Foreword

During the first half of 1994, America moved forward to enhance security at home and abroad—creating opportunity, shrinking bureaucracy, and giving our people the means to realize the American Dream. By June 1994, our Administration's economic plan had helped create close to 4 million new jobs. Fifteen million working families with children and countless small businesses enjoyed a tax cut.

In our efforts to keep our country strong and secure, our government became a better partner with the American people. During a time of great change, our Administration invested in education and training to help all Americans earn the tools they need to compete and win in the global economy. I signed "Goals 2000" into law, setting world-class standards for our schools and giving local communities the flexibility to achieve excellence. I signed the "School-to-Work Opportunities Act," bringing teachers and businesses together to help non-college bound students move directly from school to work. Across the country, AmeriCorps members earned money for college while serving our country—tutoring young people, cleaning up neighborhoods, and making communities safer for all of us. Thanks to our reforms of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, we were able to come to the aid of families from northern California to southern Florida.

Security at home requires even more of us. To help restore safety in our homes and neighborhoods, we fought for passage in Congress of a tough, smart crime bill, that included provisions for putting 100,000 new police officers on our streets. At our urging, the House of Representatives passed a ban on 19 deadly assault weapons. In an effort central to the strength of our families, our economy, and our future, Americans took up the challenge of health care reform. Together, we engaged in an important debate in Congress and across the country and worked toward bringing health care security to every American.

We worked to keep America strong abroad, as well. As it has been for half a century, our Nation remained the world's greatest force for freedom and democracy. Commemorating the 50th anniversary of the D-Day invasion at Normandy, I had the privilege to join with our allies in remembering a generation who helped preserve the blessings of liberty for us all. This year, Americans and people around the world realized anew the rewards of our leadership. We opened markets from Latin America to Asia to American goods. We supported democracy in Russia, which I visited, and in South Africa, where Vice President Al Gore and the First Lady witnessed the triumph of free and fair elections. And we advanced the cause of peace around the globe.

This volume reflects America's ongoing commitment to rewarding those who work and study and dream of building a better life. Our citizens can take great pride in their progress. Their accomplishments assure us that America's best days are still to come.

Preface

This book contains the papers and speeches of the 42d President of the United States that were issued by the Office of the Press Secretary during the period January 1–July 31, 1994. The material has been compiled and published by the Office of the Federal Register, National Archives and Records Administration.

The material is presented in chronological order, and the dates shown in the headings are the dates of the documents or events. In instances when the release date differs from the date of the document itself, that fact is shown in the textnote. Every effort has been made to ensure accuracy: Remarks are checked against a tape recording, and signed documents are checked against the original. Textnotes and cross references have been provided by the editors for purposes of identification or clarity. Speeches were delivered in Washington, DC, unless indicated. The times noted are local times. All materials that are printed full-text in the book have been indexed in the subject and name indexes, and listed in the document categories list.

The Public Papers of the Presidents series was begun in 1957 in response to a recommendation of the National Historical Publications Commission. An extensive compilation of messages and papers of the Presidents covering the period 1789 to 1897 was assembled by James D. Richardson and published under congressional authority between 1896 and 1899. Since then, various private compilations have been issued, but there was no uniform publication comparable to the Congressional Record or the United States Supreme Court Reports. Many Presidential papers could be found only in the form of mimeographed White House releases or as reported in the press. The Commission therefore recommended the establishment of an official series in which Presidential writings, addresses, and remarks of a public nature could be made available.

The Commission's recommendation was incorporated in regulations of the Administrative Committee of the Federal Register, issued under section 6 of the Federal Register Act (44 U.S.C. 1506), which may be found in title 1, part 10, of the Code of Federal Regulations.

A companion publication to the Public Papers series, the Weekly Compilation of Presidential Documents, was begun in 1965 to provide a broader range of Presidential materials on a more timely basis to meet the needs of the contemporary reader. Beginning with the administration of Jimmy Carter, the Public Papers series expanded its coverage to include additional material as printed in the Weekly Compilation. That coverage provides a listing of the President's daily schedule and meetings, when announced, and other items of general interest issued by the Office of the Press Secretary. Also included are lists of the President's nominations submitted to the Senate, materials released by the Office of the Press Secretary that are not printed full-text in the book, and proclamations, Executive orders, and other Presidential documents released by the Office of the Press Secretary and published in the Federal Register. This information appears in the appendixes at the end of the book.

Volumes covering the administrations of Presidents Hoover, Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, Ford, Carter, Reagan, and Bush are also available.

The Public Papers of the Presidents publication program is under the direction of Frances D. McDonald, Director of the Presidential Documents and Legislative Division. The series is produced by the Presidential Documents Unit, Gwen H. Estep, Chief. The Chief Editor of this book was Karen Howard Ashlin, assisted by Margaret A. Hemmig, Carolyn W. Hill, Rachel Rondell, Cheryl E. Sirofchuck, and Michael J. Sullivan.

The frontispiece and photographs used in the portfolio were supplied by the White House Photo Office. The typography and design of the book were developed by the Government Printing Office under the direction of Michael F. DiMario, Public Printer.
