STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mrs. KASSEBAUM (for herself, Mr. PACKWOOD, and Mr. CANNON):

AIRPORT AND AIRWAY SYSTEM DEVELOPMENT ACT OF 1981

● Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, I am today introducing legislation which would reauthorize the airport and airway development program. The Airport and Airway Development Act was originally passed in 1970 to establish an aviation trust fund. In the last Congress the Senate Commerce Committee reported a reauthorization bill in November 1979 which passed the full Senate February 5, 1980.

However, reauthorization legislation did not pass in the House. As a result, the expenditure program expired on June 30, 1980 and the revenue program expired on September 30, 1980.

Mr. President, I believe it is essential that we move forward to reauthorize both the expenditure program and tax program in the early months of this year. Over $4 billion sits in the airport and airways trust fund right now, Mr. President, and the development needs of our airport and airway systems are going unmet. It is an injustice to the users of that system who have contributed this money to allow this program to lapse. I therefore urge my colleagues to work with me to seek early enactment of the necessary legislation to get the program moving again.

In President Reagan's budget message delivered to the joint session of Congress Wednesday, he indicated the administration would propose legislation to reduce funding available for airport construction grants during 1981 and 1986 by 33 percent. The President indicated that one way this reduction could be accomplished is through the elimination of large commercial airports from grant eligibility.

While the legislation I am introducing today does not reach the 33-percent reduction advocated by the President, it does come close, and I want to indicate a willingness to work with the administration in order to come to common ground regarding funding levels.

I, also, want to indicate my appreciation for the administration's recognition that, whatever the cuts may be, they can be accomplished by excluding large self-sufficient airports from the grant program.

This approach, which is the basis of the legislation I am introducing today, will allow us to concentrate the remaining funds on those airports which are the most in need of Federal assistance.

I am, however, concerned about the administration's proposal regarding the user taxes which help to fund our airport and airway systems. The legislation which I am introducing today, would allow for a decrease in the taxes charged to passengers on commercial aircraft. The justification for such a decrease is that $4 billion surplus which sits in the airport and airway trust fund right now. Through the use of this surplus over the next 5 years and through an increase in general aviation fuel taxes to 8.5 cents plus other miscellaneous taxes, we believe we can generate revenues adequate to fund those needs which have traditionally been supported by the trust fund. Apparently, the administration feels that there should be substantial increases in taxes to fund areas of Federal Aviation Administration operation which have traditionally been supported by the general public. I am wary, Mr. President, of embarking upon a program of substantial increases in user taxes at this time. Such increases seem to be inconsistent with the philosophy of the President's avowed intention to reduce taxes on both business and individuals.

There can be no question, Mr. President, but that the general public reaps enormous benefits from the efficient and safe operation of the American air system. In most communities, airports are the heart of the economic life in the area. Plants are located in areas where either commercial or general aviation can be utilized for their company's transportation needs.

The availability of safe and reasonably priced air transportation has been essential in the dispersal of industry throughout our Nation. The bill I am now introducing is premised upon a doubling of the current fuel tax. To go beyond that increase risks imposing excess costs which could threaten our goal of strengthening the ability of the Nation's business community to provide jobs for Americans.

Mr. President, I understand that an early proposal of the administration included a 20-percent fuel tax on general aviation fuel. However, in discussions with administration officials, I have determined that that report was in error and that while an increase in general aviation fuel taxes is contemplated, a 20-percent tax is not.

As I said earlier, Mr. President, I contemplate introducing legislation which would propose an increase in general aviation fuel taxes from the current 4-cent-per-gallon tax to an 8.5-cent-per-gallon tax. I will be happy to work with administration officials in fashioning appropriate tax legislation to reflect a reasonable contribution from users to the cost of operating our airport and airway systems. I share the administration's intention of having those who benefit from FAA operations contribute to its funding. That must clearly include the general public, which benefits immensely from the safe and efficient airway system that we have in this country.

The legislation which I am introducing today is basically the same as that which passed the Senate last year. The principal concept of this legislation is the elimination of large and medium hub airports—those which enplane more than 815,000 passengers annually—from the ADAP program.

The theory behind this concept is that the Nation's largest airports are large business operations which do not need the Federal Government involved in their financial relationships. These airports are professionally staffed, they have the ability to raise large amounts of revenue and certainly have the ability to generate sufficient funds to replace the amount of money passed to them through the Federal Government in the old airport development aid program. This proposal recognizes this economic reality and would remove the Federal Government as the "middleman" in airport development programs. I believe that this is wholly consistent with the philosophy which has wrought such significant changes in this body.

I think we have all come to realize that there are many Federal programs which can be better planned and more economically funded at the local level. I believe the airport aid program is just such a program and that it is a good place to start in our efforts to move funds and decisionmaking back to the local level.

I think we all realize, Mr. President that construction, for example, can move ahead much more rapidly, and at significantly lower costs, if the Federal Government is not in the decisionmaking process. The establishment of priorities with respect to airport projects can much more effectively be determined by the users and providers at the local level.

There are of course, Mr. President, airports which do not wield the necessary economic power to be equal negotiating partners with the airlines. This legislation recognizes that. Indeed, by eliminating the larger airports from the Federal dole, we can provide more funds for the development of the smaller airports. This is extremely important in meeting the demands on our airport and airway system occasioned by the Airline Deregulation Act.

Mr. President, I want to stress that while the sponsors of this legislation are strongly committed to the concept of defederalization, we are certainly open to suggestions regarding ways to improve upon the bill.

As I noted earlier, we are particularly interested in comments regarding authorization levels and those changes which we have made in the legislation since its passage in the Senate last year. I would note again that this bill is quite consistent with the Reagan administration's desire to cut Federal spending.

Indeed, aside from the figure for fiscal year 1981, our suggested authorizations are remarkably close to those suggested in the new budget proposals. We will be holding Aviation Subcommittee hearings on the 24th and 25th of February to discuss these and other issues involved.

The major provisions of the bill are as follows:

DEFEDERALIZATION

The bill provides that the Nation's 69 largest airports will become ineligible for Federal airport development assistance after September 30, 1982. In total, the bill, "defederalizes" 69 airports: 40 by September 30, 1981, and 29 by September 30, 1982. As I stated earlier the rationale for this provision is plain and simple. These airports are basically self-sufficient, they can generate revenues adequate to meet their capital expenditure needs by increasing landing fees and there is no need for the Federal Government to play "middleman" in their development programs.

APPORTIONMENT OF FUNDS

For those airports not "defederalized," the bill provides for money to be apportioned from the trust fund both on the basis of enplanements at those airports and on the basis of need (as determined in the discretion of the Secretary). In the past, the program required the administration of separate Federal aid programs for airport development at "air carrier," "air-commuter service," "reliever," and "general aviation" airports as well as a separate program for planning. The proposed bill would combine the grant and planning program for all such airports into a single grant program for airport development and planning. This section provides for enhanced discretion on the part of the Secretary to move the available funds to higher priority projects. In the past, the program has been criticized on the basis that the administration had separate programs for different kinds of airports. This often meant that the highest priority needs were not met while Federal spending was sponsoring programs of much less significance because the Secretary was unable to move funds to the area of highest needs.

MINIMUM GUARANTEE

Within the discretionary fund, 5-year minimum guarantees are provided for reliever, general aviation, and small carrier airports. Here I want to stress the position of the sponsors of this legislation that minimums provided in this provision are just that, minimum guarantees, not a maximum, not an average. We hope that more, much more, will be spent in meeting the needs of these various kinds of airports. By setting minimums and still having a large discretionary fund with the flexibility to move moneys around, we hope to insure that the greatest needs will be met first.

RELIEVER AIRPORTS

The bill stresses the important role that reliever airports are going to play in the future years. It provides a special apportionment for airports which are part of "primary hubs" or air traffic hubs whose commercial service airports collectively enplane 0.05 percent or more of the passengers enplaning annually at all commercial service airports. Approximately 1,375,000 passengers would have to be enplaned by the airports comprising an air traffic hub in calendar year 1979 in order for that air traffic hub to qualify in this program in this fiscal year.

Each primary hub is apportioned 50 cents for each passenger enplaned at each commercial service airport which is a part of the primary hub—with a limit of $5 million per primary hub. Funds apportioned under this section cannot be distributed for use by the airports comprising the primary hub until the sponsors of each commercial service airport and each publicly owned reliever airport which is part of the primary hub have agreed upon and jointly submitted to the Secretary a consolidated improvement plan and an annual expenditure program.

The largest airports in the primary hub would be ineligible to receive the assistance and therefore the money will be directed toward those airports in the primary hub area which are providing a reliever function. The requirement of participation of all the sponsors of all the airports comprising the primary hub encourages local evaluation of metropolitan air system needs.

STATE PARTICIPATION

This provision is a change in the bill as it was passed by the Senate last year although a similar provision was in the bill as introduced. It provides that qualifying States will be allowed to administer funds allocated to general aviation airports. We believe that this is an important precedent to set, particularly in light of the increasing recognition of the necessity of turning over the management of Federal programs to the States and local communities.

While this provision ran into substantial opposition last year, we believe the situation has changed and that there is evidence that many airport owners and operators would prefer to deal with the State rather than the Federal Government on airport aid financing. The program we establish is, however, a precautionary first step as we understand that there are legitimate concerns about the ability of some States to administer aviation development funds. Indeed, the provision requires a finding by the Secretary that the States have the resources to allocate airport development funds before any grants to the States are made.

Mr. President, we know that the States are already partners with the localities and the Federal Government in airport development. Indeed, of 890 airport projects including planning grants—reported for 1978—only 7.3 percent were funded by Federal and local sponsors only without any State dollars involved. Nearly 9 out of 10 airport projects over the last 10 years have involved some State funding—either outright grants or a share of the local matching dollars.

Forty-six States now participate in airport and development projects, within an average of $2 million per year per State. Mr. President, we believe the time is right for an increased State role in airport assistance programs and are confident that the approach we suggest here is an appropriate first step in that direction.

AIRPORT ACCESS

Mr. President, one of the chief concerns of those of who have been wary of defederalization process is that once the Federal Government has stopped funding airport development projects at our Nation's largest airports, those airports may tend to implement fee schedules or other rules regarding the use of airport facilities which will discriminate against general aviation and commuter users.

Therefore, we have included in this legislation strong language amending the Federal Aviation Act which we believe will insure a reasonable degree of equitable access to airports which are no longer a part of the ADAP system.

This, is, of course, essential to providing all airport and airway facility users with the type of service they are demanding in the deregulated environment.

Finally, Mr. President, I want to discuss an amendment which I am submitting separately from the legislation which would permit airports that become ineligible to receive Federal assistance for airport development and airport planning to replace such revenues through the imposition of a limited passenger facility charge.

The chief opponents of the "defederalization" concept contained in this legislation are those airports which would lose Federal funds under the bill. They insist that they have insufficient economic power to renegotiate long-term contracts which they have entered into with the airlines which provide service at the airports.

I am skeptical of this argument because the airports we are talking about "defederalizing" are multimillion dollar operations, the smallest of which is worth $100 million in annual gross revenues to the airlines which serve it. It seems to me obvious that airlines and airports rely on each other for their economic life.

Such a relationship does not, it seems to me, give credence to the argument that one partner in this relationship would attempt to drive the other to ruin.

Indeed, I believe it provides an ideal situation where in the negotiation process can determine the amount and timing of improvements to an airport.

It simply cannot be denied that both parties have a financial interest in perpetuating an efficient airport operation. Nevertheless, I do understand that the airports are parties to long-term contracts, that attempts at renegotiation could be difficult.

There is, therefore, some merit to providing airports with an alternative means of collecting the revenues which they will lose by being "defederalized."

Therefore, I have, through the introduction of this passenger facility charge amendment, provided one way in which such replacement funds could be raised by airports without the renegotiation of contracts.

This amendment would provide that the operator of a commercial service airport that is ineligible to receive Federal assistance or which elects not to receive assistance could impose a passenger facility charge.

This charge would be limited to the amount that the airport would have been otherwise able to collect under the formulas contained in the ADAP legislation.

In order to protect the interests of consumers who will be paying this fee, the amendment requires that the charge will be imposed on all passengers in a nondiscriminatory fashion and that it will be a part of the ticket price. It is hoped that this latter requirement will avoid situations where, in the past, such fees have been collected at booths in the airport or some other such arrangement which is equally inconvenient to passengers.

Because we require that the fee be imposed as a part of the ticket price, this of course, imposes an administrative burden on the airlines which sell the tickets. The amendment therefore provides that the airlines can recover their costs of administration.

Moreover, we provide that the charge can be imposed only on the first day of the fiscal year in question and not changed until the next fiscal year to minimize the administrative costs and we provide that the Secretary of Transportation will do the calculations necessary to determine the amount of a passenger facility charge that airports are eligible to impose.

As you know, Mr. President, if airports are to impose such a charge, an amendment such as the one I have just outlined is necessary because section 113 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 currently prohibits the imposition of such a fee.

This prohibition grew out of an abuse of such fees in the past. As I noted above, in the past, such fees have been collected in an inconvenient way, and more importantly some airports which were imposing such fees were siphoning them off the airport to finance other projects unrelated to airport development.

The amendment which I today introduce would require that any funds collected from such a fee remain on the airport. It provides, indeed, that all revenues generated by such charge and all other revenues generated by the airport, or their equivalent amount, will be extended for the capital and operating costs of the airport, the local airport system, or other local facilities which are owned or operated by the airport operator and used for the transportation of passengers or property.

The intent of this language is to make sure that the passenger fee is not used to replace any other fee generated by the airport which would then be sent off the airport to finance the projects unrelated to airport development.●

● Mr. CANNON. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my distinguished colleagues in sponsoring the reauthorization of the Airport and Airway Development Act.

This bill will provide an early opportunity for the Congress to demonstrate the fiscal conservatism so many politicians have been expounding. We have provided legislation which removes funding eligibility for those airports which are capable of raising their own revenues, and focuses the airport development program on the smaller airports which are not self-sufficient. While the bill increases funding for direct, safety-related navigational aids, it reduces total Federal spending on airport development. As noted by CBO airport defederalization will save more than $1 billion over the term of this authorization.

I am pleased to say that this bill reflects much of what we worked so hard to achieve last year in S. 1648, a bill which was overwhelmingly approved by the full Senate.

This legislation again introduces the concept of a State role in allocating funds for smaller airports. That same concept was introduced in the original version of S. 1648, but later deleted in committee, with my support, because of strong opposition by nearly all the aviation user groups. I am willing to again put this idea of State block grants forward for comment, but I would be less than candid if I did not admit to continuing questions in my own mind as to its advisability.

While last year's primary debate focused on defederalization and taxes, this year's debate will be on federalization and taxes. In other words we already have achieved defederalization of more than 3,000 public airports with a 5-percent ticket tax level, so this year's question is, How many of those airports should be reinstated for funding, based upon need, and what is an appropriate 5-year tax level for balancing the trust fund? While the status quo is highly undesirable, it is not nearly as offensive as continuing the Federal funding of all airports, whether they require financial assistance or not, or continuing to overtax the airport and airway system, principally airline passengers, by $1 billion a year.

Once the authorization bill has been approved we can look forward to setting an appropriate tax level. Issues such as defederalization will clearly dictate my position on whether the ticket tax should be lower or higher than the historic level.

I am hopeful that all the parties involved in the upcoming debate will recognize the consistency of the Senate's position and its dedication to the principles and commitments we made last year. Such a consistency in position is the key, in my view, to reauthorizing the ADAP program in a reasonable period of time.

In closing, I want to congratulate Chairman PACKWOOD and Subcommittee Chairman KASSEBAUM for their diligent efforts to reauthorize this important program without delay.●

S. 511. A bill to designate the hospital known as the Veterans' Administration Medical Center, located in Reno, Nev., as the "Ioannis A. Lougaris Veterans' Administration Medical Center;" to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

● Mr. LAXALT. Mr. President, today I wish to reintroduce legislation to rename the Veterans' Administration Medical Center in Reno, Nev., the "Ioannis A. Lougaris Veterans' Administration Medical Center,' which Mr. CANNON and I originally introduced in the last session of Congress. I am confident that my colleagues will find this bill worthy of passage, and I call on them to support it.

The reason I ask to change the name of the Reno Veterans' Hospital is that the medical center was established in 1927 in large part due to Mr. Lougaris' efforts. It is truly fitting that the hospital be named after him, in commendation of his many years of service to veterans in the State of Nevada, and as a tribute to his lifelong achievements.

Ioannis Anastasiou "Johnny" Lougaris was born on February 17, 1897, in Zante, Greece. As he was third of four sons in a poor family, his father sent him to America when he was 19 years old. Upon his arrival in New York, Lougaris shined shoes and sold bags of peanuts from a pushcart along the streets of the city.

He worked for a time with the Edison Phonograph Co., then wound up in San Francisco after working with a group of fellow Greeks on railroad construction. While in San Francisco, Lougaris placed an advertisement in the newspaper seeking a room in a private home where he might have the opportunity to improve his English. However, discrimination against Greeks was strong at the time, and those who responded to his ad refused him when they discovered his ethnic origin. Finally, he told a family in a prospective household that he was Russian, and they agreed to take him. Later when they discovered he was Greek, his nationality no longer mattered, because he had proven his good character.

In December 1917, Lougaris enlisted in the Army to fight in World War I. He fought several battles in France until he was seriously wounded and sent back to the States.

Lougaris became inflicted with tuberculosis, and left a Chicago veterans' hospital for the West after being told by his doctor that he only had 6 months to live.

When his train stopped in Sparks, Nev., before crossing the glistening, snow-covered Sierras, Lougaris hopped off the train to stretch his legs. His first breath of the cool, clean Truckee Meadows air convinced him to settle there and make his home. He took a mail order course in law and passed the bar examinations of both California and Nevada. At 92 years of age, he still continues to work on specialized cases at his law office in Reno.

He has been a dedicated advocate for better services to veterans for more than a half a century. It was due to his increasing efforts that the Veterans' Administration Medical Center in Reno was established. On August 13, 1979, Mr. Lougaris received a certificate of commendation from the American Legion, Department of Nevada, expressing gratitude for his efforts and emphasizing that "the Reno Veterans' Administration Medical Facility stands as a tribute to his dedicated service." The Nevada American Legion further "endorses that the Veterans' Administration Medical Center in Reno, Nevada be named Ioannis A. Lougaris Medical Center."

Mr. President, it is entirely fitting and proper that the Reno Veterans' Hospital be named in this manner. Twelve other veterans' hospitals have been named by Congress. In view of all of Mr. Lougaris' contributions on behalf of the veterans in Nevada, I believe it is wholly appropriate that the Veterans' Administration Medical Center in Reno, Nev., be renamed the "Ioannis A. Lougaris Veterans' Administration Medical Center." ●

CONVEYANCE OF NATIONAL FOREST LANDS IN NEVADA

● Mr. LAXALT. Mr. President, it has come to my attention that S. 250, a bill to direct the Secretary of Agriculture to convey certain National Forest System lands in the State of Nevada, which Senator CANNON and I recently introduced, contains two minor drafting errors that need correction. Therefore, I am today introducing a new bill which is technically correct and will facilitate committee action on this piece of legislation. Thank you.●

VETERANS' HOSPITAL IN SOUTHERN NEVADA

● Mr. CANNON. Mr. President, I am introducing a bill today for myself and my Nevada colleague, Senator LAXALT, to provide for the construction of a Veterans' Administration hospital in the southern part of the State of Nevada.

At the present time, veterans in Nevada are served by only one VA hospital located in Reno, in northwest Nevada.

Veterans in more populous southern Nevada, 500 miles to the southeast, have no VA facilities, except for limited services provided by an outpatient clinic in the Las Vegas area, and are therefore almost completely dependent on VA hospitals in crowded Los Angeles, 300 miles away.

I think it is a gross disservice to our veterans to force them to travel to Los Angeles to get treatment of service-related disabilities. In addition, it certainly is not fair to make the veterans of southern California wait for treatment because their facilities are overcrowded.

I urge serious consideration of this proposal at the earliest possible opportunity. Unfortunately, the former VA Administrator opposed this proposal in his September 1975 report to the Senate Committee on Veterans' Affairs on the basis that administration studies indicated the location did not meet the changing requirements of veterans. I want to urge the Veterans' Affairs Committee to request an updated study from the Veterans' Administration. Hopefully, that study will take into consideration that the majority of veterans in my State are located in the southern part of Nevada. Our principal city is Las Vegas. This particular location will also be accessible to many veterans in California and Utah.

It is my hope that the 97th Congress and the new administration will give this problem the serious consideration it warrants.●

S. 514. A bill to provide hospital care facilities operated by the Veterans' Administration within a reasonable distance of veterans with service-connected disabilities who live in the area of Las Vegas, Nev.; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

BEDS FOR VETS IN SOUTHERN NEVADA

● Mr. CANNON. Mr. President, I wish to introduce a bill for myself and Senator LAXALT pertaining to civilian hospital care for veterans in southern Nevada.

The Veterans' Administration has just opened a new veterans outpatient clinic in Las Vegas to replace the former facility in Henderson, Nev. The old clinic provided 9,600 square feet and the new facility has 38,500 square feet in a new two-story building. This is something the Nevada delegation has been working on for several years. It will meet the outpatient needs of our veteran community very nicely but still leaves a void insofar as hospital care is concerned. The Nevada delegation finds that veterans with service-connected disabilities who live in or in the areas surrounding Las Vegas must travel unreasonable distances to obtain hospital care in a Veterans' Administration facility. The delegation further finds that physical facilities suitable for use by the Veterans' Administration to provide such care are available in the city of Las Vegas and that such facilities can be leased and staffed without excessive cost to the United States.

Specifically located across the street from the new outpatient clinic is the Southern Nevada Memorial Hospital. Its facilities are presently being utilized for emergency care on a fee basis for veterans with service-connected disabilities. They have two empty wings comprised of 58 beds which could be used for the establishment of a veteran hospital facility.

The Las Vegas area is believed to be the largest isolated metropolitan population of veterans in the United States being 300 miles distant from the nearest veteran hospital. There are over 60,000 veterans in southern Nevada, including what has been considered the highest percentage of Vietnam-related service veterans in the country. Here is a remarkable opportunity to provide hospital care at a nonprofit county operated hospital directly across the street from our new veterans outpatient clinic.

The Southern Nevada Memorial Hospital is a comprehensive service general hospital. It has been used extensively for the emergency treatment of veterans, and under this legislation it would be available for general care as well. I hope my colleagues will agree that this is an expeditious way to greatly increase medical opportunities for Nevada veterans and will join me in support of this measure.●

S. 515. A bill to provide for the establishment of a national cemetery in the State of Nevada; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

NATIONAL CEMETERY IN STATE OF NEVADA

● Mr. CANNON. Mr. President, on behalf of myself and Senator LAXALT, I introduce, for appropriate reference, a bill to establish a national cemetery in the State of Nevada. At present, there is no national cemetery in Nevada to provide for the burial of deceased veterans.

Although national cemeteries came into being during the Civil War to provide for the burial of soldiers who had died in service, most of them are situated where battles occurred and, therefore, are not evenly distributed in the 50 States. For this reason, the western part of the United States has few national cemeteries, and the many veterans who served during World War II have no place within reasonable proximity to their domicile for burial. During the last World War we had approximately 16 million men under arms, and when you consider their dependents, we have a total of about 50 million people who are eligible for burial.

Due to the march of time, the need for this legislation is increasing in urgency. Early in the 2d session of the 92d Congress the Senate Committee on Veterans' Affairs considered the proposal to establish a national cemetery in Nevada. Unfortunately, the bill was not adopted. Nevada's congressional delegation has offered this proposal for many years and I am especially hopeful that the 97th Congress and the new administration can work together effectively to enact this proposal into public law.

I urge the committee to reconsider this proposal at the earliest possible opportunity.●

By Mr. BENTSEN:

S. 517. A bill to amend the Clean Air Act to provide for further assessment of the validity of the theory concerning depletion of ozone in the stratosphere by halocarbon compounds before proceeding with any further regulation of such compounds, to provide for periodic review of the status of the theory of ozone depletion, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

OZONE DEPLETION VALIDATION ACT OF 1981

● Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, this country now faces and has consistently faced a multitude of complex problems. In addressing these problems Congress must continually seek solutions that draw a reasonable balance between the competing demands of a given issue. Often we have shifted the burden of drawing these delicate balances to regulatory agencies that are ill prepared to or statutorily prohibited from making such decisions. I have long been concerned about the growth of regulation and its impact on the American economy. When I was chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, we studied this critical question and found that the cost of Government regulation is now estimated to exceed $100 billion a year. The realization that the combined effect of congressional action could result in an unaccountable $100 billion annual cost to the American economy prompted me to develop and introduce the Regulatory Budget Act of 1981 (S. 399) and the Regulatory Cost Reduction Act of 1981 (S. 401). The Regulatory Budget Act would set a ceiling on the total impact that regulations could have in a given year. It would force the administration to prioritize regulations based on need. The Regulatory Cost Reduction Act would require that an agency choose the most cost effective method to regulate when it has several ways to achieve the same regulatory result.

These bills are designed to deal with the general problem of regulatory reform. Today, I am introducing a bill to bring perspective and balance to a single regulatory issue—the control of chlorofluorocarbons.

Chlorofluorocarbons, or CFC's as they are commonly called, are a family of extraordinarily useful chemicals that have a huge economic and social benefit to our Nation.

