

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

LETTER

FROM

THE SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE,

TRANSMITTING

The report of the operations of the Bureau of Animal Industry for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894.

JANUARY 8, 1895.—Referred to the Committee on Printing and ordered to be printed.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., January 7, 1895.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith the report of the operations of the Bureau of Animal Industry for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, in compliance with the requirements of section 11 of the act approved May 29, 1884, for the establishment of that Bureau.

Very respectfully,

J. STERLING MORTON,
Secretary.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

OPERATIONS OF THE BUREAU OF ANIMAL INDUSTRY FOR THE YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1894.

MEAT INSPECTION.

The inspection of meat has during the last fiscal year constituted the most important and extensive part of the work of this Bureau. The ante-mortem and post-mortem examination has been extended to hogs at the various abattoirs where inspection has been established, thus greatly increasing the field of this service and more nearly fulfilling the object of the law.

The meat inspection is now in operation at forty-six abattoirs, situated in seventeen cities, and the greater part of the meat prepared for the interstate and export trade is inspected. There are, however, a number of large cities from which a great amount of meat is shipped to other States or to foreign countries, which up to the present have either inadequate inspection or none at all.

The extension of the inspection has necessarily been slow on account of the difficulty of obtaining competent inspectors, and the time required to organize the work and make it satisfactory at the different points. It has been found desirable to change many details in the methods of conducting the business and to require more specific reports from the inspectors, in order to prevent evasions of the regulations, and to maintain a closer supervision of the work from the central office.

These changes have now been effected at each of the various places where the inspection is conducted, and the Bureau is prepared to extend the service as rapidly as the necessary inspectors and other assistance can be supplied.

The number of animals inspected has been increased from 4,885,653 in the preceding fiscal year to 12,944,056. This increased number handled, together with improvements in the methods, has reduced the expense of the inspection, exclusive of the microscopical examination of pork, from $4\frac{1}{2}$ cents per head in 1893, to $1\frac{1}{4}$ cents per head in 1894.

MICROSCOPIC INSPECTION OF PORK.

The quantity of microscopically examined pork exported during the year was 35,437,937 pounds, as compared with 20,677,410 pounds in 1893. The trade has, therefore, very largely increased; and this has been due partly to the fact that American firms have had more time to establish their business in the countries which formerly prohibited our pork, but for the most part to the lower prices which have prevailed in the United States during the last year.

The greater part of the microscopical inspection is conducted with samples taken from the carcass at the time of slaughter. A considerable quantity of pork has been inspected in the piece, however, after the meat had been cut and cured.

The expense of examining the samples from one piece of pork is as great as that of examining samples from a whole carcass, and frequently greater, on account of the meat being hardened in curing and more difficult to prepare for microscopic examination. It is therefore more economical and in every way preferable to examine samples from the carcass before this is cut, if other conditions are the same.

It has been found in practice that there are sometimes occasions when it is necessary to examine in the piece, in order to enable the packing house to make a shipment of the required amount of cured pork within a limited time. There are also packing houses which have had so few orders for inspected pork from countries requiring this inspection that it has been found more economical to inspect the cured pork in the piece when ordered than to inspect a great quantity of pork in the carcass which might never be demanded for this trade.

During the year samples from 1,372,410 carcasses or pieces have been examined. The expense of this inspection has been diminished from $8\frac{3}{4}$ cents per carcass or per piece in 1893, to $6\frac{3}{8}$ cents in 1894—being a reduction of about 25 per cent in the cost for a given amount of work.

The reduction in the cost of inspection as compared with the quantity of microscopically examined pork actually exported has been even more gratifying. During the fiscal year 1893, there was exported 20,677,410 pounds of inspected pork, and the cost of the inspection amounted to $172,367.06, or 0.833 cent for each pound exported. For the fiscal year 1894, the quantity exported was increased to 35,437,937 pounds, and the cost of inspection reduced to $88,922.10, or 0.248 cent per each pound exported.

