

kinds of vehicles, we implemented historic new fuel economy standards, which could save you as much as $3,000 at the pump.

Now, I know that in this tough fiscal environment, it's tempting for some in Washington to want to cut our investments in clean energy. And I absolutely agree that the only way we'll be able to afford the things we need is if we cut the things we don't and live within our means. But I refuse to cut things like clean energy that will help America win the future by growing our economy and creating good-paying jobs, that will help make America more secure, and that will help clean up our planet in the process. An investment in clean energy today is an investment in a better tomorrow, and I think that's an investment worth making.

Thanks for listening, and have a great weekend.

NOTE: The address was recorded at approximately 6:45 p.m. on April 28 in the Roosevelt Room at the White House for broadcast on April 30. The transcript was made available by the Office of the Press Secretary on April 29, but was embargoed for release until 6 a.m. on April 30.

Remarks at the White House Correspondents' Association Dinner April 30, 2011

All right, everybody, please have a seat.

My fellow Americans—[laughter]—mahalo! [Laughter] It is wonderful to be here at the White House Correspondents' dinner. What a week. As some of you heard, the State of Hawaii released my official, long-form birth certificate.

Hopefully, this puts all doubts to rest. But just in case there are any lingering questions, tonight I'm prepared to go a step further. Tonight, for the first time, I am releasing my official birth video. [Laughter]

Now, I warn you. [Laughter] No one has seen this footage in 50 years, not even me. But let's take a look.

[At this point, a video featuring clips of Disney's "The Lion King" was shown.]

Oh, well. Back to square one. I want to make clear to the FOX News table: That was a joke. [Laughter] That was not my real birth video. That was a children's cartoon. Call Disney if you don't believe me. [Laughter] They have the original long-form version.

Anyway, it's good to be back with so many esteemed guests: celebrities, Senators, journalists, essential Government employees—[laughter]—nonessential Government employees. You know who you are. [Laughter]

I am very much looking forward to hearing Seth Meyers tonight. He's a young, fresh face who can do no wrong in the eyes of his fans. Seth, enjoy it while it lasts. [Laughter]

Yes, I think it is fair to say that when it comes to my Presidency, the honeymoon is over. [Laughter] For example, some people now suggest that I'm too professorial. And I'd like to address that head on, by assigning all of you some reading that will help you draw your own conclusions. [Laughter] Others say that I'm arrogant. But I've found a really great self-help tool for this: my poll numbers.

I've even let down my key core constituency: movie stars. Just the other day, Matt Damon—I love Matt Damon, love the guy—Matt Damon said he was disappointed in my performance. Well, Matt, I just saw "The Adjustment Bureau," so—[laughter]—right back at you, buddy. [Laughter]

Of course, there's someone who I can always count on for support, my wonderful wife Michelle. We made a terrific team at the Easter egg roll this week. I'd give out bags of candy to the kids, and she'd snatch them right back out of their little hands—[laughter]—snatched them. [Laughter]

And where is the National Public Radio table? [Applause] You guys are still here? [Laughter] That's good. I couldn't remember where we landed on that. [Laughter] Now, I know you were a little tense when the GOP tried to cut your funding, but personally, I was looking forward to new programming like “No Things Considered”—[laughter]—or “Wait, Wait . . . Don’t Fund Me!” [Laughter]

Of course, the deficit is a serious issue. That’s why Paul Ryan couldn’t be here tonight. His budget has no room for laughter. [Laughter]

Michele Bachmann is here, though, I understand, and she is thinking about running for President, which is weird because I hear she was born in Canada. [Laughter] Yes, Michele, this is how it starts. [Laughter] Just letting you know. [Laughter]

Tim Pawlenty—he seems all-American, but have you heard his real middle name, Tim “Hosni” Pawlenty? [Laughter] What a shame. [Laughter]

My buddy, our outstanding Ambassador, Jon Huntsman, is with us. Now, there’s something you might not know about Jon. He didn’t learn to speak Chinese to go there. Oh, no. He learned English to come here. [Laughter]

And then there’s a vicious rumor floating around that I think could really hurt Mitt Romney. I heard he passed universal health care when he was Governor of Massachusetts. [Laughter] Someone should get to the bottom of that.

And I know just the guy to do it; Donald Trump is here tonight! [Laughter] Now, I know that he’s taken some flak lately, but no one is happier, no one is prouder to put this birth certificate matter to rest than the Donald. [Laughter] And that’s because he can finally get back to focusing on the issues that matter, like, did we fake the Moon landing? What really happened in Roswell? [Laughter] And where are Biggie and Tupac? [Laughter]

But all kidding aside, obviously, we all know about your credentials and breadth of experience. [Laughter] For example—no, seriously, just recently, in an episode of “Celebrity Apprentice”—[laughter]—at the steakhouse, the men’s cooking team did not impress the judges from Omaha Steaks. And there was a lot of blame to go around. But you, Mr. Trump, recognized that the real problem was a lack of leadership. And so ultimately, you didn’t blame Lil Jon or Meat Loaf—[laughter]—you fired Gary Busey. [Laughter] And these are the kind of decisions that would keep me up at night. Well handled, sir. [Laughter] Well handled.