They are a family of chemical compounds made up of carbon fluorine, chlorine and, sometimes, hydrogen atoms. Developed in the 1930's as replacements for the highly corrosive, flammable and toxic materials then used as refrigerants, CFC's subsequently became the basic propellant for aerosol sprays. Today, they continue to be used as the primary refrigerant in home and commercial refrigeration and air-conditioning systems and in mobile air-conditioning. They are also widely used as blowing agents for plastic foams including insulating foams, industrial solvents, and food freezants, and inerting agents for flammable sterilent gases. As such CFC's have become essential to many facets of American lifestyles. For many of these uses, there are no available safe substitutes.

CFC's are valued because they are relatively nontoxic, and are nonexplosive, noncorrosive, and nonflammable. They use energy efficiently, and are compatible with most construction materials. They also possess excellent heat transfer properties.

CFC's are produced in more than 20 countries and are used in virtually all countries of the world. The United States accounts for about a third of world CFC production, selling over 800 million pounds at a value of approximately $500 million a year.

In April 1980 the EPA announced its intention to limit production of CFC's to current levels and then to reduce production by as much as 70 percent. EPA's concern is based on a theory, first advanced in 1974, that CFC's, upon their release in the lower atmosphere, the troposphere, gradually make their way into the upper atmosphere, the stratosphere, where they are broken apart by high-energy sunlight. One of the decomposition products—chlorine—is theorized to attack the ozone in the upper atmosphere, resulting in a decrease in the natural ozone concentrations. Ozone in the upper atmosphere serves the important function of screening out part of the Sun's ultraviolet radiation. Although ultraviolet radiation has both beneficial and detrimental effects, there is concern that there could be an increase in the harmful effects should the naturally occurring ozone concentrations be reduced significantly by CFC's.

The ozone depletion theory, as it is known, remains neither proved nor disproved. Based on the theory, computer programs have been developed to attempt to simulate what might go in the upper atmosphere. Because the atmospheric processes are complex, numerous assumptions and estimates had to be made. Thus, the models do not accurately reflect current atmospheric conditions, much less conditions as they may exist 100 years from now, when maximum depletion is predicted to occur.

Already, a number of atmospheric measurements have shown disagreement with the predictions provided by computer calculations. Additionally, trend analyses of actual measurements of the ozone do not show any depletion to date. This contrasts with the computer prediction that approximately 2.1 percent depletion should already have occurred.

Clearly, more research is necessary to adjust the theory to actual occurrences in the atmosphere. Work is continuing to improve the computer models to account for actual atmospheric measurements. Ozone trend analysis, which is the statistical analysis of actual ozone concentrations, is receiving increasing attention. This technique, already refined to the point that it can detect a plus or minus change of approximately 1 percent in ozone concentration over a period of 20 years, can serve as an early warning system for any developing problem.

Ozone trend analysis, with the sensitivity of detecting depletion within approximately 1 percent, can serve as an early warning system should depletion occur from any cause. Should depletion be detected, at a level potentially harmful to human health and the environment, the wisdom of waiting for additional research would be reexamined.

In October 1978, EPA, along with the Food and Drug Administration and the Consumer Product Safety Commission, banned the use of CFC's as propellants in aerosols, except for limited essential applications such as in medihalers. And on October 7, 1980, EPA announced its intent to regulate all nonaerosol uses of CFC's in an advanced notice of proposed rulemaking.

Outside the United States, only Canada, Norway, and Sweden have essentially banned the use of CFC's as aerosol propellants. A 30-percent voluntary cutback in production of CFC's for use as aerosol propellants, but not bans, is being implemented in countries of the European Economic Community. No other country currently plans to regulate the nonaerosol uses of CFC's.

Among the major industrialized nations, there is widespread conviction that the scientific evidence currently available does not justify severe regulation such as a total aerosol propellant ban.

The question then arises as to why EPA is proposing additional regulations and its justification for further action. EPA's cited justification is a November 1979 report from the National Academy of Sciences (NAS) which concluded, based on theoretical calculations derived from computer models, that continued worldwide emissions of CFC's at 1977 rates might—probably would—result in 16.5 percent less ozone in the stratosphere in about 100 years. A 16.5 percent loss, said NAS, would result in significant increases in the incidence of skin cancer, and possibly have adverse effects on marine life, crop production, and weather.

However, it should be noted that the NAS report contrasted sharply with findings by the United Kingdom Department of the Environment's Stratospheric Research Advisory Committee. Examining essentially the same data, the U.K. team concluded that the validity of the theory is still in doubt. They acknowledged major errors or omissions in the current theory and recommended a further review of the technical status of the issue in about two years.

More recently, a study commissioned by the European Economic Community said that "a delay of 5 years before any decision is taken on CFC's can be reasonably accepted."

In the advance notice of proposed rulemaking, published in the October 7, 1980, Federal Register, EPA stated its preference for an economic incentives approach to regulation over the traditional approaches of mandated standards or bans. Specifically, EPA proposed capping U.S. CFC production or use at current levels. The resultant restriction on supplies would then drive the prices up, thus creating an incentive to reduce CFC use. EPA hopes to eventually reduce CFC use by 50 to 70 percent.

In implementing a production cap, EPA would utilize the "permit pounds" concept. Each CFC would be assigned a potential ozone depletion factor. From the ozone depletion factor and the number of pounds of each CFC produced in a base year, a total production ceiling in permit pound units would be calculated.

All major CFC's would be included in the cap, and producers would be allowed to swing production between products so long as a total ceiling level of permit pounds were not exceeded. EPA would issue permits—by direct allocation or through auctioning to producers or users in permit pound units. These permits would be transferable between users or producers. Exports and possibly imports would be included in the cap.

The economic implications of regulating nonaerosol uses of CFC's, Mr. President, are serious matters which cannot be ignored. More than 780,000 jobs and 260,000 business locations related to CFC use would likely be impacted in some way. The annual value of goods and services dependent to some extent upon CFC's exceeds $28 billion, and there is about $135 billion of installed equipment which depends upon CFC's.

Small businesses could be at a disadvantage in trying to compete for restricted supplies under a cap. Closing of manufacturing plants and use locations could follow. Production could be transferred to nonregulated countries. All of these factors would add to the U.S. unemployment problem. At the same time, it should be recognized that CFC's are the basis of a major U.S. export market that would be jeopardized by a restriction on CFC use. Imports of CFC's to the United States also might be jeopardized by a restriction, affecting U.S. concerns dependent on those imports.

According to the Rand report for EPA, a production cap would result in product shortages which could lead to higher prices. Long term, many CFC users will find it difficult to remain competitive abroad as no other CFC producing nations plan to regulate. Unemployment would likely increase in those industries where no viable alternatives to CFC's exist. Many industries that switch to current state-of-the art non-CFC alternatives will likely pay a penalty in terms of workplace safety. Moreover CFC using industries would face negative growth prospects.

A total ban on all uses of CFC's would result in a net annual energy penalty in 10 years equivalent to almost 10 billion gallons of fuel, according to a 1980 study by the Battelle Columbus Laboratories. This 10 billion gallons can be equated with the fuel required to drive 12 million average automobiles—about 10 percent of all autos on U.S. roads—for 1 year, 45 percent of current annual oil production from Alaska's North Slope, or 9.5 percent of total U.S. crude oil imports in 1978.

Although EPA is not considering a total ban, it can be expected that any cutback in CFC use would result in proportional energy penalties. Energy consequences of shortages for new applications, such as the heat transfer fluid in solar collectors, could also be significant.

Although alternatives are available for some CFC uses, all alternatives have one or more limitations. Some of the alternatives are facing health, safety, or environmental regulations. Others would require major adjustments in production techniques of products currently dependent upon CFC's or would be unable to deliver the desired characteristics in the end product with optimum utilization of raw materials, or would result in energy penalties. And some others are less safe for the worker and consumers.

The search for safe, environmentally sound and commercially acceptable alternatives to CFC's has been underway since the theory was first postulated. However, to date, no candidate alternative has passed all the screening tests. Industry researchers believe that acceptable alternatives are 7 to 10 years away, if they can be developed at all.

The legislation I am introducing today is a sound and realistic approach to an important health issue. Obviously, the ozone depletion theory warrants serious concern and should be investigated. My bill recognizes the importance of such investigation. However, scientific measurements and evaluations, not theory, should decide the issue. Experimental evidence can be obtained quantitatively to verify or disprove the theory, and there is time, in my judgment to perform these necessary experiments without undue risk to our health and welfare.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a summary of the bill and the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill and the summary were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 517

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Ozone Depletion Validation Act of 1981."

SEC. 2. Part B of title 1 of the Clean Air Act is amended by adding at the end thereof:

"FINDINGS

"SEC. 159A. The Congress finds that—

"(a) Protection of the ozone layer in the stratosphere is a global concern and requires international cooperation.

"(b) There is considerable scientific uncertainty relating to man's understanding of stratospheric science and of many of the principal assumptions concerning the theory that chlorofluorocarbons deplete the stratospheric ozon layer. Ozone depletion estimates are calculated by mathematical models. However, to date none of these models can be validated by actual atmospheric measurements.

"(c) Advanced analytical techniques can detect long-term changes of approximately one percent in the stratospheric ozone concentration, should they occur from any cause. These techniques provide an early warning monitoring system, and to date no depletion of the stratospheric ozone has been detected. Therefore, there is no unreasonable risk to health or welfare in taking time to conduct needed research.

"(d) Research programs are under way to reduce or resolve the key scientific uncertainties in the ozone depletion theory.

"(e) Chlorofluorocarbons have a large economic and employment significance to the United States. These compounds have vital housing, automotive, and industrial uses. There are no safe, environmentally sound, and commercially feasible substitutes for chlorofluorocarbons in most of these uses.

"(f) There is no government proposal outside the United States to control non-aerosol uses of chlorofluorocarbons, and few countries have even taken action to control chlorofluorocarbons as aerosol propellants. Other major producing countries have considered the existing scientific data and rejected any further control of chlorofluorocarbons at this time.

"(g) Further unilateral action by the United States to control chlorofluorocarbons will do little to reduce any potential threat of depletion of ozone in the stratosphere, but is likely to result in increased energy utilization, decreased competitiveness of United States industries in international trade, and other adverse economic consequences.

"(h) A disproportionate share of the economic burden of further unilateral control by the United States would be borne by small business users of chlorofluorocarbons.

"CONTINUED STUDIES; POSTPONEMENT OF REGULATIONS

"SEC. 159B(a). In light of these findings, and in particular the rapid development of knowledge of the physical and chemical structure of the stratosphere and the serious adverse consequences associated with unilateral control by the United States of chlorofluorocarbons, the Administrator shall—

"(1) continue to conduct the studies and research authorized by section 153 (a) and (b) of this title, with emphasis given to increasing actual measurements of stratospheric ozone and to improving methods of identifying potential trends in actual ozone measurements;

"(2) undertake to contract with the National Academy of Sciences to (i) continue the review and research efforts heretofore conducted by the Academy pursuant to section 153(d) of this title; (ii) determine if changes in the concentration of ozone in the stratosphere have occurred or are occurring and, if so, the extent, nature and causes of any such changes; (iii) investigate whether there are unreasonable effects on health and welfare from any such changes; and (iv) report all findings as well as any uncertainties associated with such findings; and

"(3) not propose further regulations for the control in the United States of any chlorofluorocarbon under this statute or any other statute until such time as an international agreement or agreements among the major free-world producing countries of chlorofluorocarbons are reached as to the nature, extent and implications of any threat to the concentration of ozone in the stratosphere and as to the appropriate regulatory action to be taken by such countries pursuant to such agreement or agreements to provide protection against the depletion of ozone in the stratosphere, or until depletion of the stratospheric azone by chlorofluorocarbons at a rate determined to be eventually harmful to human health and the environment is actually detected.

"(b) Any final regulation adopted pursuant to subsection (a)(3) shall not take effect until at least ninety days after the date of its promulgation, and in any event shall not take effect until expiration of the time provided for adoption of a resolution of disapproval, as hereinafter set forth.

"EXPANSION OF CONTINUING PROGRAMS

"SEC. 159C. The research and monitoring programs provided for in section 154 of this title shall be continued and expanded, with particular emphasis given to determining whether changes in the concentration of ozone in the stratosphere have occurred or are occurring and, if so, the extent, nature, causes and effects of any such changes and any uncertainties associated therewith.

"REPORT ON RESEARCH EFFORTS

"SEC. 159D. The National Academy of Sciences, in consultation with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, shall not later than two years from the effective date of this section, and annually thereafter until such time as the theory of ozone depletion by chlorofluorocarbons has been validated, report to the Administrator and the Congress all findings concerning actual or potential alteration of the concentration of ozone in the stratosphere and the causes of any such alteration, and the implications and uncertainties associated with such findings. Copies of such reports shall be made available to the public.

"REPORT ON INTERNATIONAL EFFORTS

"SEC. 159E. The President shall no later than two years from the effective date of this section, and annually thereafter, report to Congress on the status of efforts undertaken to reach an international agreement or agreements among the major free world producing countries of chlorofluorocarbons as to the nature, extent, and implications of any threat to the concentration of ozone in the stratosphere and the appropriate regulatory action to be taken by such countries pursuant to such agreement or agreements to provide protection against the depletion of ozone in the stratosphere. Copies of such reports shall be made available to the public.

"STATE REGULATIONS

"SEC. 159F. Except as provided in section 159(b) of this title, no State or political subdivision thereof may adopt or attempt to enforce any regulation respecting the control of chlorofluorocarbons for the purpose of protecting the stratosphere or ozone in the stratosphere until such time as the Administrator, pursuant to section 159B(a)(3) of this title and other applicable requirements, has promulgated a regulation or regulations respecting the control in the United States of chlorofluorocarbons.

"PRIOR REGULATIONS; OTHER STATUTORY PROVISIONS

"SEC. 159G. Nothing contained in sections 159A through 159F of this title shall affect (1) the validity of regulations concerning aerosol propellants containing chlorofluorocarbons promulgated by the Administrator prior to the effective date of those sections, or (2) the Administrator's obligation to comply with other applicable requirements in adopting regulations for the control of chlorofluorocarbons consistent with the international agreement or agreements or after the actual detection of eventually harmful depletion, referred to in section 158B(c).

"DEFINITION

"SEC. 159H. As used in sections 159A through 159G of this title, the term "chlorofluorocarbon" means any of the halocarbon compounds commonly known as CFC-11, CFC-12, CFC-113, CFC-114, CFC-115, and CFC-22 as well as any other simple saturated compounds of carbon, chlorine, fluorine, and optionally hydrogen containing not more than four carbon atoms.

"RESOLUTION OF DISAPPROVAL

"SEC. 159I. (a)(1) Any rule promulgated pursuant to section 159B(a)(3) shall not become effective if within ninety legislative days after the date of promulgation, either House of Congress adopts a resolution disapproving such rule.

"(2) If at the end of ninety legislative days after the date of promulgation of such rule, neither House of Congress has adopted a resolution disapproving the rule, the rule shall take effect unless a later date may be required by law or specified in the rule.

"(b)(1) The Administrator may not promulgate a new rule pursuant to section 159B(a)(3) identical or substantially identical to one disapproved pursuant to this section unless a statute is adopted affecting the Administrator's powers with respect to this subject matter.

"(2) If the Administrator proposes a new rule dealing with the same subject matter as the disapproved rule, he shall comply with the procedures required for the issuance of a new rule, except that, if less than twelve months have passed since the date of such disapproval, such procedures may be limited to changes in the rule.

"COMPUTATION OF LEGISLATIVE DAYS

"SEC. 159J. For the purposes of this chapter the term 'legislative days' does not include any calendar day on which either House of the Congress is not in session.

"PROCEDURE FOR CONSIDERATION OF RESOLUTIONS

"SEC. 159K. (a) The provisions of this section are enacted by Congress—

"(1) as an exercise of the rulemaking power of the Senate and the House of Representatives, respectively, and as such they are deemed a part of the rules of each House, respectively, but applicable only with respect to the procedure to be followed in that House in the case of resolutions described by section 159I of this title; and they supersede other rules only to the extent that they are inconsistent therewith; and

"(2) with full recognition of the constitutional right of either House to change the rules (so far as relating to the procedure of that House) at any time, in the same manner and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of that House.

"(b)(1) Resolutions of disapproval of a rule shall, upon introduction or receipt from the other House of Congress be immediately referred by the presiding officer of the Senate or of the House of Representatives to the standing committee having oversight and legislative responsibility with respect to the Environmental Protection Agency in accordance with the rules of the respective House; and such resolutions shall not be referred to any other committee.

"(2) If a committee to which is referred a resolution which has not been adopted by the other House of Congress does not report such resolution within sixty legislative days after such referral, it shall be in order to move to discharge such committee from further consideration of such resolution.

"(3) Such motion to discharge must be supported by one-fifth of the Members of the House of Congress involved, and is highly privileged in the House and privileged in the Senate; and debate thereon shall be limited to not more than one hour, the time to be divided in the Senate equally between, and controlled by, the majority leader and minority leader or their designees. An amendment to the motion is not in order, and it is not in order to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to.

"(c)(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3) of this subsection, consideration of a resolution of disapproval shall be in accord with the rules of the Senate and of the House of Representatives, respectively.

"(2) When a committee has reported or has been discharged from further consideration of a resolution with respect to a rule, it shall be in order at any time thereafter (even though a previous motion to the same effect has been disagreed to) to move to proceed to the consideration of the resolution. The motion is highly privileged and is not debatable. An amendment to the motion is not in order, and it is not in order to move to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to.

"(3) Debate on the resolution shall be limited to not more than two hours, which shall be divided equally between those favoring and those opposing the resolution. A motion further to limit debate is not debatable. An amendment to or motion to recommit the resolution is not in order and it is not in order to move to reconsider the vote by which the resolution is agreed or disagreed to.

"EFFECT ON JUDICIAL REVIEW

"SEC. 159L. Congressional inaction on or rejection of a resolution of disapproval or of a resolution for reconsideration shall not be deemed an expression of approval of such rule.".

SUMMARY OF THE PROVISIONS OF THE BILL

This bill would amend Part B of Title I of the Clean Air Act to provide for the continuation and expansion of studies and research regarding the ozone layer of the stratosphere, the possible alteration, if any, of the concentration of ozone in the stratosphere, and the potential effects, if any, upon health and the environment of any change in ozone concentration. The bill also provides that further regulation of chlorofluorocarbons to the American economy, and the global nature of the issues involved.

The bill provides in Section 159B(a) (1) and (2) that the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall continue to conduct studies and research previously authorized by Congress under Section 153 of the Clean Air Act, and that the Administrator shall contract with the National Academy of Sciences (NAS) to continue and expand research heretofore undertaken by the NAS under the Clean Air Act. A principal focus of these studies will be to determine whether changes in the ozone concentration have occurred or are occurring and, if so, the extent, nature, and causes of such changes and whether there are any unreasonable effects on health and the environment from any such changes.

Section 159B(a)(3) of the bill provides that the Administrator shall not propose any further regulations for the control of chlorofluorocarbons until there is an international agreement or agreements among the major free-world producing countries of chlorofluorocarbons as to both the nature, extent, and implications of any threat to the ozone concentration in the stratosphere and the appropriate regulatory action to be taken by such countries. In the absence of such an international agreement, the Administrator can propose regulations for the control of chlorofluorocarbons if depletion of the stratospheric ozone by chlorofluorocarbons at a rate determined to be eventually harmful to human health and the environment is actually detected. Other sections provide for Congressional review of any Agency action on this subject. Section 159G makes it clear that in proposing or adopting regulations under Section 159B(a)(3), the Administrator must comply with other applicable requirements.

Other sections of the bill direct that research and monitoring programs previously mandated by Congress will be continued and expanded. The NAS, in consultation with NASA and NOAA, is to make periodic reports to the Congress and the Administrator on its findings. The President is to report to the Congress on the status of efforts to reach an international agreement or agreements respecting chlorofluorocarbons.

Section 159F continues in effect the existing limitations in Section 159(b) of the Clean Air Act upon state or local government regulations to control chlorofluorocarbons. Section 159H defines chlorofluorocarbons for purposes of this bill.●

By Mr. MELCHER:

S. 518. A bill to provide tax incentives to encourage new personal savings and enhance personal retirement; to the Committee on Finance.

PERSONAL SAVINGS AND RETIREMENT ENHANCEMENT ACT

● Mr. MELCHER. Mr. President, today I am introducing a bill to provide tax incentives to encourage new personal savings and enhance retirement programs. The bill is comprised of three basic provisions:

The first is an increase in the current exemption from tax for income from savings account interest and dividends. We took a good first step during the windfall profit tax bill in providing an exemption of up to $200 per individual and $400 per joint tax return from the tax on interest and dividend income. The problem is that these amounts are really too small to gain our objective, which is to encourage additional savings. Since that time there have been several suggestions that Congress act to increase this exemption. I think that it is high time to act. My bill would increase this exemption to $5,000 per individual and $10,000 per joint tax return. I do not think this is too large an exemption in the face of the severe need for new investment funds that would be generated by increasing this exemption.

The second, aimed at immediately encouraging greater personal savings, provides for a tax credit of 7 percent for the purchase of special 1-year, emergency, small denomination savings certificates. These certificates, which will be available for purchase for a period of 180 days from enactment, will provide the small saver a combined return from the tax credit and interest earned that is competitive with the return on Treasury bills and large denomination commercial certificates of deposit.

The third, aimed at encouraging additional long term personal savings and enhancing the retirement program of the average person, expands the opportunity of establishing individual retirement accounts to everyone, whether or not they are in other retirement programs. It also increases the limits on what can be put into IRA's to make up for what has been lost to inflation. This provision of the bill will become effective immediately, but also upon the termination of the special tax credits for the emergency savings certificates, the amount invested in the certificate can be transferred into an IRA without applying against IRA account limits.

President Reagan recently told the nation that we face an economic crisis greater than any since the Great Depression. To fight this crisis he has called for spending and tax cuts. Congress is going to respond to the call to cut spending and tighten the Federal belt. But spending cuts and budget balancing alone is not going to get us out of the crisis that President Reagan referred to. Neither are simple across the board tax cuts, badly needed as they are. The real crisis that we face as a nation is the disappearance of one of the vital elements in a capitalistic economy—namely capital.

If we are ever to get our economy back on its feet again, it is clear that we need to stimulate capital accumulation through greater personal savings. The personal savings rate in the United States has dropped to abysmal levels in recent years—reaching a record low of 3.4 percent in 1979, and continuing to run at levels well below historic rates.

Greater personal saving will provide the reasonably priced investment funds needed to get our housing and automobile industries moving again, and to help many of our older businesses modernize their plants. It will also spur new investment in small businesses and insure that our working farmers have the operating funds they need.

This legislation does more than that stated in the old proverb of "killing two birds with one stone"; it actually meets three of our economic goals at the same time—it provides an important tax incentive to help taxpayers provide for their future; it creates reasonably priced investment capital for our businesses; and it fights inflation by encouraging personal saving instead of increased consumption.

Mr. President, I hope that my colleagues will agree that this approach makes good sense, and I ask unanimous consent that my bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 518

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Personal Savings and Retirement Enhancement Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS BY CONGRESS.

Whereas, the rate of personal saving dropped to an all time low of 3.4 percent of disposable income in 1979, and continues to remain below historic national levels;

Whereas, the low level of personal savings is a significant factor in the current high cost of borrowing;

Whereas, the current high cost of borrowing is having a devastating impact on small businesses, and on the housing, agriculture, auto, and other industries, causing a drastic jump in the national level of unemployment; and

Whereas, conventional retirement programs are not providing adequate retirement income for many taxpayers.

It is the determination of Congress that legislative action must be taken now to provide tax incentives to encourage new personal savings, and enhance personal retirement programs.

SEC. 3. INCREASE IN EXEMPTION OF CERTAIN INTEREST INCOME FROM TAX.

Section 116 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended, is further amended by striking out "$200 ($400" in subsection (b)(1) and inserting in lieu thereof "$5,000 ($10,000".

SEC. 4. TAX CREDIT FOR SPECIAL EMERGENCY SAVINGS CERTIFICATES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subpart (A) of part IV of subchapter (A) of chapter (1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to credits allowable) is amended by inserting immediately before section 45 the following new section:

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—In the case of an individual, there shall be allowed, as a credit against the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year, an amount equal to 7 percent of the amounts paid during the taxable year for the purchase of special emergency savings, certificates.

"(b) LIMITATION.—The amount of the credit allowed by subsection (a) for any taxable year shall not exceed $126 ($252 in the case of a married individual filing a joint return).

"(c) DEFINITIONS; SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this section—

"(B) which has a face value of $50 or $100,

"(C) which bears interest at an annual rate of—

"(i) 5 percent in the case of $50 certificates, or

"(ii) 6 percent in the case of $100 certificates,

"(D) which has a term of 1 year, and

"(E) which is purchased within 180 days after the date of enactment of the Interest Rate Reduction and Savings and Retirement Enhancement Act.

"(2) PENALTY FOR EARLY WITHDRAWAL.—No amount shall be allowed as a credit under subsection (a) with respect to any special emergency savings certificate if the amounts on deposit reflected by such certificate are withdrawn by the taxpayer less than 1 year after the date on which the certificate was purchased by the taxpayer.".

By Mr. MELCHER:

S. 519. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to adjust the unified credit against estate and gift taxes to take into account the rate of inflation; to the Committee on Finance.

