HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Monday, May 18, 1981

The House met at 11 a.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. FOLEY).

DESIGNATION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, D.C.
May 15, 1981.

I hereby designate the Honorable THOMAS S. FOLEY to act as Speaker pro tempore on Monday, May 18, 1981.

THOMAS P. O'NEILL, JR.,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER

Rev. Edward G. Latch, D.D., former Chaplain of the House of Representatives, offered the following prayer:

God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will we not fear.--Psalms 46: 1.

Eternal God, our Father, we pause in Thy presence to offer unto Thee the devotion of our hearts and to turn another page in the story of our beloved country. As we who were once Members of this body and we who are now Members assemble together in this historic place awaken within us the realization that Thou hast a purpose for each one of us and that Thou art the sustainer of our spirits every day and all the way. Facing this hour and the hours to come may Thy presence strengthen us, Thy spirit guide us, and Thy wisdom make us wise.

Bless our President, our Speaker, and the Members of this body, new and old. Together may we have the mind to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with Thee. Keep them truehearted and wholehearted, faithful, and loyal all the time, all the way forever and ever. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Sparrow, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 875. An act to authorize the generation of electrical power at Palo Verde Irrigation District Diversion Dam, California;

S. 1070. An act to extend the authorization for youth employment and demonstration programs, and for other purposes;

S. 1123. An act to permit certain funds allocated for official expenses of Senators to be utilized to procure additional office equipment; and

S. 1133. An act to amend the National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere Act of 1977 to authorize appropriations to carry out the provisions of such act for fiscal year 1982, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the President pro tempore, pursuant to Public Law 96-374, appointed Robert K. Thomas, Frank Newman, Caroline Shaw Bell, Joyce Holmes Benjamin, James C. Summers, Father Charles L. Currie, Dr. James M. Kraby, and Rev. William J. Sullivan, from private life, to the Commission on National Development in Postsecondary Education.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of May 14, 1981, the House will stand in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Accordingly (at 11 o'clock and 5 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

RECEPTION OF FORMER MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair at this time has the high honor and personal pleasure of welcoming to the Chamber, on behalf of all the sitting Members, the distinguished former Members of Congress here present.

The Chair has the honor of introducing to the Members the respective representatives of both parties to welcome our former colleagues to this day in their honor.

The Chair recognizes the distinguished Republican leader of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MICHEL).

Mr. MICHEL. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

First, may I say, Reverend Latch, how good it is to have you back here praying us off to a good start again.

Mr. Speaker, I guess I have always been glad to participate in these proceedings, for it is the only occasion when can I be sure to see some of my colleagues who actually served here when there was a Republican Speaker and Republican majority in this House.

I read in this morning's paper where Walter Judd said, "And the voters see to it that we have an endless supply of fresh recruits."

Well, I just want the record to show that as much as we look forward to meeting our friends and our colleagues, we have some question about those recruiting techniques the electorate takes advantage of every once in a while.

I certainly want to join the Speaker and the majority leader in extending our welcome. The floor of the House is a place that holds many memories for each of us, both for individuals and for those who served in the Congress for our Nation. Your former Members' organization is a sort of living embodiment of those memories. You do represent a living, vital link with what has gone on before. Whether experience is the best teacher is something we will leave for the philosophers to argue, but it is certain that in political life there is no substitute for the kind of experience every Member of this fine organization brings to our country, and particularly to those of our young people in high schools and colleges these days, who I understand are getting the benefit of visits from Members of this fine organization.

I am just very happy to see so many of my old friends. While I look forward some day to being numbered among those who will come back and renew acquaintances, I just hope that whenever the time comes it is a voluntary choice, and not one of involuntary action on the part of my electorate.

Thank you so much.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the acting majority leader of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. HANCE).

Mr. HANCE. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the distinguished Speaker of the House, Mr. O'NEILL, and the distinguished majority leader, Mr. WRIGHT, and the distinguished majority whip, Mr. FOLEY, I want to welcome your being here.

I think of something that happened the first time I ran for Congress. I was seeking to replace our friend and your friend, George Mahon, and I was asked in a town hall meeting if I wanted to serve in Congress for 44 years. My answer was, I hoped I would be alive and well in 44 years, whether I served in Congress or not.

AUTHENTICATED U.S. GOVERNMENT INFORMATION GPO

This is a group that I can tell is alive and well. We are glad to have you back.

The other thing I was thinking about is that I take a lot of pride in the fact that this group, anyone who serves in this body, we have one thing in common. You know, you can serve in the other body through appointment, and even President of the United States, other than through the election process under unusual circumstances sometimes. But, to serve in this body you have to walk through that district, knock on those doors, ride in those parades and do all the things that you have to do to get to know the people in those districts to be able to come to the House of Representatives. That is just one of the many things I think distinguishes the House from other parts of the electoral process in the United States of America. It is a thing I speak of with pride, because this is the voice of the people.

We are glad to have you back. We look forward to chatting with you throughout the day, and we are glad to see all of you looking very alive and well.

We wish that you were here to help us solve all the tax problems, because the controversy of the day always seems to be the biggest controversy of all time; but, in talking to many of you, I find that those controversies of yesterday were probably of even larger profile than the controversies of today. We do appreciate your coming back and visiting with us today. Thank you.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair directs the Clerk to call the roll of former Members of Congress.

The Clerk called the roll of former Members of Congress, and the following Members answered to their names:

Elizabeth Andrews, Alabama; Leslie C. Arends, Illinois; Robert T. Ashmore, South Carolina; William H. Ayres, Ohio; Alvin J. Baldue, Wisconsin; Laurie C. Battle, Alabama; Andrew J. Biemiller, Wisconsin; John A. Blatnik, Minnesota; J. Caleb Boggs, Delaware; Daniel B. Brewster, Maryland; Charles B. Brownson, Indiana; Elford A. Cederberg, Michigan; Charles E. Chamberlain, Michigan; Frank M. Clark, Pennsylvania; Del Clawson, California.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair now has the pleasure of recognizing the Honorable William S. Mailliard, a former Member of Congress and president of the Association of Former Members of Congress, for such time as he may consume.

The gentleman from California.

Mr. MAILLIARD. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, our thanks to the distinguished minority leader and the acting majority leader for your welcome.

Mr. Speaker, this is the 11th anniversary of the Association of Former Members of Congress, and I am pleased to report to you that we are flourishing. We now have over 600 Members who have served in the House or the Senate or, in many cases, both Houses of the U.S. Congress.

We thank the House and you for this opportunity to report briefly on our past year's educational, social, and research activities. In the interest of brevity, we have condensed this report on many things we have been doing, but there are some things we think important enough to share with you.

First, Mr. Speaker, we are honored today to have as our guests five former members of the Bundestag of the Federal Republic of Germany who are members of an association similar to ours in their country. We wish to welcome Dr. Bruno Heck, Dr. Richard Jaeger, Hon. Wolfram Dorn, Hon. Georg Kahn-Ackerman, and Hon. Joachim Raffert. Their Society of the Former Members of the Bundestag is working with us toward the establishment of an International Association of Former Parliamentarians, and I would like to suggest that we show them our welcome. [Applause.]

These distinguished gentlemen, in some cases, have not only served as members of the Bundestag, which they all are but several have been cabinet members. When this meeting is finished, they are accompanying some of us on Wednesday to "Wingspread," the Johnson Foundation's Conference Center at Racine, Wis., where we will participate in a conference on United States-German relations. This will be the fourth seminar at "Wingspread" we have cosponsored with the Johnson Foundation.

Second, I want to report to you that we have a very active board of directors of the former Members of Congress, and let we name them:

Gordon Allott; Catherine May Bedell; Andy Biemiller; Danny Brewster; Chuck Brownson; Charles Fletcher; Bill Hungate; Martha Keys; Gale McGee; Jim Quigley; Hugh Scott; Carlton Sickles; Robert Taft; John Ware; and Brooks Hays and Walter Judd, our founders.

Before proceeding with the report, let me express my sincere appreciation for the great service rendered by our staff, our executive director, Jed Johnson, a former Member of Congress himself; our counselor, Henry Smith, also a former Member; and our staff secretary, Dorothy Bageant, who as our staff secretary works beyond belief to make our goals and ideas come to pass.

I have been blessed personally by dedicated officers: John Monagan, our vice president; "Ted" Moss, our secretary; and Chuck Chamberlain, our treasurer, who, together with our immediate past president, Carlton Sickles, make up a hard working executive committee. And, of course, our founding members, Walter Judd and Brooks Hays, participate actively, and we are most fortunate to have their continued experience and support.

As you may be aware, Mr. Speaker, we have a very active campus fellows program, with a register of over 200 members who have volunteered to participate. It provides the opportunity for college students and faculty to meet with persons who have served in the U.S. Congress who visit these college campuses as visiting fellows for up to a week at a time. Our campus fellows program today is completing its 75th campus visit with the visit of Gilbert Gude of Maryland to Bainbridge Junior College in Georgia. The program has been immensely successful in bringing the Congress to the campus, and we wish to thank our foundation and corporate sponsors who have made it possible.

Mr. Speaker, under the authority granted to me to revise and extend their remarks, I include here a list of the schools that have been visited and a list of the Members who have visited them, together with some comments we have received back from these various institutions. The list is as follows:

Mr. Speaker, we had a most successful 10th annual fall meeting in Mexico City last November. The U.S. Embassy was most helpful, and members of the Mexican Congress were most gracious in briefing us about the Mexican Government and in hosting us at a luncheon and a reception at the Senate offices. Most of the participating Members and their spouses went on to enjoy a couple of days in Cancun, and we had the adventure of an unscheduled debarking at Merida because of some alleged but nonexistent fog at Cancun. I must say that spending the night at the Merida Airport is not recommended recreation.

This September we will have our fall meeting at Minneapolis. As you know, both the Governor of the State, Al Quie, and the mayor of the city, Don Fraser, are members of the Association of Former Members of Congress.

We look forward to a pleasant and instructive visit with them, and, Mr. Speaker, we invite you to join us there.

Internationally, we have successfully completed programs in interpreting the Congress in the following countries: Canada, Mexico, Japan, Australia, Malaysia, the Philippines, the United Kingdom, Belgium, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Nigeria, China, and Indonesia. So we have not only been visiting campuses, we have been visiting countries.

We have a third upcoming trip to China this fall in which some 40 of our members and families will participate. Last June we had a most successful study trip of the European communities. Plans are underway for a study trip next spring to visit Egypt and Israel.

Under a grant from the Japan-United States Friendship Commission, a highly successful seminar comparing the legislative workings of the Japanese Diet and the U.S. Congress was held in Honolulu, February 11 to 14, at the Cultural Learning Institute of the East-West Center. This project, from which the seminar arose and which is the first comprehensive comparative study of the two legislative bodies, will result in the publication of a handbook in Japanese and English of the scholarly papers prepared by academic experts on the Diet and the Congress and will be made available to Members of both bodies as well as other governmental officials.

I may say that this study arose out of a previous conference we had with the Japanese where, when we tried to look in the library for some effort to explain the differences in the way the two legislative bodies function, we found it did not exist. So out of that experience we think we are going to be able to produce something that will be very useful to the sitting Members if they are engaged in colloquies with the Japanese.

This was the fourth binational and the third parliamentary exchange program held between former Members of Congress and Japan.

Here, Mr. Speaker, let me supply for the RECORD the detail of those prior trips:

COMMENTS ON CONGRESSIONAL ALUMNI CAMPUS FELLOWS PROGRAM

"We have had a post-visit assessment for the week. Congressman Biemiller's visit was of benefit to all of us; he did an excellent job. My personal observation was that he was equally successful with students, faculty and community members. . . . You have a first class program here and it is of great importance to colleges across the country."—Alex B. Lacy, Jr., President, Sangamon State University, Springfield, Illinois, March 3, 1980.

"Dr. Judd was very well received in all his presentations. Community persons, as well as many Hope College students, heard his presentations. The question and answer periods were lively and informative. Dr. Judd is witty, charming, persuasive, intelligent, and extremely well-informed."—James M. Zoetewey, Chairman, Political Science Department, Hope College, Holland, Michigan, March 17, 1980.

"Senator Yarborough's visit was an unqualified success. He charmed everyone he met. His formal presentations were brief, informative, and witty. The groups he met then bombarded him with friendly but solid questions at which point Senator Yarborough completely conquered his audiences with his wit, candor, and judgment."—Irving H. King, Department of Humanities, U.S. Coast Guard Academy, New London, Connecticut, April 23, 1980.

"In my judgment, one of Senator Beall's most important accomplishments here, both in the classrooms and at informal meetings with students, is that he impressed them as a person of integrity and ability and certainly increased their understanding of and respect for politicians and the work of the Congress."—Thomas R. Ross, Chairman, The Department of History, Davis & Elkins College, Elkins, West Virginia, April 24, 1980.

"The most succinct and complete way I can think of to tell you how useful Mr. Pucinski was to us is to refer you to the enclosed schedule of his activities. Let me just add to that my own assessment of the visit, an assessment corroborated to me by all the instructors and many of the students with whom Mr. Pucinski came into contact: our guest was unfailingly astute and insightful on the whole wide range of subjects he addressed, and he gave us exactly what we had hoped for—that practitioner's-eye view that we, theoreticians, need to offer our students, but can't, of course, give from our own experience. Mr. Pucinski's wide-ranging experience was an invaluable resource for us, and we thank you for helping him to share it with us."—Calvin F. Exoo, Department of Government, St. Lawrence University, Canton, New York, June 10, 1980.

"I am pleased to report that former Senator Hugh Scott's visit to DePauw University was a resounding success. We had Senator Scott visit four different classes over the three day period and deliver a convocation address, as well as meet informally with small groups of students and faculty. In each case the response was overwhelmingly positive. Senator Scott gave of his time unselfishly, and shared his vast experience and insight with each individual he came in contract with."—Byron W. Daynes, Ph.D., Chairman and Associate Professor, DePauw University, Greencastle, Indiana, October 17, 1980.

"I want to thank you and Former Members of Congress for making possible Ted Moss' visit to the Alfred campus September 30-October 2. As the enclosed schedule indicates Moss appeared in ten classes, five of them two hours long, with an average of 20 students per class. The students were delighted for the opportunity to hear his perspective on a wide variety of issues and comments were uniformly positive. Moss' relaxed style put the students at ease, and he responded to questions in a direct way which satisfied the questioner. He endured a rather grueling schedule of appearances with unfailing good humor and grace."—Dr. Thomas Rasmussen, Associate Professor of Political Science, Alfred University, Alfred, New York, October 28, 1980.

"The visit from Congressman Whalen was an enormous success, judging from the enthusiastic comments of students and faculty. His easy manner with students gave them the confidence to ask questions and created an atmosphere for dialogue, which was very constructive."—Linda L. Fowler, Assistant Professor, Syracuse University, Syracuse, New York, December 8, 1980.

"I am pleased to report to you the complete success of the recent visit of Judge Abner J. Mikva to Brandeis University. There is no doubt that our students and faculty were rewarded with a stimulating and enriching experience by Judge Mikva's presence.

Judge Mikva communicated his concerns not only as a former congressman and a jurist, but as a humanist. As such he enhanced the dignity of the political and legal professions. His humanism was brought to my attention by students and faculty alike."—Sanford M. Lottor, Director of Continuing Studies, Brandeis University, Waltham, Massachusetts, December 12, 1980.

"The College very much enjoyed working with the Campus Fellows Program, and appreciated having a great deal of flexibility in preparing Mrs. Bedell's schedule. It gave us the opportunity to tailor Mrs. Bedell's visit to the specific needs of our institution. I believe that her visit, in terms of length and scheduling, was perfect for Chatham's needs.

In short, we at Chatham have nothing but positive feelings about Mrs. Bedell's visit . . ."—Janet Sarbaugh, Assistant to the President, Chatham College, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, December 22, 1980.

Here at home, we are just completing our first oral history project named "The Modern Congress in American History," funded essentially by the National Endowment for the Humanities and also by the Rockefeller Foundation, the Finance Factors Foundation, and by many separate individual contributions. The transcripts of these some 100 interviews of former Members of Congress will be placed in the Library of Congress for the use of scholars and historians and, the microfilming Corp. of America will produce a microfiche edition which will be available nationally.

Mr. Speaker, it is now my unhappy duty to report to the House the name of our deceased alumni since our meeting last year. They are:

Emanuel Celler of New York; Peter Dominick of Colorado; Jacob Gilbert of New York; Charles Hoeven of Iowa; Carl Hoffman of Pennsylvania; Paul Jones of Missouri; John McCormack of Massachusetts; George Outland of California; and Olin Teague of Texas.

Mr. Speaker, I suggest that we might have a moment of silence in memory of our departed colleagues.

[The Members and guests standing.]

Mr. Speaker, each year we present a distinguished service award. This is, of course, a nonpartisan award presented in recognition of outstanding service to the Congress and to the Nation. Past recipients have been former Congresswoman and Ambassador Clare Boothe Luce of Connecticut; former Congressman George Mahon of Texas; the late former Vice President Nelson Rockefeller of New York; former Senator Sam Ervin of North Carolina; former President Gerald Ford of Michigan; the late former Speaker, John McCormack of Massachusetts; and the late former House Parliamentarian, Lou Deschler.

I submit that that is a distinguished group of names to present.

Now we are going to have the pleasure of adding another distinguished name to this roster. I will ask the Honorable Edmund Muskie of Maine to come forward to receive this year's award.

Edmund Muskie, you have given long and distinguished service to the Congress and the people of the United States for many years as a leader in the Senate of the United States and more recently as Secretary of State in a trying and internationally tense period of our Nation's history. We thank you for that service and I am delighted, both officially and personally, to present this award in recognition of your distinguished service.

I will simply indicate what these are and there are more to come. These are letters from your colleagues expressing their affection and appreciation.

This is a gavel. I will read the plaque that is next to it:

Presented to the Honorable Edmund S. Muskie on the floor of the House of Representatives by former Members of Congress in recognition of his distinguished service to the Republic. Monday, May 18, 1981, Washington, D.C.

Now, I am happy to yield to you for such remarks as you may choose to make.

Mr. MUSKIE. Thank you, Bill.

Mr. Speaker, and my colleagues, 22 years ago when I first came to the other body, I was told that freshmen were to listen and not speak. Well, I am a freshman member of this organization now; but the tradition has changed in the Senate. I see no reason to persist with it in this institution.

I have now had a few months to contemplate the significance of holding office as Governor, as a Senator, and as Secretary under the new title of "former." It seemed to me at first glance that the word former suggests that one's status has become meaningless, until I began to contemplate, first, that this status is the result of action by the electorate in most cases, so they are as responsible for our occupying our present status as they were in electing us to these institutions in the first instance; but second, I would like to give you a personal experience in dealing with these new titles that I find very interesting.

I have just returned from a trip to the Middle East of 11 days in the interests of my new law firm, carrying my passport, and if none of you have ever read your passport carefully, you will have overlooked what I did for so many years, an admonition on the inside of the back cover that the passport must be surrendered when the holder changes the status which is listed in the passport. So I proceeded to look at my status as listed in the passport and it was, "Former Secretary of State." I began to wonder when I would relinquish that status and thus be subject to the sanction of the passport regulation. So there is some meat to this status.

I once had a passport in the name of Secretary of State that I had to relinquish after 8 months and 20 days, but as former Secretary, I am safe.

I am most grateful for this award. I have listed carefully to the list of former recipients and regard it as a distinction to join their ranks.

I have one reservation about that. In too many instances you referred to former recipients as the "late former" Senator, Congressman, and so on. I hope I do not join that list too rapidly.

This is a time for some reminiscence. I will not indulge in it at length or carelessly; but I have been asked a question almost every day since I left office on January 20 that I have not found a satisfactory answer to. People continually ask, "Should we refer to you as Secretary or as Senator or as Governor?"

My replies have been up to this point some of these:

"Take your pick."

"I can't dictate it."

"Why don't you add Mr. to the list?"

"Why don't you resurrect some of the other things that I have been called from time to time in my public career?"

But I have been taking a survey of my own to see which of these titles people are most comfortable with. Interestingly enough, it is the title of Senator. Perhaps I was Secretary too short a time. Perhaps I was Governor too long ago; but I choose to believe that the title of U.S. Senator is still one revered and respected by the American people and my identification with it seems to come quite naturally to their lips.

As I travel abroad and meet with leaders of other countries, I find that they are impressed by the parliamentary service that I have been privileged to enjoy in this body; so I think there is sense to the continuation of our service here as former Members of Congress, Bill.

I am delighted to be a member of this new organization. My service in the Senate of the United States added a dimension to my life that has forever changed my life for the better in terms of a sense of fulfillment, of contribution, of commitment, of capacity to understand the issues with which our country is continually confronted from day to day.

I must say, since January 20, I have felt a comfortable sense of detachment from many of these issues as to which current Members of Congress find themselves voting and considering the wrath of their constituents as their constituents contemplate their record; but nevertheless, even my short tenure as Secretary of State gives me a perspective on continuing foreign policy problems, many of which are no different than they were a few months ago, but which now are being served by people with a different perspective, a different order of priorities, a different sense of values.

To be able to contemplate the emergence of new policies, to meet changing views, changing needs, changing pressures from our constituents, I think is a particular pleasure for those of us who have served in this body, a sense of partisanship seems not to be as sharp once we leave this body; a sense of association in a common institution seems to be stronger and a binding one.

So I think we occupy a unique place in American life, a place that ought not to be passive, a place that ought not to be simply contemplative, but a place of continuing service in the sense that Bill Mailliard in his report has outlined to you here this morning.

I do not miss being in the Senate. Life goes on; but I do miss the associations of so many good friends in both Houses, which were the product of 22 years in the Senate.

Oh, I know there are mixed memories of those associations. John Blatnik, as he greeted me a moment ago, he said, "You know, Ed, you look like the younger brother of a very mean guy I used to have to face in water pollution conferences."

Well, I think a little pepper mixed with the salt adds to the pleasantness and the sharpness of the memories. I guess I did contribute my share of pepper and salt to my associations with the Members of this House. I know that I miss something in my recollections of the Congress in that I never served as a Member of the House. Those of you who served in both seem to have a special collection of memories, and I envy you that.

On the other hand, my recollection of the adversarial confrontations that I had with Members of the House, all respected, both sides of the aisle contributing finally to an amalgam of views representing public policy at the time, which is a measure of the viability of this institution.

This still, this legislative process, the bedrock in my judgment of our constitutional system. It is the one institution, the whole constitutional arrangement, which is by definition representative of our people.

I know people often say to me, "Why doesn't the Congress show more leadership?"

Well, the Congress is not supposed to be the leader. It is supposed to be representative of the people. Sometimes it steps out a little bit ahead of the people, but not very much. When it does, it is likely to have the reins pulled up hard. the people expect you to represent them, as they expected us. Because it is representative of them, we are their instrument for change. The President can propose, as he must and as he should and as he has, but the Congress if it is to serve its function must not abandon that function to the President or to the courts. It is here that the people in a republic can speak their views, their choice.

I think as I view the Congress and its performance over the last 22 years since I first came here, it has served that function eminently well. It serves it even when the majority changes. I like to be in the majority, but I have served in the minority before, and both have a role to play. I gather from reading the papers that both are playing their respective roles eminently well today.

Well, let me thank you again for the distinction, which I will never forget. These kinds of memorabilia are one of the things we take into private life with us when we leave public office. The only problem is that you cannot afford houses big enough now to contain them all; but I will surely find a place for this one.

Thank you all for today, but thank you even more for the years of association that you have given to me, to my wife, and to my family. Thank you.

Mr. MAILLIARD. Thank you, Ed, for a very appropriate response.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would like to report, it does not say this here in the script, but if the railroad runs as we intend it to, our President for next year will be John Monagan, former Democratic Congressman from Connecticut; our vice president, former Republican Congressman Charles Chamberlain, of Michigan.

In addition, I am informed that the nominating committee will at our business meeting nominate the following persons as directors; some are reelections, some are new:

Bill Hungate, Ted Moss, Bob Taft, John Ware, Glenn Beall, Abner Mikva, John Lindsay, Bill Springer, Richard Clark, El Cederberg, Brock Adams, and Jim Pearson.

Now, I want to wish the new President, who will take office on the 1st of July, every bit of the pleasure and fun that I have had out of it and even more success. I feel I have reported on a successful year, but I think each year generally is and should be a little better than the one that went before.

□ 1145

May I say in my last appearance as president that it has been a great deal of fun to have the excuse to keep in contact with so many former colleagues, that without this excuse I would not have had that pleasure.

Mr. Speaker, this concludes our 11th annual report to the Congress. We look forward to the next 11 years as even more productive.

Thank you for your patience and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Before concluding these proceedings the Chair wishes, on behalf of the officers and the Members of the House, to congratulate the Honorable Edmund S. Muskie as the recipient of this year's Distinguished Service Award, and to thank all of the members of the Association of Former Members of Congress for their continuing efforts in behalf of such programs as the congressional alumni program and the many other seminars and studies and meetings that the association has sponsored in the continued concern with the history of this institution and with interparliamentary affairs. Especially the Chair would like to thank all of the former Members of Congress and their special guests for their presence today and their personal commitment to this institution and to our common membership in which we take such great pride.

The Chair declares the proceedings concluded, and the Chair declares further that the recess shall continue until 12 post meridian today at which time the Chair will recovene to conclude the business of the day.

Accordingly (at 11 o'clock and 47 minutes a.m.), the House continued in recess until 12 o'clock noon.)

□ 1200

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. FOLEY) at 12 o'clock and 4 minutes p.m.

PRINTING OF PROCEEDING HAD DURING RECESS, AND GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the proceeding had during the recess to receive former Members be printed in the RECORD, and that all Members and former Members who spoke during the recess have the privilege of revising their remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

NAZI CROOKS AND NAZI CRIMINALS

(Mr. LANTOS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, we are all too familiar with the criminal and conspiratorial plots of our homegrown Nazis to turn this great Nation into a fascist and racist police state. Not surprisingly, these Nazi hooligans have recently added a lucrative gimmick to their poisonous program.

They have begun to sell "victory bonds" for $880, to be redeemed the year after they come to power for $8,800.

Predictably, the primitive minded haters amongst us are eagerly buying these worthless mainifestos of lunacy.

Just a couple of weeks ago I stood a few feet from the President of the United States as he denounced—with feeling and passion—the Nazis of another era. I call on President Reagan today to request the Attorney General, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and the Chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission to undertake an immediate and full-scale investigation, at the highest level, of this malicious Nazi maneuver.

Our great Nation must not, and shall not remain complacent or impotent when challenged by Nazi criminals turned crooks.

UNICEF CODE OF MARKETING OF BREAST MILK SUBSTITUTES

(Mr. OBERSTAR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I was shocked beyond belief at the report last Friday that the United States intends to vote against the proposed World Health Organization and UNICEF code of marketing of breast milk substitutes.

The purpose of this voluntary international code is to offer protection to the most helpless of the world's population—the children, the newborn.

In the past I have been proud when the United States has stood alone against oppression and stood up for human rights. This time the United States will stand alone but in tragedy and in sadness as the only Nation, while 156 nations vote to support this code. A vote for the code would be a symbol of deep U.S. concern for suffering children throughout the world.

Our colleague, the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. HARKIN) and I have joined in a letter to the President urging him to reconsider what we consider to be a very unfortunate, tragic decision. I urge my colleagues to join us in signing this letter.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D.C., May 18, 1981.

President RONALD REAGAN,
The White House,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: On Friday, May 15, the State Department announced that the United States intends to vote against the World Health Organization's (WHO) and UNICEF's International Code of Marketing of Breast Milk Substitutes. The vote on the Code is expected to occur tomorrow, May 19.

Speaking on behalf of 75 Members of Congress who have co-sponsored a House Resolution in support of the Code, and on behalf of millions of dying infants, we ask you to involve yourself personally in the decision-making process on the U.S. vote, and to reverse the decision made by your Administration.

The WHO-UNICEF Code deserves your support for one basic reason—it exemplifies the concern of the American people for improving the health and well-being of infants throughout the world. Children raised under conditions of poverty and poor sanitation are, of course, particularly vulnerable to the disease and high rates of malnutrition associated with improper bottle feeding.

According to the Director-General of WHO, evidence from the Third World indicates that infants breast fed for less than six months, or not at all, have a mortality rate five to ten times higher in the second six months of life than those breast fed for six months or more.

The Code also deserves your support because it offers a chance to enhance U.S. relations with developing countries—without spending an extra dime of the taxpayers' money. Many of our European allies are also strongly committed to the Code. Indeed, at present, only a few people in the United States seem to be in doubt as to the importance of the Code.

Mr. President, the stakes are high. The lives of millions of babies may depend on your decision. Please take the time to review—and overrule—the decision your Administration has made.

We would be happy to discuss this matter with you personally, and we will be available to meet with you this afternoon or at your convenience.

Respectfully,

Tom Harkin, James M. Jeffords, James Oberstar, Ron Wyden, Edward J. Markey, David Bonior, Benjamin A. Gilman, Paul Simon, Lawrence J. DeNardis, Bruce F. Vento, Members of Congress.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means:

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS,
Washington, D.C., May 11, 1981.

Hon. THOMAS P. O'NEILL, Jr.,
The Speaker, House of Representatives,
H-205 Capitol, Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: This is to advise you that, pursuant to sec. 8002 of the Internal Revenue Code, the following members of the Committee on Ways and Means have been designated to serve on the Joint Committee on Taxation during the 97th Congress:

Dan Rostenkowski (D., Ill.).
Sam M. Gibbons (D., Fla.).
J. J. Pickle (D., Tex.).
Barber B. Conable, Jr. (R., N.Y.).
John J. Duncan (R., Tenn.).

Sincerely yours,

DAN ROSTENKOWSKI,
Chairman.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Clerk of the House of Representatives:

U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D.C., May 15, 1981.

Hon. THOMAS P. O'NEILL, Jr.,
The Speaker, House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Pursuant to the permission granted in the Rules of the House of Representatives, I have the honor to transmit a sealed envelope from The White House, received in the Clerk's Office at 10:30 a.m. on Friday, May 15, 1981 and said to contain a message from the President wherein he transmits the second annual report under the Powerplant and Industrial Fuel Use Act of 1978.

With kind regards, I am,

Sincerely,

EDMUND L. HENSHAW, Jr.,
Clerk, House of Representatives.