Say what you will about Mr. Trump, he certainly would bring some change to the White House. Let’s see what we’ve got up there. [Laughter]

[An image of the White House with a sign reading “Trump White House Resort and Casino” was shown.]

So yes, this has been quite a year in politics, but also in the movies. Many people, for instance, were inspired by “The King’s Speech.” It’s a wonderful film. Well, some of you may not know this, but there’s now a sequel in the works that touches close to home. And because this is a Hollywood crowd, tonight I can offer a sneak peek. So can we show the trailer, please?

[A parody video was shown.]

Coming to a theater near you.

Let me close on a serious note. We are having a good time, but as has been true for the last several years, we have incredible young men and women who are serving in uniform overseas in the most extraordinary of circumstances. And we are reminded of their courage and their valor.

We also need to remember our neighbors in Alabama and across the South that have been devastated by terrible storms from last week. Michelle and I were down there yesterday, and we’ve spent a lot of time with some of the folks who have been affected. The devastation is unimaginable and is heartbreaking, and it’s going to be a long road back. And so we need to keep those Americans in our thoughts and in our prayers. But we also need to stand with them in the hard months and perhaps years to come.

I intend to make sure that the Federal Government does that. And I’ve got faith that the journalists in this room will do their part for the people who have been affected by this disaster, by reporting on their progress and letting the rest of America know when they will need more help. Those are stories that need telling. And that’s what all of you do best, whether it’s rushing to the site of a devastating storm in Alabama or braving danger to cover a revolution in the Middle East.

You know, in the last months, we've seen journalists threatened, arrested, beaten, attacked, and in some cases even killed simply for doing their best to bring us the story, to give people a voice, and to hold leaders accountable. And through it all, we've seen daring men and women risk their lives for the simple idea that no one should be silenced and everyone deserves to know the truth.

That's what you do. At your best, that's what journalism is. That's the principle that you uphold. It is always important, but it's especially important in times of challenge, like the moment that America and the world is facing now.

So I thank you for your service and the contributions that you make. And I want to close by recognizing not only your service, but also to remember those that have been lost as a consequence of the extraordinary reporting that they've done over recent weeks. They help, too, to defend our freedoms and allow democracy to flourish.

God bless you, and may God bless the United States of America.

NOTE: The President spoke at 10:01 p.m. at the Washington Hilton hotel. In his remarks, he referred to former Gov. Timothy J. Pawlenty of Minnesota; former U.S. Ambassador to China Jon M. Huntsman, Jr.; former Gov. W. Mitt Romney of Massachusetts; Donald J. Trump, chairman and chief executive officer, Trump Organization; actors Seth A. Meyers, Matthew P. Damon, and W. Gary Busey; and musicians Jonathan "Lil Jon" Smith and Marvin L. "Meat Loaf" Aday. The transcript was released by the Office of the Press Secretary on May 1.

Remarks on the Death of Al Qaida Terrorist Organization Leader Usama bin Laden

May 1, 2011

Good evening. Tonight I can report to the American people and to the world that the United States has conducted an operation that killed Usama bin Laden, the leader of Al Qaida and a terrorist who's responsible for the murder of thousands of innocent men, women, and children.

It was nearly 10 years ago that a bright September day was darkened by the worst attack on the American people in our history. The images of 9/11 are seared into our national memory: hijacked planes cutting through a cloudless September sky; the Twin Towers collapsing to the ground; black smoke billowing up from the Pentagon; the wreckage of Flight 93 in Shanksville, Pennsylvania, where the actions of heroic citizens saved even more heartbreak and destruction.

And yet we know that the worst images are those that were unseen to the world: the empty seat at the dinner table; children who were forced to grow up without their mother or their father; parents who would never know the feeling of their child's embrace; nearly 3,000 citizens taken from us, leaving a gaping hole in our hearts.

On September 11, 2001, in our time of grief, the American people came together. We offered our neighbors a hand, and we offered the wounded our blood. We reaffirmed our ties to each other and our love of community and country. On that day, no matter where we came from, what God we prayed to, or what race or ethnicity we were, we were united as one American family.

We were also united in our resolve to protect our Nation and to bring those who committed this vicious attack to justice. We quickly learned that the 9/11 attacks were carried out by Al Qaida, an organization headed by Usama bin Laden, which had openly declared war on the United States and was committed to killing innocents in our country and around the globe. And so we went to war against Al Qaida to protect our citizens, our friends, and our allies.