FAMILY ENTERPRISE PROTECTION ACT

● Mr. MELCHER. Mr. President, today I am introducing a bill to adjust the estate tax reforms of 1976, and the gift exemption, for the inflation that has occurred in the past 4 years. This bill will adjust the Federal estate and gift exemption levels for 1981 to bring them into line with the higher prices caused by inflation. It will increase the effective exemption from inheritance taxes to $400,000 in 1981 and $500,000 in 1982. It will increase the amount of property that an individual may give tax free annually to another individual from $3,000 to $10,000.

Based on the price increases caused by inflation during the last 4 years, a farm or business which passes to children as a result of the parent s death could be subject to over $25,000 more in inheritance taxes than it would have been in 1976. This is not because of any increase in real value of the estate, but just because of inflation.

Increases like this in inheritance taxes might well make the difference between survival and extinction for thousands of family businesses. The problem may not be as serious if the enterprise is passed to a surviving spouse. But it can be critical when it is necessary to transmit a farm or business to children; and the more children, the worse the diffculties.

It is not just the individual farm or business that is affected. It is the pattern of land ownership and business ownership in Montana and throughout the entire country. If we do not act to relieve this tax pressure, the danger is that the present estate tax, inflated because of price increases, can mow down a whole generation of family enterprises before we realize what has happened.

That would threaten our entire economic system. If we are going to preserve family ownership of farms and commercial enterprises, we must prevent them from being taxed out of existence at the time they are being passed on to the next generation.

This whole process has been worsened because tax authorities often insist on a far higher valuation of the farm or the business than the heirs believe reasonable under the circumstances. We are now fighting new IRS regulations that would do that to many of our farms. On top of that, there are often long delays and the added expense of negotiation, and often lawsuits. These have convinced many family entrepreneurs to take the quick, painless route—sell out and get out.

A tax structure that encourages this trend is not only bad economic policy, it is bad social policy. As we put together a tax bill this session of Congress that has as one of its primary aims the revitalization of the American economy, we must not ignore the family-owned businesses. Family-owned businesses are an intregal component of our economy and society. As a source of entrepreneurial spirit and for their many contributions in the fields of technology, innovation, and social advancement, family-owned small businesses must be preserved and protected. The family business is a source of pride which gives the family a personal sense of freedom, accomplishment, and pride in ownership. The perpetuation of the family business in America is of significant importance to the survival of free enterprise that has built the foundation of our country and economy.

I hope that my colleagues in the Senate will agree with this and help me press the tax writing committees to include provisions in the up-coming tax bill that will adjust inheritance taxes for inflation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my bill be printed in full in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

By Mr. HAYAKAWA (for himself and Mr. CRANSTON):

S. 521. A bill for the relief of Benjamin Bane; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

BENJAMIN BANE

● Mr. HAYAKAWA. Mr. President, I am introducing today a bill on behalf of myself and Mr. CRANSTON that will provide that Benjamin Bane shall be considered not to have lost his status as a citizen of the United States.

Through the years, Dr. Bane has fallen victim to a series of catastrophic and administrative situations beyond his control. Dr. Bane was born in Durham, N.C. in 1905. In 1911, Benjamin Bane traveled with his parents to South Africa where he remained until he was 23 years old. At that time, he decided to continue his education as a dentist in the United States. However, upon discovering that his premedical education would not be accepted in the United States, Dr. Bane alternatively pursued his education in England where he obtained his doctorate of dentistry.

When Dr. Bane attempted to return to the United States, he was informed by the U.S. Embassy in England that a passport could not be issued in the absence of a birth certificate. Unfortunately, the hall of records in North Carolina, where his birth certificate was filed, had been destroyed by fire. In a subsequent attempt to obtain a U.S. passport, he was told that it would be expeditious to apply for and travel on a British passport. Therein lies the tragedy. In the haste of the processing, Dr. Bane was not informed that his application for a British passport would in any way affect his American citizenship.

Unfortunately, the rest of Dr. Bane's efforts to prove his citizenship have been unsuccessful, even though he eventually was able to secure another record of his American birth. This American born doctor, a California constituent of mine, is now terminally ill, and I am most proud to sponsor this bill on his behalf.●

By Mr. HAYAKAWA:

S. 522. A bill to amend section 302(a) of the Fishery Conservation and Management Act of 1976 to create a new California Pacific Council with authority over the fisheries in the Pacific Ocean seaward of the State of California; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

CALIFORNIA PACIFIC COUNCIL

● Mr. HAYAKAWA. Mr. President, I would like to introduce a bill to create a new California Pacific Council.

This legislation would amend the Fishery Conservation and Management Act of 1976 by giving a newly created California Pacific Council the authority over the fisheries in the Pacific Ocean seaward of the State of California. The California Pacific Council would have nine voting members, including seven to be appointed from the State of California by the Secretary of Commerce.

California has over 1,000 miles of coastal water, more than the other Pacific Council States combined. Yet California has a relatively small representation on the Pacific Management Council. California has well over half of the fishery resources of the present council, which consists of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, and California, and yet California has only 3 voting members on the 15 member council.

The fishermen in my State are fearful of having their industry jeopardized by disputes in other States and in which California is not directly involved. Therefore, our fishermen feel that the Pacific Fisheries Management Council is not really representing them. These fishing groups, in addition to many municipal groups, support this legislation that I am introducing.

My bill does not address what would happen to the terms of the California representatives on the existing Pacific Fisheries Management Council. This matter would be determined by the Secretary of Commerce. I do not believe this matter will present any problems.●

By Mr. MELCHER:

S. 523. A bill to repeal the credit against U.S. taxes for foreign taxes paid, and allow a deduction; and to repeal the deferral of U.S. tax on the income of foreign subsidiaries of U.S. companies—as permitted under present law—and tax profits of foreign subsidiaries currently to their U.S. parents in the same manner as domestic companies; to the Committee on Finance.

TAX TREATMENT OF FOREIGN EARNED INCOME

● Mr. MELCHER. Mr. President, the bill I am introducing today is comprised of two major provisions that modify the U.S. tax treatment of foreign earned income by U.S.-owned companies.

The first provision repeals the foreign tax credit. Instead of permitting U.S.-owned multinational corporations a dollar-for-dollar credit against their U.S. corporate taxes for the taxes they pay overseas, this provision will allow only a deduction from taxable income. This change will bring greater equity to the tax treatment of multinational and wholly owned domestic U.S. companies by treating the taxes paid to foreign governments the same as taxes paid to State and local governments here at home.

The second part of the bill repeals the deferral of U.S. tax on the income of foreign subsidiaries of U.S. companies—as permitted under present law—and tax profits of foreign subsidiaries currently to their U.S. parents in the same manner as profits of domestic companies. The foreign tax credit would be allowed for the repatriated earnings.

The issue of the foreign tax credit and tax deferral has been raised in Congress before, both by me and others. I introduced this same legislation during consideration of the windfall profit tax bill a little over a year ago. It seemed incomprehensive to me at that time that we were approving legislation that was going to tax the domestic production of crude oil an additional $227 billion between 1979 and 1990, on top of the corporate and other taxes they already pay, and at the same time, refuse to close up some of the tax loopholes that permit U.S.-based multinational companies to avoid billions of dollars in U.S. taxes. It was clear to me that we were penalizing domestic oil production and rewarding overseas oil production. The latest figures show that the oil companies understood this and have continued to get fat on their overseas operations.

A recent Jack Anderson article on the abuses of the foreign tax credit points out that 75 percent of all the foreign tax credits claimed by American companies go to the oil industry. I will ask unanimous consent that the Jack Anderson column from the February 2 Washington Post be printed in full at the conclusion of my remarks.

Another recent article on the abuses of the foreign tax credit appeared in the January issue of People and Taxes. It is an article Congress should take heed of and I will also ask that it be printed in full at the conclusion of my remarks.

Although the greatest abuse of the foreign tax loopholes in the code is by the oil companies, this is not the only area that needs attention. The combined use of foreign tax credits and tax deferral give multinational firms a competitive advantage over their purely domestic counterparts. If a domestic firm in my State of Montana, or any other State, is required to pay local or State corporate taxes as part of their operating costs, they are allowed a deduction for the taxes paid against their Federal corporate tax obligation. However, if a multinational firm pays taxes abroad, they are permitted a dollar-for-dollar credit against the foreign taxes they pay. This is a significant tax advantage.

Tax deferral is also a useful tool that multinational corporations have at their disposal to lower U.S. tax obligations that is not available to domestic corporations.

A simple hypothetical example can show the tax advantages of deferral. Let us assume there are two corporations, "A" and "B." Let us say that corporation A is located in Billings, Mont., and that corporation B is a subsidiary of a U.S. company located in a foreign country that has offered it a "tax holiday" for a period of 9 years. Let us follow these two corporations through 9 years of operation to see what effect U.S. tax deferral has on their reinvested profits.

In the first year, corporation A, the Billings corporation, earns $1 in profits. Because it is located in the United States, it must pay corporate income taxes at the rate of 45 percent on that dollar. This leaves 55 cents for reinvestment. Let us say the corporation reinvests the entire 55 cents for an additional 8 years and can earn a 15-percent annual rate of return on its investment, and will pay a 45-percent tax on each year's profits. After 9 years, corporation A's investment will be worth $1.04. The profit on this investment is $0.50. The net results of these transactions is a total net profit after taxes of $1.04 for corporation A.

Now, let us look at corporation B undergoing similar transactions, but operating abroad under a tax holiday. Corporation B also earns $1 of profits in the first year. But, because corporation B owes no income taxes on that income, it is able to reinvest the entire amount. In effect, the U.S. Government is making an interest-free loan to corporation B for the duration of its investment. Of course, it is really the American taxpayers who foot the bill for this generosity.

After 8 years at a 15-percent rate of return, corporation B's investment will be worth $3.06. If corporation B now decides to return these profits to the United States, it will finally be subject to U.S. corporate income taxes. Of course, corporation B can reinvest this profit also and delay the tax still further if it wishes. But, assuming it brings the profits back home, the U.S. corporate income tax due will be $1.40. This leaves corporation B with a net profit after taxes of $1.66.

Mr. President, this is 59 percent higher than the profits corporation A—the one operating in my home State—was able to earn on a similar investment. And the only reason for this difference is that corporation B could defer its U.S. tax liability.

Some will argue that this example is unrealistic because corporation B pays no foreign income tax on its profits. Mr. President, there are many schemes and devices by which our corporations operating abroad can escape all or substantially all foreign taxes on their incomes. Many foreign nations offer special tax inducements to corporations to entice them to locate in their countries. But, even in countries that collect taxes from subsidiaries of the U.S. multinationals, there are substantial advantages. Of the 63 major countries where U.S. multinationals have investments, 9 have a realized corporate tax rate of 10 percent or less. In these countries our hypothetical reinvestment would provide a return at least 39 percent greater than in the United States.

There are 11 countries that have a realized corporate rate of between 10 and 20 percent. Here our investment would bring a return at least 22 percent greater than in the United States. There are 11 countries with a realized corporate tax of 20 to 30 percent. In these countries, our investment would bring a return at least 17 percent greater than in the United States.

Only in eight countries with less than 9 percent of foreign investments—and that is U.S. foreign investments—in 1979 would the rate of return not be larger than a similar investment in the United States.

In an effort to be as accurate as possible, I have included a table showing what the different returns would be for varying foreign tax rates.

Mr. President, I will ask unanimous consent that the tables showing the tax rates in various countries be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

Mr. President, President Reagan has outlined a broad approach of tax and spending cuts in his program for national economic recovery that are aimed at getting our domestic economy back on its feet. I intend to support these efforts as best I can. However, I am emphatically against putting the interest of the multinational corporations ahead of the needs of our own citizens. There are going to be deep budget cuts, and the American people have said they are willing to sacrifice for the general good. I do not think it is too much to ask the same of the giant multinational companies, both inside and outside the oil business, to do the same. They have gotten fat over the years through these tax loopholes and it is high time they returned some of the benefit to the American people. I hope that my colleagues will agree with me.

Mr. President, I now ask that the text of the bill as well as the other material referred to earlier in my statement be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill and material were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

"(b) REDUCTION IN BASIS.—

BIG OIL ESCAPING U.S. INCOME TAXES

(By Jack Anderson)

Americans are understandably not impressed by the obscene spectacle of Big Oil weeping crocodile tears all the way to the bank. Even the most naive consumers can see a connection between the doubling of gasoline and fuel oil prices and the fat quarterly profits the major oil companies keep racking up.

But, what many don't realize is that Uncle Sam's tax collectors—who are such relentless tigers when they stalk the ordinary taxpayer—are tame tabby cats for the Big Oil boys. Through a transparent tax dodge enacted by a compliant Congress, the oil companies evade enough taxes each year to handle a healthy chunk of the federal budget.

The device is called "foreign tax credit." On the surface, it seems fair enough: For every dollar in foreign taxes an oil company pays, it is given a dollar of credit against its U.S. income taxes. Ostensibly, this prevents double taxation—or so the slick propagandists of Big Oil would have us believe.

The hitch is this: The foreign "taxes" are in fact part of the purchase price—the same kind of royalties an oil company might pay to private landowners in this country for the right to pump oil from their property. Overseas, the landowners are the various foreign governments, so most royalties paid to them are construed as taxes.

It makes no difference to the foreign governments; a royalty using the alias of a tax is still money. But to the oil companies—and the rest of the American taxpayers—it makes a colossal difference.

Literally billions of dollars are at stake. Comprehensive figures in a revealing Internal Revenue Service study have been reviewed by my associate Dale Van Atta. They cover the tax returns of all American oil companies for the 12-month period from July 1975 through June 1976. Here's what the figures show:

The 39 biggest oil companies grossed a staggering $291 billion.

The deductions worked out by their accounting wizards totaled $254 billion.

After a few further allowances, the total profit admitted to by the 39 oil companies came to an impressive $36.5 billion. For most corporations, this would mean an income tax owed of $17.5 billion.

Instead, the oil companies wound up paying about $2.5 billion in U.S. income taxes.

How could this happen? Simple enough: The oil moguls claimed foreign tax credits totaling $15 billion. So on an aggregate income of nearly $300 billion, the companies paid a total of about less than 1 percent in income taxes—while individual American taxpayers were giving the federal government 20, 30, 40 percent or more of their annual earnings.

Big Oil's special place in the hearts of Congress is made clear by some figures in another IRS study. Even with all the huge multinational American corporations entitled to claim foreign tax credits—like IBM, ITT, etc.—the oil industry accounted for 75 percent of all foreign taxes claimed by U.S. companies. Obviously, the foreign tax credit law is as tailor-made as an oil baron's $800 suit.

As if the disguising of royalties as taxes weren't bad enough, the fine needlework in the law allows an even trickier use of the foreign tax credits by Big Oil. With IRS and Department of Energy blessings, some oil companies are permitted to charge their U.S. refineries—that is, themselves—much higher prices for crude oil than their cost for drilling and shipping it to the United States. Thanks to various bookkeeping tricks, only minimal taxes are paid on this so-called "foreign profit."

These legal ruses allow the oil companies to reassure outraged American consumers that, really now, they're not making exorbitant profits from their U.S. customers. Most of those eye-popping profits they announce every three months come from their foreign operations, they say with a straight face.

THE FOREIGN TAX CREDIT: WILL THE LOOPHOLES BE PLUGGED

(By George Riley)

Big oil has an early demand for the new Treasury secretary, Donald Regan. A week after the presidential election, the Carter administration issued new regulations to narrow a loophole which has wedded the oil companies and OPEC in a profitable relationship unwittingly financed by American taxpayers. But the new regulations are temporary, and Regan could alter or relax them before they become permanent.

The new rules govern application of the foreign tax credit, one of the most controversial and complex areas of the tax law. For almost three decades, U. S. petroleum companies have treated many payments made by their subsidiaries to OPEC governments as tax credits, and not as mere deductions. The difference is critical. As a deduction, the payment would only reduce overall taxable income. A credit, however, directly offsets the amount of tax owed to the U.S. Treasury when the subsidiary repatriates its profits to the parent company. With a 48 percent corporate income tax, a one dollar payment to a foreign government reduces U.S. taxes by 48 cents when treated as a deduction. As a credit, the dollar payment reduces U.S. tax liability by a full dollar.

The foreign tax credit has beeen available to all corporations and citizens since it became law with the passage of the 1918 Revenue Act. The credit applies, however, only to foreign taxes levied against income. Other payments and taxes must be treated as deductions.

The idea behind the credit was to avoid double taxation on foreign income. The policy was intended neither to encourage nor to discourage foreign investment. Theoretically, the total tax on overseas income—both the foreign and U.S. income taxes—would equal the tax as if the income were earned exclusively within the United States.

With the knowledge and possible connivance of the U.S. government, this neutral policy toward foreign investment was twisted into a massive subsidy for multinational oil companies and their OPEC partners. By cleverly disguising as income taxes what were actually royalties, the corporations shifted millions of U.S. tax dollars into the coffers of OPEC governments.

Only after Congressional inquiries and some unfavorable IRS rulings did the Carter administration cut back on the credits. Yet the history of the credit hardly suggests that the regulations will be immune from political pressures, especially from an administration openly supportive of the industry.

The first oil companies to profit from the creative use of the foreign tax credit were Exxon, Mobil, Standard Oil of California and Texaco. Together these companies owned the Arabian American Oil Company, better known as Aramco.

In the late 1940's, Saudi Arabia began to press the Aramco companies to increase the country's share of the price of a barrel of crude oil from 12 percent to 50 percent. At first, the companies balked at the proposal, and with the birth of OPEC ten years in the future Saudi Arabia was not in a position to dictate terms. The stalemate was shifted when the U.S. State Department, fearing hostile nationalism in the Middle East, allegedly intervened on behalf of Saudi Arabia.

The solution seemed to please everyone. Saudi Arabia would raise its net take to 50 percent by instituting a national income tax which, in reality, only affected the oil companies. The companies, in turn, preserved their profits because the credit allowed them to pay Saudi Arabia with money that would have gone into U.S. income taxes.

American officials were not unaware of the consequence of this covert form of foreign aid. George McGhee, who served as assistant secretary of State during the negotiations, told a Senate subcommittee in 1974: "I find in my records that I pointed out at the time, that the U.S. Treasury would in a sense be financing this change." In 1978, a House consumer subcommittee reported that the Treasury lost $50 million for the 1950 tax year, the first year the credit was taken.

Other countries quickly followed Saudi Arabia's example. In 1951, Kuwait set up a similar tax scheme. The next year saw Lebanon and Iraq establish a levy on corporate income. An income tax was also included in the Iranian Consortium agreement of 1954.

The U.S. Treasury initially objected to the credit. The 1978 congressional study found that from 1950 to 1954, the Secretary of Treasury went on record as "emphatically opposing a favorable ruling on the ground that the payment was in fact an increased royalty exacted in the guise of an income tax." After Eisenhower's election, however, Treasury reversed itself and issued a favorable retroactive ruling in 1955. The same study found that the State Department and National Security Council pressured Treasury to make the change.

Through the credit, the oil companies have realized enormous savings on U.S. taxes. The consumer subcommittee estimated that from 1950 to 1978, the companies saved some $14 billion in U.S. taxes. In other words, the Treasury lost $14 billion because tax payments to oil producing nations were credited against—rather than deducted from—U.S. tax liability.

The new regulations are designed to strike at a fiction that is central to the foreign tax credit scheme. Because most of the OPEC oil was transferred from the foreign subsidiary to the U.S. parent companies, the subsidiary's income was determined entirely by the parent. To establish a more realistic income for taxation purposes, OPEC governments used an accounting procedure known as "posted prices." Under this system, the foreign government assumed that the subsidiary "sold" each barrel to the parent at a price posted by the government. After deducting royalties and production costs from the posted price, the government applied its tax to the remaining "income." As long as the posted price reflected worldwide market conditions, the levy was roughly equivalent to an income tax.

The fiction became apparent when the posted prices began to depart drastically from world prices. Simply by raising the price, the producer government could increase its tax revenues. The companies would offer little resistance as long as the new costs were met with money that would have gone to satisfy U.S. income tax liability.

The new regulations codify a 1978 IRS ruling that companies cannot take credits for payments based on artificially posted prices. In order for the payments to qualify as credits, the country must compute the company's income in a fashion that will not exceed the fair market price of the goods or services produced by the subsidiary.

Other aspects of the regulations may reduce misuse of the foreign tax credit. For example, the foreign country's income tax must not treat the oil companies "significantly different" from other taxpayers. Also, a credit will not be allowed if the tax is clearly intended only to shift U.S. tax dollars to foreign treasuries.

The multinational oil companies condemned the new regulations immediately after they were announced. In newspaper ads, Mobil accused the lame duck administration of exceeding its Constitutional limitations by making "punitive changes" that Congress refused to enact. In a curious allusion, Mobil compared Carter to John Adams who, in a fit of pique after his election defeat by Thomas Jefferson, appointed the famous "midnight judges" just before leaving office.

But far from being a last minute change, the new regulations were four years in the making. Mcreover, the Treasury Department has been quite generous to the companies. The consumer subcommittee found that the Department impeded the issuance of new rulings after the IRS struck down the use of foreign tax credits by companies operating in Indonesia in 1976. When the IRS finally ruled against the arrangement in Saudi Arabia in 1978, Treasury insisted that the ruling apply only prospectively, despite the fact that IRS rulings are usually retroactive.

Though Congress has refused to heed the calls to abolish the credit, it has cut back on the scope of the provision. The Tax Reduction Act of 1975 and the Tax Reform Act of 1976 both limit the amount of credit that the oil companies can claim on overseas payments.

As the history of the tax credit shows, the key policy decisions are not made in Congress. Through regulations and rulings, Treasury and IRS exercise tremendous power in shaping the final results of any law. And, even if the new regulations remain unchanged, desultory enforcement and poor auditing can vitiate the guidelines.

The Reagan administration's position on the new regulations will be an important indication of the future course of tax and energy policy. If Reagan's promise to unleash the oil companies means relaxing restrictions on the tax credit, the results will be increased profits from foreign operations with no benefit for U.S. production.

By Mr. BAUCUS:

S. 524. A bill to require that imported meat and meat food products made in whole or in part of imported meat to be subjected to certain tests and that such meat or products be labeled "imported" at all stages of distribution until delivery to the final consumer; to require that the cost of conducting such tests, and the cost of conducting certain inspections and identification procedures on imported meat and meat food products, be borne by the exporters of such articles; to require certain eating establishments, which serve imported meat, to inform customers of that fact; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

MEAT LABELING AND INSPECTION ACT OF 1981

● Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Meat Labeling and Inspection Act of 1981. This is a bill to establish stronger inspection standards for imported meat products and to require that these products carry labels explaining that they are imports.

A significant part—6 percent or more—of the beef Americans eat is imported. But there are serious questions about the safety and wholesomeness of imported meat. And consumers have no way of knowing whether the meat they buy is safe, wholesome American product or foreign product produced and slaughtered under questionable conditions.

U.S. livestock producers suffer too, when unsafe or adulterated meat products are imported. Foreign producers can compete unfairly when they do not have to comply with the same stringent wholesomeness and safety requirement as domestic producers.

DOMESTIC VERSUS FOREIGN INSPECTION

Inspection procedures for imported meat are so shoddy that even the agency doing the inspecting has said:

We have no basis for determining the level of effectiveness achieved by the present program. We know that it provides some protection against the entry of adulterated products into the United States food channels, but we do not know precisely how much. (USDA–FSQS in Task Force Report on the Inspection of Imported Meat and Poultry; November, 1979).

USDA inspectors constantly monitor domestic plants which produce meat to move in interstate commerce.

Federal inspectors examine animals both before and after slaughter to insure that they are free from disease and contamination. Samples taken from carcasses and internal organs are tested for the presence of chemical residues and disease.

Federal inspectors insure that clean operating practices are used and that sanitary conditions are maintained in domestic slaughter facilities. Inspectors also assure that only permitted amounts of acceptable ingredients are used in product formulation.

This is in sharp contrast to the relatively haphazard inspection of foreign meat markets. The USDA does not conduct continuous inspection in foreign plants.

Rather, countries wishing to be eligible to export meat request USDA and State Department approval. Before granting approval, the USDA evaluates the countries' laws, regulations, and inspection staff and conducts onsite reviews.

Once a country is authorized to export, its inspection procedures are not routinely reexamined. For example, the task force report points out that although foreign countries are supposed to maintain laws and regulations to limit biological residues to levels permitted in the United States, the USDA has only recently begun to monitor compliance in this area.

Officials of the U.S. Food Safety and Quality Service do make periodic inspections of foreign plants. However, only 17 inspectors are available to monitor 1,159 certified foreign meat plants. At best, USDA inspectors visit foreign plants quarterly. Some overseas establishments are visited only once every 2 years.

These infrequent inspections cannot insure compliance with U.S. standards. The problem is aggravated because inspections must be announced in advance; plant operators thus have ample warning to prepare for inspections.

During 1978, only 38 times did an inspection result in plants being rejected for failure to meet U.S. standards.

Imported meat must undergo an additional inspection when it arrives at a U.S. port. But this inspection—supposedly a second line of defense—also is minimal.

Eight-five inspectors examined the 2 billion pounds of meat imported in 1978.

In fact, an imported product is routinely marked "U.S. inspected and passed" before it is actually inspected. Later, if for some reason the product fails to pass inspection, these "U.S. inspected and passed" marks are supposed to be removed or obliterated. There is at least a great potential for abuse under this procedure.

MEAT LABELING AND INSPECTION ACT

The legislation I am introducing today contains three basic provisions:

First, whenever imported meat is sold to consumers, its country of origin would have to be printed on the label.

Second, meat products could not be imported unless tests had been conducted by competent inspectors to insure that the meat did not contain substances prohibited in food produced in the United States.

