

28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1) (limiting de novo review duty to “those portions” of the recommendation “to which objection is made”).

The Court thus, with no objection from any party and on full review of the record, ORDERS as follows:

1. The Court ADOPTS DE 39, ACCEPTS Defendant’s guilty plea, and ADJUDGES Defendant guilty of Counts Two and Seven of the Indictment;
2. Further, per Judge Atkins’s recommendation, the Defendant’s plea agreement (DE 38 ¶ 10), and an audit of the arraignment hearing, the Court provisionally FINDS that the property identified in the Indictment’s Forfeiture Allegations, DE 1 at 4–5 (the electronic devices, currency, and online accounts), is forfeitable. Defendant has an interest in said property, and the Court preliminarily ADJUDGES Defendant’s interest in such property FORFEITED. Under Criminal Rule 32.2, and absent pre-judgment objection, “the preliminary forfeiture order becomes final as to” Defendant at sentencing. Fed. R. Crim. P. 32.2 (b)(4)(A). The Court notes that the scope of forfeiture exceeds the scope in the Indictment, based on the parties’ agreement in the Plea Agreement. Should Defendant have any objection on the expanded scope, he must file a motion raising same within 15 days. The Court will further address forfeiture, and reflect any administrative forfeiture that is concluded, at that time. See id. at (b)(4)(B). To the extent the forfeiture encompasses a money judgment, the United States shall file a motion substantiating any claimed total within 15 days, and the defense may respond within 15 additional days from the filing; and
3. The Court will issue a separate sentencing order.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Judge Atkins remanded Kipf to custody post-plea, which preserved his status following arraignment. See DE 36; DE 15. As such, Kipf will remain in custody pending sentencing, subject to intervening orders.
