7 SCOTTSDALE INSURANCE COMPANY,

10 R.I. POOLS INCORPORATED, FRANCO IANNONE, and 11 VINCENZO IANNONE,

12 Defendant-Appellants.

13 ----- X

14
15 Before: LEVAL, POOLER, and RAGGI, Circuit Judges.

16 Defendants, the insured, appeal from a judgment of the United States District Court for the 17 District of Connecticut (Thompson, J.), which granted summary judgment in favor of plaintiff
18 insurance company, finding that the insurer had no duty to defend or indemnify as to suits for 19 defects in swimming pools installed by insured, and that the insurer was entitled to 20 reimbursement of defense costs previously expended. Vacated and remanded.

21 Matthew S. Lerner, Goldberg Segalla LLP, Albany,
22 NY, for Appellee.

23 Charles W. Fleischmann, Bai, Pollock, Blueweiss &
24 Mulcahey, P.C., Shelton, CT, for Appellants.

1 PER CURIAM:

2 Defendant R.I. Pools Inc. (hereinafter at times the “insured”), a Connecticut company in
 3 the business of installing swimming pools, appeals¹ from the judgment of the United States
 4 District Court for the District of Connecticut (Thompson, J.) granting summary judgment in
 5 favor of plaintiff Scottsdale Insurance Co., which insured R.I. Pools under commercial general
 6 liability policies. The insurance company brought this action seeking declaratory judgment that it
 7 had no obligations under the policies with respect to suits brought against R.I. Pools by 8 purchasers of swimming pools for damage the purchasers sustained when cracks developed in 9 their pools. The district court ruled that the insurer had no duty either to indemnify or defend the 10 insured, and was furthermore entitled to the return of funds it had previously expended in the 11 defense of the insured. We conclude that the court’s ruling was error. We therefore vacate the 12 judgment and remand for further proceedings.

13 BACKGROUND

14 During the time period relevant to this case, Scottsdale insured R.I. Pools under 15 commercial general liability insurance policies which contained the following provisions
 16 pertinent to this appeal.

17 Section I.A.1, which outlines the overall scope of coverage, provides:

- 18 b. This insurance applies . . . only if:
 19 (1) The [injury or damage] is caused by an “occurrence”

20 Joint Appendix (“JA”) 110. Section V.13 defines an “occurrence” as “an accident.” JA 123.

¹Franco and Vincenzo Iannone, who are officers of R.I. Pools, are co-insureds, co-defendants, and co-appellants.

1 Other sections, which are crucial to this appeal, address an exclusion from coverage. In 2 relevant part, they provide:

 4 [I.A.2] This insurance does not apply to:

5 . . .

6 l. Damage To Your Work

7 “Property damage” to “your work” arising out of it or 8 any part of it

9 This exclusion does not apply if the damaged work or 10 the work out of which the damage arises was performed
 11 on your behalf by a sub-contractor.

12 [V.22] “Your work”:

13 a. Means:

14 (1) Work or operations performed by you or on your 15 behalf; and

16 (2) Materials, parts or equipment furnished in connection
 17 with such work or operations.

18 JA 111, 114, 125.

19 We refer hereafter to the exclusion from coverage provided by section I.A.2.l, and the exception
 20 to it, as the “your-work exclusion” and the “subcontractor exception” to the your-work
 21 exclusion.

22 The policies also outline, in a section entitled “Supplementary Payments,” the insurer’s
 23 responsibility to defend the insured:

24 1. We will pay, with respect to any claim we investigate or settle,
 25 or any “suit” against an insured we defend:

26 a. All expenses we incur.

27 JA 116. A “suit” is defined as “a civil proceeding in which damages . . . to which this insurance
 28 applies are alleged.” JA 124.

29 R.I. Pools employed outside companies to supply concrete and to shoot the concrete into 30 the ground. During the summer of 2006, it obtained its concrete from Paramount Concrete Inc.,
 31 and used Shotcrete USA and BBA Enterprise to shoot the concrete.

1 In 2009, nineteen customers for whom R.I. Pools had installed pools in the summer of 2 2006 complained of cracking, flaking, and deteriorating concrete, causing the pools to lose water
3 and, in some cases, rendering them unusable. Three customers filed suit against R.I. Pools. At 4 first the insurer furnished defense costs. In August 2009, the insurer filed this suit, seeking a
5 declaration that it had no duty to defend or indemnify because there was no coverage under the 6 policies, and seeking reimbursement for defense costs already expended.