SECOND ANNUAL REPORT WITH RESPECT TO CONSERVATION OF FUEL IN FEDERAL FACILITIES—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on Energy and Commerce:

To the Congress of the United States:

Pursuant to the requirements of section 403(c) of the Powerplant and Industrial Fuel Use Act of 1978, I hereby transmit the second annual report describing actions of each Federal agency with respect to the conservation and use of petroleum and natural gas in Federal facilities. The period covered by the report precedes my term of office.

RONALD REAGAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, May 15, 1981.

MAKING IN ORDER ON MAY 19, 1981, CONSIDERATION OF CONFERENCE REPORT ON HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 115, FIRST CONCURRENT RESOLUTION ON THE BUDGET, FISCAL YEAR 1982, AND ANY AMENDMENTS IN DISAGREEMENT THERETO

Mr. JONES of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it may be in order on Tuesday, May 19, 1981, or any day thereafter, to consider the conference report on House Concurrent Resolution 115, first concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 1982, and any amendments in disagreement thereto.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule I, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on each motion to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 4 of rule 15.

Such rollcall votes, if postponed, will be taken on Tuesday, May 19, immediately after the record votes on suspension motions which might be ordered on that day.

FEDERAL MANAGER'S ACCOUNTABILITY ACT OF 1981

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1526) to amend the Accounting and Auditing Act of 1950 to require ongoing evaluations and reports on the adequacy of the systems of internal accounting and administrative control of each executive agency, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 1526

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. This Act may be cited as the "Federal Managers' Accountability Act of 1981".

SEC. 2. Section 113 of the Accounting and Auditing Act of 1950 (31 U.S.C. 66a) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d)(1)(A) To ensure compliance with the requirements of subsection (a)(3) of this section, internal accounting and administrative controls of each executive agency shall be established in accordance with standards prescribed by the Comptroller General, and shall provide assurances that—

"(i) all obligations and costs are in compliance with applicable law;

"(ii) all funds, property, and other assets are safeguarded against waste, loss, unauthorized use, or misappropriation; and

"(iii) all revenues and expenditures applicable to agency operations are properly recorded and accounted for to permit the preparation of accounts and reliable financial and statistical reports and to maintain accountability over the assets.

"(B) The standards prescribed by the Comptroller General under this paragraph shall include standards to ensure the prompt resolution of all audit findings.

"(2) By Decemer 31, 1981, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, in consultation with the Comptroller General, shall establish guidelines for the evaluation by agencies of their systems of internal accounting and administrative control to determine such systems' compliance with the requirements of paragraph (1) of this subsection. The Director, in consultation with the Comptroller General, may modify such guidelines from time to time as deemed necessary.

"(3) By December 31, 1982, and by December 31 of each succeeding year, the head of each executive agency shall, on the basis of an evaluation conducted in accordance with guidelines prescribed under paragraph (2) of this subsection, prepare a statement—

"(A) that the agency's systems of internal accounting and administrative control fully comply with the requirements of paragraph (1); or

"(B) that such systems do not fully comply with such requirements.

"(4) In the event that the head of an agency prepares a statement described in paragraph (3)(B), the head of such agency shall include with such statement a report in which any material weaknesses in the agency's systems of internal accounting and administrative control are identified and the plans and schedule for correcting any such weakness are described in detail.

"(5) The statements and reports required by this subsection shall be signed by the head of each executive agency and transmitted to the President and the Congress. Such statements and reports shall also be made available to the public, except that, in the case of any such statement or report containing information which is—

"(A) specifically prohibited from disclosure by any provision of law; or

"(B) specifically required by Executive order to be kept secret in the interest of national defense or the conduct of foreign affairs, such information shall be deleted prior to the report or statement being made available to the public.

"(6)(A) The Inspector General of an executive agency or, if no Inspector General exists for an executive agency, the head of the internal audit staff, shall receive and investigate any allegation that an employee of the agency provided false or misleading information in connection with the evaluation of the agency's systems of internal accounting and administrative control or in connection with the preparation of the annual statement or report on the systems of internal accounting and administrative control.

"(B) If, in connection with any investigation under subparagraph (A), the Inspector General or the head of the internal audit staff, as appropriate, determines that there is reasonable cause to believe that false or misleading information was provided, he shall report that determination to the head of the agency.

"(C) The head of the agency shall review any matter referred to him under subparagraph (B) and shall take action under chapter 75 of title 5, United States Code, or such other disciplinary or corrective action as he deems necessary.".

SEC. 3. Section 201 of the Budget and Accounting Act, 1921 (31 U.S.C. 11), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(k) The President shall include in the supporting detail accompanying each Budget submitted on or after January 1, 1982, a statement with respect to each department and establishment of—

"(1) the original amount of appropriations requested by the Office of the Inspector General of such department or establishment, if any;

"(2) the changes made in such request by the head of such department or establishment prior to the submission of such request to the Director of the Office of Management and Budget;

"(3) any further changes made in such request prior to the submission of such Budget to the Congress.".

SEC. 4. Section 215 of the Budget and Accounting Act, 1921 (31 U.S.C. 23), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentences: "The head of each department and establishment shall include with any such requests for appropriations a report on the status and progress made in having its accounting system approved by the Comptroller General pursuant to section 112 of the Accounting and Auditing Act of 1950. Such reports shall be included in the supporting detail accompanying each Budget submitted by the President on or after January 1, 1982, under section 201 of the Budget and Accounting Act, 1921.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas (Mr. BROOKS) will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from New York (Mr. HORTON) will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BROOKS).

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1526 is a contribution to the effort now being made in all quarters to reduce fraud, waste, and abuse in Federal programs and services. Allegations have been made, supported by substantial evidence in General Accounting Office studies, that such fraud and waste are widespread. The time for hand wringing has stopped, however, and the time to do something concrete has arrived. That is the purpose of this bill.

We can attack fraud and waste after post mortem discovery, but the horse is usually out of the barn by then. Our approach is to tighten internal controls so that the appropriate checks can be in place and operative before the fraud or waste occurs. This bill will require ongoing evaluations of the adequacy of systems for internal and accounting control in each executive department and agency. These evaluations, under guidelines to be established by the Office of Management and Budget, are to be conducted to determine if the agency systems are in compliance with standards to be prescribed by the Comptroller General. An annual statement by the agency head will certify the effectiveness of those controls or he will submit a schedule for strengthening any weaknesses that may exist.

The former Comptroller General, Elmer B. Staats, and the present Acting Comptroller both strongly support this legislation as a major step in achieving sound financial management. They are the experts. They know what is needed.

Millions, possibly billions, of dollars can be saved if our internal controls are working properly and the beauty of it all is that, according to the Congressional Budget Office, the initial effort to establish the standards and guidelines will be an added cost of only $125,000. This cost-benefit ratio will set a record of which we all can be proud.

I wish to make clear that the provisions of the bill directing the head of an agency to take disciplinary or corrective action as he deems necessary against an employee whom the Inspector General determines as having provided false or misleading information is not intended to enlarge the existing disciplinary powers of agency heads, take away any statutory rights of employees, or affect the Office of Personnel Management's authority to issue regulations as authorized by law.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I support H.R. 1526, the Federal Managers Accountability Act, which seeks to amend the Accounting and Auditing Act of 1950 by requiring ongoing evaluations and reports on the systems of internal control used by each executive agency. It is a good product, one that reflects the continuing interest of the Government Operations Committee in financial accountability, effective audit followup, and other basic ingredients of sound financial management and good government.

The bill has active support among accountants, auditors, professional associations, and the General Accounting Office, each of whom testified in our hearing that the absence of strong internal systems of control frequently translates into waste, fraud, and mismanagement of Federal programs and activities. By having in place a system to evaluate and report on the effectiveness of internal control systems, top agency management officials will be better able to spot weaknesses in the system and to devise and schedule plans to strengthen any weaknesses.

H.R. 1526 would require the establishment of internal accounting and administrative controls at each executive agency in accordance with standards prescribed by the Comptroller General. These controls would provide assurances that all obligations and costs are in compliance with the law; that all funds, property, and other assets are protected against waste and mismanagement; and that all transactions are properly recorded. Standards would also be prescribed by the Comptroller General to insure the prompt resolution of all audit findings.

Once the standards have been prescribed by the Comptroller General, the Office of Management and Budget would be required to establish guidelines for the evaluation by agencies of their internal control systems. By December 31 of each year the head of each executive agency would be required to prepare a statement certifying that the agency's control system either is in compliance with the standards or is not in compliance. If the system is not in compliance, weaknesses must be identified and a plan and schedule for correcting those weaknesses must be described in detail. The statements would be signed and transmitted to the President and to the Congress.

There are safeguards in the bill to protect against submission of false or misleading information in connection with the evaluation of an agency's control system. There are also safeguards to protect against public disclosure of sensitive or classified information.

Finally, the bill would require additional efforts on the part of the President and of the agency heads in preparation of annual budget documents. The President would be required to submit with annual budget information a simple statement on both the original amount of appropriations requested by the Inspector General of each agency, and any changes OMB made in those requests. The head of each agency would be required to submit with any appropriations request a report on the status and progress that agency has made in having its accounting system approved by the Comptroller General as required by the Accounting and Auditing Act of 1950.

I should point out, Mr. Speaker, that we were very careful in giving to the Comptroller General the authority to prescribe standards on which internal accounting and administrative controls will be established and to OMB the authority to establish the guidelines for agencies to use in their evaluations of internal control systems. We agreed at the subcommittee and at the full committee that such a balance is necessary and is in keeping with the missions of both GAO and OMB.

As far as the reporting process is concerned, I pointed out at the hearing that I would be reluctant to require yet another congressionally mandated report unless that report results in either a long-term increase in administrative efficiency or a long-term decline of Federal paperwork. I am satisfied that H.R. 1526 will provide the bureaucracy with the kind of impetus that could meet either or both of those criteria.

For those and other reasons, I support H.R. 1526, Mr. Speaker, and urge its prompt approval here today.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HORTON. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. I appreciate my colleague yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I note in the report, or at least in some of the material we received on this bill, that the administration supports the objectives of this bill but opposes its enactment because they felt that OMB, not the General Accounting Office, should issue standards governing executive agencies and the internal financial control systems and audit followup, and I wondered if either of my colleagues would care to comment on that?

Mr. HORTON. I would be very happy to comment. I am glad the gentleman brought that subject up.

I spoke just this morning with Mr. Harper, the deputy of OMB, and the OMB did testify on the bill during the course of the hearings.

Basically, they are in accord with the purpose of the bill. But there are two things that they were somewhat concerned about. One was the subject that the gentleman brought up, and that was who would establish standards.

The bill originally required that the General Accounting Office establish and implement standards. And the compromise we worked out was that the General Accounting Office would set the standards, which appropriately should be done by the General Accounting Office, and that the implementation would be up to the OMB.

Now, admittedly, that is not as far as the OMB would like to go, but I think that is a good compromise on that subject.

The other point that they were concerned about is that, in accordance with the bill, the amount that is requested by the Inspector General has to be sent through—the information has to be sent through to the Secretary and then to the OMB and then made public, sent back to the Congress. They were concerned about that because they do not do it in any other situation.

I explained to Mr. Harper and to the OMB that this is, if you will, a fact of life. We do need to know what the requests are of the Inspectors General, insofar as their requests for budget, so that we know that they are actually operating as independently as possible. I am sure that the Senate will have different language, and perhaps we can work out sort of a compromise on that when we get to that phase of it. But from my standpoint I think that it is important for the Congress to know the amount that has been requested by the Inspectors General so that we will have some idea as to how independent the Inspectors General are in the work that they are engaged in, which, as the gentleman knows, is to uncover and oversight fraud and abuse and inefficiency in the various agencies.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. I appreciate my colleague outlining what those concerns were on the part of the administration, especially OMB.

I think, on the second point the gentleman made, there was a concern that initial budget requests back and forth might become part of this request, on the part of an Inspector General in any given agency. In other words, just preliminary requests.

Is it possible that that could be modified, or has the gentleman contemplated doing so, on the basis that it is not absolutely essential for us to know every single detail of every single memorandum between an Inspector General and the OMB and/or the President? Or does the gentleman wish to comment on that?

Mr. HORTON. Well, the bill, on page 5, section 3, subdivision (k) and following, says this:

"(k) The President shall include in the supporting detail accompanying each Budget submitted on or after January 1, 1982, a statement with respect to each department and establishment of—

"(1) the original amount of appropriations requested by the Office of the Inspector General of such department or establishment, if any;

"(2) the changes made in such request by the head of such department or establishment prior to the submission of such request to the Director of the Office of Management and Budget;"

So I think it is pretty clear from the language of the bill that the information we need to have is the amount of the original request of appropriations and then any changes that are made by the Secretary.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. Well, I guess the concern that I would have is that this mandate in the bill does not force the Inspector General in any agency to submit in detail all requests relating to budget, but it is his primary request for each budget, period; is that it?

Mr. HORTON. That is it.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. I thank the gentleman for the clarification.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE), one of the original sponsors of this concept in this bill.

Mr. HYDE. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to see a piece of legislation come before this body that cost so little but will save so much. I wholeheartedly support the Federal Managers Accountability Act of 1981, a bill that requires continuing evaluations and reports to Congress on the internal control systems of Federal agencies and departments. H.R. 1526 provides the means of minimizing fraud, errors, abuse, and waste of Government funds.

Billions of Federal dollars are lost annually through fraud, waste, and abuse. As we seek ways to reduce the Federal budget, we also express concern about cutting programs and services. Perhaps some of those programs could be saved if we narrow the margin for abuses.

Legislation already enacted falls short of meeting the demand to control the loss of Federal funds. The Budget and Accounting Procedures Act of 1950 requires management of all major Federal departments to implement and maintain effective systems of internal control in Government. In 1978, Congress passed the Inspector General legislation. Its purpose is to increase emphasis on the prevention and detection of fraud, waste, and abuse in Government. In addition to this legislation, the Office of Management and Budget in 1979 established its financial priorities program to improve internal controls within agencies and departments.

It is plain to see that prior legislation has not met the need. The Federal agencies are already required to maintain internal control systems that safeguard their financial resources, but the means of enforcing the requirement is lacking.

The bill before us supplements existing legislation by providing the key to successfully narrowing the margin for abuses. This legislation will bring pressure to bear upon those responsible for the accountability of the tax dollars appropriated to their agency or department by this body. We can no longer afford to accept the business as usual attitude whereby requirements of the job are ignored.

The Federal Managers Accountability Act requires that identified system weaknesses receive congressional and public disclosure until such time as effective action is taken to correct them. This legislation will require utilizing effective procedures within agencies to assure timely and continuous monitoring of the effectiveness of their internal control systems.

Having introduced similar legislation, and as a cosponsor of this bill, I am keenely aware of the need to affix responsibility in each agency over the spending of our constituents tax dollars and install a degree of professional administration that has been sadly lacking.

I am hopeful the House will pass this measure. By doing so, we will not only demonstrate our commitment to tightening the reins on Government spending, but also restore public confidence in the agencies of Government that they are honestly and effectively serving the people.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the gentleman and thank him for his contribution. The gentleman testified before the subcommittee and made a very valuable contribution to the life of this bill and, hopefully, this bill will be passed unanimously in the House.

Mr. Speaker, I urge its approval.

Mr. DAUB. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support for the Federal Managers Accountability Act. As a member of the Government Operations Committee which reported out this legislation, I want to commend the chairman of that committee, Mr. BROOKS, for his effective action on this legislation, and my leader, the ranking Member Mr. HORTON, for his study and leadership.

Mr. Speaker, just a few numbers are needed to justify this measure.

The first number is $4.3 billion. That is the total amount of unresolved audit findings which 34 agencies could have but neglected to pursue according to the GAO in 1978.

The second number is $24.8 billion. That represents the 1981 GAO totals for unresolved audit findings by the same 34 agencies which were delinquent in 1978. While some of this money would not, if collected, result in Federal budgetary savings, a large chunk of it would in fact result in a taxpayer savings.

I want everyone to bear in mind that OMB adopted guidelines for audit resolution shortly after the 1978 GAO disclosure. If allowed, these guidelines would have, for the most part, corrected this problem.

But what happened with these guidelines? Absolutely nothing. Those guidelines were largely ignored.

This measure before us today would establish a system of internal accounting and administrative control in agencies to prevent future abuses similar to those I have just described.

The last number we should note is an address: 9th and Constitution Avenue. That is the address of the Department of Justice where the names of agency officials should be sent and reviewed if this legislation is ignored when passed.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote for this measure.

● Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this bill, because it provides some additional management tools to get at the problem of waste, fraud, and abuse.

As one who has been concerned about this problem for some time, and who was the author of the infamous Michel amendment cutting waste, fraud, and abuse in the old HEW by a billion dollars, I fully recognize the need for strengthening agency management. I also recognize that many times you have to force improvements on agency managers because they are often unwilling to admit error or change old practices.

GAO has found billions of dollars of waste over the years, but more often than not, once a finding goes to an agency, nothing happens. We simply cannot put up with that kind of inaction any longer.

The Reagan administration is fully committed to dealing with this problem, and I am certain we will see positive results. It may be that this bill is not really needed in view of this commitment. I know that OMB has problems with a couple of provisions which it views as circumventing its authority.

I would share that concern if I thought GAO was going to act in an arbitrary manner. My experience in dealing with GAO over the years, however, has been that they seek to work generally in an harmonious fashion with the administrative agencies rather than in a confrontational manner.

I would fully expect, if this bill is enacted and GAO is given authority to establish standards for internal accounting and administrative controls, that GAO will work cooperatively with OMB in developing standards which both agencies can agree upon. That is certainly the intent of this Member in voting for the bill, and I am sure it is also true for the Government Operations Committee.●

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMON). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BROOKS) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1526, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks, and to include extraneous material, on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

INSPECTOR GENERAL ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1981

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 2098) to amend the Inspector General Act of 1978 to establish offices of inspector general in certain departments and agencies, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 2098

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SHORT TITLE

SECTION 1. This Act may be cited as the "Inspector General Act Amendments of 1981".

ESTABLISHMENT

SEC. 2. (a) Section 2(1) of the Inspector General Act of 1978 is amended—

SPECIAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 4. (a) Section 8 of the Inspector General Act of 1978 is amended to read as follows:

"SPECIAL PROVISIONS

"SEC. 8. (a)(1) In addition to meeting the requirements of the first sentence of section 3(a) of this Act, no individual who is a member of the Armed Forces of the United States (whether in an active or reserve status) may be appointed to be the Inspector General of the Department of Defense.

"(2) The provisions of section 1385 of title 18, United States Code, shall not apply to audits and investigations conducted by, under the direction of, or at the request of the Inspector General of the Department of Defense to carry out the purposes of this Act.

"(b)(1) In addition to the other duties and responsibilities specified in this Act, the Inspector General of the Agency for International Development—

"(A) shall supervise, direct, and control all security activities relating to the programs and operations of that Agency, subject to the supervision of the Administrator of that Agency; and

"(B) to the extent requested by the Director of the United States International Development Cooperation Agency (after consultation with the Administator of the Agency for International Development), shall supervise, direct, and control all audit, investigative, and security activities relating to programs and operations within the United States International Development Cooperation Agency.

"(2) In addition to the Assistant Inspectors General provided for in section 3(d) of this Act, the Inspector General of the Agency for International Development shall, in accordance with applicable laws and regulations governing the civil service, appoint an Assistant Inspector General for Security who shall have the responsibility for supervising the performance of security activities relating to programs and operations of the Agency for International Development.

"(3) The semiannual reports required to be submitted to the Administrator of the Agency for International Development pursuant to section 5(b) of this Act shall also be submitted to the Director of the United States International Development Cooperation Agency.

"(4) In addition to the officers and employees provided for in section 6(a)(6) of this Act, members of the Foreign Service may, at the request of the Inspector General of the Agency for International Development, be assigned as employees of the Inspector General. Members of the Foreign Service so assigned shall be responsible solely to the Inspector General, and the Inspector General (or his or her designee) shall prepare the performance evaluation reports for such members.

"(5) In establishing and staffing field offices pursuant to section 6(c) of this Act, the Administrator of the Agency for International Development shall not be bound by overseas personnel ceilings established under the Monitoring Overseas Direct Employment policy.

"(6) The reference in section 7(a) of this Act to an employee of the establishment shall, with respect to the Inspector General of the Agency for International Development, be construed to include an employee of or under the United States International Development Cooperation Agency.

"(7) The Inspector General of the Agency for International Development shall be in addition to the officers provided for in section 624(a) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961.

"(8) As used in this Act, the term 'Agency for International Development' includes any successor agency primarily responsible for administering part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961.".

(b)(1) Section 624(g) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is repealed.

(2) Section 239(e) of such Act is amended by striking out "Auditor General" each of the 3 places it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "Inspector General".

PROTECTION OF CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION

SEC. 5. Section 5 of the Inspector General Act of 1978 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e)(1) Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize the public disclosure by any individual of any information which is—

"(A) specifically prohibited from disclosure by any other provision of law; or

"(B) specifically required by Executive order to be kept secret in the interest of national defense or the conduct of foreign affairs.

"(2) Nothing in this subsection or in any other provision of this Act shall be construed to authorize or permit the withholding of information from the Congress, or from any committee or subcommittee thereof.".

CONFORMING AND TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS

SEC. 6. (a) Section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"Inspector General, Department of Defense.

"Inspector General, Department of Justice.

"Inspector General, Department of State.

"Inspector General, Department of the Treasury.

"Inspector General, Agency for International Development.

"Inspector General, Environmental Protection Agency.

"Inspector General, General Services Administration.

"Inspector General, Small Business Administration.".

(b) Section 5316 of title 5, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking out the following:

"Auditor-General of the Agency for International Development."; and

(2) by striking out the following:

"Inspector General, Department of Commerce.

"Inspector General, Department of the Interior.

"Inspector General, Community Services Administration.

"Inspector General, Environmental Protection Agency.

"Inspector General, General Services Administration.

EFFECTIVE DATE

SEC. 7. This Act and the amendments made by this Act shall take effect October 1, 1981.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman from New York opposed to the bill?

Mr. STRATTON. I am, in its present form, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas (Mr. BROOKS) will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from New York (Mr. STRATTON) will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BROOKS).

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2098 will extend the provisions of the Inspector General Act of 1978 to four additional Federal establishments: The Departments of Defense, Justice, and the Treasury and the Agency for International Development.

During the last three Congresses, 16 statutory Offices of Inspector General have been established in the Federal Government with overwhelming congressional support. The agencies covered by H.R. 2098 were omitted from previous legislation to allow time for additional consideration. After a great deal of study and review, the Government Operations Committee, approved H.R. 2098 unanimously.

This bill will consolidate primary responsibility for auditing and internal investigations in each of the affected agencies in a single office, under the direction of a Presidentially appointed official who is required by law to give undivided attention to promoting economy and efficiency and combating fraud, waste, and program abuse. The bill also provides for more effective coordination of the work of numerous auditing and investigative units; guarantees agency auditors and investigators the authority and independence they must have to do their job; and helps to insure that agency heads and the Congress receive information needed to promote economy and efficiency and combat fraud, waste, and abuse in the Federal Government.

At the request of the Foreign Affairs Committee we are including certain special provisions regarding the Inspector General of the Agency for International Development, providing further details on his duties and responsibilities.

Other amendments adopted by the committee assure the protection of confidential and classified material, delete the Office of Professional Responsibility from the transfer provisions affecting the Department of Justice, assure the appointment of a civilian Inspector General for the Department of Defense, and establish the pay level for all Inspectors General at executive level IV.

It is particularly important that we establish a statutory Office of Inspector General for the Department of Defense. With a budget estimated at over $1.65 trillion over the next 5 years, the DOD has no one person with clear responsibility for coordinating the work of the 18,000 auditors and investigators functioning in scattered offices throughout the Department. A statutory Inspector General is urgently needed to provide such coordination and to assist the President, the Secretary of Defense, and the Congress in obtaining the most effective possible results from the sums the taxpayers are providing for defense.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the passage of H.R. 2098.

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I think the general idea of an Inspector General in the various departments to seek out waste and fraud is a good one. As a matter of fact, the Department of Defense and the various services have had Inspectors General for a long time. The very term "Inspector General" is borrowed from the military departments.

But what has disturbed me for some time is that when legislation affecting the Department of Defense is submitted in this House as this piece of legislation has been, for example, there seems never to be any sequential referral to the Committee on Armed Services, although the Committee on Armed Services has primary jurisdiction for the organization of the Department of Defense.

Yet let us put into a bill coming out of the Armed Services Committee the vaguest reference to foreign countries, such as giving foreign countries preference in manufacturing for the Department of Defense, and the Parliamentarian will insist that that bill has to be referred to the Foreign Affairs Committee, and there it languishes for heaven knows how long.

This particular bill, Mr. Speaker, was never referred to the Armed Services Committee, although it sets up, as the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Government Operations has just indicated, a statutory Inspector General. And what he means by statutory is that the Inspector General in the Department of Defense will not be under the direction of the Secretary of Defense. The Secretary of Defense is the head of the Department of Defense. The Secretary of Defense in time of war is in fact second in the military chain of command.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STRATTON. No, not until I complete my statement.

Mr. HORTON. Well, I think that is an inaccurate statement, and I would like to correct the statement.

Mr. STRATTON. Well, I decline to yield to the gentleman until I complete my statement, and then I will be very happy to allow him to correct me or make any other comments that he likes.

The Department of Defense has registered its views with members of the Armed Services Committee very strongly against this kind of an arrangement where the Secretary of Defense, the top man in the Department—and it is a military department, not a civilian department—and where the Secretary of Defense is second in the chain of military command after the President of the United States, as we all learned during those tense hours after the attempted assassination of the President of the United States—and yet that Secretary cannot direct or control this one person within his department, or even keep him out of highly classified contingency planning matters.

What is required, of course, is an analysis of what this proposal would do to the normal structure of the Department of Defense. To have that done the bill should properly have been referred to the Armed Services Committee. Since it has not, at the very least, it ought to specify that any Inspector General in the Department of Defense would be directly responsible to the Secretary of Defense, in contrast to the status of any Inspector General in any other department.

Mr. McCLORY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STRATTON. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. McCLORY. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I am sorry that this measure is being brought up on suspension because there are serious questions which have been raised by the Department of Justice with regard to the wisdom of this legislation which suggest the need for certain amendments. I note in the report that there was opposition expressed by the Deputy Attorney General in the course of the hearing. These objections seem to have been overridden by the committee in deciding that they want to report the bill in this form.

The Department of Justice is the investigative agency of our Government. It seems to me that with this legislation we will have an investigator investigating the investigator. There will be overlap and duplication of authority and function, and it will be extremely awkward for the Department, as I understand it. For example, for an Inspector General to conduct an audit or an inspection in the course of an ongoing investigation could be very disruptive.

This bill affects not only decisions made in the Department of Justice but also discretionary authority exercised by the Department of Justice. That is the part to which the Attorney General is raising the most serious questions.

I am reluctant to rise in opposition to a measure which has so many overall benefits and is so well intentioned, but I think that the committee has gone a little overboard in undertaking to include an Inspector General for the Department of Justice.

The problems addressed by this bill generally have already been addressed by the Department of Justice. Even before the 1978 act the Department established the Office of Professional Responsibility, which currently performs the internal investigative function. But now to pile on top of that an Inspector General seems to me to be an additional requirement which is going to cause confusion, difficulty, duplication, and perhaps some serious hardship in the Department.

I appreciate the gentleman yielding to me on this point to raise these questions with regard to this legislation. I do not want to say that this legislation should be totally defeated, because I do not feel that way. I think it should be amended, and I am sorry that we are not in the position where we can amend it. The measure has an additional route to travel and I suppose it will be brought in line in the course of its journey through the other body.

Mr. STRATTON. I appreciate the gentleman's contribution. It is another example of why this legislation was apparently not adequately studied and examined. It was reported out on the 14th of May and scheduled for suspension on the 18th of May, which hardly gave people the time to examine the implications.

Mr. McCLORY. I concur in those sentiments and I regret that H.R. 2098 is being considered under the suspension procedure which does not permit amendments to be offered from the floor. I agree that this legislation is being considered in some haste. This is unfortunate particularly with respect to the fundamental changes being made with respect to the Justice Department.

For several reasons, I question the wisdom of passage of H.R. 2098 in its present form.

There has not been adequate time for the Members to review either the bill as reported by the Committee on Government Operations, or the report accompanying the bill. In fact, as of Friday, May 15, 1981, there were no printed copies of the report available. As reported by the committee H.R. 2098 creates a fundamental change in several departments, particularly in the Department of Justice.

When Congress passed the Inspector General Act of 1978, it deliberately left out those agencies with law enforcement responsibilities. Since a primary purpose of the Justice Department in law enforcement, the 1978 act recognized that the Attorney General is the Nation's chief law enforcement officer. The act gave further recognition to this since it required all Inspectors General to report promptly to the Attorney General any suspected violations of Federal law in their agencies.

Unlike the original act, H.R. 2098 makes no differentiation between the Attorney General and the other Cabinet Secretaries. It does not recognize the need to have one individual, the Attorney General, responsible for the establishment of law enforcement priorities and the carrying out of these priorities. The blanket extension of the 1978 statutory scheme would place an independent officer, separate and apart of the Attorney General, to review the programs and responsibilities of the Department of Justice.

In that the programs and responsibilities of the Department of Justice include the enforcement of the Nation's laws and the representation of the Federal Government in the courts of the United States, H.R. 2098 would permit an Inspector General to review and challenge many basic discretionary determinations. Such matters would include how many agents are assigned to a particular investigation, the length of a particular investigation, the use in a particular instance of prosecutorial discretion, whether a case should be settled, or whether an appeal should be taken.

Additionally, the Inspector General could potentially disrupt an ongoing criminal investigation. As the Inspector General has independent investigatory responsibility, unrestricted by either the supervision of the Attorney General or the overall responsibilities which guide the Attorney General, there will be no need for an Inspector General to weigh the ultimate cost of any investigation he chooses to undertake. The potential for disruption is real since it is not uncommon for complaints against agents to surface during the course of an investigation. It is also likely that these complaints will come from individuals who are motivated to disrupt an investigation.

