shall have to vote against H.R. 12929. ●

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with sundry amendments adopted by the Committee of the Whole, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill, as amended, do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BOLLING, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 12929) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, and Health, Education, and Welfare, and related agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1979, and for other purposes, had directed him to report the bill back to the House with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill, as amended, do pass.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the previous question is ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole?

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Speaker, I demand a separate vote on the so-called Symms amendment relating to the Occupational Safety and Health Administration regulation.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any other amendment? If not, the Chair will put them en gros.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment on which a separate vote has been demanded.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment: On page 7, line 6, strike the figure "$167,474,000" and insert in lieu thereof the figure "$139,070,000".

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the yeas appeared to have it.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 184, nays 216, not voting 34, as follows:

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

There was no objection.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mrs. FENWICK. Mr. Speaker, by inadvertence I voted "yes" when I intended to vote "no" on the Symms amendment, rollcall No. 447, during consideration of H.R. 12929.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION WAIVING CERTAIN POINTS OF ORDER AND PROVIDING CERTAIN PROCEDURES DURING CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 12932, DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. BOLLING, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 95-1292), on the resolution (H. Res. 1230) waiving certain points of order and providing certain procedures during consideration of the bill (H.R. 12932) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1979, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 11302, AUTHORIZING APPROPRIATIONS FOR ENVIRONMENTAL RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, AND DEMONSTRATIONS

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 11302) to authorize appropriations for environmental research, development, and demonstrations for the fiscal year 1979, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, disagree to the Senate amendment, and request a conference with the Senate thereon.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California? The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. BROWN of California, AMBRO, WIRTH, WALGREN, WATKINS, WALKER, and FORSYTHE.

BROADCAST COVERAGE OF THE HOUSE

(Mr. ANDERSON of Illinois asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ANDERSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I have only the most genuine respect, admiration and, yes, affection, for the Speaker of this House; but I feel that I must protest the decision that became effective on Monday of this week. This decision permit media access and coverage of House proceedings, but only by means of audio coverage.

I think that in contrast to what was said on this floor on Monday, this does not represent an historic breakthrough, but rather an historic breakdown. It represents a very serious misreading and misinterpretation of the provisions of House Resolution 866, which clearly provided for the simultaneous availability of audio and visual coverage of all proceedings by the broadcast media.

At no point last on October 27 of last year when that resolution was overwhelmingly adopted was there any suggestion, nor was there any suggestion in the deliberations that took place in the Committee on Rules before that resolution came to the floor of the House, that audio and visual coverage should be decoupled and that audio coverage should be made available to the media before visual coverage occurred.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR JAMES BROWNING ALLEN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. McKay) under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. BEVILL) is recognized for 60 minutes.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous matter on the life, character, and public service of the late Honorable JAMES BROWNING ALLEN, Senator from Alabama.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, during this special order, Members of the House will have the opportunity to pay tribute to one of this country's most dynamic public servants—the late Senator JAMES BROWNING ALLEN of Alabama.

Since the shocking death of Senator JIM ALLEN a few days ago, much has been written and said in the form of tribute to this great American.

In my letter announcing this period of tribute, I noted that if the term statesman ever applied to anyone, it applied to JIM ALLEN in every good sense of the word.

In the short and sad time we have now had to reflect on the life of JIM ALLEN, one thing seems certain—history will look upon the accomplishments of JIM ALLEN with numerous adjectives of praise.

Tributes to JIM ALLEN have poured in from people of all walks of life—from the President of the United States to the everyday American citizen, whose causes and ideals JIM ALLEN so espoused.

Those tributes have alluded to JIM ALLEN's untiring efforts in behalf of his constituency, whatever the public office—his knowledge of parliamentary procedures, probably the most astute of this century, perhaps ever—his zeal for a cause in which he believed, such as the Panama Canal issue—his kind and polite, but at the same time firm mannerism—his availability to anyone, no matter what their persuasion—and maybe most of all, knowledge of the fact that whenever JIM ALLEN spoke, his pronouncement would be well thought out, from the heart, and based on a common-sense approach.

Perhaps a newspaper in the Senator's hometown of Gadsden, Ala., most appropriately summed up the feeling and respect held for JIM ALLEN in an editorial tribute.

Senator Allen led the pleasant smalltown life common to children of his generation. There seemed nothing spectacular about it. But what he made of his life was spectacular.

And all of us are the better for the nobility of his spirit and of his choices.

Eight years in the Alabama Legislature, 8 years as Alabama's Lieutenant Governor and 10 years as a U.S. Senator from Alabama made JIM ALLEN a public servant for all but a few years of his adult life.

His list of accomplishments during that 26-year span of public service will never be forgotten.

The only thing that will ever overshadow JIM ALLEN's numerous accomplishments will be the courteous and distinguished manner that characterized a brilliant career of public service.

Mr. Speaker, I am submitting two editorials from the Gadsden, Ala., Times which pay splendid tribute to Alabama's late Senator JAMES BROWNING ALLEN:

EARLY TRIBUTE FOLLOWED ALLEN ALL THROUGH LIFE

"Common sense in an uncommon degree is what the world calls wisdom."

At any moment during his many years in public life, the quotation would have been an appropriate tribute to U.S. Sen. James B. Allen, whose death yesterday of a heart attack leaves his hometown, his state and indeed the nation, stunned and grieved.

The tribute was given him, however, long before he entered public life. It appears beside his picture in the Gadsden High School annual of 1928, the year he graduated as valedictorian.

James was 15 when he received his diploma.

His classmates never had reason to change their minds about him.

Common sense was the solid bedrock on which his brilliant career was based. Of course, as he matured, other qualities surfaced: an astute understanding of the ever-changing political scene, a quiet good humor which nobody could ruffle, a willingness to work harder and longer than most of the rest of us.

Political allies and opponents alike agreed that he was one of the two most brilliant parliamentarians of our century in the U.S. Senate. The other was Richard Russell of Georgia.

He used his talents to superb advantage in giving expression to the Alabama point of view. This he achieved so successfully that he received as large a proportion of the Alabama Republican vote as of his own Democratic party. This simply means that Alabama as a whole felt that Senator Allen belonged to all of us and worked for all of us.

His last great fight was his valiant effort to save the Panama Canal for his country. That he lost did not diminish his stature at all in the eyes of Alabama. What Southerners want in their leaders is a man who will fight to the last ditch against all odds. Senator Allen never let us down on this score.

One of the Senator's last concerns, expressed only last week, was "the contradiction, irresolution and doubt which appear to be the forces dictating the military and foreign policies of the United States." Events of this week will be heard on the national scene and the state scene.

The Times speaks largely for his hometown—for his many friends and neighbors, for those who went to school with him here and at the University of Alabama, for men he served beside in World War II, for professional and political associates who never had reason to question his loyalty or his conscientious devotion to the career he chose early in life.

Son of highly respected parents, who placed religious practice and teaching high in their everyday family life, Senator Allen led the pleasant smalltown life common to children of his generation. There seems nothing spectacular about it.

But what he made of his life was spectacular.

And all of us are the better for the nobility of his spirit and of his choices.

UNSPOILED HERITAGE PROVIDED ABSOLUTES FOR
SEN. JIM ALLEN

Colleagues in the Senate and others in the nation's highest political circles spoke yesterday of the qualities they admired in Sen. James B. Allen. In their funeral eulogies they praised his integrity, his fairness, his courtesy, his understanding, as strongly as they praised his brilliance as a statesman.

All seemed to find in Jim Allen something that set him apart from most others who enjoy the power and prestige of Washington's upper echelons.

They are quite right. Jim Allen was different. And a bit of old fashioned.

Nor was he without honor in his own country.

Senator Allen was born in Gadsden, grew up here, went to our public schools. He swam in our creeks and river. He played in our quiet shady, unpaved village streets. Sometimes he played out after supper, when the sun has set and lightning bugs flashed in the shrubbery around his parents' home.

It was a pleasant childhood, secure and protected, hedged in by love and rounded out by the usual pleasures of friendships and fun.

But it was not a spoiled childhood. The Allens expected a great deal of their children. Religious training and religious practice were a part of everyday family life. Jim Allen and his two brothers went to Sunday school and church on Sunday, and no nonsense about it.

Furthermore, the boys were expected to work, and they did. Jim often recalled his days as carrier for The Gadsden Times. He also joined his contemporaries in selling The Literary Digest. His father was a respected and successful lawyer, who knew the value of work for a young person.

The Allen boys were expected also to take school seriously. Jim certainly did, graduating from Gadsden High School at 15 as valedictorian. He found more at school, though, than just books. In later years he liked to talk about the emphasis teachers in those days placed on citizenship. They themselves believed that ours is the best system man has ever evolved for governing himself, and they stirred in Jim the first vague feeling that he would someday like to serve the country he viewed with unabashed patriotism.

This kind of boyhood, rooted in church and home and school, gave the serious young student a firm foundation on which to build his future life.

Furthermore, it established his permanent values. All his thinking and all his actions fell into a framework that recognized God and family, church and home as the clear waters from which we derive our national well-being. Every stand he took was at bottom an effort to preserve our institutions and our freedoms.

True, almost all American children a half century ago grew up in pretty much the same environment that shaped Jim Allen. And certainly they did not all make it to the U.S. Senate.

The point is that those who did make it to the top had some absolutes to guide them in the tough decision that face all our leaders.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Alabama (Mr. JACK EDWARDS).

Mr. EDWARDS of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. BEVILL) for yielding, and I also thank the gentleman for taking this special order so that we might for a few minutes here reflect on the life of our good friend, JIM ALLEN.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to one of Alabama's greatest leaders, JIM ALLEN. His passing on June 1, 1978, was a profound loss to the State of Alabama and to the entire Nation.

In the 10 years he represented Alabama in Washington, Senator ALLEN became a master of the Senate rules and used them with ease to promote or defeat legislation he felt was or was not in the best interest of the country. He spent more time on the Senate floor than many Members of the Senate leadership.

JIM ALLEN did not merely learn Jefferson's parliamentary manual; he absorbed it, and used it with more knowledge than many of the distinguished names that have served in that body before him.

In the era in which the all-night Senate filibuster became less effective, JIM ALLEN substituted tactical skill for oratorical stamina. He was constantly devising new ways of sustaining debate and defending the conservative positions that he advocated.

He was effective—far more effective than some in the Senate wanted him to be. At various times in his career, he managed to block or delay Federal campaign financing legislation, the so-called consumer protection bill, unwise tax changes, and much, much more.

He was a factor to be reckoned with on the Senate Judiciary and Rules Committees. On the Senate floor, he was a formidable, independent force. In fact, Senator ALLEN seemed more at home on the Senate floor than in committee. He was present during almost every debate, and he took part in hours of extended debate without a note, without a prepared statement, and without an aide whispering instructions into his ear. And the content of his debate was always germane to the issue—he did not read telephone books, recipes or any other unusual material. His debate was always centered on the issue at hand.

JIM ALLEN was not successful in blocking passage of the Panama Canal Treaties in this Congress, and he told me that this concerned him greatly. The fact that the United States relinquished control of the canal, he said, seemed to be the first step toward our country's becoming a lesser influence in the world than it presently is. Even though he lost in that debate, many will remember his arguments and how hard he struggled to prevent the passage of those treaties.

Senator ALLEN's general maneuvering on the Senate floor imposed a sort of discipline on his colleagues. Every sponsor of a bill knew what he might have to contend with on the floor. Therefore, outrageous measures were called up less often and fewer corners were cut, because JIM ALLEN was always there.

A mild-mannered man who stood well over 6 feet tall, Senator ALLEN was known for his calm demeanor and unflinching courtesy. Opponents found him a determined—but fair—adversary. JIM ALLEN was a giant among Alabama public servants who left a record that all of us could be proud of.

I attended JIM's funeral in Gadsden, Ala., on Tuesday, June 6. The church was overflowing; people lined the streets. The great and near great came from all over the country to pay their last respects—the Vice President, Senators TED KENNEDY and GEORGE MCGOVERN on the liberal side; Senators HARRY BYRD and JOHN STENNIS on the conservative side—some 50 Senators all told. Whether they agreed with him or not, they respected him.

Former Senator Sam Ervin spoke at the funeral, and perhaps summed it up best when he said:

If I had to stand with one man at Armageddon and battle for the Lord, I hope that man would be Senator JIM ALLEN of Alabama.

Senator JIM ALLEN was a great leader, and we shall miss him. I extend my deepest sympathy to his wife, MARYON, and the Allen family. MARYON took the oath of office June 12 to fill her husband's vacant chair for an interim period. I also would like to extend best wishes to MARYON and say to her that I stand ready to be of service and I look forward to working with her in the days ahead.

Mr. Speaker, the city council of Foley, Ala., has adopted a resolution honoring Senator ALLEN and asked that I bring it to the attention of the House. The resolution reads as follows:

RESOLUTION

Whereas, certain individuals have outstanding talent which can be put to use for the betterment of their State and Nation, and

Whereas, Senator James Allen was a person with a very particular talent, this being having the knowledge and ability to represent his State in the United States Senate in a courteous and gentlemanly manner, but with an effectiveness unmatched by any other of his colleagues, and

Whereas, the State and Nation have suffered a great loss through the sudden and untimely death of Senator Allen, and

Whereas, his death will result in a void in the United States Senate which will never be effectively filled as no individual has his knowledge, training and unique talents, and

Whereas, it is just and proper that his services to the people of this City, area, State and Nation should be recognized and acknowledged,

Now, therefore, be it resolved by the Mayor and Council of the City of Foley, Baldwin County, Alabama, as follows:

That the untiring efforts of Senator James Allen toward better government for the United States of America and in representing so ably the people of the State of Alabama, is hereby recognized and acknowledged in behalf of the citizens of the City of Foley, Alabama.

Be it further resolved that the Mayor and Council express to the widow and family of the said Senator James Allen the sincere gratitude and appreciation of the citizens by transmittal of a copy of this Resolution.

Done this 5th day of June, 1978.

ARTHUR A. HOLK, Mayor.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEVILL. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. DICKINSON).

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity, first, to thank my colleague, the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. BEVILL), for making this special order available in order to give those of us who knew and loved JIM ALLEN the opportunity to make a record here of our sentiments and to note with sorrow the passing of a great friend, a great Alabamian and, above all, a great American.

Mr. Speaker, the sad duty fell to me on that Thursday evening, June 1, of informing this body of the untimely death of our Senate colleague and my beloved fellow Alabamian, JIM ALLEN.

Although many wonderful things have already been said about the impeccable character, outstanding legislative ability, true patriotism, and the wonderful human being that was JIM ALLEN, I cannot help but add to the testimony about the life, character, and service of this, one-of-a-kind, unique man produced by the State of Alabama for service to our Nation.

JIM ALLEN was a leader, truly born and prepared for the duties of a U.S. Senator. His long, outstanding, and fruitful service in the Alabama House and Senate prepared him for service in the U.S. Senate where he earned the reputation as perhaps the greatest parliamentarian to ever serve in that august body.

His strong identification with the views of his constituents provided him with the moral justification and direction to many times swim against the easy, popular desires of the majority. He properly viewed himself and his duty—his constitutional role—to be the representative of the people of Alabama in the U.S. Senate. One only had to observe the respect in which he was held by his colleagues and his solid base of support at home, to realize that JIM ALLEN knew his proper role in Washington. What I am really trying to illustrate about JIM ALLEN, is that he was an original copy of what a Member of Congress should be like. He showed us how representative democracy should work. His work in the Senate demonstrated that he owed no allegiance to anyone except to those he represented and to the good of this Nation.

Knowing that Alabama produced JIM ALLEN makes me proud of being from that great State. I know that JIM ALLEN would be pleased at knowing that he was a composite of the people he represented—he was Alabama.

His moral character was so absolutely impeccable as to be worthy of emulation. He had a great love for the common man and powerful convictions and insight about what was best for this Nation. He was an example of the solid, old-fashioned, and unchanging virtues of self-reliance, self-discipline, and restraint.

He championed the principles of fiscal responsibility—that any entity, regardless of whether it is a family, a business or even a government, must pay its bills and not spend valuable resources foolishly. He voted against those measures that represented the squandering of our wealth.

In the important area of national security JIM ALLEN had a strong conviction that the Nation should not compromise its vital security interests for artificial, transparent, or short ranged public relations purposes. His personal efforts on the Panama Canal treaties issue—the hard work and long hours he invested during that long debate—is an example of his dedication to what he viewed as a key national security matter. I suspect that the hard work and long hours on the canal issue—far above and beyond the call of duty—shortened his life. He accepted his duty on that issue as a soldier on the battlefield. I believe that history will prove JIM ALLEN's stand on this issue as the correct one.

Mr. Speaker, in Senator ALLEN's passing, I have personally lost a source of inspiration. I found in him a philosophical reassurance that I could identify with—a warm personal friend whose cooperation, advice, and council I will surely miss in the days to come.

Of the 535 Members of Congress he was truly a giant, a unique Member who is irreplaceable. We will all miss him.

The following editorial in the Sunday, June 4, 1978, edition of the Montgomery Advertiser and Alabama Journal provides a fresh perception of the character of JIM ALLEN:

JIM ALLEN REMEMBERED

By now the politicians and other spokesmen of the people have pretty well used up all the rhetorical encomiums about Jim Allen, so we will not belabor the obvious. Rather, on the sad occasion of his death after 40 years in the public life of Alabama, we choose to simply share a few memories, some serious, some humorous, but which, altogether, we hope will give a glimpse of the character of the man.

A couple of years after Allen got to Washington in 1968, the Senate pages gave him a little award for the extraordinary number of hours he had spent presiding over the Senate. Obviously pleased, Allen sent pictures of the presentation back home to share the honor with his constituents.

In truth, presiding over the Senate isn't all that much of an honor. In fact, it is regarded as an onerous burden imposed on unsuspecting freshmen, a bit akin to hazing in college fraternity initiation. Not even the Vice President, in all his impotence, suffers his constitutional duty to preside over the Senate very often, for it is an excruciatingly boring and unrewarding job.

While most freshmen catch onto the ruse quickly, Allen seemed to have relished in the assignment, and some Senators may have felt they had stumbled upon something of a political Gomer Pyle, willing to take KP duty on a permanent basis. Jim Allen just sat there, his hair slicked down and parted in the middle as if he had just stepped out of an old magazine advertisement for Wildroot Cream Oil, looking like an amiable bumpkin who would never catch on.

But if it was a joke, the last laugh turned out to be on the Senate. While other Senators practiced power politics, even ran for President, Allen quietly labored to master the Senate's complex parliamentary procedure. So when he fulfilled the traditional obligations of freshman quietude, he suddenly burst forth as a peerless practitioner of Senate procedure. With bewildering dexterity, he even breathed new life into that old mainstay of the Southern bloc of yesteryear, the filibuster, and confounded his colleagues by blocking, delaying, and forcing compromise on just about every major piece of legislation on the liberal agenda.

By the time he died, even though he had served for only 10 years, he was regarded by one and all as one of the most powerful Senators to be reckoned with.

Rarely on the same side of an issue with Allen, Sen. Alan Cranston of California summed up the respect held for Allen in the Senate:

"He knows the rules upside down and backwards. He can catch other people napping, but he's not sneaky. He just plays hardball within the rules."

It is safe to say that Allen did not arrive in Washington in 1968 a popular man. He had, after all, run his successful race against "the Washington Crowd."

Thus one suspects there was a measure of scornful contempt when the powers-that-be in the Senate gave him the grubbiest of committee assignments. Among them was the chairmanship of the subcommittee in charge of Capitol cafeterias—an assignment which led this newspaper to observe at the time, "a year ago he was smearing the Washington Crowd . . . Now he is in charge of its care and feeding."

But again, Allen's capacity for patience, for laboring like an ox under the deadliest drudgery, prevailed, and before he died, he had taken a seat on one of the most influential components of the Senate, the Judiciary Committee.

In winning, he learned his own lesson well—that a Senator from Alabama became isolated from his homestate at his peril. So he became the first Alabama Senator to open an office at the state Capital, and he made it a point to visit every county at least once a year, where he would sponsor "dutch treat" breakfasts at which the proud and the humble would mingle to discuss their problems over grits-and-gravy at the town cafe.

And when a constituent wrote to Jim Allen with, let us say, a problem about his grandmother's social security, he did not get the traditional Senatorial thank-you-for-your-interest response; he got action. Although Allen may have been no Lister Hill, capable of shaping public policy in profound ways, he got things done, people's problems solved, and there's great value in a Senator who will cattle-prod the bureaucracy.

He called himself a conservative, and certainly his voting record bore this out. Yet, it was spotted with a few odd twists, throwbacks to Alabama populism, perhaps. For example, he was among the few Southern Senators who opposed the government's role in the development of the supersonic transport aircraft. It turned out to be a prescient position, since the SST was to be our version of the ill-starred Concorde which the British and the French were then producing in a fitful folly of national pride.

Allen said he just "couldn't see spending all that money so rich folks could get to Paris two hours quicker."

When a conservative industrialist backer berated him for his stand on the SST, he replied with deadpan sarcasm that if the industrialist felt so strongly that the SST were really needed and profitable, free enterprise could be entrusted to handle the matter quite well without socialistic assistance from the government.

