UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

DANIEL BERMAN,
Plaintiff,

vs.

FREEDOM FINANCIAL NETWORK, LLC, ET AL.,
Defendants.

CASE NO. 18-cv-01060-YGR

ORDER DENYING MOTION TO COMPEL ARBITRATION

Re: Dkt. No. 224

In this action, plaintiffs Daniel Berman, Stephanie Hernandez, and Erica Russell on behalf of himself and a putative class, allege violations of the Telephone Consumer Protection Act (“TCPA”), 47 U.S.C. section 227 et seq. by means of autodialed text messages and prerecorded voice calls as part of a telemarketing campaign by Lead Science, LLC (also known as “Drips”) and Fluent, Inc. (“Fluent”) promoting the services of Freedom Financial Network, LLC and Freedom Debt Relief, LLC (collectively “Freedom”). Fluent obtained leads for the text message campaign via its consumer-facing websites which offer users the possibility of rewards, discounts, product samples or entry into sweepstakes, which collect the users’ data for use in Fluent’s clients’ marketing campaigns. The instant motion seeks to compel arbitration of the claims asserted by plaintiffs Stephanie Hernandez and Erica Russell. (Dkt. No. 224.)

Having carefully considered the papers submitted, the admissible evidence, and the pleadings in this action, and for the reasons set forth below, the Court DENIES the motion to compel arbitration.

1 The Federal Arbitration Act (the “FAA”) requires a district court to stay judicial 2 proceedings and compel arbitration of claims covered by a written and enforceable arbitration 3 agreement. 9 U.S.C. § 3. A party may bring a motion in the district court to compel arbitration.
4 9 U.S.C. § 4. The FAA reflects “both a ‘liberal federal policy favoring arbitration’ and the 5 ‘fundamental principle that arbitration is a matter of contract.’” AT&T Mobility LLC v.
6 Concepcion, 563 U.S. 333, 339 (2011); Mortensen v. Bresnan Commuc’ns, LLC, 722 F.3d 1151, 7 1157 (9th Cir. 2013) (“The [FAA] . . . has been interpreted to embody “‘a liberal federal policy 8 favoring arbitration.’”). The FAA broadly provides that an arbitration clause in a contract 9 involving a commercial transaction “shall be valid, irrevocable, and enforceable.” 9 U.S.C. § 2.
10 Once a court is satisfied the parties agreed to arbitrate, it must promptly compel arbitration. 9 11 U.S.C. § 4.

12 In ruling on the motion, the Court’s role is typically limited to determining whether: (i) 13 an agreement exists between the parties to arbitrate; (ii) the claims at issue fall within the scope 14 of the agreement; and (iii) the agreement is valid and enforceable. Lifescan, Inc. v. Premier 15 Diabetic Servs., Inc., 363 F.3d 1010, 1012 (9th Cir. 2004). The party seeking to compel 16 arbitration bears the burden to establish these conditions. “[I]f there is a genuine dispute of 17 material fact as to any of these queries, a [d]istrict [c]ourt should apply a ‘standard similar to the 18 summary judgment standard of Fed.R.Civ.P. 56.’” Ackerberg v. Citicorp USA, Inc., 898 F.
19 Supp. 2d 1172, 1175 (N.D. Cal. 2012) (quoting Concat LP v. Unilever, PLC, 350 F.Supp.2d 20 796, 804 (N.D. Cal. 2004)); see also Starke v. SquareTrade, Inc., No. 17-2474-CV, 2019 WL 21 149628, at *1 (2d Cir. Jan. 10, 2019) (same). “If the parties contest the existence of an 22 arbitration agreement, the presumption in favor of arbitrability does not apply.” Goldman, 23 Sachs & Co. v. City of Reno, 747 F.3d 733, 742 (9th Cir. 2014).

24 The Ninth Circuit in Nguyen described contracts formed through internet websites as 25 generally taking on one of two forms: (1) “browsewrap” agreements whereby the website’s 26 terms and conditions of use are provided via a hyperlink at the bottom of a webpage and assent 27 to the terms is assumed by continued use of the website; and (2) “clickwrap” agreements in 28 which users are presented with the terms of the agreement in question and must click on a

1 button or box to indicate they agree before proceeding. Nguyen v. Barnes & Noble Inc., 763 2 F.3d 1171, 1175–77 (9th Cir. 2014).