H.R. 2098 makes no attempt to structure the 1978 statutory scheme to the unique responsibilities of the Department of Justice. The Department of Justice, unlike other agencies in the Federal Government with an Inspector General, administers almost no grant programs. By creating an Inspector General at the Department of Justice, Congress will be creating an officer who will be reviewing basic discretionary determinations, not decisions or conduct measured by objective standards. Congress will be creating a "surrogate" Attorney General.

The blanket extension, in its present form, of the Inspector General Act of 1978 to the Department of Justice will not combat waste, fraud, and abuse. It will only serve to disrupt and distort present mechanisms devoted to such efforts.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STRATTON. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. HORTON. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

The gentleman stated that the Inspector General would not be under the control of the Secretary of Defense. I would like to read to the gentleman from Public Law 95-453, section 3, which is Appointment and Removal of Officers. The initial sentence and then the second sentence:

> Each Inspector General shall report to and be under the general supervision of the head of the establishment involved or, to the extent such authority is delegated, the officer next in rank below such head, but shall not report to, or be subject to supervision by, any other officer of such establishment. Neither the head of the establishment nor the officer next in rank below such head shall prevent or prohibit the Inspector General from initiating, carrying out, or completing any audit or investigation, or from issuing any subpena during the course of any audit or investigation.

The language is very clear. He is under the supervision. He cannot independently because he is nominated by the President, confirmed by the Senate and he is, according to the law, required to complete audits or investigations on his own.

The gentleman made some reference to the fact that this was brought up under suspension and he regrets it, et cetera.

The point is this bill is almost identical. We made some changes in deference to the Department of Defense and also to the Attorney General. But basically this bill was brought up under suspension and passed unanimously in the last Congress.

Mr. STRATTON. This happens to be a different Congress. The gentleman is a member of the party of the incumbent President, is he not?

Mr. HORTON. That is right and I am proud of it.

Mr. STRATTON. Has the gentleman been in touch with the Secretary of Defense of his own party with respect to this?

Mr. HORTON. That is right, we talked to the Defense Department.

Mr. STRATTON. Did the gentleman talk to the Secretary?

Mr. HORTON. I have not personally talked to the Secretary. He did not call. I would have been happy to talk with him. As a matter of fact, when the Department of Defense people came in, I suggested I would be happy to talk with Mr. Weinberger or Mr. Carlucci. I have talked to OMB and to the Director there in connection with this and they support it.

Mr. STRATTON. Of course, the gentleman has read from the statute and he has the advantage on me. He is a lawyer. I am not a lawyer. I only spent 4 weeks at Harvard Law School, as the gentleman knows, although I picked up a lot of information at that brief time.

But I was visited last Thursday by William Howard Taft, I don't know whether it was Mr. Taft the fourth or the fifth, of that illustrious name, but he is the very able General Counsel of the Department of Defense. He told me he was coming over at the request of the Secretary of Defense. He was deeply disturbed by this legislation for the very point that I have made. Maybe I have not covered all of the legal niceties that would respond to the section of law that the gentleman read. Mr. Taft has examined this legislation. He is a lawyer and he says it does not meet the requirements of the Secretary of Defense.

So I would think the House of Representatives ought not to rush into passing this kind of legislation, particularly when there are also objections from the gentleman from Illinois, my friend (Mr. MCCLORY), but should instead talk to the Departments concerned and perhaps even talk to the Armed Services Committee, which after all has the authority for any reorganization of the Department of Defense, particularly adding another statutory official in the Department of Defense confirmed by the Senate.

I might add that Mr. Taft told me the reason the Department of Defense had not been able to come to visit members of the Committee on Armed Services—and he has now conferred with the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. DICKINSON), and with the gentleman from Texas (Mr. WHITE) from the same delegation as the distinguished chairman of the full committee—was because the Office of Management and Budget refused to allow the Defense Department to register their objections to our committee.

Our friend and former colleague, Dave Stockman, is pulling his rank down there apparently, but finally they got——

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STRATTON. No, I want the gentleman to get the whole story first because I think I might change the gentleman's mind.

Mr. Stockman was apparently pulling his rank but finally—I do not know in response to what kind of a telephone call—he told Mr. Taft it was OK to go up and bring this to the attention of members of the Committee on Armed Services.

As the only member of that distinguished committee that I can see on the floor today I felt I ought to take the responsibility for bringing this matter to the attention of my colleagues. Not many of them are here today, but I am sure they will all read the RECORD tomorrow assiduously before we get to the vote. I do hope they will take these concerns of mine into consideration. Perhaps in the meantime, the gentleman might want to withdraw the bill and check with the Secretary of Defense.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STRATTON. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. HORTON. The gentleman does not want to withdraw the bill. I think it is a very good bill. I am pleased that the gentleman from New York (Mr. STRATTON) was on the floor. As he knows, I have the highest regard for him personally and for his diligence on behalf of the military of the United States.

Mr. STRATTON. I have a similar high regard for the gentleman.

Mr. HORTON. I share the gentleman's concern about the military. I was quite surprised to hear the gentleman say today that he had been visited by Mr. Taft. This bill was passed, I think, on May 7 out of the full Committee on Government Operations.

Mr. STRATTON. Apparently they figured they could not get anywhere with the gentleman's committee and that is why they came to their real friends on the Hill.

Mr. HORTON. But they never gave me the courtesy of even calling or talking to me. When the representatives from Defense came to see me, I said I would be happy personally to talk with Mr. Weinberger or Mr. Carlucci or Mr. Taft IV, who is the counsel, as the gentleman indicated.

I was in my office ever since the 7th of May. I was not in my office last Friday. I was in the district office in Rochester, but I could have been reached by telephone. I was in my office all morning, and to this very minute I have not heard from any of the people that the gentleman mentioned.

So I think perhaps they are trying to perhaps get some people who are perhaps more sympathetic to their approach to this. I must say as I understood it, basically they were in accord with the concept, but they want to have the Inspector General under the thumb of the Secretary of Defense, which I do not think is appropriate.

Mr. STRATTON. I thought the gentleman just read me a part of the statute that indicated that the Inspector General was responsible to the Secretary of Defense. That is all they want. The term "under the thumb" is pejorative.

Mr. HORTON. They do not want that in. They want to take it out.

Mr. STRATTON. This is precisely the point that ought to be examined by the Committee on Armed Services which is responsible for the operation of the Department of Defense. If we get into another war God forbid, and they do not function very adequately, who are the American people going to blame? They are going to blame our committee, not the gentleman's committee.

Let me make another comment because I am afraid my time is running out.

The gentleman said the people from Defense apparently were running around trying to get somebody that they thought would be more sympathetic. Let me say that my information this morning—and it did not discourage me—was that Defense called up and said they despaired of getting anybody who could reflect their point of view here in the House of Representatives and so they were going over to the other body where they would hope to have the opportunity to amend the bill satisfactorily.

As I say, I felt the House ought to have a share in this operation. But the other body is controlled by the gentleman's party and the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Armed Services in the other body is a member of the gentleman's party and I do not think that is a bad place for them to want to go.

Mr. HORTON. If the gentleman will yield further, I am not out of step with my party, because the Office of Management and Budget is very much in favor of this bill and testified in favor of the bill. The gentleman from New York (Mr. STRATTON) voted for Public Law 95-452 which has the language I just read which applies to all the Inspectors General that we just appointed.

I am sure the gentleman does not want to have an exception made just for the Department of Defense as it relates to the requirement that the Inspector General shall be under the general supervision of the head of the establishment involved. I do not think the gentleman wants that changed.

Mr. STRATTON. That is exactly what I think should be done. I think the Department of Defense ought to be run in a military way. That is what it is set up to do. We should not have an Inspector General who is a loose cannon running around without reporting and letting the Secretary of Defense know what he is doing. But that is essentially what this bill would provide.

I did not understand the bill as clearly last year because the Secretary of Defense at that time was apparently not worried about this sort of thing. But if anybody has a sharp eye for cutting a budget and cutting the fat out of expenditures, it is, I am convinced, the present Secretary of Defense, Mr. Weinberger.

I believe that to have Mr. Weinberger in overall control of any Inspector General would be to the benefit of the Department of Defense as well as to the American taxpayers. So I would hope that this bill is defeated on suspension on tomorrow so that we can amend it in the proper course.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. FOUNTAIN).

Mr. FOUNTAIN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to associate myself with the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Government Operations, Mr. BROOKS, and the distinguished ranking minority member of this committee, Mr. HORTON, in what they have said in support of H.R. 2089. Also I am delighted to have been one of the coauthors of this important legislation, probably the most desperately needed legislation this Congress will have the opportunity to pass judgment on.

Let me say at the outset that, unlike the gentleman from New York (Mr. STRATTON) I did not go to Harvard Law School. I graduated from a small law school—at least at that time—at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N.C.—incidentally the oldest State-supported university in the country. And I might add that we have had and still have, I am told, a good law school. In fact, we used to supply Harvard with some of its law professors from time to time, on an exchange basis, of course; but I do not think lawyers are any more knowledgeable or qualified about the need to eliminate waste, inefficiency, extravagance, and fraud in government that is the average citizen.

H.R. 2098 will provide very badly needed Offices of Inspector General in four additional establishments, as has already been pointed out—Defense, Justice, Treasury, and the Agency for International Development. With some modifications made to respond to concerns of the agencies involved, this is basically the same legislation approved without a dissenting vote in the House last November.

Two of the agencies covered by H.R. 2098 opposed a similar bill last year. The Department of Defense made the rather amazing argument that establishment of the Department of Inspector General would threaten civilian control of the Department, a contention the committee concluded was totally unfounded.

The Justice Department argued that its internal audit units were already adequately staffed, and there was no need for an Office of Inspector General.

However, the Comptroller General told the committee that GAO was very concerned about the level of staffing for internal audit at Justice, and pointed out that the Department had reorganized or moved its internal audit operations six times in the past 13 years. The committee found, moreover, that overall responsibility for the detection of waste, fraud, and error had been assigned—as a secondary mission—to a unit with a total staff of only eight people, six of whom were lawyers.

This year, speaking for the administration, Edwin L. Harper, Deputy Director of the Office of Management and Budget, assured the committee that President Reagan supports the type of legislatively mandated Inspector General called for by H.R. 2098. The administration has taken the position that it supports this bill in the House, and if they want to propose further amendments, they will take a look at it when it gets to the Senate. On behalf of the administration, Mr. Harper emphasized in his testimony that: "We believe that the key to the strength of legislatively mandated Inspectors General is their enhanced ability * * *."

Get this, Mr. STRATTON, "their enhanced ability to operate objectively and independently."

The Defense Department has not raised the issue of civilian control this year. However, while professing support of the IG concept, DOD stated that a statutory Inspector General for the Department must be subject—listen to this—must be subject to the authority, direction, and control of the Secretary, so that the Secretary could prohibit the Inspector General from looking into matters which the Secretary did not want investigated.

You cannot have an independent Inspector General, with the power to conduct audits and investigations and recommend prosecutions if he cannot do anything without permission of the Secretary.

The Justice Department also indicated that it would support a statutory Inspector General this year, but only if the IG—get this—had no authority to look into matters involving, "law enforcement, litigation, and collections."

Why have an Inspector General at all?

The change requested by the Department of Defense would have destroyed the independence of its Inspector General. The one sought by the Justice Department would have deprived their Inspector General of jursidiction over almost every activity of that Department, with the possible exception of the procurement of office supplies.

The committee found these conditions unacceptable, and H.R. 2098 continues to provide for independent Inspectors General with authority to look into all operations of the agencies concerned for the purpose of combating fraud, waste, and mismanagement.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina has expired.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 additional minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. FOUNTAIN. The Justice Department has unquestionably devoted a great deal of effort in recent years to insuring that its employees meet high standards of professional and personal integrity. Unfortunately, a high degree of integrity, while essential, does not assure a high degree of effectiveness, and there is ample evidence that the Justice Department operations have suffered from serious mismanagement problems. I would like to include with my remarks brief summaries of several recent GAO reports documenting some of these problems.

Fraud, waste, and mismanagement are certainly not limited to the civilian agencies of the Federal Government. As one who supports a strong national defense and has never voted against a defense bill, I am painfully aware of convincing evidence that there is as much waste and extravagance in the Defense Department as in most of the other Federal agencies combined.

Last August, for example, the House Republican Study Committee, which is chaired by Representative JOHN ROUSSELOT, a distinguished and very able Member of this body from the great State of California, issued a special report on "Waste, Fraud, and Mismanagement in the Federal Government."

The report listed 45 GAO reports relating to military programs and operations which, according to the committee, identified specified unnecessary expenditures resulting from waste, fraud, abuse, or mismanagement totaling more than $16 billion. The GAO reports were issued over an 18-month period, from January, 1979, to July 1980.

Further evidence of waste in DOD operations is described in an April 27, 1981, article in U.S. News & World Report, entitled "Billions Down the Pentagon Drain," which I would like to include with my remarks.

A strong national defense, Mr. Speaker and Members of this body, is crucial to our security in these perilous times. Every dollar that is wasted or stolen is a dollar not available to strengthen our Armed Forces. Mismanagement can be costly in the civilian agencies; in the Defense Department, it can endanger our very survival as a free nation.

A vote for H.R. 2098 may turn out to be the most important vote any of us will have an opportunity to cast during the 97th Congress in favor of a stronger national defense.

Mr. Speaker, at this point I insert brief summaries of several reports to the Congress by the Comptroller General of the United States, and an article from U.S. News & World Report entitled, "Billions Down the Pentagon Drain":

[Report to the Congress by the Comptroller General of the United States, Feb. 27, 1978]

U.S. ATTORNEYS DO NOT PROSECUTE MANY SUSPECTED VIOLATORS OF FEDERAL LAWS

U.S. attorneys decline to prosecute a larger number of criminal complaints because of heavy workloads or insufficient staff and or because the complaint does not warrant the cost of prosecution.

U.S. attorneys have established their own priorities and guidelines for handling the large number of complaints. However, these do not reflect a uniform national policy nor is there assurance that they are fair.

This report describes problems which result from differing decisions by U.S. attorneys to prosecute. For example:

Suspected violations of certain criminal statutes are generally not being prosecuted.

Suspected violations of other criminal statutes are being prosecuted in one U.S. attorney's district but not in another.

Several law enforcement and regulatory agencies are sometimes receiving inadequate support from the Department of Justice.

GAO recommends consideration of alternatives to prosecution.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE SHOULD COORDINATE CRIMINAL AND CIVIL REMEDIES TO EFFECTIVELY PURSUE FRAUD IN FEDERAL PROGRAMS

The Department of Justice is not making full use of civil remedies to combat fraud. Until a criminal case is complete, it gives little consideration, if any, to potential civil remedies. This failure to take timely action weakens the total prosecutive effort, making it less efficient and reducing the potential for recovering fraud losses.

Problems with settlement procedures and the management and enforcement of fraud collections have prevented Justice from maximizing civil recoveries and realizing the deterrent value of aggressively enforced remedies.

GAO recommends that civil remedies be made part of a coordinated strategy to combat fraud and that improvements be made in the settlement and collection of fraud debts. Justice agrees that coordination is beneficial but disagrees with some of GAO's recommendations to achieve it.

This review was requested by Representative Elizabeth Holtzman.

ASSET FORFEITURE—A SELDOM USED TOOL IN COMBATING DRUG TRAFFICKING

Billions of dollars of profits are generated by organized crime; drug trafficking revenues alone are estimated at $60 billion annually. Even though legislation designed to attack these profits through asset forfeiture was enacted more than a decade ago, forfeiture of criminal assets has been miniscule.

The primary reason for the limited use of asset forfeiture has been the lack of leadership by the Department of Justice. The Department has not given investigators and prosecutors guidance and incentives to pursue forfeiture. Also, emerging case law indicates the statutes may be flawed. GAO recommends that the Congress clarify and broaden the scope of the criminal forfeiture statutes and that the Attorney General improve forfeiture program management.

[By the Comptroller General of the United States—Report to the Congress, June 4, 1980]

THE LAW ENFORCEMENT EDUCATION PROGRAM IS IN SERIOUS FINANCIAL DISARRAY

The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, through its Law Enforcement Education Program, gave $278 million in loans and grants for higher education to individuals working or planning to work in law enforcement. Inadequate controls and inaccurate records caused financial and administrative breakdowns. GAO estimates that

84 percent of those billed did not pay,

$18.2 million currently owed will not be collected,

About $2 million that should have been collected was not collected during one quarter of fiscal 1977, and

About 90 percent of the bills were incorrect.

In addition, GAO found that the reported loans receivable balance of $149.6 million for fiscal 1978 was overstated by $72.4 million. (In May 1980, the program was transferred to the new Department of Education.)

This report recommends improved controls which could increase collections, restore accounting system integrity, and guard against future problems.

PROSPECTS DIM FOR EFFECTIVELY ENFORCING IMMIGRATION LAWS

The inability of the Immigration and Naturalization Service to effectively enforce immigration laws is underscored by the estimated 5 million illegal aliens living in the United States. The actions necessary to enforce immigration laws are known—sealing the borders, adopting employer sanctions, and issuing worker identification cards. These steps are, at best, highly controversial.

A Select Commission on Immigration and Refugee Policy has been established to evaluate the immigration situation and to recommend improvements. Its recommendations and any resulting congressional action will not be effective unless the Government improves its ability to enforce immigration laws. Improvement is uncertain, however, because of many obstacles.

BILLIONS DOWN THE PENTAGON DRAIN

The Pentagon—the only government department immune to President Reagan's budget-cutting ax—is under pressure to clean up its act.

Even the most ardent supporters of greatly increased spending to strengthen the nation's defenses are turning their guns on massive waste, fraud and mismanagement that send billions of taxpayer dollars down the military drain every year.

They warn that the Reagan administration's proposal to allocate 1.5 trillion dollars to new ships, planes, tanks, missile systems and other programs over the next five years will feed the Pentagon's apparent penchant for squandering money on a staggering scale.

The scope and magnitude of the excesses attributed to the Defense Department are underscored by a random sampling of allegations documented by official investigators—

Failure to equip Navy missiles with a $2 firing circuit leaves millions of dollars' worth of these weapons unusable.

Fraud and incompetent accounting in one Army military office resulted in a loss of 531 million dollars.

Inefficient operation and support of the Navy's new F-18 warplane threaten unnecessary spending estimated at 4.1 billion dollars.

Military reservists pocket some 744 million dollars in payments for exercises they never attend.

Upkeep of marginally useful military bases eats up about 443 million dollars annually.

Slipshod billing practices have forced the Pentagon to pick up the tab for 1 billion dollars in foreign arms-sales costs which should have been billed to customers abroad.

A minimum estimate of the cost of military waste is put at 15 billion dollars a year in a study issued by congressional Republicans, who are noted for their staunch advocacy of a strong military posture. Others say the loss is billions higher.

Some congressional leaders, preparing to vote billions of additional defense dollars, are fighting mad over the waste issue. Asks House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill (D-Mass.): "Should we be expected to rubberstamp [Reagan's] defense budget . . . while the Pentagon leases computers for 1 billion dollars a year that it could have purchased for $200,000?"

The challenges are coming from both the conservatives and the liberals. Senators Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) and Howard Metzenbaum (D-Ohio), in a joint letter to Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, complain that "waste and inefficiency have, over the years, become a way of life for too many in the [Defense] department. The nation cannot afford to permit this situation to perpetuate itself any longer."

What is the Pentagon's defense against these charges?

For one thing, Defense officials argue, a measure of waste in unavoidable in an enterprise of such gargantuan size and sweep. They note that the proposed U.S. military budget for the fiscal year starting October 1—some 222 billion dollars—is more than double the gross national product of India.

Further, Pentagon officials maintain that political pressures exerted by Congress lead to multibillion-dollar excesses beyond the control of military managers—for example, demands to keep superfluous military bases open and to produce unnecessary weapons for the benefit of local defense contractors.

Finally, these apologist contend, the very nature of a nation's defense effort inevitably leads to what is viewed as waste by ordinary business standards. To quote former Defense Secretary Harold Brown: "Individual corporate mistakes can have catastrophic financial effects for many people. But mistaken defense policies can kill us all. That alters the nature of the management process."

"Cap the Knife." Whatever the validity of the explanations, Defense Secretary Weinberger, whose budget-cutting propensities earned him the nickname "Cap the Knife" during the Nixon administration, acknowledges the severity of the waste problem at the Pentagon. And he insists that he is mounting an attack that will result in billions of dollars of savings—a claim that veteran Pentagon observers say must be treated skeptically on the basis of the past record.

What follows is a full picture of the problem that emerges from a wide-ranging inquiry undertaken by U.S. News & World Report and based on a review of government studies and documents as well as interviews with specialists in the field.

WHITE-COLLAR CRIME IN THE MILITARY

The most clear-cut abuses of defense funds stem from fraud, embezzlement and theft. Experts estimate that chiselers skim millions of dollars off the Pentagon budget each year, though no one knows the magnitude of the problem.

One well-established target for ripoff artists: Post exchanges on military bases that function as general stores for uniformed personnel. According to a recent report from the General Accounting Office, Congress's investigative arm, some procurement officers are known to have received kickbacks of up to $150,000 from suppliers in return for inflating orders. Federal courts in Texas last year convicted 15 military men and civilians in a military-exchange fraud case. Six more individuals are under investigation.

These are not isolated cases. A probe of questionable purchasing practices within the Air Force's retail exchange system covered 66 of the system's 372 procurement officers, according to one government report. Abuses of varying degree have been confirmed in 23 cases to date.

Investigators admit they probably detect only a fraction of the embezzlement that goes on—and just as worrisome, they say, is the outright theft of merchandise, hardware and even cash, made easier by lax Pentagon bookkeeping. Inspectors estimate that thieves make off with millions of gallons of military fuel each year, taking advantage of accounting loopholes. A recent spot check of 118 companysize Army units found that 30 million dollars in supplies was missing, some of it presumably stolen.

Careless handling of funds is cited as an open invitation to thieves. For example: During a surprise visit to offices of the Army's Military District of Washington, auditors discovered about 500 checks worth $300,000 lying around on desk tops.

Overseas, too, auditors find scams at U.S. military installations. One case cited in an offical report: "Widespread collusion and bribery" riddling the supply system at the Navy's vast shipyard in Yokosuka, Japan. Estimated losses: Millions of dollars.

MISMANAGEMENT

Costly as such activities are, they pale in comparison with the sums squandered by profligate spending and mismanagement. Officials estimate that billions' worth of materials, equipment and fuel are wasted each year through needless purchases, unnecessary operations and inept supervision.

Investigators say the Navy is among the worst offenders. According to the House Appropriations Committee, for instance, the Pearl Harbor Naval Shipyard buys 40 percent more material than it needs for ship repairs—and then throws much of it away. In the Navy's eight shipyards, the overbuying runs to 35.5 million dollars, or about 16 percent of all orders. In one case, government auditors found that the Navy approved the purchase of 5.3 million dollars in parts for ship overhauls at the Philadelphia Navy Yard—even though the yard already had 11 million dollars in identical items on hand.

Elsewhere, the Navy simply permits costly equipment to deteriorate for lack of shelter. Example: Despite plentiful inside storage space, 240 propellers, shafts and components at the Oakland Naval Supply Center had to be junked because they had been left uncovered. Cost: Eight million dollars.

The other services come in for their share of criticism, too. The Air Force, for instance, still bases many of its giant C-5A transport aircraft in California even though they are used primarily on transatlantic hauls. Result: Empty planes crisscross the U.S., gobbling up 73 million gallons of fuel and 40 million dollars a year in the process.

On a wider scale, some 6.9 billion dollars' worth of aircraft are being used for unjustified, noncombat purposes, GAO estimates. The investigative agency notes, for example, that Air National Guard aircraft were used to haul military personnel to a bowling tournament in Tennessee—at a cost of $109,000. Another example is the Navy's use of sophisticated antisubmarine-warfare planes for such routine missions as ferrying parts to repair shops. As one exasperated officer says: "This is like using a Cadillac to deliver mail."

Investigative reports are crammed with citations of logistical waste. One Army facility employs five people full time to maintain and manage 17 vehicles, which are driven less than 100 miles per month. The Air Force is spending 1 billion dollars to outfit 105 bases with extra computers, even though the need for them has been questioned. The military, for lack of proper inventory control, wastes 18 million dollars each year repairing inexpensive parts already in stock. The Pentagon forfeits millions of dollars through failure to recover gold, silver, platinum and other precious metals from property being junked.

Then, there is controversy over the prices the military agrees to pay for some supply items. One former Pentagon official sums it up this way: "There are still 50-cent screws that cost 50 dollars."

THE HIGH COST OF POLITICS

Congress, too emerges as a prime instigator of military waste, pursuing its desire to satisfy the voters and look after local economies. Military men, in fact, claim Pentagon spending could be cut by 5 billion dollars a year if the lawmakers would put the nation's interests before political considerations.

One classic problem is the legislators' habit of forcing the military to buy weapons it does not want. Congress, for example, lays out millions of dollars each year for A-7 warplanes, built in Texas, even though the Pentagon has not requested these planes for years. Critics assert that at least one factor in the A-7 appropriations is the desire of Texas legislators to protect 2,200 assembly-line jobs.

Congress's hand is most apparent in the stifling of Pentagon efforts to trim the military-base system, which far exceeds peacetime requirements. Over the past five years alone, the Defense Department has suggested 634 base closings or reductions in activity. These moves would have eliminated 30,500 military and civilian jobs and chopped expenditures by 443 million dollars annually. Thus far, most of the facilities are still open, protected by congressmen who see them as vital sources of employment for constituents, rather than as examples of military extravagance.

This vignette underscores the point: One retired general recalls that his first assignment as a junior officer was to draw up a plan to close a particular facility. It was still operating when he left active service decades later. In fact, it was the general's last command.

Still, the Pentagon keeps trying to reduce its sprawling base complex. Weinberger's aides are working on a plan to make cuts of between 750 million and 1 billion dollars in the system. The political outlook: Grim. Says a Senate insider: "Base closings are not a good place to start with these congressmen. They'll clobber him."

INTERSERVICE RIVALRIES

In addition, bureaucratic infighting within the armed services has created a convoluted, overlapping management system worthy of Rube Goldberg.

The Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines all strive to maintain their own logistics and training systems, even though consolidation clearly would produce dramatic savings. Some results of this crazy-quilt arrangement, as uncovered by federal investigators:

The Army and the Navy each run helicopter-training schools, costing the Pentagon 63 million dollars a year more than the expense of a combined school.

There are four separate air forces to maintain—one for each major service. Excess repair-depot costs are estimated at between 250 and 400 million dollars annually.

Ground-repair gear for maintenance of military aircraft is not standardized. Excess cost: 300 million dollars.

The services each insist on independent supply functions, which management experts say could be consolidated to provide common services to all. The cost of overlapping: Some 100 million dollars a year and 4,000 superfluous jobs.

The inefficiency is well illustrated by a situation in California, where seven major military bases operate within a 60-mile radius. Each has its own support systems for police, fire, maintenance, transportation and food service. Consolidation, according to the GAO, would trim costs by millions of dollars.

The mismanagement goes beyond duplicated effort. Defense analysts claim the Navy will waste 350 million dollars on spare parts for its F-18 warplanes by purchasing them years from now, rather than at the time the aircraft are produced. Similarly, congressional investigators assert that the Pentagon incurs pointless transportation costs by shipping fatigues and other battle clothing to sites hundreds of miles from the bases where they are used.

Bad personnel-management techniques are another target of Defense Department critics. The GAO maintains that 57 million dollars could be saved each year by substituting civilians for military personnel in various welfare and recreation jobs. Other analysts say the Pentagon could save 41.5 million dollars in payroll and other personnel costs just by processing bad-conduct discharges expeditiously.

COSTLY WEAPONS

Far and away the biggest money burner comes in buying weapons, where waste and inefficiencies are assuming mind-boggling proportions. If the Pentagon could achieve even modest improvements in this field, says the Congressional Budget Office, it could save some 16 billion dollars over the next five years. Few in the Department of Defense dispute this estimate.

The problem is evident in the spiraling cost of new weaponry. In one report to Congress, the Pentagon concedes that the price tag for 47 major programs soared by 47 billion dollars during the last three months of 1980 alone. Examples: Costs for the F-18 fighter rose by 8.1 billion dollars; for the M1 tank, 5.9 billion dollars; for the Army's new infantry carrier, 5.3 billion dollars; for the Trident submarine, 2.9 billion dollars.

A chronic tendency to underestimate the impact of inflation is a major factor in the increases—but it is only one. Another reason, according to defense analysts: The Pentagon's habit of "stretching out" the completion of a weapons system—creating lower rates of construction that cancel out the economies of mass production. This alone pads the price of weaponry by an estimated 10 to 30 percent.

For example, the Air Force estimates that, by cutting production rates for its F-16 fighter from 15 to 8 per month, the Pentagon increased the total costs for the plane by 1.4 billion dollars. Such production "stretchouts" are taking an even greater toll on the Air Force's new TR-1 spy plane, whose price has nearly doubled from 9.3 million to 17.2 million apiece.

Compounding the effect of inefficiency are wasteful industrial practices, spawned largely by political indecision in Washington. Contractors are reluctant to commit billions for cost-saving mass purchases of materials and equipment because they're afraid some sudden switch in Pentagon priorities might leave them holding the bag. Such delays and administrative flip-flops seem certain to boost the cost of the Marine AV-8B Harrier jump jet by 1 billion dollars. The story is the same in many other weapons programs.

How much is lost each year through such inefficiencies? No one can hazard a guess. "It would be too frightening," says Gen. Alton Slay, former head of the Air Force Systems Command. "I am sure it is an astronomical figure."

Another major hemorrhage of Pentagon funds stems from faulty management of giant weapons programs. A classic example: The Trident submarine, an enormous missile-firing ship that was supposed to cost 900 million dollars.

Today, the price of the first Trident vessel has hit 1.2 billion, and it is more than two years behind schedule. The cost overrun and delay are chalked up to extensive repair and reworking necessary to make the sub seaworthy, but there is sharp disagreement as to who is at fault. The Navy blames the shipbuilder, General Dynamics Corporation. But company officials insist that the Navy furnished defective equipment and issued numerous design changes—more than 2,900 in the past three months alone.