The man was heard to complain no more. "The reason people like me don't get mad with Jim Allen," once remarked Bill Garner, an ardent homestate environmentalist, consumerist, and general opponent of the Allen political philosophy, "is that he is honest and sincere. If he disagrees with us, we know that he is acting either out of lack of information or out of sincerity. But mostly, he is a man whose word is good, among politicians, among lawyers, among businessmen. He has integrity."

His scrupulous honesty, in fact, turned out to be a painful cocklebur under the Senatorial saddle. When he went to the Senate, he divested himself of all his business holdings, modest as they were. He became the first Senator to make complete financial disclosure—and each year, it showed that his wealth was diminishing; he was serving in the Senate at his own personal cost.

Once, out of the blue, he offered a bill to make it illegal for a Senator to take an honorarium for a speech, claiming some of his colleagues were knocking down as much as $600,000 on the road while they should be attending Senate business. In a burst of astonished indignation, the Senate voted down his proposal 63 to 31. But Allen, to the end, refused to accept even expenses for his speeches.

We were reading a story the other day about a certain powerful Senator in transit. As he boarded the plane, the airline attendants treated him as if he were the Sultan of some oil-rich Arab sheikdom. The common herd was held back until the Great Man boarded, settled in his First Class seat, and had a drink in hand.

This Senator was not Jim Allen. In fact, the very last time we saw Jim Allen was on Sunday, April 9, of this year while changing planes in the Atlanta airport. We happened to wind up on the same flight to Washington.

Only a few people even recognized him as he lined up with all the other passengers. He took a middle seat in the tourist class section of the plane and settled down with a magazine.

When we arrived in Washington, he stood in line once again to claim his luggage. No chauffeur or black limousine was there to meet him. He took his modest bag in hand, and the last we saw of Jim Allen was a slightly stooped figure, trudging slowly, alone, toward the parking lot of the National Airport as the long shadows fell over Washington.

It is only fitting to close this memory of Senator James Browning Allen with a remark made by his colleague, Sen. Sam

Ervin, whose rhetorical flourish matched Allen's doggedness of purpose.

"If I have to stand with one man at Armageddon and battle for the Lord," said Senator Sam, "I would hope that man would be Sen. James Allen of Alabama."

Mr. ROUSSELOT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEVILL. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from California.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate my colleague's yielding.

It is significant that so many Members are here today, not only to pay tribute to Senator JIM ALLEN, but to say thank you for a job well done. I am sure the Senator can somehow know what we are saying, even though we have not been able to express our direct appreciation because he left us so suddenly.

Senator ALLEN provided the same spirit and legislative action in the Senate that gave motion and direction to Proposition 13—the Jarvis-Gann initiative—in California this past week. Senator ALLEN fought for those same ideals every day in the U.S. Senate.

I think it should be said that Senator ALLEN was well known across the entire country, not only for his great legislative skill and parliamentary capability, but because, especially in California, he was known for his care and watchfulness in making sure that Federal dollars were properly and correctly spent. That is especially important at this time in California because, as we all know, Proposition 13, the Jarvis initiative, passed with an overwhelming mandate from the people; and Senator ALLEN could take part of the credit for the kind of attention that he gave to try to safeguard the expenditure of Federal dollars in the same way.

We were especially appreciative of his continuing vigilant effort to make sure that the average taxpayer's dollar was appropriately spent. As my colleagues have already referred to the fact, many, many people in California were very appreciative of the extra effort he gave to try to preserve the Panama Canal for America.

Senator ALLEN was also a great defender of the Constitution. He would not sacrifice constitutional principles in order to carry out public policy. He used all of his skills when constitutional questions were at issue and more often than not was successful.

He was an excellent and well respected Senator. The Nation will miss him.

Mr. BEVILL. I thank the gentleman from California.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEVILL. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. LOTT).

Mr. LOTT. Mr. Speaker, to say only that Senator JAMES BROWNING ALLEN of Alabama was a great parliamentarian would be to underestimate his profound influence on the U.S. Senate. In his 10 years of dedicated service in that body, Senator ALLEN firmly established a reputation as an articulate, aggressive, and intelligent man who fought with every fiber of his being for those issues he knew in his heart to be right. And, he used facts, not fantasy, in opposing those issues he knew to be wrong.

Born December 28, 1912, in Gadsden, Ala., Senator ALLEN attended Gadsden public schools, the University of Alabama, and the University of Alabama School of Law. He served in the Alabama State House of Representatives from 1938-42 and was reelected in 1942. But he resigned to enter the U.S. Navy, serving in the Pacific theater and participating in the Leyte and Okinawa campaigns. He served as a member of the Alabama Senate from 1946-50 and was elected twice as his home State's Lieutenant Governor. He was elected to the 91st Congress in 1968 with 70 percent of the popular vote and reelected in 1974 with 95 percent of the popular vote.

Senator ALLEN drew strength through the years from his wife, the former MARYON PITTMAN of Birmingham, Ala. The sense of loss felt by the people of Alabama is shared by the people of this Nation. Senator ALLEN was a great American because of his statesman characteristics and the U.S. Senate will long feel his influence. Indeed, the Senate should take a lesson from his service and strive to reach the high standards that Senator JAMES B. ALLEN set for himself.

Mr. BEVILL. I thank the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. WHITTEN).

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. WHITTEN).

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues today as they pay tribute to our late friend, Senator JIM ALLEN, of Alabama, truly an able, honest, and courageous Member of this Congress, and in their expressions of sorrow in his passing.

Admired by both those who agreed with him and equally admired and respected by those who differed.

A man of character, of firm beliefs, completely candid, and sincere in his dealings with his constituents, his colleagues, and with the issues to which he applied his fine mind and great energy, JIM ALLEN represented the best in a public servant.

To his beloved wife, MARYON, Senator MARYON ALLEN, we extend our deepest sympathy. She succeeds her husband, a man who leaves a splendid record among all those who have served in the Congress. His record both in his service in his beloved State of Alabama, and as its Senator for many years.

We shall miss JIM ALLEN, but we all shall profit from the great example he set in his application to his duties, to his treatment of his fellow man, the contributions he made as the Senator from Alabama and, yes, for the life he lived.

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I now yield to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BRINKLEY).

Mr. BRINKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, during the last conference of the House and Senate prayer breakfast groups making arrangements for this year's National Prayer Breakfast, I was struck by the unusual qualities of JIM ALLEN. He was a fundamental man—one who was easy to be with and easy to talk to. He knew your name.

JIM ALLEN might be compared to Gideon, for whom huge armies were not necessary. Rather, his troops were exceedingly sparing. But, like Gideon, JIM knew the taste of success and victory, understanding that success and victory are never counted by majority votes, but, rather, by how well you do with what you have. With what he had, JIM ALLEN did very well, indeed.

I will always remember him at the dedication of West Point Lake on the Georgia/Alabama State line and his feeling of having come home. Home held no alarms for JIM ALLEN. Here he served his fellow man with distinction, and, in so doing, he served his maker.

In recalling JIM ALLEN's fine contributions to this Congress, I am reminded of John Kennedy's criteria for measuring public servants:

When at some future date the high court of history sits in judgment on each of us, recording whether in our brief span of service we fulfilled our responsibilities to the state, our success or failure, in whatever office we hold, will be measured by the answers to four questions: First, were we truly men of courage? Second, were we truly men of judgment? Third, were we truly men of integrity? Finally, were we truly men of dedication?

Using even these highest of standards, JIM ALLEN would have fared splendidly. He was not his brother's keeper; he was his brother's brother.

Mr. BEVILL. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia, Congressman FLYNT.

Mr. FLYNT. Mr. Speaker, I join with my colleague, Mr. BEVILL, and his Alabama colleagues in paying tribute to the memory of the Honorable JAMES B. ALLEN, late a Senator from the State of Alabama.

I first knew JIM ALLEN during the period of his service in the Alabama Legislature when I served in the General Assembly of Georgia. I remember his first election as Lieutenant Governor of Alabama after serving in both the house of representatives and in the State senate. From 1955 to 1963 he did not serve in public office. In 1963 he again became Lieutenant Governor, which office he held until 1967, following which he was elected in 1968 to the U.S. Senate to succeed Senator Lester Hill.

Senator JAMES B. ALLEN, during 27 years of public service including 10 years in the U.S. Senate, served his State and his country well. He not only represented the State of Alabama and reflected credit on the highest traditions of that State and its citizens but he also represented people from all parts of the country who believe in fiscal responsibility and the basic conservative philosophy of government.

When he spoke, he spoke for the people of his State, a fact made manifest in 1974 when he was reelected by a vote of 94 percent of the votes cast in that election.

He was a man of honor, integrity, strong character, and great ability. He mastered the rules of parliamentary procedure in the U.S. Senate in a manner not excelled and seldom equaled in the history of that body.

As we say down home—JIM ALLEN was a good man to have on your side.

Several years ago, Mrs. Flynt and I were both injured in a motor vehicle accident and we were hospitalized in West Georgia Medical Center, La Grange, Ga. Senator and Mrs. ALLEN both came to our hospital rooms to let us know that they were thinking of us and wished for both of us a speedy recovery. I have never forgotten looking up and seeing JIM ALLEN standing beside my bed, holding my hand and saying get well and come back to work.

Because of the nature of his visit, naturally I have remembered it but did not expect that he would. On last Tuesday, when I went to Gadsden, Ala., to attend the funeral service of my friend JIM ALLEN, Mrs. ALLEN in her gracious and charming way reminded me that it was 3 years to the day since she and JIM had visited us in the hospital on that occasion.

On the occasion of JIM ALLEN's funeral, I have never seen such an outpouring of affection, love, and sorrow when a close friend, a favorite son, and a stalwart leader was being honored in death as he had been honored by his friends and neighbors during his lifetime. His home city of Gadsden, Etowah County, and the State of Alabama mourned the death of Senator JAMES BROWNING ALLEN.

I would like to associate myself with one of the statements made by one of those who participated in the funeral service of JIM ALLEN:

If I could choose one man to stand with me at Armageddon and help fight the battle for the Lord, that man would be Jim Allen of Alabama.

We who knew, admired, and respected him feel the same way.

Mrs. Flynt joins me in extending our condolences and heartfelt sympathy to his widow, now the junior Senator from Alabama, MARYON PITTMAN ALLEN, and their family.

Our country has lost a magnificent public official, Alabama has lost a stalwart son, and I have lost a good friend. Requiescat in pace.

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I yield to our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Alabama, Mr. BILL NICHOLS.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I thank our colleague, the gentleman from Alabama, Congressman BEVILL, for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, this is a sad occasion for me as I join with other Members of the Alabama delegation and respected colleagues to mourn the passing of Alabama's junior Senator, JAMES B. ALLEN.

His nearly 27 years of outstanding and dedicated service to his State and his Nation is recognized and appreciated by Alabamians who granted JIM ALLEN the privilege of speaking for them in the U.S. Senate.

JIM ALLEN loved Alabama and he loved his people and this affection was demonstrated by the numerous trips which he made to his State each year. He took considerable pride in visiting at least once during the year each of Alabama's 67 counties.

Although he received his law degree from the University of Alabama, JIM ALLEN was nonpartisan and he always attended Auburn University's homecoming game. He was never too busy to come to the Senate Gallery to visit with a constituent, and he was always available to be photographed with every Alabama group who requested a picture with him on the Senate steps.

It was my great privilege to serve with my respected friend, JIM ALLEN, for 4 years in the Alabama Senate where he presided as Lieutenant Governor for the State of Alabama with a great deal of dignity, fairness, and was respected by all factions of that legislative body.

JIM ALLEN's life was marked by personal tragedies, losing his wife and child in a fire which destroyed his home. Later he lost a daughter and I recall the tremendous grief which I witnessed at the funeral services for this child in Gadsden, Ala.

But there was another quality in the life of JIM ALLEN which added to the stature of this great American and that quality was his love for his God. He was an active member of the Church of Christ and he was most active in the Senate Prayer Breakfasts, which he attended with regularity each Wednesday morning and was the presiding officer of this group at the time of his death.

Some weeks ago I ran across the Senator in the Atlanta airport returning to Washington after a busy weekend with constituents back home. We were able to get adjoining seats in the coach section of the plane where he always rode as a mark of his prudence with the taxpayers' money. We discussed a number of legislative issues and I noticed that he seemed tired which I attributed to the heavy workload that he carried both in his State and on the floor of the U.S. Senate.

The likes of JIM ALLEN are not likely to pass my way again. Surely a mighty oak for conservative government has fallen and the Nation is indeed the poorer for it. With all his ability as a parliamentarian and with all of the many honors which had been bestowed upon him, JIM ALLEN was a man of much humility. He was an early riser, arriving in his office around 7 a.m. each morning. I cannot recall attending a dinner meeting in Washington, whether it was the American Legion or the gathering of Alabama bankers or a meeting of Alabama's farmers—where Senator ALLEN was absent. If Alabamians were in town the Senator felt that he had a responsibility to be with his people whom he loved and who loved him.

"Lives of great men all remind us—we too can make our lives sublime and departing leave behind us footprints on the sands of time."

His untimely passing is a personal loss to me for I had much confidence in his judgment. He was a statesman in every sense of the word. I express my deepest sympathy to his widow, Senator MARYON PITTMAN ALLEN, and wish her well in her new responsibilities as a successor to her late husband. I extend also my deepest sympathy to his son, James B. Allen, Jr., and other members of his immediate family.

Mr. Speaker, I would further like to ask for unanimous consent to submit for the RECORD written copy of the funeral services held for our late Senator at the First United Methodist Church of Gadsden and two editorials paying tribute to Alabama's junior Senator, one from the Opelika-Auburn Daily News and one from the Talladega Daily Home.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR SENATOR JAMES B. ALLEN

OPENING SENTENCES

(Dr. Edward L. R. Elson, Chaplain,
U.S. Senate)

God is a Spirit and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth.

The souls of the righteous are in the hand of God, and there shall no evil touch them. They are in peace.

Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.

They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint.

INVOCATION AND LORD'S PRAYER

(Dr. O. B. Sansbury, Pastor, First United Methodist Church of Gadsden)

O God, our help in ages past, our hope for years to come, our shelter from the stormy past and our eternal home, land of the free and home of the brave, we invoke Thy blessings. Our Father, from whom we come and to whom we return, and in whom we live and move and have our being, we praise Thee for Thy good gift of life, for its wonder and mystery, its interests and joys, its friendships and fellowships. We thank Thee for the ties that bind us one to another. We bless Thee for Thy loving and patient dealings with us, whereby Thou dost ever teach us Thy truth and Thy way by the varied experiences through which we pass. We thank Thee for the meanings that lie hidden even in the very heart of sorrow, pain, disappointment, loss, and grief. And we bless Thee for Thy guiding hand along the way of our pilgrimage.

Be Thou with Senator Allen's family. Thou hast said though we sorrow, we sorrow not as those that have no hope. Our hope is in Jesus Christ who taught us when we pray to say Our Father, who art in heaven; Hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done; On earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation; But deliver us from evil; For Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

EULOGY FOR SENATOR JAMES B. ALLEN

(By Senator Harry F. Byrd, Jr.)

In reflecting on the Senate career of James B. Allen of Alabama, several words instinctively come to mind: integrity, determination, ability, dedication.

During his years in the United States Senate, Senator Allen not only represented the people of Alabama with great skill and great dedication—but he became, indeed, a Senator of the United States. His service to our nation has been acclaimed far beyond the borders of the great state in which we are assembled today.

I speak for my colleagues in the United States Senate when I express deep and heartfelt distress at the untimely death of Senator Allen.

All of us in the Senate disagree with one another from time to time. Jim Allen, more often than not, was on the minority side of an issue, presenting his viewpoint with eloquence and with patient perseverance.

But even those who opposed him the most, admired his tenaciousness and his skill as much as did those of us who customarily followed his brilliant parliamentary leadership.

Through the years, just as it does now—the Senate of the United States has had within its membership so many splendid and outstanding individuals. But never have I known a finer man than James B. Allen, nor one in whom I had greater confidence.

What a combination of qualities did the Alabama Senator possess—strong convictions, great courage and a fierce determination to protect the principles of government in which he deeply believed.

Yet, with it all, he was kind and thoughtful and humble.

The government of our great nation is established on the principle of majority rule.

It is a sound principle—indeed, a foundation stone of democracy.

But Jim Allen once said this:

"I don't feel the majority is always right. There are times when the majority can run rough-shod over the minority."

The Alabama Senator recognized that majorities are transient—and from time to time vanish.

But he knew, too, that when a majority is alive and strong, it has awesome power.

If what Jefferson called the "inalienable rights" of the minority are to be safeguarded, there must be sentinels of democracy, vigorous champions of those who may hold views contrary to the passing but powerful majorities of the day.

Such a sentinel, such a champion, was Senator James B. Allen of Alabama.

Often he carried out his lonely battles against great numbers, and against immense pressures.

Yet, he never flagged in his efforts.

Some of his battles ended in victory, some in defeat.

Jim Allen, like any individual, would prefer that his cause prevail; unlike most, however, he believed that there is something more important than being on the prevailing side.

An important measure of the man to whom we say farewell today was that his fairness and integrity became a legend in the Senate—a legend based on the unassailable fact that James Allen was a man whose dedication and courage were matched only by his honesty and sense of justice.

If one is to be accurate and candid, perhaps it needs to be said that too many persons in public life seek or use public office for personal advantage.

With Jim Allen, however, precisely the reverse was true.

He gave to the people of Alabama—and to the Senate of the United States—far more than he received.

His service was unselfish. His Senate hours were long and difficult. And when the Senate was not in session, he was out amongst the people of Alabama.

He was, indeed, a servant of the people, giving without limit his time and talent—and sacrificing his health.

But his sacrifices were not without reward. In my many conversations with him, I am convinced that what meant the most to him—aside from his wonderful wife, Maryon—was the feeling in his heart that he had the confidence and the support and the admiration of the people of Alabama. What more could a person ask?

Such a treasure did Jim Allen possess, a treasure beyond price.

In his death, the people of Alabama have lost an unselfish and dedicated champion; the Senate of the United States has lost a courageous—and, perhaps, irreplaceable leader; and I have lost a dear friend.

SENATOR JAMES BROWNING ALLEN

(By Sam J. Ervin, Jr.)

A giant oak has fallen in the forest and left a vacant place against the sky.

I knew James Browning Allen well, loved him much, and was privileged to call him friend.

Born in Gadsden, Alabama, on December

28, 1912, and educated in the humanities and the law at the University of Alabama. James B. Allen began the practice of law at Gadsden in 1935, and excelled in that calling until 1968, when he was elected a United States Senator from Alabama and retired from the practice to devote full time to his senatorial duties.

His life was rich in service to Alabama and America. He represented his neighbors in the Alabama House of Representatives for four years and in the Alabama State Senate for four years, and served all the people of Alabama as Lieutenant Governor of the State during two separate terms totaling eight years. He resigned his seat in the Alabama Legislature during the Second World War, and served as a Lieutenant in the United States Navy in the Pacific theatre, participating with distinction in the engagements at Leyte and Okinawa.

He was a United States Senator from Alabama from January 3, 1969, until his death near Gulf Shores, Alabama, on June 1, 1978. His arduous work in the Senate probably contributed to his demise.

No public official ever merited and enjoyed more completely the esteem and confidence of his constituents. This is attested by the fact that he carried all of Alabama's counties and received about 95 percent of the popular vote when he ran for reelection to the United States Senate in 1974.

Senator Allen was twice married: First, to Marjorie Jo Stephens, who mothered his three children and preceded him in death; and second, to Maryon Pittman Mullins, who had three children by a previous marriage. He loved his step-children as his own.

My wife and I deeply sorrow with our dear friend, Mrs. Maryon Allen, and our country is their irreparable loss. She was the inspiring and loving helpmate to Senator Allen during the years of their happy marriage.

Jim Allen was a big man—physically, intellectually, and spiritually.

As a United States Senator, he was distinguished for his independent and intellectually honest mind, his untiring industry, his understanding of legislative proposals and their implications, his mastery of parliamentary procedures, his eloquence and repartee in debate, his courtly courtesy to his colleagues, his steadfast loyalty to his convictions, and his undaunted moral and political courage.

Like William Ewart Gladstone, he knew that the Constitution of the United States is the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man; and like George Washington, he knew that it is just as important to preserve the Constitution as a law for rulers and people alike as it was to create it.

He desired above all things for America to endure as the land of the free and the home of the brave.

For this reason, he supported free enterprise rather than bureaucratic regimentation, fiscal integrity rather than deficit financing, military might rather than international appeasement, and freedom rather than tyranny over the minds and affairs of our people.

He never sold eternal truth to serve the transitory needs of the political hour, or bowed the pregnant hinges of the knees that political thrift might follow political fawning.

Since he carried his own sovereignty in his own mind and heart and was never willing to follow a great multitude to do what he believed to be ill for his country, he stood with the minority and suffered defeat in some legislative battles. But the eloquence he exhibited and the valor he displayed on these occasions illustrated this sublime truth: Defeat may serve as well as victory to shake the soul and let the glory out.

In this moment of sorrow I rejoice to remember I revealed my appraisal of Jim Allen as a man and Senator while he was still with us.

He and I fought side by side on the Senate floor on many occasions for causes we held dear. After one of these events he honored me by asking me for an autographed picture. I gave him a picture bearing this inscription in my handwriting.

"If I ever have to stand with one man at Armageddon and battle for the Lord, I want that man to be Senator Jim Allen of Alabama."

Josiah Gilbert Holland prayed God to bless America with public servants like Jim Allen when he composed his poem "God Give Us Men." I quote his words:

God, give us men! A time like this demands Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands;

Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor; men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue,
And damn his treacherous flatteries without winking!

Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking.

(By Dr. Edward L. R. Elson, Chaplain, U.S. Senate)

MEMORIAL TRIBUTE

"Senator James Allen, The Christian Layman in Public Service"

Senator Allen often quoted some lines called "Builders" which the family desires to share with all of us.

"I watched them tearing a building down—
A group of men in a busy town
With a ho-heave-ho and a lusty yell—
They swung a beam and a side wall fell
I asked the foreman, 'Are these men skilled,
The men you would hire if you had to build?'"

He gave a laugh and said, "No, indeed,
Unskilled labor is all I need.
I can easily wreck in a day or two—
What builders have taken years to do."
So I thought to myself as I went my way—
Which of these roles do I try to play?
Am I builder who works with care
Measuring life with the rule and square?
Or am I a wrecker who walks the town
Content with the rule of tearing down?"

Senator James Allen answered his quotation with a life of building.

The James Allen we knew is described in an excerpt from a letter by a constituent—

"When I was down and out James Allen offered assistance, when I was discouraged James Allen gave encouragement, when I was disappointed James Allen offered sympathy. He was truly representative of the people and the state that he served so honorably and well. He will be missed as he was loved, by all of us."

This is the James Allen we knew.

In I Corinthians 2:15 St. Paul wrote: "The spiritual man judgeth all things". Good-speed's translation makes it more relevant, "The spiritual man is alive to all true values".

James Allen was a spiritual man. His inner spirit and outward action were unified and synchronized. There was nothing synthetic, artificial or counterfeited about him. He was genuine to the very core of his being. In every fibre of his being he was unified in commitment to the Lordship of Jesus Christ.

James Allen never allowed ill-will or vindictiveness to accumulate and fester within him. He was free from rancor, recrimination and resentment.

He had pertinacity and infinite patience. He knew how to measure instant panacea and cheap political gain against the ultimate right and good.

He knew how to bear suffering for he suffered and he knew how to turn it into a testimony and let it fashion a better character. He could sing in the depths of his being.

"Let sorrow do its work,
Send grief or pain;
Sweet are Thy messengers,
Sweet their refrain
When they can sing with me
More love, O Christ, to Thee.
More love to Thee,
More love to Thee.

—Prentiss, 1818-1878

The word "honor" was incarnate in him.
The word "courtesy" was defined by his daily conduct.

The word "humility" was a demonstrated virtue to all who could see.

He lived under the authority of two books:

(1) The King James Version of the Holy Bible which he regarded as God's self-communication to man.

(2) The Book of Rules and Manual of the United States Senate which he mastered.

James Allen was a lawyer, a Senator, a superb parliamentarian, a legislative tactician, a dedicated public servant.

There are many skills and varied professions, but James Allen's life had a single vocation. It was to love the Lord God with all his heart and soul and mind and his neighbor as himself—to walk and work in obedience to the first two commandments, under the Lordship of Jesus Christ. It was growth in grace, perfection in love, discipline in prayer and ethical rectitude which marked his single vocation. He kept his priorities straight.

Christian perfection and fullness of grace do not mean flawless political judgment, perfect legislative action or errorless administrative direction. It does mean a better man at work bringing the mind and spirit of Jesus Christ to bear upon all of life. It does mean refinement in making the highest moral decision in each existential situation. It does mean doing one's best under God's judgment and leaving the consequences to providence.

Such a man was James Allen. He lived and worked and prayed and died with a single vocation.

He missed only one prayer breakfast during his Senate career which spanned almost ten years. Last February he presided at the National Prayer Breakfast and to the vast audience he said in part:

"It was Alexis de Tocqueville, 140 years ago, who wrote that America is great because America is good, but that if America ceases to be good, it will cease to be great. . . . Has America lost some of its greatness because it may have lost some of its goodness? We need God's help and guidance if we are to retain the goodness that makes for greatness."

"To this end this Prayer Breakfast is held. The Prayer Breakfast puts us in communion with our heavenly Father, and in touch with that great reservoir of spiritual strength that is available to all those who call on God in prayer. . . ."

"I am sure that all of us present this morning are convinced that without God's help we will never have world peace. We will never solve our many problems as a nation and as a world. Will prayer help? James says that 'the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much'. If that be true, and we know that it is, how much more would the prayers of all those present today avail?"

"Suppose all Americans—suppose all peoples everywhere lifted their minds and hearts in prayer to God for help and guidance. Would that help? Surely it would. You know, it is an element of God's omnipotence that millions can pray to God simultaneously and all have direct, personal communion with Him. No busy signals, no overcrowded circuits or switchboards. No, rather a straight line to God. Who could ask for more?"

"But God is not going to do it all. We've got to do our part. God uses our hands, our minds, our hearts, our planning and our efforts."

"He being dead, yet speaketh"

PRAYER

Our Father God, we thank Thee for all the sacred memories which cluster about this hour—for periods of prayer, for hours of debate, for times of fun and fellowship, for conferences and committee meetings, for hard study and careful preparation, for precious moments at home and on holiday.

We thank Thee for the life of James Allen, eloquent with love and wisdom and selfless service. We thank Thee for his love of country, his fidelity to his state and its people, his compassion for all who suffer, his courtesy and magnanimity, for his devotion to human rights and universal justice, for his innate spirituality and the depth of his commitment to the Lordship of Jesus Christ.

Suffer us not to miss the meaning of this day. Give us eyes to see and hearts to feel something of his spirit among us and though his chair is vacant and his voice silenced, may we be true as he was true, loyal as he was loyal, strong as he was strong.

And now, O Father who doest all things well, with thankful hearts that Thou hast given him to us for a season, we give Thy servant James back to Thy tender care until the shadows flee away and the brighter day dawns when the visible and the invisible are one in Thy higher kingdom.

Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen. Hymn, "Eternal Father Strong to Save"

Benediction—Dr. Sansbury

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit, be with you all. Amen

JIM ALLEN

Sen. Jim Allen's unexpected death from a heart attack while vacationing at Gulf Shores leaves a state shocked, friends mourning, a majority of Alabamians saddened and the politicians scrambling.

Allen would understand the reaction. He did not rival and perhaps even surpass Gov. George C. Wallace's popularity in Alabama without a thorough understanding of human nature.

He was a master politician who received his training for the U.S. Congress in the Alabama Legislature. No man serves two terms as lieutenant governor in this state without learning the ability to maneuver.

Allen learned his lesson well. He perfected his parliamentary skills when he went to Washington in 1968 and used them to tie in knots the liberal majority. Barry Goldwater and Ronald Reagan tried to awaken a conservative conscience in this nation through bids for the presidency. Allen stayed on the Senate floor and had a greater impact for the conservative cause.

The zenith of his career came just this year when he almost singlehandedly forced the U.S. Congress to read the Panama Canal treaties paragraph by paragraph before rushing into the agreements. He would have preferred us to keep the Canal but through his parliamentary skills helped win delay and change.

He was a rare find. He was one of the few we have known who voted in Congress liked he talked back home. He never tired of his fiscally conservative cause. In one of his recent weekly newspaper columns he aggressively attacked the federal underwriting of New York City. "There just seems to be no end to the city's fiscal problems and I feel that it would be imprudent for the Congress to approve any extension of the New York City Seasonal Financing Act . . ." he said.

In another recent column the late senator voiced concern over the nation's military preparedness and criticized the president for his "on-again off-again" decisions on defense.

He was infected with less Potomac Fever than anyone this state has sent to Washington in many years. He ignored most of the perks that go with the office and concentrated on the nation's and not his personal business.

The state has lost a real asset in Jim Allen but the nation has lost one of its really true conservatives.

[From the Opelika-Auburn Daily News, June 3, 1978]

A VOICE SILENCED

To be considered totally honest, a person of principle and one skilled at his or her profession is the goal of most individuals.

Few especially in the political field, achieve their goals. Alabama junior senator Jim Allen, who passed away Thursday night, reached his goals.

Although he spent only 10 years in the U.S. Senate after holding various state offices since 1938, Allen will go down as one of the outstanding "fighters" in Senate history.

"Perhaps he was the greatest parliamentarian ever to sit in the United States Senate," said Sen. Ted Kennedy, who because of his liberal posture and Allen's conservative stance, were often at odds on the Senate floor.

"He was a skillful and unfailingly courteous statesman whose dedication to the Senate was surpassed by his dedication to the people of Alabama. They have lost a kind and extremely able public servant, and the Senate has lost one of its best-known modern institutions," added Kennedy.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia said, "He was respected on both sides of the aisle, whether one agreed with him or not on an issue. He commanded respect through his mastery of the rules and his courtesy on the floor. He was truly a great senator who will be missed by all who had the opportunity and privilege to know him."

Allen was a fighter and a man of principal when it came to the issues. His conservative stand at times put him in the limelight, especially with his adept use of the filibuster. Panama Canal treaties proponents found an able adversary in Allen whose skilled use of the Senate rule book displayed all of his talents in nearly convincing fellow senators to vote down the treaties.

Allen was not a colorful or strong speaker who could raise the emotions of his audience. However, he was the skilled politician who often said "serving the people" gave him the most pleasure from his job.

At the outset of his U.S. Senate career Allen sold all of his interests in private business and began a practice of issuing a public record of his financial status. Allen's investments during his Senate career were in government bonds. He refused to accept fees for speaking engagements and might have been the only U.S. Senator who personally signed all of his correspondence and was virtually always available to his constituents.

As Rept. Ronnie Filipo of Florence said upon learning of Allen's death, "His epitaph is already written. He was a man of the people, by the people and for the people."

Mr. BUCHANAN. I thank my colleague for yielding and for taking this time.

Mr. Speaker, I have listened to each of my colleagues, and they have spoken well. Yet as we are gathered to attempt with our words to pay tribute to this great son and leader of Alabama, I am reminded of an experience when I was a child and my father, then the pastor of Maryon Pittman—who has become our Senator MARYON ALLEN—and her family, took us to the Grand Canyon. There is my boyish words I began to try to describe something of the magnificence and the beauty of the Grand Canyon. Finally my dad said,

Hush, Son. In the presence of the Grand Canyon only silence will do.

Somehow, as I would seek to describe the life of JIM ALLEN, I am reminded of that experience. I think a merchant in Gadsden came close. As we gathered there for the funeral service, he had a sign in his store that said simply,

Jim Allen: A leader difficult to find, impossible to replace.

As I was walking with a Member of the other body, a Republican Senator, the day after the funeral, without knowing the sign had been there, he echoed these words. He said,

I know no one is supposed to be irreplaceable. Yet Jim Allen was as close to being irreplaceable in the United States Senate as any person could be.

He was nothing less than a hero in our State of Alabama, and we choose our heroes well. For, as our colleague, the gentleman from Montgomery (Mr. DICKINSON), has said, Jim Allen was Alabama standing at its tallest, an Alabamian at his best.

I listened like other Americans on public radio, as I went about my duties in Washington and Birmingham, to the Panama Canal debates with growing respect and growing appreciation for Senator JIM ALLEN and his leadership. There is no one in this Capitol, I think, who has failed to notice his high ability, his skill as a parliamentarian. The just-retired Parliamentarian of the U.S. Senate said to me that JIM ALLEN was a fine parliamentarian as had ever served in that body, and used those skills for the things in which he believed. He was no mean historian. I loved to hear him tell the history of the Senate or of Alabama, and he knew it well.

I think it was as a Christian statesman that he stood the tallest of all. As our colleague, the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. NICHOLS) has said, he was chairman of the Senate prayer breakfast group, and all of us watched with pride as he led and presided over the last national prayer breakfast. But his religion was not primarily a matter of words but of the life he lived and the person he became—a man of bedrock integrity, a man of true character, a man whose faith lived in his everyday life. He was at least one Member of the other body who was in fact a man of the people, a representative of the people of Alabama, who loved and served them well.

I have lost count of the occasions either here in Washington or back home in Alabama when even a small group of Alabamians would be present somewhere and Senator JIM ALLEN would express after a long time together his honest and sincere appreciation for having that time together with a group of people from our State. He was a man who loved the people he served and represented.

As we sat together at his funeral service, someone quoted the poem about the fallen oak that left a lonely place against the sky. I think we all realize that JIM ALLEN of Alabama was an oak that stood tall, an oak that was sturdy, an oak upon whom we could rely. I think until his passing we did not realize how large would be the lonely place against the sky. There was never an occasion when any person or any entity in Alabama turned to JIM ALLEN for help that the help was not forthcoming, and immediately.

We relied upon him. Those of us in this delegation relied upon him. Every citizen of Alabama from the humblest to the greatest relied upon him. In our Bible Belt State we have great reason to thank God for the life, for the example, for the leadership of our beloved JIM. We wish his widow and our new Senator God's blessing and his strength to continue the great tradition that has been set up by her husband.

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I yield to our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. FLOWERS).

Mr. FLOWERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank my distinguished friend for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, Senator JIM ALLEN's death is a tremendous loss for our State and our Nation. Rarely do we have benefit of the service of a person of his genius and dedication, and his place of distinction in the Senate will be hard to fill.

The Senator was one of the most popular public officials in the history of Alabama. He dedicated his life to public service—and the people of our State loved him for it. In a most unusual way, I never felt sadder nor prouder than I did last week when we laid him to rest in his hometown of Gadsden.

On the national scene, he will long be remembered as a skillful and effective legislator and a tireless guardian of individual rights—a man of courage, wisdom, and humanity.

JIM ALLEN worked as hard as any public official I have ever known. He seemed always to be traveling throughout our State, visiting the people in their own communities, and his rigorous schedule both in his office and on the Senate floor has already become a legend.

All of the adjectives and descriptions of greatness come to mind when reflecting on JIM ALLEN and his life of public service—dedication, perseverance, intellect, leadership, integrity, courage, and on and on. Perhaps above all other qualities, he brought to my mind a definition of a true gentleman which I learned long ago. It goes in part like this: "The true gentleman is the man whose conduct proceeds from goodwill and an acute sense of propriety; whose self-control is equal to all emergencies, who does not make the poor man conscious of his poverty; the obscure man of his obscurity or any man of his inferiority or deformity; who is himself humble if necessity compels him to humble another; who does not flatter wealth, cringe before power, or boast of his own possessions or achievements; who speaks with frankness but always with sincerity and sympathy; whose deed follows his word; who thinks of the rights and feelings of others rather than his own; a man with whom honor is sacred."

To me personally he was a source of inspiration, a coworker, and a great friend. We both came to Congress at the same time—in January 1969—and we developed a particularly close relationship.

My family and I extend our deepest sympathy to MARYON, Jim, Jr., and the rest of the Allen family—and we offer our best wishes to MARYON as she carries on JIM's work in the Senate.

● Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, the death of Senator JAMES ALLEN of Alabama was reported in the national media as the loss of one of the Senate's great parliamentarians. I agree with that assessment. Although, I did not know Senator ALLEN very well, I was, of course, aware of his great parliamentary skills and I am glad to see that they were duly noted by the press.

Yet it was not for his skills alone that JAMES ALLEN will be remembered. He was a gentleman of innate courtesy, fairness, and integrity. As a veteran of some heated debates in the House I can tell you that after the debate is over, and the years pass, you do not always remember the arguments, you do not always remember the points raised, you sometimes do not even remember the specific issue. What you do remember is the civility, the integrity, and the intelligence that lie beneath the arguments of those who take the opposing view. A gentleman in debate achieves lasting victory even if he loses now and then. JAMES ALLEN achieved such victory. ●

● Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Speaker, many of the qualities of Senator JIM ALLEN were to be seen on the television screen and from reading his most-quoted statements. He was a man of ready wit and high intelligence, and those qualities were visible to all who knew him or knew of him. He was also a parliamentarian of the first order. The qualities have been given considerable and deserved attention.

But, in looking at Senator ALLEN's talents, we should not overlook the abiding devotion to principle and the deep-rooted loyalty to his people which motivated those talents in such a constructive direction. Here was a southerner of the old school, whose courtesy was more than an exercise. He was a man who not only asked how you felt today, he cared how you felt today.

JIM ALLEN's devotion to his people and his country drove the political cynics crazy. His was one of the safest seats in the Senate, assured by a devoted electorate. Yet he worked harder than many a person facing reelection in a doubtful State. This was because the relationship was two-way: JIM ALLEN had a devoted electorate and that electorate had a dedicated representative here in Washington.

While we are praising Senator ALLEN as a brilliant parliamentary strategist, let us not forget that he was also a hard-working, thoroughly knowledgeable legislator in the day-to-day business of the Congress. In conference committees, I always found JIM ALLEN had done his homework, and led the way toward constructive solutions acceptable to both sides. The job of effective legislation depends on those steady, hard-working Members of both Houses who knew their business and keep at it. Over the years, such devotion requires more than a fear of pressure groups or electoral challenges. It requires an intelligent mind and a dedicated spirit. JIM ALLEN had both. ●

● Mr. FLIPPO. Mr. Speaker, I join with my colleagues and the Alabama congressional delegation to rise in tribute to the memory of Senator JAMES BROWNING ALLEN of Alabama. He will be missed. The quality of his service to the State of Alabama and to the Nation will be missed. JIM ALLEN was a man of quality. The way he lived his life and conducted himself in public and in private gives us all strength to know he lived his life to full measure.

It is the quality, not the quantity of life that makes the difference—or so wise men have always said. One wise man of my acquaintance had both. JIM ALLEN's life lacked the quantity of years we would have desired, but it was a life filled with experiences both agonizing and joyous, with defeats and triumphs. Each experience was savored by this man who was never short of labor and action to meet the tests of life.

JIM ALLEN knew how to get things done, without sacrificing a close attention to detail or close personal involvement that has become an everdiminishing quality of some busy men. In truth, he was a very personal man with a set of rules he must have made for himself at some point and from which he never varied.

JIM ALLEN was a tough fighter for what he believed was right. JIM always played by the rules and he knew the rules better than anyone else. He made sure his viewpoint was heard on the issues of our country. His knowledge of the rules, combined with his unwillingness to bend them, earned him the early respect of the U.S. Senate. He would sometimes encounter the wrath of colleagues he opposed but he never found disrespect. Another wise man once said that we are sometimes loved for ourselves and sometimes in spite of ourselves. JIM ALLEN had the love of both those who admired him for his stands and from those who respected his abilities. JIM ALLEN reciprocated this love to his home State of Alabama, to his country and to the U.S. Senate in which he served.

JIM ALLEN was a man who spoke for himself and for the people. There was seldom any doubt about his opinions. He shared his views and carried them home to the people of all 67 counties in Alabama. There he made himself available to all of his constituents. Any person who did not have the chance to make his feelings or problems known to JIM ALLEN simply was not trying as hard as the Senator.

JIM ALLEN had a lot to offer the people in his senatorial service. He worked for them. He could spread himself out without spreading himself thin. He was indeed a man who could combine quantity with quality. He had both combined with perseverance and a genuine belief in what he was doing. He brought to the people of Alabama a sense of pride in knowing that they were represented by a man of the caliber of JAMES B. ALLEN in the U.S. Senate.

We mourn him, in the personal way that he knew us. We extend our deepest sympathies to his family. We knew him as a friend and as an honorable man. JIM ALLEN was the kind of man that Alexander Pope must have had in mind when he wrote in 1720:

Statesman, yet friend to truth; of soul sincere

In action faithful, and in honour clear;
Who broke no promise, served no private end,
Who gain'd no title, and who lost no friend;
Ennobled by himself, by all approv'd
And prais'd, unenvied by the Muse he lov'd.●

● Mr. MURPHY of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I would like to pay tribute to the late Senator JAMES B. ALLEN of Alabama, perhaps the greatest parliamentarian to have ever served in the U.S. Senate. Senator ALLEN's mastery of Senate rules and procedures made him a formidable power in that House, where his skill and sense of timing enabled him to block or delay passage of bills that he felt were not in the national interest.

Despite the tremendous power he wielded, Senator ALLEN was considered by his colleagues to be fair, calm, and courteous at all times.

JIM ALLEN's integrity and forcefulness in fighting for his convictions once prompted Senator Sam Ervin to say that if he had "to stand with one man at Armageddon and battle for the Lord, I hope that man would be Senator ALLEN of Alabama."

Mr. Speaker, it is doubtful that Senator ALLEN's exceptional parliamentary skill can ever be replaced. The absence of his outstanding personal qualities will be deeply felt as well.

