

July 15 / Administration of William J. Clinton, 1993

the actual out-of-pocket costs of which are less than the loan. There are other costs that have to be matched by State and local government, although the Federal Government has the power under certain extreme circumstances to waive some or all of it. There are other losses that simply aren't covered by any Federal law. So there is a big distinction to be drawn between the aggregate loss and what is normally compensable by our Federal programs. The second thing I want to emphasize in this, that some of these losses can be covered by the ongoing programs in the Federal Government. And I guess I should add a final point, which is that we won't know the total dimensions of the Federal—excuse me, the agricultural losses, until very near the beginning of the next fiscal year. So some of them may come in the next fiscal year as well.

Thank you very much.