Another example: The Army's new main battle tank. It has taken 18 years and three separate designs to produce a tank that was considered urgently needed in 1963. In the end, the entire project—including the false starts—will cost more than 21 billion dollars. That works out to 3 million for each of the 7,058 Abrams tanks that eventually will be produced—compared with the estimate of $420,000 for the version of the tank designed in 1963.

In store may be another program-management controversy, this one involving the Air Force's proposed CX transport—a giant workhorse the Pentagon wants for hauling troops and cargo to Persian Gulf hot spots. The GAO reports that the military has begun awarding contracts for the project, even though its own mobility-design studies are not yet completed. This, the GAO asserts, "could bring about a repeat of the cost-growth and performance problems of the C-5"—an earlier aircraft that ran millions of dollars over budget and requires extensive repairs to its flimsy wings.

Beyond production waste, there is mounting concern over the sheer cost of the Pentagon's love affair with high-technology equipment. Even some Pentagon officials profess to be worried about a practice known as "gold plating"—that is, paying extravagant amounts for small improvements in weapon capability.

Critics point to the Army's new infantry fighting vehicle. They say that while it packs more firepower than an older model, it cost six times as much and carries 50 percent fewer troops. Then there is the Air Force's hot F-15 interceptor: It is a complex, computerized marvel, but its operation and maintenance costs are twice those of the older, yet still highly capable, F-4 warplane.

Increasingly sophisticated weapons also generate higher training and support costs, one problem that may become critical in the years ahead. "Our philosophy of using emerging technology has generated a cost structure that is growing at a much faster rate than our budget," warns one unofficial Air Force study.

A sore spot. The record of waste is seen by some defense experts as the Pentagon's Achilles' heel when talk turns to vast new spending authority, and Defense Secretary Weinberger is well aware of it.

Accordingly, he has set a goal of saving 28.2 billion dollars by 1985 through increased competition for defense contracts, streamlining of supply systems and elimination of cost overruns in weapons programs. Another part of that effort: Adoption of new personnel policies that may trim up to 15 billion dollars from Pentagon manpower costs by 1986. The military services are also designing easier-to-maintain—and thus, less expensive—planes, tanks and ships.

For its part, Congress is considering a number of measures to make military procurement procedures more efficient. One possibility: Guaranteed funding of large weapons programs on a long-term basis as a means of encouraging contractors to modernize manufacturing facilities.

But skeptics point out that Defense secretaries and Congress have crusaded against the squandering of funds, and mismanagement in the Defense Department before, with little success. The experts say that Pentagon waste is easier to identify than to eliminate.

Politics, economic conditions, interservice rivalries, incompetence, greed, dishonesty—all have stymied attempts to crack down. Weinberger, with his reputation for wielding the budgetary knife, is determined to prove that he can beat the system and effectively combat waste in Pentagon spending. His success—or failure—could well determine future popular support for the big boosts in defense spending he claims are essential in the years ahead.

$2.6 BILLION FOR ADVICE—ANOTHER BOONDOGGLE?

Waste hunters are focusing on a new target in the Pentagon: Roughly 2.6 billion dollars spent every year by the Defense Department on private consultants.

A newly issued report from the General Accounting Office, a watchdog agency for Congress, concludes that much of that money is squandered on pointless jobs and that 71 percent of the projects should be done by the Defense Department itself.

A prime example of a contract that the GAO considers wasteful is the $43,843 paid to a private consultant to determine which issues should be called to the attention of the Defense Secretary.

Of 256 contracts examined in a spot check, the GAO found potential problems with all but one.

The fact that more than half of the jobs go to former Pentagon officials prompts the agency to question "the degree of influence used by former top-level officials in securing contracts." Example: A $294,000 contract to study alcohol and drug abuse that went to a consulting firm whose vice president formerly directed Pentagon drug and alcohol-abuse programs. Officials concede they have the expertise to do the work but went to outside consultants to insure an objective review.

The GAO report also critizes the fact that 80 percent of the contracts are awarded without competitive bidding and that many are renewed automatically—some for as many as 28 years. Investigators also are mystified by such projects as the $79,909 contract for analyzing "nonpecuniary factors in the federal approach to pay comparability and the feasibility of monetizing these nonpecuniary factors for consideration in the pay comparability process."

One member of Congress zeroing in on the billions spend for Defense consultants, Representative Geraldine A. Ferraro (D-N.Y.), warns: "When we're talking about spending more on defense and cutting services like transit aid, we'd better be getting our money's worth in a stronger military and not paying hotshot consultants to talk about a stronger military."

Mr. Speaker, I urge approval of this urgently needed legislation.

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FOUNTAIN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman yielding to me. The gentleman commented that it would be unconscionable to have in the Department of Defense an Inspector General who would not be able to prosecute and investigate crime and send to jail some guilty individual without having to check with the head of the Department. Is that not precisely what we have day after day as a regular rule in the Department of Justice? The Assistant Attorneys General do not undertake their operations without checking with the Attorney General. That is what the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MCCLORY) was objecting to just a moment ago.

Mr. FOUNTAIN. I would respond to the gentleman by saying that all of these cases have to be referred to the Department of Justice for prosecution.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. HORTON).

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to join my colleague from Texas in support of H.R. 2098, the Inspector General Act Amendments of 1981.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to support H.R. 2098, the Inspector General Act Amendments of 1981. Today, now that we have seen the concept at work in 16 of the 20 largest agencies and departments—and now that we have carefully and correctly evaluated the need for it in these last four entities—I am in total agreement that it is time to expand the existing law to cover the Departments of Defense, Treasury, and Justice, and the Agency for International Development.

When I look at the three departments and the agency in question today, I see four Federal entities, each with unique responsibilities and special functions. Despite their unique status, however, they are like every other department and agency in the sense that they are vulnerable to fraud, waste, and mismanagement. They need what was created in the 1978 act: Inspectors General who are responsible for conducting and supervising audits and investigations of agency activities, providing leadership in promoting efficiency and effectiveness within the agency, detecting and preventing fraud, abuse, and waste, and informing the agency head and Congress of problems and needed corrective actions.

The IG concept is a sound, workable concept that brings together the audit and investigative resources of an agency under a single official who reports directly to the head of the agency and to the Congress. That focal point and that kind of independence are lacking today at the Departments of Defense, Justice, and Treasury, and at the Agency for International Development.

The need for that kind of focal point is unmistakable at the Department of Defense, where some 18,000 auditors, investigators and inspectors struggle to pinpoint and eliminate waste and inefficiency. Their task is made more difficult by the fact that—despite the gargantuan size of the Department—no single individual has clear, unquestioned responsibility or authority for coordinating the work of the 18,000 waste hunters. I understand that an administrative decision has been made to create within the Department an Assistant to the Secretary for Review and Oversight and that this new official will have some of the duties and responsibilities of a statutory Inspector General. This new official, however, will be solely under the control and direction of the Secretary, will not report to the Congress, and will always be in danger of having his office dismantled administratively just as easily as it was created administratively. For those reasons, a statutory Inspector General, with the powers and duties outlined by H.R. 2098, would in my view be much more preferable and much more effective.

The Departments of Justice and Treasury also need statutory Inspectors General. I recognize that each has unique law enforcement roles and that each has taken significant steps to combat fraud, waste, and mismanagement. Still, I firmly believe that a properly conceived Inspector General in each Department could function smoothly and effectively without compromising or negating the work of the fine professionals who currently staff the Office of Professional Responsibility at the Department of Justice or the Office of the Inspector General at the Department of the Treasury.

Finally, H.R. 2098 will bring under the statutory IG umbrella the current statutory Inspector General at the Agency for International Development. This position was created late last year by the Foreign Assistance Act, but it was not created fully in line with the omnibus Inspector General Act of 1978. H.R. 2098 will remedy that oversight and will give us an Inspector General at AID who reports to the Congress as well as to the director of the Agency.

If we are truly to wage a war against fraud and abuse, Mr. Speaker, it is essential that each agency and department operate with maximum efficiency and economy. It is my firm belief that H.R. 2098 will provide the legal framework from which independent Inspectors General can operate effectively in these last four major Federal entities.

For these and other reasons, Mr. Speaker, I support H.R. 2098 and urge its approval.

□ 1300

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HORTON. I am very happy to yield to the gentleman from New York if I have sufficient time.

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I say to the gentleman that I did not have too much time myself. I only had 5 minutes.

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Speaker, I would just like to say for the record that I hope the RECORD will note that on this particular issue this Member from the Democratic side of the aisle was the only one in the Chamber today who would stand up in support of the Republican administration's Secretary of Defense.

Mr. HORTON. But, Mr. Speaker, I noted that the gentleman did not stand up when the Secretary of Defense was a Democrat in the last administration, because we had the bill up on the floor then and the gentleman did not say a word.

Mr. STRATTON. Well, according to the whip notice, the DOD was not included in that legislation.

Mr. HORTON. I will say to the gentleman that it was included the last time.

Mr. STRATTON. Well, according to the whip notice it was not included in the bill.

Mr. HORTON. Well, I do not know where the gentleman got his understanding.

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman is not trying to obscure the fact that on one of the significant Republican issues this Member was the only one willing to back up the Republican Secretary of Defense.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from New York (Mr. HORTON) has expired.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BROOKS).

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I would just say to my distinguished friend that I believe that the President of the United States, who happens to be a Republican at this time, is committed to having an Inspector General. He has told me personally he is for it, he wants it done, and he believes in it.

His administration people were in my office this morning. They did not say they were opposed to it; they said they were for it. They did not ask for a special exemption for the Defense Department. They do not think they need to get one. I do not think they will get one, and I do not think we ought to give them one.

I will say that I commend my distinguished and beloved friend, the gentleman from New York (Mr. STRATTON), for defending the Republicans, and with that diligence one would think they would send him a pair of cuff links. I think that is the least the gentleman ought to get, because even the Republicans know that this is not a wise move and it is not supported by the Republican Party. They are supporting the Inspector General's position, and approval of these four agencies is what they want done. It is what I want done, and I wanted it done before they got in office. They endorse it now, and we ought to pass it again and send it to the Senate.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROOKS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, the cuff links are from the President, Mr. Reagan. I do not think it is appropriate that the gentleman from New York (Mr. STRATTON) get the cuff links, because he is opposed to the bill. Mr. Reagan is for it, so it is not appropriate for him to get the cuff links.

Mr. BROOKS. He is going to get them from the Defense Department.

Mr. HORTON. But they come from the President.

Mr. BROOKS. And they are 18 carat.

● Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2098, the Inspector General Act Amendments of 1981.

As a nonmember of the Government Operations Committee, I took the unusual step of cosponsoring this committee legislation in the firm belief that no agency or function of Government should be immune from the kind of scrutiny uniquely provided by Inspectors General. Many of us on the short side of the stick during the recent budget debate have long complained of an apparent double standard by which fraud and abuse in domestic social programs are widely trumpeted, often beyond their dollar significance, while excesses in other Departments, notably Defense, have often gone unpublicized, or worse, undiscovered. A GAO study indicating potential Defense Department savings of $14.7 billion is but the most recent indication of our failure to fully address waste in the Pentagon budget.

Few of us believe that H.R. 2098, or any single piece of legislation, can completely remedy the situation, or even that there is sufficient, identifiable waste to fully compensate for the very real budget cuts which the administration and Congress have endorsed. Still, by establishing non-partisan, independent, and depoliticized Inspectors General at the Departments of Defense, Justice, State, and Treasury and at the Agency for International Development—agencies which, together, comprise 42 percent of the fiscal year 1982 Federal budget, this bill makes an important contribution to the ongoing fight against Government waste—a fight which needs to be waged with equal rage and fervor, and across the board. I commend Chairman BROOKS and Representative HORTON for their efforts, and am proud to associate myself with them.●

● Mr. BEDELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2098, a bill which would bring a greater degree of accountability in Government, and greater responsibility of taxpayers' money.

This bill would establish Offices of Inspector General in Departments of Defense, Justice and the Treasury, and the Agency for International Development, by consolidating existing audit and investigative units in each Department and Agency. These offices would conduct and supervise audits and investigations of their respective establishments and recommend policies to promote economy and efficiency and to prevent fraud and abuse, under the direction of Inspectors General who have been appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

I believe that H.R. 2098 is a much needed piece of legislation. The Departments and Agency covered by the bill are responsible for the annual expenditure of approximately $95 billion and employs approximately 1 million here in Washington and across the country.

I was an active supporter of the 1978 bill, which later became public law. It established Offices of Inspector General in the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce, HUD, Interior, Labor, and Transportation and in the Community Services Administration, EPA, General Services Administration, NASA, Small Business Administration, and the Veterans' Administration. In many of the Departments and Agencies, it consolidated existing audit and investigative units. I feel it is time to extend our oversight efforts to these additional Departments and the Agency for International Development.

Unfortunately, because of inadequate auditing and investigative efforts, the prevailing practice within these departments and agencies, not covered by the original 1978 bill, has been to passively wait for complaints to rise through the layers of bureaucratic hierarchy to a level where they may or may not be dealt with. Often, because of indifference, a lack of resources or a fear of rocking the boat and doing harm to the status of one's own program, little, if any remedy to the problem is found. In many cases there has been little means for uncovering illegalities.

Mr. Speaker, beyond the enormous monetary costs of the fraud and in some instances blatant thefts, there are also significant social costs. Such crime does great harm to the programs established and implemented on the authority of the Congress to meet real and pressing national needs. When the integrity and effectiveness of these departments and agencies are damaged, those truly in need as well as those who must rely on the honesty and integrity of their Federal Government become the true victims. To my mind, it has been demonstrated that there is solid ground for the growing apprehension among our people that waste has been allowed to run rampant and that a few, if they are dishonest and clever enough, have clear opportunities to steal from the Federal Government and the American people.

I believe that if we are going to restore integrity in Government and, at the same time, stem the draining of billions of dollars in tax revenues away from their intended uses, we should implement and fully support offices of Inspector General in these additional Federal departments and this agency not included in the 1978 law.

Mr. Speaker, the time has come for the Congress to take active steps to bring a greater degree of accountability into our Government. The establishment of these offices is one means toward that end.

Having recently returned from a series of open door meetings in my northwest Iowa congressional district, I am well aware of my constituents desire to curtail Federal spending and balance the budget. I am in total agreement with that desire. I am strongly committed to seeing our Nation restored to economic recover and improved productivity. But we must act now. I urge my colleagues to lend their support and vote for this important measure for taxpayers all across this Nation.●

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BROOKS) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2098, as amended.

The question was taken.

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule I, and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

The point of no quorum is considered withdrawn.

NATIONAL HISTORICAL PUBLICATIONS AND RECORDS COMMISSION REAUTHORIZATION

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 2979) to extend the authorization of appropriations for the National Historical Publications and Records Commission for fiscal years 1982 and 1983.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 2979

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section 2504(b) of title 44, United States Code, is amended by striking out "for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1981, an amount not to exceed $4,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "for each of the fiscal years ending September 30 of 1982 and 1983, an amount not to exceed $3,000,000".

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BENNETT). Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ENGLISH) will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KINDNESS) will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ENGLISH).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 2979, the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BROOKS), the chairman of the Committee on Government Operations.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I thoroughly endorse the bill and the position of our distinguished subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ENGLISH).

Mr. Speaker, this is a very small item in the scale of numbers we have been dealing with in our work on the budget. They lose this kind of money through the cracks in the Pentagon every day. So I hope no one is going to get up and say that in this time of cutting back on all programs, we cannot afford $3 million for the National Historical Publications and Records Commission.

We have been talking a lot about saving money here, but there is something else that needs saving—our history. All over the country, records and papers and documents that tell the story of how and why and where we became the kind of people we are, are in danger of crumbling into dust or just being lost or thrown away. The Commission performs a vitally important function in helping local communities identify and preserve these records.

The assistance it gives to universities and historical societies to help them publish the papers of some of the great and interesting figures in our past is also of tremendous importance in helping us understand how we have developed as a nation and as a people.

I am pleased to support this authorization of $3 million for the Commission. I am pleased to be on the side of history, and I hope all my colleagues will join me there.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROOKS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2979. I support the authorization of Federal funding of the National Historical Publications and Records Commission during the next 2 fiscal years.

I am pleased to join with the chairmen of both the Government Operations Committee and the Government Information Subcommittee in sponsoring this legislation. The NHPRC, by judicious use of grants, has managed with very limited resources to initiate many useful historical and records conservation projects over the years. Through those projects, the Commission has fostered an increased historical awareness among our citizens.

I also realize that this is a time of budgetary restraint. H.R. 2979, in my estimation, is in tune with the times. It recognizes that a worthwhile activity of the Federal Government should continue, but reduces its funding by 25 percent from the fiscal year 1981 figure.

I urge all Members to support this bill.

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the National Historical Publications and Records Commission was established in 1934 for the purpose of promoting the collection and publication of historically significant papers of outstanding citizens. The Commission's role was expanded, when it was reauthorized in 1974, to promote the preservation and publication of valuable records generated in every facet of life which would significantly further an understanding and appreciation of our Nation's history. Its current authorization—$4 million per year—will expire at the end of the current fiscal year.

On May 5 the Committee on Government Operations approved and ordered reported H.R. 2979, which extends for 2 years the annual authorization of appropriations, at $3 million per year—a 25-percent cut from the currently authorized level.

Since 1964, Congress has provided the Commission with appropriated funds to make grants to State and local agencies and to nonprofit organizations for the preservation of historical records, and to support historical publication projects. Thus far, the Commission has expended $23 million in appropriated funds, and this sum has been matched by over $31 million from other sources. The Government Operations Committee feels that a 2-year extension of the Commission's funding authority at the level of $3 million will allow Congress the time needed to reexamine the Commission's financial needs beyond the next 2 years.

The Commission's grants program has had a positive impact on the preservation of historically valuable documents in virtually every State and many local jurisdictions. I urge you to support the continuation of this small but important program.

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2979, a bill to authorize the funding, as has been stated, for the National Historical Publications and Records Commission in fiscal years 1982 and 1983.

The Commission has throughout its 37 years of existence made valuable contributions to the historical record of America. The National Historical Publications and Records Commission grants have enabled historians to preserve and to interpret the documents of important citizens, organizations, and governments. Without these efforts, our knowledge of our heritage would be that much poorer.

I would like to point out that unlike many other Federal agencies which are in the grant-dispersing business, the National Historical Publications and Records Commission has taken great pains to distribute its funds widely and in small amounts, which are genuinely "seed money," and they genuinely attract private contributions to those projects. Great projects may grow from NHPRC investments, but the Commission itself does not commit itself to fund them in their entirety. For this I commend the Commission.

This, Mr. Speaker, is one of a number of authorizations concerning which the procedures of the House are in question in the minds of many of us. That is, it appears that it is necessary for such authorizations to be brought before the House and acted upon in order to present the question to the House, that question being: Should this program live or die?

In no other way is that question going to be presented. Whether the funding can be made to fit into the budget somewhere and whether an appropriation will indeed be available are separate questions.

I happen to feel that this program should receive reasoned consideration, and it cannot receive that consideration without this authorization bill going forward.

I happen to support the concept and the work that has been carried on under grants from the National Historical Publications and Records Commission. There is disagreement with that position on the part of the administration, but I think it would be nothing but an abdication of our responsibility for this House to fail to act on the questions of whether this program shall live or die. I would urge that it live.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KINDNESS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate my colleague's yielding.

Is it not possible that because this is a relatively smaller amount of dollars than we normally pump out of here, this should be handled by private contribution? Why is it necessary to continue to take this out of the Federal Treasury?

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman from California raises a very valid consideration that ought to be taken into account. The fact is that the Commission's grants do indeed act as "seed money." They do attract private contributions, but in the absence of this stimulation of volunteerism, I think we would find that there is a lack of enough funding available for such programs.

The private sector is already doing a much greater share than the Federal Government, but we do have in my view a degree of responsibility to keep that stimulation flowing, to keep the adrenalin going, so that these matters of a historical nature which are a part of our governmental and public, as well as societal, heritage will go forward.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. Well, are we not already doing that by all the documents we put out all the time? Why is it necessary to have this federally funded again?

There are many foundations around the country that promote and provide most of the funding for this type of activity, so why does it remain necessary for the Federal Government to provide for this out of our Treasury?

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman has raised another question which I think is also important to consider.

If we do not get some kind of stimulation for foundation contributions to come into programs like this—they do not receive that much consideration, especially from the larger foundations. A typical grant of the Commission is in the range of something like $50,000 to $65,000, which may not be in the course of 1 year; it may be over a period of 2 years or even longer.

This is a small way of stimulating, providing the "seed money," the stimulation, and the support for basic work to be done in the collection of papers, the editing of them, and the authenticating of them and starting toward their publication.

In some cases we have grants outstanding where the work has been brought almost to the point of publication, but without a continuation of the small stimulative grant, the publication work may not be able to go forward.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. Mr. Speaker, can the gentleman give us some examples of where the "seed money," as he mentioned, which has been provided has made the difference between starting something and not going ahead with it?

Mr. KINDNESS. I would point in a general way to a particular practice which is fairly common among foundations whereby they will match funds available from other sources.

It is also true that in some cases universities may have small amounts available for the conduct of work through, say, their history departments, and they will devote some of that funding to a program such as this, provided there are other funds to match up with it and make the program viable.

I am not qualified or equipped today to give specific examples, using names of institutions or foundations where this is a fairly typical pattern, where the funding may come from three or more sources, sometimes including private individual donors, as well as particular members of families of historical figures, too.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KINDNESS) for his comments.

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California (Mr. ROUSSELOT) for his contribution, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. FOUNTAIN).

Mr. FOUNTAIN. Mr. Speaker, first I would like to say that I join with my distinguished colleagues in support of H.R. 2979.

I would like to say to the gentleman from California (Mr. ROUSSELOT) that if he has not had an opportunity to do so, I hope that he will check with the Library of Congress, because he will find that just last year or the year before the University of North Carolina press, among the presses of other universities, has been participating in doing research work about the Founding Fathers and former Presidents. Harvard University, Princeton, and others have been doing the same thing. They have issued entire volumes of letters which were written by Members of Congress to their constituents during that period of time—I do not recall the years, but it was a long period of time—when there was no CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

It is fantastic to go through and read some of those letters and see what the Members of Congress were saying to their constituents at that time. That is one example of the sort of thing we are talking about.

Now, this measure will continue a small, but extremely valuable program, a program which has helped keep us in touch with our country's heritage and will continue to do so for centuries to come as the priceless documents it has preserved are saved for our children and our children's children to read and study and profit greatly thereby.

The Commission, I might say, is doing an outstanding job of encouraging governmental and private bodies in the collection and preservation of historical source materials.

For instance, I learned that we had a tremendous amount of resource material that had been gathered as the result of private contributions, but they have no funds to publish this material. We were able to get a little seed money back there just a couple of years ago from one of the agencies.

Since 1964, a more active role for the Commission became possible, and the NHPRC was given the additional assignment of supporting in a modest way the preservation of documentary sources of American history.

This important work, preserving the written word of one era for the next, just must be continued; and the NHPRC records program must continue to assist State and local governments as well as private organizations to better manage their historically significant records.

Assisting in the cost of publishing the papers of the Founding Fathers, many of which have never been published, is particularly important, because our university presses which publish scholarly works, works of such importance to Western civilization, simply do not have, as has been pointed out, the resources to print, and therefore preserve, the fruits of the study and research done in these areas. They must have some small amount of help.

I emphasize the word small, because like the gentleman, I do not see the necessity of us spending exorbitant sums of money in these areas, because the sum authorized by this legislation, while significant, seems small when compared with the legislation coming before this House regularly.

Much of the rich history of our Nation is concealed in crumbling records, which are buried in the attics of county courthouses and in private dwellings all over America. Unless this project can go forward, these records of the Founding Fathers will be lost forever.

I respectfully urge the passage of H.R. 2979.

I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Government Operations, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BROOKS).

Mr. BROOKS. I will say in response to the question of my distinguished friend from California (Mr. ROUSSELOT) that the report reflects that the grant program since 1964 has funded projects totaling $54 million. Of this total, the Commission has committed $23 million of Federal money over this period of time. Outside matching funds committed to those projects total $31 million.

This is the pattern, to get more than 100 percent of what we put up. Possibly an additional 150 percent is contributed by people who know that when the Government puts up $8,000 or $10,000 for a study, that study has been determined to be meritorious and worthwhile and can then attract contributed funds. That is what the system is. If we do not have any seed money in this, potential donors may look at it and say to the Government, "Well, you do not have any of your own money up on this at all." In that case, the recommendation would not have the weight that it does when the Federal Government actually contributes something toward the preservation of these very valuable documents.

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. DANNEMEYER).

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Members, when we examine the history of this organization, the reauthorization of which we are talking about, we can really see a little of what has happened to our Government, the Federal Government, in the course of the last 47 years. This commission was organized in 1934 as the National Historical Publications Commission and its function was to collect and publish the papers of outstanding citizens of the United States.

Now, who can be against that? Nobody. I am not against that. I do not think anybody is.

There is an old bromide in the history books that says, "Those who do not study history and learn from it are doomed to relive it."

I favor history being compiled so that future generations can learn from what we did today, the good things and the bad things, so that people can live a better life two or three or ten generations from now.

This commission went along well for 30 years, but then in 1964, with one of those great society programs, we see what happened. From 1934 to 1964, no Federal money was involved in this meritorious project. In 1964, the proponents of this project got the idea that we must stimulate the gathering of this data, so it was decided to authorize—how much? $500,000.

Well, now, who can be against that? That is a modest sum.

Then 8 years later, in 1972, we see how work expands to fill the time within which to complete it. The $500,000 annual authorization grew to $2 million. Then only 2 years later, Members, the work must have expanded extensively because the authorization increased from $2 million to $4 million, and so it goes.

From 1934 to 1974, some 40 years, from nothing in terms of Federal dollars, to $4 million.

This program is just a microcosm of what has happened to our Federal Government in the last 47 years. They start out with a good idea and it just grows and grows and grows.

The most sensible thing we can do with this today is just to not reauthorize this function. What happens to it? Is it going away? Not at all.

Under existing law, I want to point out to the Members, this function can continue under the mantle of the National Archives. Existing Federal law will permit this function to continue in every way without Federal dollars.

Also, I would point out to the Members that the budget resolution which we adopted 2 weeks ago provided a level of spending that excluded any funds for this organization for fiscal year 1982. In other words, if we vote to reauthorize this today, we are laying the foundation for violating the budget resolution which the House approved only 2 weeks ago. In other words, we then would be saying we want to authorize a program to bust that budget resolution. I do not think there are many Members in this House that want to go that route.

In conclusion, I would like to point out some other things. We are living in an era when even the Reagan budget for fiscal year 1982 proposes a deficit of some $60 billion. The credit markets of this country have analyzed this projected deficit and in response to it have established an interest rate that is close to the highest that anybody has seen in the last two decades, close to 19 percent; so any time we have a chance to find ways of saving money, I think we should so as to reduce this deficit.

Bear in mind we are talking about voting in this institution to cut food for children in school programs by making it tougher for middle- and upper-income families to get taxpayer paid lunches. At the same time, what is it that this program will bring from the Federal dollars? I want to read just a few items that were authorized in 1980 to indicate what we can expect in the future.

To the municipality of Anchorage, Alaska, to preserve the Anchorage Historical and Fine Arts Museum's glass plate negatives documenting early 20th century life in Alaska.

To the Baltimore City Archives and Records Management Office for arranging and describing the mayoral and council records from 1797 to 1971, and so on.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman from California (Mr. DANNEMEYER).

Mr. DANNEMEYER. I thank the gentleman.

Does it really make sense for us to authorize continuing to spend Federal tax dollars for a function of this type at a time when we are straining to find ways of bringing our budget into balance? I just do not think it makes sense at all to do that.

Therefore, I would respectfully ask the Members of the House to vote down this issue and save the taxpayers some $3 million, a very modest sum considering all that we spend around here, but just a small indication to the people of this country that we are determined to bring the runaway spending of this institution under control.

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to thank the gentleman who has just spoken, the gentleman from California (Mr. DANNEMEYER) for I believe making the case rather well, pointing up some of the uses of the money, and in the case of those two examples cited, giving illustrations of why it is that some attention needs to be directed toward the preservation of historical records of the sort that were cited.

It is not going to happen in the absence of some degree of active direction from the National Historical Publications and Records Commission, I believe.

There is apparently fairly general agreement for the desirability of preserving our Nation's history. The question presented here is not one of budget busting. We have a number of areas in which decisions have to be made in the Congress and not abdicated completely to the executive branch in all the details of what shall be included in the budget as it is finally put into the second budget resolution and enacted through the process of appropriations.

This is one little corner of a consideration of some importance, I think, that cannot simply be swept aside by saying that we voted on a budget resolution. It is not that at all.

Mr. RUDD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KINDNESS. I yield to the gentleman from Arizona.

Mr. RUDD. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I also want to commend the gentleman from California for pursuing the course that he has taken and what he has said and what he has brought out indicates that there is some serious doubt on the worthwhileness of the Federal expenditures under the circumstances and in this time, and also enough, I think, not only to bring us to a vote, but to reject it so that it would be brought out again, not under suspension, but for suitable debate.

I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. KINDNESS. I think the point raised by the gentleman from Arizona is a correct one, that this House should make a decision on this. Whatever the division of opinion may be, that is the way it will come out; but it should not be left in some dark corner to be decided solely on the basis that the administration has made a recommendation that this program not be funded.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KINDNESS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. I appreciate my colleague yielding.

One of the problems, though, in bringing it up under a suspension procedure, if my colleagues had an amendment to reduce it back say $500,000 a year, which was the original authorization and appropriation, we would be unable to do that under this procedure; is that not correct?

Mr. KINDNESS. If the gentleman will allow me to point out on that matter, this bill does set the authorization level at $3 million, which is already a 25-percent reduction from the preceding year's authorized level formulated.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. Does the gentleman mean a real reduction? That is certainly a good policy, is it not?

Mr. KINDNESS. I thought that might bring smiles to the faces of the gentlemen from California and Arizona.

Mr. ROUSSELOT. But the point still is that because we have brought it up under a suspension procedure, the gentlemen could not offer any other amendments to this authorizing legislation under this method under which it is brought today.

So it is perfectly possible to vote against the bill on the basis that somebody wanted to amend it and not be against the whole idea.