I would like to extend my sincere condolences to Senator ALLEN's widow and family, and I wish the very best to MARYON ALLEN as she assumes her legislative responsibilities in the Senate.●

● Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I wish it were not necessary to have this special order this afternoon to pay heartfelt tribute to the late Senator JIM ALLEN of Alabama, but God in his infinite wisdom has seen fit to call his humble servant JIM ALLEN to Heaven. We who remain know we must carry on as Senator ALLEN would want us to, but at the same time we feel a great loss and realize the void which has been created and which we can never again fill.

Senator ALLEN without question was one of the finest, ablest, and most dedicated men to ever serve in the U.S. Senate. When he came to the Senate in 1969 he pledged to operate on the Jeffersonian principle that "government is best which governs least." He lived up to that pledge by consistently supporting limited government, free enterprise, and individual responsibility. And, I might emphasize, the people of America benefited greatly from the fact that Senator ALLEN stuck to his principles and helped to improve government and the manner in which it is administered on the Federal level.

JIM ALLEN was a public servant in the truest sense of the word. He never lost sight of the fact that he was elected by the people of Alabama and that his first and foremost responsibility was to them and their needs and beliefs. What he did as a Member of the U.S. Senate and what he was able to accomplish, he always did on behalf of the people of Alabama and America. He was a man of great humility who always strictly adhered to the principle that to be a public servant means to be a servant of the people and JIM ALLEN was certainly a man of the people.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that Mrs. MARYON ALLEN, the new Senator from Alabama, is able to be with us today. We want her to know that our thoughts and prayers are with her and other members of the Allen family and that we all share their grief over the untimely passing of their husband and father.

In closing, I would like to express my appreciation to the Allen family and the people of Alabama for sharing JIM ALLEN with us. It was a pleasure and personal reward to have known and loved him as a colleague and personal friend.●

● Mr. BOWEN. Mr. Speaker, it was with a great deal of sadness and sorrow that I learned of the tragic and untimely death of Senator JAMES B. ALLEN of Alabama, and I join the House and the Senate in mourning him.

His passing was a great loss to the Congress of the United States, to the people of Alabama, and to the people of this Nation. In his almost 10 years in the Senate, he had become recognized as one of the great bulwarks for freedom and constitutional government in the Nation.

During my 6 years in the House I worked closely with Senator ALLEN, as a member of the House Committee on Agriculture, since JIM ALLEN often participated in conferences with the House on agricultural matters of great importance to the economy of this Nation. I found Senator ALLEN to be an invaluable ally and a close friend in these conferences. He was unfailingly courteous and exactly fair in these conferences as in every other undertaking in which he participated.

His name is associated with many laws designed to improve the lot of the American farmer. He was instrumental in securing improvements in the Rural Electrification program; he was one of the main forces in securing enactment of major forestry legislation which will help family farmers increase their income from their forest lands; and he was a major factor in passage of legislation to insure the safe usage of pesticides in our Nation.

Much has been written about Senator ALLEN's prodigious parliamentary skills. He mastered the rules of the Senate and, by so doing, insured that legislation met the rigorous demands of the Constitution and of the people of the United States. The rules of any legislative body have as their main purpose to refine the product of legislative effort. Senator ALLEN was the Senate's foremost safeguard that legislation did not pass hurriedly and without sufficient review. He demanded, and by his parliamentary skills secured, that major legislation be able to clear all important procedural and constitutional hurdles before enactment.

Senator ALLEN unfailingly used his parliamentary gifts in a civil, kind, and gentlemanly manner, and even his consistent opponents praised his fairness and his evenhandedness.

JIM ALLEN's dedication and love for the Senate is legend. In the decade he spent there, he became one of the towering legislative giants of our age. He was dedicated to aiding the people of Alabama and the South, the farmers of this Nation, and the course of freedom and democracy.

He was a southern patriot and a national patriot. His loss will be long and deeply felt. He will be missed by his colleagues in the Senate and by his many friends in the House.●

● Mr. FUQUA. Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my deep sorrow over the untimely death of Senator JAMES B. ALLEN of Alabama.

Not only has the State of Alabama, and indeed, the entire Nation, lost one of its greatest public servants, I feel a deep personal loss of a dear and close friend. And I know my colleagues here today share with me this feeling of a great loss.

His wisdom and guidance will be sorely missed. Beloved by his constituents, he earned the respect of his colleagues, regardless of their political leanings.

An unswerving dedication to the responsibilities of his office marked his distinguished career and service to the people of his home State and Nation.

A valued legislator of exceptional ability, he was a strong and forthright advocate of fiscal responsibility and was the financial guardian of the interests of the American taxpayers in foreign aid programs.

The void left by JAMES BROWNING ALLEN will not be easy to fill. He was a great man, an outstanding public servant, and a dear friend.●

● Mr. ICHORD. Mr. Speaker, Senator JAMES ALLEN was recognized nationally for his encyclopedic knowledge of parliamentary rules, procedures, and etiquette. His devotion to parliamentary discipline reflected a genuine conservatism—a classical appreciation for the elegance that resonates in tradition.

Yet his allegiance to protocol was more than esthetic nicety or social refinement. It was deeply pragmatic. He recognized that adherence to parliamentary discipline averts occasionally muddled thinking. His classical conservatism impelled him to cherish orderliness, not for its own sake, but for the interest and importance of clear, deliberate thinking.

For JAMES ALLEN, creativity was unthinkable apart from self-discipline.

Justifiably, these qualities and values earned Senator ALLEN the profound respect of his colleagues, including my own. It was his kind of dedication to civility and tradition that makes our lives livable in the truest sense.

He openly professed his judgment that we should conduct ourselves with dignity—not a popular conviction in an age that zealously cultivates the mediocre.

He championed fiscal rectitude all his life—another manifestation of his attachment to restraint and self-discipline for society as well as the individual.

Mr. Speaker, all who cherish the memory of Senator JAMES B. ALLEN sincerely hope that his devotion to the best in American tradition will continue to inform the thought and spirit of those who carry on after him. I hope that this sad time for his family will be eased by the knowledge of the high places he holds in our history and our hearts.●

● Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, with the untimely passing away of Senator JAMES ALLEN, the citizens of Alabama have lost a trusted Senator; the citizens of America have lost a true statesman who worked hard for what he believed in; the Congress has lost a respected and conscientious Member; and I have lost a friend who was always willing to help.

Those who knew JIM personally had the pleasure of knowing a gentleman who believed in and fought for principles that have made the Congress a respected institution, and our Nation the hope of the world. He treated his colleagues with respect and even those who disagreed with his philosophy respected his actions and his personal abilities.

Much has been said in the Senate and in the House about JIM ALLEN's parliamentary prowess and his ability to play an important part in controversial debates to insure that all sides were heard. I never had the opportunity to participate in any of these debates because we were Members of different legislative bodies, but I did have the fortunate opportunity to work with him on several matters of mutual interest, including attempts to reform some of our foreign aid programs. JIM ALLEN was always willing to help me get my causes presented to the Senate. On one particular occasion, he stayed on the floor of the Senate during consideration of an appropriations bill to insure that funding was retained for the Bay Pines Veterans Hospital in my district. This facility will provide needed medical care for deserving veterans in the St. Petersburg area, and although the facility was just a dream several years ago, actual construction will begin soon.

JIM ALLEN was always there—on the Senate floor, in committee, in his office, or with the people of Alabama—whenever he was needed. In these trying times in our Nation's history, we will need JIM ALLEN more than ever, and although he has left us, his spirit will remain as an inspiration to every Member of Congress.

On behalf of the citizens of the Sixth Congressional District of Florida, I extend my personal condolences to his wife and family.●

● Mr. DON H. CLAUSEN. Mr. Speaker, we honor today a departed colleague whose contributions to our constitutional traditions and way of life are well known to all of us. Senator JAMES ALLEN was a master of parliamentary procedures, and was also one of the most concerned and conscientious Members of the Senate. Recognizing that Members of the Senate have a tremendous demand upon their time, Senator ALLEN was unbelievably approachable. I can recall numerous occasions, sometimes on the Senate floor, or at social functions, or at official activities when I would approach him on a matter of mutual interest. He always took the time to listen carefully and respond in a concise and constructive manner. While most of our discussions centered around transportation and water resources matters, I did have an in-depth discussion with him on the Panama Canal treaties. He did so much to be sure that his colleagues in the Senate and the American people fully understood the many disadvantages of those treaties.

Mr. Speaker, the people of Alabama and the United States have lost a clear, convincing and eloquent voice in the Congress. We are all richer for having known and worked with him.●

● Mr. ADDABBO. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to Senator JAMES ALLEN, a man who spent almost his entire life in public service. First elected to the Alabama State House of Representatives in 1938, JAMES ALLEN resigned during World War II because he thought that he could better serve his country on the battlefield, rather than in the State legislature. After the war, JAMES ALLEN served in the Alabama State Senate and, later, as Lieutenant Governor of Alabama. The last 10 years of this public servant's life were spent in the Senate of the United States.

I am grateful to have had the honor of knowing JIM ALLEN. He represented what was always to me the best of southern tradition. His courtly manner and gentlemanly bearing had the effect of adding dignity to his surroundings. In his personal affairs, he always seemed to put the needs of others before those of himself. JIM ALLEN always respected the dignity of everyone, even his most ardent opponent. To me, that is the true mark of a gentleman.

In Congress, Senator JAMES ALLEN's courtly manner and thorough knowledge of parliamentary procedure made him a formidable advocate of his position. His mastery of the rules of the Senate equalled that of the greatest who ever walked upon the floor of that august body. He was truly a powerful force in the Senate of the United States who skillfully and determinedly represented the interests of the State of Alabama.

Today, we are honoring one of the true greats of the Senate. The force of his personality and the integrity of his actions made an everlasting imprint upon the laws of the land and the direction toward which the Nation is moving, although he served in the Senate for a comparably short time. To that office, as well as to all of the other offices which he held, he imbued a sense of dignity and fairness which I will never forget.●

● Mr. McDONALD. Mr. Speaker, we shall all miss Senator ALLEN, because he was a wonderful person to know. People all across the Nation will miss him, because he stood up for constitutional principles and was not afraid to fight for them. People from the South will especially miss him, because he was a giant in the Senate, which is a southern tradition.

Senator ALLEN fought on many fronts to oppose what he considered to be bad legislation. He saw his constitutional duty clearly and placed our national defense first, feeling as I do, that without a strong national defense, representative government is not possible and other programs are not relevant if we are unable to defend ourselves.

Senator ALLEN will also be sorely missed in the fight to restore sanity to the discussion of the energy problem in the United States. Senator ALLEN was in the ranks of those who believe we need each and every energy source available and that we should develop more of our resources and not just attempt to regulate and conserve a dwindling supply. In particular, he fought against the ill informed arguments of the radicals and the confused idealists who feel we should not utilize nuclear energy for our Nation's needs.

Perhaps one of his finest hours was his battle on behalf of the American people against the Panama Canal treaties. He was outstanding in the debates and the Nation owes him a debt of gratitude on that score also, although we narrowly lost that battle.

I can only express the fervent hope that a new Senator ALLEN will emerge and become another "giant" in the U.S. Senate. Our Nation truly is in need of one. A gaping hole of immense proportions has now been left in the ranks of the Senate. I did not know the Senator on an intimate basis, but, in the few things we did together in the Congress, I was tremendously impressed by his efforts, energy, and devotion to the Constitution and the country he served.●

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Alabama, Mr. RONNIE FLIPPO, is in Alabama and could not be here. The statement of the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. FLIPPO) and others have been entered into the RECORD.

● Mr. WYDLER. Mr. Speaker, although I met JIM ALLEN only a few times in my life, I found him to be a gentleman I was glad to know and proud to be associated with.

His strong conservative feelings and deep convictions impressed his colleagues and his countrymen. He was, as we now know, ahead of his time in many ways. We will surely miss him here in the Congress.●

● Mr. SISK. Mr. Speaker, during the last 10 or 15 years, America has come through an age in which it was fashionable to denigrate American institutions. Regretfully, many Members of even the Congress of the United States seemed willing to stand by and let this happen without coming to their defense.

The record will show that Senator JAMES ALLEN was one of those who struggled to preserve and defend our Nation's institutions when they were under attack. He did this not because he felt that the institutions were always right, but because he knew that the institutions—even with their imperfections—were the only things which gave our Nation a steadfastness of purpose and a sense of direction. Without these, we would be a nation adrift.

I join with the other Members in expressing my personal regrets, and those of Mrs. Sisk, to Mrs. ALLEN and the other members of the family. We will miss him as a hard worker in the other body, as a friend, and as a fellow churchman. And the Nation will miss him as a fervent worker for causes he believed in.●

● Mr. SIKES. Mr. Speaker, I wish to join my colleagues in paying special tribute to the late Senator JAMES B. ALLEN. Our States adjoin and he was my good friend for many years. I was proud to work closely with him as a highly appreciated colleague during his tenure of office as U.S. Senator. He was a statesman in every sense of the word and he will long be remembered for his outstanding and dedicated service to the State of Alabama and to our Nation.

Senator ALLEN has been described as one of the ablest parliamentarians ever to sit in the U.S. Senate. Although he may not have been as widely known outside the Senate as some of his colleagues with longer tenure, his knowledge of Senate rules and his influence within the Chamber far exceeded his public reputation. The Senate did a better job because JIM ALLEN was there.

Senator ALLEN spent much time on the Senate floor as watchdog for legislation that did not meet with his conservative philosophy. He vigorously opposed the Panama Canal treaties and he was the recognized leader in that epochal battle. He led filibusters which blocked or delayed bills creating a Federal Consumer Protection Agency, reforming the Federal Tax Code, extending the Voter Rights Act, giving the vote to 18-year-olds, providing for postcard voter registration, and providing public financing for congressional elections. Few individuals have accomplished as much through constructive opposition to legislation which the public neither needs nor wants.

It must be stated with regret that Senator ALLEN's death surely diminishes the power of the Senate's conservatives. It can also be said that the liberals will miss him for he imposed a needed discipline on the Senate's actions. His parliamentary maneuvering posed a constant threat to liberal legislation of the type with which our Nation already is overburdened.

JIM ALLEN was born in Gadsden, Ala., where he attended public schools. He was graduated from the University of Alabama and later earned a law degree from that school. His career in Alabama politics dated from the late 1930's. He served in both houses of the Alabama Legislature and was twice elected Lieutenant Governor of the State. In 1968, he was elected to succeed Senator Lister Hill and ably served in that body until the time of his death.

My sincere sympathy is extended to Mrs. ALLEN and their family. They can be very proud of his achievements and service to this country. His work has strengthened our Nation. His passing is truly our loss. He was a great American.●

● Mrs. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, the Congress and the Nation will sorely miss his great integrity, his strength of character, and his commitment to principle. I refer to Senator JAMES B. ALLEN, who died June 1.

The news media has made much of his unrivaled mastery of parliamentary procedure. He had a wonderful talent of using the rules of the Senate to weave a web that impeded or even strangled legislation that he conceived as harmful to his State, his region, or the Republic. Even his adversaries marveled at his great art.

But there was much more to Senator ALLEN than his parliamentary skill. He was a man of deep religious faith. There was grace and courtesy in his manner in his dealings with all people. He respected his colleagues and their responsibility to represent their constituencies according to their best judgment, even when their judgment differed from his. He was a gentleman.

At many points during Senator ALLEN's career, his performance reminded us of something we often forget: The purpose of this legislative process is not just to enact proposals into law, but to defeat proposals which should not become law. Freedom in these United States is much safer if we remember this lesson from Senator ALLEN. I hope we all reflect on this at appropriate times in congressional sessions.

The news media has said much about Senator ALLEN's use of the filibuster, the final tool of a minority to prevent enactment of legislation which it regards as intolerable. Not enough has been said of Senator ALLEN's skill in the art of accommodation, of seeking consensus. This is as important to the legislative process as any other quality. On many occasions Senator ALLEN succeeded in changing dangerous legislation into acceptable legislation.

Many are intelligent, but Senator ALLEN had something more: wisdom. He understood people and motivation. He had an acute sense of timing. He comprehended not only what a piece of legislation would do immediately, but what its impact would be after decades.

Mr. Speaker, the State of Alabama and the Nation have lost a great Senator.●

● Mr. ROYBAL. Mr. Speaker, I join with my colleagues today in paying tribute to the memory of the late Senator from Alabama, JAMES ALLEN. His many friends here in Congress will certainly miss this dedicated public servant who achieved such a respected stature in the U.S. Senate.

JAMES ALLEN has clearly earned his place in our Nation's history. He will be remembered as possibly the greatest parliamentarian to sit in the U.S. Senate, as well as a champion of the filibuster. His understanding of the rules and his ability to apply them, made him a master at controlling the flow of legislation on the floor of the Senate.

The death of this distinguished statesman is a loss to us all. The people of Alabama and the Nation are left with the memories of a great human being who contributed so richly to the field of American politics. It is, indeed, with sadness that we now mark the passing of the fine legislator, colleague, and friend.●

AN INSULT TO MY CONSTITUENTS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. GOLDWATER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

● Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. Speaker, the Federal Government has done it again. The 1,500 residents of Hidden Hills, Calif., whom I am proud to represent here in Congress, have been designated as living in a "distressed" area by the U.S. Department of the Treasury.

The fine people of Hidden Hills, Mr. Speaker, are not accustomed to being characterized as such. You see, Hidden Hills is a very respectable residential community which prides itself on its very special homes, built on large plots of land to assure privacy; the many horses raised on these estates, and the much-treasured spirit of peaceful relaxation one must have from the hectic pace of the city.

Not long ago, however, the bureaucracy here in town did a computer run on several thousand localities in the United States, to target certain pockets of economic blight. Hidden Hills was just one of a number of other communities of considerable affluence to receive a "distressed" classification.

I made several inquiries into this matter, Mr. Speaker, and was informed that this action was based on the Government's finding that Hidden Hills had no industrial growth in recent years. That is certainly interesting news, considering the fact that Hidden Hills has absolutely no industry whatsoever.

Needless to say, Hidden Hills can now qualify for a Government guarantee should the community decide to float a bond issue. Thank you, Uncle Sam, but I do not think Mrs. Hartman, the mayor of Hidden Hills, or her clerk, Mrs. Henry, want to be bothered filling out all of those Government forms.

Mr. Speaker, I have not seen the people of Hidden Hills in such a state of humiliation ever before. When their neighbors in other communities have to offer them "a few dollars here and there" because the Government classifies them as "distressed," you know they have been insulted. ●

EXPLANATION OF VOTES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York (Mr. GREEN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

● Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to explain my votes today on the Stokes and Wright amendments regarding medicaid payments for abortions.

Abortion is an issue which divides this country on religious and moral grounds. I recognize that many oppose abortions on this basis, and I respect their views although I do not share them. Other religious groups believe that abortion is morally correct. Where religious groups differ, it is my belief that members of each should be able to act in accordance with their own consciences.

Under these circumstances, I believe that any program of general medical aid to the poor should permit poor women the same choice on the abortion question as is permitted other women who can afford to pay.

I recognize that those who oppose abortions may consider that some of their tax dollars are financing something they find morally wrong. This situation, however, is not unique. When we vote a defense appropriation, pacifists may point out that their taxes are then going for something they believe to be wrong.

Because of my beliefs about the right of women—rich or poor—to choose, I voted for the Stokes amendment, and I regret that amendment failed to pass. While I preferred the Stokes amendment to the Wright amendment, I voted for the Wright amendment because it contained the same language the Congress passed last year and I saw no prospect that Congress this year would come out any nearer to my views on the issue. The failure of the Wright amendment to pass is of great concern to me because the language in the House bill is now extremely restrictive. I would hope that fewer restrictions would be included in the final language worked out in conference, and that this issue be resolved as soon as possible. ●

WILL REGULATION GET WORSE?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. CRANE) is recognized for 15 minutes.

● Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, Government regulatory activities generate costs that are incurred by Government and by economic units in order to comply with regulation. From 1887 to the present, the character of Government regulation of business in the United States has undergone significant change. The industry-specific nature of much of our early regulation (for example, the ICC established in 1887) has been augmented by a new functional type of regulation in areas ranging from product hazards to job discrimination.

To show the impact in one area, I insert at this point an excerpt from the American Enterprise Institute's study "The Cost of Federal Regulation of Economic Activity."

PRIVATE SECTOR COSTS OF REDUCING POLLUTION

The most common strategy currently employed to deal with environmental problems is to set and enforce standards of environmental quality. The two central federal laws are the Clean Air Act and the Federal Water Pollution Control Act; subsequent laws have widened the scope of these initial statutes.

In general, the quality standards are implemented by setting approximate limits to the amount of pollution from each source. Typically, these limits require uniform or proportionate reductions by all discharges; that is, each source is required to reduce its discharges by an amount proportional to its contribution to the total.

The cost and relative ease of pollution reduction is contingent upon several variables—the industry in question, its product mix, its technology, the age of the existing capital, and the operational controls of the industry. The estimates given in the summary section relate to incremental compliance costs for pollution abatement. Specifically, they represent outlays by both the public and private sectors for federally required plant and equipment. A summary of these costs is shown in Table. Because estimates of incremental outlays by the public sector were not available for 1976, the 1973 figures were used after adjustment for inflation during that period. Again, these were treated as a one-time resource use in order to remain consistent with their treatment in the gross expenditure accounts of the federal government. The total compliance cost is estimated at $8.6 billion for 1976.

Public and Private Incremental Compliance Costs of Pollution Abatement, 1976

Pollutant/Source	Air	Water	Solid Waste	Total
Private	3.8	2.4	0.4	6.6
Public	0.3	1.4	0.3	2.0
Total	4.1	3.8	0.7	8.6

SOURCES: Figures for the private sector are from The Seventh Annual Report of the Council on Environmental Quality, p. 166; and for the public sector, from The Fifth Annual Report of the Council on Environmental Quality, p. 175. These estimates have been adjusted for inflation during the 1973-76 period.

Mr. Speaker, the ominous note in all this is that the Federal agencies obviously feel they have new worlds to conquer. This tendency is succinctly reported in the following article by James J. Kilpatrick in the June issue of Nation's Business, titled "Why Regulation Is Bound To Get Worse."

For the past year or so, a little current of optimism has been flowing through the American business community. There has been reason to believe—or at least there has seemed to be reason to believe—that perhaps the worst convulsions of federal regulation were behind us. Things were just bound to be better.

Forgive me my pessimism. I hope I am wrong. My own gloomy conclusion is that things are bound to get worse. The whole business of federal control has become a growth industry. Within the agencies of government, thousands of persons are now engaged in the interminable process of drafting, publishing, adopting, enforcing, amending, rewriting, and further revising regulations.

Within the private sector, other thousands of persons have found gainful employment in reporting, interpreting, resisting, or complying with these same regulations. The bureaucracy, in this regard, takes on the character of a breeder reactor that produces more fuel than it consumes.

Perhaps it was President Carter's oratory that set the current of optimism in motion. Early in his administration, Mr. Carter proclaimed his war upon needless regulation. He ordered rules drafted in plain English. He demanded that every new proposal bear the name and telephone number of the bureaucrat responsible. He instituted some desperately needed reforms at the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. He abolished several hundred advisory committees. He directed his cabinet to take a fresh look at their reporting requirements to see if the paperwork burden might be reduced.

Other events contributed to the hopeful notion that a new day might be dawning. The word deregulation suddenly came into vogue. There was talk of deregulating natural gas, of deregulating the airlines. On Capitol Hill, resistance appeared to be stiffening to further expansion of the federal role. The House rejected the administration's Office of Consumer Representation. Some modest tax relief for business still seems to be in sight.

There is less here than meets the eye. A few weeks ago, the Institute for Contemporary Studies, in cooperation with Northwestern University's Graduate School of Management, brought forth a book of essays under the forthright title of "Regulating Business." The 11 contributors are not precisely of one mind, but they are generally agreed on this much: The talk of deregulation is mostly talk. "Significant decontrol," says the institute's executive director, "has not occurred and is not in prospect."

In an introduction to the volume, Dean Donald P. Jacobs makes the same point. "Anyone not familiar with the facts, but exposed to the rhetoric of politicians and regulatory officials, the media, or studies produced by some academics, might well conclude that the United States is moving toward a dramatic reduction of its massive regulatory apparatus. The reality is quite different. While deregulation may be taking place on a modest scale in a few areas, new regulations and regulatory agencies are coming into being."

Two profound changes have taken place. Federal controls have moved from the specific to the general, and we have gone from economic regulation to social regulation. The implications of these shifts have not been wholly grasped.

A tendency persists to think of government regulation in the old patterns. We began with specific controls directed at specific industries. The Interstate Commerce Commission was limited in its jurisdiction to land-based carriers, the Maritime Commission to the high seas, and the Civil Aeronautics Board to the wild blue yonder. The Federal Power Commission looked after utilities, the Federal Communications Commission had radio and television for its domain, and various agencies of the Department of Agriculture laid down rules for the marketing of crops. In every case, the aim was economic; controls were manifested through certificates, licenses, and permits.

Old-line economic regulators are still in business, of course, but new agencies with new purposes have achieved a larger importance. OSHA offers one example. The Consumer Product Safety Commission provides another. The Equal Employment Opportunities Commission, the Environmental Protection Agency, and the proliferating bureaus of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare now exert a pervasive influence upon business decisions. The writs of these agencies run to industries everywhere, and the regulations are intended to achieve largely social aims—the employment of more minorities, for example, or the improvement of air and water.

The trend is exemplified in the Federal Trade Commission's pending proposal to limit or forbid certain television commercials aimed at children. The proposal is based upon a massive staff report that develops this remarkable theory—that because many parents are too weak or spineless to control their own children's television watching, or to say no when a child nags his mother for a sugary cereal, the advertising of sugared products is unfair and deceptive, and should be banned.

A synopsis of the FTC staff report makes these points: Television advertisers of food to children are caught in a competitive "sugar derby," in which no single company can afford to be "out-sugared" lest it lose its market position. This sugar derby, according to many experts, "undermines parents' ability to assure sound nutrition for their children by leading children to demand sugared products in preference to more nutritious and safer alternatives, exacerbates parent-child conflicts, and negates what little nutrition education takes place in the schools."

The synopsis goes on to quote the testimony of a clinical psychologist who says that parents do not intervene to protect their children from televised advertising "because of intense feeling of helplessness" and because parents are afraid of enforcing rules that they fear "might help to make their children social outcasts or social isolates."

Now it is a novel idea—novel to some of us, in any event—that the awesome powers of the federal government, through the rule-making authority, should be concerned with relieving parent-child conflicts. A federal responsibility for the prevention of tooth decay never entered the minds of the authors of the Commerce Clause. But "we have to draw lines," says FTC Chairman Michael Pertschuk. "The only alternative is to acknowledge that we are powerless to cope with a problem that parents, teachers, nutritionists, doctors, pediatricians, dentists, the commissioner of food and drugs, and now the surgeon general tell us promotes serious social and medical disorder."

Mr. Pertschuk's view of the federal role is widely shared. In this view, government is the shepherd and the people are the sheep. Shepherds are loving, and tender, and solicitous, but they are also firm. Shepherds know best what is good for their sheep. If the sheep will not buckle up in their automobiles, they must be protected by air bags. If the sheep smoke too many cigarettes, or eat too much sugar, or take too many pills, the coercive powers of government must be brought to bear.

This benevolent attitude is not likely to diminish. The well-intentioned ambition of the reformers and reshapers is much more likely to expand into new fields. Over the past two years the number of employees in federal regulatory agencies has increased more than four times the rate of increase in federal employment as a whole. We now have 215,000 persons working in the 30 largest regulatory outfits.

A professor of economics at Yale, Paul W. MacAvoy, has undertaken to measure the effects of these trends upon American industry. Direct price controls, in such fields as transportation and communications, now apply to about ten percent of the gross national product. The newer controls inherent in health and safety regulation, Prof. MacAvoy finds, "cover another 20 percent of industry so significantly that for all intents and purposes that sector is also regulated." In other words, he concludes, "the control sector of the American economy has probably grown from something like seven percent to close to 30 percent in the past decade."

The various controls, in his view, "have substantially increased prices in and of themselves." But there apparently are no commensurate benefits resulting from this activity. Indeed, Prof. MacAvoy writes, the effects are negative because of the impact of the regulations upon economic growth. Prof. MacAvoy observes that our rivers are not significantly cleaner, nor our air significantly purer, nor our factories demonstrably safer and healthier. We have higher prices, less managerial freedom, and more forms to fill out.

Like any other growth industry, the regulatory industry has spawned its own service industries. At least two periodicals have sprung up whose sole purpose is to keep track of federal regulations. The bimonthly "Regulation" was launched last year by the American Enterprise Institute; publisher William J. Baroody, Jr., says its circulation is picking up with every issue. "The Weekly Regulatory Monitor" covers 18 federal agencies intensively and keeps a general eye on many others.

Some of my own pessimism may stem from a casual glance at a sample copy of "The Weekly Regulatory Monitor" that recently arrived in the mail. In just one week in March, federal agencies were acting—at random—on sliding glass doors, pesticides containing ethylene oxide, lead pollution in the atmosphere, subscription television, the labeling of tranquilizers, crude oil in Alaska, ear drops, zinc imports, railroad derailments, and proposed changes in the grading of cattle and sheep. Our government was concerned with health planning, surface mining, aviation fuel, checking accounts, medicated animal feeds, stock options, unvented gas space heaters, quadraphonic FM radios, the inflation of automobile tires, and a proposed Treasury rule "requiring labels on alcoholic beverage containers warning pregnant women about possible fetal hazards resulting from drinking."

In three areas alone—health care, education, and the prevention of discrimination—the agencies of our federal government have new worlds to conquer. The allocation of energy resources has barely been touched. My own crystal ball is often clouded and unreliable, but it yields a clear view—and a dismal one—of what lies ahead in the field of regulation. As Al Jolson used to say, you ain't seen nothin' yet.

Mr. Speaker, in order to overcome the regulatory trend, stimulate the economy, and create jobs, Congressman MICKEY EDWARDS of Oklahoma and I introduced our American job investment package on March 21, 1970. The following outline includes the highlights of the package:

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE JOB STABILITY PACKAGE

I. URBAN GROWTH ACT

Reduce the corporate tax rate.
Increase the surtax exemption.
Eliminate the double taxation of dividends.

A 10% investment credit for investments in high unemployment areas.

Jobs tax credit.

II. TRUTH IN REGULATION ACT

Require all federal agencies to prepare environmental impact statements and cost-benefit analyses prior to the issuance of new regulations.

Obligate both houses to vote on any regulation which is found to cause unemployment in an area.

Establish a local task force to assess economic and employment impacts of proposed regulation.

III. ANTI-DUMPING ENFORCEMENT ACT

Cut the time frame approximately in half for dumping investigations

Establish a mediating board composed of business and labor to monitor dumping investigations and act as a liaison for both industry and union parties affected.

Mr. Speaker, Congressman EDWARDS of Oklahoma and I now have 48 cosponsors and we have reintroduced the package today. We invite our colleagues on both sides of the aisle to join us as cosponsors for future insertion in the RECORD. Those that are now included are listed below:

HOUSE RADIO COVERAGE: AN HISTORIC BREAKDOWN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. ANDERSON) is recognized for 30 minutes.

● Mr. ANDERSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I must protest your decision of last week to permit media access only to the audio coverage of House proceedings beginning this week. This does not represent an historic breakthrough, but rather an historic breakdown. It is a breakdown in relations with the broadcast media covering the House. And it is a breakdown in trust with the House itself which voted 342 to 44 last October 27 for House Resolution 866, which authorized the "complete and unedited audio and visual broadcasting and recording of the proceedings of the House of Representatives" and access to such coverage by "all television and radio broadcasting stations, networks, services, and systems—including cable systems—which are accredited to the House Radio and Television Correspondents' Galleries."

Mr. Speaker, in your announcement in this Chamber on Thursday, June 8, you indicated that:

Under the provisions of that resolution, all accredited news media will be allowed beginning on Monday, June 12, to plug into the House microphone system and to distribute full audio coverage of House proceedings for an indefinite trial period.

This is a serious misreading and violation of the provisions of House Resolution 866 which clearly provided for the simultaneous availability of the audio and visual coverage of our proceedings to the broadcast media. Under the terms of that resolution you were granted the immediate authority to "devise and implement a system * * * for closed circuit viewing of floor proceedings of the House of Representatives in the offices of all Members and committees * * *." The resolution further provided that the "Committee on Rules shall conduct a study of all alternative methods of providing complete and unedited audio and visual broadcasting of the proceedings of the House of Representatives" and "report its findings and recommendations as soon as practicable, but not later than February 15, 1978." That report, "Broadcasting the Proceedings of the House" (H. Rept. 95-881), was issued on February 15, 1978.

Finally, House Resolution 866 provided that, "As soon as practicable after receipt of the report of the committee, the Speaker shall devise and implement a system subject to his direction and control for complete and unedited audio and visual broadcasting and recording of the proceedings of the House of Representatives," and "for the distribution of such broadcasts and recordings thereof to news media and the storage of audio and video recordings of the proceedings."

At no point in the report on House Resolution 866, during the debate thereon, or in the subsequent deliberations of the Committee on Rules or its report of February 15 was it ever suggested that the audio and visual coverage should be decoupled and that the audio coverage should be made available to the media before the video coverage. As one who served on the Ad Hoc Subcommittee on Broadcasting of the Rules Committee in the last Congress, and on the Subcommittee on the Rules and Organization of the House in this Congress, I think I can state with some authority that the only remaining obstacle to going public has been the question of who should control the cameras—the House itself or a network pool. That was the main reason House Resolution 866 called for an additional study by the Rules Committee before the Speaker made a final decision on this matter. It was clearly our intent that the Speaker have the full benefit of such a study of alternative systems before devising and implementing a complete system for audio and visual coverage of our proceedings. The Rules Committee was closely divided on the question of who should control the cameras, with a narrow majority favoring a House-controlled system. But even the majority report strongly recommended that:

The Speaker should authorize broadcasting to begin only after he and the committee he selects, on the basis of tests conducted with the actual equipment and under the actual lighting and camera conditions to be used, are satisfied that the coverage produces an acceptable level of picture, sound, and production quality without undue discomfort, distraction or inconvenience for Members on the floor of the House.

That February 15 report went on to recommend that:

The Speaker should seek, and the House should provide, funds sufficient to obtain expert advice, quality equipment, and professionally competent staff required to achieve and maintain these conditions.

Moreover, the report recommended that:

Broadcasting should not begin until appropriate legal and administrative arrangements connected with the use of broadcast coverage are completed or close to completion.

In other words, the Rules Committee felt strongly that before any broadcasting should begin, appropriate preparations should be made—that if we were going to do this in a creditable manner, it should be done right.

Interestingly enough, the Speaker latched onto those recommendations as an excuse to delay public access to our broadcast coverage until next year. And yet now, he has authorized public access to our audio coverage, even though none of the technical or legal preparations have been made. Granted, visual coverage involves more technical problems than audio coverage. But the fact is there is no evidence that the Speaker is complying with the "soon as practicable" clause of House Resolution 866 to overcome those problems and devise and implement a system "for complete and unedited audio and visual broadcasting and recording of the proceedings of the House of Representatives."

Admittedly, House Resolution 866 gives the Speaker the unilateral authority to decide on the type of system to be utilized—whether House-controlled or professional broadcaster controlled. But, the Speaker has also publicly pledged on at least two occasions—on Meet the Press, December 11, 1977; and Face the Nation, January 22, 1978—to give the House the final vote on the decision of who should control the cameras. On the former occasion the Speaker said:

I think it would be ultimately something to be voted on by the House . . . this is a democracy and whatever the will of the members are, I will follow . . . It is going to be the will of the Congress themselves how they decide.

On the latter occasion the Speaker was asked: "Will every Member have a vote in this?" to which the Speaker responded, "I would have to say yes."

And yet, despite this pledge, the Speaker has made no movement toward giving the House that vote. It should have been presented to the House as soon as possible after the Rules Committee issued its February 15 report this year. Had that been done, the Speaker could have proceeded immediately to either purchase House cameras and related equipment or make arrangements with professional broadcasters to provide the coverage. But things still hang in limbo over that fundamental decision—four months after the February 15 decision point.

One can only conclude from all this that the Speaker is less than anxious to move forward "as soon as practicable" on implementing a broadcast system as the House mandated him to do by the adoption of House Resolution 866 last October. It will hardly do to claim that various technical problems prevent this when the House has not even been given a chance to vote on a system—a mere parliamentary procedure which presents no technical problem. Even the most inept legislative draftsman could devise a simple House resolution providing for a House broadcast vote in less than 4 months time. Had the House voted on such a resolution shortly after February 15 a complete audio and visual broadcast system could have been purchased, installed and operable by now. There may well be some political considerations involved here such as the uncertainty over the effect of broadcast coverage on the upcoming elections, but I doubt if the House intended for that to be a factor in determining when its "practicable" to go public with the coverage.

I think it should be noted that on at least two occasions the Architect has received orders from the Speaker to purchase new color TV cameras and related equipment, presumably only to improve on the quality of the present closed-circuit coverage. On both occasions I have reminded the Speaker that such an action goes beyond what the House had in mind in authorizing him to complete the closed-circuit system. The legislative history makes clear that that authorization was only for completing the cabling of the House Office buildings, and not for purchasing an expensive new color camera system. On both occasions the Speaker reversed his order to the Architect. On the most recent attempt, the argument was made to me that, even if the House should vote for coverage by a professional broadcast pool, the pool would purchase the new color cameras from the House. But in response to my inquiry, a representative of the pool indicated that, "there is potentially great difficulty in a scheme wherein the industry would be asked to purchase used equipment to implement coverage of House proceedings." Moreover, the pool had not even been consulted about such a possibility.

Mr. Speaker, when I opened my remarks I indicated that going ahead only with making audio coverage available to the media now represented an historic breakdown in House relations with the broadcast media which cover the Hill. Apparently the Speaker's decision and the details of it were only discussed with one representative of the media—AP radio. There was no consultation with the executive committee of the Radio and Television Correspondents' Gallery on this, and my information is that a substantial number of representatives of both the radio and television media are outraged by this agreement. The radio people are justifiably outraged at not being allowed to have any commentators in the gallery overlooking the floor, as was done with the Panama Canal debates in the other body. Instead, they will be forced to try to figure out what is happening by watching TV coverage on closed-circuit monitors in the studios off the floor. As Frank Mankiewicz, president of National Public Radio put it, this would be like trying to cover a basketball game from closed circuit monitors with only a view of both backboards and nothing more. In his words, "You can tell when a basket is scored, but not by whom or how. Serious journalists cannot broadcast under these restraints."

The television people also have cause for complaint since they will be denied the use of their primary tools—visual pictures—to report on our proceedings. This is a blatant case of favoritism towards one broadcast media over another, and even the favored few are not happy with the shackled conditions under which they will be forced to operate. The House should not act in this cavalier, take-it-or-leave-it fashion towards the media, without even the slightest attempt at consultation and accommodation with the elected representatives of the radio and TV galleries. As I mentioned earlier, it was clearly the intent of the Rules Committee that if we were to broadcast our proceedings, it should be done right, and that means careful preparation and consultation with those who will be using this coverage.

Had the Speaker bothered to consult with the Rules Committee, for instance, he might have discovered that the British House of Commons experiment with only radio coverage, under similar severe restraints, was a complete disaster because the broadcast journalists could not adequately explain to their listeners what was happening during debate. This produced a negative reaction from the listening audience—they were confused and frustrated in trying to figure out what was going on. In short, the experiment had the opposite effect than intended: instead of informing the public and stimulating their interest in the debates in the House of Commons, it only turned them off.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, this audio experiment you have initiated is contrary to what the House intended when it adopted House Resolution 866 last fall. The House clearly intended for you to move forward simultaneously in implementing an audio and visual system for broadcasting our proceedings, and not a hear today, see tomorrow approach. Moreover, the haphazard and secretive manner in which this agreement was struck outside normal broadcast channels, has only poisoned the relations of this body with the broadcast media and made more difficult the prospect for an acceptable visual broadcast system in the House in the future.

To repair this damage, I would strongly urge you to renegotiate the conditions for audio broadcasting with the elected representatives of the Radio and TV Correspondents' Galleries. Moreover, I would urge you to bring a resolution to the House floor as soon as possible which will permit the House an opportunity to decide who should control the television coverage of our proceedings. That will enable you to move forward with deliberate speed in complying with the mandate of House Resolution 866 to provide media access to the audio and visual coverage of our proceedings. The authority of that resolution expires at the end of this Congress. Obviously, therefore, it was the intent of the House that the provisions of the resolution be implemented this year, not next. Even if you should decide that it is not practicable to provide public access to the televised coverage of our debates this year, the system should at least be installed, tested and ready for public viewing by the opening day of the next Congress, and not 6 months later.

At this point in the RECORD, Mr. Speaker, I include an article from last Friday's Washington Star on this matter, a series of unanswered letters to you, and my correspondence with the Architect and Sanford Socolow, a representative of the network pool.

"LIVE FROM HOUSE"—STILL SOME PROBLEMS
(By Dennis John Lewis)

Don't hold your breath waiting to hear many radio broadcasts live from the House of Representatives, even though Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said yesterday such broadcasts will now be allowed.

You might hear occasional "actualities" on radio newscasts, with snippets of congressional speeches, but what O'Neill said broadcasters could do for continuous coverage—pick up an open feed from the microphones the House has installed for its own use—Isn't enough for most broadcasters at this point.

Frank Mankiewicz, president of National Public Radio, called for continued negotiations on the subject, comparing the O'Neill proposal to the idea of broadcasting about a basketball game from closed circuit pictures, with a view of only both backboards and nothing more: "You can tell when a basket has been scored, but not by whom or how. Serious journalists cannot broadcast under these restraints."

The House and broadcasters have been debating who can control what is aired from the chamber; where commentators might be situated; whether network equipment and union technicians will be used.

Representatives of the Radio-TV News Directors Association were meeting today to discuss the O'Neill proposal and the broadcasters' response.