Third, restaurants serving imported meat products would have to inform their customers of this fact.

The legislation would require testing of carcasses and internal organs of animals slaughtered overseas to insure that they do not contain more of any substance than the maximum level permitted in domestic meat or meat products.

Foreign inspectors would be required to meet criteria established by the Secretary of Agriculture that would be equivalent to the qualifications of domestic meat inspectors.

Appropriate officials in foreign countries would be required to certify to our Secretary of Agriculture that the products being imported have been tested and meet the standards established. Under current law, there is no such assurance.

Mr. President, no inspection system can be perfect. The present inspection system is so disjointed that it is impossible to even estimate its effectiveness. But no matter how much we improve this inspection system, the possibility exists for unsafe or unwholesome food products to be imported.

Thus, as a last line of defense, foreign meat and meat products must be labeled as imported. Consumers must be given the opportunity to avoid purchasing and consuming potentially unsafe food.

For the sake both of consumers who eat meat and of the domestic producers who provide it, I hope the 97th Congress will enact legislation to strengthen inspection and require labeling of imported beef.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—MEAT LABELING AND INSPECTION

SEC. 101. Section 20(a) of the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 620(a)) is amended by inserting "(1)" after "(a)", and by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(2) Any imported meat or meat food product referred to in paragraph (1), and any meat food product made in whole or in part of such imported meat, or its package or container, shall be labeled as 'imported', 'imported in part', or 'may contain imported meat', as appropriate. This paragraph shall not apply if the meat or meat product, or its package or container, is marked and labeled to show the country of origin as required under regulations referred to in paragraph (1).

"(3) If any person other than the ultimate consumer cuts meat or a meat food product into pieces or breaks a package or container containing meat or a meat food product and such meat, product, package, or container is required to be marked or labeled as provided in paragraph (1) or (2), such person shall affix a label to each piece of such meat or product or to each package or container in which any such meat or product is placed to provide the information required by paragraph (2). For purposes of this paragraph and paragraph (2), the term 'label' includes 'labeling' as defined in section 1(p).

"(4) No carcasses, parts of carcasses, meat or meat food products of cattle, sheep, swine, goats, horses, mules, or other equines which are capable of use as human food shall be imported into the United States unless—

"(A) tests have been conducted on the carcasses, parts of carcasses, and meat and meat food products, including internal organs, of the animals from which such articles came, to determine whether such articles (i) contain any substance prohibited in any carcass or meat or meat food product from any domestically produced animal referred to above, and (ii) contain a level of any substance in excess of the maximum level of such substance permitted under law or regulation in any carcass or meat food product from any domestically produced animal referred to above;

"(B) such tests have been conducted, in the country from which such articles are being imported, by persons who have been initially certified (and subsequently recertified) in the same manner or similar manner and under the same criteria as persons who are initially certified (and subsequently recertified) by the Department of Agriculture to conduct such tests on articles of animals produced in the United States; and

"(C) the appropriate government official of the country from which any such article is being imported has certified to the Secretary that such article has been tested in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary and that such article does not contain any substance referred to in subparagraph (A) or contain a level of any substance in excess of the maximum level referred to in such subparagraph, as appropriate.

"(5) In order to verify the accuracy of testing required for substances referred to in paragraph (4), the Secretary shall conduct a program under which inspectors of the Department of Agriculture take, from time to time, samples of carcasses, parts of carcasses, and meat and meat food products of animals referred to in paragraph (4) which are intended for export to the United States, including the internal organs of the animals from which such carcasses and meat and meat food products came, and send such samples to the United States for appropriate testing.

"(6) As used in paragraphs (4) and (5) of this subsection, the term 'substance' means any chemical matter for which the Department of Agriculture conducts tests on carcasses, parts of carcasses, and meat and meat food products, including the internal organs, of cattle, sheep, swine, goats, horses, mules, or other equines which are capable of use as human food, for the purpose of determining whether residues of such chemical matter are present in such articles or to determine whether the residues of such chemical matter present in such articles exceeds levels authorized by law or regulation.

"(7)(A) The Secretary shall prescribe such assessments and fees on imported meat and meat food products as he determines necessary to cover the costs of inspections, certifications, testing, and labeling (or other marking) required under this section.

"(B) In establishing the level or rate of assessments and fees to be imposed under this title, the Secretary shall take into consideration the volume of exports, the value thereof, and such other factors as he deems appropriate in order to achieve a fair and equitable allocation of such assessments and fees among exporters.

"(8) The Secretary shall have authority to suspend or revoke the privilege of any exporter of meat or meat food products to export such meat or products to the United States if such exporter fails to pay the assessments or fees for which he is responsible to pay under this title.".

TITLE II—REQUIREMENT OF CERTAIN EATING ESTABLISHMENTS TO INFORM CUSTOMERS THAT IMPORTED MEAT OR MEAT FOOD PRODUCTS ARE SERVED IN SUCH ESTABLISHMENTS

SEC. 201. (a) The owner of any eating establishment shall inform individuals purchasing food from such establishment that such establishment serves meat or meat food products imported from a foreign country, or meat food products containing meat imported from a foreign country. The owner shall inform such individuals—

(1) by displaying, in a conspicuous place in such establishment, a sign indicating that foods containing meat imported from a foreign country are served in such establishment; or

(2) by indicating such fact on the menus offered to such individuals.

(b) Any owner of an eating establishment who knowingly violates subsection (a) of this section, or whose employee or other agent knowingly violates such subsection, shall be fined an amount not to exceed $100 for each day such subsection is violated.

(c) For purposes of this section—

(1) The term "eating establishment" means any restaurant, cafeteria, lunch counter, or other facility (including any such facility located on the premises of any retail establishment)—

(A) which engages in operations affecting commerce; and

(B) which sells (for consumption on the premises) meat or meat food products which have been imported from a foreign country, or food containing meat imported from a foreign country.

(2) The term "commerce" means travel or transportation between any of the several States, or between any foreign country and any State, or between points in the same State but through any other State or any foreign country.

(3) The term "owner" means a corporation, partnership, association, any other legally organized entity or an individual.

(4) The term "State" means any State of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the territories and possessions of the United States.

(d) For purposes of this section, an eating establishment engages in operations affecting commerce if (1) such establishment serves or offers to serve food to any individual engaged in commerce, or (2) a significant portion, as determined by the Attorney General of the United States under section 202, of the food which such establishment offers for sale has moved in commerce.

SEC. 202. The Attorney General of the United States shall prescribe a regulation defining the term "significant portion", as used in section 201(d) of this Act, within thirty days from the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 203. The provisions of this title shall become effective ninety days after the date of the enactment of this Act or thirty days after the effective date of the regulation described in section 202 of this Act, whichever occurs later.●

By Mr. WILLIAMS (for himself and Mr. BRADLEY):

S. 525. A bill to provide that not less than one very high frequency commercial television broadcasting station be located in each State; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

THE FAIR BROADCASTING ACT OF 1981

● Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, not since 1961 has the State of New Jersey had a VHF television station.

This is a unique situation, and one which by now is no doubt familiar to many of my colleagues. But for the benefit of our newer Members on both sides of the aisle, I would like to summarize the problems this lack of television service has caused in New Jersey, and briefly outline the considerable body of evidence which has pushed me to continue this effort to have a VHF station assigned to our State.

One can hardly overestimate the importance and the impact of television in our society. The overwhelming majority of Americans depend on television for their news and information about the public affairs in their States and communities. Clearly, New Jerseyans are at a disadvantage because they must depend on stations in New York and Philadelphia for coverage of New Jersey events. Oftentimes this amounts to news of a fire in Newark or tragic accident in Camden; hardly a well-balanced or thorough attempt at State coverage.

Since 1971, I have served as cochairman of the New Jersey Coalition of Fair Broadcasting, a citizens group which was formed to advocate New Jersey's cause. The coalition has a long record of attempts to convince the Federal Communications Commission of the importance of our mission. Back in 1974, the group petitioned the FCC for relief. We were delighted to find that the FCC believed that "New Jersey's television needs and its overall circumstances constitute a special case warranting unique and responsive action by the Commission."

We have not been so delighted, however, with the followup responses by the Commission. We have seen the Commission request New York and Philadelphia stations to pay more attention to New Jersey coverage. We have heard the Commission suggest adding six new UHF stations, and consider whether it can require networks to affiliate with those stations. Many different avenues have been recommended to resolve New Jersey's grievance, but I am afraid they have all fallen short of the mark.

I am convinced New Jersey residents need a VHF television station and that no other proffered alternative can come close to filling the media void they now endure. In my opinion, the legislation which I am offering today would provide the most concise and most effective solution to the State's problem. It would clearly establish a fair and workable solution and pave the way for early action by the FCC.

The legislation, as introduced, would amend the Communications Act of 1934 to provide not less than one VHF commercial television broadcasting station for each State. It would require that if, and only if, a VHF station becames available in a State which already has other VHF stations, the Commission must allocate the available license to a State without a station, if it is technically feasible to do so.

Until recently, there has not been such an auspicious environment for action of this kind. There have simply been no stations available for reassignment. Recently, however, several related events made my hopes for a New Jersey commercial VHF station seem more attainable.

Last year, the FCC decided to deny the license renewal application of the licensee for three major television stations, including channel 9 in New York. While New Jersey's needs were not a factor in the decision, it nevertheless presents the Commission with an excellent opportunity to resolve New Jersey's nagging problem.

My colleague from New Jersey (Mr. BRADLEY) and I joined in petitioning the FCC to seize this opportunity to reallocate the channel to our State, and I am pleased to note that the formal rulemaking on this petition has begun. I am most hopeful that the FCC will act favorably on this petition so that the very long and arduous task of actually putting a station on the air may get underway.

Senate action, and certainly congressional approval on the measure I am proposing here today would surely ease the difficult task by spelling out the intent of Congress and clearing the path for the Commission.

I urge my colleagues to carefully consider the legislation I am introducing today, and I hope that when the Commerce Committee considers broadcast issues later this year under the able leadership of the Senator from Oregon (Mr. PACKWOOD), that it will again review the advisability of a legislative solution to New Jersey's problem.

I am also looking forward to working with the chairman of the Communications Subcommittee (Mr. GOLDWATER), and I would again like to express my appreciation for the time he and members of that subcommittee have given to our concerns in the past.

Senator GOLDWATER has long been concerned about the television void in New Jersey, and we have always appreciated his willingness to consider legislative proposals designed to ease the problem. His careful study of the issues, and his thoughtful concern as well as his words of encouragement in the past have been a source of hope for New Jerseyans awaiting a solution to this unfair situation. His willingness once again to consider a legislative solution is deeply appreciated.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of my legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section 307 of the Communications Act of 1934 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) In order to carry out the intent of subsection (b) of this section, it shall be the policy of the Commission to assign channels for very high frequency television broadcasting in a manner which ensures that not less than one such channel shall be licensed to a commercial station located in each State, if technically feasible. If the Commission at any time on or after January 1, 1980, declines to renew, or revokes, the license of any very high frequency commercial television station whose authorized channel of operation is assigned to a State with more than one such assignment, it shall, if technically feasible, assign such channel to a State in which no very high frequency television broadcasting station is operating commercially.".●

● Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my colleague from New Jersey in introducing legislation to end a historic injustice against New Jersey. We are currently one of only two States in the country which lack a commercial VHF television station. This legislation would require the Federal Communications Commission to assign a VHF station to any State without such a station when a license becomes available in a neighboring State.

Last spring Senator WILLIAMS and I petitioned the FCC for a rulemaking to reassign WOR-TV channel 9 in New York to New Jersey. I am pleased that they have issued a notice of proposed rulemaking to do that. Final action on this matter will be delayed until the conclusion of litigation challenging the revocation of the RKO-owned station's license.

Passage of this legislation will have two effects. It will underscore the seriousness with which the problem is treated by the Senate. It will also offer potential relief to the other similarly deprived State—Delaware.

Many arguments have been advanced over the years on the need for a New Jersey commercial VHF station. Chief among these is the need for residents of our State to communicate with each other. We know more about the events of New York City and Philadelphia than we do about what's happening in Trenton, Newark, Jersey City, or Camden. Our view of ourselves is that which non-New Jerseyans have of us.

It is my hope that this legislation, combined with our petition before the FCC will correct the problem.●

By Mr. MATHIAS (for himself and Mr. BAUCUS):

S. 526. A bill to amend the Congressional Budget Act to limit the growth of Federal taxation and spending and to achieve balanced budgets, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Budget and the Committee on Governmental Affairs, jointly, pursuant to the order of August 4, 1977.

FISCAL RESPONSIBILITIES ACT OF 1981

● Mr. MATHIAS. Mr. President, twice in the past 2 weeks President Reagan has spoken to us about our ailing economy, and he struck as responsive a chord in us as he has in the American people. For the past 2 years, rarely a week went by without another report of an economic indicator gone wild. One thing emerges clearly—our complex trillion dollar economy needs a major overhaul.

Public enemy No. 1 is inflation. Today's inflation defies all traditional economic theory—we have a dangerous mix of economic forces that gives us both high prices and high unemployment with sluggish growth.

While we cannot control many of the factors that contribute to inflation—including energy prices, declining innovation, lagging productivity, and the scarcity of venture and investment capital—we can control the Federal budget. So let us begin our fight against inflation with a permanently balanced Federal budget.

As our opening salvo in that fight, Senator BAUCUS and I today reintroduce our Fiscal Responsibilities Act. This bill would amend the 1974 Budget Act to require a permanently balanced budget, with revenues and outlays limited to 21 percent of the gross national product.

Over the past 2 years, we have seen an encouraging and dramatic change in thinking on and off Capitol Hill. For the first time, I think everyone agrees that we have got to put a lid on Government spending. Some would prefer to amend the Constitution to require a balanced budget. Others, like Senator BAUCUS and me, would prefer the statutory route.

Last year, when the Senate Judiciary Committee considered an amendment to the Constitution, I voted against it. I have always thought that we should amend the Constitution only as a last resort. We should first try to balance the budget by tightening up the Congressional Budget Act of 1974. As an original cosponsor of the Budget Act, I think it can be an effective tool against excessive Government spending. Rather than resort to the lengthy and uncertain constitutional amendment process, I think Congress should amend the Budget Act to require a permanently balanced budget. Our bill will do just that.

I urge all of my colleagues to study the Fiscal Responsibilities Act and to join us in support of it.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 526

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Fiscal Responsibilities Act of 1981".

TITLE I—TO DISCOURAGE TAXFLATION BY REQUIRING AN AFFIRMATIVE VOTE OF CONGRESS BEFORE TAX RECEIPTS INCREASE AS A PERCENTAGE OF GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT

SEC. 2. (a) Section 301(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (31 U.S.C. 1322) is amended by renumbering paragraphs (6) and (7) as (7) and (8) respectively, and by inserting after paragraph (5) the following new paragraph:

"(6) an estimate of the gross national product at the close of such fiscal year and of the fiscal year in progress;".

(b) Such Act is amended by inserting after section 301 the following new section:

In the case of a concurrent resolution on the budget for a fiscal year after such fiscal year has begun, the level of Federal revenues for the preceding fiscal year shall be substituted for the estimated level of Federal revenues for the fiscal year in progress, and the gross national product at the close of the preceding fiscal year shall be substituted for the estimated gross national product at the close of the fiscal year in progress.".

TITLE II—TO REQUIRE APPROVAL BY THREE-FIFTHS OF THE MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES AND THE SENATE OF ANY BUDGET WHICH PROVIDES FOR A DEFICIT

SEC. 3. (a) Section 305(a)(6) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (31 U.S.C. 1326(a)(5)) is amended by inserting before the period at the end of the first sentence the following: ", except that after all amendments to the figures set forth pursuant to paragraph (1) and paragraphs (3) through (6) of section 301(a) have been considered, a vote shall be taken on such figures, but such vote shall not prevent further amendment of such figures as provided by this paragraph".

(b) Section 301(b)(1) of such Act (31 U.S.C. 1326(b)(1)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Prior to the consideration of any amendments to the figures set forth pursuant to paragraph (2) of section 301(a), (A) action shall be concluded, except as provided by paragraph (7) of this subsection, on all amendments to the flugres set forth pursuant to paragraph (1) and paragraphs (3) through (6) of such section, and (B) a vote shall be taken on the figures as then set forth pursuant to paragraph (1) and paragraphs (3) through (6) of such section, but such vote shall not prevent further amendment of such figures as provided by paragraph (7) of this subsection".

"THREE-FIFTHS MAJORITY REQUIRED FOR DEFICIT BUDGETS

"SEC. 301B. On the question of adoption of any concurrent resolution on the budget for any fiscal year (or the conference report thereon) in either the House of Representatives or the Senate, if a deficit in the budget is set forth as appropriate, an affirmative vote of three-fifths of the Members present and voting, a quorum being present, shall be required.".

TITLE III—TO REQUIRE THE PRESIDENT TO SUBMIT A BALANCED BUDGET IN WHICH NEITHER EXPENDITURES NOR REVENUES EXCEED 21 PER CENTUM OF THE GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT

SEC. 5. The Budget and Accounting Act, 1921 (31 U.S.C. 1 et seq.), is amended by inserting after section 201 the following new section:

"SEC. 201A. (a) If the budget transmitted pursuant to section 201 for any fiscal year sets forth—

"(1) estimated expenditures of the Government during such fiscal year exceeding 21 per centum of the estimated gross national product at the close of such fiscal year; or

"(2) estimated receipts of the Government during such fiscal year exceeding 21 per centum of the estimated gross national product at the close of such fiscal year; or

"(3) estimated expenditures in excess of estimated receipts, the President shall transmit an alternate budget for that fiscal year in which estimated expenditures and estimated receipts do not exceed such percentages of the estimated gross national product, and in which estimated receipts exceed estimated expenditures.

"(b) An alternative budget transmitted pursuant to subsection (a) or (b) for any fiscal year shall be transmitted on the same day as the budget transmitted pursuant to section 201 for such fiscal year and shall be in the same form and detail as the budget so transmitted, except that, at the discretion of the President, such alternate budget may omit the detail of matters that are the same as the budget so transmitted.".

● Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I am pleased to join with Senator MATHIAS in introducing the Fiscal Responsibilities Act of 1981. This legislation proposes what I believe is the correct way to impose constructive restraint on the burgeoning Federal budget.

The measure uses two basic procedures to accomplish this objective: first, no deficit spending could be enacted unless both Houses of Congress have agreed to the deficit by three-fifths votes; second, each Member of Congress would be required to vote for or against any tax increase that exceeds the gross national product—including the tax increases brought on by inflation.

In essence, the measure will insure that Congress decisively confronts proposed increases in Federal taxation and Federal spending.

The bill's requirements are triggered early in the congressional budget process, and continue to operate throughout the steps leading to adoption of the budget.

The congressional budget process has now begun with submission of the administration's proposals. The administration is uniquely positioned to analyze and recommend spending priorities and needs, given its substantial staffing and resources.

Recognizing this capacity, the measure would require the submission of an alternative budget if the administration's proposed budget contains a deficit or if estimated expenditures or receipts exceed 21 percent of the gross national product. The alternative budget would have to be a balanced budget, and revenues and expenditures would have to be no greater than 21 percent of the estimated gross national product.

The submission of an alternative budget is critical, since it would permit Congress quickly and directly to consider and evaluate the option of adopting a balanced budget.

Later, during consideration of any concurrent budget resolution or conference report on such a resolution, a second requirement is applied. If the percentage of proposed Federal revenues compared to the estimated gross national product exceeds the percentage for the previous year, a separate vote must be taken on the question whether the increase should be accepted.

In this manner, Congress will be forced to address an issue of concern to the taxpayers and the voters of this country—the growth of Federal spending beyond growth in the economy.

Last, if Congress decides to approve a deficit budget, it can do so under this proposal. But, a three-fifths majority vote of both Houses would be required. I believe this extraordinary majority requirement properly places the presumption in favor of a balanced budget. It would still be possible to use deficit spending if economic exigencies required it. However, the burden of establishing the need for a budget in balance would be placed on its advocates—not its opponents.

In the past, some have suggested that the U.S. Constitution might be amended to require balanced budgets. I have not taken this point of view lightly. But, I have concluded that such material is not appropriate for inclusion in the Constitution. The Constitution should—and does—contain the broad principles by which we govern ourselves. Lockstep economic policies—no matter how critical—no not belong there and are properly matters to be addressed by the Congress as our economic circumstances change.

So, I am pleased to offer this statutory approach with Senator MATHIAS for the consideration of our colleagues. It requires us to stand up and be counted—to cast a clear and decisive vote on budgetary restraint and balance.

I am under no illusion that this legislation will solve all our economic problems. It will not. But, it represents an important first step.

Congress must address the public's demand for restraint on Government spending and appropriately balanced budgets. We must address it this session.●

By Mr. BAUCUS:

S. 527. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to subject pension trusts to the tax imposed by section 511 on unrelated business income for income related to the sale or rental or farmland and grazing land; to the Committee on Finance.

FAMILY FARM PRESERVATION ACT

● Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, today I am reintroducing legislation I developed last year to curb pension fund investments in agricultural land.

During a hearing of the Senate Small Business Committee which I chaired last October, representatives of the Department of Agriculture and farm organizations testified that pension fund investments are a serious threat to our family farm system. The witnesses recommended that legislation be enacted to prevent the land price inflation, soil and water erosion, and reduction of competition that would accompany pension fund control of agricultural land.

After the hearing I drafted and introduced legislation to close the tax loopholes that give pension funds purchasing agricultural land an unfair competitive advantage over family farmers. The 96th Congress did not have time to complete action on this legislation. Its enactment should be a priority now.

THREAT OF PENSION FUND INVESTMENTS

Farm leaders have called pension fund investments in farmland "unneeded, unwelcome, undesirable, and disruptive."

The American Agricultural Investment Management Co. formed last year to channel pension fund capital into agricultural land claims that it will help young people enter agriculture by providing capital to finance farmland.

But farm experts disagree. They point out that there is no shortage of capital to buy farmland. Pension fund investments could radically inflate already spiraling land prices, making it even more difficult for existing farmers to expand their operations and for young people to get started in farming.

Pension fund investments in farmland are particularly disturbing because of their huge potential impact. The funds control massive amounts of capital. If pension funds invested only 1.5 percent of their nearly $600 billion in assets annually, they could buy up all the farmland that is normally available for public sale. Theoretically pension funds have enough assets to purchase all the farms and ranches in the United States.

Pension funds are likely to be less careful stewards of soil and water resources than family farmers and will not contribute nearly as much to local towns and communities.

Most important, however, concentration of control over our farmland by a few large investors would set the stage for control over the price of food. Family farmers who compete among themselves in a free market have provided abundant supplies of food at low prices. Reducing competition, by concentrating control of farmland in the hands of a few investors, could be the most damaging effect of pension fund investments.

PENSION FUND TAX ADVANTAGES

All of us recognize the importance of pension funds. They encourage a voluntary private retirement system and provide badly needed investment capital for U.S. industry. But while these investments are crtical in this Nation's efforts to reindustrialize, they yield no benefits when made in our fixed supply of agricultural land.

Pension funds are interested in farmland because in recent years it has been a more profitable investment than stocks or bonds. Experts predict that farmland price appreciation will continue, partly because of inflation and partly because of greater pressures on our food supply.

But because of their tax status, pension funds receive an added bonus for their investments. Under present law, most income to pension trusts is nontaxable and contributions to establish the trust are tax deductible. Tax only is paid when pension fund benefits are distributed to the plan's beneficiaries. At this point the beneficiary has benefited from the deferral of taxes for all the years his or her money was in the plan, plus he is able to pay taxes at the lower rate established for persons over age 65.

Thus, pension funds can compete unfairly with family farmers who must pay taxes on their current income.

THE FAMILY FARM PRESERVATION ACT

Mr. President, the Family Farm Preservation Act I am reintroducing today modifies the present Tax Code so that pension fund income from the sale or rental of agricultural land will be taxed. Under present law if pension funds operate farms or ranches directly their income will be taxed. But income from rental or sale of agricultural lands is tax exempt for pension funds.

My bill will close this loophole to discourage pension fund purchases of agricultural land and help preserve family farms. As a member of the Senate Finance Committee I will be asking for quick hearings and enactment of the Family Farm Preservation Act.

At this time I ask unanimous consent that the text of the Family Farm Preservation Act be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NOTICES OF HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE, NUTRITION, AND FORESTRY

● Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, as chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, I wish to announce that hearings have been scheduled on the reauthorization of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977. These hearings will be comprehensive, and the Committee expects to receive testimony on a wide range of agricultural and food policy issues.

The hearings will begin on March 2 and are scheduled to conclude on March 26. All hearings will begin at 9 a.m., and will be held in room 324 Russell Senate Office Building, unless otherwise changed. Since the Senate majority leader has announced his intention that the bulk of committee business be conducted on Mondays and Wednesdays, two sessions will be held on those days with the afternoon hearing beginning at 2 p.m.

Specific subjects have been assigned to each day and are listed below:

March 2—Members of Congress, General Farm Organizations.
March 3—Wheat: Also, the Secretary of Agriculture is expected to make a brief, general statement with detailed comments coming at the conclusion of the hearings:
March 4—Feed Grains.
March 5—Cotton.
March 6—Sugar.
March 9—Soybeans and Rice.
March 10—Peanuts.
March 11—Dairy.
March 12—General.
March 13—Livestock.
March 16—Food Stamp Program.
March 17—Food Stamp Program.
March 19—Rural Development.
March 20—Conservation.
March 23—Agricultural Exports and P.L. 480 (Food for Peace Program).
March 24—Research and Extension.
March 25—Secretary of Agriculture and USDA witnesses.
March 26—Forestry.