Mr. KINDNESS. The gentleman's point is correct.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I might say, too, since we are reading off a few of the projects that were covered under this bill, one of the other projects, of course, are the papers of Ulysses S. Grant, who was a fine Republican President and I think certainly of historical interest to this country and to the students of history.

I think it certainly would be sad if his papers were not available to students of history in this country; but perhaps what we should all keep in mind, and perhaps this again reaches to the point of the gentleman from California, that what we are discussing here is an authorization bill. Basically what we are saying to the Appropriations Committee is that we are cutting back on the authorization by 25 percent. Certainly that is to be applauded. That is a direction I think we are all heading as far as this budget is concerned.

If you should happen to find through the appropriations process an extra $2 million or $3 million that can be used to fund this project, then you have the authorization to continue with it. But it is one, I think, that is of importance, perhaps far more importance than the dollar value that is actually contained because of the stimulation that it brings about.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time and I yield back the balance of my time.

● Mr. WIRTH. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the National Historical Publications and Records Commission, I today urge my colleagues to support H.R. 2979, the reauthorization of the Commission now before the House.

As you know, the National Historical Publications and Records Commission is a part of the National Archives that provides assistance in preserving the Nation's records and making them generally available to citizens. In keeping with the policy of fiscal restraint we all must pursue, H.R. 2979 authorizes the Commission at a level of $3 million each in fiscal years 1982 and 1983—a 25 percent cut from the previously authorized funding level.

Records of enduring cultural and historical value are being lost at an alarming rate. The Commission was founded to help hold on to this great national treasure by recommending modest financial grants to State and local institutions, with most support coming from non-Federal sources. This funding insures the preservation of significant records and finances publication of the most important documents for wide dissemination.

The Commission has partially funded the publication of the papers of Thomas Jefferson and James Madison, and the early records of the U.S. Congress—priceless documents that otherwise may have been doomed to obscurity.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I urge the favorable consideration of H.R. 2979. We must not see our national heritage decay from neglect.●

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ENGLISH) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2979.

The question was taken.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule I, and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

DEBT COLLECTION ACT OF 1981

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 2811) to amend the Privacy Act of 1974 to increase the efficiency of Government-wide efforts to collect debts owed the United States, to require the reporting to Congress of information on debts owed the United States, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 2811

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Debt Collection Act of 1981".

AMENDMENTS TO TITLE 5 OF THE UNITED STATES CODE

SEC. 2. Section 552a of title 5 of the United States Code is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (6), by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (7) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and", and by inserting after paragraph (7) the following new paragraph:

"(8) the term 'consumer reporting agency' means—

"(A) a consumer reporting agency as such term is defined in section 603(f) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681a(f)); or

"(B) any person who, for monetary fees, dues, or on a cooperative basis, regularly engages in whole or in part in the practice of (i) obtaining credit or other information on consumers for the purpose of furnishing such information to consumer reporting agencies (as defined in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph), or (ii) serving as a marketing agent under arrangements enabling third parties to obtain such information from such reporting agencies.".

(2) in subsection (b), by striking out "or" at the end of paragraph (10), by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (11) and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon and "or", and by inserting after paragraph (11) the following new paragraph:

"(12) to a consumer reporting agency in accordance with the provisions of subsection (r) of this section or to a Federal lending agency in accordance with the provisions of subsection (s) of this section.";

(3) in subsection (m), by inserting "(1)" immediately after "(m)" and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(2) A consumer reporting agency to which a record is disclosed under subsection (b)(12) of this section shall not, by reason of such disclosure, be deemed to be accomplishing an agency function."; and

(4) by adding after subsection (q) the following new subsections:

"(r)(1) DISCLOSURE TO A CONSUMER REPORTING AGENCY.—Whenever the head of an agency or his designee attempts to collect a claim of the United States, the head of the agency or his designee may disclose to a consumer reporting agency information from a system of records indicating that an individual is responsible for a claim if—

"(A) the notice for the system of records required by subsection (e)(4) indicates that information in the system may be disclosed to a consumer reporting agency;

"(B) the head of the agency or his designee has reviewed the claim in order to assure its validity and has determined that the payment of the claim is overdue;

"(C) the head of the agency or his designee has sent a written notice to the individual informing such individual—

"(i) that the payment of the claim is overdue;

"(ii) that the agency intends to disclose to a consumer reporting agency, within not less than sixty days after sending such notice, that the individual is responsible for such claim;

"(iii) of the specific information intended to be disclosed; and

"(iv) of such individual's right to a full explanation of the claim, and of all available rights of administrative appeal or review;

"(D) such individual has not—

"(i) repaid or agreed to repay such claim under a repayment plan which is agreeable to the head of the agency or his designee and is in a written form signed by such individual; or

"(ii) filed for review of such claim under paragraph (2) of this subsection or other applicable provisions of law or regulation;

"(E) the agency has established procedures (i) for promptly disclosing, to each consumer reporting agency to which the original disclosure was made, any substantial change in the status or amount of the claim, and (ii) for promptly verifying or correcting, as appropriate, such information upon the request of any such consumer reporting agency for verification of any or all information so disclosed; and

"(F) the information disclosed to the consumer reporting agency is limited to (i) the name, address, and other information necessary to establish the identity of the debtor, (ii) the amount, status, and history of the claim, and (iii) the agency or program under which the claim arose.

"(2) Prior to a disclosure to any consumer reporting agency under paragraph (1) of this subsection and at such other times as may be permitted by law, the head of the agency or his designee shall, upon request of any individual alleged by the agency to be responsible for the claim, provide for the review of the obligation of such individual, with an opportunity for reconsideration of the initial decision concerning the claim.

"(3) If an agency does not have a current address for an individual for the purpose of sending the notice required by paragraph (1)(C), the agency shall make reasonable efforts to locate the individual prior to disclosing any information to a consumer reporting agency under paragraph (1).

"(s) DISCLOSURE TO A FEDERAL LENDING AGENCY.—Whenever an application is made by an individual to an agency for a loan, or whenever, for the purpose of securing federally subsidized insurance, guarantees, or other assurance with respect to a loan, an individual seeks authority from an agency to obtain a loan, such agency may request from any other agency engaged in making or authorizing such loans information concerning the credit history of that individual with that other agency. The head of that other agency or his designee may disclose to the agency making such request information from a system of records if—

"(1) the notice for the system of records required by subsection (e)(4) indicates that information in the system may be disclosed to other lending agencies of the Government;

"(2) that agency head or his designee has notified the individual in writing, at any time prior to making the disclosure, that such information may be disclosed and of the type of information which may be disclosed in accordance with paragraph (3); and

"(3) the information disclosed to the agency is limited to (A) the name, address, and other information necessary to establish the identity of the debtor, (B) the amount, status, and history of the debt, and (C) the agency or program under which the debt arose.".

BUDGET INFORMATION ON AGENCY DEBT COLLECTION ACTIVITIES

SEC. 3. (a) Section 201 of the Budget and Accounting Act, 1921 (31 U.S.C. 11), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(k)(1) The Budget submitted pursuant to subsection (a) of this section for each fiscal year shall contain, in a form, and prepared in accordance with standards, prescribed by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget—

"(A) an estimate for each major debt program—

"(i) of the total amount of debt outstanding under such program as of the beginning of such fiscal year;

"(ii) of the amount of such debt that will be in default on such date;

"(iii) of the amount of such debt that will be collected during such fiscal year;

"(iv) of the debt that is in default (I) the amount that will be collected, and (II) the amount that will be written off as uncollectable;

"(B) a comparison of—

"(i) the actual amounts that were collected during the preceding fiscal year with any estimate made for such fiscal year under subparagraph (A)(iii);

"(ii) the actual amount of defaulted debt that was collected with any estimate made for such fiscal year under subparagraph (A)(iv)(I); and

"(iii) the actual amount of defaulted debt that was written off with any estimate made for such fiscal year under subparagraph (A)(iv)(II), together with an explanation of the reasons for any significant differences between such estimates and actual amounts.

"(2) For purposes of this section—

"(A) the term 'debt' includes loans insured or guaranteed by a department or establishment and all other amounts due the Government from fees, duties, claims, leases, rents, royalties, services, sales of real and personal property, overpayments, fines, penalties, damages, interest, taxes, forfeitures, and other sources; and

"(B) the term 'major debt program' means, for any fiscal year, any program of a department of establishment under which the total amount of debt outstanding during such fiscal year is projected to equal or exceed $100,000,000.".

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) of this section shall apply to any budget submitted by the President more than thirty days after the date of enactment of this Act.

REVIEWS OF DEBT PROGRAMS BY INSPECTORS GENERAL

SEC. 4. (a) Each Inspector General of an agency shall, not later than October 31, 1981, and by October 31 of each succeeding year, conduct a review in accordance with standards established by the Comptroller General of the debts owed the Government for each program under which there is estimated by the Inspector General to be outstanding on September 30 of such year more than $100,000,000. A report on the results of such review shall be included in the semiannual report made by such Inspector General on such date.

(b) For the purposes of this section—

(1) the term "Inspector General" means an individual occupying the office of Inspector General as established by—

(A) the Inspector General Act of 1978 (5 U.S.C. App.);

(B) section 208 of the Department of Energy Organization Act (42 U.S.C. 7139);

(C) title II of the Act of October 15, 1976 (42 U.S.C. 3521 et seq.);

(D) section 209 of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 3929); or

(E) section 624(g) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2384(g)); and

(2) the term "debts owed the Government" shall include loans insured or guaranteed by such agency and all other amounts due the Government from fees, duties, claims, leases, rents, royalties, services, sales of real and personal property, overpayments, fines, penalties, damages, interest, taxes, forfeitures, and other sources.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ENGLISH) will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KINDNESS) will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognized the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ENGLISH).

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ENGLISH. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from New York (Mr. HORTON).

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I am happy to add my voice to those supporting H.R. 2811, the Debt Collection Act of 1981. This bill was introduced by the chairman of the Government Operations Committee, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BROOKS), and contains recommendations made by the President. With that unbeatable combination of BROOKS and Reagan behind it, the bill must be good.

Delinquent Federal debts are now running in the neighborhood of $10 to $20 billion, so it is absolutely essential that the Government take steps to enforce its claims. This bill forces agencies to do two very useful things—report delinquent debts to credit bureaus and report on debt collection efforts to the Congress. Between the two, the results of enactment should be that citizens pay their debts more promptly to preserve their credit ratings, and agencies devote greater attention to collecting delinquencies.

I want to clarify just briefly one aspect of section 4 of the bill, pertaining to reviews by inspectors general of major agency loan programs. These reviews, according to the bill, shall be made "in accordance with standards established by the Comptroller General." We stipulated that the Comptroller General set the standards because he is the most expert auditor in the Federal Government. But because he is not an official of the executive branch, he does not have the power to enforce inspectors general to follow his standards.

Mr. Speaker, I support this measure. I hope that we can pass it and consequently increase Federal revenues by collecting more delinquent debts.

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2811, The Debt Collection Act of 1981, is intended to help the Government begin to get control of its debts. This is no minor problem. Even here in Washington where we are used to dealing with large sums of money, the amount owed to the Government is enormous. Total debts, including loans, taxes, fines, and other categories of debt exceed $125 billion. Of this total, more than $25 billion is delinquent.

Agency efforts to collect these delinquent debts have been appallingly poor. Agency managers simply do not care about collections, and it is this lack of interest that had produced the large volume of receivables. Management has been so loose that a recent review of debt programs located $10 billion in debts that had not previously been reported. It is hard to lose track of $10 billion, but the Government managed to do it.

I do not have to tell my colleagues how important this money could be. If we had even a small percentage of the delinquent debt, we would be able to avoid billions of dollars in spending cuts or to fund a sizeable tax cut.

The Members may be aware that the President announced a major effort to strengthen Federal credit management about a month ago. At that time, the director of the Office of Management and Budget indicated that a package of legislative recommendations would be proposed.

Although that legislative package has yet to be sent to the Congress, I am pleased that the Committee on Government Operations has been able to take prompt action on debt collection. Well before the President ever recommended any legislation, Chairman JACK BROOKS had already introduced his own debt collection bill, and this is the bill that we are debating today. I would like to commend Chairman BROOKS for his leadership in this area. I hope that the administration will be able to follow up on the work we have started and will submit additional legislation soon.

The major purpose of H.R. 2811 is to clarify the law relating to credit reporting by Federal agencies. Under a Justice Department interpretation of the Privacy Act, credit bureaus accepting credit information from an agency would be subject to the Privacy Act in addition to the Fair Credit Reporting Act. H.R. 2811 overturns this interpretation and leaves credit bureaus subject only to the Fair Credit Reporting Act. The credit industry supports the bill.

The reporting of delinquent debts to credit bureaus should encourage debtors to pay what they owe the Government. It is hard to say how effective this reporting will be in reducing the amount of delinquencies, but it may help. If only a tiny fraction of those who owe money are induced to pay, collections will be many millions of dollars.

H.R. 2811 also specifies the steps that an agency must take prior to reporting of debts. These due process procedures assure that individuals are informed of their rights and of the consequences of failure to pay. The procedures will be simple for agencies to comply with and will provide adequate protection for individuals. Information in the possession of credit bureaus is already protected by the Fair Credit Reporting Act.

In addition, the bill further amends the Privacy Act to permit increased sharing of credit information among Federal lending agencies.

The bill also requires that information about agency collection activities be included in the yearly budget message. This reporting will enable Congress to monitor collections by making information available in a timely fashion to the Budget and Appropriation Committees.

Finally, the bill requires agency inspectors general to review annually major debt programs. Independent reviews will stop agencies from hiding collection failures through creative accounting techniques. Current agency accounting systems are incapable of supporting needed debt collection functions.

In offering this bill today, I would like to emphasize that legislation will not solve the debt collection problems of the Federal Government. Delinquent debts have soared because of a lack of management interest in collections. The report of the OMB debt collection project documents this point over and over again. The report acknowledges that the first step in assuring effective management of debt is the establishment of accountability at all levels of the process. It is difficult, if not impossible, to legislate management responsibility.

The shortcomings of legislation are illustrated by the experience with Public Law 94-466. The Veterans' Rehabilitation and Education Amendments of 1980 gave the Veterans' Administration new authority to collect debts. Included was the authority to report information on delinquent debtors to credit bureaus. This is essentially the same authority that H.R. 2811 proposes to extend to other agencies.

At a recent hearing, the VA admitted that 6 months after this law was enacted, no debts had been reported to credit bureaus. Further, the VA indicated that the necessary computer capacity would not be available until 1982. This means that the aggressive new collection authority may go unused for 2 or more years after it was granted.

Notwithstanding this experience, I still strongly endorse the granting of similar authority to other agencies. The administration has promised to strengthen credit management practices and has ordered agency heads to develop and implement aggressive debt collection programs. The President has also ordered each agency to designate an official with responsibility and authority for debt collection. With this high-level commitment, I hope that adequate resources will be made available to do the job. If nothing else, the designation of these officials will help to identify those who are at fault for inadequate collections in the future.

Although the administration has announced a major effort on debt collection, it has established very modest goals. At a hearing before the Subcommittee on Government Information and Individual Rights, OMB Director Edwin Harper indicated that management efforts and new legislation would only enable the administration to increase collections of delinquent debts by $1 billion. This represents only 4 percent of the total amount of delinquent debt presently outstanding.

This is a very limited objective for an administration that has been so vocal on eliminating fraud, abuse, and waste. It is nevertheless welcome as a first step, and I hope that much larger sums will be collected in future years.

As offered today, H.R. 2811 includes some technical changes to the bill as reported by the Committee on Government Operations. One of the amendments made by the committee permits disclosure of credit information by one Federal lending agency to another Federal lending agency. The purpose of the amendment is to overcome Privacy Act limitations that preclude agency exchange of information where the purpose of the disclosure is not compatible with the purpose for which information was originally collected. Where credit history information has been collected for use in one loan program, disclosure of that information for use in an unrelated loan program fails to meet the compatibility requirement of the Privacy Act.

As reported by the committee, disclosure of information by one Federal lending agency to another would be permitted under the same conditions as are required for disclosure to a consumer reporting agency. Since these conditions are unnecessary for exchanges of data within the Federal Government, they have been eliminated in the bill offered today. These changes have been agreed to by the minority.

The three conditions that remain in the bill as a prerequisite to agency-to-agency disclosure are: First, a requirement that the disclosure be included in the Privacy Act notice for the system of records; second, a requirement that the individual be notified that information may be disclosed to another Federal lending agency; and third, a limitation on the type of information that can be disclosed. The first and third of these conditions are identical to conditions required for disclosure to a consumer reporting agency. The notice requirement is similar to a requirement for such disclosures and can be satisfied through the Privacy Act notice already required under subsection (e)(3).

In summary, H.R. 2811 will encourage more effective collection of debts by Federal agencies and will permit more meaningful oversight of the collection process by the Congress. I urge its adoption.

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KINDNESS. I yield to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BROOKS).

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, here we are, scratching around in every corner of the Government trying to find ways to save money and cut costs, and sitting out there are billions of dollars that are owed to various Federal agencies and are being lost each year because we have no effective means of collecting them.

I think H.R. 2811 will provide an effective means of getting some of that money back. We live in a world of credit transactions. People who are unable to establish a good credit rating are severely restricted in their range of choices and activities, and in their ability to enjoy all the benefits of our consumer-oriented economy. Hit them in their credit rating, and you hit them where it hurts.

And that is where H.R. 2811 would apply the pressure. By permitting the Government to inform private credit rating bureaus who owes the Government money and has not repaid it, we would be making it a lot more difficult for those people to get a loan to buy a car, or get a new television set on credit, or some furniture, or some clothes.

The GAO has found that people who are making no attempt to pay off their Government debts are running up private sector debts and paying them off on schedule. They will not be able to do that so easily under this bill.

This is not the whole answer to our debt collection problems. There are other steps that could and probably should be taken, but they raise questions that will have to be studied and could take a lot of time to answer. This is a simple, straightforward bill. We know it works. We should put it into operation as soon as possible. We are talking about a lot of money out there that rightfully belongs in the U.S. Treasury. Let us start putting it there.

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation.

H.R. 2811 has two objectives, both of which are commendable. First, it is designed to make information concerning delinquencies in people's debt repayments on Federal loans available to creditors. The bill does this by authorizing Federal lending agencies to report delinquencies to credit bureaus, and by making clear that credit bureaus which receive that data do not have to follow Privacy Act procedures with regard to it.

Second, the bill is intended to push agencies to pay more attention to their debt collection effort. It does this by requiring agencies to report, as part of their annual budget submissions, on how those activities are progressing, and by mandating inspector general reviews of major loan programs.

This bill by itself, of course, is very limited; it makes only small changes in the effort to collect delinquent debts. The provisions of this measure, however, when combined with other portions of the comprehensive debt legislation which I understand the administration will propose shortly, will help redirect Federal loan programs to collection as well as distribution of funds.

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

● Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. Speaker, I wish to express my unmitigated support for H.R. 2811, the Debt Collection Act of 1981, which would amend the Privacy Act of 1974, to allow Federal agencies to refer the names of delinquent and defaulted debtors to credit bureaus.

As you may know, I have introduced H.R. 2543, the Debt Collection Improvement Act, which includes the provisions of H.R. 2811, along with other debt collection tools.

The magnitude of the Federal Government's outstanding debt problem is astounding. Of the $175 billion in debts owed, at least $25.3 billion is delinquent or in default at agencies and departments across the full breadth of the Government. For example, as of the end of fiscal year 1979, $1.4 billion in receivables was delinquent at the Department of Agriculture, $2.2 billion at the Department of Education, $1.9 billion at the Department of Health and Human Services, and a whopping $14 billion at Treasury, more than $10 billion of which was uncollected back taxes.

The condition of many department accounting systems is so poor that it is presently impossible to determine if an additional $2.4 billion is current or overdue.

In fiscal year 1979 alone, Uncle Sam wrote off $1.5 billion as uncollectible bad debts. The cost to the American taxpayer of carrying this defaulted debt is staggering—roughly $3 billion annually. Unless Congress acts promptly to end this debt forgiveness spree, uncollectibles stand to grow by leaps and bounds with larger Federal budgets.

Perhaps the most critical aspect of this mounting debt problem is Government indifference. Loan program directors have been the last of the big-time spenders, almost solely concerned with lobbying for increased appropriations and disbursing money, and assigning a very low priority to repayment enforcement. As former Comptroller General Elmer Staats has said, agency heads have been operating on the principle that "It's more fun to give money away than to take it back."

Public awareness of waste, fraud, and abuse in Washington is growing, and we will be held accountable if corrective measures are not put in place. Candidate Ronald Reagan made this issue a familiar one on the campaign trail. The Washington Post and Newsweek, among other prominent publications, have run articles and editorials on the subject. The General Accounting Office has released a spate of reports over the years categorizing the vast number of different ways the Government has been squandering taxpayer money. And certainly waste and improved administration of programs has been focused on as part of the budget process now gathering a head of steam. With worthwhile programs threatened as part of very real budgetary constraints, Members have been asking themselves, and rightly so, if waste should not be curtailed before the well whetted budget ax cuts too deeply into legal services and other programs for the needy.

H.R. 2811 provides one very useful tool in the battle for efficacious Federal collection of its outstanding debts. Referral of the names of delinquent debtors to credit bureaus is extremely cost effective. It will insure that those who consider reneging on their commitments to the United States know they run the risk of being denied credit cards and other lines of credit. In New Jersey, where the condition of all student loans is made known to credit bureaus, student defaults have been relatively few.

So I commend the committee for taking up this pressing issue. I would hope that the Congress would see fit to adopt other collection tools which I have included in my bill. The use of the tax refund offset, the raising of interest rates on delinquent or defaulted loans, garnishment of Federal employee wages, removal of the restriction on redisclosure of a debtor's address obtained from the IRS and lifting of the 6-year statute of limitations barring the offset of debts owed Uncle Sam, all of these additional measures will be of great assistance in the debt collection area. They do not, however, fall under the jurisdiction of the Government Operations Committee and will have to be debated in the proper forums.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.●

● Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of strengthening the Federal Government's effort to collect delinquent debts owed to it.

I plan to vote for the bill which is now before us. However, this bill is only a part of the entire legislative undertaking necessary for the improvement of debt collection activities.

The Office of Management and Budget established a debt collection project 2 years ago to study how to improve Federal credit management. OMB issued the project's report in January, and the administration will soon send us a package of legislation based on its recommendations. I would prefer to consider this package as a whole so that we could evaluate the interrelationships of its parts. H.R. 2811, which generally incorporates two of the package's provisions, is before us separately, however, and we must consider it today.

The principal provision of H.R. 2811 concerns the disclosure by Federal agencies of delinquent debt information to credit bureaus. Credit bureaus will not accept that information right now because an opinion issued by the Justice Department in the last administration states that if they do accept it, they will be considered to be Government contractors for purposes of the Privacy Act. That means they would have to maintain the data in accordance with the Privacy Act procedures, and they would be subject to Privacy Act liability.

The bill makes clear that the Privacy Act would not apply to credit bureaus which accept delinquent debt information from Government agencies. In my judgment, if an individual knows that his credit rating will be affected by failure to repay debts to the Government, he will be encouraged to repay those debts.

During committee consideration, we made three improvements to H.R. 2811, based on my suggestions. We eliminated a requirement that agencies issue new regulations pertaining to delinquent debt information. Additional regulations are unnecessary because the protections already exist in law and new regulations would merely have added to the burden Government imposes on its citizens. We added a provision that permits Government agencies to transmit data on individuals' debt repayment to other Federal lending agencies. This is useful because Federal creditors, just like private creditors, ought to know how well people repay old Government loans before deciding whether to make new loans to them. We also modified the section requiring inspectors general to audit major agency loan programs. While this is certainly an area which should be under the surveillance of inspectors general, we should not direct all of their resources to only one place and I urged the change from audit to review. To my knowledge, this is the first time the Congress has tried to allocate the resources of inspectors general. We want them to be as free as possible to roam all over their agencies searching out waste and corruption, and I do not like the idea of restricting their activities. I was pleased to see that the restriction in the bill is not as severe as it was before the committee amended it.

Mr. Speaker, I will support this legislation, which I view as the beginning of a serious effort to provide efficient collection of debts owed to the Federal Government.●

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentlemen from Oklahoma (Mr. ENGLISH) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2811, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

THE HONORABLE TIM LEE CARTER

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. ROGERS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Speaker, as you and most of my colleagues here today know, I came to Washington with a very tough act to follow. My predecessor in the House is Tim Lee Carter of Tompkinsville, Ky.

In my view, the House lost a truly great man when Congressman Carter retired after 16 years of dedicated, hard work in Washington.

Congressman Carter has filled many shoes in his lifetime; he has been a teacher, a high school coach, a doctor, and, of course, a Member of this great body. He tackled each of these jobs with great energy and love for the people he served and worked with.

Tim Lee served the people of Kentucky's Fifth District well. He stood up for his people and looked out for the best interests of all Americans.

As a member of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, where I now sit, he served as the ranking Republican on the Health Subcommittee, a position where his background as a physician was put to good use. His wealth of talent and medical expertise left a heavy impact on the legislation and regulations in this field.

I believe a real sign of Dr. Carter's compassion for people everywhere is his extensive travel throughout the world, meeting with and helping health groups and his international colleagues in many countries.

Many of you here in Congress know Dr. Carter well. You know of his tireless efforts to make this world a little bit better place to live.

My colleague from New York, Congressman JACK KEMP, has said that Tim Lee is "a man of the highest integrity." I could not agree more.

In a breakfast meeting I had with Vice President GEORGE BUSH not too long ago, the Vice President told me that his friendship with Congressman Carter is one which he will treasure always.

As a doctor, as a teacher, during World War II, on the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee and on the Small Business Committee, Tim Lee Carter served his country well.

I am very proud to represent the same district as my forerunner, Congressman Carter.

□ 1345

I know you will all agree with me when I say that Dr. Tim Lee Carter is missed in these great Halls.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the remainder of my time.

A CALL FOR AN END TO HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS BY THE SOVIET UNION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. TAUKE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

● Mr. TAUKE. Mr. Speaker, last week we in Congress held a vigil on the treatment received by many Jewish "refuseniks" in the Soviet Union. I, for one, am convinced that the U.S.S.R.'s restrictive emigration procedures are of great concern to the entire free world.

Time after time I have seen evidence of many individuals and families who have been refused emigration permits by officials of the Soviet Government. At any given time, there are 50,000 applications for exit visas pending from Jewish people alone. But in 1979, for example, while 176,000 Jews applied for permission to emigrate, only 51,300 exit visas were granted.

These figures are shocking enough. However, what occurred in the following years is worse. In 1980, 21,774 Jews were granted exit visas, although the number of applications did not decrease from the previous year. In 1981, through the first week in May, 4,800 of these people have left the Soviet Union. At that rate, only 12,000 to 14,000 will be allowed to leave during 1981, bringing the number of granted visas to a low unheard of since 1972.

Thousands of people have applied for these exit visas twice a year. Many, such as Anatoly Shcharansky, are famous. Many are not.

Another disgraceful situation begins immediately after the Jewish individual applies for an exit visa. At that time, he loses his job and cannot find another. In many cases, this has given the Soviet Government officials leeway to arrest and convict the refusenik for parasitism. Since it is government action that causes the refusenik to lose his job in the first place, this entire situation is grossly unfair.

Discrimination by any government against those who wish to emigrate must end. All those who wish to leave the U.S.S.R.—no matter what their religion—must have the right to choose where they want to live and under what government. I join many of my colleagues in Congress in calling for an end to violations of human rights by the Soviet Union.●

POPE JOHN PAUL II

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. ANNUNZIO) is recognized for 5 minutes.

● Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, people of good will all over the world were deeply saddened by the news of the senseless attack on Pope John Paul II, and I join the people of Chicago, who feel a special kinship with this loving spiritual leader since his visit to us last year, in their sadness and in their fervent prayers for his successful recovery.

Karol Wojtyla, born in Poland and elected as Pope in 1978, has made clear his unwavering dedication to the cause of human dignity, as have the Polish people themselves. Just as the courage of the Polish people will never fail, Pope John Paul's courage will never fail. His faith, his love, and his devotion to Christian principle will continue to inspire the peoples of the world and strengthen the ideals of humane civilization, in which all nations and peoples can live productively in peace.

During this terrible time of tears and worry for the fallen pontiff, a citizen of Poznan, Poland, is reported as saying:

For me, for all of us, John Paul II is not only the head of the church but he is also the burning heart of Poland beating throughout the world.

Poland and Pope John Paul II have become symbols of hope for a world weary of the violence and hatred of individuals and nations alike. May God preserve this splendid leader whose loving kindness, humility, and fearless confidence in the power of righteousness have enlightened and inspired the world.●

TRIBUTE TO FORT WALTON BEACH HIGH SCHOOL BAND

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. HUTTO) is recognized for 5 minutes.

● Mr. HUTTO. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to heartily salute the Fort Walton Beach High School Band which was selected to represent Florida and marched in the inaugural parade this year.

Under the direction of Mr. Ernest Hebson, the performance, which was both majestic and proud, was indeed a credit to the school, their hometown, and all of the people of the State of Florida. They displayed discipline which could only come from long hours of hard work, and I was extremely pleased to be able to say that they were from the First District of Florida.

The principal of this fine school, Mr. C. F. Reynolds, the faculty, the students, and the parents are also to be applauded for their dedication, work, and support of the Viking Band, which has won many honors for their outstanding performances the last several years.●

ARTICLE NOTES MAJOR U.S. WEAKNESS

(Mr. SIMON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. Speaker, rarely have I found an article which I have found so incisive and to the point, touching on a major U.S. weakness.

The article I am referring to is by David P. Calleo, a professor of European studies at the School of Advanced International Studies at Johns Hopkins University. He is author or coauthor of several books about the U.S. economy and foreign affairs.

The article is titled "Inflation and American Power" and appeared in the spring edition of Foreign Affairs.

His fundamental thesis is that we have to reexamine American foreign commitments if we really want to be serious about getting hold of inflation.

There are a number of other assertions in the article which I find right to the point.

I am inserting his article in the RECORD, as well as a column I did for the newspapers in my district, which includes some comment which I have had on his article.

I urge my colleagues in both the House and Senate to read the article.

I know that is a fairly common plea as we insert these items in the RECORD, but for staff members who read this I urge you to call this to the attention of your Member. In my 6½ years in Congress I do not recall an article more important and more to the point than this one.