The lone cheer for the O'Neill announcement came from Associated Press Radio, which had suggested such a feed from the House floor in a letter to the speaker two weeks ago. Bill McCloskey, AP Radio's assistant managing editor, said if a plug-in experiment works as expected, his network will offer its first live coverage from the House at 12:06 p.m. Monday. AP Radio news is carried locally by WASH-FM, WGMS AM/FM, WTOP-AM, WRC-AM, WEEL-AM and WPRW-AM.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D.C., February 16, 1978.

Hon. THOMAS P. O'NEILL, Jr.,
Speaker, U.S. House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: It is my understanding that you reiterated to the press in your office last week your intention to give the House a vote on the alternative means of providing broadcast coverage of House proceedings. I commend you on your continuing commitment in public to permitting a House vote on this matter.

It is my further understanding that you indicated the vote would come on a resolution creating a select committee to supervise the House broadcast operation, and that such a resolution would be open to amendments. I think this could be an appropriate vehicle for a House vote on the broadcast alternatives, provided the resolution is not sent to the House as privileged and provided any amendment offering an alternative method of broadcast coverage would be germane to the resolution. In this regard, I think it might be helpful if section 1 of the resolution simply stated that, "It is the sense of the House that the audio and visual broadcast coverage of the proceedings of the House should be provided by the House." This would embody the principal recommendation of the Rules Committee and give the House a chance to consider substitutes for this section. Section 2 would establish the select committee, and could be amended to reflect any change made by amendments adopted to section 1.

It is also my hope that such a resolution can be brought up in the House at the earliest practicable date so that work can go forward on installing the new system. I realize that funds have already been reprogrammed in the Architect's budget to cover the purchase of new color cameras and related equipment. But as I wrote to you earlier, and as you agreed, it would not be proper for the House to make such an investment before it is finally determined who will be providing the coverage. I therefore assume that you will not give the Architect the final go-ahead to buy new color cameras until after the House votes on the matter.

Very truly yours,

JOHN B. ANDERSON,
Member of Congress.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D.C., May 1, 1978.

HON. THOMAS P. O'NEILL, JR.,
Speaker, U.S. House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: As a member of the Rules Committee's Subcommittee on the Rules and Organization of the House, I am writing to inquire into the status of the House broadcast system authorized by H. Res. 866 adopted by the House on October 27, 1977.

As you will recall, that resolution instructed the Rules Committee to report on alternative broadcast systems by February 15, 1978, and the Speaker to devise and implement a system for broadcasting House proceedings "as soon as practicable after receipt of the report of the committee."

It has now been two and one-half months since the Rules Committee issued its report. You have publicly indicated on at least three occasions that you would give the House a chance to vote on the broadcast alternatives—namely, whether the House should own and operate its own broadcast system or whether professional broadcasters should provide the coverage.

I appreciate the fact that the Rules Committee raised some technical concerns about what must be done before such a system can be fully operational, and that you have indicated that these concerns preclude going public before next year. But I hope you realize that many of these concerns cannot be dealt with until the new cameras and equipment have been purchased, installed and tested, and that considerable time will be needed for these steps. It is therefore vital that a decision be made by the House as soon as possible so whoever is charged with the responsibility can begin to gear up for next year.

I would appreciate your response to this letter at your earliest convenience.

Very truly yours,

JOHN B. ANDERSON,
Member of Congress.

CXXIV—1089—Part 13

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D.C., May 5, 1978

HON. THOMAS P. O'NEILL, JR.,
Speaker, U.S. House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: This is to inform you of my reaction to Jack Brooks' suggestion that you purchase new color cameras to televise House proceedings before the House can vote on who should control those cameras.

In my opinion such a move would not only prejudice the House vote but would violate the spirit if not the letter of H. Res. 866 which inextricably links the implementation of a broadcast system (including the purchase and installation of cameras) to the decision on who should operate that system.

There can be no question that you are now legally entitled to unilaterally decide who should own and operate the cameras—whether the House or a professional broadcast pool. Under the terms of H. Res. 866 that decision may be made after receipt of the February 15th Rules Committee report on alternative methods of providing coverage. But, you have promised on several occasions that the House would have a vote on that important question, and I have no reason to doubt your word. It therefore seems clear to me that the implementation of the House broadcast system, including the purchase of new color cameras, cannot take place until the question of control has been resolved by a House vote. To take this in reverse order would be ludicrous since we have no assurance the pool would want our new cameras should the House choose the pool. In fact, I have good reason to believe the pool would not buy our camera for certain technical reasons.

In conclusion, I would strongly urge you to bring this matter to a vote in the House as soon as possible so whoever is chosen to operate the system can proceed to purchase the necessary cameras and related equipment.

Very truly yours,

JOHN B. ANDERSON,
Member of Congress.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D.C., May 8, 1978.

MR. SANFORD SOCOLOW,
Vice President, CBS News,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR SANDY: I am writing to you in your capacity as the present representative of the networks on matters of mutual concern, the so-called "network pool." The question has been raised with me about the attitude of the pool toward purchasing colored television cameras from the House if, after purchasing such cameras for in-House use and testing, the House should subsequently vote to have the pool provide the coverage.

I was informed by one Member who is very knowledgeable about the House broadcast system that it would be no problem for the pool to acquire such cameras to provide continued coverage of House proceedings, and moreover, that the pool would most likely go along with such an arrangement.

I would greatly appreciate your reaction and that of your pool colleagues to such a proposal, particularly whether this would present any technical problems and, if so, what they might be.

Thanking you in advance for your prompt response to this inquiry, I am

Very truly yours,

JOHN B. ANDERSON,
Member of Congress.

HON. JOHN B. ANDERSON,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN ANDERSON: On behalf of the informal network pool, I am responding to your letter of May 8, 1978.

Having carefully considered the questions you raised, we feel there is potentially great difficulty in a scheme wherein the industry would be asked to purchase used equipment to implement coverage of House proceedings. Technical requirements differ from one network to another, and odds are that equipment purchased by the House would fall somewhere between the varying technical requirements which now exist. In this connection I note that we have not been consulted by the House on technical details. Nor have our technical experts drawn up any current industry specifications for such equipment. There is also the question of cost, about which there is no agreement, either between the House and the industry or between various members of the pool.

So, to sum up: the informal network pool, I think it is fair to say, looks askance at such a scheme, because of potential technical and cost problems. And, as you know, it has always been our conviction that proper coverage of House proceedings requires independent control of the machinery. An intervening period of House control is unnecessary.

On behalf of ABC, CBS, NBC and PBS, I am

Very truly yours,

SANFORD SOCOLOW.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D.C., May 10, 1978.

MR. GEORGE M. WHITE,
Architect of the Capitol,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. WHITE: I have received unofficial word that you have reached official authorization from the Speaker of the House to proceed to prepare the papers for the purchase of new color cameras for the House broadcasting system.

As a member of the Subcommittee on the Rules and Organizations of the House of the House Rules Committee, which has jurisdiction over this subject, I am writing to inquire the following:

(1) Have you received authorization from the Speaker to proceed in any manner toward the eventual purchase of new color TV cameras for the House broadcasting system?

(2) If so, what is the exact nature of the authorization, and, if in written form could you please supply me with a copy?

(3) What is the estimated total cost of the cameras, and any related equipment, which you have been authorized to purchase?

(4) By what authority of the House have you been authorized to make such purchases?

Because there may be some question as to the appropriateness of such a purchase at this time, I would appreciate your prompt response to these inquiries at the earliest practicable date.

Very truly yours,

JOHN B. ANDERSON,
Member of Congress.

THE ARCHITECT OF THE CAPITOL,
Washington, D.C., May 18, 1978.

HON. JOHN B. ANDERSON,
U.S. House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN ANDERSON: I am pleased to respond to your inquiry of May 10 regarding the status of the proposal to purchase color TV cameras for the House closed circuit system. The response is arranged in accordance with your numbered questions, ad seriatim:

(a) Yes, I was directed to begin the preparation of initial specifications and whatever other documentation was necessary preparatory to the possible purchase of color cameras. My office has, further, been in contact with several manufacturers in order to obtain technical information, performance data and price information for future discussion, if such should be desired.

(b) The direction was not in written form, but in substance was as described above.

(c) I have not been authorized to actually purchase any cameras or related equipment; the cost, if such an authorization is given, is estimated at approximately $125,000 per unit, i.e., cameras, lenses, and related equipment.

(d) If such an authorization is given, I presume it would be under the authority given to the Speaker by H. Res. 866.

I shall be pleased, of course, to furnish any additional information that you may deem desirable.

Cordially,

GEORGE M. WHITE, FAIA,
Architect of the Capitol.●

MEAT-AX POLITICS SHOULD BE VIEWED WITH CAUTION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. ANNUNZIO) is recognized for 5 minutes.

● Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, since the passage of proposition 13 and the beginning of a much publicized "taxpayer's revolt" across the Nation, the political bandwagon has loaded down with budget and tax-cutting legislation.

Surely last week's vote in California and the public's positive attitude toward such a measure are signals to our Nation's law and regulation makers that taxpayers are fed up with escalating taxes and an increasingly inefficient Government bureaucracy. But a sudden turn to meat-ax politics should be viewed with alarm and caution.

A case in point is the legislation before us to cut the Federal Trade Commission's power to regulate false and deceptive advertising of children's food products through the appropriations process.

This provision to H.R. 12934, as reported by the Appropriations Committee, specifically places a moratorium on the issuance of any trade rules restricting the advertisement of foods on the Federal Food and Drug Administration's generally recognized as safe list. As amended by the committee, the provision allows the FTC to continue hearings and investigations of such rules but prohibits any rules to be issued during fiscal year 1979.

Mr. Speaker, this provision will kill an FTC rulemaking initiative begun in 1974 to halt deceptive nutritional claims aimed at children, and through unintended interpretations of the committee's action, may severely cripple the Commission's rulemaking authority in other food areas.

Many persons have confused the issues of safe foods and responsible advertising. For a food to be recognized as safe does not guarantee it is being advertised in a truthful or responsible manner. Even a perfectly safe food can be advertised in an unfair, deceptive, and misleading manner, particularly in the area of nutritional claims made on children's food products.

It is clearly the legislated power of the Commission to halt such false claims through the rulemaking process. In 1938, Congress gave the FTC exclusive rights over advertising of foods, drugs, and cosmetic products. The chairmen of the Food and Drug Administration and the Federal Communications Commission have repeatedly testified that rulemaking powers belong to the FTC in the area of food advertising. The provision offered by the Appropriations Committee effectively negates this mandate throughout fiscal year 1979.

For these reasons, I oppose any attempts to undermine the Commission's authority over food advertising. The lines of jurisdiction are clear. It is expressly wrong for this power to be stripped from the FTC through the appropriations process and certainly not in the best interest of consumers.●

HEARINGS ON UNITED STATES PRIVATE INVESTMENT IN SOUTH AFRICA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York (Mr. BINGHAM) is recognized for 5 minutes.

● Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of myself and Mr. Diggs, I wish to announce a series of joint hearings by the Subcommittees on Africa and on International Economic Policy and Trade on United States private investment in South Africa.

The Specific focus of the hearings will be H.R. 12463, a bill introduced by Mr. SOLARZ which would amend the Export Administration Act of 1969 to prohibit any new investment in South Africa by U.S. persons, and impose sanctions on U.S. persons with existing investments in businesses in South Africa that engage in unfair employment practices.

A hearing has been scheduled on June 27 to hear experts from the public. It will take place at 2 p.m. in room 2255 of the Rayburn House Office Building. Further hearings will be announced. Oral testimony will be accepted, at the discretion of the staff, only from persons prepared to comment specifically on H.R. 12463. In some cases written statements may have to be accepted in lieu of oral testimony.

Persons wishing to testify should contact either Jennifer Ward, staff director, Subcommittee on Africa (225-3157), or Victor C. Johnson, staff associate, Subcommittee on International Economic Policy and Trade (225-3246). Both can be reached by mail in care of the Committee on International Relations, House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515.●

HEARING TO EXPLORE NEWS MEDIA SEARCH WARRANTS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. PREYER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

● Mr. PREYER. Mr. Speaker, 2 weeks ago the Supreme Court handed down a decision in Zurcher against The Stanford Daily which has important first amendment and fourth amendment impact. The court held in this case that it was legal for the police to obtain a search warrant to go through a newspaper office looking for pictures taken by a news photographer. The police believed the pictures would depict the commission of a crime though neither the newspaper nor its staff members were suspected of the crime.

My Subcommittee on Government Information and Individual Rights, which has long had an interest in both Department of Justice operations and news media legal questions, is concerned about the impact of this decision on news organizations. It also may have serious effects on other third parties holding materials which police believe are evidence of crime.

In order to assess this impact we have scheduled a hearing for Monday, June 26 at 10 a.m. We will hear from the Department of Justice, from a panel of news organization representatives, and from a group of law enforcement officials at the State and local level.

A number of bills aimed at restricting the effect of this decision have been introduced and referred to the Committee on Judiciary. Our hearing will not consider legislation, but will examine the law enforcement and news organization policies which are evolving in light of this decision.

The record for this hearing will also remain open for a time in order to receive the written submissions of persons or organizations addressing themselves to the subject of our concern.●

ZURCHER AGAINST STANFORD DAILY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York (Mr. LaFALCE) is recognized for 10 minutes.

● Mr. LaFALCE. Mr. Speaker, probably 99 percent of all Washingtonians read Art Buchwald's column in the Washington Post. And if my guess is right, an even higher percentage of the Members of Congress read him.

Yet this morning, in his inimitably humorous way, Mr. Buchwald has made a devastating case against the erosion of first amendment rights of the American press in his hypothetical description of how police agencies, in conjunction with irresponsible judges, might well use the Supreme Court's recent decision for fishing expeditions or worse, threatening the liberty of us all.

Most police agencies are, of course, highly ethical. Most judges are hard-working and diligently carry out the law as best they can. But any society must remember that, after all, laws have no meaning unto themselves; they require implementation by men and women. And despite our best efforts, those on whom we rely to implement the law are not infallible.

It is this point which, in my view, highlights the basic weakness of the Supreme Court's decision in the Zurcher against Stanford Daily case, where the Court determined that a police agency could search the premises of a news gathering organization after issuance of a warrant permitting such a search. Warrants are dangerous weapons; they are almost impossible to limit in terms of the things to be sought, and they are obtained on an ex parte basis where the rigors of an adversary proceeding are totally absent.

The Founders of our country enacted the first amendment for a very good reason. They recognized the importance of a free press as an integral part of our "experiment in democracy," and they also recognized the fragility of the press unless it was specially protected from governments which, for good reasons or bad, might tread on its freedom to perform its essential functions.

I commend Mr. Buchwald's column to your attention, Mr. Speaker, and to that of all our colleagues. Its message is clear; the need for action on our part is equally clear. The column follows:

UNWARRANTED INTRUSION? NOPE, WE GOT A WARRANT

(By Art Buchwald)

"Knock, knock."

"Who's there?"

"The police."

"The police who?"

"The police with a warrant to go through your files and notes and photos to see if you have any evidence that might help us catch a criminal."

"I don't believe it."

"Oh, you don't, huh? Well, just read the Supreme Court ruling written by Justice Byron White in a 5-to-3 decision. It says you newspaper people have no more protection than anyone else."

"What are you looking for?"

"A little of this, a little of that. You never know what you can find in a newspaper office."

"But if you can go through our files and notes, nobody will be willing to blow the whistle on crooked politicians, waste in government and violations of the Constitution."

"That's right. So open the door before we break it down."

"Wait. It goes deeper than that. Many of our sources are willing to talk to us about crimes that have been committed. If they realize their identities can be revealed they'll clam up, and then you people will never be able to arrest the guilty parties."

"Maybe so. But you guys have been getting a free ride on the First Amendment for too long. This will stop you meddling in the government's business, once and for all."

"What are you throwing all those photos on the floor for?"

"We want to see if you have any pictures of cops beating up demonstrators."

"Why?"

"Because we want the pictures of the demonstrators. A lot of them got away when we were beating up the ones who didn't."

"But people are allowed to demonstrate. It's in the Constitution."

"Tell that to the Supreme Court. After we get through these photos we want every reporter to turn over his notebook. We want to know who he or she talked to and when."

"But that's a fishing expedition. Tell us what you're looking for."

"We must know who told you people that the judge was taking bribes from the mob."

"What judge?"

"The judge who issued this warrant, dummy. Once we find the guy who was singing he'll be held in contempt of court."

"But that judge is part of the political machine in this town."

"That's right, and we want to see everything you have on the machine, and addresses, too."

"What else do you want?"

"You know the bridge that collapsed last week? Somebody told your paper that the contractor had put in cheap cement which made it collapse."

"You want the name of the contractor?"

"No, we want the name of the guy who rattled on the company that built the bridge."

"Why don't you find out for yourselves?"

"We don't have to, when we can come here."

"Knock, knock."

"Who's there?"

"The FBI."

"What do you guys want?"

"What have you got?"

EARTHQUAKE RESEARCH APPROPRIATIONS AMENDMENT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. BROWN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

● Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, it is certain that we in the U.S. Congress must carefully weigh our appropriation decisions, and recent events have only reinforced that responsibility. Of course, we are also almost daily reminded of another grave responsibility we, as lawmakers, have assumed—the protection of the national health and welfare. At times the appropriation of Federal dollars for the benefit of one of these responsibilities taxes the other. The recommendation of the Committee on Appropriations to limit earthquake hazard investigation research in the NSF is just such an appropriation. It would save $9 million but leave 185 million people and untold billions of dollars of property throughout the entire country exposed to the death and destruction caused by earthquakes.

Presently these natural disasters cause a yearly average of over 8,000 deaths and many millions of dollars in damage. And, as more and more capital and people are being exposed to the threats of earthquakes these figures will dramatically rise. For example, U.S. Geological Survey scientists and consulting engineers reported in the August 22, 1975, issue of Science:

Recognizing that the exposed population in San Francisco Bay area has increased sixfold since 1906, that the investment in structures has increased tenfold, and that the fire loss in 1906 is not expected to occur again, $10 billion to $20 billion of damage is estimated for a repetition of the 1906 earthquake. The loss of life, if the occurrence were again during nonbusiness hours, is estimated at approximately 3,000 to 5,000. However, if the earthquake occurred during business hours, the loss of life could be many times greater, up to 10,000 or 20,000.

Very few scientists, if any, refute that a devastating earthquake will sooner or later hit a major metropolitan area—whether Los Angeles, San Francisco, Boston, or Memphis.

Yet, it is also the consensus among seismologists, geologists, and other Earth scientists that within a decade or so the state of the science will permit the development of a practical early warning system. Not only did the Chinese earthquake program successfully predict the major Haicheng earthquake, saving tens of thousands of lives, and three other major earthquakes—magnitude = 7—but also U.S. researchers predicted the Thanksgiving Day earthquake of 1974 that struck near Hollister, Calif. While such successes are not routine, a continued modest effort is realistically expected to yield such successes.

Certainly the Appropriations Committee has a difficult task, and judging from its report, I do not think it has any quarrels with the program. In fact, the program has been through extensive review—by the Congress when it considers legislation and by eminent physical and social scientists, Federal agency officials, State and local government representatives, citizen groups, professional societies and several congressional offices, including the OTA as the President's Office of Science and Technology Policy drafted the program's implementation plan. The result of all this work and review is a well framed program that responds very well to the public law. Its chances for success are good, provided a critical level of research is supported.

Again, however, my reading of the report indicates that the committee's recommendation is based upon misinformation. The report contends that as the design and policy activities of the NSF earthquake program overlap the existing programs of other Federal agencies, the NSF should decrease its funding of these activities. This simply is not the case.

While some Federal agencies, such as the Center for Building Technology within the National Bureau of Standards, the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration and the U.S. Geological Survey are very much intended and active in studies or programs related to earthquake prediction or hazard investigation, there is no evidence of wasteful overlap. Furthermore, the work performed by most of these agencies tends not to be research. For example, the Administrator of the FDAA, William H. Wilcox, has informed me:

Your perception that the NSF research efforts do not duplicate FDAA's research endeavors is correct.

We are also interested in the full spectrum of policy questions of earthquake mitigation, including the development of basic scientific and engineering information; the identification of socioeconomic, political, and legal problems and possible solutions; and the timely dissemination of this information in usable form to the private and public sectors. For this kind of research, however, we have neither the required staff nor the needed funds. Instead we have relied and will continue to rely on the research efforts of other Federal agencies, for example, the research element of HUD, the United States Geological Survey and the NSF. Our relationship with the NSF is one of long standing (since 1971) and is particularly close. From time to time, FDAA informs them in writing of our research needs in specific program terms. We participate actively in the review process of relevant grant proposals that they receive. And in the course of this review process, we help to shape their grant efforts toward the satisfaction of our own research needs in earthquake and other mitigation fields. Further, we are members of Advisory Boards to their grantees (for six to eight grants at any one time), providing frequent guidance as to the direction of the research effort and contributing the users' point of view. Most importantly of all, however, is the very close professional relationship of the FDAA and NSF personnel that ensures continuing communication and mutually beneficial activities between the two agencies. . . . Furthermore our dependence on the NSF's continuing performance of research in this area is very strong; hence a serious cut in this portion of the NSF's budget would deprive FDAA of our almost sole source of research results in earthquake policy matters.