In order to accommodate as many persons as possible who wish to testify, each witness will be limited to an oral statement of no more than 10 minutes. Comprehensive written statements will be accepted and inserted into the hearing record. Also, each witness or organization may testify only once, so each statement should encompass all concerns regarding the farm bill. Twenty-five advance copies of the statement should be delivered to the committee by noon on the day prior to the witness' appearance, and 75 additional copies should be submitted on the hearing day.

Anyone wishing to testify should contact John McCarthy, chief clerk, or Denise Alexander, hearing clerk, of the Agriculture Committee at 224–0013 or 224–0014.●

At its organizational meeting, held January 28, 1981, the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry adopted rules governing committee procedure for the 97th Congress. RULES OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE ON SMALL BUSINESS

● Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, the Select Committee on Small Business held its organizational meeting on January 27, at which we adopted the committee rules for this Congress.

The Small Business Committee rules for this Congress are essentially the same rules adopted by the committee during the last Congress, with two minor changes. A regular meeting day for the committee is now provided for, which shall be the first Wednesday of each month unless otherwise directed by the chairman. This change conforms the committee rules to section 133 of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 which requires each standing committee of the Senate to fix a regular meeting day each month for the transaction of committee business. The committee rules have also added a section which provides the procedure by which the membership of the committee can amend the committee rules if it so desires.

I would also like to take this opportunity to say that I look forward to working with all of our members, in my new role as chairman, during what appears to be a very challenging year for all of us on the Small Business Committee.

The committee's principal focus in the upcoming year will be a vigorous oversight of the Small Business Administration's programs and policies. In the last Congress, comprehensive legislation was enacted, Public Law 96–302, that extended most of SBA's programs through fiscal year 1982. As chairman of this committee, I do not believe we should create more programs for this agency to administer. Instead, it is time to review what is already on the books. It is the duty of this committee to scrutinize the agency's performance in the areas of management assistance, procurement assistance, advocacy, and loan making.

I intend to play a leadership role in the oversight process. However, the task is a large one and will require the active involvement of all the members. The work will often be tedious and demanding, but it must be done.

Critics of SBA, seeing evidence of an agency in serious trouble, have called for it to be abolished and folded into another executive department. I believe that would be a mistake. SBA, as part of the executive branch, has an important role to play in the small business community. It is the duty of this committee to redefine SBA's mission, allocate its resources accordingly and insure that SBA's constituency, the small business community, is no longer ill-served.

I look forward to working with this new administration and my colleagues on this committee in this common enterprise.

Therefore, as chairman of this committee, I intend to stress the oversight responsibility of the committee. However, I am also aware of the need for this committee to be a legislative "watchdog" for the small business community in the Senate.

The agenda of the White House Conference on Small Business remains unfinished. The capital formation/retention issue remains the top priority item for the small business community.

Recent and prospective economic difficulties have exacerbated the chronic shortage of capital that has long plagued small business in America and have jeopardized the survival of many small businesses—our country's principal creator of new private sector jobs and innovation. Internally generated earnings are inadequate to finance the escalating costs of doing business; and external financing sources have simply dried up in the present restrictive credit environment.

In short, unless specific legislative action to open the capital lifeline is taken as a matter of urgent priority in the 97th Congress, many smaller businesses will be unable to survive and many others will be forced into retrenchment at the very time our Nation desperately needs their contribution to employment and productivity growth.

The formation of an agenda of this committee will be an evolving process. As chairman, I intend to seek the counsel of my colleagues and the small business community. On February 18, the staff of the committee will meet with representatives of small business organizations to receive their views on what items should receive the attention of our committee.

Mr. President, I submit for the RECORD the rules of the committee.

The rules follow:

STANDING RULES OF THE SENATE SMALL BUSINESS COMMITTEE

(As adapted in executive session February 8, 1979)

1. GENERAL

Immediately therafter, the Clerk of the Committee shall notify the Chairman of such request. If, within three calendar days after the filing of such request, the Chairman fails to call the requested special meeting, which is to be held within seven calendar days after the filing of such request, a majority of the Committee Members may file in the Office of the Committee their written notice that a special Committee meeting will be held, specifying the date, hour and place thereof, and the Committee shall meet at that time and place. Immediately upon the filing of such notice, the Clerk of the Committee shall notify all Committee Members that such special meeting will be held and inform them of its date, hour and place. If the Chairman is not present at any regular, additional or special meeting, the ranking majority Member present shall preside.

(b)(1) Nine Members of the Committee shall constitute a quorum for reporting any legislative measure or nominations.

(c) Proxies will be permitted in voting upon the business of the Committee by Members who are unable to be present. To be valid, proxies must be signed and assign the right to vote to one of the Members who will be present. Proxies shall in no case be counted for establishing a quorum.

(d) The Chairman and Ranking Minority Member shall serve as ex officio members of all subcommittees on which they do not serve as members.

3. HEARINGS

(a)(1) The Chairman of the Committee may initiate a hearing of the Committee on his authority or upon his approval of a request by any Member of the Committee. (c) Witnesses may be subpoenaed by the Chairman with the agreement of the Ranking Minority Member or by consent of a majority of the Members of the Committee. Such consent may be given informally, without a meeting. Subpoenas shall be issued by the Chairman or by any Member of the Committee designated by him. Subcommittees shall not have the right to authorize or issue subpoenas. A subpoena for the attendance of a witness shall state briefly the purpose of the hearing and the matter or matters to which the witness is expected to testify. A subpoena for the production of memoranda, documents and records shall identify the papers required to be produced with as much particularity as is practicable.

(d) Any witness summoned to a public or closed hearing may be accompanied by counsel of his own choosing, who shall be permitted while the witness is testifying to advise him of his legal rights.

(e) No confidential testimony taken, or confidential material presented to the Committee, or any report of the proceedings of a closed hearing, or confidential testimony or material submitted voluntarily or pursuant to a subpoena, shall be made public, either in whole or in part or by way of summary, unless authorized by a majority of the Members of the Committee.

[4. AMENDMENT OF RULES

The foregoing rules may be added to, modified or amended: provided, however, that not less than a majority of the entire Membership so determine at a regular meeting with due notice, or at a meeting specifically called for that purpose.] ●

LITHUANIAN INDEPENDENCE DAY

● Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, forgotten among the reports of Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and their threatened invasion of Poland, is the plight of the Lithuanian people. On June 15, 1940, the Soviet Union invaded the Republic of Lithuania. This action was in direct violation of the Soviet-Lithuanian Non-Aggression and Non-Intervention Pacts in which the Soviet Union committed itself to respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Lithuania. The continued Soviet occupation of Lithuania is also in violation of international law and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations.

Today, I rise to lend my voice in celebration of the 63d anniversary of the Declaration of Independence of Lithuania. It is, of necessity, a somewhat muted celebration. Imagine what July 4 here would be like if we were subjected to foreign domination and annexation. still, the flame of hope for Lithuanian freedom burns brightly. Lithuanian Americans, in particular, continue their indefatigable work to restore self-determination for their brethren in Lithuania.

Mr. President, to our credit, the United States has never recognized the Soviet military occupation and annexation of Lithuania. The U.S. Government accredits diplomatic representatives of independent Lithuania. Members of the U.S. Congress have consistently indicated their sympathy with the desire of Lithuanians for release from Soviet domination. I share their concern. The continued Soviet occupation is an act of unprovoked aggression by a cruel and inhuman regime that must never be acceded to by the Lithuanian people themselves, or by any of the freedom-loving people of the world.

Therefore, on this, the 63d anniversary of their independence, I sincerely hope that the Lithuanians will take heart from the example of their courageous neighbors to the South and will remember the words of Franklin Roosevelt who once said to a delegation of Lithuanian Americans:

Lithuania did not lose her independence. Lithuanian independence was only temporarily put aside. Time will come and Lithuania will be free again.●

THE LEE METCALF AND SPANISH PEAKS WILDERNESS AREAS

● Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, 15 years ago, Senator Lee Metcalf wrote to the U.S. Forest Service's region I forester to express his support for wilderness designation of the Spanish Peaks Primitive Area. Senator Metcalf stated—

> Wilderness serves the recreational, scientific, educational, conservation, and historical needs of the people. Wilderness has become a rare and precious resource in this country. Many states have little, if any, of it left. Montana is more fortunate—and I want to assure that it will always be that way.

Throughout his renowned career of service to Montana, Senator Metcalf treasured the concept of protection of Montana's wildlands. Where possible without causing hardship to other diverse interests in our public lands, Lee Metcalf sought to preserve a portion of Montana as it was before civilization. Due in large part to his efforts, Montanans today can take pride in a living heritage of pristine lands which include the Great Bear, Absaroka-Beartooth, and Welcome Creek Wilderness areas.

The year 1981 presents a considerably different public landscape than that which existed in 1952 when Lee Metcalf was first elected to the U.S. Congress. Today, we are at the conclusion of the much debated RARE I and RARE II wilderness inventory processes. The study of three of the areas mandated for special attention under the Montana Wilderness Study Act (S. 393) is also nearing completion. Simultaneously, pressures are mounting for the release of hundreds of thousands of acres of roadless forest lands to multiple use. Given this scenario and my personal assessment that vast additions to the wilderness system are unlikely in the future, I want to take this opportunity to endorse the establishment of Lee Metcalf Wilderness Area within the Taylor-Hilgard study area and designation of the Spanish Peaks area for inclusion in the wilderness system.

Naming any wilderness for Senator Metcalf would, of course, be a fitting and appropriate tribute to this giant in America's conservation movement. More importantly, however, this particular designation will write the final chapter in one of the conservation efforts which Lee Metcalf advocated throughout his distinguished career. In fact, only Senator Metcalf's untimely death, January 12, 1978, was able to draw the curtain on his own efforts to designate a wilderness area in the Madison and Gallatin Ranges.

THE LEE METCALF WILDERNESS

I am supporting designation of the area generally outlined in the Forest Service's alternative D for the Taylor-Hilgard Wilderness Study Area together with the Monument Peak area which lies adjacent to Yellowstone National Park for inclusion in the National Wilderness Preservation System. As a part of a legislative package which would also include final designation of the Spanish Peaks Primitive Area as a wilderness, I am confident this proposal represents a balanced position which is in the public interest. Furthermore, following consultations with Senator MELCHER, Congressman WILLIAMS and Congressman MARLENEE, I believe this is legislation which will have unified delegation support.

In essence, the Lee Metcalf Wilderness Area would consist of the 157,000 acres contained in the Forest Service's alternative D, supplemented with additional acreage in the Monument Peak area. Together with the more than 70,000 acres in the proposed Spanish Peaks Wilderness Area, this represents a reasonable compromise between those who would have no wilderness and those who would have unlimited wilderness. Careful consideration must be given to specific boundaries in the drafting of this legislation. In addition, any measure will also be scrutinized by the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee on which Senator MELCHER sits and the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee on which Congressmen WILLIAMS and MARLENEE sit. Ample opportunity for necessary modifications will thus exist through amendments at the committee level as well as on the floor.

In making this proposal, I am cognizant of possible resource conflicts. Of particular concern to me is the effect which wilderness designation might have on the area's timber industry. After careful study of the data developed by the Forest Service, however, I believe that an honest appraisal of this proposal will demonstrate that relatively minimal impact on timber production of the Beaverhead and Gallatin National Forests will be experienced. Indeed, proper management of those areas selected for nonwilderness within the Taylor-Hilgard Study Area should contribute much to forest productivity in the area.

As concerns mineral production, the jury is still out on this question. Historically, the area has been of marginal value for its mineral production. As a result, I believe that recreational, wildlife, watershed and social values provide a compelling counterbalance to foregone mineral production.

THE SPANISH PEAKS

The spectacular Spanish Peaks Primitive Area is rare in two ways. First, the magnificence of this 63,000 acre section of the Madison Range is virtually unparalleled. Second, support for the permanent withdrawal of these lands from development is nearly unanimous. Indeed, following public hearings conducted in Bozeman, Mont., September 9, 1966, the Forest Service summarized public reaction as follows:

> A large majority of those commenting favored an enlarged wilderness, which involves several different boundary proposals. Since there was absolutely no opposition to establishment of a wilderness, the Forest Service considered the several recommendations for making the wilderness larger.

Public support for this area has not diminished. Even those Montanans who only enjoy the view of the Spanish Peaks with its 25 peaks over 10,000 feet high have a special feeling for the protection of this resource.

In line with this sentiment, I advocate inclusion of the Spanish Peaks within our National Wilderness Preservation System. At a minimum, the 63,000-acre area currently managed as a primitive area should be expanded by about 7,000 acres as recommended by the Forest Service. In addition, other boundary adjustments should be considered where necessary to enhance and protect the wilderness values of this region.

LAND OWNERSHIP

Most frequently mentioned as a stumbling block to wilderness legislation in the Madison Range is the checkerboard ownership pattern. Dating back to the Federal Government's land grants to the Northern Pacific Railroad, this archaic situation prevents proper management of public and private lands. The controversy which has been generated seems endless at times. I am, therefore, unalterably committed to adjustments in land ownership patterns within the Beaverhead and Gallatin Forests. A land-exchange plan between the principal private landholder, the Burlington Northern, and the Forest Service, must be part and parcel of any wilderness legislation. Of course, commonsense and the law require that any such exchange be on a value-for-value basis.

This is not a new position. On June 23, 1977, I testified before the House Subcommitee on Public Lands on the subject of the Montana Wilderness Study Act. On the issue of checkerboard land ownership, I requested the subcommittee to "urge the Forest Service to move expeditiously to effect an exchange of the private lands for other national forest land." The report on the bill responded favorably to this suggestion which had been made by others as well.

Regrettably, planning efforts in the form of an environmental impact statement on a land exchange were halted by the Secretary of Agriculture on February 22, 1979 due to external factors beyond my control. In a letter to the Secretary dated May 14, 1979, I expressed my strong opposition to this action and urged immediate resumption of the study. No action was forthcoming.

The time may now be right for resumption of planning for a land exchange in the Taylor-Hilgard Study Area. Accordingly, I am, by letter, expressing this opinion to the U.S. Forest Service and the management of Burlington Northern with the urging that their negotiations be continued in earnest.

The most likely course available to these negotiations appears to be consolidation of Burlington Northern's holdings in the Jack Creek drainage on a value for value basis, rather than acre for acre. In exchange, the Forest Service would control the former Burlington Northern checkerboard lands held south of the Jack Creek drainage. This action would thus clear the decks for legislative action on this wilderness proposal.

While Burlington Northern is the principal property owner with some 22,000 acres in the proposed Lee Metcalf Wilderness Area, other private landholders control more than 3,400 acres of land which must be dealt with. A plan of purchase or exchange must be settled upon which treats these parties equitably as well.

I stand ready to lend whatever assistance may be needed to bring these land exchange negotiations to a successful conclusion.

MONUMENT PEAK AREA

The Monument Peak area presents a difficult management decision. Difficult decisions, however, provide the opportunity for innovation solutions. In this instance, the requirements of wildlife and the grizzly bear, in particular, conflict with other resource management objectives.

The arguments which have been advanced by scientists actively involved in grizzly bear research in this area are compelling. The proximity of the Monument Peak Area to Yellowstone National Park and its native grizzly bear population convince me that this prime habitat must be protected. This, in essence, suggests the need for open space and solitude.

Wilderness designation would provide one mechanism for protecting wildlife values. However, in light of other resource demands, I am not advocating wilderness status for the entire area. Instead, I support the establishment of a wilderness area surrounding Monument Peak and adjacent to Yellowstone National Park. This designation would have very limited effect on areas with recretional, timber, and mineral potential. By the same token, critical habitat for the threatened grizzly bear would be undisturbed.

SNOWMOBILING

Public comment presented at hearings conducted by the Forest Service on the environmental impact statement for the Taylor-Hilgard Area and my own experience indicate that snowmobiling is an increasingly popular method of enjoying many areas of the Madison Range. In light of the area's sluggish wintertime economy, snowmobiling also contributes to the health of the tourism industry.

Fortunately, most snowmobiling appears to be concentrated along what has been informally labeled the "Big Sky Snowmobile Trail." Under the outline of this proposal, snowmobiling can generally continue in an uninterrupted fashion. In light of the proposed wildlife priority for the Monument Peak area, some restrictions may be necessary in this area and where otherwise necessary, for resource protection. Given the continued cooperation of snowmobile users, these restrictions should be minimal, however.

RELEASE LANGUAGE

As a result of the wilderness studies which have been and are being conducted in Montana, several million acres of forest lands have been withdrawn from the resource production base of our national forests. Of these lands, a great deal of acreage simply has little potential for inclusion in the wilderness system. This territory should be released from wilderness study.

Accordingly, I support inclusion of language in this legislation which would release specific roadless areas by recognizing the sufficiency of the wilderness inventory. This release language reflects the necessity of finalizing the study of and planning for our national forests. In addition, it responds to the importance of maintaining a healthy timber industry for Montana's economy.

The specifics of this "release language" will require further study to identify an appropriate approach. This will require consultation with the public, industry groups, conservationists, and the Forest Service.

CONCLUSION

My purpose is to set forth a plan of action for legislation to establish wilderness areas in the Madison Range of Montana. I do not intend that it should be considered a rigid position. On the contrary, I recognize that flexibility will be needed throughout the legislative process. I would, as a result, welcome any suggestions which this statement may generate.●

THE RELEASE OF IOSEF MENDELEVICH

● Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I was pleased to learn on Wednesday that Iosef Mendelevich, the last Soviet Jewish prisoner of conscience remaining in jail after being convicted during the Leningrad trials of 1970, was released from prison and allowed to emigrate to Israel by the Soviet Union.

For Iosef Mendelevich, the last 10 years have been harrowing. He has served his term doing hard labor. He has suffered serious illness and encountered squalid living conditions. Because of his religious beliefs, he has subsisted on a diet of less than 1,200 calories each day, and he often fasted on the Sabbath. In fact, because of his desire to observe strict orthodox religious practices, his original 12-year prison term was increased by 3 years. He is now celebrating his freedom with friends and relatives in Israel.

I met some of the people he is celebrating with 2 years ago when they came to Washington to tell Members of Congress and the people of the United States about Iosef's situation. In June 1979, after I met with Rivka Drori, his sister, I wrote Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin about this case. I never received an answer to that letter, or to others I signed with my colleagues about Mendelevich.

Now, the release of Iosef Mendelevich and the reported moderate increases in the number of exit visas being granted to Soviet Jews may be a most positive sign that Soviet policy may be shifting.

Perhaps these actions are gestures timed to coincide with next week's opening of the 26th Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. Perhaps they are signals to the new administration that the Soviet Union will now be willing to reopen further negotiations with the United States on arms control and other security matters of mutual interest. Perhaps they are an indication of the beginning of a new trend toward greater Soviet adherence to international agreemeents, especially the Helsinki accords of 1975, designed to revive Soviet-American diplomatic and trade relations. Perhaps the actions are only isolated interests based on internal policies and they should not be interpreted as anything more or less.

One thing is clear—they are positive steps but we will have to wait some time before we can understand whether they indicate a substantive change in Soviet policy and practices.

Meanwhile, we must remember that we, in the West, have, for some time now, been calling on the Soviet Union to make such a gesture of good faith. The new administration, therefore, finds itself faced with a serious policy question: How to respond to this "human rights" initiative in a context which does not contradict American reactions to other Soviet activities and which recognizes the importance of the release of Iosef Mendelevich and others.

Further, I believe that we must remember that two prisoners remain in jail following the Leningrad trials, and we must remember that there are still other prisoners of conscience languishing in Soviet prisons. Aleksei Murzhenko, Yuri Federov, Anatoly Shcharansky, Ida Nudel, Viktor Brailovsky, and others cannot be forgotten.●

OVERTIME PAYMENTS AT THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

● Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, on January 21, 1980, I wrote Secretary Richard Schweiker of the Department of Health and Human Services concerning a recent Inspector General audit of internal controls over the payment of overtime at HHS. The report delineated four major problem areas in the control of overtime payments. In addition, the auditors found that these problems had been identified in earlier Inspector General and General Accounting Office reports. Since the payment of overtime is a sensitive area and an area susceptible to waste and abuse, I asked Secretary Schweiker to review the audit and take corrective action.

I received Secretary Schweiker's response yesterday. I shall submit for the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks, Secretary Schweiker's response and my original letter.

I am encouraged by Secretary Schweiker's letter. He has issued a memorandum to the heads of all principal operating components, heads of the Office of the Secretary staff offices, and principal regional officials requiring immediate action to correct the deficiencies found by the audit staff, including the elimination of payments for overtime worked at home. In addition, Secretary Schweiker has asked the auditors to report back to him in 90 days on all actions taken.

Such immediate and positive action is to be congratulated. We have all heard a lot of rhetoric about eliminating waste and fraud from the Government. Secretary Schweiker's response indicates he is serious about this common goal. I look forward to working with him during the next 4 years.

The letters follow:

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, D.C., January 21, 1981.

Hon. RICHARD S. SCHWEIKER,
Secretary, Department of Health and Human Services, Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: As we discussed at your confirmation hearing, eliminating wasteful spending, mismanagement and fraud in federal programs, must be a top priority. I am committed to that goal, and look forward to working with you in that effort.

Periodically, I review audit reports issued by the Office of Inspector General of the Department of Health and Human Services. Critical analyses of HHS programs, such as those provided by that office, are absolutely essential in reducing waste.

Recently two internal audits came to my attention. Their findings are disturbing, and I am writing to urge you to take immediate corrective action.

The first audit is entitled "Review of Internal Controls Over Payment of Overtime," Audit Control No. 12–13076, issued December 1, 1980. This audit reviews the procedures used by 102 HHS offices for payment of overtime to Federal employees. The auditors found that:

Often, written overtime request and approval documents were not used or were not prepared in advance to ensure that overtime, valued at $133,965, was justified and authorized. Timesheets and Administrative Time and Leave Records were not properly documented to support overtime payments of $122,778 for 12,747 hours. Discrepancies of $8,892 in overtime payments were not identified because supervisors were not adequately reviewing timesheets and T&A cards to ensure that overtime hours were accurately reported. Timekeeper duties were also not segregated to provide effective internal controls and minimize the possibilities for fraud, abuse or unauthorized actions. These conditions persisted despite identification of internal control weaknesses and errors in time and attendance reporting in prior Office of Inspector General and GAO audit reports.

While the first four findings are serious and demand immediate attention to prevent further abuses in these sensitive areas, the last finding is most disturbing to me.

After repeated reports dating back several years by the Inspector General and the General Accounting Office detailing the same problems, the only action taken by HHS administrators appears to be the issuance of memoranda detailing plans to make plans. If we are to eliminate government waste, fraud and inefficiency, government administrators must be held responsible for those duties they are paid to perform. If those administrators are unwilling or unable to perform those duties, they should be replaced. I recommend that an immediate and specific follow up review be done to determine if the 102 offices surveyed are now in compliance with departmental overtime procedures. I would appreciate receiving from you a list of all actions taken.

The second report, Audit Control No. 12–13105, issued December 2, 1980, discusses the Department's efforts to reduce energy consumption. The auditors found that: although the targeted reduction in energy use had been achieved, further reductions can be made by (1) eliminating significant energy waste which we observed throughout HHS-owned and leased buildings in the metropolitan Washington, D.C. area and (2) providing funds for retrofit projects. We estimate that about $790,000 annually could have been saved by eliminating the energy waste—much of it at no cost to the Government—and $930,000 from the retrofit projects.

I am distressed to discover that over $1.7 million is being wasted each year because government employees fail to take advantage of energy conservation measures. I expect the federal government to be a leader in energy conservation. Yet this report documents that HHS is not even using the common-sense approaches to energy conservation being used by millions of home owners and businesses.

I urge you to take action to assure that the very basic measures of energy conservation, such as reduction of unnecessary heating, cooling and lighting, are implemented immediately. I also urge you to begin a vigorous retrofit program to take advantage of projects with short payback periods. I would appreciate receiving from you a list of all actions taken.

Thank you for your attention to this matter. I look forward to working with you during the next four years.

With best personal regards, I am

Sincerely,

MAX BAUCUS.

THE SECRETARY OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES,
Washington, D.C., February 18, 1981.

Hon. MAX BAUCUS,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR BAUCUS: I am responding to your January 21 letter which requested that I address the problems cited in two recently issued internal audit reports: "Review of the Internal Controls over the Payment of Overtime" and "More Can Be Done to Conserve Energy in HHS Occupied Buildings."

To address the findings of that report, which related to the documentation of overtime payments, I have directed the Department's managers to take immediate action to insure compliance with and strengthen these procedures. Also, I have instructed the Acting Inspector General to perform a follow-up survey to report on our compliance and progress here.

Following receipt of the follow-up survey, I will send you a report on our actions. You can expect this report by mid-June.

The second audit report you cited suggests that further actions are needed to promote energy conservation in DHHS facilities. By March 15, I will provide you a response to that report's findings and your particular concerns.

I appreciate your concern over the problems raised by these two audit reports. Let me assure you that identifying and combating waste, inefficiency and fraud in the Department is a high priority of mine.

Sincerely,

RICHARD S. SCHWEIKER,
Secretary.

THE SECRETARY OF
HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES,
Washington, D.C., February 18, 1981.

Memorandum to heads of principal operating components, heads of OS staff offices, and principal regional officials.

Subject: Strengthening controls on overtime.