The material follows:

[Newsletter by Congressman PAUL SIMON]

DEFENSE AND INFLATION

The latest edition of the magazine Foreign Affairs has an article, "Inflation and American Power" by David P. Calleo, which I would like every member of Congress, every journalist, every opinion-molder in this country to read.

In six and one-half years of writing this column as a member of the House of Representatives, I do not believe I have ever used an article by someone else as a basis for my column, but this thoughtful piece merits unusual attention.

His basic point is that U.S. policy abroad has to be re-examined (along with domestic policy) if we are to get control of inflation.

Among other things, his article makes these assertions (with my comments in parentheses following):

1. There is plenty of guilt to be passed around to both Democratic and Republican administrations for our present inflation problems. (He is correct.)

2. The social concerns of the U.S. government are not the basic cause of inflation. "The goals of the German government, including an expensive welfare system as well as the full employment of its work force, have been pursued without the combined budget deficits and easy-money characteristics of the American economy." (And without our high inflation rates.)

3. "Governments are constantly 'declaring war' on inflation. But all other things being equal, a political system generally prefers inflation to its cure." (How right he is! I have seen the same tendency in three administrations now, two Republican and one Democratic. There is an overwhelming reluctance to tackle the fundamental problems, like correction of the indexing errors.)

4. After the sudden rise of oil prices by OPEC, "from 1973 through 1979, other industrial countries stabilized or actually cut back their volume of imported petroleum. The United States, by contrast, increased its import volume by 34 percent." (Unfortunately, he is correct. And the latest budget we have before us calls for substantial cuts in coal research, keeping us more dependent on oil.)

5. "Long-range remedies cannot be expected to make progress in the face of persistent, relentless inflationary stimulus from the government's own spending and finance. Ending inflation must start with ending those government policies that have been fueling it." (Correct. The bright spot in the government picture is the Federal Reserve Board, which is determined to keep a stable money supply. I would prefer they combine that with credit restrictions rather than high interest rates. But the author's basic point that we have to get hold of our fiscal policy is sound.)

6. "The Reagan Administration's evasive fantasies lie with 'supply-side' economics. . . . Without eliminating the government's perpetual deficits, supply-side economics will prove only one more in a long line of postwar gimmicks." (How true!)

7. "A new public consensus" has not been created around "a realistic view of America's diplomatic and strategic position. . . . This inability to lead the American public toward accepting a more complex world must be counted as the major failing of American foreign policy in the 1970s." (Amen! And unfortunately our political campaigns tend to feed on oversimplifications, rather than shed light, and poorly informed candidates find themselves trapped by their campaign oratory, which is fashioned by the polls rather than the facts.)

8. The task of stopping inflation "is complicated by the strong pressure in recent years for a major American rearmament." He then points out that the United States spends significantly more on defense than the nations of Western Europe and Japan do, both in absolute numbers and in percentage of our national income. Yet for fiscal year 1981, 51 percent of our defense budget is designated for the Western European threat. He suggests that Western Europe ought to pick up more of their own bill. "Disbanding six of the present ten U.S.-NATO divisions would alone bring, within three years, an annual saving to the defense budget of some $30 billion. . . . Reforming America's European commitment would . . . be only a step toward curing America's inflation, not a panacea. But without some such major breakthrough in military spending, prospects for real improvement seem dim."

(Interestingly, the House Budget Committee's Inflation Task Force, which I chaired, had this controversial statement in it last year:

("This is not to suggest that the Nation's economy cannot stand the present—or higher—levels of defense expenditures. But we must be aware that, if that is the choice, then the result will be higher taxes, assuming neither high unemployment or high inflation is an acceptable alternative. We can ill afford to long pretend that we can avoid this difficult choice. By 'avoiding' the choice we choose high inflation."

(That is no more popular now than when the statement was issued, but it is still accurate. We have real defense needs, particularly in personnel. Europeans criticize us for this weakness. But we need to develop a more sophisticated strategy which recognizes that part of the nation's security is a sound economy, that moves on the defense problems of personnel and spare parts, and conventional forces, that asks our friends to share their full end of the defense load, and that recognizes the Soviet threat in the developing nations should be met by helping to provide greater opportunity for those people. Our present policies are geared to yesterday's world and are inflationary. We need non-inflationary policies which recognize today's and tomorrow's realities.)

INFLATION AND AMERICAN POWER

(By David P. Calleo)*

In recent years, American policy at home and abroad has seemed more pressed by events and less sure of its responses than at any time since the late 1940s. Since World War II, the guiding ideals of policy have been neo-Keynesian "full-employment" at home and neo-Wilsonian leadership abroad. It is difficult to count the achievements unimpressive. Along with an unparalleled domestic prosperity, America's leadership and power have coaxed the world into a structure of collective security and liberal economic interdependence—a pax Americana that has been, on balance, the happiest era of this troubled century. The present disarray of American policy arises from two broad trends that have increasingly undermined both its domestic and foreign achievements. The first is the apparently relentless acceleration of domestic inflation—a process that involves increasingly violent swings of the business cycle and a progressive stagnation of real growth and competitiveness. The second is the deterioration of American power abroad and, with it, the disintegration of the pax Americana.

Blaming the ineptitude of incumbent policymakers is always tempting and in recent years perhaps unusually plausible. In longer perspective, however, America's difficulties seem longstanding and cumulative rather than adventitious and random—the result less of inept and inexperienced tactics in one administration than of increasingly inadequate strategies through several. From this perspective, improvement depends not so much upon fresh leadership, per se, as upon a hardheaded reexamination of the mix of strategies long used to maintain American goals at home and abroad.

Escaping from the inadequacies of current policies requires, first of all, understanding why they no longer work. The two fundamental problems—domestic inflation and foreign weakness—have numerous independent causes. One feature, however, they share in common: overextension. Both at home and abroad, American ambitions seem to exceed present American resources. In addition, economic policy and geopolitical position have been growing progressively interconnected. Failure in one sphere reverberates in the other. Lack of control over domestic inflation makes maintaining the postwar international system, and our position within it, more and more difficult. At the same time, restoring stable prosperity to the domestic economy seems increasingly unlikely without modifying the American role in the international system.

For American policy in its present weakness, this interdependence has thus become a vicious circle of reinforcing failures. How can the cycle be broken without a retreat from the liberal economic order abroad or a radical decline in prosperity at home? For a start, why has the United States been suffering from inflation and how has that inflation been connected to our position abroad?

II

America's basic inflation rate has risen higher in each business cycle of the past two decades. In 20 years, prices have increased roughly 177 percent and are now increasing at an annual rate of 12.5 percent.[1]

Moreover, the causes are rooted in the character of our political economy. While inflation also grew to serious proportions in the late 1940s and through 1951, the domestic rate was kept down through the Eisenhower era and remained low until the later 1960s. The onset of the current inflation is commonly traced to the policies of the Johnson Administration, in particular to its combination of the Vietnam War with the Great Society. Actually, the inflation of domestic prices began to show up in 1965, well before Vietnam expenditures began having serious effects on the economy.[2] In any event, the roots of Johnson's expensive military and social programs are clearly to be found in the Kennedy Administration—in its rearmament and ambitious reassertion of American leadership abroad and its energetic pursuit of neo-Keynesian policies at home. Concern with growth and leadership, of course, hardly began with Kennedy; but earlier postwar Presidents pursued the same goals with more concern for the limits of fiscal resources.

If any single development may be said to have opened the door to the renewed inflation of the 1960s and 1970s, it was Kennedy's fiscal policy. More precisely, it was the fiscal policy that Kennedy espoused and Johnson achieved. With his famous tax-cut proposal of 1963, Kennedy promoted the "full-employment budget," a notion that calls for government deficits whenever the economy is running at less than its hypothetical full use of plant and labor. Ever since Johnson pushed through the Kennedy tax cut in January 1964, full-employment budgets have been the governing principle of fiscal policy. And since 1964, the federal budget has been in deficit every year but one.[3]

Analysts, of course, differ endlessly over the underlying causes of inflation. Nearly every modern society has rapidly rising expectations and aggressively powerful interest groups. Most contemporary economies are thus predisposed to inflation. Blaming inflation on government deficits is rather simplistic. A government budget embodies the aggregate demands of the political system. A government deficit reflects the whole society's excessive claims on its resources. It may also reflect deeply rooted structural distortions that prevent the economy from generating the resources demanded.

All this being said, it is the duty of government to govern, not merely to reflect passively the overall claims of its citizenry. A budget is essentially a checkpoint, where the state is meant to make rational choices in the general interest. Since, in practice, the full-employment budget idea virtually mandates fiscal deficits at nearly all stages of the business cycle, common sense suggests that enshrining such a doctrine at the center of policy can be expected to encourage inflation—in either peace or war. When such a fiscal policy is accompanied by America's traditional easy money policy, as it has been throughout the period, inflation is inevitable.

An inflationary policy, ratified by a complacent monetary policy, does, of course, have advantages. Not only are governments free to pursue a variety of goals with less need to decide among them, but inflation helps keep resources more fully at work. In the short run, inflation encourages employment, particularly if prices rise faster than wages and thus reduce the real cost of labor. As the public gradually loses its "money illusion," however, wages and salaries begin to gain on prices. Continuing high employment requires more and more inflationary stimulus. Full-employment policy becomes a race between the government's printing press and the public's imagination. Inflation is thus difficult to stabilize, but tends relentlessly to accelerate.

To call the generous fiscal policy of the past two decades a "full-employment" policy is, of course, somewhat misleading. The full-employment-budget idea does provide a rationale for a looser fiscal policy. It legitimizes the political system's unwillingness to bring its goals into balance with the level of real resources. But the unbalanced expenditures that result may only incidentaly be motivated by considerations of employment. Governments in countries with substantially lower inflation rates that the United States are, in fact, no more tolerant of unemployment than American liberals. Unemployment in the Federal Republic of Germany, for example, has traditionally been substantially lower than in the United States. But the goals of the German government, including an expensive welfare system as well as the full employment of its work force, have been pursued without the combined budget deficits and easy-money characteristics of the American economy.

Since government policy is the efficient if not the ultimate cause of inflation, changing government policy is also the essential cure. Governments are constantly "declaring war" on inflation. But all other things being equal, a political system generally prefers inflation to its cure. Not everyone benefits from inflation, of course. A conservative domestic coalition may arise to force a sufficient limit and precedence among goals to fit the real resources available. But as the economy grows more and more habituated to inflation, the costs of ending it grow increasingly severe for the particular interests of more and more groups. Hence, short of some extreme explosion that appears to threaten property itself, domestic coalitions seldom have lasting success in halting inflationary policies.

For most countries, the major check on domestic inflation lies in the need to defend the value of the currency. In an open world economy, if one country's inflation rate exceeds that of others, its surplus money begins to flow to less inflationary countries where money is in shorter supply and real interest rates are higher. The inflationary country suffers a balance-of-payments deficit and its currency begins to weaken against other currencies. Since remedies like devaluation or currency controls are self-defeating for most states, inflationary countries are finally forced to rein in their domestic fiscal and monetary policy sufficiently to reduce their inflation rate to the international norm. Typically, government policy oscillates between responding to domestic pressures for higher spending and international pressures threatening the value of the currency. Hence, the "stop-go" policies characteristic of Western economic management, and the "stagflation" that is their normal consequence.

Unfortunately for the control of inflation in America, the United States was long exempt from the need to defend the dollar. Under the international monetary system set up at Bretton Woods, the central banks of other countries were supposed to hold our exported dollars as part of their monetary reserves. The dollar was not supposed to be able to devalue. As a result, successive American governments, acting on these assumptions, were never forced to limit government goals for the sake of the dollar, even though the United States ran balance-of-payments deficits continually throughout the 1950s and 1960s.

The dollar's role as "world money" and the continuing American balance-of-payments deficit linked America's domestic inflation to the international system in a special way. Under the arrangements of Bretton Woods, a good part of America's inflation in the 1960s was, in effect, "exported." The excess dollars created to stimulate full employment or pursue internationalist goals migrated abroad to less inflationary economies with higher real returns on money. Not only did many billions of exported dollars end up in foreign central banks, but many billions more helped form an offshore-dollar capital market centered in London. In other words, America's exported inflation was either absorbed into the national money supplies of our creditors or else went to form a huge pool of capital available to finance the burgeoning "international economy" of multinational lenders or borrowers. Under these circumstances, not only did the external system impose no real discipline upon our domestic economy, but American inflation began to exacerbate inflation elsewhere.

Under the Bretton Woods arrangement, however, certain checks were supposed to limit this process. The United States was supposed to keep adequate reserves of gold and foreign exchange to meet the demands of its creditors. But by the end of the 1960s the international dollar markets had become so huge and volatile that our capacity to meet demands for convertibility at the going exchange rate had become a polite fiction, sustained by the not-so-polite arm-twisting of our allies.[4]

The dollar was almost forced to devalue in early 1968, when Johnson was still energetically pursuing his expansive foreign and domestic policies. It was rescued for a couple of years thereafter by Europe's domestic political troubles and the consequent inflationary boom, as well as by the Federal Reserve's belated but savage attempt to tighten the runaway American money supply. By the time Johnson left office, domestic inflation was diminishing and the dollar was stronger.

Nixon tried to consolidate and extend this pause through the early years of his first term, but without precipitate withdrawal from Vietnam itself or a return to anything like the relatively low pre-Vietnam military expenditures.[5] Restraint under such circumstances was neither effective nor popular, as the congressional elections of 1970 made clear. Nixon's instinct for political survival dictated his vigorous "reflation" of 1970 and 1971. Much of the renewed inflation again flowed abroad. The massive balance-of-payments deficit that recommenced at the end of 1970 made the dollar's depreciation inevitable.[6] In August 1971, with world currency markets in turmoil, Nixon seized the initiative and devalued the dollar.

III

Nixon's solution to the balance-of-payments crisis marked a major shift that dominated American economic and foreign policy throughout the rest of the decade. The Nixon solution made America's domestic prosperity directly dependent upon its external power. In effect, Nixon's policy was a nationalist or "mercantilist" revolution. To understand how it has worked requires a brief look at the American economy through the rest of the decade.

The Kennedy and Johnson Administration had acted as if the dollar's weakness was a temporary inconveneince, to be financed on a short-term basis until the underlying strength of the American economy could reassert itself. Both firmly resisted any notion that the international position of the dollars required restraining domestic policy or limiting foreign commitments. By Nixon's time, the international constraints common to other states finally came to be felt by the United States. Unless Nixon decided to limit American goals—which, like his predecessors, he declined to do—the dollar was clearly fated to devalue. In effect, the United States gave up trying to reconcile its political goals at home and abroad with its obligations as the manager of the world's monetary system.

Since a great deal of American prestige had gone into defending the dollar from devaluation, Nixon was concerned with finding a new ideology to justify its collapse. The United States could not appear a "pitiful, helpless giant" in the international monetary arena any more than in Vietnam. American economics proved more than equal to the challenge. According to the new official line, the arrangements of Bretton Woods had been unfair to American interests. The United States had been exploited by its allies. The generous arrangements of the immediate postwar era that had encouraged Europe to form a trading bloc, with the United States providing both monetary and military stability, had become frozen into a pattern of anti-American economic discrimination. Since Bretton Woods had precluded American devaluation, even after the European and Japanese recovery, the dollar grew "overvalued," with dire consequences for the American economy. The most obvious consequence was thought to be the steady decline of the American trade balance after the mid-1960s, a decline that in 1971 brought us the first trade deficit since the nineteenth century.[7] Washington's prescription was clear: the United States should give up trying to defend the dollar. It should adopt a posture of "benign neglect." If Europeans would not revalue their currencies upward, the United States should devalue.

Armed with this rationale, Nixon and Treasury Secretary John Connally were able to present the dollar's collapse of August 1971 as a major American victory. Devaluation was, as noted, a nationalist revolution in American policy and did bring many short-term advantages. The victory was, to be sure, over America's own rich allies, and the new policy presented the Europeans and Japanese with a basic dilemma. They could let the value of the dollar fall, which would make American goods cheaper on the world market and thereby harm the competitiveness of the export industries upon which they were heavily dependent. Or they could support the dollar by continuing to absorb it into their reserves, which would continue to expand their own money supplies and import American inflation into their economies.

Their problem, however, was not so much Nixon's initial devaluation. The dollar was most certainly overvalued in 1971 and some depreciation was in order. Unhappily, the 1971 devaluation was to prove not a drastic once-and-for-all treatment but the beginning of a long addiction to depreciation. Nixon's rationale, by focusing on the arrangements of Bretton Woods and the particular costs of the Vietnam War, ignored the fundamental and continuing cause of the dollar's overevaluation, namely the American economy's persistent inflation. As long as that inflation continued, no single devaluation could be expected to resolve the dollar's weakness. Instead, the dollar could be expected to depreciate over and over again. Rather than a newly stabilized dollar, the world would be presented with a floating, or rather a sinking, dollar. With such a policy, moreover, America's domestic inflation could be expected to grow worse. By renouncing its obligations to the Bretton Woods system, the United States removed the international system's belated check to domestic inflation. In effect, Nixon's perpetual devaluation was the international analogue to Kennedy's domestic full-employment budget. In both cases, the American political system jettisoned a major barrier to its inflation.

The predictable consequences soon occurred. Nixon's expansionary policies continued. Arthur Burns' Federal Reserve accommodated.

The boom helped greatly, perhaps decisively, in Nixon's reelection. Domestic wage and price controls masked the domestic price of inflation until 1973, but the other signs of inflation, the huge balance-of-payments deficits, continued even after the 1971 devaluation.[8] The United States, in other words, resumed exporting a large part of its inflation to the rest of the world. As this inflationary wave reverberated throughout the industrialized countries, along with a simultaneous boom, the prices of raw materials naturally began to rise sharply. And at the same time, long-term trends in supply and demand had made world food and oil prices, long artificially depressed in the United States by government policies, ripe for explosion. A failed Russian harvest proved the trigger for food prices; the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) oil cartel was on hand to seize the opportunities in oil.[9]

In due course, Nixon's inflationary boom evolved into a recessionary hangover. The cyclical downturn of 1974 and 1975 turned into a deep recession, exacerbated by food and oil prices that reduced real income and sucked away demand from other products. While recession brought temporary relief from price inflation, the inflation rate at the cycle's lowest point—1976—nevertheless remained more than five times higher than when Kennedy came into office in 1961.[10]

Despite its early disasters, the Nixonian policy was carried over into the Ford and Carter Administrations. By 1976 the United States had launched a second Nixonian boom, fueled by the usual mix of arms spending and expanding entitlements and sustained by the familiar combination of fiscal deficits and an expanding money supply. The consequences were equally familiar—accelerating inflation reached a new cyclical high—from the six-percent peak of 1976 to the 16.8-percent peak of 1980.[11] Furthermore, American policy actively pressed the dollar's depreciation. Thus, after falling 33 percent against the West German mark from 1970 to 1975, the dollar fell an additional 26 percent from 1975 through 1979.[12]

On the face of it, this combination of domestic inflation and external dollar depreciation appeared to work rather well, particularly from the short-term perspectives of politicians and their economic advisers. The 1976 boom lasted until 1980 and proved the longest in postwar history. Until late 1978, no serious attempt was made to curb domestic inflation. Indeed, depreciation of the dollar abroad compensated for the lost equilibrium at home.

After 1973, the Nixonian formula had acquired another element: the refusal to adjust the real economy to the new world oil prices. To do so would have meant reducing domestic demand for oil and other imports sufficiently to bring our trade into balance. This would have required letting domestic oil prices rise to the world level or imposing a serious quota and rationing system. Instead, government controls kept domestic oil prices low and foreign oil was imported without stint. Thus, while other industrial economies chopped overall domestic demand, the United States enjoyed a boom. From 1973 through 1979, other industrial countries stabilized or actually cut back their volume of imported petroleum. The United States, by contrast, increased its import volume by 34 percent.[13] Adjustment to the new world oil price took place through inflation. Since foreign as well as domestic oil prices were denominated in dollars, the real price of oil, insofar as it remained the same, kept falling with the depreciating dollar and the inflating price of industrial goods.[14] To add insult to injury, the falling dollar steadily depreciated the oil-producers' financial assets.

The regularly depreciating dollar also helped boost the competitiveness of American products at home and abroad. In addition, a floating dollar meant there was no need for control on flows of capital abroad; thus, what happened was not only the usual huge outflow of American capital, but along with it an extraordinary international expansion of American financial institutions. American banks, with access to seemingly endless liquidity, became the principal mechanism for "recycling" oil profits.[15]

Thus, in nationalistic terms the Nixonian strategy appeared to have many advantages in the short term. But in the longer term its disadvantages have become all too apparent. Much that has been counted as domestic growth seems questionable. While a decade of accelerated inflation and depreciated currency produced considerable gains in foreign trade and the overall gross national product, it also appears to have weakened the economy's vitality, as savings, investment and productivity increases declined to levels substantially below those of most other industrial countries.

Even the international growth of American banks may, in due course, prove a greater liability than benefit. Much of the expansion is the "recycling" of borrowed oil funds to underdeveloped countries. Some of the flow has undoubtedly financed real growth in Third World countries. But much of it has financed unrealistic levels of consumption, including a prolonged failure to adjust to new energy prices. The increasing shakiness of the world's financial structure is the obvious consequence. Attempts by U.S. banks to unload the spiralling Third World debts on the International Monetary Fund or the OPEC countries have understandably met with only limited success.[16] While unsound financial structures may be propped up indefinitely, no one will have any trouble explaining the causes of a major world financial crash, should one occur within the next decade. Meanwhile, any serious attempt to reduce world inflation, and hence the liquidity available for unproductive lending, will greatly increase the danger.

IV

This Nixonian policy, carried over in the Carter Administration, was nationalist or "mercantilist" both in its objectives and in its dependence upon using American political power to shape international economic relations. American domestic prosperity was linked to continuing devaluation at the expense of both the rich allies and OPEC. Throughout the decade, Europeans and Japanese remained caught in their original dilemma. To their manufactures, a regularly declining dollar seemed a permanent beggarthy-neighbor devaluation. To their central bankers, supporting the dollar imported inflation. To those threatened by high world-energy prices, American profligacy reinforced both the cartel and the upward pressure on prices. To oil-producers themselves, falling dollars meant taking an asset that depreciated in the bank in exchange for an asset that appreciated in the ground. And to anyone concerned about inflation in the world, American policy seemed an unquenchable fount of excess money. Hence the increasingly tense and competitive relationship between the United States and its economic partners since Nixon and Connally's revolution.

Paradoxically, the Nixonian strategy depended upon the continued cooperation of those partners. For the American capacity to escape retaliation from inflation at home and depreciation abroad depended specifically upon the continuation of American monetary or dollar predominance within an integrated international system. And, given its growing economic disadvantages to others, that monetary hegemony, in turn, increasingly depended upon America's broader geopolitical power.

Three dimensions of this American geopolitical primacy were particularly critical in sustaining the Nixonian economic policy:

(1) American influence over Western Europe and Japan to prevent serious retaliation against exported inflation and a continually declining dollar;

(2) American influence over the Middle East to restrain OPEC from raising oil prices to compensate adequately for American inflation and the declining dollar; and

(3) American détente with the Soviet Union sufficient to inhibit direct Soviet challenges or Soviet support for others inclined to challenge American influence and power in the Middle East or among the noncommunist industrialized countries.

To take up each condition briefly:

The ability to depreciate the dollar without retaliation after 1971, like American dollar hegemony in the latter days of the Bretton Woods system, depended essentially upon America's political and military relationship with Western Europe. For the Europeans, resolution of the dilemma posed by the dollar's continuing devaluation lay in building a protected economic bloc. So radical an assertion of independence, quite apart from its political difficulties and economic costs among the Europeans themselves, was hardly compatible with Europe's dependent relationship as an American military protectorate. While progress toward détente, and toward a German settlement in particular, clearly reduced American leverage over Europe, no amelioration of tension was likely to change the fundamental military realities, at least not until the Europeans were prepared to pay for a more independent military posture.

As discussed above, the American economic strategy that evolved after Nixon included a refusal to adjust the real economy to the new oil prices. The actual adjustment came through an inflation and dollar depreciation that steadily lowered the real oil price to the United States. The success of such adjustment depended, of course, on the oil-producers not regularly raising the dollar price of oil sufficiently to compensate for the inflation. That OPEC did not raise its prices adequately after 1973 until 1979 was the consequence not only of a temporarily surfeited petroleum market, but also of American power in the Middle East. America's overwhelming ascendancy in the region began after the October 1973 War. Egypt's break with the Soviets effectively expelled the Soviets from participation in the regional balance. With Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy and the scuttling of the Geneva talks, the United States took over management of the Arab-Israeli dispute—ejecting not only the Soviets but the Europeans as well. For several years diplomatic control of the Arab-Israeli dispute gave the United States considerable leverage. In addition, the key oil-producing nations saw themselves as heavily dependent on the United States for their basic security.

In 1973, Kissinger began a policy of heavy arms sales to Iran and the following year to Saudi Arabia. Each was to be not only a huge source of profit for the United States but also a "surrogate" for American power. Relations with the Iranian regime grew so close that the United States became, in effect, the Shah's partner in the modernization of Iran. With these special relations, which both the Shah and the Saudi ruling family desired, America's regional influence helped deter any drastic rises in OPEC's oil prices sufficient to compensate for American inflation and currency depreciation.[17]

Bipolar détente had less direct but nevertheless significant effects for American economic strategy. Détente reinforced the status quo in Europe and tended to do the same in the Middle East. Since both regions were too central to the vital interests of the superpowers to permit much room for dramatic maneuver, détente robbed potential rebels against American ascendancy of the Soviet support they might normally have expected. In summary, until the late 1970s, the Nixonian economic strategy had the political power it needed in the two regions of the world critical to its success.

The refurbishing of America's world position during the Nixon and Ford Administrations that sustained economic strategy was highly conscious, well-articulated, and for a time brilliantly successful. Unfortunately, it has also proved extremely vulnerable. By the end of the decade, as we know, bipolar détente was a shambles, American predominance in the Middle East had collapsed, and relations with Europe were worse than at any time since the war. Among its other effects, this geopolitical deterioration spelled the beginning of the end for the Nixonian economic strategy.

Why did the American position deteriorate so rapidly? Actually, all parts began to deteriorate together. The most spectacular "loss" for American power was the collapse of the Shah's regime in Iran, a profound social and cultural upheaval full of implications for the Muslim world as whole. The United States was signaled out as the revolution's principal enemy, mostly because it had taken such an extended, visible, and direct role in the Shah's domestic system. The United States became the scapegoat for a century or more of accumulated Persian resentments against the West. Khomeini's revolution also raised disturbing questions about the dangers of imposed technocratic "development" for either the domestic stability of any developing country, or for world order in general. Iran also revealed the vulnerabilities of American "hegemony on the cheap," with "surrogates" substituting for direct American power. And, as the subsequent Iraq-Iran war threatened chaos and destruction to the entire oil region, the dangers of dumping arms in unstable parts of the world grew increasingly vivid.

America's détente policy with the Soviet Union also proved highly vulnerable. While détente stretching back to the late 1950s, had seemingly reached its apogee under Kissinger, its foundations had been eroding in Kissinger's later years. The first strategic arms limitation (SALT) agreement outraged congressional conservatives. Anger multiplied as Russian military strength was seen to be growing and, with it, Russian assertiveness in the Third World. Insatiable Soviet imperialism, it was thought, was mocking the premises of détente. By 1975, Kissinger himself had complained bitterly over the incursions of Russia and its Cuban surrogate into Angola.

The Carter Administration, despite its eccentric early disarmament proposals and its awkward preoccupation with human rights in the Soviet Union, nevertheless made a major diplomatic effort to follow the logic of bipolar détente through SALT II negotiations. But the steady growth of anti-Soviet opinion made ratification of any SALT II treaty increasingly improbable. To save the treaty, the Administration felt constrained to appease the forces hostile to it. To seem legitimate before those forces, SALT II had to be presented as a victory over the Soviets, rather than a new step toward mutual accommodation. Since nothing could compel the Russians to accept terms sufficiently unbalanced to be presented as an American "victory," the Carter Administration put itself hopelessly on the defensive before its domestic critics.

The self-defeating contradictions of Carter's policies became painfuly obvious during the Afghan crisis in late 1979. The Administration took the invasion as an aggressive challenge to America's Middle East position and a general betrayal of détente. To show strength and punish the Russians, several years of Western "bridge-building" were finally dismantled in short order. While the Administration's conservative domestic critics were thus preempted, the SALT II treaty was also doomed.

Predictably, United States also put itself sharply at odds with its European allies. As unenthusiastic about Soviet incursions into vital oil regions as the Americans, Europeans were prepared to condemn the invasion, warn the Russians about Pakistan and the Gulf, and make matters in the region itself as difficult for the Soviets as possible. Europeans also hoped to take advantage of Muslim outrage over Afghanistan to deflect the Iranian revolution from its anti-Western preoccupation, and were thus disinclined to join in American sanctions against Iran. But Europeans were not willing to let Afghanistan become the occasion for a return to the cold war in Europe itself. Rightly or wrongly, the Europeans felt they had more to lose than to gain from an end to détente in their own region. Thus, whereas the United States saw Europe as a place to put pressure on the Russians as part of a global game, Europeans believed Europe should, if at all possible, remain a safe zone insulated from the confrontations inevitable elsewhere.

In effect, the Europeans came to have their own distinct interests in détente. From de Gaulle's time onward, they had done their best to prevent Western-Soviet relations from being managed exclusively by the Americans. Among other things, a détente policy of their own now gives Europeans room for maneuver against too much American domination, in the economic sphere particularly. To be sure, European diplomacy toward the Russians takes place within the context of their fundamental "Western" orientation. Not even de Gaulle ever intended some dramatic reversal of alliances. Militarily, the states of Europe remain American protectorates, but nevertheless determined to keep the price for that protection within reasonable bounds. Anyone familiar with European views of American foreign economic policy does not find that determination altogether surprising, particularly in a period of extreme transatlantic tension over what has seemed a ceaseless American exploitation of dollar hegemony.