7 On September 22, 2010, the district court granted the insurer's motion for summary
8 judgment. Relying primarily on Jakobson Shipyard, Inc. v. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co., 961
9 F.2d 387 (2d Cir. 1992), the court reasoned that defects in the insured's workmanship could not 10 be considered "accidents," therefore were not within the policy definition of "occurrences," and 11 accordingly were not within the coverage. The court ruled that the insurer had no duty to defend 12 or indemnify. In a supplemental opinion on August 15, 2011, the court further ordered the 13 insured to reimburse the insurer for defense costs the insurer had already expended, finding that 14 there was no duty to defend because there was no coverage under the policies. The insured
15 brought this appeal.

16 DISCUSSION

17 "We review a district court's grant of summary judgment de novo, construing the 18 evidence in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party and drawing all reasonable
19 inferences in that party's favor." Kuebel v. Black & Decker Inc., 643 F.3d 352, 358 (2d Cir.
20 2011). "Summary judgment is appropriate only if the moving party shows that there are no
21 genuine issues of material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of 22 law." Miller v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 321 F.3d 292, 300 (2d Cir. 2003). "[U]nder

1 Connecticut law, an insurance policy is to be interpreted by the same general rules that govern
2 the construction of any written contract.” Arrowood Indem. Co. v. King, 699 F.3d 735, 739 (2d
3 Cir. 2012) (internal quotation marks, citations, and alteration omitted).

4 I. Coverage Under the Policies

5 As noted, the district court relied on the reasoning of Jakobson to support its conclusion
6 that the cracking of the concrete resulting from defects in the insured’s work could not constitute 7 an “accident” or “occurrence” under the terms of the policies. This was error. The policies at 8 issue in this case differ significantly from the policy interpreted in Jakobson.

9 In Jakobson, Jakobson, a shipyard, which was insured under a comprehensive general
10 liability policy, built and sold two tug boats to a towing company. The towing company sued
11 Jakobson alleging that the boats’ steering mechanisms, built by Jakobson, were defective.
12 Jakobson sued its insurer for coverage of its liability to its customer, the towing company. The 13 policy, like this one, limited coverage to an “occurrence,” which was defined as an “accident.”
14 We ruled that a loss resulting from the insured’s “faulty workmanship” did not result from an 15 “accident,” and thus did not constitute an “occurrence.” Such a loss was accordingly not 16 covered. Jakobson, 961 F.2d at 389.

17 The policies involved in this case, although similarly limiting coverage to an 18 “occurrence,” and similarly defining an “occurrence” as an “accident,” contain additional clauses
19 not present in the Jakobson policy, which render the reasoning of Jakobson inapplicable. As 20 noted above, these policies expressly state that the insurance “does not apply to . . . ‘[p]roperty
21 damage’ to ‘your [the insured’s] work’ arising out of it.” They go on, however, to specify that 22 this “exclusion [from coverage] does not apply if the damaged work . . . was performed on [the insured's] behalf by a sub-contractor." Whereas Jakobson held that the insured's faulty workmanship could not be a covered occurrence under the policy, the present policies expressly provide that in some circumstances the insured's own work is covered. As coverage is limited by the policy to "occurrences" and defects in the insured's own work in some circumstances are covered, these policies, unlike the Jakobson policy, unmistakably include defects in the insured's own work within the category of an "occurrence." The fact that they fall within the category of an occurrence does not mean that they are covered. There is a further hurdle in the form of the express exclusion for the insured's work, subject to an exception when that work was performed by a subcontractor. Thus, the question whether the insured's liability for defects in its own work is covered turns on whether the subcontractor exception applies. The district court's analysis essentially read the subcontractor exception out of the policies.

Because the district court erred in ruling that defects in the insured's work are not within the scope of an "occurrence" and never considered the crucial question whether the defects come within the subcontractor exception to the express exclusion for the insured's own work, we vacate the judgment and remand for further proceedings.

II. Reimbursement for Defense Costs Already Expended

"[T]he duty to defend is considerably broader than the duty to indemnify," DaCruz v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 846 A.2d 849, 857 (Conn. 2004), and "does not depend on whether the injured party will successfully maintain a cause of action against the insured but on whether he has, in his complaint, stated facts which bring the injury within the coverage," Hartford Cas. Ins. Co. v. Litchfield Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 876 A.2d 1139, 1144 (Conn. 2005) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). "If an allegation of the complaint falls even possibly within the

1 coverage, then the insurance company must defend the insured.” Id. (internal quotation marks
2 and citation omitted). As discussed above, in this case it is apparent that the damage to the pools
3 caused by the cracked concrete “falls . . . possibly within the coverage” of the policies, and thus,
4 that the insurer has a duty to defend. Because this duty exists up until the point at which it is
5 legally determined that there is no possibility for coverage under the policies, Scottsdale has not
6 shown entitlement to any reimbursement for defense costs it previously expended.

7 CONCLUSION

8 For the foregoing reasons, we conclude that the district court erred in granting summary
9 judgment in favor of the insurer, and vacate the judgment and remand the case for further 10 consideration in light of this opinion.