3 Often websites present some hybrid of the two, such as putting a link to the terms of the 4 agreement on the page, sometimes near a button the user must click to continue. For instance, in 5 Nguyen the “Terms of Use” hyperlink was near the buttons a user would need to click to complete 6 an online purchase. Id. at 1177. In considering the conspicuousness of the notice there, the Court 7 noted details of the layout of the website in question:

- 8 • “the ‘Terms of Use’ link appears either directly below the relevant button a 9 user must click on to proceed in the checkout process or just a few inches 10 away”
- 11 • “the content of the webpage is compact enough that a user can view the link 12 without scrolling. . . [or] is close enough to the ‘Proceed with Checkout’ 13 button that a user would have to bring the link within his field of vision in 14 order to complete his order;” and
- 15 • “checkout screens here contained “Terms of Use” hyperlinks in underlined, 16 color-contrasting text.”

17 Nguyen v. Barnes & Noble Inc., 763 F.3d 1171, 1178 (9th Cir. 2014). Despite these elements
18 supporting conspicuousness, the Ninth Circuit nevertheless held that the website was insufficient 19 to bind the consumer because it contained no admonition to “review terms” or otherwise prompt 20 the user to take affirmative action to demonstrate assent to the terms at issue, including the 21 arbitration clause. Id. at 1178-79 (“where a website makes its terms of use available via a 22 conspicuous hyperlink on every page of the website but otherwise provides no notice to users nor 23 prompts them to take any affirmative action to demonstrate assent, even close proximity of the 24 hyperlink to relevant buttons users must click on—without more—is insufficient to give rise to 25 constructive notice.”) Id.; see also Sgouros v. TransUnion Corp., 817 F.3d 1029, 1033-34 (7th 26 Cir. 2016) (courts enforce contracts accepted by an electronic “click” on a website only if “the 27 layout and language of the site give the user reasonable notice that a click will manifest assent to 28 an agreement.”); Cullinane v. Uber Techs., Inc., 893 F.3d 53, 63–64 (1st Cir. 2018) (affirming denial of motion to compel arbitration where “[e]ven though the hyperlink did possess some of the characteristics that make a term conspicuous, the presence of other terms on the same screen with a similar or larger size, typeface, and with more noticeable attributes diminished the hyperlink's

1 capability to grab the user's attention.”¹

2 In essence, “the onus [is] on website owners to put users on notice of the terms to which 3 they wish to bind consumers.” Nguyen, 763 F.3d at 1178–79. “Given the breadth of the range of 4 technological savvy of online purchasers, consumers cannot be expected to ferret out hyperlinks to 5 terms and conditions to which they have no reason to suspect they will be bound.” Id. at 1179.

6 Here, defendants have failed to meet their burden to establish that plaintiffs Hernandez and 7 Russell entered into an agreement for mandatory arbitration. As a preliminary matter, an 8 evidentiary dispute exists as to whether the webpage screenshots offered by defendants in support 9 of their motion evidenced an agreement with either plaintiff. Defendants based their motion on a 10 declaration of Mitenkumar Bhadania, a computer system engineer for Fluent, submitted January 11 22, 2020. (Dkt. No. 224-1.) Bhadania very generally explains how he “recreated” the set of 12 multiple webpages each plaintiff would have seen when they visited the websites based on a 13 unique visitor ID generated for each session, and “regenerated images” of the webpages.² The 14 exhibits submitted by Bhadania are the equivalent of blank form contracts, with no clear indication 15 that these plaintiffs agreed to them. (Id. at Exh. 1, 4.) Fluent elected to omit other pages from the 16 multiple page “flow” for these website visits which might have demonstrated that these particular 17 users interacted with these particular pages. (Compare id. with Bhadania Decl. submitted July 31, 18 2020, Dkt. No. 260-4, Exh. 1, 3 [including images of checked boxes, additional identifying 19 information, and a system timestamp image].) Given that plaintiffs each submit declarations 20 disputing seeing elements of these pages, and defendants failed to provide complete information to 21

22 ¹ Defendants cite to authorities that are neither binding nor on point here. In Garcia v.
23 Enter. Holdings, Inc., 78 F. Supp. 3d 1125, 1131 (N.D. Cal. 2015), plaintiff alleged privacy 24 violations and the hyperlink to the “Privacy Policy” at issue was in the same text box as the 25 “Okay” button for completing registration through Facebook, putting plaintiff on notice of the 26 Privacy Policy terms. Likewise distinguishable is Silverman v. Move Inc., No. 18-CV-05919-27 BLF, 2019 WL 2579343, at *11 (N.D. Cal. June 24, 2019), appeal dismissed, No. 19-16468, 2019 28 WL 5431367 (9th Cir. Oct. 18, 2019) in which the court found the Nguyen analysis an “ill fit” since the contract there was formed when plaintiff telephoned defendant to sign up for the contract, spoke to an account executive about entering into a contract, thereafter receiving the terms of the contract in an emailed response.

² Bhadania avers that Hernandez registered through a website called “getsamplesonlinenow.com” and Russell visited a website called “retailproductzone.com.”
(Bhadania Decl. ¶¶ 8, 13.)

1 authenticate the exhibits, the Court finds that there are material facts in dispute.³

2 Even if there were no dispute that the proffered webpages caused these plaintiffs' phone 3 numbers to be recorded as leads for Fluent, the webpages do not conspicuously indicate to users
4 that they are agreeing to the Terms and Conditions, including an agreement to mandatory 5 arbitration. The webpages at Exhibits 1 and 3 to the Bhadania declaration do not include a 6 specific affirmative means of indicating consent to the Terms & Conditions or arbitration clause.⁴
7 (See Appendix A to this Order.) Similar to the website at issue in Nguyen, while there is text 8 including a hyperlink to the terms of the agreement located near a button the user must click to 9 continue, there is no text that notifies users that they will be deemed to have agreed to these terms 10 "nor prompts them to take any affirmative action to demonstrate assent." Nguyen, 763 F.3d at 11 1179. Nguyen, 763 F.3d at 1178-79. There is no tickbox or "I agree" button for the Terms & 12 Conditions. As in Nguyen, the hyperlink to them is only located in proximity to button with which 13 the user must interact to continue. The "This is correct, Continue!" and "Continue" buttons 14 plainly refer to the entry of other information on the page, not assent to the Terms & Conditions.
15 (See Appendix A ["Confirm your ZIP Code Below" and "Complete your shipping information to 16 continue towards your reward"].) Although the user must interact with the page and click a button
17 to continue using it, that click is completely divorced from an expression of assent to the Terms & 18 Conditions or to mandatory arbitration. Further, the phrase "I understand and agree to the Terms 19 & Conditions which includes mandatory arbitration and Privacy Policy" is formatted in black font 20 against a white background which is exceedingly small compared to the larger, more colorful and 21

22 ³ Plaintiffs object that these recreations differ from those websites' archives webpages, 23 submitted the declaration of Jodi Nuss Schexnaydre and screenshots of archived pages at or near 24 the time when plaintiffs would have visited them. However, those archived pages are inconclusive 25 on the question here since all parties acknowledge that website users who engage with the survey questions or registration steps see multiple webpages in the "flow" of their interaction with the advertising campaigns, all of which are not replicated in the archive.

26 ⁴ The Terms & Conditions include a choice-of-law provision stating that New York law controls. (See Bhadania Decl., Exh. 5 at Fluent_004063.) "[W]hether the choice of law provision 27 applies depends on whether the parties agreed to be bound by [the terms of use] in the first place."
Nguyen, 763 F.3d at 1175. However, as in Nguyen, "we need not engage in this circular inquiry 28 because both California and New York law dictate the same outcome" on this issue of contract formation. Id.

1 high-contrast fonts on the rest of the page, making it difficult to read on a large, high-resolution
2 monitor, much less a mobile device. (Id.) That the very small text providing the hyperlink to the 3 Terms & Conditions also uses the words “which includes mandatory arbitration” does not change
4 the analysis since the website does not prompt affirmative assent to this statement.⁵

5 For the foregoing reasons, the Court finds that defendants have failed to meet their burden 6 to establish assent to the mandatory arbitration agreement in their Terms & Conditions as to 7 plaintiffs Hernandez and Russell. The motion to compel arbitration is DENIED on those grounds.

8 IT IS SO ORDERED.

9 This terminates Docket No. 224.

⁵ The Court notes that at least one other court has denied a motion to compel arbitration by defendant Fluent, finding that a similarly designed Fluent website (also for retailproductzone.com) did not provide sufficient notice of or assent to the Terms & Conditions, including mandatory arbitration, to create an enforceable agreement. See Anand v. Heath, 19-cv-0016-JJT, 2019 WL 2716213 (N.D. Ill. 2019).