Keeping down the price for their American protection requires maintaining "normal" if wary relations with the Russians within Europe itself. In addition to this broad geopolitical imperative, détente brought Western Europe numerous commercial advantages, made life easier for East European states, and had many human benefits. Thus, to have expected the Europeans to jump to the new tune, to break their carefully cultivated regional relations with the Soviets, was to court a rebuff. Indeed, a certain degree of heightened Soviet-American tension outside Europe was not altogether unwelcome to the Europeans. It seemed to give them leverage for a more independent position, insofar, that is, as amateurish American diplomacy and aggressive Soviet adventurism did not plunge the world into a war.

V

As might have been expected, the deteriorating American position in the Middle East and Europe began to have significant consequences for American economic policy during the Carter Administration. The decline of the Nixonian pax Americana forced a retreat from Carter's essentially Nixonian economic policy. In both Europe and the Middle East, 1979 proved a critical turning point.

The European-American polemic over economic policy grew steadily worse as the Carter boom continued. By the fall of 1978, the virulent criticism from European governments, and what already seemed a dangerous tendency toward exaggerated swings in the world currency markets, forced an apparent American retreat. The Federal Reserve seemed prepared to apply restraint on the money supply and the Treasury organized an elaborate set of arrangements to defend the value of the dollar.[18]

Within a few months, however, American economic policy had slid back into its habitual easy posture. The result was the collapse of the dollar that began in the summer of 1979 and extended to the winter of 1980. So severe were the dumping of dollars, the explosion of gold prices, and the decline of the domestic bond market that some catastrophic flight from the dollar began to seem a serious possibility. In effect, these market reactions represented a sort of European-Arab revolt against American economic policy. Foreign holders of dollars began to exercise their financial power in a fashion that compelled an American retreat. During 1979, Europeans also managed an apparently successful revival of their perennial project for a European Monetary System. In effect, a reinvigorated Franco-German coalition imposed a distinct monetary regime on the rest of continental Western Europe, a "zone of stability" that began to set in place structures that could be used to erect a separate Europe-centered economic bloc, with a reserve currency to rival the dollar.

Arab disaffection, as well as the effects of the Iranian revolution in shrinking the oil supply, also became evident in the vital sphere of oil prices. From the summer to December 1979, OPEC managed to agree on the first major increases in real (inflation-discounted) oil prices since 1973, an accomplishment repeated again at the end of 1980.[19] Nothing reflected more clearly the decline of American geopolitical power over the Middle East.

The consequences for the American domestic economy are, of course, familiar to everyone in this country. In mid-1979, the Federal Reserve began a policy of unprecedented restraint on the money supply, and the President, within a few months, began calling for a balanced federal budget. By April 1980, interest rates had reached 20 percent and the long-delayed cyclical downturn finally hit with exceptional severity. The second quarter saw a decline in industrial production even worse than in the recession of 1974–75. While economic prospects brightened over the summer of 1980, particularly as money grew less tight before the election, the start of a new and sustainable Nixonian boom in 1981 seems unlikely. Whatever the predispositions of the Reagan Administration towards arms spending and tax cuts, the continued virulence of American price inflation, combined with the heightened dangers of foreign retaliation, should preclude a return to the old pattern.

Neither oil nor currency markets are likely to tolerate passively a new burst of American inflation. The Iraq-Iran war quickly dissipated any oil glut following the 1979 price rise, and thus prices were again rising substantially in the latter part of 1980. Under these conditions, OPEC would have little difficulty in sustaining sharply higher prices, should American inflation accelerate and currency depreciation resume. Europe, meanwhile, has been heading into a cyclical downturn of its own, a development that should quickly translate any American domestic inflation into downward pressure on the dollar. In short, world economic conditions, in themselves, make it highly dangerous for the United States to resume dollar depreciation. To do so risks not only runaway inflation at home, but rapid deterioration of the international system, with incalculable political repercussions.

VI

If the Reagan Administration is constrained to renounce the Nixonian pattern of behavior, how will it avoid the monetary restraint of the past year, in other words, a continuation of stop-go stagflation? To flourish without the Nixonian strategy, the United States will have to find some fundamental new economic formula for achieving domestic prosperity without generating inflation.

Analysts who cannot agree on the causes of inflation are unlikely to agree on its cure. Inflation obviously has deep roots in the structure of our whole political economy. But in the cure as in the cause, government policy is the critical checkpoint. The federal government's own easy money policy used to finance budget deficits plays a crucial role. Whatever else may be needed, inflation is unlikely to end until the government stops running large fiscal deficits through all phases of the business cycle. Long-range remedies cannot be expected to make progress in the face of persistent, relentless inflationary stimulus from the government's own spending and finance. Ending inflation [18] For the Federal Reserve's initiatives, see "Economic Report of the President," 1979, pp. 154–56.

[19] See note 14. Between June 1973 and June 1974, OPEC prices jumped from $1.50 to $9.50 a barrel. The second big jump did not take place until November 1979, when prices rose to $24.00 a barrel. August 1980 saw OPEC set the price at $30 a barrel (for Saudi Arabian light crude). See "International Financial Statistics," January 1981.

In particular, the perpetual budgetary disequilibrium financed by an easy money policy must stop. As recent years ought to have made clear, not to mention British Prime Minister Thatcher's experiment, controlling the money supply alone cannot be efficacious without concurrent budgetary constraint. Bringing American budget deficits under control will presumably require an extremely bitter and divisive struggle within the political system. Not only will there be an intense battle over the domestic component of the budget, but, inevitably, a reordering of priority between domestic and foreign goals. The task is complicated by the strong pressure in recent years for a major American rearmament. To put its fiscal affairs in order, the United States will either have to sacrifice more at home to pay for its international position, or it will have to scale down its world commitments.

However conventional and commonsensical such an analysis may be, its conclusion is highly unsatisfactory politically. Indeed, over the past two decades a great deal of economic talent has been devoted to avoiding just such a conclusion. On the one hand, demands for domestic American spending are urgent for all the reasons common to advanced societies everywhere. On the other, America's security is plausibly linked to international stability, and that stability to a wide range of American military commitments. The United States, moreover, has grown deeply habituated to both the pleasures and pains of world responsibility, as well as to the convenient foreign escapes the world role provides for domestic economic and socal disequilibria. Resistance to change in what might be described as the imperial status quo is thus structured all across the American political spectrum. Nor is resistance confined to the United States. While our rich allies and OPEC would doubtless welcome an end to American inflation, most, even in OPEC, would not like a corresponding American withdrawal from international burdens.

Rather than face such divisive and dangerous choices, any Administration naturally will try to sustain the juggling act of the past 20 years. Some new infusion of "will" and competence, or magic new economic formula, will be sought out to cure the growing disproportion between America's ambitions and her resources.

If the recent campaign is any indication, the Reagan Administration's evasive fantasies will lie with "supply-side" economics and a reassertion of foreign policy activism. Ironically, both are reminiscent of the Kennedy Administration. In present circumstances, however, neither is likely to provide much respite from the underlying policy crisis.

Supply-side economics is the latest version of the hope that inflation can be cured through rapid growth. Unlike the neo-Keynesians, who seek growth by stimulating demand, supply-siders seek growth by stimulating supply. Many of their recommendations are praiseworthy. A sensible revision of tax laws to encourage saving and investment is doubtless long overdue, and the government's mania for regulation badly needs curbing. In due course, such policies may well increase efficiency and production and thus provide more supply to satisfy a level of demand that is now inflationary. But the problem of inflation is not only long-range, but also immediate. Deregulation and tax changes are unlikely, in themselves, to generate at once the magical flood of new resources needed to eliminate current inflation. And unless inflation can be curbed in the short run, it is unlikely to be cured in the long run. A good case can be made, after all, that our high and accelerating inflation has itself become the principal drag on long-range investment and growth. As long as inflation is rampant, unsettled economic and social conditions themselves profoundly discourage personal saving and long-range business investment.

In summary, as the government's own undisciplined spending remains the principal efficient cause, inflation cannot be curbed without addressing directly the problem of the government's budget, that is to say, the existing structure of domestic and foreign goals and commitments. Without eliminating the government's perpetual deficits, supply-side economics will prove only one more in a long line of postwar gimmicks.

Along with economic gimmickry, recourse to foreign policy has been our government's other conventional escape. Along with its new version of Kennedy's economics, the Reagan Administration will doubless be tempted to restore a Nixonian foreign economic policy. Since the present policy dilemma over inflation is made urgent by America's geopolitical decline, a restoration of American external power is bound to seem a highly attractive alternative to domestic budgetary battles and strategic foreign retreats. Decline in America's geopolitical primacy was, after all, a major campaign issue.

The new Administration has arrived in power with two broad theories about America's foreign decline and how, therefore, to reverse it. What might be called the Administration's Literary Right sees the decline in recent years as a pusillanimous failure of will to compete with the Soviets, a diffidence combined with wishful thinking about Soviet intentions and an excessive tenderness toward the outrageous claims of the Third World. The other major theory, understandably popular in Kissingerian circles, blames American decline on a radical falling off of competence in the management of foreign policy after 1976.

Hopes for a quick restoration of American power rise from these analyses of the decline. Moral and military rearmament, it is believed, can restore American primacy. With restoration, Nixonian economic policies could also presumably revive. OPEC could be intimidated and Europeans overawed. Time would once be made available for expansive supply-side economics to bring about structural improvements. Inflation could be cured through abundance rather than restraint. Foreign power would once again come to the aid of domestic economics. How realistic are such hopes?

To begin with, while the Nixonian economic policy has helped several sectors, it also brought inflation rather than real prosperity, as our present condition makes clear. But quite apart from its questionable economic expectations, the case for a restoration of American global predominance depends upon an unrealistic and excessively partisan view of why American power has declined. While the Carter Administration, like most others, doubtless had its inadequacies, the geopolitical decline that underlies the current impasse is not some fortuitous collection of accidents and tactical mistakes, nor the consequence of a pusillanimous disposition in high places. The contradictions manifest in Carter's foreign policy were long-standing. They reflected a persisting American failure to develop a basic strategy appropriate to the logical evolution of the postwar world. The point needs to be addressed before returning directly to its economic consequences.

VII

Many of Carter's awkward tergiversations in foreign policy reflected the effort to sustain already obsolescent American perspectives of the 1960s, carried over in Kissinger's flashy reconstruction of the 1970s. These views have become the "mother errors" in American foreign policy. They include not only the inadequate foreign and domestic economic policies that have already been described at length, but also an unrealistic view of détente and an unrealistic view of transatlantic relations.

To start with détente: neither Carter, nor Kissinger before him, thought through adequately the consequences of a détente policy toward the Soviet Union. Just as Kissinger wanted hegemony on the cheap in the Middle East, so he expected détente on the cheap in the world at large. Both expectations represented wishful thinking doomed to disappointment.

Ever since the 1960s, détente had rested upon America's increasing acceptance of Soviet nuclear parity. Predictably, nuclear parity would alter decisively the American capacity to deny the Soviets influence in the world at large. Since the growth of Soviet strategic nuclear power had manifestly been accompanied by expanding Soviet conventional capabilities for intervention beyond their traditional sphere, strategic parity pointed toward a troubled period of local challenges and negotiations. It was unreasonable to acknowledge the Soviets as our strategic equals without expecting them to demand a greater influence in local affairs throughout the world. But in regions of vital interest to the West, like the Persian Gulf, Soviet adventurism could easily deteriorate into direct superpower confrontation. Under these circumstances, it was essential for the United States to do its best to limit the opportunities and raise the costs of Soviet meddling. In a world of rampant nationalism, much of the effort, to be effective, would have to be diplomatic, economic and political.

There was also an inescapable military dimension. The Russians were particularly likely to lose their heads in a world where the conventional military balance was shifting decisively against the United States. It was hardly the time for a drastic drawing down of conventional American military strength. Since, with parity, neither side could credibly resort to strategic threats over peripheral challenges, local military and political power would logically grow more decisive. But Nixon and Ford, caught in the backlash of the Vietnam War, gradually cut real military spending, particularly after 1972. Most cuts fell on conventional arms, particularly after the end of the draft in 1973. Carter tried to reverse the trend, but still without the draft.[20] But as Carter's budgets illustrated all too clearly, major additions to defense expenditures could not easily be reconciled with the fiscal discipline needed to control inflation.[21] No amount of patriotic rhetoric or fiscal legerdemain could make the dilemma disappear.

[20] See footnote 5. In 1973 the draft was replaced by an all-volunteer force. During the transition period, active forces were reduced by 600,000 (20 percent of the 1960 level). Selected reserves were reduced by 20 percent, and standby reserves were reduced by about 60 percent. For the volunteer army's significance for U.S. defense posture and capability, see Kenneth Coffey, "The Strategic Implications of the All-Volunteer Force,", Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1980, pp. 51 ff.

Carter's political problems were compounded by the general overselling of détente, typical perhaps of all postwar Administrations but particularly egregious in the Nixon-Ford era. Nixon and Kissinger, like Kennedy and Johnson before them, had a strong tendency to talk as if détente would resolve the world's problems. Such expectations not only belied the probable effects of parity on Soviet-American competition throughout the world, but also exaggerated the capacity of either Russia or the United States to influence global events. In reality, both superpowers were growing relatively less important among states. Even had they wished it, they could not have run the world between them. Their diminishing power, moreover, while not diminishing their competition, did change its context and form. As the superpowers declined, the international system of cold-war blocs gradually gave way to an arena of volatile nationalist states. Alignments grew more conditional and wary. Double-dealing was to be expected.

No Administration in the 1970s took on the task of giving the public a proper set of expectations about Soviet-American relations. No one provided a new strategic idea to replace the bipolar containment of the Acheson-Dulles era. Hence a new public consensus was never created around a realistic view of America's diplomatic and strategic position following strategic parity. The United States was thus doubly unprepared for parity. The public had unrealistic expectations from bipolar negotiations, while the military was woefully unadapted to cope with the new situation. As the public inevitably felt deceived in its expectations about the Russians and outraged at American weakness, it turned against SALT and détente itself. Foreign policy without a firm base in public support gradually lost its legitimacy. An increasingly confused and unpredictable public opinion oscillated between impossible expectations and unreasonable anger. With political leaders providing no clear and realistic conception of national interest, foreign policy soon became captive to vigorous special interests.

This inability to lead the American public toward accepting a more complex world must be counted as the major failing of American foreign policy in the 1970s. Like the failure in America's foreign economic policy, it was a failure at home rather than abroad. The fault lay not with the Russians, who, on the whole, behaved as might have been expected: they kept their strategic agreements without ceasing to be as cautiously aggressive as they have always been. The fault lay with an American leadership that expected more from superpower détente than it could reasonably deliver, that failed therefore to endow the American public with a realistic view of the world and failed, finally, to equip American forces properly to deal with that world.

The consequences were by no means limited to Soviet-American relations. The same inability to grasp the evolving character of interstate relations began to poison transatlantic relations as well. Superpower détente based on nuclear parity called for a basic rethinking of the constituent strategic principles within the Atlantic Alliance. Soviet-American Nuclear parity would inevitably put in question the credibility of the American deterrent for Western Europe. A new American attitude toward independent European deterrents was in order, along with a reshaping of NATO.

Reshaping, however, hardly meant ending the Alliance. Under almost any conceivable circumstances European deterrence is greatly reinforced by its American connection. But it meant recognizing that the American deterrent would no longer be considered, in itself, sufficient for European security. Increasingly, collective nuclear security based on American power would have to be supplemented by European national strength. Kissinger, while talking a good deal about adjusting to a more plural world, had, in fact, done his best to sustain America's European hegemony in its most traditional form. The Carter Administration, in the same vein, had actually reinforced American opposition to nuclear "proliferation" and thereby came perilously close to a major quarrel with the European allies over commercial nuclear development.[22] In summary, America's European policy revealed the same inner contradiction as its détente policy. A strategic policy with the Soviets that inevitably lessened the value of the American nuclear protectorate for Europe was combined with a strategic policy in Europe that presupposed its undiminished continuation.

American hegemony has been acceptable to Europe since World War II because it has provided security not only for Europe's own territory, but also for Europe's access to raw materials and markets in the Third World. At the same time, as America's combination of inflation, dollar depreciation, and failure to adjust to high energy prices increasingly offended the interests of both the Europeans and the oil-producers, Europeans also grew increasingly skeptical of America's ability to defend their interests in the Third World. Instead, as has already been said, American policy seemed bent on destroying détente in Europe to compensate for America's weakness in the world at large. Thus, as American relations deteriorated with Russia and the Middle East, they also deteriorated with Europe itself. The causes were not only the longstanding economic frictions, but a growing divergence of security interests.

In summary, the present crisis in American foreign policy, like the crisis in domestic economic policy, has been gathering through several Administrations. As Europe and Japan have revived and the Third World developed, the international system has grown more plural. With strategic parity, the superpowers have themselves grown more equal. These changes have inevitably affected America's world position. They represent not so much the decline of America as the revival of the world.

They do not, moreover, represent the defeat of America's fundamental postwar policy. On the contrary, with its goals of European recovery, superpower détente, and Third World development, American world leadership has encouraged the very evolution that has led to its own relative decline. While, from one perspective, such a policy may seem foolish or irresponsible, from another, it seems not only generous but eminently practical. In this latter perspective, the United States lacks the temperament and institutions to impose a permanent imperial order. And despite America's continuing vast resources, a reviving world is unlikely to tolerate any imperial system for more than a few decades. To base America's future as a nation upon its episodic career as the dominant world power would have been a very bad bet historically.

Nixon economics, to be sure, was a mutation in that postwar policy. America's domestic prosperity came to depend upon the exploitation of her political primacy. A predictable evolution of events since the late 1970's has now shaken that primacy, with a resultant discomfort to domestic prosperity. To try to restore primacy would be, in effect, to try to reverse the geopolitical trend of the past two decades. Such a policy, if pursued seriously, carries great risks for ourselves and for the world. Among the greatest and most immediate risks is the predictable effect of such a foreign policy on domestic American inflation, as a look at the current budget makes clear.

VIII

Prospects for fiscal balance deteriorated markedly in the final days of the Carter Administration. In early 1980, the President was calling for a balanced budget. By the end of the year, estimates of the deficit for fiscal 1981 were running up to $60 billion.[23] Reagan came to office pledged to end Carter's inflation and stagnation. By early March, the outlines of the new program had been sketched.[24] Despite the new President's great popularity and the public's widespread concern over inflation, opposition has been gathering. The budget debate will become a major political battle. That is as it should be.

Problems of budgetary control go to the very heart of the nation's character and capacity for rational government. A budget is [21] Defense-spending increases were especially heavy in fiscal years 1979 ($12.5 billion), 1980 ($18.2 billion), and 1981 ($25.2 billion). In the same years, overall fiscal deficits were $27.7 billion, $59.6 billion, and $55.2 billion, respectively. (Figures for both 1980 and 1981 are estimates.) In a downswing, of course, deficits are greatly swollen by anti-recession stabilizers, as well as a relative decline in revenue. Figures are from "Economic Report of the President," 1981, pp. 314-15.

[23] David A. Stockman as quoted in Peter Behr and Lee Lescaze, "Reagan Economists Urge Swift Spending, Tax Cuts," The Washington Post, January 8, 1981, p. A4.

[24] A progressive series of supply-side tax cuts were to reach an annual sum of $100 billion by fiscal year 1983. These would, it was hoped, restore prosperity which would, in turn, augment federal revenues and cut transfer payments. Widespread deregulation was also expected to encourage long-range growth. To compensate for short-term losses of revenue, cuts of some $49.1 billion in civilian expenditures were proposed for fiscal year 1982, with the total to rise to $79.7 billion in 1983. Large increases in military spending authorizations, however, were requested on March 4, but the impact on 1982 was estimated at only $4.8 billion. In general, tight monetary policy was counted upon to dampen any inflationary impulse from fiscal policy. The Fed would be helped, it was hoped, because the new Administration's manifest determination and competence would lower "inflationary expectations." See "America's New Beginning: A Program for Economic Recovery," The White House, Office of the Press Secretary, February 18, 1981. For military requests, see The New York Times, March 5, 1981, p. A1.

a mirror of the political system and the society beyond. A budget perpetually out of balance indeed suggests ambitions in excess of resources. But where does the excess lie in the American budget? While the subject is obviously vast and controversial, some crude but compelling generalizations may nevertheless serve to illustrate the broad issues. Along with supply-side tax cuts to induce investment and growth, the Reagan proposals demand drastic reductions in domestic spending and sizable increases in military spending. In effect, the burden of fiscal adjustment is to fall on domestic programs. No doubt all capitalist countries have grown self-indulgent and any serious attempt to bring American inflation under control will require a determined campaign to cut domestic expenditure. Among the advanced industrial democracies, however, the United States does not appear exceptionally profligate in the sums it devotes to domestic purposes.[25]

Expecting to balance budgets largely by deep cuts in domestic programs therefore presupposes either that the American government can provide services more efficiently than other governments, or that the American people are less demanding than those of Europe. Neither presupposition seems well founded. The country's size and diversity, reflected in its Constitution and general political and economic culture, make an exceptional degree of bureaucratic efficiency improbable. And without the violent shock of a major war, the American public is more likely to resemble its European cousins than the disciplined and downtrodden Russians.

Defense expenditures as percent of GNP, 1979

United States	5.2
United Kingdom	4.9
France	3.9
Federal Republic of Germany	3.3
Italy	2.4
Japan	0.9

Is America's defense budget too large? Controversy over this subject has raged for several decades, and is unlikely to be resolved here. Much of the traditional argument concerns itself with the usefulness of particular weapons systems—manned bombers, mobile missiles, aircraft carriers, etc. Over three-quarters of military expenditures go for "conventional" forces. A large proportion of those expenditures either go to manpower, or are tied closely to the level of manpower.[26]

Different foreign policies obviously require different military resources. The proposals and pronouncements from the Reagan Administration suggest it may be flirting with restoring America's world primacy. Such a policy, turning back the geopolitical clock to the mid-1960s, would be very expensive. But even the Carter Administration, presumably devoted to détente and a more relaxed international view generally, nevertheless felt America's present international role and commitments required augmenting military expenditures substantially. Was the Carter defense budget also too large?

Most of Carter's increases went for conventional forces.[27] Behind the increases lay the Administration's perception that, in a world with greater Soviet reach and so many new powers, trying to hold the same commitments with stretched forces increasingly risked embarrassment and danger. Experiments with "hegemony on the cheap," using surrogates such as Iran, were reckoned to have turned out badly. In short, even the Carter Administration believed the United States insufficiently armed for its commitments.

Should this widely held belief be true, saving money on defense, if it is to occur rationally, requires some new formulation of national interest that reduces American commitments, and not merely the forces used to meet them. To reduce spending in a world where power is increasingly widespread, the United States will have to concentrate its own military responsibilities, while relying on a more effective diplomacy to seize the advantages of leverage. Such a course assumes the existence of regions where American interests are no longer worth the resources needed to underwrite their security, or where indigenous forces are themselves able to take a significantly larger share. Are there such regions?

Any inventory of American commitments in the world is bound to note the central place of European defense and the anomalous relationship between the United States and the West European states. For three decades, from a third to a half of the entire American defense budget has been devoted, directly or indirectly, to forces to defend Western Europe in a massive conventional war. In the 1981 fiscal budget, the cost is reckoned at some $81 billion.[28]

In effect, the United States assumes the primary responsibility for managing the continent's conventional defense. Hence an American commander for NATO, a fleet in the Mediterranean, large tactical air units, and ten divisions either stationed in Europe or able to get there in time for the decisive battles.

America's commitment to manage Europe's ground defense was undertaken in 1950, when American strategic superiority made a European land war improbable. At the same time, the weakness of the European states made their own self-defense problematical and American reassurance essential to their recovery. This American commitment to a mass army for Europe has now continued for over 30 years, with little or no account taken of Europe's economic and political recovery. While the reasons for America's profound interest in Europe's fate may not have changed since 1950, by any objective measurement of relative resources the United States plays a disproportionate role in European defense. Meanwhile, the Soviet Union has achieved nuclear parity, which inevitably undermines the credibility of our foreign commitments. And the United States itself has given up the draft in the face of a deep public antipathy to military service, a development that obviously limits our ability to provide a reliable mass army for a continental war.

America's huge annual bill for NATO reflects a fundamental political problem within the Alliance. Today the major countries of Western Europe are among the world's half-dozen richest and most powerful states. But NATO's structure still suggests a relationship appropriate to the Romans and their auxiliaries, or Napolean and his satellites. This Napoleonic model means that we actively manage Europe's forces and hence are constrained to keep a preponderant conventional force of our own for the European theater.

In place of the present Napoleonic structure, a more traditional balance-of-power alliance seems in order. Shifting responsibility for managing European ground defense to the Europeans could, in theory, save the United States a substantial budgetary sum. It can be estimated, for example, that disbanding six of the present ten U.S.-NATO divisions would alone bring, within three years an annual saving to the defense budget of some $30 billion.[29] Saving on any such scale could go a long way toward ending America's regular fiscal deficits. For the years 1977, 1978 and 1979, for example, the annual deficits were $45 billion, $49 billion and $28 billion respectively. In the coming budgetary battles, with painful do-

[25] Government expenditures for social security programs as percentages of GNP for selected countries were, in 1977, as follows: Canada: 14.6 percent; France: 26.5 percent; Federal Republic of Germany: 26.5 percent; Japan: 8.7 percent; Sweden: 30.7 percent; United Kingdom: 17.1 percent; United States: 13.7 percent. These figures are based on data provided by the International Social Security Association.

[26] A precise breakdown of expenditures for conventional and strategic forces is complicated because major programs such as Research and Development, Central Supply and Maintenance, Intelligence and Communication, Administration, and General Personnel Activities encompass both. Nevertheless, Strategic Forces, in comparison with programs strictly defined as conventional (General Purpose Forces, Airlift and Sealift, Guard and Reserve Forces), represent at most 15 percent of the total. See "Department of Defense Annual Report, FY 1980," Washington: GPO, 1981, p. 321.

[27] Whereas from fiscal year 1977 through fiscal year 1980, expenditures for strategic forces increased from $9.4 billion to $10.8 billion, expenditures for General Purpose Forces jumped from $40.2 billion to $50 billion (current dollars). Department of Defense Annual Report, FY 1977, p. A13; FY 1980, p. 320.

[28] A precise cost for U.S.-NATO forces cannot be provided since most force elements have more than one purpose, and, in any major confrontation with the Warsaw Pact, all U.S. forces would be made available. Nevertheless, a recent U.S. response to the NATO Defense Planning Questionnaire estimates the cost of forces formally committed to NATO to be approximately $81.1 billion or around 51 percent of the total defense budget for FY 1981. The "formal commitment" figure is derived by adding the total cost of $57 billion for "forces rapidly available to NATO" (General Purpose Forces forward deployed in Europe and U.S.-based forces ready to deploy solely for the defense of Europe), and a sizable fraction of the total cost for "multipurpose forces," i.e., $24 billion out of $74.8 billion. (General Purpose Forces that would be used in a NATO conflict but made available for other conflicts: Strategic Reserves, Strategic Forces, Intelligence and Communication facilities). Department of Defense estimates, 1981.

[29] Congressional analysts assume an immediate annual saving of $2.28 billion for each NATO division disbanded, with double the annual savings possible from reductions in infrastructure and equipment costs within three years. The figure of $2.28 billion assumes a saving of $1.35 billion from the combat element (at full strength); $450 million from the sustaining increment (estimated at 75 percent of full strength); $450 million from the tactical-support increment (estimated at 60 percent of full strength). Such calculations are inevitably complex and approximate and are presented only to give a rough idea of the magnitude of present costs. The figure of $30 billion in the text presupposes cutting six divisions, but not U.S.-NATO naval or tactical air forces. After the cuts, four divisions would remain for NATO purposes, presumably to cover one of the two sectors on the central front for which the United States now has direct responsibility. Basic data for the projections can be found in "The Armed Forces Planning Cost Handbook," Washington: GPO, October 1979.

mestic sacrifices being called for, potential savings of this magnitude are unlikely to escape notice. Among other things, such savings would make it much easier to find the resources to counter Soviet adventurism in the Third World.

American leaders have been trying to shift NATO burdens to the Europeans since the early days of the Alliance. Despite Europe's great increase in resources, the United States has never succeeded. Every Administration has had the same quarrel. Carter's celebrated argument over three-percent increases was only the most recent in a long series. America's poor record suggests the need for a new approach. Without pretending here to elaborate the details of a new Alliance policy, certain broad orienting principles may at least be suggested.

The first has to do with the relationship between the American contribution and the American role. As long experience indicates, major European powers only grudgingly contribute more to arrangements that keep their defense under direct American control. Within an alliance, military power and political independence tend to go hand in hand. Of the three major European states, France has increased its defense budget the most in recent years, Germany the least. France, it may also be noted, is the only West European country that has already moved to a traditional alliance relationship. In short, the most probable way to get the Europeans to take a much larger share of the burden of NATO is to let them run it.[30] At the very least, it seems time for a European commander to head NATO. Certainly the reintegration of French space and arms into the military alliance, if this could be achieved, would in itself be worth several American divisions.

A second orienting principle follows from the first. In the end, transformation of the Alliance cannot be limited to its non-nuclear aspects. Soviet-American nuclear parity logically calls for a stronger independent European deterrent. The issue will be forced upon us in any event. Ground defense cannot be separated from control over tactical nuclear weapons. Distinctions between tactical and strategic nuclear weapons are inevitably breaking down in the European context. Since the days of the multilateral nuclear force, American attempts to give Europe more deterrence without more independence have been ingenious but unsuccessful. If we wish Europe to rely more on its own resources, we will have to be prepared for more powerful and independent European nuclear defense.

To be serious about transforming NATO, a third orienting principle would also be needed. The United States should stop using Europe's hesitations and divisions as a pretext for America's own inaction. European states are pluralist democracies. Public opinion is deeply divided over many issues, but no more so than in this country. Politicians out of power often take irresponsible positions, a defect not unknown on this side of the Atlantic. It should not be assumed, however, that Europe's major states could not reach working agreements on anything so relatively obvious as their own common defense against the Soviets. European political leadership, after all, is not notably less responsible than our own.

France and Germany form the necessary core of any European construction. They have learned to harmonize their efforts over a wide range of vexatious domestic economic concerns. They, along with the British, have large and efficient military forces, flourishing arms industries, and formidable military experience. Obviously the French, as well as the Germans and British, are loath to trade present arrangements giving them American-subsidized security for a more responsible, expensive, and constraining role in managing European defense. And Europe's smaller countries would prefer a distant and distracted America to the more active leadership of their own big neighbors. Under the circumstances, for Washington to use evidence of disunity as an excuse for preserving the status quo is always plausible, and playing countries off against each other all too easy. But if we grow serious about reducing the cost of our NATO commitment, we must assume that Europe's big powers will act as responsible states and must ourselves not try to prevent them from doing so.

Increasingly, our choice is not a free one. Reflections on these Alliance questions cannot be separated from the pressures of our present economic predicament. Against the risks of change in NATO must be weighed the certain international deterioration implicit in a continuing American inflation. Reforming America's European commitment would, of course, be only a step toward curing America's inflation, not a panacea. But without some such major breakthrough in military spending, prospects for real improvement seen dim. The present frustration of America's domestic and foreign policy may be expected to continue, and transatlantic relations to grow ever more acrimonious.

IX

In conclusion, it may be useful to put both our European relations and our inflation in a broader historical context. Inflation not only permeates our political and economic system at home but, as has been discussed at length, has inextricably entwined itself with our policy abroad. Intuitively, many people see inflation as the manifestation of long-standing national hubris. This way of thinking grew popular in the late 1960s when the explosion of inflation and the agony of Vietnam were sensed as symptoms of a sort of national disequilibrium, of an ambition for leadership and benevolence grown extravagant and wanton.

In 1968, Americans elected an avowedly conservative government. The Nixon Administration spent its early years trying to restore economic balance at home while talking of a more realistic disposition of American power abroad. But it lacked the political strength, and perhaps the moral stamina, to persevere. It abandoned domestic economic restraint and used American power abroad to permit a seemingly painless inflation at home. In the face of growing Soviet power, it abandoned its halfhearted attempts to coax Europe into a new role and, instead, relied more and more exclusively on superpower détente. An adventitious and unstable supremacy in the Middle East underwrote a shameful delay in facing the energy crisis at home.

Seen in this historical perspective, Nixon and Kissinger's apparent foreign successes of the early 1960s take on a different look. Their pax Americana appears less a firm restoration than a nostalgic fantasy. Worse, it represents a false turning and a missed opportunity. While the old predominance was superficially confirmed in Europe and extended to the Middle East, the Unites States lacked the resources to sustain its positions. This lack of resources to meet all domestic and foreign ambitions, in turn, led to an exploitation of the international economic system increasingly intolerable to our allies and of questionable benefit for the United States. Manipulating the international system became the substitute for painful adjustments at home. Instead of domestic strength being the foundation of overseas power, diplomacy subsidized domestic prosperity.

Sadly, the breakdown in American foreign policy can be traced not to a failure to America's long-range strategy, but to the failure to exploit its success. America's historic policy was to restore Europe, not to conquer it. By the 1970s, European power had, in fact, recovered to the point where the United States should have played its "European card" in the interest of a new world balance. Unhappily, at a critical historical moment, American statecraft proved unable to press its own historic policies to successful completion. Instead, it wandered into a cul-de-sac of unsustainable pretensions in the world and wanton inflation at home. Not until the external system began to unravel in the late 1970s was there much support for domestic regeneration. Thanks to Khomeini we had Volcher. But, as the past decade ought to have made clear, equilibrium will not return to our economy at home without a more realistic balance of power abroad.●

[30] With 3.9 percent and 4.9 percent, respectively, both France and Britian had, in fiscal year 1979, a larger percentage of GNP in defense spending than West Germany, with 3.3 percent. For fiscal year 1981, West Germany increased its defense budget by 6.2 percent, France by 17.9 percent. At the end of 1980, the German inflation rate, at 5.1 percent, was roughly half the French.

To say that Bonn spends a smaller proportion of its GNP on defense is not to say that it lacks impressive military forces. West Germany has 495,000 men under arms, and a well-trained reserve force of 750,000, meant to be capable of being mobilized within 72 hours. Within that period all combat units up to brigade level are to be combat ready. Bonn's military force probably seems more formidable when seen from Moscow than from Washington. CONFERENCE REPORT ON HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 115

Mr. JONES of Oklahoma submitted the following conference report and statement on the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 115) revising the congressional budget for the U.S. Government for the fiscal year 1981 and setting forth the congressional budget for the U.S. Government for the fiscal years 1982, 1983, and 1984:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. NO. 97-46)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 115) revising the congressional budget for the United States Government for the fiscal year 1981 and setting forth the congressional budget for the United States Government for the fiscal years 1982, 1983, and 1984, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 9, 13, 26, 27, 28, 43, 44, 45, 52, 53, 65, 68, 75, 76, 77, 78, 80, 81, 82, 84,

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2, 6, 7, 10, 11, 14, 16, 18, 19, 20, 21, 24, 25, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 50, 150, 178, 185, 187, 188, 189, 192, 198, and 200, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 3: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$717,500,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 4: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 4, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$661,350,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 5: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$58,050,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 12: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 12, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$23,550,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 15: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 15, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$7,300,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 17: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 17, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$10,500,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 22: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 22, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$8,300,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 23: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 23, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$11,400,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 29: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 29, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$227,600,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 46: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 46, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$770,900,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 47: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 47, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$695,450,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 48: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 48, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "−$37,650,000,000; and"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 49: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 49, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$1,079,800,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 51: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 51, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "creased is $80,000,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 54: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 54, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, $17,400,000,000;
(B) Outlays, $11,150,000,000.
And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 55: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 55, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, $7,200,000,000;
(B) Outlays, $7,000,000,000.
And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 56: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 56, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, $4,500,000,000;
(B) Outlays, $6,000,000,000.
And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 57: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 57, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, $8,200,000,000;
(B) Outlays, $12,400,000,000.
And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 58: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 58, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, $5,500,000,000;
(B) Outlays, $4,500,000,000.
And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 59: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 59, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, $7,700,000,000;
(B) Outlays, $4,000,000,000.
And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 60: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 60, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, $21,200,000,000;
(B) Outlays, $20,400,000,000.
And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 61: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 61, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, $7,100,000,000;
(B) Outlays, $8,700,000,000.
And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 62: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 62, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, $26,200,000,000;
(B) Outlays, $26,850,000,000.
And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 63: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 63, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, $83,500,000,000;
(B) Outlays, $73,350,000,000.
And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 64: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 64, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, $262,700,000,000;
(B) Outlays, $239,700,000,000.
And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 66: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 66, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, $4,300,000,000;
(B) Outlays, $4,450,000,000.
And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 67: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 67, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, $5,000,000,000;

(B) Outlays, $4,900,000,000.

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 69: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 69, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, $85,700,000,000;

(B) Outlays, $85,700,000,000.

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 70: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 70, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, $0;

(B) Outlays, $0.

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 71: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 71, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

(A) New budget authority, −$32,900,000,000;

(B) Outlays, −$32,900,000,000.

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 72: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 72, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$51,930,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 73: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 73, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$85,090,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 74: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 74, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$70,070,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 79: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 79, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$11,180,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 83: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 83, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "$140,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 115) revising the congressional budget for the U.S. Government for fiscal year 1981, and setting forth the congressional budget for fiscal years 1982, 1983, and 1984, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

The managers have reported certain amendments in disagreement. These are disagreements because, in some instances, the conference decisions include figures which (for purely technical reasons) are outside the range between the corresponding House and Senate provisions.

It is the intention of the conferees with regard to matters in disagreement that the managers on the part of the House will offer motions in the House to recede and concur in the Senate amendments with amendments consisting of the language agreed to in conference. Upon adoption of such amendments in the House, the managers on the part of the Senate will offer motions in the Senate to concur therein. The amendments to be offered in the House are printed elsewhere in this joint statement.

The resolution, as agreed to by the managers, and reflecting such technical and perfecting amendments to be offered on the House floor, will read as follows:

TITLE I—REVISION OF THE CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET FOR THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT FOR THE FISCAL YEAR 1981

SEC. 101. The provisions of this title shall supersede the figures set forth in the first section and section 2 of House Concurrent Resolution 448 of the Ninety-sixth Congress for the fiscal year beginning on October 1, 1980.

(c) It is the sense of the Congress that the President through administrative actions should limit in fiscal year 1982 total Federal Financing Bank origination of direct loans guaranteed by other Federal agencies to $16,450,000,000; and Federal Financing Bank purchases of loan assets from Federal agencies to $6,530,000,000. Further, it is the sense of Congress that direct borrowing transactions of Federal agencies should be, to the maximum extent possible, restricted to the Federal Financing Bank.

Further, it is the sense of Congress that the President and the Congress, through the appropriations process, should limit in fiscal year 1982 the off-budget lending activity of the Federal Government to a level not to exceed $17,730,000,000; the on-budget lending activity to a level not to exceed $34,200,000,000; new primary loan guarantee commitments to a level not to exceed $85,090,000,000; and new secondary loan guarantee commitments to a level not to exceed $70,070,000,000.

SEC. 204. The Congress sets forth the following budgeting levels for fiscal years 1983 and 1984—

(1) the recommended level of Federal revenues is as follows:

Fiscal year 1983: $713,200,000,000;

Fiscal year 1984: $774,800,000,000;

and the net amount by which the aggregate levels of Federal revenues should be decreased is as follows:

Fiscal year 1983: $97,100,000,000;

Fiscal year 1984: $144,800,000,000;

(2) the appropriate level of total new budget authority is as follows:

Fiscal year 1983: $813,750,000,000;

Fiscal year 1984: $866,450,000,000;

(3) the appropriate level of total budget outlays is as follows:

Fiscal year 1983: $732,250,000,000;

Fiscal year 1984: $773,750,000,000;

(4) the amount of the surplus or deficit in the budget which is appropriate in light of economic conditions and all other relevant factors is as follows:

Fiscal year 1983: −$19,050,000,000;

Fiscal year 1984: +$1,050,000,000;

(5) the appropriate level of the public debt is as follows:

Fiscal year 1983: $1,137,650,000,000;

Fiscal year 1984: $1,176,650,000,000;

and the amount by which the temporary statutory limit on such debt should be accordingly increased is as follows:

Fiscal year 1983: $57,850,000,000;

Fiscal year 1984: $38,950,000,000.

SEC. 205. Based on allocations of the appropriate level of total new budget authority and of total budget outlays for fiscal years 1983 and 1984 as set forth above, the appropriate level of new budget authority and the estimated budget outlays for each major functional category are respectively as follows:

(1) National Defense (050):

(7)(A) The Senate Committee on Finance shall report changes in laws within the jurisdiction of that committee which provide spending authority as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of Public Law 93-344, sufficient to reduce budget authority by $212,000,000 and outlays by $286,000,000 in fiscal year 1981; to reduce budget authority by $4,394,000,000 and outlays by $9,218,000,000 in fiscal year 1982; and to reduce budget authority by $4,563,000,000 and outlays by $10,744,000,000 in fiscal year 1983; and to reduce budget authority by $4,675,000,000 and outlays by $11,589,000,000 in fiscal year 1984; and

(B) The Senate Committee on Finance shall also report changes in laws within the jurisdiction of that committee sufficient to require reductions in appropriations for programs authorized by that committee so as to achieve savings in budget authority and outlays as follows: $96,000,000 in budget authority and $112,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1982; $114,000,000 in budget authority and $132,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1983; and $149,000,000 in budget authority and $177,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1984;

(8) The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations shall report changes in laws within the jurisdiction of that committee sufficient to require reductions in appropriations for programs authorized by that committee so as to achieve savings in budget authority and outlays as follows: $250,000,000 in budget authority and $130,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1982; $275,000,000 in budget authority and $200,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1983; and $300,000,000 in budget authority and $300,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1984.

(9)(A) The Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs shall report changes in laws within the jurisdiction of that committee which provide spending authority as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of Public Law 93-344, sufficient to reduce outlays by $513,000,000 in fiscal year 1982; to reduce outlays by $414,000,000 in fiscal year 1983; and to reduce outlays by $357,000,000 in fiscal year 1984; and

(B) The Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs shall also report changes in laws within the jurisdiction of that committee sufficient to require reductions in appropriations for programs authorized by that committee so as to achieve savings in budget authority and outlays as follows: $4,776,000,000 in budget authority and $4,690,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1982; $6,360,000,000 in budget authority and $6,388,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1983; and $7,462,000,000 in budget authority and $7,440,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1984.

(10) The Senate Committee on the Judiciary shall report changes in laws within the jurisdiction of that committee sufficient to require reductions in appropriations for programs authorized by that committee so as to achieve savings in budget authority and outlays as follows: $116,000,000 in budget authority and $13,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1982; $133,000,000 in budget authority and $81,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1983; and $144,000,000 in budget authority and $124,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1984.

(11)(A) The Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources shall report changes in laws within the jurisdiction of that committee which provide spending authority as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of Public Law 93-344, sufficient to reduce budget authority by $39,000,000 and outlays by $49,000,000 in fiscal year 1981; to reduce budget authority by $596,000,000 and outlays by $575,000,000 in fiscal year 1982; and to reduce budget authority by $1,481,000,000 and outlays by $1,395,000,000 in fiscal year 1983; and to reduce budget authority by $2,452,000,000 and outlays by $2,311,000,000 in fiscal year 1984; and

(B) The Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources shall also report changes in laws within the jurisdiction of that committee sufficient to require reductions in appropriations for programs authorized by that committee so as to achieve savings in budget authority and outlays as follows: $2,388,000,000 in budget authority and $414,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1981; $10,492,000,000 in budget authority and $8,225,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1982; and $12,539,000,000 in budget authority and $11,069,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1983; and $15,048,000,000 in budget authority and $13,746,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1984.

(12) The Senate Committee on Small Business shall report changes in laws within the jurisdiction of that committee sufficient to require reductions in appropriations for programs authorized by that committee so as to achieve savings in budget authority and outlays as follows: $97,000,000 in budget authority and $67,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1981; $526,000,000 in budget authority and $390,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1982; and $564,000,000 in budget authority and $541,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1983; and $554,000,000 in budget authority and $533,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1984.

(13) The Senate Committee on Veterans' Affairs shall report changes in laws within the jurisdiction of that committee which provide spending authority as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of Public Law 93-344, sufficient to reduce budget authority by $14,000,000 and outlays by $14,000,000 in fiscal year 1981; to reduce budget authority by $110,000,000 and outlays by $110,000,000 in fiscal year 1982; and to reduce budget authority by $108,000,000 and outlays by $108,000,000 in fiscal year 1983; and to reduce budget authority by $106,000,000 and outlays by $106,000,000 in fiscal year 1984; and

SEC. 302A. The Committee on Appropriations of the Senate shall report not later than June 5, 1981, legislation to reduce previously enacted appropriations by $13,300,000,000 in budget authority and $1,500,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1981; by $3,200,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1982; by $1,800,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1983; and $1,100,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1984.

SEC. 303. In order to give the committees named in sections 301 and 302 flexibility in meeting the reconciliation instructions, a committee may at its option, substitute in whole or in part reductions in spending authority as defined by section 401(c)(2) of Public Law 93-344 for reductions specified to be made in authorizations under that committee's jurisdiction in order to reduce appropriations, so long as the total amount of budget authority and outlay reductions for each fiscal year is the same as or greater than the amounts assigned to that committee in section 301 or 302 above.

SEC. 304. Not later than June 12, 1981, the committees named in sections 301 and 302 shall submit their recommendations to the Committees on the Budget of their respective Houses. Those recommendations shall be sufficient to accomplish the reductions required by such sections. After receiving those recommendations, the Committees on the Budget shall report to the House and Senate a reconciliation bill or resolution or both carrying out all such recommendations without any substantive revision.

SEC. 304A. The Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs should report changes in laws within the jurisdiction of that committee which would reduce the costs to the Government which result from waste, fraud, and abuse. Savings in appropriations and expenditures from trust funds from such statutory changes are estimated to be $700,000,000 in budget authority and $1,300,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1982; $1,000,000,000 in budget authority and $2,000,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1983; and $1,500,000,000 in budget authority and $3,000,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1984.

PART B—ENFORCEMENT MEASURES

SEC. 305. No bill or resolution providing—

(1) new budget authority for fiscal year 1982, or

(2) new spending authority described in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Budget Act first effective in fiscal year 1982—which exceeds the appropriate allocation or subdivision made pursuant to section 302 of such Act shall be enrolled until after Congress has completed action on the second concurrent resolution on the budget required to be reported under section 310 of such Act, and on any reconciliation legislation required by such resolution.

SEC. 306. (a) It is the sense of the Congress that due to the extreme rate of inflation in the United States economy, the possible cost-of-living effects of Federal regulations and legislation shall be carefully monitored as part of a program of fiscal restraint. Cost-of-living effects should therefore be a prime consideration in developing both regulations and legislation. In order to coordinate the aggregate economic impact of regulations with Federal fiscal policy, it is the sense of Congress that the President should implement a "zero net inflation impact" policy for the regulations promulgated in the remainder of fiscal year 1981 and for fiscal year 1982. This policy will require the President to keep an accounting for fiscal year 1981 of all new regulations which have a significant, measurable cost to the economy. Cost-saving modification need not affect the same area of economic activity as the cost-inducing regulations. The President should institute an exemption procedure to assure the promulgation of regulations necessary to avert any imminent threat to health and safety.

(b) It is also the sense of Congress that the Director of the Congressional Budget Office should issue a periodic "inflation scorekeeping" report which shall contain an estimate of the positive or negative cost-of-living effects, wherever measurable, of legislation enacted to date in the current session of Congress. The report shall also indicate for each bill, promptly after it is reported by a committee of Congress, whether—

(1) it is judged to have no significant positive or negative impact on cost of living;

(2) it is judged to have a positive or negative cost-of-living impact on the amount specified in terms of both dollar amounts and change in the Consumer Price Index; or

(3) it is judged likely to have a significant positive or negative impact on cost of living, but the amount cannot be determined immediately.

ECONOMIC ASSUMPTIONS

The levels of output, incomes, unemployment, inflation and interest rates used in the outlay and revenue estimates of the conference agreement are shown in the table below. These assumptions closely correspond to the economic projections assumed by the Administration to accompany its budget revisions for fiscal year 1982 submitted to the Congress in March. The Conferees have accepted the House-passed projections of gross national product, incomes and unemployment, which reflect the strength of the economy in the first quarter of 1981. The Conferees assumed interest rates for 1981 at the Senate-passed level. The interest rates assumed for 1982-1984 reflect success in lowering the inflation rate as projected by the Administration.

THE CONFERENCE AGREEMENT ON REVENUES

The revenue levels agreed to by the Conferees provide room for the relevent committees of the House and the Senate to enact all of the President's program for 1981, 1982, 1983, and 1984. The revenue levels are $603.3 billion for fiscal year 1981 and $657.8 billion for fiscal year 1982. The conference agreement specifies net tax reductions of $8.6 billion in fiscal year 1981 and $51.3 billion in fiscal year 1982. These reductions are assumed to include $100 million for miscellaneous tax and tariff legislation as may be enacted by the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee.

CONFERENCE AGREEMENT ON RECONCILIATION INSTRUCTIONS

The conference agreement includes reconciliation instructions to 14 Senate committees to report legislation to achieve savings in the fiscal years 1981-84, and reconciliation instructions to the House committees to report legislation to achieve savings in fiscal years 1982-84. These savings are necessary for the committees to remain within their spending limits contemplated in the Resolution.

Any legislation included in the Reconciliation Bill reported pursuant to this Resolution shall achieve net spending reductions in the amounts required by this Resolution.

The conference agreement includes sense of the Congress language which encourages the President and the Congress, through the appropriations process, to limit the credit activities of the Federal Government.

The conference agreement also includes sense of the Congress language which encourages the President and the Congress to limit the credit activities of the Federal Financing Bank to the indicated amounts.

The Senate amendment to the House resolution would have created a point of order against a credit authorization that was not subject to an annual appropriations limitation. The House resolution contained no such provision. The Senate recedes from its amendment.

The conferees recommend a level of the direct loan program of the Rural Electrification Administration as reflected in the January budget submission and allows for continued access of the Rural Electrification Administration to the Federal Financing Bank.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

(1) The House resolution has a provision which permits committees to substitute savings in direct spending programs for those required in authorized programs. The Senate amendment struck this provision. The Senate recedes.

(2) The House resolution contained a provision to delay enrollment of appropriations and direct spending bills which were in excess of their section 302 allocation. The Senate amendment struck this amendment and inserted language which achieved the same result. The Senate recedes.

(3) The House resolution contained a provision calling for a study of indexing to be followed by the implementation of the study's recommendations no later than fiscal year 1984. The Senate amendment struck this provision. The House recedes and the conferees agree to the following language:

"The question of indexing is central to developing Federal fiscal policy. About half the Federal budget is subject to indexing either explicitly or implicitly. Because of the importance of the indexing question and its implication for the process of Federal budgeting, the conferees recommend the leadership of both parties form a bi-partisan effort to make a recommendation on indexing reform to be implemented no later than fiscal year 1984.

"The conference agreement takes cognizance of the fact that Congress may wish to consider changes in the cost-of-living formula used in the various governmental programs."

(4) A Senate amendment expressed the sense of the Congress that the President should implement a "Zero Net Inflation Impact" policy for Federal regulations issued in fiscal years 1981 and 1982 and develop an accounting system of the costs and economic impact of regulations, and that the director of the Congressional Budget Office should report periodically on the possible inflationary effects of legislation reported and enacted by Congress. The House resolution did not contain that provision. The House recedes.

(5) A Senate amendment to House resolution contained nonbinding language recommending that the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs report legislation that would address the problems of waste, fraud, and abuse in the Federal Government. The House resolution has no such provision. The House recedes.

(6) Many of the funding recommendations made by the Conference are based on the assumption that increased flexibility will be available to State and local governments. Therefore, it would be appropriate that whenever a House or Senate committee recommends the reduction of funds available to State and local governments, it should recommend, where possible, program revisions which increase the flexibility permitted to State and local officials to manage Federal funds so that the needs of program beneficiaries are most effectively.

AMENDMENTS IN TECHNICAL DISAGREEMENT

The following amendments will be offered in the House amendments reported in technical disagreement:

Amendment numbered 156: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 156, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Sanate amendment insert the following: "outlays as follows: $13,177,000,000 in budget authority and $640,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1982; $15,572,000,000 in budget authority and $1,398,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1983; and $17,827,000,000 in budget authority and $3,369,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 1984;".

REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

In compliance with Public Law 601, 79th Congress, title III, Regulation of Lobbying Act, section 308(b), which provides as follows:

(b) All information required to be filed under the provisions of this section with the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate shall be compiled by said Clerk and Secretary, acting jointly, as soon as practicable after the close of the calendar quarter with respect to which such information is filed and shall be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate jointly submit their report of the compilation required by said law and have included all registrations and quarterly reports received.

REGISTRATIONS

The following registrations were submitted for the first calendar quarter 1981:

(NOTE.—The form used for report is reproduced below. In the interest of economy in the RECORD, questions are not repeated, only the essential answers are printed, and are indicated by their respective letter and number.)

FILE ONE COPY WITH THE SECRETARY OF THE SENATE AND FILE TWO COPIES WITH THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

"PRELIMINARY" REPORT ("Registration"): To "register," place an "X" below the letter "P" and fill out page 1 only.

"QUARTERLY" REPORT: To indicate which one of the four calendar quarters is covered by this Report, place an "X" below the appropriate figure. Fill out both page 1 and page 2 and as many additional pages as may be required. The first additional page should be numbered as page "3," and the rest of such pages should be "4," "5," "6," etc. Preparation and filing in accordance with instructions will accomplish compliance with all quarterly reporting requirements of the Act.

REPORT

PURSUANT TO FEDERAL REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

P	QUARTER
(Mark one square only)

NOTE ON ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:
(i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)
(ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".
(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:
(i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.
(ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE ON ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER.—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE ON ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§302(e).
(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).
(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports. ☐

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) Description, (b) quantity distributed; (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out item "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly" Report.

QUARTERLY REPORTS*

The following quarterly reports were submitted for the first calendar quarter 1981:

FILE ONE COPY WITH THE SECRETARY OF THE SENATE AND FILE TWO COPIES WITH THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

"PRELIMINARY" REPORT ("Registration"): To "register," place an "X" below the letter "P" and fill out page 1 only.

Year: 19.....

REPORT

PURSUANT TO FEDERAL REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

P	QUARTER
	1st	2d	3d	4th
(Mark one square only)

NOTE ON ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:
(i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)
(ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".
(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:
(i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.
(ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:
1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE ON ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER.—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE ON ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§302(e).
(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).
(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports. ☐

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) Description, (b) quantity distributed; (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out item "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly" Report.

AFFIDAVIT

NOTE ON ITEM "D."—(a) In General. The term "contribution" includes anything of value. When an organization or individual uses printed or duplicated matter in a campaign attempting to influence legislation, money received by such organization or individual—for such printed or duplicated matter—is a "contribution." "The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution"—Section 302(a) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN EMPLOYER.—(i) In General. Item "D" is designed for the reporting of all receipts from which expenditures are made, or will be made, in accordance with legislative interests.

(ii) Receipts of Business Firms and Individuals.—A business firm (or individual) which is subject to the Lobbying Act by reason of expenditures which it makes in attempting to influence legislation—but which has no funds to expend except those which are available in the ordinary course of operating a business not connected in any way with the influencing of legislation—will have no receipts to report, even though it does have expenditures to report.

(iii) Receipts of Multipurpose Organizations.—Some organizations do not receive any funds which are to be expended solely for the purpose of attempting to influence legislation. Such organizations make such expenditures out of a general fund raised by dues, assessments, or other contributions. The percentage of the general fund which is used for such expenditures indicates the percentage of dues, assessments, or other contributions which may be considered to have been paid for that purpose. Therefore, in reporting receipts, such organizations may specify what that percentage is, and report their dues, assessments, and other contributions on that basis. However, each contributor of $500 or more is to be listed, regardless of whether the contribution was made solely for legislative purposes.

(c) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE.—(i) In General. In the case of many employees, all receipts will come under Items "D 5" (received for services) and "D 12" (expense money and reimbursements). In the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, it will be presumed that your employer is to reimburse you for all expenditures which you make in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Employer as Contributor of $500 or More.—When your contribution from your employer (in the form of salary, fee, etc.) amounts to $500 or more, it is not necessary to report such contribution under "D 13" and "D 14," since the amount has already been reported under "D 5," and the name of the "employer" has been given under Item "B" on page 1 of this report.

D. RECEIPTS (INCLUDING CONTRIBUTIONS AND LOANS):

QUARTERLY REPORTS*

*All alphanumeric characters and monetary amounts refer to receipts and expenditures on page 2, paragraphs D and E of the Quarterly Report Form.

The following reports for the fourth calendar quarter of 1980 were received too late to be included in the published reports for that quarter:

(NOTE.—The form used for report is reproduced below. In the interest of economy in the RECORD, questions are not repeated, only the essential answers are printed, and are indicated by their respective letter and number.)

FILE ONE COPY WITH THE SECRETARY OF THE SENATE AND FILE TWO COPIES WITH THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

"PRELIMINARY" REPORT ("Registration"): To "register," place an "X" below the letter "P" and fill out page 1 only.

Year: 19.....

REPORT

PURSUANT TO FEDERAL REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

P	QUARTER
	1st	2d	3d	4th
(Mark one square only)

NOTE ON ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:
(i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)
(ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".
(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:
(i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.
(ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE ON ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER.—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE ON ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).
(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).
(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) Description, (b) quantity distributed; (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out item "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly" Report.

AFFIDAVIT

FILE ONE COPY WITH THE SECRETARY OF THE SENATE AND FILE TWO COPIES WITH THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

NOTE ON ITEM "D."—(a) In General. The term "contribution" includes anything of value. When an organization or individual uses printed or duplicated matter in a campaign attempting to influence legislation, money received by such organization or individual—for such printed or duplicated matter—is a "contribution." "The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution"—Section 302(a) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN EMPLOYER.—(i) In General. Item "D" is designed for the reporting of all receipts from which expenditures are made, or will be made, in accordance with legislative interests.

(ii) Receipts of Business Firms and Individuals.—A business firm (or individual) which is subject to the Lobbying Act by reason of expenditures which it makes in attempting to influence legislation—but which has no funds to expend except those which are available in the ordinary course of operating a business not connected in any way with the influencing of legislation—will have no receipts to report, even though it does have expenditures to report.

(iii) Receipts of Multipurpose Organizations.—Some organizations do not receive any funds which are to be expended solely for the purpose of attempting to influence legislation. Such organizations make such expenditures out of a general fund raised by dues, assessments, or other contributions. The percentage of the general fund which is used for such expenditures indicates the percentage of dues, assessments, or other contributions which may be considered to have been paid for that purpose. Therefore, in reporting receipts, such organizations may specify what that percentage is, and report their dues, assessments, and other contributions on that basis. However, each contributor of $500 or more is to be listed, regardless of whether the contribution was made solely for legislative purposes.

(c) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE.—(i) In General. In the case of many employees, all receipts will come under Items "D 5" (received for services) and "D 12" (expense money and reimbursements). In the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, it will be presumed that your employer is to reimburse you for all expenditures which you make in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Employer as Contributor of $500 or More.—When your contribution from your employer (in the form of salary, fee, etc.) amounts to $500 or more, it is not necessary to report such contribution under "D 13" and "D 14," since the amount has already been reported under "D 5," and the name of the "employer" has been given under Item "B" on page 1 of this report.

D. RECEIPTS (INCLUDING CONTRIBUTIONS AND LOANS):

Fill in every blank. If the answer to any numbered item is "None," write "None" in the space following the number.

Receipts (other than loans)

1. $.....Dues and assessments
2. $.....Gifts of money or anything of value
3. $.....Printed or duplicated matter received as a gift

6. $.....TOTAL for this Quarter (Add items "1" through "5")
7. $.....Received during previous Quarters of calendar year

8. $.....TOTAL from Jan. 1 through this Quarter (Add "6" and "7")

Loans Received

"The term 'contribution' includes a . . . loan . . ."—Sec. 302(a).

9. $.....TOTAL now owed to others on account of loans
10. $.....Borrowed from others during this Quarter
11. $.....Repaid to others during this Quarter

12. $.....'Expense money" and Reimbursements received this Quarter

Contributors of $500 or more
(from Jan. 1 through this Quarter)

13. Have there been such contributors?
