months of supervised release. Egenberger's counsel has moved to withdraw and has filed a brief challenging the sentence as substantively unreasonable.

After reviewing the record, we conclude the district court did not abuse its discretion in sentencing Egenberger. See United States v. Miller, 557 F.3d 910, 917 (8th Cir. 2009) (substantive reasonableness of revocation sentence reviewed under deferential abuse-of-discretion standard). There is no indication the court overlooked a relevant factor, gave significant weight to an improper or irrelevant factor, or committed a clear error of judgment in weighing the relevant factors. See United States v. Larison, 432 F.3d 921, 922-24 (8th Cir. 2006) (reciting factors to discern whether revocation sentence is unreasonable).

Accordingly, we grant counsel leave to withdraw and affirm the judgment.