A similar statement concerning the first and second halves of the last fiscal year shows that this reduction in the cost of microscopic inspection, compared with the quantity actually exported, was progressive throughout the year and reached a lower limit than is indicated above. That is, from July 1, 1893, to December 31, 1893, the quantity of inspected pork exported was 12,618,706 pounds, and the expense of the microscopic inspection was $53,433.68, or 0.423 cent for each pound exported; while from January 1, 1894, to June 30, 1894, the quantity of inspected pork exported was 22,819,231 pounds, and the cost of inspection was $35,488.42, or 0.155 cent for each pound exported.

INSPECTION OF EXPORT ANIMALS.

In the inspection of animals for export 725,243 head of cattle were inspected, as compared with 611,542 for the preceding fiscal year. The number of cattle exported to Europe was 363,535 for 1894 and 294,002 for 1893, an increase of 69,533, or more than 25 per cent. There have also been exported during the year to Europe 85,809 head of sheep. All of these animals were inspected and their healthfulness certified to by the inspectors of this Bureau, and the cattle were all tagged with numbers for identification and their origin recorded.

Of the cattle exported 184 were rejected, as compared with 292 rejected during the year 1893.

VESSEL INSPECTION.

The vessels carrying the exported cattle and sheep were all inspected by the officers of this Bureau, in accordance with the the act of Congress approved March 3, 1891, in order to secure sufficient ventilation, an adequate supply of food and drinking water, competent attendants, fittings sufficiently strong to avoid unnecessary danger of washing overboard, and enough space for the animals to stand in with comfort. The regulations adopted in 1891 are still in force, but they have been amended from time to time and the condition of the cattle in transit has been continually improved.

This improvement is shown by the marked decrease in the proportion of cattle lost at sea. The loss for each year since the regulations went into effect was as follows: 1891, 1.6 per cent; 1892, 0.875 per cent; 1893, 0.47 per cent, and in 1894, 0.37 per cent.

The loss of sheep has been much heavier. Of the 80,898 exported and shipments inspected in Great Britain during the fiscal year, 1,050 were lost at sea. This is 1.29 per cent, and it indicates that more stringent regulations must be enforced to secure the humane treatment of these animals on shipboard.

STOCK YARDS INSPECTION.

An inspection at a number of the important stock yards of the country is maintained for the purpose of inspecting and tagging export cattle as near to their place of origin as is possible. After being tagged and recorded there is a supervision of the shipments, in order to prevent infection of any kind on the way to the seaboard.

One of the greatest dangers during the summer months has been infected pens in the stock yards or infected alleys, streets, or cars, which have been contaminated by cattle from the Southern fever district. The cattle from this district, though apparently healthy, may so thoroughly infect the avenues through which they pass that these will be deadly for other cattle during the remainder of the season. It has, therefore, been found necessary to set apart separate pens and alleys for these Southern cattle, and to disinfect the cars in which they have been shipped. To secure the enforcement of these regulations constant supervision and inspection must be maintained, for otherwise infected cattle would be allowed to enter the pens in which export cattle were handled, and this would do away with any possible chance of guarding against the infection. It is almost impossible in the present state of our knowledge to satisfactorily disinfect cattle pens which have once been thoroughly infected with this disease. Nothing but the freezing of winter can be relied upon to accomplish this. Infected pens are, consequently, a source of danger until after a succeeding winter has purified them.

The stock yards inspection is designed to guard against the Southern fever infection, but it also embraces the inspection and tagging of export animals, and the inspection of the vessels which carry them. These different lines of inspection are so closely allied that they can not be separated without detriment to the service and increased expenditures. It should be borne in mind, however, that the entire expense of the stock yards inspection is not for the benefit of the export trade, but that the cattle which are to remain in this country, more particularly the "feeders," are also protected.

The losses from the Southern or Texas fever have been almost entirely prevented by this inspection, and cattle may now be moved through our largest stock yards without danger, while before it was inaugurated a large part of the cattle so handled became infected.

This inspection, as it only continues during the spring, summer, and fall months, is reported for the calendar instead of the fiscal year. In the quarantine season extending from February 15 to December 1, 1893, there were inspected and placed in the quarantine pens 1,737,380 head of cattle. In addition to this the inspectors had 56,406 cars cleaned and disinfected under their supervision, and inspected 20,075 car loads of infected cattle which were en route for places beyond their jurisdiction.