I have just become aware of the attached December 1, 1980, report by our Inspector General of his 1978 review of internal controls over the payment of overtime. The report reveals numerous and significant discrepancies in our offices with respect to compliance with procedures for requesting, authorizing, and documenting overtime and for controlling overtime payments. While the report does not identify specific instances of fraud or illegal payments, it clearly identifies control failures with a high potential for fraud and abuse.

The four major problem areas identified in an initial draft of the report by the Inspector General and the needed corrective actions were brought to your attention by the Assistant Secretary for Personnel Administration in December 1979. At that time, you were asked to remind your managers and supervisors of the importance of effective implementation of overtime policies and to develop a plan for strengthening the implementation of those policies. The December 1 report states that the problems still exist.

We cannot tolerate any further delay in taking the necessary steps to eliminate completely any deficiencies in our oversight and control of overtime. To that end, I am directing the following actions be taken:

Each component head will take immediate steps to insure that managers and supervisors are properly authorizing, certifying and documenting overtime. You should evaluate a sufficient sample of your overtime usage across the country to convince you that your supervisors and managers are in full compliance and will stay in full compliance, with governing policies and procedures;

The Inspector General will conduct a follow-up audit of overtime control procedures after 90 days and report the findings directly to me;

The Assistant Secretary for Personnel Administration will review overtime policies and procedures for sufficiency with particular attention to internal payroll audit and control procedures, will increase the number of time cards audited each fiscal year, and will complete and distribute the new timekeeper manual and self-training package by March 31.

Finally, the audit report reveals some cases of overtime worked at home. This practice cannot be adequately controlled, and I want steps taken immediately to eliminate it.

The Department's poor record in exercising control of overtime payments represents, in itself, a potential area for substantial fraud and abuse. When you identify performance failures in this area, I expect you to take prompt and direct action to correct them. I want to be sure that our managers understand we expect effective management and control of overtime. We will not tolerate an attitude of indifference with respect to this situation.

SMALL BUSINESS IS KEY TO REINDUSTRIALIZATION IN NEW ENGLAND

● Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, for the benefit of my colleagues who are interested in the issue of reindustrialization and the consideration of Federal policies to spur regional economic development, I ask to have printed in the RECORD an article that appears in the current issue of the New England Economic Review entitled "New England's Economy in the 1980's."

The article very clearly indicates the importance of the contribution of two factors in enabling a mature region not only to survive potentially disruptive structural change but also to continue growing and providing improved living standards. These two critical factors are the region's human resources, who are served by such a fine network of educational institutions, and its small businesses, the key to virtually all new private sector job growth in New England.

Mr. President, what is so instructive about this article is that it suggests directions for economic policy formulation aimed at the so-called "older" regions of our country. We must be very careful that the economic program to be considered by the Congress this year includes policies that enable our Nation's smaller businesses to continue making their vital contribution to job development and economic growth and we must be mindful of the possible regional disparities in the distribution of the benefits of general business tax reduction. And, on the spending side, we must not permit the budget cutter's ax to fall too indiscriminately, jeopardizing the community and human resource development efforts so instrumental to the region's economic recovery.

As chairman of the Select Committee on Small Business I intend to do all I can to insure that small business tax reduction is an element of the first tax bill considered in the Senate this year. I hope very much to have the support of my colleagues in this effort and commend this important article to them.

The article follows:

NEW ENGLAND'S ECONOMY IN THE 1980'S

(By Lynn E. Browne and John S. Hekman*)

New England's image is rapidly changing in the public mind. It was formerly looked on as "old," or more graciously as "mature." Its basic industries had shrunk to mere vestiges of their earlier size, its cities were stagnant, and unemployment in some areas was alarmingly high. Today New England has a healthy manufacturing base which is growing at a higher rate than the national average, an unemployment rate which is lower than most other regions, and many cities which are rejuvenating themselves. A comprehensive picture of the region today would show that there is some of the old as well as some of the new in this economy. This article provides an analysis of the strengths and weaknesses of New England's economy in the 1980s. It attempts to sort out both the potential problem areas and the industries and occupations that are likely to prosper.

How should we think of New England? The often-used term "mature economy" has widely varied overtones. It has been used to mean an economy which is aged, with an antiquated capital stock that cannot compete with newer regions. This was true to a certain extent in the 1960s, but it does not apply today. Nevertheless, New England is mature in several other senses. It is especially mature in the sense that the region is no longer in a growth stage like that of the South, the West or a developing nation. The population and labor force have been growing at a slow, fairly steady pace for the past 40 years; net immigration has been modest. New England has had substantial numbers of women in its labor force far longer than other regions, so the increase in female participation in recent decades has been smaller here than elsewhere in the United States.

New England is also mature with respect to the utilization of its resources and land area. There will probably not be large moves to develop coal, oil shale, ores or hydroelectric power which would change the nature of the region's economy. And there are no large undeveloped areas which can experience rapid growth or industrialization on the order of that in the South, the West, and the Northwest.

There are many ways in which a mature economy can change, however, even if its population growth is steady and its industrial potential is well developed. Structural changes in the form of outside competition or altered demand for industrial output can greatly disrupt a mature region, creating the need for large-scale reinvestment of capital and reallocation of labor. Such changes have been particularly great for New England, with the result that the region is "developing" today in that its industrial mix is being substantially transformed by these pressures. One question for the eighties is whether the region will move smoothly along its present path or whether additional structural changes will require further shifts in direction. To answer this question it will help to look at the factors involved in the decline of the region's economy in the fifties and sixties as well as the forces behind the growth of recent years.

ECONOMIC PERFORMANCE IN THE 1970S

While the changes in a mature region may seem modest in relation to those taking place in rapidly growing areas, they can mean the difference between a prosperous, vital economy and stagnation. This was clearly evident in New England's experience in the seventies.

From the early fifties through 1970 New England's per capita income was 7–10 percent above the national average. However, the 1970 recession, which for much of the nation represented only a slowing in growth, affected the region severely. Employment fell more sharply than in the nation and remained depressed long after the national recovery had begun. The region's unemployment rate increased relative to that elsewhere and remained a percentage point above the national rate throughout the early seventies. Wage rates, responding to the pressure of unemployment, grew more slowly than in the country as a whole. New England's per capita income fell from 109 percent of the national average in 1970 to 104 percent in 1974.

The region was only just beginning to recover fully from the earlier recession when the 1973–75 downturn began. Again New England suffered a sharper employment decline than the nation and in 1975 New England's unemployment rate of 10.2 percent was the highest of the major regions. The region's per capita income continued to fall relative to the nation.

New England's fortunes reached a low in 1975. In retrospect, however, the year seems to have been a turning point. In contrast to the experience in 1970–71 the New England economy began to recover at the same time as the nation. Employment growth in the region closely tracked the national pattern both during the recovery period and in the ensuing expansion.

From the trough of the recession in early 1975 through the end of 1979 nonagricultural employment in New England grew 16 percent, while nationally 14 percent. Not only was New England's employment growth much stronger, both absolutely and relative to the rest of the country, than in the first half of the decade, but relative to the nation it was stronger than at any time since World War II. The growth in manufacturing is particularly striking when one considers that there was no increase in the number employed in manufacturing in New England over the preceding 25 years. The recent strength has been concentrated in durable goods manufacturing. However, employment in nondurables, which had been declining for many years, also increased.

This vigorous employment growth has occurred at a time when the region as a whole has experienced very modest population growth. The labor force—the number of people employed or seeking work—has grown much more rapidly because of increasing participation rates and changing age structures. However, because population growth has been limited, the labor force in New England has not grown as rapidly as in the nation. This combination of vigorous employment growth and moderate population growth has brought about a dramatic improvement in New England's unemployment rate. In 1979 the unemployment rate in the region averaged 5.4 percent, compared to a national rate of 5.8 percent. As yet there is no indication that the tighter labor market has caused an increase in wages relative to those elsewhere; however, the decline in relative per capita incomes has been arrested.

UNDERLYING TRENDS

Why was the second half of the seventies so different from the first? More importantly, are the eighties likely to be a continuation of New England's recent experience or will there be a return to earlier doldrums?

The period 1975–79 was a time of unusual prosperity for New England. However, the region's poor performance in the early seventies was also unusual. Although employment growth in New England lagged that in the nation throughout the fifties and sixties, the disparities were never as great as in the early seventies. Unfavorable trends dating back at least 30 years were reinforced by developments peculiar to the first half of the seventies.

Throughout the postwar period New England has faced continued employment losses in its older industries—particularly textiles and, more recently, leather goods. New England's prosperity was built on textiles and shoes, but the technology of large segments of these industries is such that, today, low wage costs are the primary locational consideration. New England is not a high wage area but manufacturing wages are not as low as in the South and in many parts of the world. Consequently, there has been a steady loss of jobs in these industries to the south and abroad. In 1950 there were 264,000 textile jobs in New England, in 1979 63,000.

Despite the employment losses in these industries, New England's unemployment rates and per capita income growth were comparable to those of the nation through most of the fifties and sixties. The region's population growth was less than that of the nation, so that the need for new jobs was correspondingly less. Also, total employment did increase in New England: opportunities in nonmanufacturing activities, especially in services, grew vigorously and at times the durable goods sector showed considerable strength. In particular, during the mid to late sixties there was a large expansion in aircraft and shipbuilding and in the manufacture of electrical and electronic equipment to serve the needs of the aerospace program and the Vietnam war.

Then came the early seventies, a period marked by two national recessions—the second commonly characterized as the worst since the Great Depression—and sharp cutbacks in defense expenditures. New England was severely impacted by the recessions. New England still has a high portion of its employment in manufacturing which is more vulnerable to cyclical downturns than nonmanufacturing. There were large employment losses in the older textiles and leather goods industries. From 1969 to 1971 employment in these industries fell more than 30,000; from 1973 to 1975, another 17,000. These losses have not been made up to any extent. The demand for textiles and leather goods is not as cyclical as that for many other manufacturing industries. However both industries face severe competitive pressures from other parts of the country and from abroad, and marginal operations are more vulnerable in recessionary periods than in expansions.

The defense cutbacks in the early seventies also fell particularly heavily on New England. Although New England has only 6 percent of the nation's population, it typically receives 10 percent or more of the nation's prime defense contracts. Between FY67 and FY71 defense contracts fell roughly 40 percent in real terms and then remained flat for the next five years. In 1973 and 1974 the federal government pulled its fleet out of Newport and closed down the Quonset Airbase and repair facility in Rhode Island as well as the South Boston Naval Annex. Finally, 1974 was also the year in which oil prices rose 2½ times. New England, with 80 percent of its energy coming from oil, was again more severely affected than the country as a whole. Thus, for New England the first half of the seventies brought one economic shock after another.

The unfavorable character of the early seventies obscured the fact that some firms, especially in the instrument and computer areas, were growing very rapidly. Indeed, the growth of these firms may actually have been enhanced by the difficulties elsewhere in the region as manpower, particularly with scientific and engineering skills, could be obtained very readily. The seventies saw a tremendous expansion in computer applications. It was also a time of considerable change. Not all firms were successful. However, New England was fortunate to be at the most scientific end of the computer spectrum and to be the home of some of the most innovative firms. Thus not only did New England benefit from the national expansion in computer use but the region's share of the computer market increased. Instruments also fared well, with increased emphasis on pollution control and, after 1974, on energy conservation, fostering a demand for precise measuring and control devices.

The key factor of production for such industries is professional labor—scientists, engineers, computer programmers. New England has long been a center for research and development and has had a relatively abundant supply of scientific and professional personnel. This resource has in turn fostered the growth of industries heavily reliant on research and innovation, so that competition for highly trained manpower is keen. In the early seventies, however, the defense and aerospace cutbacks released many engineers and scientists making them available to the young computer and instrument firms. Search costs were minimal.

It also seems likely, although the evidence is anecdotal, that the difficulties of the times forced some of the more established industries to seek out new and growing markets. They found these markets, frequently in the export area. In 1972 5.2 percent of the shipments of New England manufacturers went abroad; in 1976 9.2 percent. (For the United States as a whole the increase was from 4.8 percent to 7.0). It is not easy to penetrate export markets. One must learn new government regulations, new customs, new ways of doing business. Therefore, such an expansion in New England's export business suggests an aggressiveness which may not have been present before. The high cost of energy may also have served as a catalyst, forcing firms to take a hard look at their operations to see what cost cutting measures were available. Even the textile industry seems to have recognized that its future in New England is dependent upon cost saving investments and developing new markets.

The second half of the seventies also brought a turnaround in defense spending. From FY76 to FY79 the real value of prime defense contracts awarded to New England plants increased 42 percent. This increase reflected both an increase in the value of national defense contracts and an expansion in New England's share of these contracts.

Fortunately too, after the dramatic increase in 1974, real oil prices remained fairly stable until 1979. In the intervening years the price of natural gas, which is the most important industrial fuel nationally, rose sharply.

This combination of favorable developments produced the vigorous expansion of the second half of the seventies, particularly the strong growth in manufacturing. Most of the new manufacturing jobs in this period came in the instrument, electrical equipment, and computer industries. However, traditional industries held their own. The decline in textile and leather goods employment slowed dramatically. Employment in primary metals, paper, and jewelry actually increased from 1976 to 1979. The duration of the expansion was of course a benefit—not only to the older, more troubled industries but also to the high technology firms, since many of their products are capital goods and therefore sensitive to economic downturns.

LOOKING AHEAD

The future appears to hold considerable opportunity for New England's continued growth, led by the rapid expansion of high technology manufacturing and professional services, many of which, such as consulting firms in business, economics, engineering and architecture, are export oriented. It is possible to argue that the recent growth of these industries cannot be maintained in the long run. These pitfalls will be noted first, and then the basic strengths of New England's industry will be examined.

The problems experienced by the region's industry in the past have come either from the demand for particular industrial products or from the strength of outside competition. To illustrate, it was a sudden drop in the national demand for defense goods that produced a severe slump in several defense-related industries in the early seventies and created a large oversupply of engineering personnel, while it was mainly outside competition which nearly wiped out New England's textile and footwear industries since World War II.

It is one thing to say that "high tech" has a bright future, but the picture becomes less clear when one looks at any particular industry. New England produces a wide variety of industrial process controls, testing equipment and sophisticated instruments for manufacturers. One factor in the growth of these products has been the need to reduce industrial pollution and energy consumption. Once these demands have been met the market may not continue to grow as rapidly. Similarly, the demand for defense equipment may be going through a temporary upward adjustment rather than a long-run upswing.

In electronics, New England has helped to create and has profited enormously from the move from large main frame computers to smaller, less expensive minicomputers and more recently from the "microprocessor revolution." The broad applicability of these machines virtually assures a long period of growth for this industry. However, New England's share of this growth is less certain. Presently many New England firms have a technological edge over their competitors in other regions, but this could be lost either through increased investment in research in other areas or through a lessening of the importance of technological ability, through the standardization of design, for example. Other regions could turn out to be more favorable locations for computer manufacturing as the industry increases in its scale of operation. At the very least, major portions of the production process, such as peripheral equipment and subassemblies, will tend to be increasingly located outside New England, with the design and development work staying here. Thus the growth of computer-related employment in this region may be at a lower rate than that for the nation or the world.

These speculations regarding instruments, controls, and computers are intended to suggest that the presence of high technology industry does not guarantee a high rate of growth in the economy for a long period. With this reservation in mind, however, New England's technological and knowledge-based industries do appear to have good prospects, not so much because the demand for individual products will grow as because the demand for New England's particular skills will remain strong.

New England's advantage in manufacturing does not derive from any natural resources, from its location or from a low cost of production. Rather, the region has long specialized in products which have a large component of skilled labor and which often utilize relatively new technologies that have not found their way into general use. The fundamental reason for the emergence of New England's particular group of industries is the common needs that they share. In the nineteenth century the machine tool industry which was concentrated in the region created the critical metalworking machinery which in turn allowed other industries to develop high-speed, sophisticated machinery for textiles, shoes, paper, rubber, clocks, bicycles and other products. The final goods producers were more productive in New England than elsewhere because of their connection with the toolmakers and machinery builders. Thus, developments in the early years of this century laid the foundation for the high technology industries we have today. The combined skills from metalworking, machine tools, instrument making and, increasingly, industrial and scientific research from the region's universities helped give New England a head start in industries such as electric and electronic equipment, industrial controls and specialized machinery. These fields began growing rapidly after World War II and passed the traditional industries in importance in the 1960s.

The presence of a large base of skilled engineers, metalworkers and designers is both an asset and a liability. Being the incubator for new products has produced periods of rapid growth for New England, primarily from textiles in the nineteenth century and from electronics-related firms at present. But many industries in the region have experienced a product life cycle in which rapid growth resulting from technological development is followed by a more stable maturity during which standardization of production and labor-cost orientation have made other regions more attractive to producers. Even within the newer industries there has been considerable change in the particular products made in the region. Hand-held calculators were produced here for a time, but their production moved to other regions and overseas very quickly as mass production methods became available. Similarly, the manufacture of certain electronic components like circuit boards has largely moved overseas. The future strength of high technology industry in New England is related more to the pool of skills residing here than to the prospects for any individual group of products.

A technologically oriented industrial structure requires a more technically trained labor force. More people must be engaged in research and in developing commercial applications for this research—more scientists and engineers. The need does not stop, however, with scientists and engineers or with computer programmers. There is a need for managers who understand and can take maximum advantage of the skills of their specialized staffs; for technical writers to make new developments and products readily comprehensible to those who would use them; and for technicians who can use new, more complicated processes in the workplace. Thus in addition to the need for particular professions, there is a need at all levels for a broader understanding of the fundamentals of technology—an understanding of mathematics; a familiarity with computers; and, most importantly, an innovative outlook and an acceptance of change.

New England's position as a technological center owes much to the quality of its labor force. The average educational attainment of people in New England is above that of the country as a whole. The difference is due in part to a lower proportion of the population with very little education, but more so to the high percentage of New England residents who have completed at least four years of college. The region's advantage is even greater for those who have had some graduate education.

New England's educational system has a strong scientific orientation. The number of scientists and engineers who graduate from New England colleges and universities is greater than would be expected, based on the region's population. Students are attracted from all over the country and many choose to stay in New England. The availability of such professionals clearly fosters the growth of industries with large research requirements. At the same time, the existence of a cluster of high technology firms attracts scientific and technical personnel beause of the diversity of opportunities and greater employment security it offers.

The rapid growth in New England's high technology firms over the past several years has greatly expanded the demand for scientists, engineers and people trained in computer applications. The surplus of personnel created by the defense cutbacks in the late sixties and early seventies has been absorbed. With defense spending now rising in real terms, competition for scientists, engineers and technicians is keen.

As firms compete for personnel, salaries will be bid up and firms will be forced to recruit from more distant locations. Rising costs may slow the growth in employment. Moreover, if firms cannot obtain the necessary labor within New England, they may eventually look to other locations in which to expand their operations. For every professional who is hired, technicians, production workers, and office staff will also be needed. Thus a critical question for New England is whether the growth in the technical component of the region's labor force will sustain a continuation of the recent expansion in high technology employment.

Young people are responding to the strong demand for electrical engineers and computer programmers. College enrollments in these subjects are up. However, universities and colleges are limited in how rapidly they can respond to changing market demands. Financial constraints prevent them from simply adding personnel in the new fields, while the tenure system restricts the extent to which resources can be diverted from one area to another. Moreover, universities are understandably reluctant to make major changes until the nature of the new direction is clear. The demand for engineers has been volatile in the past; no school wants to expand its engineering program only to find that the emphasis has shifted again.

Changes in the age structure of the population make this problem more severe. From 1980 to 1990 the number of people aged 16–24 will fall more than 15 percent at the national level. This will mean sharp declines in what has traditionally been considered the college age population. Educational institutions, particularly four-year resident colleges, will face severe financial pressures. Funds for new programs will be scarce. Colleges and universities will be forced to reach out more and more to older adults who already have a college degree. Presumably many institutions will find that the way to attract such students is by offering training in the skills which are in so much demand today. However, the transition will be difficult; not all institutions will survive.

The decline in the number of young adults also means that it will be more difficult for society to respond to new industry requirements. A ycung labor force is flexible. The eighties will undoubtedly see an increased emphasis on retraining. However, it is still easier to teach new skills to young people who have not yet made a career commitment, than to persuade someone who has invested considerable time and money in one career path to shift to another.

The changing age structure has positive implications as well. Young people tend to have higher unemployment rates; they lack experience. Ccnsequently, the decline in the number of new entrants to the labor force will have a favorable impact on unemployment; the greater maturity of the labor force is likely to mean greater stability and therefore higher productivity for a given technology. Nevertheless, fewer new entrants mean less flexibility. And this lack of flexibility may limit the application of new technologies. This is a problem for the country as a whole but certainly for New England as the region's recent growth has been so tied to the expansion in high technology industries.

Several trends at the national level have beneficial implications for this region's industry. Reindustrialization is being used as a catchall term for attempts by business and government to revitalize America's industry. In the private sector this is taken to mean more emphasis on research and development and on investment in more sophisticated equipment and production processes. In the public sector it also means the encouragement of research and (according to some, at least) the promotion of fast-growing "new" industries rather than noncompetitive "old" ones. These trends indicate that New England has the industry mix, and more importantly the skill mix, that is right for the 1980s. Revitalization of industry will mean more robots, more microprocessor-controlled machines, more sophisticated process controls and more consulting services demanded from this region.

Manufacturing increased its share of New England's employment between 1975 and 1979, reversing a downward trend that started at least as long ago as 1947. Looking ahead, it is quite possible that manufacturing will continue to grow as rapidly as the economy as a whole. The employment categories which have had the largest increase in the past have been services and retail trade. However, these areas will probably not continue to expand so rapidly in the future; this would mean an increase in the relative importance of manufacturing. For example, the medical services area has increased its employment by over 200,000 since 1967; this has been by far the biggest factor in total services growth. But much of the growth over this period was an adjustment to the Medicare and Medicaid programs. Considering that the facilities for these programs are now largely in place and that the current drive is to contain overall medical costs, it is doubtful that medical services will continue to expand as rapidly as in the past.

In retail trade, over half the employment increase of 225,000 since 1967 was in eating and drinking establishments. Much of this was in fast food restaurants and a good deal of this employment is part time, so that it overstates the economy's expansion in comparison with areas like manufacturing. Again, there is probably a limit to further expansion here, as meals purchased outside the home are not expected to sustain recent growth rates.

Other nonmanufacturing areas of the region's economy are similarly unlikely to grow as rapidly as they have of late. Federal, state and local government employment increased rapidly from 1967 to 1973 but growth then leveled off to about one-third of that rate of increase from 1973 to 1979. The outlook for private education is for no growth or a reduction in size because of demographic trends.

New England's strong performance in the late seventies was attributable, in part, to increases in defense contracts and expanding export markets. Both defense and exports hold considerable promise for New England in the eighties. The mood of the country now favors a stronger defense and calls for fiscal restraint generally exclude defense spending. Thus it would seem that the nation can expect a significant increase in defense expenditures over the next several years. Since New England typically captures such a large share of prime contracts, this expansion should work to the region's particular advantage.

Between 1972 and 1976 New England's exports almost doubled. This growth reflects both increasing penetration of world markets by New England manufacturers and the rapid growth of some of the nation's major trading partners. Manufacturing is not, however, the only sector which has developed ties to other countries. New England management and economic consulting firms advise firms in many countries; New England engineering firms help build power plants and other large installations around the world. Yet some markets are still largely untapped. The United States still has very limited trade with much of the developing world. There are also opportunities in the industrial countries: recent tariff cuts negotiated in the Multilateral Trade Negotiations open up interesting export possibilities in Japan, particularly for high technology products. The Commerce Department has identified computers and peripheral equipment, electronic components, and communications equipment as areas where exports to Japan might increase substantially because of tariff reductions.[1]

While defense spending and exports offer opportunities to New England firms, there are pitfalls as well. As the experience of the early seventies so painfully taught, attitudes about defense spending can change. While public sentiment is strongly for more defense today, what will be the situation five or ten years from now? Because the government is such a large purchaser any cutback can have severe effects. Thus New England firms must take care not to become so dependent on defense contracts that private sector markets are not developed.

In the export area the problem is also one of changing attitudes and the federal response to these attitudes. There appears to be a growing protectionist sentiment in the country brought on by the difficulties of U.S. auto and steel companies in competing with imports. The auto companies are now actively lobbying for quotas on auto imports and the federal government has just agreed to increase the trigger price at which imports of steel are restricted. One must sympathize with the difficulties of these industries.

However, restrictions on imports will most certainly lead to retaliatory measures which will then limit the growth in U.S. exports. The issue is not simply the United States vs. Japan or the United States vs. West Germany. If American firms are to penetrate foreign markets, particularly those of the developing nations, the United States must be prepared to let the products of these countries into our own markets. Export markets hold considerable potential for New England firms; but these markets will not be developed if other countries are not allowed to compete for a share of the U.S. market. And it would be foolish to deny that such competition may create difficulties for some industries, including some in New England.

Federal efforts to promote "reindustrialization" through increased expenditures on research and development and greater incentives for capital formation will also affect New England's future. Because of its concentration of prestigious universities and because of the technological orientation of its industry, New England should benefit from more emphasis on research. The effects of accelerated depreciation and other incentives to investment are less clear. On the one hand, New England industries—both the new high technology and the more traditional ones—tend to be labor intensive. Therefore, the region can probably not expect to get a share of federal investment incentives corresponding to its share of economic activity. Even if the percentage increase in investment in New England is comparable to that elsewhere, the dollar increase will be relatively small because of the low capital intensity of its industry. However, if New England does not benefit directly, it will gain indirectly from the expansion in the demand for capital goods. New England's manufacturing industries today are oriented to the production of producer durables; many high technology products are investment goods. The region is an important supplier of architectural and engineering services. Consequently, national efforts to stimulate capital investment will expand the demand for New England products.

What of energy? One cannot talk about the future without some discussion of the energy situation. New England still derives roughly 80 percent of its energy from oil; nationally oil accounts for just under 50 percent of energy use. And the Iran-Iraq war has made clear once again that world oil supplies are not secure. A number of efforts and initiatives are underway that could reduce New England's dependence on oil: the conversion of some oil-fired power plants to coal; the possibility of significant purchases of hydroelectric power and natural gas from Canada; numerous small scale efforts to tap renewable energy sources in the region—wood, low-head hydro, solid waste, and solar power. Eventually aggressive pursuit of such options may leave New England in a relatively favorable energy situation. However, for the eighties New England remains vulnerable to energy supply disruptions.

New England will also continue to face an energy cost disadvantage. The average cost of energy in New England in 1979 was about 24 percent above the country as a whole.[2] This disparity is due, in large measure, to New England's dependence on oil. Elsewhere natural gas is the primary fuel for industrial and commercial purposes and, for much of the country, natural gas prices have been held artificially low by federal regulation. These controls on gas prices are being relaxed and in 1985 controls on new natural gas will be completely eliminated. These increases plus the replacement of old, low cost supplies with newly discovered gas subject to today's higher ceilings are causing sharp increases in the cost of gas to the end-user. It will be some time, however, before oil and gas costs are comparable. New gas prices will not be fully deregulated until 1985. Other categories of gas will be deregulated still later, while gas from wells already committed to interstate markets will not be fully deregulated. And meantime, of course, the price of oil is not standing still.

Thus for most of the eighties and perhaps beyond, New England will continue to pay more for its energy. The region has, however, adapted to high energy costs. The most important manufacturing industries in New England—nonelectrical machinery, electrical equipment and instruments—all use relatively little energy per dollar of value added. With the exception of paper, those industries which use energy intensively—primary metals, chemicals, glassmaking—are substantially less important in New England than nationally. New England's industrial structure is, therefore, less sensitive to energy costs than that in other regions; so the effects of future energy cost increases may prove less disruptive here than elsewhere.

Finally, even adversity offers opportunities. Emphasis on energy saving has increased the demand for measuring and controlling instruments and has spawned numerous manufacturing and consulting enterprises dedicated to developing alternative energy resources.

CONCLUSION

The picture that emerges for New England in the 1980s is one with good growth prospects for the important durable goods industries and the professional services related to them. The lack of natural resources and poor geographical location which have worked against the region in the past are becoming less important liabilities as New England's economic activity turns more and more to durable goods with very high value-to-weight ratios and to export-oriented services in which the region has a sharp comparative advantage.

Manufacturing employment may increase in size relative to government, trade, and services, since analysts see favorable growth prospects for high technology goods, while the other major employment areas may experience a leveling off of their growth. It is important to note in this regard that manufacturing is becoming increasingly specialized in the production of capital goods. Consumer goods such as apparel, textiles, and shoes will probably see little or no growth in the eighties, nor will durable consumer goods such as autos or appliances have many opportunities for employment. Most of New England's industrial output is now in the capital goods category—computers, instruments, control devices, aircraft parts and defense equipment. This specialization may make the region highly sensitive to cyclical swings in investment spending; when the country catches a cold, New England will have pneumonia, as the saying goes. At present many of our capital goods are cost-saving products that are in steady demand, but as this market is saturated, demand will be dependent on replacement decisions by users, and this will put us squarely in the investment cycle. Fortunately there is at present such a diversity of uses for these products that this problem may never materialize.

Defense employment is another area which experiences erratic cycles. New England is almost certain to see an expansion of defense jobs in the early eighties. The negative side of this is that substantial unemployment will result if a defense cutback subsequently occurs; the positive side is that new product spin-offs for the private sector may be created as has been the case before. These spin-offs could soften the blow from a loss of defense jobs.

The growth of the newer industries and services in New England in the 1970s has underscored the importance of small business in creating employment. Many of the products produced in the region today did not exist 20 years ago, and of these a large proportion were developed by small firms, whether as a result of university research, government projects, or subcontracts from larger firms. The "reindustrialization" of New England has come about not through reinvestment by existing industries but by their replacement with new ones. It is well to keep this in mind when formulating economic development strategies. So often such strategies tend to pay the most attention to large, established businesses.

The other ingredient in New England's growth formula has been its unique labor force. To a large extent the region's industry mix is a result of its labor mix and not the other way around. Thus development policies should be aware of the fact that New England attracts people, not industry. The availability of skilled and professional workers is currently one of the factors constraining growth in some industries. While this is widely understood, there is disagreement over what can and should be done to make the region competitive in this national labor market. There will undoubtedly be much discussion in the next few years regarding the proper balance of social and cost considerations in developing a favorable economic climate.

One way to attract workers is to provide facilities available for their education. New England is being called on to make difficult decisions at the public and private levels to determine what kinds of professional and technical training programs should be established or expanded. Today we have a surplus of teachers and a shortage of computer programmers. The challenge will be to remove this imbalance without reversing it.

Finally, one must look outside the region to see what national policies will affect the region. New England's industry is highly dependent on exports to sustain its growth. In the nineteenth century our textiles competed with imported goods in the domestic market, causing New England to favor tariff protection, while the South wanted free trade policies to help their exports of cotton. Today the situation is reversed, as New England produces export goods and the South struggles to compete with imported textiles. New England's interest clearly lies with free trade in the eighties.●

NOMINATION OF MURRAY WEIDENBAUM AS CHAIRMAN, COUNCIL OF ECONOMIC ADVISORS

● Mr. GARN. Mr. President, as chairman of the Banking Committee, it is a pleasure for me to bring before the Senate the nomination of Murray Weidenbaum to be Chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisors. Dr. Weidenbaum is eminently qualified for this position, having both distinguished academic and employment careers.

Over the past several years, he has served as an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, as Mallinckrodt Distinguished University Professor and director of the Center for the Study of American Business, both at Washington University in St. Louis, and as adjunct scholar of the American Enterprise Institute here in Washington. In all of these endeavors, Dr. Weidenbaum has excelled as an outstanding theoretician whose views are firmly based in reality.

The Banking Committee has completed a thorough review of Dr. Weidenbaum's background and suitability to be Chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors. On February 5, 1981, the committee held a hearing on the nomination and, having subsequently concluded their consideration of this matter, the members of the committee unanimously recommend that Dr. Weidenbaum be confirmed by the full Senate.

During the Banking Committee's hearing on the nomination, Dr. Weidenbaum stressed the need for a balanced approach to our economic problems, and indicated his intention to deal simultaneously with the closely related issues of high inflation and high unemployment. He expressed his support for tax cuts accompanied by a "vigorous program of expenditure restraint." Dr. Weidenbaum also emphasized that we normally deal with economic problems on a short-term basis, without ever achieving long-term solutions. I wholeheartedly agree that we have too often applied band-aids to our economic problems and that we must now insure that our fiscal and economic policies promote long-term growth and stability.

In addition to being an outstanding economist, Dr. Weidenbaum is an expert on the regulatory burdens that the Federal Government has placed on our economy. He has not advocated the immediate elimination of all regulations, but rather an analysis of the cost benefits of the multitude of regulations that have been imposed in the past couple of decades. This approach is critical to the future effectiveness of our Government and is one which we as legislators should keep in mind more often.

Being one who has quoted Dr. Weidenbaum many times, I urge my colleagues to promptly confirm his nomination.●

LITHUANIAN INDEPENDENCE DAY

● Mr. ZORINSKY. Mr. President, yesterday was a momentous occasion for the Lithuanian American community, marking both the 63d anniversary of Lithuanian Independence Day and the 730th anniversary of the founding of the Lithuanian state. It is unfortunate that such an auspicious occasion must be tarnished by the fact that 1981 also signifies the 41st year of Soviet occupation of the Baltic States, Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania.

In the wake of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the plight of the Lithuanians comes ever more clearly into focus. Soviet aggression in the free world is not only a threat, it is now a reality to the Afghans, and it has been a reality to the Lithuanians for four decades. The United States has an obligation to oppressed peoples everywhere to voice our opposition to the Soviet Union's blatant violation of human rights. On this important anniversary, it is particularly appropriate for Americans to contemplate and express our disdain for Soviet abuses in Lithuania.

Let us not forget, Mr. President, that this occasion is not only one of remembrance of independence and a celebration of a people striving to overcome their plight of oppression. Let not the spirit of Lithuanian independence be smothered by the cloud of Soviet oppression which hovers over that nation. Let us revel in the celebration, and, if only for a moment, divert our attention from the tragedy that has befallen the Baltic States.●

FEDERAL CIVILIAN HIRING FREEZE

● Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I recently toured the Philadelphia Navy Shipyard and was surprised to learn that the shipyard had been required to discharge, as a consequence to the job freeze, several people who had been employed a few days for work on the $500 million service life extension rehabilitation of the U.S.S. Saratoga. Furthermore, the Philadelphia Navy Yard is scheduled to employ additionally, 250 engineers, architects, and so forth, for this work by mid-March 1981. As there are other federally owned Navy shipyards in other States, it occurred to me that similar manpower problems may have been encountered in these yards as well. I, therefore, wish to record the following telegram which was sent on February 9 to Mr. David Stockman, Director of the U.S. Office of Management and Budget, Executive Office of the President. The telegram follows:

Last Tuesday when you met with some of us on the Senate Appropriations Committee, you asked us to advise you on any special problems relating to budget costs.

Today, I toured the Philadelphia Navy Shipyard, a unit of the United States Navy. One ship, the U.S.S. Saratoga, is now undergoing a $500 million Service Life Extension rehabilitation. Two other ships, the U.S.S. Inchon and the U.S.S. LaSalle are also being refitted. As a matter of National Defense, it is important that these rebuilding and rehabilitation projects be completed competently, completely, and on time.

However, at the present time 65 workers, already recruited and ready to go to work at the Navy Yard have been denied employment, under the provisions of OMB Bulletin 81–6. In most of these cases, appeals have been filed per your January 29, 1981 memorandum "Federal Civilian Hiring Freeze."

It is my thought that the "freeze" was not intended to apply to such jobs in the light of the President's stated intentions on National Defense.

If the work on the three ships is to be completed on a timely basis, the Navy Yard is scheduled to employ 250 additional engineers, naval architects, etc. by mid-March, 1981. Failure to employ these professional and technical people on a timely basis will inevitably stretch out the dry dock time for one or all three of these ships.

Under these circumstances and in the interest of National Defense, it is my request that this work at the Philadelphia Navy Yard be exempted from the freeze, or at least that the processing of all Philadelphia Navy Yard applications per the January 29 memorandum be expedited.

I need not remind Members of this body of the extreme importance which we all attach to national defense. The decision by DOD was made some time ago that the service life extension program would be, in many cases, the most economical way to proceed with fleet modernization. I am sure that the national administration will correct this oversight as soon as the issue has been examined.●

S. 284—WASTE AND INEFFICIENCY IN GOVERNMENT LITIGATION

● Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, eliminating wasteful duplication and mismanagement from Federal programs is one of my top priorities. As a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, I share responsibility for overseeing the activities of the Department of Justice. For 2 years I have studied the Department's handling of litigation and during the last Congress I chaired hearings on this subject.

I have become convinced that congressional action is necessary to bolster our oversight of how the Federal Government manages its litigation. Wasteful duplication of effort and mismanagement of litigation on the part of lawyers both in the Department of Justice and in the client agencies contributes to an incessant drain on taxpayers' dollars.

One problem is that the authority to conduct litigation is consistently being diffused and delegated out to client agencies thereby undermining the Department's control of the management of litigation and causing unnecessary duplication. Another problem is that once litigation is initiated it is not adequately monitored.

I introduced legislation earlier this month that would improve the management of litigation in the Federal Government. I wish to expand on four major aspects of my bill, S. 284, the Department of Justice Litigation Improvement Act.

TITLE I: LITIGATION POLICY

Mr. President, Congress recognized the need for the Government to speak with a single voice in legal matters when it established the Department of Justice in 1870. However, this single voice concept has never existed in practice. Exceptions have always been provided by statute, and there are presently approximately 27 agencies with some degree of independent litigation authority.

In the past, Congress has passed several pieces of legislation giving litigation authority to agencies other than the Department of Justice. Congress examined each of these proposals within the context of the individual agency but did not examine the larger question of Government litigation.

Often, the Judiciary Committee will not be aware of the delegation of litigation authority contained in a bill until the legislation reaches the floor of the Senate or House. Consequently, the litigation authority of the Department of Justice is often decentralized without the knowledge of the House and Senate Judiciary Committees.

Another way that litigation authority is decentralized is through the widespread use of special agreements between the Department of Justice and individual agencies. Often these memorandums of understanding determine which agency will litigate and under what circumstances. But in many instances, these memorandums of understanding tend to be ambiguous or unnecessarily complex. Consequently, a substantial amount of agency time and legal resources may be spent solely on drafting and interpreting such memorandums.

For the most part, Congress has had no voice in reviewing these memorandums. In some cases, specific committees have had in interest in them, but the Senate and House Judiciary Committees have not been able to review them and insure that these memorandums are in the best interests of Government litigation policy as a whole.

Mr. President, the bill I introduced last week will address these problems.

S. 284 would require the Attorney General to submit to Congress a copy of any agreement with any other agency that affects the basic litigation authority of the Department. The bill would require that the Attorney General submit such agreements no later than 60 days prior to their effective date. This provision is not intended to provide for a congressional veto of memorandums of understanding. Rather, this provision will substantially increase congressional awareness of agreements that affect Government litigation authority. In this way, ample opportunity will be provided for congressional consultation.

Moreover, S. 284 would require the Attorney General to submit to the Senate and House Judiciary Committees written statements on legislation which affects the litigation authority of the Department of Justice. In this way, the Judiciary Committees would be fully informed and aware of the impact of proposed legislation on the Department's authority. This would be a first step in creating a congressional structure that would more effectively review Government litigation policy.

An additional step is needed, however, which is the requirement that every piece of legislation affecting the Department's litigation authority be referred to the Senate and House Judiciary Committees prior to floor consideration by either the full House or the Senate. A few years ago, Senators Eastland, THURMOND and KENNEDY urged the majority leader to adopt such a policy. I believe their request was a sound one; and I intend to work with Senators THURMOND and BIDEN and the Senate leadership to revive the discussions of this proposal.

Finally, title I of my bill provides the Attorney General with the authority to resolve all legal disputes between Federal agencies with respect to litigation authority. Current law implicitly grants the Attorney General the authority. In my view, it is important to make this authority explicit. As chief legal officer of the United States, the Attorney General is best able to resolve disagreements or uncertainties concerning litigation authority. This provision will result in more efficient use of tax dollars and Federal legal resources by eliminating costly court battles between agencies who are trying to decide which agency has jurisdiction to litigate.

I want to make clear that my bill is not offered as a panacea to Government litigation problems. Rather, this legislation represents a constructive, flexible approach to deal with an increasingly uncoordinated Government litigation policy.

TITLE II: CASE MANAGEMENT REPORT

Mr. President, the problem with management of litigation is not solved once the litigation authority question is resolved. There are still ongoing problems of coordinating the litigation. Title II of S. 284 addresses the management of Government litigation.

Currently, the Department of Justice is not capable of adequately tracking the status of litigation as it meanders through the bureaucratic maze. During congressional oversight hearings that I chaired last year I was somewhat dismayed by the Department's inability to give me information on case management. I concluded that the Department of Justice, the world's largest law firm, does not have a comprehensive case management information system.

The lack of data on Federal litigation and the justice system compounds the difficulty in assessing the existence and scope of the various issues facing the Department and the public it serves. There are no uniform crime reports on Federal crimes, no Federal offender-based transaction statistics, and no Federal program-oriented civil litigation case statistics. The net effect is an unremitting absence of the types of information necessary for planning, implementing and evaluating justice programs.

In a first effort to close the information gap, the Judiciary Committee in the fiscal year 1980 Authorization Act directed the Attorney General to prepare a plan to activate case management information and tracking systems in the 95 U.S. attorney offices and the legal divisions. The Department submitted the plan as required. Unfortunately, we were uncertain as to the sufficiency of the Department's plan. The Department of Justice still needs a case management information system that will yield the statistics necessary for planning programs and managing resources efficiently.

Title II of my bill would address this problem. S. 284 would require the Attorney General to prepare a systems development plan for the activation and coordination of a comprehensive tracking system for each judicial district of the United States. The plan would have as its goal the development of a system that would stress the retrievability of quality data having maximum utility to users. The plan would also assess the costs of implementing such a system and compare those costs to the benefits derived from correcting the confusion currently surrounding the status of Justice Department cases.

It is also hoped that as a byproduct of this system, data which the Congress needs to legislate and effect oversight will also be produced. Specifically, I anticipate that the management information system will ultimately be able to produce aggregated data on:

First, matters and cases, by case-type and program-type, from intake or commencement of the investigation to the final disposition, including judgments and collections of fines; second, decisions whether to prosecute or litigate, whether to settle a case, and whether to plea bargain, the stage of the proceeding at which such decision is made and the reasons for such decision, again, by case-type and program-type; third, the number of matters and cases handled by each division or office primarily responsible for the matter or case, and by each supporting division or office responsible for assisting in such matter or case, again, by case-type and program-type; fourth, the number of cases and matters by case-type and program-type referred to the Department of Justice for prosecution or litigation by any local, State or Federal Government organization, including any organization within the Department of Justice; and fifth, the number of cases and matters by case-type and program-type referred by the Department of Justice for prosecution or litigation to any local, State, or Federal Governmental organization.

TITLE III: STATUS OF CASES REFERRED TO THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Mr. President, until the planned system under title II is completed the Attorney General should be required to advise Congress of the status of cases referred to the Department by client agencies. Title III of S. 284 would require the Attorney General to include this information in his authorization request to the House and Senate Committees on the Judiciary.

My past oversight hearings on this subject have convinced me that it is essential that the Department monitor referrals from client agencies so that cases are not forgotten and slip through the bureaucratic cracks. Requiring the Department of Justice to report referrals to Congress will impress upon them the need to keep track of their cases.

Such tracking capability is not only essential for Congress as it performs its oversight responsibility, but will be important to each agency so that if judicial action is not warranted, the case can be returned promptly to the agency for possible administrative action. All too often nothing is done with a case because too much time has lapsed between opening the investigation and final determination of action.

My legislation would require the Department to determine the status of all civil and criminal cases and to give the House and Senate Judiciary Committees access to this information.

Enactment of this measure will not mean any interference whatsoever in actual handling of cases but it will mean that Congress will have a new capability for monitoring enforcement of the laws it has passed.

TITLE IV: DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE REPORT TO CONGRESS ON CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTIONS

Mr. President, the final section of my bill would require the Attorney General to advise Congress when the Department of Justice intends to refrain from defending the constitutionality of a law passed by Congress. This title is a companion bill to Congressman LEVITAS' bill, H.R. 1134, introduced last month in the House.

There is an alarming rise in the frequency of incidents where the Department of Justice refuses to defend a provision of a law passed by Congress. It is of historic interest that in the first 100 years of the Department's history only three times have they failed to defend a provision of a Federal statute because they thought it was unconstitutional. Since 1970, however, the Department has refrained from defending the constitutionality of a Federal statute seven times. In three other incidences, the Department of Justice actually initiated litigation contesting the constitutionality of a statute.

During oversight hearings I chaired last year, I questioned officials at the Department of Justice about their obligation to defend Federal statutes. I was somewhat concerned by their response. It seems there is a feeling in the Department that discretion exists with the Attorney General to refrain from defending statutes that he views as unconstitutional. This is despite the fact that the laws have been passed by both Houses of Congress and signed by the President. Attorney General Civiletti admitted in a letter to me on this issue dated July 30, 1980, that there was a heavy presumption against failing to defend the constitutionality of a statute. Nevertheless, he said, rare situations may occur where the Department must exercise its discretion and refrain from defending a law.

Mr. President, there may be merit to the Department's position, but unfortunately, the Department seems to be taking the position more and more often. The final provision of my bill merely requires the Attorney General to advise Congress when the Department intends to refrain from defending the constitutionality of a Federal law. This will enable us to at least be forewarned of the Department's intentions so that we can take appropriate action.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, all four titles of my bill will help improve the efficiency and effectiveness of programs at the Department of Justice. A more centralized authority to litigate will decrease wasteful duplication. An improved case management information system will enhance the Department's ability to conduct better program evaluations. Report to Congress on the status of cases referred by agencies to the Department of Justice will increase our ability to legislate more rational policies. Management at the Department of Justice will be improved and the Congress will be better informed.

Mr. President, I intend to offer this bill as an amendment to the Justice Department's authorization bill when it is considered by the Judiciary Committee.

In addition, I hope my colleagues in the Senate will consider and pass title IV of this bill separately. I introduced it last month as S. 285 and an expanded RECORD statement will appear in the RECORD in the near future.

Mr. President, I ask to have S. 284 printed in the RECORD.

The bill follows:

S. 284

"522A. Report and declaration of the Attorney General with respect to the constitutionality of laws of the United States.".●

NEED FOR EXPORT TRADING COMPANY LEGISLATION

● Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, the position of the United States in the international marketplace has continued to decline throughout the past decade and threatens to grow worse if aggressive new policies are not instituted promptly. One needed step is the enactment of export trading company legislation (S. 144) which will help promote a significant increase in U.S. exports. According to a study done by the National Association of Manufacturers last year, imports of manufactured goods increased nearly four times as fast as exports since 1970, with that margin growing in the last half of the decade.

The study reported that our industrial competitiveness is declining, measured both by increased import penetration here and loss of export markets elsewhere. The U.S. share of world markets declined from 21.3 percent to 17.4 percent over the past 10 years, the largest relative decline among major industrial exporters. We have lost market share in 8 of the 9 EC countries and 12 of the 13 OPEC countries. While our manufactured goods trade has stayed in rough balance, Japan and West Germany in 1979 had surpluses of $70 billion and $60 billion respectively.

Mr. President, these statistics are indeed alarming and make a clear and compelling case for the need to mobilize the Nation's exporting resources. On February 17 and 18, the Subcommittee on International Finance and Monetary Policy held hearings on S. 144, which now has 59 cosponsors. Several witnesses expanded on the need for this legislation to improve our export picture. Notable among them was former Senator Adlai Stevenson, the real "father" of the bill.

Mr. President, I ask that Senator Stevenson's testimony be printed in the RECORD.

TESTIMONY ON EXPORT TRADING COMPANIES

(By Adlai E. Stevenson)

I thank you for the opportunity to appear before this distinguished Subcommittee and continue an effort we began together some years ago, to examine U.S. export performance and develop the elements of a national export strategy.

The nation's oil import bill will exceed $85 billion this year and leave us with a merchandise trade deficit of almost $20 billion. Last month, the Commerce Department recorded the nation's 57th consecutive monthly trade deficit. The deficits mount, with no end in sight, adding to inflation and unemployment, weakening the dollar and, ultimately, our influence in the world. The deficits persist, yet we leave the nation's vast export potential largely untapped.

U.S. exports have grown over the past decade from 4.3 percent of our national product to 8 percent today. But this expansion has not kept pace with the growth of overseas markets. Since 1970, the U.S. share of total world exports has declined from 15 percent to 12 percent, while our competitors have maintained or increased their shares. For exports of manufactures, the decline in U.S. share has been even more precipitous—from 21.3 percent in 1970 to 17.4 percent in 1979.

These figures are not abstractions; they represent billions of dollars of export business which have fallen to our trading partners in Europe and Japan. And with each billion dollars of lost exports, we lose an estimated 40,000–50,000 domestic jobs. Other countries, such as West Germany, go all out to produce and sell in world markets, and export upward of 22 percent of their GNP. This country, despite countless studies documenting untapped export potential, still lacks a coherent national export policy and the institutions and channels which could mobilize it.

Foreign trade remains the province of the largest U.S. corporations, with 1 percent of U.S. firms responsible for 80 percent of all exports. Export expansion on the scale required to offset U.S. trade deficits will depend on the development of new channels to link tens of thousands of small and medium sized American firms with global markets. Today, fewer than one in ten U.S. manufacturers sell any part of their production overseas (20,000 out of 250,000 U.S. firms). Yet studies by the Department of Commerce and testimony before this Subcommittee have indicated that more than 20,000 other U.S. producers offer goods and services which could be highly competitive abroad. The small size and inexperience of these firms, however, leave them unaware of overseas opportunities and ill-equipped to absorb the front end costs and risks involved in developing foreign markets.

Export trading companies could link these exporters with global markets. They could represent small as well as large U.S. companies world wide, spotting market opportunities, meeting price competition, absorbing exchange rate fluctuations, handling the details of export transactions—and offering a full range of services and products to foreign purchasers and domestic producers.

Regional and international banks, with their financing capabilities, international correspondent networks, and expertise about foreign economic conditions, are especially well positioned to develop trading company subsidiaries handling export goods and services. Banks could buy into existing firms or form alliances with manufacturers or other banks to create new ones.

Large manufacturers and merchandisers already involved in sizeable export trade could, via export trading companies, handle the goods of myriad other firms. A corporation's international contacts and expertise offer economies of scale in the overseas marketing of products from small and medium sized firms which could not otherwise be exported profitably. Export trading companies would also give corporations the flexibility to deal with multi-country, multi-currency transactions, or massive "turnkey" projects involving multiple suppliers. Perhaps most importantly, it would enable firms to handle the complex trade deals increasingly being carried out on a barter basis with socialist and Third World countries. According to the Commerce Department, as much as 40% of East-West trade this year will involve some sort of barter arrangement. Companies such as GE, GM and Rockwell International already have established "counter-trade subsidiaries." With passage of S. 144, these could become full-line trading companies and in a better position to carry out counter-trade transactions.

Despite the success of trading companies as "export middlemen" in Europe, Japan, and other countries, such companies have been slow to develop in the United States, due to deterrents presented by banking regulations, antitrust uncertainties, and the traditional insularity of the U.S. market. Last year, legislation was developed by this Subcommittee to remove some of these deterrents. The Export Trading Company Act of 1980 modified provisions of existing law which discourage the establishment or expansion of export trading companies, and offered modest incentives to their development. It passed the Senate last session by a vote of 77–0. Unfortunately, the House was unable to act on the bill before the session ended. I am pleased the export trading company legislation has been reintroduced and I am hopeful that through your efforts, Mr. Chairman and those of other Senators concerned about U.S. export performance, the clock will not run out on this legislation again.

Although a variety of existing enterprises provide export services to U.S. producers, most are small, thinly-capitalized firms which fulfill only a few of the many functions required for export trade. Concern has been raised that these firms would be at a competitive disadvantage against the full-line export trading companies contemplated by this legislation. This concern is misplaced, for several reasons.

First, the whole premise of this legislation is that U.S. export potential has barely been tapped. The export business is not a static pie. Major opportunities exist for existing export management firms as well as new export trading companies, opportunities which will be enhanced by passage of this legislation and as more firms gain export experience.

This has been the case in Japan, where despite the existence of nine dominant export trading companies, over 6,000 smaller export trading companies continue to compete profitably for export business.

Second, nothing in this legislation precludes existing export management firms from seeking bank or corporate equity and expanding into full-line trading companies. Indeed, many firms have testified before this Subcommittee of their eagerness to do so. This legislation basically affords existing firms the flexibility to structure their operations as comprehensively as they find profitable.

Third, I agree that the formation of export trading companies will increase competition in the export trade business. But I find that outcome wholly desirable. Competitive export management firms will remain competitive, whether or not they remain specialized. If they choose to expand, they will be prime candidates for (bank or corporate) equity investors. Less competitive export firms will be forced to improve efficiency or go out of business. The result—increased productivity in the export service sector and expanded U.S. exports.

The success of large-scale general purpose trading companies in Europe and Japan has contributed significantly to the export earning, of all our major trade competitors. Foreign-owned trading companies operating in the U.S., in a manner precluded to U.S. export trade associations, have been equally successful. Last year, a Japanese-owned trading company was responsible for 1 percent of total U.S. exports—serving 34 corporations in the Fortune 500. The sixth largest U.S. exporter is another Japanese trading company—Mitsui. While these companies successfully expand U.S. exports, the profits go to Japan. Why should U.S. firms be precluded from competing for this business, offering a full range of services and keeping the profits here?

The growth of U.S. export trading companies has been hindered by government regulation, the structure of American enterprise, and the traditional insularity of the U.S. market. U.S. banking laws exclude banks from offering export trading services or investing in export trading companies. Antitrust uncertainties deter U.S. companies from pooling resources with other producers in order to expand exports. American businessmen, especially small businessmen, are unfamiliar with foreign customs and languages, unaware of foreign market opportunities, and ill-equipped to deal with the bureaucratic requirements of licensing, insurance, financing and shipping arrangements. Large multinational companies have developed their own export markets, but do little to assist other potential exporters.

Without S. 144 to reduce impediments and encourage U.S. trading companies, small and inexperienced firms will continue to be locked out of foreign markets, except as suppliers to large firms which will themselves remain handicapped.

THE NECESSITY FOR BANK PARTICIPATION

If export trading companies are to develop on a scale sufficient to affect overall U.S. export levels, it is imperative that banks and major corporations be involved in their formation. Commercial banks especially, with their financial resources, international correspondent networks and trade financing experience are well positioned to assist in the establishment of trading companies. Even more importantly, commercial bank networks extend throughout the U.S., touching virtually all small and medium sized firms. U.S. banking oganizations have the systems, skills and experience to develop trading companies offering one-stop export service to U.S. firms, but need broader authority to do so. S. 144, within carefully defined limits, would provide that authority, by enabling banks, banking holding companies and Edge corporations to make limited investments in export trading companies, subject to prior approval and conditions imposed by appropriate Federal bank regulatory agencies. These limitations include the specifications that no bank may invest more than 5 percent of its capital in an export trading company, and that all investments over $10 million, as well as any controlling (25 percent or more) equity positions, be reviewed by the appropriate bank regulatory agency and subject to conditions designed to ensure the safety of bank involvement and fair competition.

The legislation comprehends a number of safeguards to protect against breaches of the traditional wall separating domestic banking and commercial activities. The bill makes clear that trading companies must be engaged exclusively in international trade. It does not grant ETCs any authority to engage in, for example, manufacturing, farming or the securities industry.

The separation of banking and commerce is an American tradition with some justification. It is not true, however, that banks have been limited exclusively to credit and deposit related functions for 100 years. In 1919, for example, Congress recognized that banks must compete in the foreign market and authorized banks to form Edge Act corporations which may engage in activities abroad which are prohibited within the United States. Another instance of bank participation in commercial activity is bank ownership of Small Business Investment Corporations, which Congress deemed necessary to make capital available for small businesses.

Section 105(4) of S. 144 squarely prohibits preferential bank lending to any affiliated export trading company or its customers, a prohibition which exceeds anything now in the Bank Holding Company Act or International Banking Act. The legislation ensures that banking organizations would have to exercise the same credit judgments in lending to export trading companies and their customers as they do in other banking activities. The limit on aggregate bank investments in export trading companies further protects against too great an incentive to lend to an affiliated trading company or its customers.

Above and beyond these statutory limitations, the bill vests bank regulatory agencies—the Federal Reserve, Comptroller, FDIC and FHLBB—with authority to establish standards, guidelines, regulations, inventory-to-capital ratios, or other requirements governing the activities of export-trading companies with commercial bank involvement. Any initial investment by a banking institution in an export trade subsidiary must be specifically approved by a federal banking agency. Thereafter, the agency has the right to disapprove additional investments in an ETC, or additional lines of activity the ETC may want to engage in. The agencies can set conditions limiting a particular bank's financial exposure to an ETC and prevent any operations or practices they deem unsound. They also have the authority to enforce any conditions or limitations imposed with cease-and-desist orders, and require such reports as necessary to monitor a banking organization's export trade involvement. All this is in addition to the stringent statutory limitations limiting total investments (equity and loans) in ETCs to 10 percent of a bank's capital and prohibiting preferential lending. These comprehensive controls, devised in cooperation with the Federal Reserve, ensure against any conceivable threat to a bank's depositors, shareholders or competitors which could be posed by the equity involvement of banks in export trading companies.

THE NECESSITY OF ANTITRUST IMMUNITY TO ENCOURAGE TRADING COMPANIES

Title II of S. 144 would revise the Webb-Pomerene Act of 1918 to clarify the antitrust provisions applicable to export trade associations and export trading companies. It also extends the Act's coverage to the export of services and transfers administrative responsibility for Webb-Pomerene from the FTC to the Commerce Department. Most importantly, it provides a certification procedure which would enable Webb associations and export trading companies to obtain antitrust preclearance for specified export trade operations. The clearance procedure would facilitate exports by permitting firms to determine in advance exactly which export trade activities would be immune from antitrust suit and which ones would not.

It should be clearly understood that this title constitutes no substantive change in U.S. antitrust law. It merely codifies what ambiguities in the wording of Webb-Pomerene left unclear, in a manner consistent with court interpretations and Justice Department Enforcement practices. Legal uncertainties about what export activities constitute a "substantial restraint of domestic trade," and the threat of antitrust litigation have severely limited the statute's utility. The 33 Webb-Pomerene associations in existence today account for less than 2 percent of U.S. exports.

The United States can ill-afford inconsistencies in antitrust policy which, in the name of competition, effectively prevent U.S. firms from competing in world markets. Title II of this legislation recognizes the significant export gains which could be made if export trading companies and Webb-Pomerene associations were allowed to engage in specific activities without fear of prosecution under the anti-trust laws. The certification process mandates the Department of Commerce to consult with the Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission in determining that proposed export activities do not violate antitrust standards. The Secretary of Commerce must also find that the export operations to be certified will serve a specified need. Any change in the export trade or methods of operation must be reported to the Secretary of Commerce and the certification accordingly modified.

Even after the export activities of a trading company or association have been certified, they remain subject to the continuing scrutiny of the Departments of Commerce and Justice and the Federal Trade Commission. Either Justice or the FTC may at any time initiate an action to revoke a trading company's certification. Once the certification has been revoked, civil or criminal suits may be brought against an export trading company.

Mr. Chairman, it is extremely difficult to comprehend how the modest clarification of existing law and elaborate safeguards of Title II could be deemed in any sense a legislative endorsement of cartels or a violation of U.S. antitrust statutes. Careful reading of this Title and the legislative and case history of the Webb-Pomerene Act makes clear not only the established need for clarification of permissible export trade activities, but the fact that nothing in this legislation constitutes a substantive change in antitrust law.

PROVISIONS FOR IMPLEMENTATION OF S. 144

In order to encourage the direct participation of smaller exporters in the formation of export trading companies, the legislation urges the Economic Development Administration and the Small Business Administration to give special attention to the financing needs of small and medium sized concerns interested in exploring export opportunities. S. 144 authorizes $20 million per year in fiscal years 1981 through 1985 to EDA and SBA to support loans or guarantees for these purposes. The level of funding proposed is modest, both in relation to the need or export promotion activities directed towards small businesses and in comparison with the tremendous employment and balance of payments gains which accompany increased export activity. In 1978, in fact, the Carter administration's "export policy" proposed a $100 million SBA program to assist small businesses interested in exporting. Unfortunately, nothing on this scale has been implemented.

The bill also directs the Secretary of Commerce to promote actively the formation of export trading companies and to disseminate information about related opportunities. Finally, S. 144 directs Eximbank to establish a guarantee program for commercial loans to U.S. exporters when potential export business is threatened by a small exporter's inability to secure adequate financing. The legislation leaves the size of this program unspecified, with amounts to be appropriated annually to the Export-Import bank. The section makes clear, however, that the program is designed to aid small and medium sized exporters.

In my judgment, all of these provisions are essential if this legislation is to reach its intended beneficiaries—the large pool of small and medium sized firms with export potential, but lacking the expertise and resources to bring their products to world markets.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, I would like to comment on certain tax provisions which were contained in earlier versions of this legislation. The original bill's third title extended tax deferrals available under the DISC (Domestic International Sales Corporation) provisions of the tax code to export trading companies, including income from the export of services. It also allowed for limited use of subpart S of the tax code by export trading companies—permitting certain passthroughs to shareholders of closely held corporations. The title directed the Commerce Department, in consultation with the IRS, to prepare a guide to help export trading companies form DISCs or elect subpart S tax treatment.

These provisions were intended to help small exporters benefit from favorable tax provisions in existing law. Since its inception in 1971, over 60 percent of total DISC benefits have gone to parent corporations with more than $250 million in assets. A Treasury Department analysis of the program concluded the legal and accounting costs of complying with the complex DISC legislation inhibited small company participation in the tax benefits.

It is only fair to ensure that export trading companies, and especially smaller companies or Webb associations, are able to take advantage of legitimate tax benefits. Eligibility for favorable tax treatment could also present a significant incentive to formation of export trading companies. For these reasons, I hope the tax provisions will be reintroduced, and receive favorable consideration by the Senate Finance Committee as an integral element of export trading company legislation.

In conclusion, S. 144 is not a national export strategy; it will not overnight reverse a $20 billion merchandise trade deficit. But this legislation will substantially improve the nation's ability to compete in a highly competitive, trade-dependent world. No other first step will do more to strengthen the marketing of American goods and services abroad. S. 144 proposes no costly or cumbersome new federal programs. It simply repeals disincentives and impediments in existing law. It helps put American industry on an equal footing with its foreign competitors. It gives American business, especially small business, a chance to win new markets, create new employment, and foster the broad expansion of U.S. export potential required to reverse dangerous deficits and stabilize the dollar.●

LITHUANIAN INDEPENDENCE

● Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, this week, Lithuanian-Americans are meeting in cities and towns across this country to observe the 63d anniversary of Lithuania's Declaration of Independence. In doing so, they will renew their commitment to preserving their rich culture here in America, and at the same time, they will remember the time when that small country was free.

Our friends and neighbors of Lithuanian heritage have a profound and abiding concern about their brethren who must live every day with the reality of Soviet oppression.

All Americans should know that Lithuania has produced far more than its share of the incredibly brave men and women who make up the human rights movement in the Soviet Union, and in spite of nearly four decades of Soviet dominance, the Lithuanian people continue to demand their fundamental right to practice their religious faith and to preserve their identity as a nation.

Lithuanians can take pride in their nation's stubborn resistance to overwhelming Soviet power. But pride is tempered by sadness because the independence that was restored to Lithuania on February 16, 1918, lasted only until 1940. In that year, in the aftermath of the infamous treaty between Stalinist Russia and Nazi Germany, the Soviet Union moved ruthlessly to extinguish the freedom of three small neighbors—Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia.

The Soviets in 1940 were not bothered by the fact fully 20 years before, they had formally given up all claims to the Baltic States.

It did not concern Stalin that the people of those countries had no desire to be a part of the oppressive Soviet system.

To this day, the United States, to its great credit, has never recognized the Soviet conquest of the Baltic States.

A Lithuanian Embassy still exists in Washington.

Lithuanian diplomats are still accredited to this country.

And to this day, the United States stands firm in its belief that the question of the Baltic States is not and cannot be closed.

That position has—and will continue to have—my strong support.

But whatever our point of view in this country might be, the fact remains that the Soviet Government is just as determined now as it ever was to crush dissent, to eradicate, religion, and to eliminate minority cultures.

Consider for example, what it means to be a member of a religious community in the Soviet Union:

No religious believer—Christian, Jew, or Moslem alike—may be a teacher in the Soviet Union.

No religious believer may be a civil servant or an official in the government.

No religious believer may be assured of access to places of worship or to the services of the clergy.

In the Soviet Union, official permission is required for a priest or a minister or a rabbi to visit the sick. Official permission is required even to administer the last rites to the dying. And often in the Soviet Union, official permission is refused.

Yet in Lithuania today, church officials estimate that 75 percent of the people are practicing Catholics. The Church of Silence is silent no more and the human rights movement has grown into a major force. When one of its leaders—Father Alfonsas Svarinskas—was asked by foreign journalists if he considered himself a dissident, he gave a reply that must have caused great consternation at the headquarters of the KGB:

"In Lithuania," he said, "everybody is a dissident. As far as we are concerned," he added, "it is the collaborators whose numbers are small here, not the dissidents."

I am sure that Father Svarinskas spoke the truth.

But in the Soviet Union, speaking the truth is a costly and dangerous thing.

For Balys Gayauskas, editor of the Chronicles of the Catholic Church in Lithuania—the oldest of the underground papers in the Soviet Union—speaking the truth meant a sentence of 15 years—10 of them to be spent in what the Soviets call a "special regime" prison.

A special regime prison in the Soviet Union is very special indeed.

The food in such places is especially bad.

Living quarters are especially cold and crowded.

Medical care and hygienic facilities are especially absent.

And the risk to life and health and sanity is especially great.

For Viktoras Petkus, a member of the group established in Lithuania to monitor Soviet compliance with the Helsinki accords, speaking the truth has meant arrest, a ludicrous trial and a 12-year sentence—7 years in special regime camp, followed by another 5 years of internal exile.

Petkus, who is 52 years old, is a scholar of Lithuanian literature, a devout Catholic, and a founding member of the Helsinki Watch Group. What was his crime? He was convicted of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda for asking the Soviet Government to honor its own solemn word, given in writing to the other nations of the world, that it would observe the human rights provisions of the Helsinki accords. It is no crime in the Soviet Union for the Government to promise such things. It is a crime only when a Soviet citizen asks the Government to live up to its promises.

At Helsinki, the Soviets promised to permit emigration to reunite families. That is a hollow promise to Ben Paulionis, a Lithuanian American in my home city of Cleveland, who has been trying without success for 34 years to secure permission for his wife to come from Lithuania to America. His children have grown up without him. He has never seen his grandchildren. His wife is retired from her job as a midwife—hardly an occupation that involves state security. But still, she cannot leave.

Mr. President, the Paulionis case is a classic example of the open Soviet contempt for the most elementary standards of decency and human rights.

The American Embassy in Moscow has pressed this case as a priority.

I have written about it repeatedly to Ambassador Dobrynin. I have raised it in meetings with Soviet officials.

Always, the Soviets promise to look into the case. They say that these matters can be resolved quietly, that there is no need for a public outcry.

But what resolution has there been?

None. Not one word has come from the Soviet Embassy. And Mrs. Paulionis is still in Lithuania.

That is an outrage—the kind outrage with which millions of people in the Soviet Union have to live with every day.

Mr. President, it has been said that the human rights thrust in our foreign policy was a mistake.

I have heard the argument that support for human rights in the Soviet Union and other countries complicates our international relations. They are sensitive to criticism, I am told, and if we want to get along, we should go along.

I am not prepared to go along—not with a regime that presides over the jailhouse of nations that is the Soviet Union today.

I am not prepared to get along with a country that routinely violates its own promises to observe basic human rights guarantees.

And to those who believe that human rights is not a proper subject for American diplomacy, I say ask the people whose independence day we observe this week.

The Lithuanians know how important it is to keep up the pressure on the Soviet Government.

They understand what human rights means to those whose who do not enjoy them.

And they know what a tragedy it would be were this Nation to back away from its commitment to speak up for those whose voices have been silenced.

Mr. President, I salute the Lithuanian-American community on this special occasion and I commend them for keeping alive the hope that the ancient Lithuanian nation will again know freedom.●

MONTANA LAW SCHOOL MOOT COURT TEAM WINS NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP

● Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, occasionally I cannot resist the impulse to express my pride in the accomplishments of certain Montanans. In this instance, I commend the University of Montana Law School moot court team for winning the national championship in New York City recently.

As many of my colleagues who have participated in this competition know, it is rigorous and the standards by which the appellate advocacy of these student competitors is judged are demanding. Team members Carey Matovich, Paul Meismer, and Karl Seel are especially deserving of praise. They have proven that, although the UM Law School is one of the smallest in the Nation, it is one of the finest.

Of course, behind every successful competitor stands a contingent of advisors, trainers, and supporters who also share in the victory. Accordingly, I would also like to congratulate my good friends, Prof. J. Martin Burke who served as faculty advisor for the team and Dean John O. (Jack) Mudd who has worked diligently to foster the kind of academic environment that encourages this level of excellence in legal education. In addition, the entire faculty of the law school is to be commended.

I ask that the following article from the January 31, 1981, Missoulian be printed in the RECORD.

The article follows:

UM TEAM WINS NATIONAL COMPETITION

Three University of Montana law students will return to Missoula laden with cash awards, trophies, books and a championship title earned at the National Moot Court Competition in New York City this week.

UM's team of students out-argued law students from Northwestern University Friday in the final round of the moot-court contest, one of the most prestigious of all law-school competitions.

Carey E. Matovich of Jordan, the only woman on UM's team, won the "best-all argument" award for her presentation. Paul C. Meismer, Billings, and Karl P. Seel, Missoula, were also members of UM's team.

Friday's victory was the first national moot-court championship won by UM students. Another team of UM students qualified for national competition in 1957.

Nine justices sat as a mock supreme court to hear the final-round of arguments Friday as nearly 1,000 spectators watched UM and Northwestern compete for the title. Potter Stewart, associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, presided over the contest as chief.

The moot court competition is sponsored by the Young Lawyers Committee of New York's Association of the Bar and the American College of Trial Lawyers. It is meant to encourage "appellate advocacy," or the presentation of a case before an appeals court, among law students and to provide a common meeting ground for faculty, staff, students, judges and lawyers.

UM's faculty adviser was J. Martin Burke, associate professor of law.

In the semifinals, also held Friday, Missoula students defeated Indiana University's team of law students while Northwestern beat Drake University.

In earlier rounds, UM topped teams from Baylor University, University of New Mexico, University of Alabama and Southern Methodist University. Twenty-nine teams from across the country qualified for national competition.●

REPORT

PURSUANT TO FEDERAL REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

P	QUARTER
	1st	2d	3d	4th
(Mark one square only)

NOTE ON ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

(i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)

(ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".

(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:

(i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.

(ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE ON ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER.—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE ON ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports. ☐

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) Description, (b) quantity distributed; (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out item "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly" Report.

REPORT

PURSUANT TO FEDERAL REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

P	QUARTER
	1st	2d	3d	4th
(Mark one square only)

NOTE ON ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:
(i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)
(ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".
(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:
(i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.
(ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:
1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE ON ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER.—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE ON ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).
(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).
(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports. ☐

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) Description, (b) quantity distributed; (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out item "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly" Report.

AFFIDAVIT

NOTE ON ITEM "D."—(a) In General. The term "contribution" includes anything of value. When an organization or individual uses printed or duplicated matter in a campaign attempting to influence legislation, money received by such organization or individual—for such printed or duplicated matter—is a "contribution." "The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution"—Section 302(a) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN EMPLOYER.—(i) In General. Item "D" is designed for the reporting of all receipts from which expenditures are made, or will be made, in accordance with legislative interests.

(ii) Receipts of Business Firms and Individuals.—A business firm (or individual) which is subject to the Lobbying Act by reason of expenditures which it makes in attempting to influence legislation—but which has no funds to expend except those which are available in the ordinary course of operating a business not connected in any way with the influencing of legislation—will have no receipts to report, even though it does have expenditures to report.

(iii) Receipts of Multipurpose Organizations.—Some organizations do not receive any funds which are to be expended solely for the purpose of attempting to influence legislation. Such organizations make such expenditures out of a general fund raised by dues, assessments, or other contributions. The percentage of the general fund which is used for such expenditures indicates the percentage of dues, assessments, or other contributions which may be considered to have been paid for that purpose. Therefore, in reporting receipts, such organizations may specify what that percentage is, and report their dues, assessments, and other contributions on that basis. However, each contributor of $500 or more is to be listed, regardless of whether the contribution was made solely for legislative purposes.

(c) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE.—(i) In General. In the case of many employees, all receipts will come under Items "D 5" (received for services) and "D 12" (expense money and reimbursements). In the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, it will be presumed that your employer is to reimburse you for all expenditures which you make in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Employer as Contributor of $500 or More.—When your contribution from your employer (in the form of salary, fee, etc.) amounts to $500 or more, it is not necessary to report such contribution under "D 13" and "D 14," since the amount has already been reported under "D 5," and the name of the "employer" has been given under Item "B" on page 1 of this report.

(NOTE.—The form used for report is reproduced below. In the interest of economy in the RECORD, questions are not repeated, only the essential answers are printed, and are indicated by their respective letter and number.)

REPORT

P	QUARTER
	1st	2d	3d	4th
(Mark one square only)

NOTE ON ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:
(i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)
(ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".
(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:
(i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.
(ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:
1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE ON ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER.—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE ON ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).
(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).
(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports. ☐

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) Description, (b) quantity distributed; (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out item "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly" Report.

AFFIDAVIT

FILE ONE COPY WITH THE SECRETARY OF THE SENATE AND FILE TWO COPIES WITH THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

NOTE ON ITEM "D."—(a) In General. The term "contribution" includes anything of value. When an organization or individual uses printed or duplicated matter in a campaign attempting to influence legislation, money received by such organization or individual—for such printed or duplicated matter—is a "contribution." "The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution"—Section 302(a) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN EMPLOYER.—(i) In General. Item "D" is designed for the reporting of all receipts from which expenditures are made, or will be made, in accordance with legislative interests.

(ii) Receipts of Business Firms and Individuals.—A business firm (or individual) which is subject to the Lobbying Act by reason of expenditures which it makes in attempting to influence legislation—but which has no funds to expend except those which are available in the ordinary course of operating a business not connected in any way with the influencing of legislation—will have no receipts to report, even though it does have expenditures to report.

(iii) Receipts of Multipurpose Organizations.—Some organizations do not receive any funds which are to be expended solely for the purpose of attempting to influence legislation. Such organizations make such expenditures out of a general fund raised by dues, assessments, or other contributions. The percentage of the general fund which is used for such expenditures indicates the percentage of dues, assessments, or other contributions which may be considered to have been paid for that purpose. Therefore, in reporting receipts, such organizations may specify what that percentage is, and report their dues, assessments, and other contributions on that basis. However, each contributor of $500 or more is to be listed, regardless of whether the contribution was made solely for legislative purposes.

(c) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE.—(i) In General. In the case of many employees, all receipts will come under Items "D 5" (received for services) and "D 12" (expense money and reimbursements). In the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, it will be presumed that your employer is to reimburse you for all expenditures which you make in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Employer as Contributor of $500 or More.—When your contribution from your employer (in the form of salary, fee, etc.) amounts to $500 or more, it is not necessary to report such contribution under "D 13" and "D 14," since the amount has already been reported under "D 5," and the name of the "employer" has been given under Item "B" on page 1 of this report.