This is pretty much the case for the Center for Building Technology. The Appropriations Committee report states that the Center is performing the same tasks as the NSF design subelement and claims that, therefore, the NSF program is expendable. However, like the FDAA the Center is inadequately staffed to assume the research responsibilities of the NSF. In fact, the Center presently depends on outside contractors for much of its research; and I have been told that it receives approximately 80 percent of its funds from other Federal agencies, including the NSF.

Mr. Speaker, this whole issue of proper funding levels for the NSF earthquake program was very well and fully addressed in 1976 at the President's request and is contained in the report, "Earthquake Prediction and Hazard Mitigation Options for USGS and NSF Programs." It was prepared by an external advisory group and reviewed by those other departments and agencies:

Department of Interior: Bureau of Reclamation.

Department of Housing and Urban Development: Federal Disaster Assistance Administration, Federal Insurance Administration.

Department of Commerce: National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, National Bureau of Standards.

Department of Defense: Advanced Research Projects Agency, Defense Civil Preparedness Administration, Corps of Engineers.

Department of Transportation: Federal Highway Administration.

General Services Administration: Federal Preparedness Agency.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Energy Research and Development Administration.

Veterans' Administration.

Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

The report presents options for future development of a combined NSF/USGS research program. Option A represents a level which is barely adequate to accomplish the objectives of the plan and would require the postponement of many important aspects of the plan. Option C is the highest level. Option B, a compromise, was chosen for fiscal year 1979 and is consistent with the Earthquake Hazard Reduction Act of 1977, now public law.

If the amounts recommended by the Appropriation Committee were to become law the design subelement would be limited to $6.8 million for fiscal year 1979 and the policy subelement to $0.8 million for the same period. These funding levels are well below the option A of the USGS-NSF report mentioned earlier. This means that these activities would not be supported by NSF at a level adequate to accomplish the program's goals. And, since the other Federal agencies are not now, nor prepared to soon, actively and efficiently conduct or support the research for which the NSF is responsible, it is most likely that these tasks will not be done. More specifically, the FDAA reports that it may not be able to get funds from other sources, the CBT reported that it will be similarly affected, and other agencies, offices or programs which either receive NSF supports or coordinate their interests in earthquake prediction or hazards with the NSF, such as the FDAA does, may be encountered with program gaps or inefficiencies.

Additionally, the latest draft of the implementation plan for the Earthquake Hazard Reduction Act is based upon a network of agencies. The network's and hence the national program's, success depends upon each agency conducting and coordinating its specific assignments. The NSF is to serve as an important node, or connecting point, in this network. In fact, the NSF and USGS provide the basis for actions for over 20 agencies under this implementation plan.

For all these reasons, and more with which I won't burden you, I will offer an amendment to the NSF appropriations bill that would restore the $9 million. Specifically, it would increase appropriations for the NSF to $817.4 million for research and related activities; which gives $57.1 million for applied science and research applications; of which $26.4 million is for earthquake hazards mitigation. The earthquake hazards mitigation program is to be divided as follows: $9.8 million for the siting subelement activities, $11.8 million for the design subelement and $4.8 million for the policy subelement.

These funds meet the dual responsibilities I mentioned at the outset, allowing in a very cost efficient and practical manner to mitigate the billions of dollars of damage and thousands of lost lives that U.S. earthquakes would otherwise eventually cause.

I, therefore, earnestly urge my colleagues to restore these needed funds.

Mr. Speaker, I insert the following fact sheet in the RECORD at this time.

FACT SHEET: NATIONAL EARTHQUAKE HAZARD REDUCTION PROGRAM IN JEOPARDY

Signed into law on October 7, 1977, the Earthquake Hazard Reduction Act of 1977 assigned major responsibility for its enactment to the U.S. Geological Survey and the National Science Foundation. Since then the Office of Science & Technology Policy has been hard at work writing an implementation plan for the Act so that the President could submit it to the Congress.

The latest draft states that the many agencies that will be involved in the national program are prepared to actively pursue the goals and objectives of the law. As drafted, the success of a national earthquake hazard reduction effort is directly linked to a properly designed and coordinated networking of these multi-agency inputs. Recent recommendations of the House Committee on Appropriations, however, if passed by the House when it votes on the National Science Foundation FY '79 budget could severely impair the program.

The Appropriations' Committee, in consideration of the FY '79 NSF budget, has recommended a $9 million cut from the President's request of $26.4 million. More specifically, this cut is targeted for two of the three NSF sub-elements and is actually below the current FY '78 plan. See table below:

NSF EARTHQUAKE HAZARD MITIGATION PROGRAM

	Current plan, fiscal year 1978	Administration request, fiscal year 1979	Appropriation recommendation, fiscal year 1979	Difference, appropriation request
Program subelement:
Siting.....	6,856,600	9,800,000	9,800,000	0
Design.....	8,750,000	11,800,000	6,800,000	-5,000,000
Policy.....	2,500,000	4,800,000	800,000	-4,000,000
Total.....	18,106,600	26,400,000	17,400,000	-9,000,000

BASIS FOR ADMINISTRATION REQUEST

Continued research and investigation by geologists, seismologists and other earth scientists have determined:

That within a decade or so scientists may be able to successfully predict the time, magnitude, location and probability of occurrence of potentially damaging earthquakes.

That damaging earthquakes are likely to strike not just a few restricted areas in the West but are possible in wide regions where at least 70 million people in 39 states live at major or moderate earthquake risk.

At the President's request, a report on Earthquake Prediction and Hazard Mitigation Options for USGS and NSF Programs was developed. The report presents options for future development of a combined NSF and USGS research program. Option A represents a level which is barely adequate to accomplish the objectives of the plan and would require postponement of implementation of many important aspects of the plan. Option C is the preferred and most effective option. Option B, a compromise A and C, was chosen for FY '79, and is consistent with the Earthquake Hazard Reduction Act of 1977.

NSF EARTHQUAKE HAZARD MITIGATION PROGRAM

The goal of the joint NSF-USGS program is to reduce casualties, damage, and social and economic disruption from earthquakes. The social, economic, and political actions that must be taken to attain this goal are based on technological capabilities that require development through research. The primary objectives of this research are:

Earthquake Prediction—Develop the capability to predict the time, place, and magnitude and effects of earthquakes so that more effective preparedness actions can be undertaken.

Earthquake Modification and Control—Develop techniques that allow the control or alteration of seismic phenomena;

Land Use—Develop procedures for assessing seismic risk and evaluating earthquake hazards so that appropriate construction and land use plans can be implemented.

Design Improvement—Develop improved, economically feasible design and construction methods for building earthquake-resistant structures of all types and for upgrading existing structures; and,

Social and Behavioral Response—Develop an understanding of the factors that influence public utilization of earthquake mitigation methods.

The Geophysics program sub-element of NSF and the USGS are responsible for fundamental earthquake studies to help meet the goal of this program. Earthquake prediction, induced seismicity and hazards assessment are the responsibility of USGS; earthquake engineering and research for utilization are the responsibility of NSF's Earthquake Hazards Mitigation program element.

This program is composed of three sub-elements.

The siting sub-element is concerned with the impact of earthquake ground motion on structures and the development of criteria and guidelines for its mitigation. This sub-element is to provide support for increased understanding of the physical basis of earthquake energy generation and the transmission of this energy as shock waves through various geologic and soil conditions.

The design sub-element is basically interested in the analysis and design of buildings, dams, pipelines and other civil structures, and is concerned with the functional, economic and performance requirements necessary to maintain the integrity of the structure throughout its intended life.

The policy sub-element supports research designed to:

Expand the base of knowledge on alternative social adjustments to earthquakes;

Identify the social, economic, political, legal and related factors which facilitate or hinder the adoption of both social and technological solutions to earthquake hazards;

Facilitate the beneficial use of earthquake hazard mitigation measures by devising effective techniques for disseminating information to the public and to decisionmakers at the local, State and national levels; and,

Investigate measures which will reduce possible negative social, economic and political consequences of earthquake predictions and warnings.

It was the conclusion of the National Academy of Sciences report Earthquake Prediction and Public Policy that—"Many of the measures that seem most promising as parts of the hazard-reduction program in response to an earthquake prediction may prove difficult to implement or ineffective because of various social, political, economic, psychological, and legal considerations."

Similarly, it was the sense of many who participated in the drafting of the implementation plan that the social, legal and economic considerations of earthquake prediction and hazard mitigation are enormous both in their scope and implications for the nation, and are certainly equally as important as the physical science research needs.

Similarly, the case can be made that if we are to reduce the damage to lives and property caused by catastrophic seismic events it is essential that we improve our ability to economically construct, and re-fit, structures capable of withstanding strong earthquake forces. A report on the Assessment of Research on Natural Hazards states, "of great immediate significance in terms of damage reduction and lives saved are acceleration of studies of suitable building codes in hazard zones, methods of earthquake-resistant construction for old buildings, and understanding the processes by which codes are implemented and enforced and new designs adopted."

APPROPRIATION COMMITTEE JUSTIFICATION FOR CUTS

The report which accompanies the NSF appropriation bill explains "clearly, the siting activities of the earthquake hazards mitigation program are properly a matter for NSF support. However, the activities supported under the design and the policy sub-elements involve subjects that are closely related to ongoing activities at several other agencies of the government. Those agencies not only have competence in the appropriate fields, but also have established working relationships with the engineers, scientists and public officials who must be involved in the work. The Committee notes, for example, that there are comprehensive programs on construction standards in the National Bureau of Standards, Center for Building Technology. This thrust involves cooperative efforts by the scientific community, engineering societies and appropriate State offices.

"Similarly, the Federal Preparedness Agency of the General Services Administration and the Defense Civil Preparedness Agency in the Department of Defense are deeply involved in the policy aspects of the same types of problems as are posed by earthquakes. The Committee does not find merit, either from the standpoint of the efficient use of Federal funds, or from the standpoint of effective intergovernmental relations, to add a new and relatively inexperienced agency to agencies which are already performing effectively in these areas and which could, under proper coordination, assume the responsibilities of the design and policy sub-element at minimal cost."

FALLACY OF APPROPRIATION COMMITTEE ARGUMENT

The contention that because some existing Federal agencies are involved in earthquake or related work they are able to assume the responsibilities of NSF design and policy sub-elements is, at best, very misleading. With only a few exceptions, these Federal agencies have small staffs and limited budgets for earthquake hazard reduction programs and usually these programs do not involve research—the purpose of NSF funds. And, again with only a few exceptions, such work is not perceived to be a major mission responsibility for these agencies.

More specifically, for two of the three agencies given as examples in the Appropriation Committee's report this argument is simply not true. The Center for Building Technology is interested and is engaged in activities in the earthquake resistant design of structures. However, the Center's earthquake staff is quite small and mostly engaged in policy rather than research. Moreover, the Center has been receiving about 80% of its research funds from the NSF and other agencies and in turn having the research done by outside contractors. Similarly, the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration is interested and involved in policy considerations of earthquake prediction and hazard mitigation. Again, however, the FDAA is unable to do research and heavily relies on NSF, USGS and HUD to conduct the research component of the issues in which it is interested. At least for the NSF, the FDAA does this by close coordination, including the review of NSF proposals. Neither the Center for Building Technology nor the FDAA adversely overlap the NSF program. Neither are the CBT or NSF engaged in the full range of research activities that the NSF's design and policy sub-elements have been supporting. And, for these offices to assume the full responsibilities of the NSF would entail some reorganization of the CBT and FDAA as well as greatly increasing the size of their staffs and budgets—not changes which could be made at "minimal cost".

IMPACTS OF APPROPRIATION REDUCTION

If the amounts recommended by the Appropriation Committee were to become law the design sub-element would be limited to $6.8 million for FY '79 and the policy sub-element to $0.8 million for the same period. These funding levels are well below the Option A of the USGS-NSF report mentioned earlier. This means that these activities would not be supported by NSF at a level adequate to accomplish the program's goals. And, since the other Federal agencies are not now, nor prepared to soon, actively and efficiently conduct or support the research for which the NSF is responsible, it is most likely that these tasks will not be done. More specifically, the FDAA reports that it may not be able to get funds from other sources, the CBT reported that it will be similarly affected, and other agencies, offices or programs which either receive NSF supports or coordinate their interests in earthquake prediction or hazards with the NSF, such as the FDAA does, may be encountered with program gaps or inefficiencies.

Additionally, the latest draft of the Implementation Plan for the Earthquake Hazard Reduction Act is based upon a network of agencies. The network's and hence the national program's, success depends upon each agency conducting and coordinating its specific assignments. The NSF is to serve as an important node, or connecting point, in this network. It is extremely doubtful that it can function well with a 54% cut in design and policy research funds.●

UINTAH AND UPALCO

(Mr. McKAY asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

● Mr. McKAY. Mr. Speaker, when the fiscal year 1979 Public Works Appropriation bill comes to the floor, I understand that an amendment will be offered to strike construction funds for the Uintah and Upalco units of the central Utah project from the bill. This would be a tragic mistake.

Let me begin by referring to the testimony of the Secretary of the Interior before the Appropriations Committee:

Mr. McKAY. Does the Department agree with the Ute tribal council that the Uintah and Upalco units must proceed to construction immediately to honor the commitment that the Federal Government made in the 1965 deferral agreement?

Mr. ANDRUS. Yes; the deferral agreement states: "All phases of the Central Utah Project will in good faith be diligently pursued to satisfy all Indian rights at the earliest possible date." In 1973 in response to the Ute Indian delegation, then Secretary of the Interior Rogers C. B. Morton reaffirmed that the Department is committed to finding a practical way to deliver the water to which the tribe is entitled. The Ute Tribe has continually supported the Central Utah Project but in recent years have become dissatisfied with construction progress. In 1975 the tribe requested that the Department pursue funding and necessary studies and programs to accomplish commencement of construction of the Uintah and Upalco units in fiscal year 1978.

UINTAH AND UPALCO UNITS CONSTRUCTION STARTS

Mr. McKAY. Is there any reason, aside from fiscal constraints, why the Uintah and Upalco Units could not begin construction in fiscal year 1979?

Mr. ANDRUS. No; we expect to complete the construction prerequisites. Assuming that no major problem develops, construction could be initiated in fiscal year 1979.

What we are dealing with here is a simple agreement entered into by the Ute tribe, the State of Utah, and the Federal Government. Congress has two choices: it can honor the commitment of the Federal Government, or it can turn its back on that commitment.

Today there are delicate negotiations underway in the Utah State Capital between the State and the Ute Tribe over civil and criminal jurisdiction, hunting and fishing rights, and water rights. All of the pending agreements that would insure tranquility between Indians and non-Indians in the Uintah Basin rest on one assumption: that the Uintah and Upalco units will be under construction in fiscal year 1979. Without construction, there is no hope of settlement of any issue.

Much has been made of the status of EIS's for these units. The draft EIS for the Uintah unit was filed with the Commissioner of Reclamation on May 18, 1978, and will go to EPA within 2 weeks. A final EIS is expected before the end of the calendar year. The draft EIS for the Upalco unit will be filed with EPA by September, and a final EIS should be completed early in calendar year 1979. As the Secretary of the Interior testified before this committee, there is nothing that would prevent construction in fiscal year 1979.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit a brief statement that I made before the Public Works Appropriation Subcommittee that details the requirement for construction funds for the Uintah and Upalco units:

STATEMENT OF HON. GUNN MCKAY OF UTAH

Mr. Chairman, as you know, I have appealed to this committee for funds to expedite construction of the Central Utah Project for several years. In keeping with my past position, I urge this committee to seriously consider funding the Central Utah Project to the full extent of the Bureau of Reclamation's capability in Fiscal Year 1979. The Secretary of Interior testified before this committee that $52,534,000 could be obligated in Fiscal Year 1979 to accomplish the task.

Today I would like to limit my remarks to two units of the project and to the crucial need to recognize Indian water rights in the Uintah and Upalco Units is the only way that the United States can honor the promises that it made to the Ute tribe in 1965.

Under the terms of the Deferral Agreement, the tribe permitted an inter-basin transfer of 136,000 acre feet of water per year to the Bonneville Basin. Work is now underway on the collection system that will divert this water to the population centers on the Wasatch Front, but this year's budget does not include funds to begin construction of the Uintah and Upalco Units. The 1965 Deferral Agreement bound the United States to construct the needed storage facilities in the Uintah Basin as soon as possible. Thirteen years later the patience of Uintah Basin residents is wearing thin.

The Ute tribe reiterated its support for the Central Utah Project in resolution 77-185, dated December 1, 1977. However, the tribe put the Federal Government on notice that in order to continue its support, the tribe "is rightfully entitled to receive immediate positive benefits from the Central Utah Project." In addition, a March 10, 1978, resolution of the Uintah Basin Water Alliance, composed of both Indian and non-Indian water users, called for immediate construction of the Uintah and Upalco Units, and warned that the Alliance would vigorously oppose, by whatever action is necessary, the diversion of any water to the Bonneville Basin "unless and until the Uintah and Upalco Units . . . are funded and under construction so as to assure their timely completion."

In testimony before this committee this year, the Secretary of Interior testified that the Central Utah Project is the best method for developing Ute Indian water rights, and he agreed that the Federal Government "must proceed to construction immediately" on the Uintah and Upalco Units to honor its 1965 commitment to the Ute Tribe. The Secretary testified that the only constraint on these units was a fiscal constraint.

I urge my colleagues on this committee to honor the commitment of the Federal Government to the Ute tribe by providing construction money for the Uintah and Upalco Units in Fiscal Year 1979. The Secretary of Interior has testified that $2,300,000 could be spent on the Uintah and $1,800,000 could be spent on the Upalco to bring both units under construction in Fiscal Year 1979. The Uintah Unit will increase useable irrigation water supplies by an average of 52,000 acre feet annually servicing 41,970 acres of Indian water right land. The Upalco Unit will benefit approximately 43,000 acres of agricultural land.

Construction on the Uintah and Upalco Units will provide concrete evidence to Indians and non-Indians alike that the Federal Government can be trusted to honor its promises and provide adequate water to the Uintah Basin, water that is the life blood of that community.●

BONNEVILLE UNIT

(Mr. McKAY asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the Record and to include extraneous matter.)

● Mr. McKAY. Mr. Speaker, we have heard a great deal about water projects over the last 2 years, but it appears that the facts concerning the Bonneville unit have not been thoroughly understood by all parties. Therefore, I am compelled to review once again the benefits of the Bonneville unit of the Central Utah project.

First, let me make clear that the administration does not oppose this project. The Bonneville unit passed the most careful scrutiny of the White House in last year's water projects review. The administration requested $28,536,000 to continue construction in fiscal year 1979. In answer to my question in the Public Works Appropriation Subcommittee's hearings on the fiscal year 1979 budget request, Secretary of Interior Andrus testified that the Central Utah project is the best method for developing Indian water rights for the Utes and that the department could spend $52.5 million on the Central Utah project in fiscal year 1979. The Public Works Subcommittee has made that amount available in this bill. (Public Works hearings, fiscal year 1979, pt. 3, pp. 23-33.)

In the past questions have been raised about the cost benefit ratio of this project. Under the discount rate in the recent water policy statement, the project will have a favorable benefit to cost ratio of 1.3 to 1. A return of $1.30 for a dollar invested sounds like a good investment to me.

To date, the Federal Government has invested over $200 million in the Bonneville unit. Furthermore, the Government expects to be reimbursed a total of $739 million or 86 percent of the cost of the entire Bonneville unit. This repayment to the Government is from receipts derived from sale of project water made available upon completion. These factors should weigh heavily in favor of completion of the Bonneville unit.

Environmental issues have been widely discussed in connection with the Bonneville unit, but I want to point out that the project has a valid EIS which has withstood repeated court tests. The Bonneville unit has been attacked and defended in the Federal District Court of Utah and in the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals, Sierra Club v. Stamm, 507 F. 2d 788 (1974). In both instances the courts declined to kill the project on environmental grounds and supported the environmental impact statement.

In order to clarify the environmental issues that relate to the Bonneville Unit, I would like to place in the Record at this point a statement which I made at the Central Utah project, Bonneville Unit hearing on March 23, 1977, in Salt Lake City:

ENVIRONMENTAL ASPECTS

The Federal Government has established through the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (Public Law 91-190) a procedural device known as the environmental impact statement which purpose is to present factual data necessary to define and evaluate the environmental impact of proposed or existing Federal construction projects. Such an environmental impact statement was completed for the Bonneville unit on August 2, 1973. I am confident that the members of the panel from the Interior Department will give full recognition to the EIS as the authoritative source on environmental issues, in that it was prepared under the Department's direction and established guidelines.

SALINITY

The Bonneville unit is now opposed because the diversion of over 136,000 acre-feet of water out of the Colorado River Basin would increase the salinity concentration in the Colorado River. It must be pointed out that the water diverted by the Bonneville unit does not reenter the Colorado downstream thereby directly adding to the river's salinity content. The environmental impact statement estimates that the amount of increase attributable to the Bonneville unit would be about 4 percent of the total estimated increase and concluded, therefore, that "the Bonneville unit, separately, would have only a minor effect on the salinity increase"—final EIS page 658.

FISHERY IMPACTS

The Bonneville unit is now considered to significantly deteriorate fishery populations. The EIS states however that:

The Bonneville unit would not be expected to significantly * * * deteriorate * * * existing populations of either game fish species or nongame fish species in either the Upper Bonneville Basin or the Sevier River Basin (EIS p. 349).

Furthermore, the Bonneville unit will produce 20,000 surface acres of reservoir area into which an estimated 3.6 million fish will be planted each year—EIS page 484. Lastly, completion of the Bonneville unit assures minimum flows in certain streams that otherwise periodically dry up during late summer months or periods of drought.

With respect to the allegation that the project would significantly effect the availability of wildlife habitat areas, the Bonneville unit plan calls for the establishment of three wildlife management areas which would be made available to the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources for administration. The cost of developing these areas would be covered by section 8 of the Colorado River Storage Project Act (70 Stat. 105).

In addition, tribal authorities of the Uintah and Ouray Indian Reservation have selected six areas, totaling 6,600 acres, along the Duchesne River for development as wildlife management areas under the project plan. While it is expected that the principle loss of wildlife habitat would occur as a result of reservoir inundation, the "broader impact on wildlife habitat on a statewide level is expected to be less severe" (EIS p. 478).

WETLAND REDUCTION

Yet another environmental objection results from the diking of Utah Lake to reduce its size by one-third. It is estimated that the diking of Provo Bay will result in a loss of 25,000 acres of wetland. The plan partially compensates for this loss, however, by the development of 14,500 acres of replacement habitat within the Goshen Bay wildlife management area along the western shores of the lake. In addition, the diking of the lake will significantly improve the water quality within the lake. Quoting directly from the definite plan report:

POPULATION CONCENTRATION

The water quality of Utah Lake is presently unsuitable for general municipal use and for many industrial uses. Under occasional conditions of low lake levels resulting from drought (such as the one currently beseeching us), the water has deteriorated to the point of unsuitability for irrigation use * * * Studies show that with the diking * * * and the importation of good quality water from Strawberry Reservoir under the Central Utah Project, the lake water will be considerably improved in chemical quality over that which has occurred historically. (Central Utah Project, Bonneville Unit, Definite Plan Report, August 1964, Appendix B Water Supply, Volume 2, p. 273).

The Bonneville unit has ultimately been objected to on the ground that it will further concentrate population along the already congested and polluted Wasatch Front area, thus degrading the quality of life for residents of the area. In direct contrast, however, is the conclusion of the EIS which states:

Without the Bonneville Unit development, growth within the Bonneville Basin area would be expected to continue, with the expansion of urbanization into the rural areas and the accompanying loss of green belt areas. Migration from the rural areas to the cities would continue. (EIS p. 163)

It is my judgment that this review panel should also be apprised of the environmental impacts which are expected to result if the Bonneville unit is not constructed. The EIS projects that:

If the proposed Bonneville Unit were not constructed, many environmental changes would still occur within the Unit area. Many of these changes would alter the esthetic composition of the area . . . If left uncontrolled the problem of haphazard and inadequate development of the land around Strawberry Reservoir would likely become worse. The erosion problems in the Diamond Fork area can be expected to continue and worsen as long as the present Strawberry Reservoir irrigation system is in operation. The level of Utah Lake will continue its historic pattern of fluctuation and esthetically undesirable conditions will . . . occur. (EIS pp. 157 and 158).

To date gentlemen, I have seen no report, study, or investigation of the magnitude of this environmental impact statement of 702 pages, which would justify the Department of Interior's position that the Bonneville unit fails for environmental reasons. The environmental impact statement is the accepted and approved vehicle for environmental impacts study and its decision on the Bonneville unit should stand uncontested.

Critics of the Bonneville unit claim that there are important alternative sources of water available to the citizens of Salt Lake County, one of the counties served by the Bonneville unit. They claim that a combination of ground water development, Wasatch Mountain range frontal stream dams, a scaled down Jordanelle reservoir, conversation from agricultural to M and I uses, and desalting of brackish water will solve Utah's water problems. Let me address these issues one at a time.

I. Availability of local water resources

The assumption that water requirements in the Bonneville Basin can be adequately supplied from local sources without assistance from Utah's share of Colorado River water and with less adverse impact on the total environment is erroneous. The Great Basin Comprehensive Framework Study¹ states that certain water supplies are available only at the expense of other uses. For example, further development of principal stream flows would reduce inflow to terminal lakes for wildlife propagation.

From the same study the projected water uses in the three subregions of the Great Basin show an increase over the 1965 withdrawals of 1,670,000 acre-feet by the year 2020. The estimated residual water supply of 1,170,000 acre-feet to meet projected uses is 500,000 acre-feet less than the projected uses. The study estimates that for the development and utilization of local Great Basin water supplies in the three subregions would require 2,362,000 acre-feet storage, 617 miles of conveyance facilities, 16 major pumping plants, water and wastewater treatment facilities for nearly 1,200,000 acre-feet, and extensive facilities for irrigation and drainage. Costs related to these facilities would likely exceed $2 billion.

In the Great Salt Lake Subregion where the greatest municipal and industrial water requirement is projected, appendix X1 page 10 of the study states that local sources will not be sufficient to meet the needs. Importation of high quality water from the Upper Colorado Region will be required.

II. Groundwater resources

Total dependence on groundwater as an alternative to Bonneville unit water imports for municipal and industrial use is not possible without long-term groundwater yield exceeding the recharge to the groundwater aquifer. This would result in mining water, disrupting pressure zones which would affect water qualities, interfere with existing water rights, and eventually create a greater water supply problem.

U.S. Geological Reports show that the firm available high quality groundwater from the aquifers of Salt Lake County would average approximately 150,000 acre feet per year. The withdrawals over the past few years have been as follows:

	Acres feet
1973	128,800
1974	130,000
1975	125,000
1976	135,000

It is estimated that during 1977 the withdrawals will exceed 150,000 acre feet. These are the groundwater supplies available until the arrival of Bonneville Unit water. It must be recognized that as these waters are withdrawn there is a corresponding decrease in water from flowing wells and groundwater inflow into stream development of additional large quantities. Development of additional large quantities of groundwater supplies in Utah County and other areas within the District has been closed by presently overdevelopment by the Utah State Engineer.

Opponents of the Bonneville Unit transmountain diversion have contended that an additional 74,000 acre-feet of groundwater can be developed in Salt Lake County without serious adverse effects. They are ignoring the environmental impacts demonstrated by the United States Geological Service analog model studies. These adverse effects would include:

1. Depletion of base flows and the consequent effect on existing rights of the Jordan River in the order of 50,000 acre-feet per year.
2. Reduction in groundwater supplies to phreatophyte (wildlife) areas of 40,000 acre-feet per year.
3. Reduction in present flowing well discharge of 15,000 acre-feet per year.
4. A deterioration of quality of water in some existing wells due to increased mineral content inflow by reducing aquifer zone pressures.

III. Wasatch front dams

Wasatch frontal stream canyons are steep in grade, heights of dams to control flows would be high, and storage capacities would be low. Such sites are not economical and are not without environmental and safety problems. Little Dell Reservoir in Parleys Canyon has been proposed as an alternative source of water, but based on an expected firm yield of about 8,400 acre-feet, Little Dell would meet the growing municipal and industrial water needs of Salt Lake County for only about two years.

IV. Scaled-down Jordanelle reservoir

Construction of Jordanelle Reservoir as a single purpose municipal and industrial water project separate from the transmountain diversion would only develop 35,000 acre-feet of high quality M & I water for use in Salt Lake County. A series of drought years could reduce and eliminate this quantity as an assured firm supply. Under the current Bonneville Unit plan including the transmountain diversion and Strawberry Aqueduct in excess of 99,000 acre-feet of high quality municipal and industrial water would be developed for uses in Salt Lake, Utah, Wasatch and Juab counties, and at a substantial lower cost per acre foot. This would meet these projected county needs until about the year 2000.

V. Conversion

Water conversion in Salt Lake County from present irrigation to municipal and industrial use has been urged by the opponents of the Bonneville Unit. Irrigation water sources cannot be converted directly to municipal and industrial uses on a one-for-one basis because irrigation supplies usually include high shortages, often a lower quality of water, differences in time and place of use and required return flow downstream rights. Usually great expenses in storage and conveyance facilities are involved in converting irrigation supplies to M & I supplies. Most of the irrigation water supply in Salt Lake County that might be available for conversion comes from Utah Lake. Of the approximate 52,000 acres of irrigated land in Salt Lake County, 40,000 acres are served from Utah Lake. Utah Lake water is too saline and too high in bacterial and organic nutrients to be used for municipal water. Furthermore, there are far more water right claims for Utah Lake and Jordan River water than the available supply.

VI. Desalting

Desalting brackish water may be a potential source of municipal water but at extreme cost. The Bear, Weber, and Jordan Rivers are brackish entering the Great Salt Lake and represent a source of water but would require a desalting plant to make it suitable for municipal use. An extensive collection, pumping, and distribution system and desalting plants would be required to deliver desalted water into the existing distribution lines. The cost of producing fresh water from brackish water in large quantities has been reduced with improved technology, but the technology developed has been energy dependent which has increased the costs at an alarming rate. This water would have to have complete treatment which would include screening, flocculation, sedimentation, filtration, ozonation, carbon filtration, desalinization, and chlorination. It would also involve large consumptive uses of energy which use is already exceeding the capability of production to meet existing needs within the United States. The estimated cost could exceed $300 per acre foot and is not yet competitive with the cost of water from surface or groundwater sources. The loss in inflow to the Great Salt Lake by diverting water to the desalting plants would accelerate the reduction in size of the lake. This would result in esthetic damage to a unique attraction as well as a reduction in waterfowl nesting areas around the lake.

Finally, let me point out that the Bonneville Unit is an integral part of the Central Utah Project that will develop substantial water resources for Indians and non-Indians in the State of Utah. The project is the result of generations of delicate negotiations. If Congress were to back out of the agreement made with the Ute Tribe in 1965 to build the Central Utah Project, I don't believe we would have any hope of peace and harmony between Indians and non-Indians in the Uintah Basin again during my lifetime. ●

MEMORIAL DAY

(Mr. PEPPER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

● Mr. PEPPER. Mr. Speaker, on Memorial Day the very progressive and patriotic city of Surfside had its usual stirring ceremony honoring America's dead who have given their lives that this Nation might live. Speaking as he has often done in the past on this occasion was former Mayor Sam E. Brenner, who stirred the hearts of all who heard him with his able address. Former Mayor Brenner touchingly pointed out how we were failing as a nation to live up to those eloquent and inspiring sentiments which appear on the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor. Mayor Brenner challenges us to rise to an observance of the high principles upon which this Nation was founded and to rededicate ourselves to the noble ideals which are the foundation of this great Nation. I am sure that all my colleagues will benefit by reading Mayor Brenner's eloquent address and I include it in the RECORD immediately following my remarks:

LETTERS TO THE EDITORS

TO THE EDITOR:

Once again we have come together for Memorial Day Services and another year has passed since last we stood upon this sacred ground, but a few feet from the sea. As great as is the depth of that sea, greater is the depth of yearning in all of us for permanent peace. We return to pay our respects to the dead. Once again I must ask in true conscience, how much respect can they pay us?

Each year we come here and bare our weeping hearts before them. Yet each year we come here as greater messengers of death! Where is our message of peace? Each year "The Darkness Deepens, Oh! Lord with (us) abide!"

I say to you:

Blindfold the Statue of Liberty lest she see the ships that pass in the night, underneath her lamp of light, laden with weapons of death all over the world; lest she see the armaments in the arsenals of the world ready to kill all of us sixteen times over!

Blindfold the Statue of Liberty lest she see the $120,000,000,000 we propose to spend on death and destruction—billions more than ever before in one year and going shortly to $183,000,000,000.

Blindfold the Statue of Liberty lest she see the $350,000,000,000 spent for death around the world last year, sixty times more money to equip each soldier than to educate each child!

Blindfold the Statue of Liberty lest she see the equivalent of 30,000 tons of dynamite allocated for every man, woman and child around the globe. What a rendezvous of death for all of us!

Blindfold the Statue of Liberty lest she see that one billion dollars creates 72,000 defense jobs whereas if diverted to peaceful uses more than 100,000 jobs would be created and if diverted to education through revenue sharing that same one billion dollars creates more than 200,000 jobs for education.

Blindfold the Statue of Liberty lest she see the 12,500 nuclear warheads Russia and America possess and lest she see the estimates of 25,500 they will have by 1985.

Blindfold the Statue of Liberty lest she see that one Poseidon submarine equipped with Polaris missiles could completely destroy 160 cities.

Blindfold the Statue of Liberty lest she see the statistics that in the first day of a nuclear war 140,000,000 Americans and 113,000,000 Russians would be killed without considering the after effects of genetic radiation for the next 250,000 years! What kind of madness is this? What a legacy for us to leave behind for our children! No generation ever found itself in so dreadful a situation.

Blindfold the Statue of Liberty lest she see all the slavery with which the people have become over-burdened. Is this the Liberty for which our mourned dead fought and died?

Let us raise our voices loud and clear so they may hear our cries of anguish and protest all over the world, particularly at the U.N. Disarmament Conference which is in session at this time. Disarmament is a must but disarmament is not enough. Let us not lose sight of the fact that wars can also begin with smaller armies and accelerate to greater proportions in a short period of time.

This is why I have often clamoured for our country to come to the fore and propose the creation of a true world order wherein all member nations offer some adequate agreed upon percentage of their existing fighting forces into a heterogeneous world peace-keeping force, readied in advance and substantial enough to keep the peace, for an experimental five year period, subject to the restructuring of the U.N. voting procedure having a system of checks and balances and governed by an impartial world constitution which protects all nations regardless of their race, color, creed or form of government.

This is a dream which must become a reality if we are to survive and overcome the terrible statistics I have mentioned. Only from World Order can we approach any semblance of the ideal out of which can evolve innumerable benefits through the world. The ideal must overtake the real when the real cannot cope with the problems of today. We must approach new ideas in the spirit of the ideal and remember Andre Gide's words "Man cannot discover new oceans unless he has the courage to lose sight of the shore." We must take action towards the ideal as those we mourn today took action for what they regarded as their ideal. We must reshape the world into what it should have been when we were born into it.

We are the people; we are our own eternity. We are like one lost among the seedlings of a thousand eras. We cannot take hold, we cannot take root because we are nurtured by all the shortcomings of the past. Only if we will nurture ourselves with courage and affirmation, for the brotherhood we seek for all mankind, will we be able to reshape the world into what it should have been. And then we will take the blindfold off our Statue of Liberty and feel proud of her inscription:

"Give me your tired, your poor,
Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore
Send these, the homeless, tempest tossed to me
I lift my lamp beside the Golden Door."

And as that was our heritage and the lofty purpose for which those we mourn today laid down their lives bleeding for Old Glory, so can they respect us again, for we will have brought new glory upon the world. And our Lady of Liberty can cast her eyes upon a land that glitters in the sun, where her Statue can stand with stature in her own glory.

SAM BRENNER.

A TRIBUTE TO DR. GRACIELA OLIVAREZ

(Mr. PEPPER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

● Mr. PEPPER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to pay tribute today to a very devoted and loyal person who has donated much of her life to helping the perplexed and poor people of our great Nation. Dr. Graciela Olivarez, Director of the Community Services Administration, Washington, D.C., is the first female graduate of the law school of Notre Dame University. Dr. Olivarez's alma mater, in token of its appreciation, honored her by conferring the doctor of laws, honoris causa, and by asking her to deliver the law school's graduating address. In her address, she stated:

I am here—one woman alone—heading one beleaguered and abused agency—to tell you very simply: The poor are still with us; poverty is a form of injustice, perpetuated and fostered in many ways by the legal system; you have a moral and professional responsibility to avoid use of the law as an instrumentality of institutionalized injustice.

Being a little more than nostalgic, Ms. Olivarez stated that 12 years ago she never dreamed of attending law school. One year later Ms. Olivarez enrolled in the University of Notre Dame's law school. She is recognized today as one of the first Hispanics and the first woman to attend and graduate from the University of Notre Dame's law school.

I take pleasure in commending the unselfish efforts of a "champion of the poor." Daily, she is proving that one who has suffered discrimination and poverty can enthusiastically and effectively dissipate both of them simultaneously. I appreciate Dr. Olivarez's civic contribution and include a copy of the tribute paid her by the University of Notre Dame in May now in the RECORD.

UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME DU LAR

At the 133rd Commencement, the May Exercises, the University of Notre Dame confers the degree of

DOCTOR OF LAWS, HONORIS CAUSA

on a champion of those who have not made it in America. She grew up in the Depression, in a poor, Southwestern, Mexican-American family. She came in her late thirties to Notre Dame's Law School with an education gleaned mostly from hardship and hope. When she left the University three years later, she was the first woman, and one of the first Mexican-Americans, to become a Notre Dame lawyer. Since then, she has made us unusually proud of her. She has devoted herself, in less than a decade since she left our Law School, to reform in government—first in local programs as the second highest officer in the government of New Mexico and then, at the President's request, as the third-ranking woman in the federal government reviving our debilitated Poverty Program. Herself a child of poverty, she is now the champion of all of America's poor. She is proving daily that only one who has suffered poverty and discrimination can enthusiastically and effectively understand and dispel both of them at once. REPORT

PURSUANT TO FEDERAL REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

P	QUARTER

(Mark one square only)

NOTE ON ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

- (1) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)
- (11) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".
- (b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:
 - (1) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.
 - (11) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE ON ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER.—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE ON ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) Description, (b) quantity distributed; (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out item "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly" Report.

(NOTE.—The form used for report is reproduced below. In the interest of economy in the RECORD, questions are not repeated, only the essential answers are printed, and are indicated by their respective letter and number.)

FILE ONE COPY WITH THE SECRETARY OF THE SENATE AND FILE TWO COPIES WITH THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

	PURSUANT TO FEDERAL REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT
	P	QUARTER
		1st	2d	3d	4th
	(Mark one square only)

NOTE ON ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

- (i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)
- (ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".
- (b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:
 - (i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.
 - (ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE ON ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER.—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE ON ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.

COPIES WITH THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

NOTE ON ITEM "D."—(a) In General. The term "contribution" includes anything of value. When an organization or individual uses printed or duplicated matter in a campaign attempting to influence legislation, money received by such organization or individual—for such printed or duplicated matter—is a "contribution." "The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution"—Section 302(a) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN EMPLOYER.—(i) In General. Item "D" is designed for the reporting of all receipts from which expenditures are made, or will be made, in accordance with legislative interests.

(ii) Receipts of Business Firms and Individuals.—A business firm (or individual) which is subject to the Lobbying Act by reason of expenditures which it makes in attempting to influence legislation—but which has no funds to expend except those which are available in the ordinary course of operating a business not connected in any way with the influencing of legislation—will have no receipts to report, even though it does have expenditures to report.

(iii) Receipts of Multipurpose Organizations.—Some organizations do not receive any funds which are to be expended solely for the purpose of attempting to influence legislation. Such organizations make such expenditures out of a general fund raised by dues, assessments, or other contributions. The percentage of the general fund which is used for such expenditures indicates the percentage of dues, assessments, or other contributions which may be considered to have been paid for that purpose. Therefore, in reporting receipts, such organizations may specify what that percentage is, and report their dues, assessments, and other contributions on that basis. However, each contributor of $500 or more is to be listed, regardless of whether the contribution was made solely for legislative purposes.

(c) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE.—(i) In General. In the case of many employees, all receipts will come under Items "D 5" (received for services) and "D 12" (expense money and reimbursements). In the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, it will be presumed that your employer is to reimburse you for all expenditures which you make in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Employer as Contributor of $500 or More.—When your contribution from your employer (in the form of salary, fee, etc.) amounts to $500 or more, it is not necessary to report such contribution under "D 13" and "D 14," since the amount has already been reported under "D 5," and the name of the "employer" has been given under Item "B" on page 1 of this report.

QUARTERLY REPORTS*

*All alphanumeric characters and monetary amounts refer to receipts and expenditures on page 2, paragraphs D and E of the Quarterly Report Form.

The following reports for the fourth calendar quarter of 1977 were received too late to be included in the published reports for that quarter:

FILE ONE COPY WITH THE SECRETARY OF THE SENATE AND FILE TWO COPIES WITH THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

PLACE AN "X" BELOW THE APPROPRIATE LETTER OR FIGURE IN THE BOX AT THE RIGHT OF THE "REPORT" HEADING BELOW:

"PRELIMINARY" REPORT ("Registration"): To "register," place an "X" below the letter "P" and fill out page 1 only.

"QUARTERLY" REPORT: To indicate which one of the four calendar quarters is covered by this Report, place an "X" below the appropriate figure. Fill out both page 1 and page 2 and as many additional pages as may be required. The first additional page should be numbered as page "3," and the rest of such pages should be "4," "5," "6," etc. Preparation and filing in accordance with instructions will accomplish compliance with all quarterly reporting requirements of the Act.

NOTE ON ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

- (i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)
- (ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".
- (b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:
 - (i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.
 - (ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE ON ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER.—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE ON ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) Description, (b) quantity distributed; (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out item "D" and "E" on the back of this page.