INSPECTION IN GREAT BRITAIN OF ANIMALS FROM THE UNITED STATES.

This inspection has been continued during the year by two inspectors, one being stationed at London and the other at Liverpool. The object of this inspection is to learn the condition in which animals arrive, the extent of the losses at sea, the diseases with which animals in transit are affected or from which they die, the adequacy of the ventilation and fittings of the vessels for the safe transportation of their living freight.

This information can only be obtained from the representatives of this Bureau who examine the animals both before and after they are unloaded from the ships. By means of this information improvements have been made by which the losses at sea have been reduced from 1.6 per cent the first year of the service to 0.37 per cent during the last fiscal year. This means a saving of 4,470 head of cattle on the exports of the last year. How much was saved by the regulations of the first year over the unregulated trade we have no data to determine, but it probably was a still larger number.

The British restrictions have not yet been removed from our cattle trade, but with the continued freedom of the United States from pleuropneumonia and other contagious diseases dangerous to the stock interests of that country it is probable that reasonable modifications will be made.

The entire expenses of the stock yards, vessel, and export animals inspection for the year was \$96,707.44. At least half of this expense is for the prevention of Texas fever in this country, and should not be charged against the export inspection. This would give an expenditure of about 10 $\frac{3}{4}$ cents for each animal exported. Considering that this covers the tagging of every animal and two inspections in the United States and one in Great Britain for the greater part of them, as well as inspection of the ships and supervision of the loading, it is seen that the service is very economically performed.

Following this estimate to its legitimate conclusion we find that the $48,353.72 which we estimate was expended in inspecting and quarantining 1,738,380 head of cattle from the district infected with southern or Texas fever makes the cost of such inspection 2.7 cents per animal, with no allowance for the disinfection of 56,406 cars.

INSPECTION AND QUARANTINE OF IMPORTED ANIMALS.

The number of animals imported from Europe inspected and quarantined on arrival was 11 head of cattle, 565 sheep, 43 hogs, and 4 goats quarantined at Garfield, N. J., and 1 head of cattle and 179 sheep quarantined at Patapsco, Md. In addition 3 head of cattle imported from Canada were quarantined at Buffalo, N. Y. This makes a total of 808 imported animals that were quarantined during the year.

Under the provisions of the act of Congress approved August 30, 1890, requiring the inspection of all cattle, sheep, and hogs imported into the United States from foreign countries, there were inspected as imported from Canada 194 head of cattle, 240,497 sheep, 1,302 hogs, and 2 goats.

SCIENTIFIC INVESTIGATIONS.

In the scientific work of the Bureau very important investigations have been made concerning the prevention of Southern cattle fever and in regard to the causation, nature, and prevention of tuberculosis and other diseases of animals.

Outbreaks of disease have been investigated in various parts of the country to determine if they were dangerous to the live stock of other States. Important investigations in the treatment of hog cholera have been made which have given very promising results.

Large quantities of tuberculin and mallein have been made in the laboratory of the Bureau and distributed to State authorities, State experiment stations, and educational institutions, as a means of determining the existence of tuberculosis in milch cows and glanders in horses.

During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, there has been sent out tuberculin sufficient for 5,500 injections, and mallein for 1,000 injections. The largest amount has been sent since January 1, 1894. It is now being used at the rate of 2,000 injections per month, with applications on file for as much as 1,000 injections per week from one State alone. Supplies have been sent on the application of the proper authorities to 33 different States.

PUBLICATIONS.

There have been published during the year the following reports and bulletins:

Eighth and Ninth Annual Reports of the Bureau of Animal Industry for the years 1891 and 1892. Published by order of Congress.

Bulletin No. 3.—Miscellaneous Investigations Concerning Infectious and Parasitic Diseases of Domesticated Animals.

Bulletin No. 4.—A Revision of the Adult Cestodes of Cattle, Sheep, and Allied Animals.

Bulletin No. 5.—Report of the Dairy Industry of Denmark.

Bulletin No. 6.—Additional Investigations Concerning Infectious Swine Diseases.

The following statement gives the cost of the various branches of the work for the fiscal year:
